²⁵ And as to children with no sense you sent them a punishment to mock them; ²⁶ but if they took no warning from these corrections, they were soon to receive a punishment worthy of God. ²⁷ In their suffering they became indignant against those animals they had taken as gods and who were now used to punish them. Then they saw clearly, and acknowledged as God him whom before they had refused to know. That is why they suffered the supreme punishment.

Against those who worship images

+13 ¹ The natural helplessness of men is seen in their ignorance of God. The experience of good things did not lead them to the knowledge of Him who is. They were interested in his works, but they did not recognize the author of them.

² Fire, wind, air, the sphere of the stars, rushing water and the lights in the sky were held as the rulers of the world.

them. ⁵ For the grandeur and beauty of creatures lets us ponder on their Author, greater and more magnificent.

⁶ No doubt these men are not to be blamed severely, for they have possibly strayed when they searched for God and desired to find him.

⁷ They pondered over the created things that surrounded them and were captivated by the sight of such beauty.

⁸ Even so they are not to be excused, ⁹ for if they have been able to explore the world, why did they not discover first the world's Sovereign?

¹⁵ He then makes a suitable niche for it in the wall and fastens it in place with iron nails.

¹⁷ Even so, when it is a matter of his marriage, his children and his household, the man is not ashamed to pray to his lifeless object. He prays for his health to something without strength; ¹⁸ for life he prays to what is dead, for help he implores something insensitive, for a successful journey he has recourse to what cannot walk, ¹⁹ for his profit, his concerns and success in his craft he asks help of something that has no skill whatever in its hands.

They use things as their own, without giving them a deeper meaning and without seeing them as gifts from God.

Simple and humble people see the hand of God in everything. The water, the wind, the mountains remind them of the Perfect Being who created them; even more so in the case of the riches they discover in their loved ones. human intelligence is meant to discover God who fills everything and is the end of everything. Paul will say something very similar in Rom 1:19.

14¹ Imagine someone who is about to set sail and cross the raging sea. He calls upon a piece of wood far more fragile than the boat that carries him.

² In fact this boat has been built with grain in mind and proceeds from the wisdom of the shipwright. ³ But it is your providence, Father, that guides it for you are the one who prepares a path over the sea and a safe way over the waves. ⁴ By this we understand that you are able to save us from any danger, and even the unskilled are able to sail.

¹¹ Therefore the idols of the nations will also be judged. They have come to be the most abominable among the creatures of God. They are a stumbling block to the spirit of man, and the feet of the foolish are caught in the snare.

¹⁵ Suppose a father overwhelmed by grief for a child so swiftly taken from him, has an image made of him. From that time on a dead creature will be honoured as a god, because the father handed on to his dependents secret rites and celebrations. ¹⁶ Time will consolidate this unholy practice and eventually it will be observed by law.

It has also happened that sculptured images were venerated by order of sovereigns. ¹⁷ Those who lived far away and were unable to honour them personally had copies made that they might honour them as if present by means of their image.

¹⁸ The ambition of the artist helped the veneration grow among those who did not even know the sovereign. ¹⁹ As he wished to please his master, he made the portrait more attractive than reality, ²⁰ and the people seduced by the perfection of art work began to worship someone previously honoured as a man.

²¹ In this way the image became a pitfall for the living, for people bent down either by misfortune or tyranny gave to stones and wood the incommunicable Name.

²³ With the sacrificial murder of children in their initiations, with secret mysteries and wild ceremonial orgies, ²⁴ they no longer keep their lives and marriages pure; they treacherously murder one another or wound others through adultery.

²⁷ Indeed the worship of gods which does not even deserve a name, is the beginning, cause and effect of every evil.

³¹ Though the idols by which they swore are powerless, justice that pursues sinners always overtakes the sin of the wicked.

15¹ But you, our God, are kind and true: you bear evil patiently and order everything with mercy. ² Even when we sin we belong to you and acknowledge your power; but aware that we belong to you, we shall not sin.

³ To know you is perfect righteousness and to acknowledge your power is the root of immortality.

⁴ So we have not been led astray by a deceptive invention of men – the sterile labour of painters – these idols daubed with colours, ⁵ the sight of which stirs yearning in fools attached to the lifeless face of a dead image.

⁷ The potter, labouriously working the soft clay, fashions each object for our use, and from the same clay he shapes vessels, some for food, and others for what is thrown away. ⁸ The potter makes both the clean and the unclean vessels and decides to what purpose each one is shaped. The same way and from the same clay he fashions a helpless god: cursed labour of a man recently formed from clay, who will shortly return to clay when he is called to give up his soul.

⁹ He has no thought of dying soon, no thought of the short duration of life. Not at all; he competes with those who work on silver and gold and like the smith he feels proud to make a counterfeit of God.

¹⁰ Ashes, that is what his heart is; his hope cheaper than dust: ¹¹ his life worth as much as clay, for he has not acknowledged his Maker, who has breathed into him an active soul, a living spirit. ¹² He looks on life as a game and its duration a market full of bargains, for as he says, "a man must make the most of life whether by fair means or foul."

¹⁴ But utterly foolish and more pitiable than the soul of a new-born infant were the enemies that oppressed your people. ¹⁵ They received as gods all the idols of the nations – idols that have no eyes to see, no nostrils to breathe the air, or ears to hear, no fingers to feel with, or feet that are able to walk. For these gods are the work of a man, a creature of borrowed breath has made them.

¹⁶ Man cannot even make a god that resembles himself; ¹⁷ a mortal's unholy hands produce a dead god. He is, in fact superior to what he worships, since he at least lives, but they will never live.

¹⁸ People worship the most repulsive animals, the most stupid of all who, unlike other animals, are devoid of beauty; ¹⁹ these are unattractive creatures who have missed the blessing of God and are not fit to give him praise.

How God treats differently his people and the Egyptians

¹ That is why this people received the punishment they deserved through similar animals and hordes of tormenting insects. ² But in contrast to this punishment it was kindness you showed to your people by providing quails – a delicious food – for them.

⁸ In that way you taught our enemies that it was you who deliver us from every evil. ⁹ They were, in fact, killed by the stings of insects and flies for which there was no cure since they deserved punishment from these creatures. ¹⁰ Your children instead were not overcome even by the fangs of venomous serpents for your mercy intervened and healed them.

¹⁸ At times the flame abated to spare the insects thrust against the wicked that they might know they were pursued by God's sentence.

¹⁹ At other times in the midst of water the flame rose more fiercely than fire to destroy the harvest of an unholy land.

prepared and suiting all tastes, having every flavour.²¹ In this way you revealed your loving kindness to your children.²² Satisfying all needs, this bread provided what each one wanted.

That food having the appearance of snow and ice resisted fire and did not melt; thus they understood how their enemy's harvest was destroyed by fire in the midst of hail, while lightning burned under the rain.²³ This same fire seemed to forget its own nature in order to spare the food of the righteous.

²⁷ That food which resisted fire simply melted in the warmth of a fleeting sunbeam,²⁸ teaching us that we must rise before the sun to give thanks and pray to you at dawn.²⁹ The hope of the ungrateful will melt like winter frost and flow away like water that is not being used.

17 ¹ How great are your purposes and how difficult to explain! People who have not learned about them have gone astray.

² While the godless thought they had the holy nation in their power, they themselves were prisoners, captives of a long night, shut in under their own roofs, banished from eternal providence.

³ Although they counted on remaining hidden with their own sins under the veil of forgetfulness, they were scattered and at the same time dismayed and terrified by visions.

⁷ The magic arts were helpless and the pretence of intelligence utterly confounded;⁸ those who claimed to eliminate the fear and disturbance of the sick mind were themselves afflicted with a ridiculous fear.

¹⁴ So all that night, a night issued from the powerless netherworld that took hold of them while they slept and made everyone powerless,¹⁵ they were either pursued by monstrous ghosts or paralysed by a sudden, unexpected fear.¹⁶ Whoever had fallen lay there, shut in a prison not made of iron.

Everything held them paralyzed by fear: the sighing of the wind or the tuneful song of the birds in spreading branches, the continuous noise of rushing water¹⁹ or the terrible crash of falling rocks, the swift, invisible bounding of animals or the terrifying roar of wild beasts, the echo rebounding from the mountains – all was a cause of fear.

18 ¹ Meanwhile, for your holy ones there was great light. The Egyptians heard their voice without seeing them; they called them fortunate because they had not suffered;² they also thanked them, for in spite of the injustice done to them, they had not retaliated, and asked their pardon for previous wrongs.

³ In contrast to this darkness, you gave your holy people a pillar of fire as a guide in their unmapped journey, as a mild sun during their glorious migration.⁴ The enemy deserved to be without light and imprisoned in darkness for having imprisoned your sons, the people through whom the imperishable light of your laws would be given to the world.

⁵ They had intended to kill the infants of your holy people – and of those exposed only one child was saved. Because of that you retaliated by doing away with a multitude of their sons who perished together in the raging sea.

⁶That night had been foretold to our fathers, and knowing in what promise they trusted, they could rejoice in all surety.

⁷Your people waited for both the salvation of the just and the downfall of their enemies, ⁸for the very punishment of our enemies brought glory to the people you have called – that is, to us.

⁹The holy race secretly offered the Pass-over sacrifice and readily agreed on this worthy pact: that they would share alike both blessings and dangers. And forthwith they began to sing the hymns of their fathers.

¹⁰Then came discordant echoes from their enemies: a plaintive voice mourning for their children.

¹¹The same sentence struck slave and master alike; the common man and the king endured equal suffering. ¹²They mourned together innumerable victims, all stricken with the same kind of death.

The living were not enough to bury them, for the flower of their race had perished in an instant.

¹³Although the sorcery had turned them into unbelievers, after the death of their first-born they acknowledged that your people were the children of God.

¹⁴While all was in quiet silence and the night in the middle of its course, ¹⁵your almighty Word leapt down from the Royal Throne – a stern warrior to a doomed world.

¹⁶Carrying your fearful command like a sharpened sword and stretching from heaven to earth, he filled the universe with death.

¹⁷Immediately they were overwhelmed with terrible dreams and hallucinations and assailed by sudden fears. ¹⁸Thrown half-dead, some here and some there, they made known why they were dying. ¹⁹For the dreams that had troubled them had also instructed them, lest they perish without knowing the reason for their misfortune.

²⁰Indeed the righteous, too, experienced death when a scourge struck a great number of them in the desert, but God's anger was short-lived.

²¹A blameless man hastened to their defense. Using the weapons of his sacred office – prayer and atonement incense – he confronted the divine Wrath, putting an end to their affliction, and was thus recognized as your servant.

²²He vanquished your Wrath, but not by physical strength or by the force of arms. He won over the Punisher by reminding him of the sworn promises and covenants made with our fathers.

²³The dead were already piled up one on top of the other when he interposed, beating back Wrath and cutting it off from the living.

²⁴For the whole world was represented on his flowing robe, the glorious names of the fathers on the four rows of stones, and your majesty engraved on the diadem on his head.

²⁵The Destroyer, afraid of these, recoiled; a mere taste of Wrath had been sufficient.

¹Instead, a pitiless fury raged against the wicked to the very end, for God knew beforehand what they would do: ²that after allowing them to leave and hastening their departure, they would then pursue them.

³While the Egyptians were still mourning at the graves of their dead, they had the mad idea of pursuing them as fugitives.

⁴A well-deserved fate drove them to this extreme, making them forget what had happened and having them complete their punishment with further torment. ⁵While your people would experience a miraculous journey, their oppressors would suffer an extraordinary death.

⁹They jumped like horses led to pasture, or like frolicking lambs, praising you, their Lord, who had delivered them. ¹⁰For they still remembered what they had seen in their exile: how earth, in place of animals, had produced mosquitoes, and rivers, instead of providing fish, produced frogs.

¹¹Later your people were to see a new way for birds to appear, for when they hungered for food, ¹²quails came out of the sea to satisfy their need.

¹³Punishment befell the sinners after they had been warned by violent thunder; deservedly they suffered for their own wickedness, for they had given proof of a most cruel hatred towards strangers.

¹⁴Others had not welcomed unknown strangers, but the Egyptians enslaved guests who had been good to them. ¹⁵The former will be condemned for dealing badly with strangers; ¹⁶worse still, the Egyptians had welcomed them with celebrations and treated them as equals, but later made them suffer cruelly.

¹⁷For this they were afflicted with blindness like the men of Sodom who came to the door of the righteous man Lot and found themselves in utter darkness, each one groping around to find his own door.

¹⁸The elements interchanged their qualities as in a harp when the notes change their tones while retaining their own pitch. Clearly this is what happened as is shown by a scrutiny of events:

¹⁹Creatures living on the land became aquatic and those that swam emerged on dry land. ²⁰Fire burned more fiercely in water when water ceased to quench. ²¹On another occasion flames did not burn frail animals that passed through them nor did they melt the heavenly food that normally would have melted like frost.

◆ ²²For in every way, Lord, you have exalted and glorified your people, never disdaining them, but standing by them always and everywhere.

INTRODUCTION

Two centuries before Christ, Jesus, son of Sirach, wrote this book which is a synthesis of the traditions and teachings of the "sages."

He was well-off and well educated. He appears to have been the head of an important household with servants. He dealt with a lot of people, he was involved with works and business which turned out well. In the end, this sage confesses that it was the sacred books which taught him the secret of success. In writing this book, he intended to share with others what he had learned in the sacred books, and had verified in his own experience.

He wrote a few years before the religious crisis related in the book of Maccabees. Many of his contemporaries to whom the Jewish religion seemed antiquated allowed themselves to be attracted by Greek culture. The author tried to offer a new presentation of the faith of Israel. In no other nation do we find a wisdom superior to that of God's people, because it is there, by divine decree, that Wisdom had come to dwell. This book shows us how the Law of God leads people to a more human, more intelligent and more responsible personal and social life.

This book consists of two main parts:

- Chapters 1-42 include seven series of maxims. Each one starts with the praise of wisdom. The poem on wisdom in chapter 24 is particularly interesting.
- Chapters 43-51 begin by praising God whose wisdom shines in the order of the universe and continue with the description of God's wise activity through the great people of the Old Testament.

Foreword by the translator from Hebrew to Greek o The Law the Prophets and the other writings which came later have transmitted to us so many and such great lessons that it seems fitting to praise Israel for its reputation in knowledge and wisdom. But it would not be enough to keep these truths for our own instruction: those who love wisdom want to be helpful in what they say and write to those who are not so familiar with her teachings.

My grandfather, Jesus, who devoted himself constantly to the reading of the Law, the Prophets and the later writings of our fathers and had acquired a thorough familiarity with them, began himself to write something about their teachings and wisdom, in order that those people desiring to gain knowledge might take advantage of his writings and make even greater progress in living according to the Law.

You are therefore invited to read this book with kind consideration and attention, and to show indulgence where, in spite of my painstaking efforts in interpretation, I may appear to have badly conveyed the meaning. Those things, which in this book are written in Hebrew, lose their force when they are translated into another language. In fact, not only this book but the Law itself, the Prophets and the other writings differ considerably from the original text.

When I went to Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of King Euergetes and settled there, I found an example of this important teaching and I judged it very necessary to exercise great care and make serious efforts in translating this book.

I have therefore, during this time, devoted many sleepless nights and much study in order to finish this book and to publish it for the use of those who, though they live outside Palestine, wish to become lovers of wisdom and to conform their manner of living to the Law.

Wisdom comes from God

[+1] ¹All wisdom comes from the Lord and endure with him for ever.

²The grains of sand, the drops of rain and the days of eternity, who can count them?

³The height of heaven, the extent of the earth and the depths of the abyss who can measure them?

⁴Wisdom was created before all things and the prudent intellect before the beginning of time.

⁶To whom was the source of Wisdom revealed? Who has known her secret designs?

3. 24, 8; Pro 8, 22

o The Jews do not use the word "Bible." They refer to it this way: "The Law, the Prophets and the Writings," these being the three major headings of the sacred book. See a similar expression in Luke 24:24.

+ In this poem, the author professes his faith. To those who think they are more modern because they seek human wisdom and doctrines, he simply declares that true wisdom consists in trusting God and fearing him.

He often speaks of fearing the Lord just as the Psalms do. We must not think that it is the fear of pagans who imagine a resentful God.

Those who fear the Lord are afraid of leaving him because in him is Life. They are afraid of offending him because they know his love. As we said in the commentary on Proverbs 1, to fear the Lord means to respect him with obedience and affection.

Fearing the Lord is the opposite of fearing what others will say, the fear of being made fun of, the fear of failure. Those who fear the Lord give more importance to what God says, what he promises when he invites us to seek him and to save others.

⁸ One alone is wise and greatly to be feared. The One who is seated upon his throne.

It is the Lord himself who created Wisdom. He has looked on her and estimated her value. He poured her out over all his works; ¹⁰ upon all mortal beings in accordance with his goodness. He has lavished her on those who love him.

¹¹ The fear of the Lord is glory and we can justly take pride in it; it is joy and a triumphant crown.

¹² The fear of the Lord gladdens the heart; it gives joy, gaiety and long life.

¹⁴ The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; he has put wisdom into the hearts of his faithful ones before their birth.

¹⁵ Founded from eternity she has made her home among men and she will remain faithful to their descendants.

¹⁶ The fear of the Lord is the fulness of wisdom. It will fill you with its fruits.

¹⁷ It will fill your whole house with desirable things.

It will fill your houses with its riches.

¹⁸ The fear of the Lord is the crown of wisdom.

¹⁹ Where it is, peace and good health flourish; knowledge and prudence will rain down. Wisdom cannot be hidden by those who possess her.

²⁰ The fear of the Lord is the root of wisdom. It branches are a long life.

²¹ Unjust violence cannot be justified, it will destroy itself by its own excesses.

²² The patient man will hold out until the appointed time; but finally joy will be given to him.

²⁴ He will guard his words until the appointed time but in the end many will recognize his worth.

²⁵ Wisdom keeps among her treasures proverbs rich in content but the sinner does not want to know about God.

²⁸ Do not put aside fear of the Lord; approach him with a sincere heart. ²⁹ Do not be a hypocrite before men; watch well your words.

³⁰ Do not praise yourself lest you fall and bring dishonour on yourself. For the Lord will reveal your secrets and throw you to one side in the midst of the assembly if you have no fear of the Lord and your heart is full of deceit.

Fear God in time of trials

2 ¹ My son, if you have decided to serve the Lord, prepare yourself for trials. ² Keep your hear upright and remain resolute; do not be upset in the time of adversity.

³ Hold fast to the Lord, do not separate yourself from him so that you may be successful to the end of your days. ⁴ Accept all that happens to you be patient when you are humbled, ⁵ for as gold is tested in the fire so those acceptable to God are tested in the crucible of humiliation. ⁶ Have confidence in him and he will take care of you; follow the right path and hope in him.

⁷ You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy and do not turn away lest you fall. ⁸ You who fear the Lord, trust him and you will not lose your reward. ⁹ You who fear the Lord, hope for all good things; hope for eternal joy and mercy.

¹⁰ Remember what happened to your ancestors. Who has trusted in the Lord and been confounded? Who has persevered in fear and been abandoned? Who has called upon him and not been heard?

¹¹ For the Lord is compassion and loving kindness; he forgives our sin and saves us in the time of distress.

¹² Woe to faint hearts and weak hands, to the sinner who wavers between two paths.

¹³ Woe to the faint-hearted who

■ Those who want to serve God must be ready to face trials and contradictions. Authentic trust in God is demonstrated when things do not turn out well. Along with faith and perseverance, trust is the basic quality of the believer.

◆ This is the best commentary on Moses' commandment concerning children's responsibilities toward their parents. To honour our parents means: respect, understanding and material assistance in their difficulties.

lack confidence, because of this they will not be protected. ¹⁴Woe to you who have lost patience! What will you do when the Lord calls you to account?

¹⁵Those who fear the Lord do not disobey his commandments; those who love him faithfully keep his laws.

¹⁶Those who fear the Lord seek to please him; those who love him are filled with his law.

¹⁷Those who fear the Lord keep their hearts prepared and humble themselves in his presence saying, ¹⁸"Let us fall into the hands of the Lord and not into the hands of men, for his mercy is as great as his power."

Duties towards parents

3 ¹My children, it is your father who speaks, listen to me and follow my advice and so be saved. ²For the Lord established that children should respect their father; he confirmed the right of the mother over her sons.

³Whoever honours his father atones for his sins; ⁴he who gives glory to his mother prepares a treasure for himself.

⁵Whoever honours his father will receive joy from his own children and he will be heard when he prays.

⁶Whoever glorifies his father will have a long life. Whoever obeys the Lord gives comfort to his mother. ⁷He serves those who brought him to birth as he would serve the Lord.

⁸Act thus and honour your father in word and deed so that his blessing may come on you. ⁹For a father's blessing secures the future of a family but a mother's curse destroys it at its roots.

¹⁰Do not rejoice at the humiliation of your father because his dishonour is no glory for you. ¹¹For a man's glory comes from his father's reputation; a mother who is not respected is a dishonour for her children.

¹²My son, take care of your father in his old age, do not cause him sorrow as long as he lives.

¹³Even if he has lost his mind, have patience; do not be disrespectful to him while you are in full health.

¹⁴For a kindness done to one's father will never be forgotten, it will serve as reparation for your sins.

¹⁵In the day of adversity the Lord will remember it to your advantage; for just as ice melts in the heat, so will your sins melt away. ¹⁶The man who abandons his father is like a blasphemer; he who annoys his mother is cursed by the Lord.

Humility

¹⁷My son, conduct your affairs with discretion and you will be loved by those who are acceptable to God.

¹⁸The greater you are, the more you should humble yourself and thus you will find favour with God. ¹⁹For great is the power of the Lord and it is the humble who give him glory.

²¹Do not seek what is beyond your powers nor search into what is beyond your ability. ²²Reflect on what you are commanded to do; there is no need for you to know things that are hidden.

²³Do not tire yourself in resolving useless questions since the knowledge you already have goes beyond human understanding.

²⁴For many have been led astray by their personal theories and a false pretension has misled the reason.

²⁶The obstinate man will at the end fall into evil, and he who loves danger will perish therein. ²⁷The obstinate man will be weighed down with sufferings; the sinner heaps up sin upon sin.

²⁸For the sufferings of the proud man there is no remedy, the roots of evil are implanted in him. ²⁹The wise man reflects on the proverbs. What the wise man desires is an attentive ear.

Almsgiving

³⁰ As water extinguishes the burning flames, almsgiving obtains pardon for sins. ³¹ The man who responds by doing good prepares for the future, at the moment of his downfall he will find support.

4 ¹ My son, do not deny the poor his food and do not make the man who looks at you with pleading eyes wait.

² Do not sadden the hungry person nor annoy anyone who is in need. ³ Do not exasperate an angry man nor withhold alms from the beggar.

⁴ Do not drive away the beggar who is weighed down with afflictions nor turn away your face from the poor; ⁵ do not turn away your face from the needy nor give anyone a reason to curse you.

⁶ If someone curses you in the bitterness of his heart, the Creator will hear his prayer.

⁷ Make yourself acceptable to the community; bow your head before the one in authority.

⁸ Listen to the poor man and reply to him with kind words and with peace. ⁹ Deliver the oppressed from the hands of the oppressor. Do not be weak when you administer justice. ¹⁰ Be like a father towards orphans and like a husband towards their mothers. Then you will be like a son of the Most High and he will love you more than your own mother.

¹¹ Wisdom brings up her children and takes care of those who look for her. ¹² Whoever loves her loves life. Those who rise in the early morning in search of her will be filled with joy.

¹³ Whoever possesses her will have glory at last; wherever he goes the Lord will give a blessing. ¹⁴ Those who serve her are ministers of the Holy One; those who love her are loved of the Lord. ¹⁵ He who listens to her will have good judgment. He who obeys her will rest in safety.

¹⁶ Whoever trusts in her will possess her and his children after him will inherit her.

¹⁷ For in the beginning she will lead him by rough paths, causing him to fear and be terrified; she will plague him with her discipline until she can count on him; and she will put him to the test by her demands.

¹⁸ Then she will lead him on a level path, give him joy and reveal her secrets to him.

²⁰ In every situation weigh up the pros and cons and avoid evil. A wrong kind of shame could harm you. ²¹ There is a shame which leads to sin and there is a shame which merits praise and respect. ²² Do not act against your better self to win favour from others. Do not let this kind of shame lead you into sin.

²⁵ Do not contradict the truth; rather confess your lack of knowledge.

²⁶ Have no shame in confessing your sins, do not swim against the tide.

²⁷ Do not cringe before a foolish man; do not be influenced by the powerful.

²⁸ Fight for the truth till death and the Lord will fight for you.

²⁹ Do not be daring in your speech, but lazy and negligent in your works.

³⁰ Do not be like a lion in your household, pulling down your servants and oppressing those under you.

³¹ Do not open your hand to receive and keep it closed when you should give.

Do not rely on wealth

o5 ¹ Do not rely on your wealth. Do not say, "I am self-sufficient." Do not let yourself be carried away by greed and violence, they would make you their slave.

³ Do not say, "Who can stop me?" For the Lord has power to punish you. ⁴ Do not say, "I have sinned and nothing has happened!" For the Lord bides his time.

⁵ Do not be so sure of pardon when you are heaping sin upon sin. ⁶ Do not say "His compassion is great! He will forgive the vast number of my sins!" For with him is mercy but also anger; his fury will be poured out on sinners.

⁸ Do not rely on riches wrongfully acquired for they will be of no use to you on the day of wrath.

6 ¹ Just as the wicked man will inherit confusion and shame so will the sinner who lies. ² Do not give yourself over to your passions; they would turn against you and, like a bull, would tear you to pieces. ³ They would devour the foliage and destroy the fruit, leaving you like a dry stump. ⁴ An evil passion will destroy the one who is held in its power; it will make him the laughing stock of his enemies.

Friends

+ ⁵ A gentle word makes many friends, an agreeable tongue calls forth gracious replies. ⁶ Let your friends be many; but, your counsellors, one in a thousand!

⁷ If you would gain a friend, begin by testing him and do not put your confidence in him too quickly. ⁸ For there is the friend who is such when it suits him but he does not remain faithful in the time of your adversity.

⁹ There is the friend who becomes an enemy and, to your confusion, makes known why you quarrelled.

¹⁰ There is the friend who shares your table but does not remain faithful when things go against you. ¹¹ In times of prosperity he will be like your shadow and he will speak freely to those of your household. ¹² But, if you are humiliated, he will turn against you and will avoid meeting you.

¹³ Distance yourself from your enemies and be careful about your friends.

¹⁷ Whoever fears the Lord will make true friends for, as a man is, such will his friend be.

²⁰ Wisdom is very severe on the ignorant. A foolish man will not persevere. ²¹ She will be like a heavy weight or a difficult test which he will quickly throw away.

o 5:6: At times, some Christians rely on God's infinite mercy to continue with their evil behaviour.

+ Here, we have a text concerning true friendship. Ben Sira invites us not to be naive or off guard. We should reflect before confiding in a friend, but we will not lack this life-saving remedy which a true friend is, a grace that God grants to those who fear him. Also see 12:8-18 and 37:1-15.

6.18-37: We obtain wisdom through a disciplined life.

7.15: Ben Sira appreciates manual work, specifically work in the fields.

to the burden and bear her yoke; do not rebel against her chains. ²⁶ Come to her with all your soul and with all your soul and with all your strength observe her ways. ²⁷ Pursue her, search for her, she will make herself known to you; when you have her, do not let her go.

³² If you wish, my son, you will be learned; if you pay attention, you will become clever.

³³ If you love to listen, you will learn; if you really pay attention, you will become wise.

³⁴ Be on your guard in the assembly of the elders and if there is a wise man there, attach yourself to him. ³⁵ Be willing to listen to all discourses on divine things and do not let the sayings of the wise escape you.

³⁶ If you see an intelligent man, follow him from daybreak and let your feet beat a pathway to his door.

³⁷ Meditate on the precepts of the Lord and apply yourself unceasingly to his commandments. He will strengthen your heart and the wisdom you desire will be given to you.

¹ Do no evil and evil will not take hold of you.

² Keep away from wrong-doing and it will leave you alone.

³ Son, do not sow in the furrows of injustice for fear of reaping its harvest sevenfold.

⁵ Do not make yourself out to be a just man before the Lord nor a wise man in front of the king.

⁶ Do not seek a position of responsibility lest you be not powerful enough to root out injustice, lest you be overawed by a powerful man and lose your integrity.

⁷ Do not offend the city's assembly; do not grovel before the people.

⁸ Do not commit the same sin twice; once is enough to bring punishment upon you.

¹¹ Do not despise a man when he is down-cast, for there is someone who casts down and raises up.

¹² Do not lie against your brother; likewise, do not lie against your friend.

¹³ Do not allow yourself any kind of lie for nothing good will come of it.

¹⁴ Do not gossip in front of the council of the elders, neither keep on repeating your words in prayer.

¹⁵ Do not hate hard work nor the tilling of the land as instituted by the Most High.

¹⁶ Do not join the company of sinners, remember that the wrath of God will not be delayed.

¹⁷ Remain humble, because the godless are punished with fire and worms.

¹⁸ Do not exchange your friend for money, nor a real brother for the gold of Ophir.

¹⁹ Do not separate yourself from a wise and good woman, because a gracious wife is worth more than gold.

²⁰ Do not maltreat the servant who works honestly, nor the labourer who works diligently. ²¹ Love the intelligent slave as yourself and do not deprive him of his freedom.

²² Have you any cattle? Take care of them. If they are profitable to you, keep them.

²³ Have you children? Educate them and teach them to obey from their childhood.

²⁴ Have you any daughters? Guard their virginity and do not be indulgent towards them.

²⁵ If you marry off your daughter you will have accomplished something of importance, but give her to an intelligent man.

²⁶ Have you a wife who is according to your liking? Do not send her away. As for the one you dislike, do not trust her.

²⁷ Honour your father with your whole heart and do not be forgetful of the sufferings of your mother.

²⁸ Remember that they gave you birth. How can you repay them for what they have done for you?

²⁹ Reverence the Lord with all your being and respect the priests.

³⁰ Love your Creator with all your strength and do not abandon his ministers.

³¹ Fear the Lord and honour the priest. Give him the share which has been commanded: the first harvest, the sin-offering, the shoulders of the victims, the holy offerings and the first fruits of sacred things.

³² Stretch out your hand to the poor and you will receive a blessing from the Lord.

³³ May your gifts benefit the living and do not forget the dead.

³⁴ Do not turn away from those who weep and grieve with those who are in sorrow.

³⁵ Do not neglect to visit the sick because it is for such acts that you will be loved.

³⁶ In all your actions remember your last end and you will never sin.

Prudence and common sense

8 ¹ Do not argue with a powerful man lest you fall into his hands.

² Do not quarrel with a rich man lest he throw his weight into the scale against you.

³ Do not argue with a talkative person; do not heap up wood on his fire.

⁴ Do not joke with an ignorant man for fear your ancestors will be insulted.

⁵ Do not offend the man who repents of his sins, remember that we are all sinners.

⁶ Do not despise a man in his old age, because we ourselves will grow old.

⁷ Do not rejoice at the death of any man, remember that we shall all die.

⁹ Do not set on one side the teachings of the elders for they also learnt it from their fathers; they will open up your understanding and enable you to reply at the right moment.

¹⁰ Do nothing to arouse the sinner for fear of being burnt by the fire of his flame.

¹¹ Do not annoy the angry man for fear that he will twist your words to his own advantage.

¹² Do not lend to those more powerful than yourself; if you have lent anything, consider it as lost.

¹³ Do not stand surety beyond your means; if you have done so, be ready to pay.

¹⁴ Do not go to law with a judge because, according to his position, judgment will be given in his favour.

¹⁵ Do not travel with an adventurer lest he impose himself on you and, as he does whatever he pleases, you will both perish through his folly.

¹⁷ Do not take counsel with a fool because he will not be able to remain silent about what you have said.

¹⁸ Do nothing which should be secret before a stranger because you do not know how he will react.

¹⁹ Do not reveal your secrets to any man, he will not be grateful to you for doing so.

Man with women

9 ¹ Do not be jealous of your own wife; do not give her the temptation to disgrace you.

² Do not put yourself into the power of any woman to the point where she can dominate you.

³ Do not go near a woman of ill-repute for fear of falling into her nets.

⁴ Do not dally with a singing girl for fear of being caught in her snares.

⁵ Do not fix your gaze on a young girl for fear of being involved in her condemnation.

⁶ Do not deliver yourself into the power of prostitutes lest you lose your inheritance.

⁷ Do not glance about you in the streets of the town; do not loiter in lonely places.

⁸ Turn your eyes away from a good-looking woman and do not stare at a beautiful foreigner. For the beauty of a woman has caused many to fall; in her presence love blazes up like a fire.

¹⁰ Do not abandon an old friend, for a new one has not the same value.

New wine, new friend; let them mature, then you will enjoy them with pleasure.

¹¹ Do not envy the success of the sinner, you do not know what his end will be.

¹² Do not take pleasure in what pleases the godless, remember that they will be punished before they die.

¹³ Keep well away from the man who has power to kill and you will not experience the fear of death. But if you go with him avoid all offence for fear that he will deprive you of life: realize that you are passing through death-traps and that you are walking on top of the wall.

¹⁴ As far as you can, be sociable and take counsel with learned men.

¹⁵ Love to speak with intelligent men and let all your discourses be about the law of the Most High.

¹⁶ Let just men be your companions at table; take pride in your fear of the Lord.

6. Lk 15, 13

8. Mt 5, 28

11. Ps 37

■ Ben Sira lives in a society which holds women in contempt. In that society which had not discovered the rich quality of married love, there are great temptations for young and adult men who will be more easily satisfied with occasional love. Thus, Ben Sira has many warnings against women's seduction. See 23:12 and 42:12.

¹⁷ An artisan is judged by his work and a leader of the community by the wisdom of his words.

¹⁸ A talkative man is dreaded in his town and the gossip makes himself disliked.

10 ¹ The wise leader will teach his people; the government of the intelligent man will be well-ordered.

² As the leader is, so will his ministers be; as the leader of the city is, such will be its inhabitants.

³ A king without wisdom will ruin his people; a city will prosper through the wisdom of its rulers.

⁴ The government of the earth is in the hands of the Lord; in his own time he will raise up the right leader.

⁵ The success of every man is in the hands of the Lord and he clothes the rulers with his glory.

Pride

◆ ⁶ Do not store up resentment against your neighbour, no matter what his offence; do nothing in a fit of anger.

⁷ Pride is odious to both God and man; injustice is abhorrent to both of them.

⁸ Sovereignty passes from one nation to another because of injustice, violence and wealth.

⁹ How can there be such pride in someone who is nothing but dust and ashes? Even while he is living, man's bowels are full of rotteness.

¹⁰ Look: the illness lasts while the doctor makes light of it; and the king of today will die tomorrow.

¹¹ Once a man is dead, grubs, insects and worms are his lot.

¹² The beginning of man's pride is to separate himself from the Lord and to rebel against his Creator.

¹³ The beginning of pride is sin. Whoever perseveres in sinning opens the floodgates to everything that is evil. For this the Lord has inflicted dire punishment on sinners; he has reduced them to nothing.

¹⁴ The Lord has overturned the thrones of princes and set up the meek in their place.

¹⁵ The Lord has torn up the proud by the roots and has planted the humble in their place.

¹⁶ The Lord has overturned the land of the pagans and totally destroyed them.

¹⁷ He has devastated several of them, destroyed them and removed all remembrance of them from the face of the earth.

¹⁸ Pride was not created for man nor violent anger for those born of woman.

¹⁹ Which race is worthy of honour? The human race.

Which race is worthy of honour? Those who fear the Lord.

Which race is despicable? The human race.

Which race is despicable? Those who break the commandments – the Law.

²⁰ The leader is worthy of respect in the midst of his brethren, but he has respect for those who fear the Lord. ²² Whether they be rich, honoured or poor, their pride should be in fearing the Lord.

²³ It is not right to despise the poor man who keeps the law; it is not fitting to honour the sinful man.

²⁴ The leader, the judge, and the powerful man are worthy of honour, but no one is greater than the man who fears the Lord.

²⁵ A prudent slave will have free men as servants, and the sensible man will not complain because of that.

²⁶ Do not feel proud when you have only accomplished your work; do not put on airs when times are difficult for you.

²⁷ Of greater worth is the man who works and lives in abundance than the one who shows off and yet has nothing to live on.

²⁸ My son, have a modest appreciation of yourself, estimate yourself at your true value.

²⁹ Who will defend the man who makes an attempt on his own life? Who will respect the man who despises himself?

³⁰ The poor man will be honoured for his wisdom and the rich man for his riches.

³¹ Honoured when poor – how much more honoured when rich!

Dishonoured when rich – how much more dishonoured when poor!

11 ¹ The poor man who is wise carries his head high and sits among the great.

² Do not praise a man because he is handsome and do not hold a man in contempt because of his appearance.

³ The bee is one of the smallest of the winged insects but she excels in the exquisite sweetness of her honey.

⁴ Do not be proud because of the clothes you wear; do not be proud when people honour you. Do you know what the Lord is preparing in a mysterious way? ⁵ Many tyrants have been overthrown and someone unknown has received the crown.

⁶ Many powerful men have been completely disgraced and famous men handed over into the power of others.

⁷ Do not reprehend anyone unless you have first been fully informed, consider the case first and thereafter make your reproach.

⁸ Do not reply before you have listened; do not interrupt the one who is speaking.

⁹ Do not interfere in what is not your business; do not meddle in the disputes of sinners.

¹⁰ My son, do not undertake too many activities. If you keep adding to them, you will not be without reproach; if you run after them, you will not succeed nor will you ever be free, although you try to escape.

Put your trust in God

¹¹ There are those who exhaust themselves, tire themselves out and become anxious, yet in the end they are only the poorer.

¹⁴ Good and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, all come from the Lord.

¹⁵ The just can count on the generosity of the Lord and his goodness will guide them forever.

¹⁶ A man may become rich through being careful and miserly and this is his lot. ¹⁷ The day on which he thinks, "I have earned my rest, now I can live on my possessions," he does not know how long he is going to live. He will have to leave his goods to others and die.

¹⁸ Remain faithful to your duty, give your life to it and grow old in your work.

²⁰ The blessing of the Lord is the just man's reward and quickly, in an instant, his benediction will bear fruit.

²¹ Do not say, "What do I need? What more could I have or desire?"

²² Do not say, "I have all that is necessary, what misfortune can harm me now?"

²³ On good days, one forgets the bad; and on bad days one forgets the good.

²⁴ Even when the end draws near, it is easy for the Lord to reward a man according to the way he has lived.

²⁵ The hour of adversity makes one forget the pleasure; at the end of a man's life his deeds will be revealed.

²⁶ Do not consider anyone as blessed before his death, for it is only at his death that a man will be known.

²⁷ Do not invite just anybody into your house for many are clever deceivers.

²⁸ Like a partridge in its cage acting as a decoy so is the heart of the proud man; like a spy he watches out for your weaknesses.

²⁹ He changes good things into evil, he lays his traps and criticizes even the best things.

³⁰ Just as a spark sets the coal on fire, a wicked man prepares his snares in order to draw blood.

³¹ Beware of the wicked man for he is planning evil. He might dishonour you for ever.

³² If you take a stranger into your house, he will cause you trouble; he will estrange you from your household.

12 ¹ If you do good, know to whom you are doing it and you will receive thanks for your kindness.

² Do good to the godly man and you will receive a reward, if not from the man himself at least from the Most High.

³ Blessings are not for those who persist in evil-doing nor for those who refuse to show compassion.

⁴ Give to the godly man, do not help the sinner; do good to the humble, do not give to the ungodly; deny him bread, do not give it to him lest he eventually dominate you. He will repay you with a double evil for all the good that you will have done for him.

⁵ For the Most High himself detests sinners and carries out his vengeance on the ungodly.

21. Mt 6, 25 22. Lk 12, 16 23. Jn 16, 21;

♦ A few words of simple philosophy about the modesty suitable for people.

• These thoughts are not new in the Bible which encourages us to trust in God on every page. Ben Sira already says what we will find on the lips of Jesus concerning wealth (see Luke 12:16).

And he says: Love the Covenant, dedicate your life to it. The Covenant means following the Law. Jesus, too, will speak of seeking the kingdom of God instead of being preoccupied with assuring the future.

Note the end of this text. In Ecclesiastes, as in parts of the book of Job (19:25), there is a glimpse of the destiny God has in store for us after death; only at his death, will a man be known. Ben Sira hopes that God will reward the just on the last day of his life, even though he does not know anything concerning this.

⁷ Give to the good man but do not help the sinner.

⁸ A friend does not become an enemy in the time of prosperity nor does an enemy remain hidden in the time of adversity.

⁹ When a man is doing well his enemies are sad; when he is suffering misfortune even his friends hasten to abandon him.

¹⁰ Never trust an enemy, for his malice is like bronze covered in rust.

¹¹ Even if he should act as a humble man and walk with head bowed down, watch yourself and be on your guard against him. Behave towards him as a man who polishes a bronze mirror. Know that the rust will not remain until the end.

¹² Do not place him near you lest he overthrow you and take your place. Do not make him sit on your right hand lest he covet your seat. Let it not be that in the end you understand my words and regret not having listened to my advice.

¹³ Who will have the pity on the snake-charmer bitten by a snake or on those who go near wild beasts? ¹⁴ It is the same for the man who joins company with a sinner and finds himself involved in his wrongdoing. ¹⁵ The sinner will remain quietly with you for an hour but scarcely are you distracted than he will throw away his mask.

¹⁶ The enemy is all sweetness in his speech but in his heart he is planning to throw you in the ditch. The enemy has tears in his eyes but, if he finds an opportunity, he cannot have enough of your blood.

¹⁷ If misfortune comes to you, you will find him there before you; pretending to help you, he will be scheming to get rid of you. ¹⁸ He will wag his head in mockery and clap his hands, he will whisper unceasingly and will show his true face.

By way of the great

+13 ¹ He who touches tar will be soiled, he who associates with an arrogant man will become like him.

Do not carry too heavy a load; do not make friends with someone stronger and richer than you. Why put the earthen pot near the iron one? One will bang the other and break it.

³ The rich man does wrong and is unconcerned; the poor man is insulted and apologizes.

⁴ He uses you as long as you are useful to him; when you have nothing left he deserts you.

⁵ He will stay with you as long as you have something; he will drain you without a second thought.

⁶ If he really needs you he will deceive you, smile at you and raise your hopes; he will speak smooth words and say, "What would you like?"

⁷ He will show his gratitude by entertaining you until he has taken all you possess and he will make fun of you in the end. Afterwards, when he sees you, he will have nothing to do with you, shaking his head when he meets you.

⁸ Take care not to be deceived and humiliated through stupidity.

¹⁰ Do not go so far forward that you are pushed aside or so far back that you are overlooked.

¹⁵ All that lives loves its own kind and each person his own neighbour.

+ This long paragraph is an invitation not to seek the company of those above us. Often, the rich, those above, are godless, without conscience. The author points out the dangers:

- those above take advantage of those who seek to become familiar with them;

- to be admitted into the friendship of the rich, we have to accept many humiliations and to forget our own dignity;
- in our contact with the rich, we will come to imitate their faults.

¹⁶ Every animal relates to its own species and man to his own kind.

¹⁷ Can the wolf go along with the lamb? It is the same with the sinner and the virtuous man. ¹⁸ What kind of peace can exist between the hyena and the dog? What peace between the rich and the poor man?

Wild donkeys are the prey of desert lions; so, also, are the poor the prey of the rich.

²⁰ The proud man hates humility; so, also, the poor man is detestable to the rich man.

²¹ When the rich man stumbles his friends support him, but when the poor man falls his friends desert him.

²⁴ Wealth is good if there is no sin in it and poverty is evil when it is the reward for godlessness.

Enjoy life without greed

²⁵ Man's heart is reflected in his face, for better or for worse.

²⁶ A good heart is seen in a happy face; it is hard to find.

14 ¹ Happy the one who has not sinned in speech or who feels no remorse for his faults.

² Happy is he whose own conscience does not condemn him and who has not fallen from his ideals.

³ Wealth does not befit the small-minded man; why would you give the greedy man riches? ⁴ He who hoards, depriving himself, is hoarding for others: others will enjoy his goods.

⁵ He who is mean to himself, with whom will he be good? He does not even enjoy his own riches.

⁶ There is nothing worse than one who is mean to himself, this is how his evil repays him.

⁷ If he does good, he does it without realizing it but, in the end, his evil will be revealed.

⁸ Evil is the greedy-eyed man who does not pay attention to persons and looks down on people.

⁹ The ambitious man is not content with what he has, wicked injustice shrivels up the heart.

¹⁰ The envious eye covets the food of others; there will be misery and famine at his table.

¹¹ My son, use well whatever you have and give worthy offerings to the Lord.

¹² Remember that death will not delay and your time has not yet been revealed to you.

¹³ Be good to your friend before you die and be generous to him in any way you can.

¹⁴ Enjoy happiness and do not reject lawful pleasure when it comes your way.

¹⁵ Will you not have to leave to another the fruit of your works? The fruit of your labour, will it not be shared out by lot?

¹⁷ All living things grow old like clothing. This is the eternal law: "You will die."

¹⁸ Like green leaves on a bushy tree: some sprout and others fall off, so are the generations of flesh and blood: one dies and another is born. ¹⁹ All finite things pass away and their maker with them.

Happy the one seeking wisdom

²⁰ Happy the one who is intent on wisdom and can reply to those who question him; ²¹ who makes his own the ways of wisdom and meditates on her secrets; ²² who pursues her like a hunter, lies in wait by her paths, ²³ peeps in at her windows and listens at her doors; ²⁴ he sets up camp near her house, fixing his stakes in her walls.

²⁵ He places his tent in the hands of wisdom; he stays in a happy lodging.

²⁶ He places his sons beneath her protection and finds shelter beneath her branches. ²⁷ He is shaded by her from the heat and he makes his camp in her glory.

15 ¹Such is the one who fears the Lord; he who embraces the Law will obtain wisdom. ²She will come out to meet him like a mother and greet him like a virgin bride; ³she will feed him with the bread of understanding and give him the water of wisdom to drink. ⁴He will rely on her and will not waver; he will lean on her and will not be let down.

⁵Wisdom will make him greater than his friends and he will be able to speak in the full assembly. ⁶He will be crowned with happiness and joy. He will inherit an everlasting name.

⁷The fool will never possess her, and sinners never set eyes on her. ⁸She will be far away from pride, and liars will know nothing of her.

⁹Praise is not fitting on the lips of sinners since it does not come from the Lord. ¹⁰Praise must come from the wise man; so the Lord himself inspires it.

God made us free and responsible

■ ¹¹Do not say, "It was God who made me sin." God does not cause what he hates.

¹²Do not say, "He made me do wrong," for he has nothing to do with a sinner. ¹³The Lord hates all evil and those who fear him hate it as well.

¹⁴When he created man in the beginning he left him in the hands of his own conscience.

¹⁵If you wish, you can keep the commandments and it is in your power to remain faithful.

¹⁶He has set fire and water before you; you stretch out your hand to whichever you prefer.

¹⁷Life and death are set before man:

whichever a man prefers will be given him.

¹⁸How magnificent is the wisdom of the Lord! He is powerful and all-seeing.

¹⁹His eyes are on those who fear him. He knows all the works of man.

²⁰He has commanded no one to be godless and has given no one permission to sin.

No happiness for the wicked

16 ¹Do not long for a brood of worthless children, and take no joy in godless sons.

²However many you have, do not rejoice in them if they have no fear of God.

³Do not depend on their having a long life, or trust in their number, because one is better than a thousand and their death is preferable to their being godless.

⁴A city can arise from one man who is prudent. Yet, even though the wicked become a great tribe, they will be destroyed. ⁵I have seen such things with my own eyes and my ears have heard of still greater things.

⁶Fire has come upon the meeting of sinners and God's wrath is kindled against rebellious people.

⁷God did not pardon the leaders of old who rebelled in their pride of strength.

⁸He did not spare the city where Lot lived; he detested their pride.

⁹He showed no pity on the people doomed to destruction; they were annihilated for their sins.

¹⁰In the same way, he dealt with the six hundred thousand men who, in the hardness of their hearts, had revolted.

¹¹Had there been only one stubborn man it would have been amazing if he had escaped unpunished, since mercy and anger belong to the Lord who is powerful both in forgiveness and punishment.

¹²His justice is as great as his mercy and he judges men by their deeds.

¹³Just as the sinner will not escape with his booty, the patience of the upright man will not go unrewarded.

¹⁴God will reward every act of mercy; each person will be treated according to his deeds.

■ This poem clearly declares that human beings are free and responsible. In his letter (1:13), James will recall the first sentence of this paragraph. In Dt 30:15-20, Moses was already telling his people: Life and death are before you; choose.

At times, the Bible seems to be saying that God pushes man to sin in order to punish him later (see Ex 10:27; 2 Sam 24:1); yet, there is no doubt that man is free. The Israelites were so convinced that nothing was done without God that they had trouble explaining how someone can sin without this being God's will. But, even though they lacked the words to express it, they always saw human beings as persons responsible for their actions.

¹⁷ Do not say, "I will hide from the Lord; who will remember me up there? I will not be recognized in the midst of so many. What am I in the immensity of creation?"

¹⁸ Look; the sky and the heavens above the sky, the sea and the earth tremble when he comes.

¹⁹ The mountains, together with the foundations of the earth, are filled with dread before his sight.

²⁰ But nobody thinks of such things: who is interested in the ways of God?

²¹ Most of his works go unnoticed and man does not see where the storm originates.

²² "Who tells us of the interventions of God? Who expects them? The Covenant is far away."

²³ Such are the thoughts of the man of little sense, the foolish, dissolute man who loves his illusions.

²⁴ Listen to me, my sons; acquire knowledge and apply your heart to my words. ²⁵ I will expound the teaching step by step and impart knowledge carefully.

God the creator

◆ ²⁶ God created his works from the beginning and, as he made them, he assigned to each its place. ²⁷ He arranged them for all time, their beginning and their unfolding. They do not hunger or grow weary and they never cease from their duties. ²⁸ Not one has collided with its neighbour; they will never disobey his commands.

²⁹ Afterwards, the Lord looked down on the earth and filled it with his riches. ³⁰ He covered its surface with all kinds of living things and all return to it.

17 ¹ The Lord created man from the earth and let him return to earth. ² He settled a fixed time for them and a set number of days, giving them power over everything on earth. ³ He endowed them with a strength like his own, making man in his own image.

⁷ He filled them with wisdom and knowledge; he taught them good and evil. ⁸ He put his own inner eye in their hearts so they would understand the greatness of his works. ¹⁰ They will praise his holy Name and relate the magnificence of his creation.

¹³ Human eyes saw the splendour of the Glory of God; their ears heard the grandeur of his voice. ¹⁴ He said to them, "Keep yourselves from all wrongdoing", and he gave to each of them commands regarding his neighbour.

¹⁵ Their conduct is always before the Lord; they cannot escape his sight.

¹⁷ He has placed a leader over each nation but Israel is the Lord's own portion.

¹⁹ Their deeds are as clear as the sun to him, he always observes their ways.

²⁰ Their misdeeds cannot be hidden from him, all their sins are before the Lord.

²² He holds a man's almsgiving dear as a

◆ Here, we have an optimistic vision of men. God gave them power over all things of the earth. This is why they must not give themselves to evil.

The inner eye, that is to say, conscience which lets us recognize the work of God. The greatest human gift is not our reason which discusses and argues, but the instinct for truth, the divine ability, leading us to true wisdom. The sacred author states that it is present in every human being.

But then, God had to reveal himself to us so that this capacity to come to the truth would lead to sound knowledge, decisive in terms of the direction of our lives: in verses 11-14, the author refers to the gift of the Law to Israel through Moses.

priceless signet ring; he cherishes a good deed like the apple of his eye.

²³One day he will rise and reward them; he will place their prize on their heads.

²⁴He allows those who repent to return; he comforts those whose hopes are fading.

²⁵Be converted to the Lord and give up your sins, plead with him to lessen your offense.

²⁶Return to the Almighty, turn aside from wrongdoing and totally detest evil.

²⁷For who in the grave will praise the Almighty, if the living do not give him glory?

²⁸The dead man is as if he did not exist and cannot give praise; he who has life and health can praise the Lord.

²⁹How great is the mercy of the Lord and his forgiveness for those who turn to him!

³⁰Man cannot have everything in his power since he is not immortal.

³¹What is brighter than the sun? Yet it disappears. Man is no more than flesh and blood, yet he thinks of doing evil. ³²While the sun surveys the stars in the lofty sky, all men remain dust and ashes.

The greatness of God

18 ¹He who lives forever created all without exception. ²The Lord alone will be found righteous.

⁴He has made no one powerful enough to proclaim his works; who then, will reveal his marvels?

⁵Who can calculate the power of his majesty and relate his great goodness?

⁶Nothing can be added to him or taken away; no one can fathom the wonders of the Lord.

⁷When man thinks he has finished, then he is only beginning and when he stops he is puzzled by it all.

⁸What is man? What is his purpose? What is the good in him and what the bad?

⁹Take the length of his life: a hundred years is long. ¹⁰Like a drop of water from the sea, a grain of sand, such are his few years compared with eternity.

¹¹For this reason, the Lord has patience with them and pours out his mercy on them.

¹²He sees and realizes how miserable their end is and so he heaps his forgiveness upon them.

¹³Man's mercy is for his neighbour but the compassion of the Lord reaches all people; he rebukes, corrects, teaches and brings back his flock like a shepherd. ¹⁴He takes pity on those who accept correction and eagerly seek his will.

¹⁵My son, do not mix your favours with unkind remarks or your gifts with bitter words.

¹⁶Does not dew temper the heat? So, too, a kind word is much better than a gift.

¹⁷The gift is not as valuable as the words which accompany it, but a generous man brings both.

¹⁸The fool intends to please but insults, a grudging man's gift scorches the eyes.

¹⁹Find out the facts before you speak; look after yourself before you become ill.

²⁰Examine yourself before judgment comes and, on the day of God's visitation, you will be forgiven.

²¹Humble yourself before you become ill and show repentance for your sins.

²²Let nothing prevent you from fulfilling your vow on time; do not wait until death to put things in order.

²³Prepare yourself before praying and do not be one of those who tempt the Lord.

²⁴Keep in mind the justice of the last days: God will turn his face from you on the day of vengeance.

²⁵When you experience abundance, remember the days of famine; when you enjoy riches, think of poverty and misery.

²⁶Time slips by between morning and evening, all things pass quickly before the Lord.

²⁷The prudent man is cautious in everything; when sin abounds he will keep away from wrongdoing.

²⁸Every sensible man recognizes wisdom and respects those who obtain her.

²⁹Those who speak sensibly are wise, and marvellous sayings flow from them.

³⁰Do not let your passions rule you and restrain your desires.

³¹If you satisfy your lusts you will make yourself the laughing-stock of your enemies.

³²Do not impoverish yourself by feasting on credit when you have nothing in your pocket.

19 ¹A drunken worker will never be rich; he who is careless in small things will soon fall.

²Wine and women corrupt the best of men; whoever frequents prostitutes loses all sense of shame. ³He will be the victim of grubs and worms and lose his life because of his stupidity.

When to speak and when to be silent

⁴ He who is too quick to trust others reveals a shallow mind, whoever sins injures himself.

⁵ One who revels in pleasure will be condemned, ⁶ hating gossip will save one from evil.

⁷ Never repeat what you are told and you will come to no harm.

⁸ Report nothing to friend or foe and, unless silence is sinful, reveal it to no one, ⁹ They will listen, distrust you and you will end up being hated.

¹¹ A fool suffers like a woman in childbirth over something he is told.

¹² Like an arrow stuck in his thigh, such is a secret inside a fool.

¹⁴ Speak with your friend: perhaps he has not said anything and, if he has, he will not say it again.

¹⁵ Speak with your friend for there is much slander; do not believe all that you hear. ¹⁶ Often, unintentional slips are made; for who has never sinned by speech? ¹⁷ Speak with your neighbour before you heap accusations on him; then leave room for the Law of the Almighty.

²⁰ All wisdom is in the fear of the Lord; in all wisdom is the fulfilment of the Law.

²² Knowledge of evil is not wisdom, and prudence is not found in the advice of sinners.

²³ There is a cleverness that is loathsome; it belongs to the evildoer who lacks wisdom.

²⁵ There is an ingenious shrewdness which carries out injustice; ²⁶ it is the art of dissimulating in order to do evil. One pretends to be harmed and weighed down with burdens but in his heart there is only cunning; ²⁷ he hides his face and pretends to be deaf but, as soon as you are distracted, he will take advantage of you.

²⁸ One does not sin while the means are lacking; at the first opportunity, he will do wrong.

²⁹ You can tell a man by his appearance; the responsible man can be recognized by his face.

³⁰ A man's way of dressing reveals who he is, as does his manner of laughing and walking.

The stupid and foolish

² Better to rebuke than nurse a grudge. He who recognizes his fault diminishes its consequences.

⁴ Like a eunuch desiring to violate a girl, such is he who uses force in pretending to be just.

⁵ One keeps silent and is thought to be wise, the other makes himself hated because of his gossiping.

⁶ One remains silent because he does not know how to reply; the other keeps quiet, waiting for the right moment.

⁷ The wise man keeps silent until the right moment; the chatterer and fool speak out of turn.

⁸ He who speaks too much makes himself hated; he who wishes to impose himself stirs up ill will.

⁹ Man can turn his troubles to his advantages; a lucky chance can turn to loss.

¹⁰ There is a type of generosity which will not reward you and another which will repay you double.

¹¹ One is humiliated for having had honours; another is humiliated and, then, lifts up his head.

¹² One buys much with little money; another pays seven times its value.

¹³ The wise man makes himself lovable through his words alone while the favours of the fool are lost.

¹⁴ The fool's gift is not to your advantage; he gives with greedy eyes. ¹⁵ He gives little ^o In many passages, throughout the book of Sirach, as in Proverbs, the author shows that controlling one's tongue is a prerequisite for wisdom.

+ 20:1. We must avoid two errors: correction with anger because we fall into excesses, and being resentful in silence, without letting off steam.

but puts on a great outward appearance and exclaims for all to hear; he lends today and recovers the loan tomorrow; he is a despicable man.

¹⁶ The fool says, "I have no friends, no one welcomes my favours. ¹⁷ Those who eat my bread have evil tongues." How often they will mock him, and how many!

¹⁸ Better to stumble to the ground than make a slip with the tongue; this is how easily the wicked fall.

¹⁹ The rough-mannered man is like an indiscreet story.

²⁰ The proverb told by a fool will fail, since he does not speak it at an appropriate time.

²¹ One keeps himself from sin because he does not have the means to act; when he gets the chance, he will have no remorse.

²² One loses his soul out of false shame; he loses himself for fear of what a foolish man thinks. ²³ Out of false shame he wants to win a friend; he gets an enemy, in fact, for nothing.

²⁴ Lying is a shameful defect in a man; fools are used to it.

²⁵ Better to be a thief than a liar, yet both are heading for disaster.

²⁶ Habitual lying is detestable; disgrace never leaves the liar.

²⁷ The wise man's words advance his cause; the shrewd man will gain favour with the powerful.

²⁸ He who tills the earth increases his produce; he who pleases the great, is forgiven his wickedness.

²⁹ Presents and gifts blind a wise man's eyes; like a muzzle they silence the conscientious.

³⁰ Concealed wisdom and hidden treasure: what good are these?

³¹ The man who conceals his stupidity is better than he who conceals his wisdom.

21 ¹ Have you sinned, my son? Do not do it again and beg forgiveness for your past sins.

² Escape from sin as you would from a snake; if you go near, it will bite you. Its teeth are like those of a lion and destroy human lives.

³ All evil is like a double-edged sword which inflicts wounds past remedy.

⁴ Violence and pride bring down the rich; the arrogant man's house will be brought low.

⁵ The poor man's prayer reaches the ears of the Lord and his judgment will not delay.

⁶ Whoever hates correction goes the way of sinners; he who fears the Lord turns to him in his heart.

⁷ The chatterer is known everywhere but the discreet man recognizes his weakness.

⁸ Building a house with borrowed money is like collecting stones for your own tomb.

⁹ The meeting of sinners is like a pile of rope which will go up in fire and flames.

¹⁰ The path of sinners is well paved but it ends in the fiery abyss.

¹¹ He who keeps the Law is in control of his thoughts; the fear of the Lord brings wisdom.

¹² The man who is not clever will never be taught; but there is a cleverness which leads to bitterness.

¹³ The wise man's knowledge spreads out like a flood and his advice is like a spring.

¹⁴ The fool's heart is like a broken glass which cannot hold any teaching.

¹⁵ If an educated man hears a wise saying he values it and adds another. If the good-for-nothing hears it he is annoyed and tosses it over his shoulder.

¹⁶ The fool's talk weighs like a load while the wise man's words give rest.

¹⁷ The assembly awaits the wise man's words; each one takes to heart whatever he says.

¹⁸ The fool thinks of wisdom as a house in ruins but the knowledge of the fool amounts to nonsense.

The stupid and foolish

■ ¹⁹ As far as the fool is concerned, instruction is no more than handcuffs and fetters. ²⁰ The idiot laughs aloud while the intelligent man merely smiles quietly.

²¹ Instruction is like a golden ornament to the shrewd man, like a bracelet on his right arm.

²⁵ Strangers speak thoughtlessly of everything while wise men's words are carefully weighed. ²⁶ The heart of fools is in their mouth but the mouth of the wise is in their heart.

22 ¹ The idler is like a dirty stone, his disgrace is laughed at.

² The idler is like a heap of dung, all who touch it shake it off their hands.

³ Badly brought up sons are the shame of their father, and daughters, a humiliation.

⁴ A sensible daughter is a treasure to her husband but the disgraceful one is a burden to her father.

⁵ A shameless daughter brings disgrace on her father as well as her husband; both hate her.

⁶ The untimely word is like music at a funeral but beating and correction guided by wisdom are never out of place.

⁷ Teaching a fool is like gluing a broken jar, it is easier to awaken a man deep in sleep.

⁸ Reasoning with a fool is like reasoning with a drowsy man; at the end, he will ask you, "What is it about?"

⁹ Weep for the dead man since the light has deserted him, weep for the fool because understanding has deserted him.

Cry less for the dead man; he has found his rest but the fool's life is worse than death.

¹² Mourning the dead lasts seven days but it lasts all their life for the fool and godless man.

¹³ Do not waste words on the fool or go with the stupid man; beware of him lest he bring you trouble and his contact leave you contaminated. Stay away from him if you want rest and do not want to be worn out by his requests.

¹⁴ What is heavier than lead? What is its name but Fool?

¹⁵ Sand, salt and a load of iron are easier to bear than a fool.

¹⁷ A decision based on serious reflection stands like plaster on a firm wall.

¹⁸ Stakes set on a height do not resist the wind; the fool's heart, frightened by his own imaginings, cannot withstand fear.

¹⁹ Striking the eye brings tears; if you strike the heart, lucidity will come forth.

²⁰ Whoever throws stones at birds scares them off; reproach a friend and you will kill the friendship.

²³ Win your neighbour's confidence when he is poor so that you may enjoy his goods with him when he grows rich; be loyal in his hour of trouble and you will win, in the end, a share in his inheritance.

²⁴ Smoke and fumes precede the fire; so, too, insults herald the blows.

²⁵ I will not be ashamed of protecting a friend nor will I avoid him; ²⁶ if evil comes to me from him, all who hear of it will beware of him.

²⁷ Who will put a guard on my mouth and effectively lock up my lips to prevent me from sinning and my tongue from hastening my ruin?

23 ¹ O Lord, Father and master of my life, do not abandon me to the whims of my lips or allow me to fall because of them.

² Who will deal out punishment to my thoughts and apply the discipline of wisdom to my heart? ³ Let them not indulge my sins or the mistakes of my mind, lest my errors increase and my sins multiply, and I fall into the hands of my enemies, to the joy of my foes.

⁴ Lord, Father and God of my life, do not allow me to become haughty; ⁵ keep greed far away from me.

⁶ Do not let lust and lechery take hold of me; do not deliver me to filthy passions.

⁷ Children, learn how to control your language; if you are able to watch over it, you will not be taken by surprise.

⁸ The sinner will be caught in his own

2. Ps 141, 5

■ The politeness of well educated people shows their noble spirit. When we are truly wise, we instinctively discover the rules of good education. As Saint Francis de Sales used to say: "Courtesy is the precious flower of charity."

◆ Prayer of the youth who discovers his weakness when faced with life's temptations. Prayer of the adult person who has experienced that evil is deep-rooted in his heart. An invitation to parents to look after their children's training.

words, as happens to the proud man and him who curses.

⁹ Do not get used to swearing, taking the name of the Holy One.

¹¹ The man who swears at any time will be found full of sins, and disgrace will not depart from his house. If he fails to keep his oath due to carelessness, punishment will descend upon him; if he fails knowingly, his sin is double and if he has sworn falsely, he will not be forgiven; in any case, his house will be filled with disasters.

About impurity and adultery

¹³ Do not accustom your mouth to foul language for it will be sinful talk.

¹⁵ A man used to indecent talk will never be reformed in his lifetime.

¹⁶ Two types of men multiply sins and a third attracts the Lord's anger:

¹⁷ A blazing passion which burns like fire will not be extinguished until it burns itself up.

A man who seeks pleasure from his own body, he will not give up until he catches fire; to the indecent man, all food tastes sweet and he will not be satisfied until death.

¹⁸ The man unfaithful to the marriage bed who thinks like this, "Who sees me? Darkness surrounds me, the walls hide me; nobody can see me. Why should I worry? The Almighty will not take note of my faults."

¹⁹ He fears the scrutiny of men and does not realize that the Lord's eyes are a thousand times brighter than the sun, that they watch the conduct of all men and penetrate into the most secret corners. ²⁰ All things were present to him before they were created and so will they be after their end.

²¹ This man will be punished in view of the whole city, he will be caught when he least expects it.

²² In the same way, the woman who is unfaithful to her husband and gives him an heir by another man will be punished. ²³ First, she has disobeyed the Law of the Almighty. Secondly, she has sinned against her husband and thirdly, she is tainted with adultery, for she has had children by another man.

²⁷ People who have seen her will know that nothing matters more than the fear of the Lord and nothing is sweeter than fulfilling his commands.

9. Mr 5, 34; James 5, 12

The sin of the tongue (or the lips) means, first of all, proud words and proud projects. This is always the beginning of all the other sins.

o Ben Sira speaks of impurity in the traditional sense: sin against chastity.

- In 23:12-15, he speaks of vulgar words and malicious conversations. As Jesus says in Matthew 12:34: the mouth speaks of what fills the heart.

- 23:16-21 refers to extramarital relationships.

- 23:22-23 deals with an adulterous woman, though it can also be applied to the adulterous man: 1) It is a sin against God; 2) it is a sin against the spouse; 3) it is a sin against the family honour.

+ This poem attributed to the Wisdom of God resembles those of Proverbs 8 and Wisdom 7.

The hymn of wisdom

+24 ¹Listen to wisdom singing her own praises and extolling self in the midst of her people. ²See, she opens her mouth in the assembly of the Most High, she glories in herself before the Almighty.

³I came out from the mouth of God and covered the face of the earth like a mist; ⁴although my dwelling place is in the highest heavens, my throne is within the pillar of cloud.

⁵I alone have seen and understood the vault of the skies and strolled through the depths of the abyss, ⁶taking possession of the raging sea and of the earth as well, with all its peoples and nations.

⁷In all of these, I looked for a place to rest; in which territory would I set up my abode?

⁸Then the creator of the universe commanded me, he who created me assigned the place of my rest, "Pitch your tent in Jacob; Israel will be your homeland."

⁹He had created me from the beginning, before time began and I will never cease to be, ¹⁰-serving him in his Holy Tent, before his presence. But then I was established in Zion.

¹¹The Lord let me rest in his beloved city and Jerusalem is the heart of my kingdom. ¹²I took root in the people God has favoured, in the land of the Lord, in their inheritance.

¹³I grew like a cedar in Lebanon, as the cypress on Mount Hermon.

¹⁴I grew like the palm trees in Engedi and the rosebuds of Jericho; as a magnificent olive on the plains like a fragrant flower, like exquisite myrrh I have given choice scent; like sweet-smelling plants and as the smoke of incense which burns in the Sanctuary of God.

¹⁵I spread out my branches like a vine; these are Glory and Grace. ¹⁷Just like a vine I put out graceful shoots and my blossoms are riches and glory.

¹⁹Come to me, you who desire me and take your fill of my fruits. ²⁰To experience me is sweeter than honey and to possess me sweeter than any honeycomb. ²¹Those who eat me will still hunger for me; those who drink me will still thirst for me. ²²Those who obey me will not be put to shame; those who serve me do not fall into sin.

²³All this is understood in the Bible, the Testament of the Most High God, the book of the Law which Moses entrusted to us, the inheritance of the people of Israel.

²⁵This Law feeds the springs of wisdom, like the Pishon or Tigris in the season of fruit. ²⁶Waters overflowing with understanding come from it, as from the Euphrates and Jordan at harvest time; ²⁷the floods of What is emphasized here is the presence of Wisdom in God's people.

Two events from sacred history help us understand this presence of God himself through his Wisdom:

- The cloud which accompanies the Hebrews in the desert (see Ex 13:21).
- The Tent which served as sanctuary in the desert (see Ex 25).

The first image teaches us that God's glory so surpasses man, that we can only know something of God when he hides his glory in the cloud. The second image teaches us that the real dwelling of God is not something material that we call "heaven;" God's presence in this world is something mysterious and provisional, something like a tent.

The Wisdom of God rules the universe and all the nations and yet, it came in a special way to Israel, which is its dwelling and inheritance. This prepares us for what John says in his Gospel 1:3 and 1:9: the Wisdom of God is Christ and the people where it will be present is the Church.

Catholic liturgy has used this poem for the feasts of the Virgin Mary because the words fit instruction run like the Nile or the Gihon in time of vintage.

²⁸ He who comes first is unable to grasp her fully and neither will the last exhaust her. ²⁹ For her thoughts are wider than the sea and her designs deeper than the abyss.

I have not worked for myself alone

■ ³⁰ I, for my part, was like a brook from a river, a stream diverted into a delightful garden. ³¹ I thought, "Let me irrigate my orchard and water my flowers." But, now, my brook has developed into a river and the river has grown into a sea.

³² May my teaching shine forth like the dawn; may I carry its light to faraway places. ³³ I will spread my teaching like a prophecy and leave it to future generations.

³⁴ See, all of you, that I have not worked for myself alone but for all those who seek wisdom.

25 ¹ Three things delight me and are delightful to God and men: agreement between brothers, friendship between neighbours, and perfect harmony between husband and wife.

² There are three kinds of persons whom I detest and whose existence I cast away from me: a poor man full of pride, a rich man who is a liar, and an adulterous old man who is a fool.

³ If you have saved nothing in your youth, what will you have in old age?

⁴ What a great thing is old age that knows how to advise, an old man who can judge!

⁵ What a great thing is wisdom in those who are old, or understanding and prudence in the great.

⁶ Rich experience is the crown of the old, their pride is the fear of the Lord.

⁹ Happy he who has obtained good sense and is able to speak before an attentive audience!

¹⁰ Great is he who has gained wisdom, but no one surpasses the man who fears the Lord.

¹¹ Since the fear of the Lord excels everything, who can compare with the one who possesses it?

¹⁵ There is no poison worse than a snake's venom, there is no rage worse than an enemy's.

¹⁶ Better to live with a lion and a snake than to share a house with a wicked woman.

¹⁷ Wickedness disfigures a woman's appearance, it saddens the face, making her look like a bear.

¹⁸ When her husband dines with his neighbour, he sighs bitterly, in spite of himself.

¹⁹ All wickedness is nothing compared with a woman's wickedness. Let her be the lot of a sinner!

²⁰ As a sandhill is to an old man's feet so is the talkative woman to her quiet husband. ²¹ Do not be fooled by a woman's beauty or fall in love with her.

²² Expect anger, reproach and plenty of shame when the wife rules the husband.

²³ Dejected spirits, a sad face and unseen the role that God gave her in the Church. On the day of the Annunciation, she received Jesus in the name of all. This is why she has been granted to be the first of God's people and the mother of all others.

The last verses return to practical things: the Wisdom of God is found especially in the Law, that is, in the book of his words.

■ Ben Sira is a sage. All the rich experience that he shares with us comes from this unique wisdom. He marvels at all he received from God which, now, enables him to teach and guide many: The Almighty has done great things in me (Luke 1:49).

◆ Ben Sira praises the perfect woman from a moral and physical viewpoint. This appreciation of the feminine charm of a wife brings us to denounce two evils which trouble many marriages:

- the conditions of life for country women make them lose their grace and gifts within a few years;
- the lack of conversation and common interest between spouses, making women dedicate themselves only to their children, thus ceasing to be their husband's lovers.

wounds, these are the work of a wicked woman. Idle hands and unsteady knees are found when a wife brings her husband no happiness.

²⁴For sin began with woman and we all die because of her.

²⁵Do not let water leak out or give free rein to a wicked woman. If she does not do as you tell her, get rid of her.

26 ¹Happy the husband of a good wife, the number of his days will be doubled. ²A woman of character is her husband's joy, he will live in peace all the years of his life.

³A good wife is the best of gifts, reserved for those who fear the Lord; ⁴rich or poor, he will have a serene heart and wear a happy face.

⁵Three things disturb me and a fourth frightens me: neighbourhood gossip, a rioting mob, a false accusation, all these are worse than death. ⁶But the woman jealous of another woman brings heartbreak, her tongue lashes out at everyone.

⁷A bad wife is like a badly fixed yoke; taking her is like grasping a scorpion.

⁸A drunken wife causes scandal; her disgrace will not remain hidden.

⁹A licentious woman is noticed by her secretive looks and recognized by her lively eyes. ¹⁰Keep a firm eye on a defiant daughter, so that she may not take advantage of some occasion.

¹¹Guard against the provocative woman and do not be surprised if she wishes to drag you into disgrace.

¹²She opens her mouth like a thirsty traveller to drink any water coming her way: she sits by any pole and opens her quiver to every arrow.

¹³A wife's grace gladdens her husband and her prudence refreshes his body. ¹⁴A wife who knows how to be silent is a gift from the Lord; the well-trained wife is invaluable. ¹⁵A modest wife is a favour among favours: the chaste wife is priceless.

¹⁶Like the sun rising over the mountains of the Lord, such is the enchantment of a good wife in a well-kept house.

¹⁷Like the light which shines from the sacred lamp-stand, such is a beautiful face in a well-shaped body. ¹⁸Like pillars of gold on a silver base, such are beautiful legs on sturdy feet.

²⁹There are two things which grieve me and a third which makes me angry: a warrior who suffers want; intelligent men who are treated contemptuously; a man who turns from virtue to sin. The Lord singles this man out to strike him.

³⁰The merchant can barely avoid greed; the shopkeeper cannot remain sinless.

27 ¹Many sin for love of gain, he who desires riches silences his conscience.

²Just as the stake is settled between two stones, so sin wedges itself between buying and selling. ³The house of him who does not keep himself firmly in the fear of the Lord, will soon be knocked to the ground.

⁴When a sieve is shaken the dirt falls through; so, too, the defects of a man are seen when he begins to speak.

⁵The kiln tests the potter's handiwork; a man is tested by his conversation.

⁶A welltended tree is shown by its fruits so a man's feelings can be detected in what he says.

⁷Praise no one before he has spoken, since this is the acid test.

⁸If you pursue righteousness you will achieve it and wear it like a festive garment.

⁹Birds associate with their own kind, so, too, does truth greet those who are faithful.

¹⁰The lion lurks in wait for its prey; so, too, does sin lie in wait for those who do wrong.

¹¹The wise man's conversation follows wisdom all the time. In contrast, the fool changes like the moon.

¹²When among fools, be sparing with your time; among thoughtful people, be lavish with it. ¹³The conversation of fools is hateful, their laughter is coarse and raucous.

¹⁴No one can bear those who swear all the time. Their quarrels make you cover your ears.

¹⁵Blood is spilt when proud men quarrel and their insults are painful to the ear.

¹⁶He who betrays a secret is no longer trusted; he will no longer find reliable friends.

¹⁷Love your friend and be loyal; if you have revealed his secrets, go with him no longer.

¹⁸Like a man whose relative has died, so you have lost this friendship.

¹⁹The same happened with your friend, you will not get him back. When you open your hand, the bird flies off; ²⁰do not pursue him: he is far away and has fled like a gazelle from the snare. ²¹For a wound can be bandaged and an insult forgiven but, if you betray a secret, there is no hope.

²²The man who winks an eye is plotting evil, no one can persuade him to change. ²³He is all sweetness to your face, praising your words but, behind your back, he speaks differently and twists your words.

²⁴I hate many things but nothing more than this man; the Lord, also, hates and curses him.

²⁵He who tosses a stone in the air will have it fall on his head, whoever deals a treacherous blow, wounds himself.

²⁶He who digs a pit will fall into it; he who sets a snare will be caught in it.

²⁷If you do evil, evil will befall you and you will not know from where it comes.

²⁸The proud man makes use of mockery and insults but vengeance lies in wait for him like a lion.

²⁹Those who gloat over the downfall of good men will fall into the snare; suffering will consume them before they die.

Don't bear grudges

28 ¹He who demands revenge will suffer the vengeance of the Lord who keeps a strict account of his sins. ²Forgive the mistakes of your neighbour and you may ask that your sins be forgiven.

³If a man bears resentment against another, how can he ask God for healing? ⁴If he has no compassion on others, how can he pray for forgiveness for his sins? ⁵As long as he, mere flesh and blood, is resentful, how can he be forgiven?

⁶Remember your end and give up hatred; keep in mind your final corruption in the grave and keep the commandments. ⁷Remember the commandments and do not bear grudges against your neighbour. Remember the covenant with the Most High and overlook the offence.

⁸Keep away from quarrels and you will avoid sin; the hot-headed man sparks off disputes.

⁹The sinner causes trouble between friends, sowing discord among peaceful people.

¹⁰Fire burns when fuel is thrown on it; stubbornness drags out the discussion.

The more powerful the man, the greater his rage; his anger will be in proportion to his riches.

¹¹A sudden quarrel sparks off a fire; a hasty dispute leads to bloodshed.

¹²Blow on a spark and it ignites; spit on it and it dies out: both come from your mouth.

¹³Cursed be the gossip with his spiteful tongue. He has destroyed many who lived peacefully. ¹⁴The vicious tongue has demolished many and hounded them from nation to nation. He has ruined powerful cities and laid low great households.

¹⁵The vicious tongue has cast out wives who were beyond reproach, depriving them of the fruits of their work. ¹⁶Whoever listens to it will never find rest or be able to live in peace.

¹⁷The whip leaves a mark but the lash of the tongue shatters bones.

¹⁸Many have been felled by the sword but been exposed to its fury, who has not been weighed down by its yoke or been tied up in its chains.

²⁰For it is a yoke of iron and its chains are bronze. ²¹It brings a miserable death. Actual death is better! ²²But it will not tyrannize those who keep faith, it will not consume their soul.

²³Those who desert the Lord will be its victims, it will burn them without being burnt up itself; it will lunge at them like a lion, and rip them apart like a leopard.

²⁴Look, you put a fence around your property and protect your silver and gold. ²⁵In the same way, make weights and scales for your words and put a bolted door at your mouth.

²⁶Beware of a slip of the tongue when you speak, lest you fall in front of those who lie in wait for you.

+29 ¹Lending to your neighbour is an act of mercy, going to his aid fulfils the commandments.

²Learn to lend to your neighbour when he is in need and, in turn, repay him any loan on time.

³Keep your word, remain faithful and you will find what you need on every occasion.

⁴Many think of a loan as a quick deal and put those who help them in a fix.

⁵The moment they receive it, they kiss the hand of the moneylender and humble themselves in deference to his wealth. But, on the day repayment is due, they prolong the time, repay with reproaches and blame the current situation.

⁶If they can repay, they pay barely half and the moneylender will be grateful for that much. They have robbed him of his money and, moreover, he has gained enemies, for they repay him with curses and insults and reproaches instead of gratitude.

⁷Many a good person refuses to lend, not for any malicious reason: he is afraid of being cheated without cause.

⁸Nevertheless, be kind to those who have fallen on hard times, do not keep them waiting for your help.

⁹For the commandments' sake, help the poor man; see his need and do not turn him away empty-handed.

¹⁰Better to spend your money on a brother or friend than to let it rust under a stone, to your discredit.

¹¹Use your money according to the commandments of the Most High and you will find it more valuable than gold.

¹²Fill your barns with good deeds and these will exempt you from misfortune.

¹³They will fight for you against your enemy better than any strong shield and mighty spear.

¹⁴A good man goes surety for his neighbour: the scoundrel leaves him to his fate.

¹⁵Do not forget the favours of your guarantor: he has risked his life for you.

¹⁶The sinner wastes his guarantor's money: the ungrateful man forgets the one who saved him. ¹⁷Acting as guarantor has ruined many a good man and has tossed him like the waves of the sea. ¹⁸It has banished powerful men and forced them to wander among foreign nations.

¹⁹The sinner is anxious to be a guarantor but he will be condemned as a loan shark.

²⁰Help your neighbour as far as you can but beware of falling into the same plight.

²¹Some things you cannot live without: water, bread, clothes and a house for shelter.

²²Better a poor man's life in his wooden shack than lavish banquets in another man's house.

²³Be content with whatever you have, be it great or small; this is better than to go elsewhere and be reproached as an outsider.

²⁴It is hard to go from house to house; ²⁵where you are an outsider, do not risk opening your mouth. You will eat and drink without much welcome and, on top of that, hear bitter remarks: ²⁶"Come, stranger, set the table and whatever you have, give it to me to eat."

²⁷"Be off, stranger, make room for somebody more important; my brother is coming to see me, I need the house."

²⁸It is hard for a good man to have hospitality denied him and to be treated like a debtor.

Correct your child

■ 30 ¹The man who loves his son makes use of the rod; later on he will be proud of him. ²The man who corrects his son will reap the benefit and be proud of him among his acquaintances. ³By instructing his son he makes his enemy envious; he will be well pleased with him in the company of his friends.

⁴If such a father dies it is as if he had not died, for he leaves behind him another man like himself. ⁵In life he had the joy of his company and he is not sorrowful when death comes.

⁶He leaves him to his family to take revenge on his enemies and return gifts to his friends.

⁷The man who coddles his son will be constantly bandaging his wounds; at his every cry he will be troubled.

⁸Just as a badly broken-in horse cannot be mounted, so a spoiled son becomes insolent. ⁹Pamper your

■ Here Ben Sira touches a point on which the destiny of a people depends. Everybody complains that responsible people are few. We see good feeling everywhere, but where are the people able to persevere in doing good and carrying out their good intentions? The major cause of a lack of maturity in willpower is found in the total lack of parental authority. A three-month old baby knows that if he keeps crying he will force his mother to pick him up. When he is two years old, a child knows how to threaten, scream, have a tantrum, with the assurance that, in the end, his parents will give in: "What can we do? The child does not want it."

Ben Sira knows that only the children who are subject to discipline and whose whims are not satisfied by their parents, only they will come to real freedom, because they are able to persevere in doing good.

Christianity is not founded on the observance child and later he will terrify you; play with him and he will bring you sorrow.

¹⁰ Do not laugh at him lest you have to suffer and grind your teeth. ¹¹ Do not let him be independent as a child ¹² but rather bruise his ribs while he is still young, lest he grow stubborn and refuse to obey.

¹³ Be strict with your son and persevere in this, so as not to suffer because of his misconduct.

¹⁴ Better a poor man healthy and fit, than a rich man tormented in body.

¹⁷ Death is better than a wretched life and eternal rest preferable to lasting sickness.

¹⁸ Dishes of food placed on an empty tomb are like good things offered to one who cannot eat.

²¹ Do not give yourself over to sadness or torment yourself with brooding.

²² Joy of heart is life to a man; gladness gives him length of days.

²³ Delight your soul and console your heart; chase sorrow far away, for sorrow has destroyed many and never did good to anyone.

²⁴ Jealousy and anger shorten your life; worry makes you old before the time.

²⁵ A cheerful and kindly person will have a good appetite and enjoy his food.

31 ¹ The sleeplessness that wealth brings makes a man lose weight; his worries drive sleep away.

² The cares of the day prevent sleep; in the same way, serious illness makes rest impossible.

Happy the one who doesn't go after gold

³ The rich man toils to increase his wealth and then sits back and lives in luxury; ⁴ the poor man toils to survive and is in want as soon as he leaves off.

⁵ He who loves gold cannot be righteous; whoever runs after gain will be led astray. ⁶ Many have been ruined because of gold; disgrace went to meet them.

⁸ Happy is the rich man who has not sinned in this way and has not gone after gold! ⁹ Who is he? Let us say: Fortunate man! For he has given a wonderful example.

¹⁰ Who has been tested in this and found perfect? He has reason to be proud. Who could have sinned but resisted, who could have done wrong and did not do it? ¹¹ His fortune is firmly established and the assembly will acknowledge his generosity.

Dinner parties

◆ ¹² You are seated at a lavish banquet. Don't be over-ready to eat and don't say, 'What a feast!'

¹³ Remember that a greedy eye is an evil thing. What is worse than such an eye? That is why it was condemned to weep ¹⁴ Do not stretch out your hand to everything you see or be quick in reaching for a dish.

¹⁵ Judge the needs of your fellow guest by your own and in all things act prudently.

¹⁶ Eat what is set before you like an educated person and don't be a glutton lest you be detested.

¹⁹ A little is sufficient for a well-bred person; your breathing moreover will be easier when you go to bed. ²⁰ Healthy sleeping is for the moderate eater. He rises early and feels fit! Sleeplessness and stomach trouble attend the over indulgent. ²¹ If you are obliged to eat too much go off and vomit and you will be at ease.

²² Listen to me, my friend, and do not neglect what I say; in the end you will see the truth of a law, but though we may experience something of the "spirit," we will have trouble reaping its fruits if we are not disciplined.

◆ The Bible does not condemn the use of wine: it was made for the delight of men (see Psalm 104:15). Only those consecrated as of it. Be moderate in all that you do and you will be without illness.

²³ A generous host is appreciated and he deserves praise. ²⁴ but everyone will complain about a stingy host and their complaints will be justified.

²⁵ Do not try to show how much wine you can take, for wine has been the ruin of many.

²⁶ As the furnace tests the temper of steel so wine proves hearts and makes proud men quarrel.

²⁷ Wine is life for man if taken in moderation. What is life without wine? ²⁸ Wine makes for a glad heart and a cheerful mind, if taken moderately and at the right time. ²⁹ But if taken to excess it brings bitterness of soul, excitement and a fumbling step.

³⁰ Drunkenness inflames the anger of a stupid person to the point of scandal. It reduces his strength and brings him blows. ³¹ Do not reproach a neighbour during a wine feast, and don't look down on him when he is merry; do not speak harshly to him or annoy him by asking him to settle a debt.

¹ Have you been chosen to preside at a party? Don't give yourself airs! Just be like everyone else in the group: see to their needs and then sit down. ² When you have done what you should, take your place and enjoy yourself with the others. They will congratulate you for a job well done.

³ If you are older, speak as fitting to your age, but know what you are talking about and do not interrupt the music.

⁴ If there is a concert, refrain from speaking: it is not the time for playing the wise man.

⁵ A musical concert at a wine banquet is like a ruby set in gold.

⁶ If you are young, speak if you have to, but not more than twice and only if requested.

⁷ Keep to the point and say it all in a few words. Show that you are well informed but not over anxious to speak.

⁸ Do not try to be the equal of eminent people and do not chat when someone else is speaking.

⁹ As lightning goes before thunder the reputation of a modest man goes before him.

¹⁰ Leave the party at the right time and do not be slow about it; no lingering, go straight home!

¹¹ There you may relax and do as you please, but do not sin by bragging.

¹³ And thank your Creator for the enjoyment of all good things.

¹⁴ Whoever fears the Lord will accept his correction, and those who rise at dawn will win his favour.

¹⁵ The man who follows his Law will be nourished by it, but the hypocrite will find it a stumbling block.

¹⁶ Those who fear the Lord will please him and their good deeds will shine as the light.

¹⁷ The sinner refuses correction and excuses himself for doing what he wants.

¹⁸ Never act without first reflecting and you will have no regrets.

¹⁹ A man of decision will reflect before hand. The alien and the proud man fear nothing.

²⁰ Do not go along a rough road lest you stumble on stones. ²¹ And do not be too sure of your step on a smooth path. ²² Beware even of your own children.

²³ Be careful in whatever you do. In so doing you keep the commandments.

²⁴ Those who trust in the Law will keep the commandments and those who obey the Lord will come to no harm.

¹ Evil will not go to meet the one who fears the Lord; if he is in danger he will be rescued.

² The wise man never departs from the Law; he who only pretends to keep it is like a storm-tossed boat.

³ An intelligent man has faith in the Law which for him is as trustworthy as an oracle.

⁶ A mocking friend is like a wild horse, neighing when anyone rides him.

⁹ Some of these he chose to make holy, others he made ordinary days. ¹⁰ all men come from clay just as Adam himself was formed.

¹¹ In the fullness of his wisdom the Lord has made each one unique and diversified his conditions.

¹² Some he has made holy, keeping them near to himself. Others he has cursed and humiliated, removing them from where they were.

¹³ As clay in the hand of the potter to be moulded as he pleases, so are all in the hands of the Creator to be dealt with as he sees fit.

¹⁴ Good is opposed to evil, life to death, and opposed to the upright man is the sinner.

¹⁵ Consider all the works of the Most High and you will see how they go in pairs, by opposites.

¹⁶ As for me I have been the last to keep watch like a gleaner following the grape-pickers. ¹⁷ By the blessing of the Lord I have taken the lead and like the grape-picker I have filled the winepress. ¹⁸ Note that not only for myself have I toiled, but for all who seek instruction. ¹⁹ Hear me, rulers of the people, leaders of the assembly hear!

²¹ As long as you live and there is breath in you, do not give power over yourself to anyone. ²² It is preferable for your children to be dependent on you rather than that you be obliged to depend on them. ²³ Be master of all that you do; let not others stain your reputation.

²⁴ Wait until the end of your days, until death is near, to distribute your inheritance.

Your slaves

²⁵ Fodder, stick and burdens are for the donkey; bread, correction and work are for the slave.

²⁶ Work on your slave and you will have peace. Let him take it easy and he will want to be free. ²⁷ The yoke and harness will bow the neck. For a criminal slave there are torture and the stocks.

²⁸ Send him to work or he will be idle, and idleness teaches much evil. ²⁹ Give him work that is appropriate for him; if he does not obey, put his feet in chains.

³⁰ But do not be over-demanding with anyone and do nothing without discernment.

³¹ You have a slave? Let him be like you; for you bought him through blood.

³² You have a slave? Treat him like a brother. You need him as you need yourself.

³³ If you ill-treat him and he escapes, where will you go to look for him?

Dreams

34 ¹ The foolish are deceived by vain and false hopes; dreams give them wings.

² To rely on dreams is like grasping a shadow or like chasing the wind.

³ What you see in dreams are only reflections: a person sees his own image.

⁴ What clean thing can come from what is unclean? What truth comes from what is false? ⁵ Divinations, auguries and dreams are empty like the fantasies of a woman in labour.

⁸ Not so the Law, which never fails but comes true. Wisdom from the truthful lips of God is the highest truth.

⁹ One who has travelled knows a great deal, and a man of wide experience will talk soundly. ¹⁰ A person who has not had trials knows very little. But the travelled man is competent in many ways. ¹¹ I have made many discoveries on my travels and understood more than I can express. ¹² I have often been in danger of death but have been saved thanks to my experience.

¹⁴ He who fears the Lord is in dread of nothing. He will not be cowardly for He is his hope. ¹⁵ He who fears the Lord is a happy person. To whom does he turn? Who is his support?

¹⁶ The eyes of the Lord are on those who love him. For them he is powerful protection, strong support, shelter against scorching wind and the midday sun. He is a guide against stumbling and assurance against a fall. ¹⁷ He lifts up the soul and gives a sparkle to the eyes; he gives healing, life and blessing.

o Previously in Israel, dreams had been very important. Here we have a reaction against dreams. Without denying that, in some cases, God can guide or warn the believer through a dream, the author teaches that we must not be guided by dreams: the sure way is to fulfil God's Law (see commentary on Gen 37).

+ What infuriates the sacred author is that after having stripped the humble, the rich come

Offerings pleasing to God

+¹⁸ An offering to God from stolen goods is a stained offering; such sacrifices do not please God.

¹⁹ The Most High takes no pleasure in the offering of the godless. It is not the number of victims that obtains pardon for sin.

²⁰ Offering to God from what belongs to the poor is like slaughtering a son in the presence of his father.

²⁵ If a man is cleansed after touching a corpse and then touches it again, what good was there in his cleansing?

²⁶ If anyone fasts for his sins and then commits the same sins, who will hear his prayer? What value is there in his fasting?

35 ¹ Keeping the Law is worth many offerings. Being faithful in keeping the commandments is a helpful sacrifice.

² Thanksgiving is an offering of fine flour; giving alms is a sacrifice of praise.

³ Keeping away from sin pleases the Lord and shunning injustice is a sacrifice of atonement.

⁴ Do not appear before the Lord with empty hands. The commandment requires that you bring an offering.

⁵ When the offering of the righteous is burned on the altar, the fat drips down and a fragrant aroma rises to the Most High.

⁶ The sacrifice of the just man pleases God and will not be forgotten. ⁷ Honour the Lord with a generous heart and do not be stingy with the first fruits of your harvest.

⁸ Offer your gifts with a smiling face and when you pay your tithes do it gladly.

The Lord will not delay

■ ⁹ Give to the Most High as he has given to you; give generously to the rewarding Lord according to what you have; ¹⁰ he will reward you sevenfold.

¹¹ If you attempt to bribe him with gifts he will not accept them; do not rely on offerings from dishonest gain.

¹⁵ When her tears flow down her cheek, is she not crying against the one who caused her to weep?

¹⁶ The one who serves God wholeheartedly will be heard; his petition will reach the clouds. ¹⁷ The prayer of the humble person pierces the clouds and he is not consoled until he has been heard. ¹⁸ His prayer will not cease until the Most High has looked down, until justice has been done in favour of the righteous.

¹⁹ And the Lord will not delay, nor will he be patient with the wicked. ²⁰ but he will crush the merciless and have vengeance on the nations, ²¹ until he has completely destroyed the hordes of the violent and broken the power of the wicked, ²² until he has repaid each one according to his deeds, ²³ until he has judged his people and made them rejoice because of his mercy.

to the Temple to offer their magnificent presents.

■ We must generously assist in the cost of worship as long as it is not a way of forgetting our responsibilities with regard to injustice in our world. The Lord is pleased with our sacrifices, but above all, he hears the prayer of the orphan and he sees the tears of the widow.

²⁴ Blessed is his mercy in the time of adversity! It is like rain clouds during a drought!

Prayer for the deliverance of Israel

◆36 ¹ Have mercy on us, Master, Lord of all, and look on us; make every nation stand in fear of you.

² Take action against the pagan nations and let them see your power.

³ In punishing us you have shown them your holiness, so now let us see your great power in dealing with them.

⁴ Let them acknowledge, as we have acknowledged, that there is no god but you, Lord.

⁵ Give new signs, do fresh wonders, stretch out your hand and be glorified in your strength.

⁶ Kindle your fury and rouse your anger, destroy your opponents, crush your enemy.

¹⁰ Gather all the tribes of Jacob, give them back their inheritance as in the beginning.

¹¹ Have pity, Lord, on the people known by your Name, on Israel whom you called your first-born.

¹² Show compassion to the holy city, to Jerusalem where you rest.

¹³ Fill Sion with the fame of your wonders and your people with your glory.

¹⁴ Confirm your promises made to your people long ago and fulfil the promises made in your name.

¹⁵ Reward those who wait for you and fulfil the words of your prophets.

¹⁶ Hear the prayer of your servants, Lord; hear your priests giving Aaron's blessing to your people.

¹⁷ So that all on the earth may acknowledge that you are Lord and everlasting God.

Choosing a wife

¹⁸ The stomach takes in all kinds of food but one food is better than another.

¹⁹ Just as the tongue can distinguish the flavour of game, so does the alert mind detect lies.

²⁰ A crooked heart causes sorrow but an experienced person knows how to repay it.

²¹ A woman will accept any husband but some girls are better than others.

²² A woman's beauty makes a man happy and is all that he could wish for.

²³ If she is kindly spoken and gentle he is the most fortunate of men.

²⁴ When a man marries he acquires a fortune, someone who understands him and who will help and support him.

²⁵ When there is no hedge the property will be destroyed; and when a man has no wife he is a fretful wanderer.

²⁶ Who would trust a clever robber flitting from town to town? ²⁷ And who would trust a man without a nest, who lodges wherever nightfall finds him.

Friends and counsellors

37 ¹ Every friend says, "I am your friend, too," but some friends are only friends in name.

◆ The author shares the ideas of his contemporaries who only thought of the salvation of the world under the rule of the Jewish people. His assurance can serve us as well; he trusts in the promise of the prophets: God will do justice; God will gather all his scattered children.

Such a hope has always been the strength of the Jewish people. After Christ, they were dispersed as the Gospel prophesied. Later, they were unfortunately persecuted in Christian countries. Yet, they continued to be encouraged by the hopes expressed here.

Even when they have moved away from their ancient faith, modern Jews preserve the assurance of being the chosen race and the ones who will save the world. This can help us understand several historical events.

On one hand, the Jews have never ceased wanting to return to Palestine so that Israel may be reborn

Fortunate are those who from childhood have disciplined their mind, seeking for knowledge and wisdom... and for God.

² Is it not a deadly grief when a companion or friend turns enemy?

³ O evil intention! From where have you sprung, to cover the earth with deceit?

The comrade takes advantage of his friend's good fortune; in time of trouble he turns against him. ⁴ A comrade shares his friend's suffering, out of concern; when it comes to a fight, he thinks only of saving himself.

⁵ Do not neglect a friend or forget him once you are wealthy.

⁷ All advisers give advice but some seek only their own gain.

⁸ Distrust the person who offers advice lest he take advantage of you; first of all, ask yourself what he lacks, and what his own interest suggests to him.

¹⁰ Do not seek advice from one who looks at you suspiciously; hide your plans from those who envy you.

¹³ In the end, keep to your own heart's advice since no one deserves to be trusted more than your heart;

¹⁴ For a man's soul often gives better advice than seven watchmen placed on a height.

¹⁵ Besides all this, implore the Almighty to guide your steps in the truth.

¹⁶ A plan must be at the beginning of all work; the decision comes before every action.

¹⁷ The mind operates along four directions: ¹⁸ good, evil, life and death; the tongue always imposes the decision.

¹⁹ A clever man may teach many but do no good to himself.

²⁰ A man may be wise, but if his words are rejected he will end up starving.

²¹ nor having won the favour of the Lord and being destitute of all wisdom.

²² Another man is wise in his own eyes; the one who says that his wisdom is profitable.

²³ The truly wise man teaches his people and the fruits of his understanding are certain.

²⁴ The wise man is full of blessings; those who see him call him happy.

²⁵ Man's days are numbered but Israel's days are countless.

²⁶ The wise man will win the confidence of his people; his name will live forever.

²⁷ My son, test yourself during the course of your life: see what is harmful and avoid it.

²⁸ For everything does not suit everybody, nor is everyone satisfied with all things.

²⁹ Do not be insatiable in every pleasure, or be excessive in what you eat; ³⁰ for overeating leads to sickness and gluttony brings indigestion. ³¹ Many have died because of gluttony; he who takes care prolongs his life.

The doctor

o 38 ¹ Give due honour to the doctor for you need him and God himself established him.

² Healing, in fact, comes from the Most High; the gift of healing comes from the Sovereign.

³ The doctor's expertise gives him prestige and wins for him the admiration of the powerful.

⁴ The Lord created the medicinal herbs which grow from the earth and these, a sensible person will not despise.

⁵ Remember that he used a simple wooden rod to purify water and so make known his power to everyone.

⁶ It is he who gives knowledge to men so that they may glorify his

28. 1 Cor 3, 2

On the other hand, let us remember that Karl Marx was a Jew. Though he did not believe in the faith of his ancestors, he was inspired by the ideal of the people who would save the world and by the hope of a time of universal peace and prosperity in the days of Moses. These elements are found in his doctrine, though transformed. For communism, the proletariat is the people chosen to save humanity and, in achieving the definitive revolution, it will bring us to an earthly paradise in which people will no longer have evil desires.

o We must pray to be healed from a disease, but without neglecting the help of doctors as some people do. This is clearly stated in the Bible.

power; ⁷ the doctor uses it to heal and comfort, the chemist to make his mixtures. ⁸ In that way the Lord's work never ceases and well-being prevails on the earth.

⁹ My son, when you are sick do not be anxious; pray to the Lord to heal you. ¹⁰ Give up bad habits, keep your hands clear of evil., and purify your heart from all sin.

¹¹ Offer incense and a memorial gift of fine flour and rich offerings according to your means. ¹² Then consult the doctor; remember that he was established by the Lord, so do not disregard him – you need him. ¹³ There are cases when good health depends on doctors. ¹⁴ They, too, will pray to the Most High to grant relief and healing in order to save life.

¹⁵ May he who sins before his Maker, fall into the hands of the doctor!

Grieving

¹⁶ My son, weep for the dead, lament to express your sorrow and bury the dead with fitting ceremonial and do not fail to honour his tomb.

¹⁷ Weep bitterly, cry out with full voice, and observe the period of mourning in accordance with the merits of the deceased. Let it be for one or two days, and so avoid criticism, and then be consoled in your grief.

¹⁸ For sorrow may lead to death and a dejected heart loses its vitality.

¹⁹ Let your affliction cease with the funeral; a life of sorrow is intolerable.

²⁰ Do not let your heart give way to grief; bear up and think of your own end.

²¹ Remember! There is no coming back, you do no good to the dead, but rather harm yourself.

²³ When the dead is at rest, let his memory be one of peace; be comforted on his account once his spirit has departed.

Craftsmen and wise men

²⁴ A law student acquires wisdom during his leisure hours; free from business he is capable of becoming wise.

²⁵ Could the man who steers a plough become wise, he whose pride lies in waving a whip and driving a bullock, who works continually and talks of nothing but cattle? ²⁶ His heart is set on ploughing furrows and all his attention is given to fattening heifers.

²⁷ It is the same for all craftsmen and skilled workers who toil day and night, professional engravers and designers of seals. All are intent on creating different designs and reproducing the model and they work by night in order to succeed.

³⁴ They are not cultured people or skilled in judgment and they are not found among authors of proverbs.

Although they uphold creation and civilization, their prayer does not go beyond their life's work.

39 ¹ Quite different is it with the person who spends his life reflecting on the Law of the Most High. He examines the wisdom of the sages in times past and in his free time he studies prophecies.

² He keeps in mind what men of renown said and penetrates the mystery of parables.

³ He searches for the inner meaning of proverbs and is interested in the secret of parables.

⁵ Early in the morning his heart is set on turning to the Lord, his Maker and raising his being to the Most High. He opens his mouth in prayer and makes supplication because of his sins.

⁶ If such is the will of the great Lord he will be filled with spirit of discernment. He will then speak words of wisdom and celebrate the Lord in prayer.

⁷ He will acquire just judgment and knowledge and reflect on me Lord's hidden mysteries.

⁸ He expresses and explains his teaching and glories in the law of the Lord's covenant.

¹⁰ Nations will proclaim his wisdom and the assembly celebrate his praise.

¹¹ As long as he lives his name will be more glorious than a thousand others and when he dies that fame will be enough for him.

All creation is good

¹² I wish to share still more of my reflections: I am filled with these just as the moon is said to be full.

¹³ Hear me, devoted people, and grow as a rose planted near a stream.

¹⁴ Spread around you fragrance like incense; blossom and perfume the air like the lily; sing a hymn and bless Yahweh for all his works.

¹⁵ Magnify his Name and publish his praise with song and lyre and express this with thanksgiving.

¹⁶ How magnificent are the works of the Lord! All his orders are appropriately timed and satisfy every need.

No one should say: "What is this? Why that?" All must be studied at its time.

¹⁹ The deeds of every man are before him, nothing is hidden from his eyes; ²⁰ he sees all from eternity to eternity and nothing surprises him.

²¹ No one must say: "What is that? Why is it so?" for everything is created for a purpose.

²² His blessing covers all things and like a river drenches the land as in a flood. ²³ Similarly he may pour out his wrath on the nations turning fresh water to salt.

²⁴ If his ways are smooth for holy people they are full of obstacles for the wicked.

²⁵ From the beginning good things have been created for the good and likewise evil things for the wicked.

²⁶ Most necessary for man's life are water, fire, iron and salt, wheaten flour, milk, honey, the juice of the grape, oil and clothing.

²⁷ All these are good for those who are good, but for sinners they become evil.

²⁸ Certain winds are created as a means of punishment and in their fury they are a scourge, unleashing their violence in the time of destruction and satisfying the wrath of their Creator.

²⁹ Fire, hail, famine and death have all been created for punishment.

³⁰ The fangs of wild beasts, scorpions, vipers and the avenging sword for the destruction of the wicked, ³¹ all joyfully carry out his commands, all are ready when need arises and at a given moment they will not fail to obey his word.

³² For that reason I reflected and from the beginning I decided to write:

³³ All the works of the Lord are good and he will satisfy every need in time.

³⁴ You must not say: This is less good than that, for in due time everything will serve a purpose.

³⁵ So now with all your heart and in full voice sing and bless the Name of the Lord.

Misery of human life

40 ¹ Painful is the lot of all men, a heavy yoke is upon the sons of Adam from the day they leave their mother's womb to the day they return to earth, the mother of us all.

² What is on their mind, what they fear in their heart, is the day of their death. ³ From the King, glorious on his Throne, robed in purple and wearing a crown, ⁴ to the lowliest person sitting in dust and ashes and covered with sackcloth, there is anger, envy, trouble and unrest, fear of death, rivalry and quarrels.

⁵ And at night when we lie down we have fresh worries: ⁶ scarcely are we at rest and asleep when we are troubled by dreams as vivid as if it were day and we were fleeing from a battle. ⁷ When it is time to wake up, we feel surprised to find that there is nothing to fear.

¹⁰ All these were created for the wicked, and the flood as well was sent on their account.

¹¹ Everything that comes from the earth goes back to the earth and what comes from water returns to the sea.

¹² All bribery, all injustice will disappear but good faith will last forever.

¹⁴ A generous man has reason to rejoice whereas sinners go to their ruin.

¹⁷ Kindness is like a garden of blessings and charity endures forever.

¹⁸ Life is pleasant both for an independent person and a self-reliant worker, but still better off is the one who finds a treasure.

¹⁹ The name of a man who has children or who has established a town will live on but to have found wisdom is a greater good.

Owning cattle and plantations brings fame but a perfect wife is a richer blessing.

²⁰ Wine and music gladden the heart but better still is the love of wisdom.

²¹ The flute and harp make fine music but even more appreciated is a pleasant voice.

²² Gracefulness and beauty delight the eye but not as much as the fresh growth of fields.

²³ It is always good for friends and companions to meet, better still for husband and wife.

²⁴ Brothers and protectors are useful in hard times but it will be greater help to have been a giver of alms.

²⁵ Gold and silver make for security but good advice is better.

²⁶ Wealth and strength give confidence but good counsel is more esteemed than both.

You cannot suffer a loss when you fear the Lord, with it you have all the support you need.

²⁷ The fear of the Lord is like a garden of blessings; he himself put it higher than any glory.

²⁸ My son, do not live the life of a beggar; it would be better to die than beg.

²⁹ When a man is always looking towards another's table it cannot be said that he is really living, for he is defiling himself with another's food; an intelligent and educated man will avoid this.

³⁰ That for which a shameless man begs may seem sweet to his mouth but his inner being is burning.

Death

41 ¹ Death! What a bitter thought for someone who lives happily with his possessions, a prosperous and successful man who is still able to enjoy his food!

² Your sentence, Death, is welcome to a needy person whose strength is failing, who is old, worn out, full of worries, angry and without hope!

³ Do not be afraid of Death's sentence, think of those who have gone before you and those who will follow you. ⁴ The Lord has decreed it for every living creature; why should you rebel against the good pleasure of the Most High?

Whether you live for ten, a hundred or a thousand years, no one in the netherworld is concerned.

⁵ Abominable people, such are the children of sinners who haunt the houses of the ungodly.

⁶ The inheritance of the sons of sinners will perish; their prosperity will be a lasting reproach.

⁷ An ungodly father will be insulted by his children, for they hold him responsible for their disgrace.

⁸ Woe to you, wicked people who have forsaken the law of the Most High! ⁹ At birth you are born to be cursed and you will be cursed at death.

¹⁰ All that comes from the earth returns to the earth, and the ungodly go from curse to ruin.

¹¹ People grieve because their bodies will perish but even the evil names of sinners will be blotted out.

¹² Have regard for your reputation, for it will live on, of greater value than a thousand treasures of gold. ¹³Few perhaps are the days of the just man's life but an honoured name endures forever.

True and false shame

¹⁴My children, keep my teaching and live in peace. Of what use is hidden wisdom and unseen treasure?

¹⁵It is better for a man to hide his foolishness than to hide his wisdom.

¹⁶Therefore, feel shame according to what I say. It is not always fitting to feel shame but it is not understood by everyone.

¹⁷Be ashamed of licentiousness before your father and mother, and of a lie before a ruler or an important person.

¹⁸Be ashamed of criminal behaviour before a judge, and of iniquity before an assembly of people.

¹⁹Feel ashamed of dishonesty before your partner or friend, and of a theft in the place where you live.

²⁰Be ashamed before the truth of God and his covenant, of keeping the loaves for yourself, ²¹of being unable to give and to receive, of not returning a greeting, ²²of staring at a prostitute, of rejecting a compatriot.

²³of depriving someone of what is his,

of gazing at another man's wife,

²⁴of being too familiar with your maid-servant – keep away from her bed!

²⁵of insulting words to a friend – do not reproach after making a gift!

²⁶of repeating what you have heard and betraying secrets.

²⁷On these occasions feel genuine shame and you will be respected by all.

42 ¹But do let not yourself be led astray by what others think of what follows.

²Do not be ashamed of the law of the Most High and his covenant.

of judging even the wicked fairly,

³of keeping accounts with a travelling companion, and of sharing your inheritance with friends.

⁴of checking weights and scales, ⁵of making a profit whether small or great.

of bargaining with traders, and of being strict with children, of severe corporal punishment for a servant who deserves it.

⁶With a prying wife or when many people are around it is wise to make use of seal and lock!

⁷For deposits it is essential to reckon by number and weight and keep a written record of what you give and receive.

⁸Do not be ashamed of correcting someone who is foolish or stupid or an old man who has become childish.

Doing that, you prove that you are a well educated person and you will be generally respected.

9 ⁹A daughter causes her father hidden worries; anxiety on her account keeps him awake:

Is she young? She may not marry. Is she married? She may be disliked; ¹⁰Is she a virgin? She may be seduced and become pregnant in her father's house!

Is she married? She may be unfaithful or unable to have children!

¹¹Your daughter is unruly? Watch her well, or she may make you a laughing stock for your enemies, the talk of the town and a public disgrace.

¹²Do not be taken by human beauty and do not sit down in the company of women;

¹³for just as a moth comes out of a garment, woman's wickedness comes out of a woman.

¹⁴Better a man's wickedness than a woman's kindness; women bring shame and disgrace.

o Sirach's original text, written in Hebrew was much longer in verse 9 and said: Her room should have no windows and she should not be able to see the entrances to the house. Such advice is one more proof of the male domination in Hebrew culture which the Greek translator did not dare show his readers who were more liberal-minded. However inspired the authors of the Bible were, God did not miraculously free them from the limitations of their culture.

SECOND PART: GOD'S WISDOM IN HISTORY

Wonders of nature

+ ¹⁵ Now I shall remind you of the works of the Lord and relate what I have seen.

The Lord's works depend on his word, and creation obeys his will.

¹⁶ The sun shines on everything and the work of the Lord is filled with his glory.

¹⁷ Not even to his holy ones has the Lord given full knowledge of all his marvellous works.

The Lord, Master of the universe has ordained that all should stand firm in his glory.

¹⁸ He penetrates both the depth of the abyss and the human heart and knows their secrets.

For the most High has full knowledge and ordains the signs of the heavens.

¹⁹ He knows the past and foretells the future and reveals the trace of secret events.

²⁰ No thought escapes him, no word is hidden from him.

²² All his works are beautiful, even to the smallest spark of light.

²³ All this lives and endures forever: all is useful and obedient to his will.

²⁴ All things are in pairs, one opposite the other and nothing he makes is in any way deficient.

²⁵ One thing emphasises the excellence of the other; Who could ever weary of admiring his glory?

43 ¹ The pride of the heights above is a clear firmament; the appearance of the heavens is a spectacle of glory.

² When the sun rises and appears it makes a proclamation: "I am your marvellous work, Most High!"

³ At noon, it dries up the land; who can bear its burning heat?

⁴ You may stoke a furnace to produce heat, but three times greater is the heat of the sun burning the mountains, and sending out fiery vapours, blinding the eyes with its rays.

⁵ How great is the Lord who made it and whose word directs its rapid course.

⁶ There is also the moon, exact in marking the months and the passage of time. ⁷ With its full light gradually decreasing, the moon determines and rules over the feast days. ⁸ The "month" also takes its name from the moon. How marvellously does it increase in its revolution, providing a signal for the heavenly hosts, brightly shining in the expanse of the sky!

⁹ The bright radiance of the stars accounts for the beauty of the sky. What a brilliant ornament they are for the heights of the Lord!

¹⁰ At the command of the all Holy they stand as appointed and never fail to keep watch.

¹¹ Look at the rainbow and praise the One Who made it. How magnificent it is in splendour!

¹² It forms a circle of glory in the sky, a bow that is bent by the hands of its Maker.

¹³ At his order the snow falls and lightning strikes according to his decrees.

¹⁴ The storerooms of heaven are opened and clouds fly away like birds.

¹⁵ It is his power that thickens the clouds making them freeze and break into hailstones.

^{16a} He has only to look and the mountains are shaken; ^{17a} the voice of his thunder terrifies the earth.

^{16b} At his will the south wind blows, ^{17b} as do cyclones and hurricanes from the north.

¹⁸ The snow flutters down like birds and alights on the ground like locusts.

The eye marvels at the beauty of its whiteness and the mind is amazed to see it fall.

¹⁹ He sprinkles frost on the earth like salt; it freezes and becomes like thorny spikes.

²⁰ The cold north wind blows and turns the water to ice.

+ Modern civilization separates people from nature. In their work, many people see electricity more often than they see the sun. Many do not know either the silence or the sounds of nature, because noise has invaded everything. Because we know something about silence, we think we know the mysteries of the universe. In our cities, it is increasingly more difficult for us to experience the mystery and the beauty of the universe.

God speaks to us through his creation as authentically as he does in the words of Christ. The languages are different, in the same sense that music tells us something in a way that is different from words. Those who know how to see God in the universe are also able to discover him in the great human achievements: dams, electronic computers, buildings, new materials, etc. What emerges from human hands also belongs to God's creation.

Ice forms on all stagnant water giving it a freezing coat of armour.

²¹ He wears down the mountains and scorches the desert, withering the green grass as if by fire.

²² A mist is a timely remedy, and dew after the heat restores it all to life.

²³ According to his plan he stilled the great deep and planted islands in it.

²⁴ Those who cross the seas tell of its dangers and we listen in astonishment to what they relate:

²⁵ They are all strange and marvellous adventures with marine animals and monsters of all kinds.

²⁶ Thanks be to God, all turns out well and everything is held together by his word.

²⁷ We shall not give further examples; one last word: He is everything.

²⁸ Where shall we find the strength to glorify him? For he is the Mighty One, greater than all his works.

²⁹ The Lord is awesome and sovereignly great, and admirable in his power.

³⁰ Let your praises exalt the Lord as well as you can, he is greater than you could even express.

Honour him with all your strength, and do not tire for you can never praise him enough.

³¹ Who has seen him and could describe what he saw? Who could glorify him as he merits?

³² Many mysteries greater than these still remain, for we have only seen a fraction of his works.

The Lord has created all things and to upright men he has given wisdom.

In praise of ancestors

■ 44 ¹ Let us now praise illustrious men, the ancestors of our people.

² The Lord gave them great glory and showed his greatness in them from the beginning.

³ Some ruled their kingdoms and were renowned for their achievements, others were wise and able to counsel and spoke as prophets.

⁴ They led the people with their warnings and instructed them with the wise words of their teaching.

⁵ Some cultivated music and poetry, ⁶ others were rich and powerful men living peacefully in their homes.

⁷ All were highly respected in their days and honoured by the people they lived with.

¹⁰ But now consider the godly men whose good deeds have not been forgotten. ¹¹ Those who came after them benefited from the rich legacy they left; ¹² their race remained faithful to the Covenant, their children followed their example. ¹³ Their family will endure forever and never will its glory be tarnished. ¹⁴ Their bodies were buried in peace but their memory lives through generations. ¹⁵ Peoples will speak of their wisdom and the assembly will celebrate their praise.

¹⁶ Enoch pleased the Lord and was taken up, calling future generations to repentance.

¹⁷ Noah was found to be perfectly just; at the time of divine anger he was the ransom; through him a remnant was left on earth after the flood. ¹⁸ Eternal covenant were made with him to ensure that never again would life be destroyed by flood.

Abraham

◆ ¹⁹ No one has been found to equal Abraham, the great ancestor of many nations. ²⁰ He was faithful to the Law of the Most High who

■ After the hymn to God whose glory is revealed through his creation, the author will present us with God's work in his chosen people, Israel.

In his poem of praise of the ancestors, we have a glimpse of all the famous people of Israel: kings, liberators, prophets, sages, poets. The author notes that there are many courageous and just people who died and whose deeds and virtues will not be recorded after them. Yet, the author knows that, even though all the descendants of any famous man may disappear, for example Moses, the people of Israel hold on to the promises of eternity: "In any case, we shall win."

◆ In what follows, Ben Sira remembers the most prominent people of sacred history. He attributes more or less importance to them according to the ideas of his days. He was living in an age when priests had the most important role and the entire life of the Jews unfolded around the Temple. And so, he speaks with great enthusiasm of Aaron, Phinehas and Simon II, whom he had known personally.

In 48:11, as in Mal 3:24, we find the Jewish belief that Elijah would return in the days of the Messiah. For the Jews, Elijah was the man who raised the dead and who had been preserved from death by God. Ben Sira hopes to regain life to see the happy days of salvation.

made a covenant with him, a covenant that was marked on his flesh and on the day he was tested he was found faithful. ²¹that is why God promised by oath to bless all the nations through his descendance, to make it as numerous as the dust of the earth and to exalt his posterity like the stars. He promised that their land would stretch from sea to sea, from the River to the ends of the earth.

²²The Lord renewed his Covenant with Isaac for the sake of his father, Abraham. This Covenant and the blessing of all mankind he made to rest on the head of Jacob.

He assured Jacob of his blessing, giving him the land that would be his and determining the portions to be shared among the twelve tribes.

Moses

45 ¹From Jacob's descendants the Lord brought forth an upright man who won the favour of everyone and was loved by God and men – Moses. Blessed be his memory! ²The Lord gave him glory equal to his only angels and power that terrified his enemies. ³At Moses' word he halted disaster; the Lord exalted him in the presence of kings. He gave him commandments for his people and let him glimpse something of his glory.

⁴He chose him from among the living to become holy by being faithful and humble. ⁵God let him hear his own voice and led him into darkness where face to face he gave him the commandments, the law of life and knowledge, to teach Jacob the covenant and make his decrees known to Israel.

⁶He raised up Aaron, the brother of Moses, a holy man like Moses, of the tribe of Levi. ⁷He made an eternal covenant with him and conferred on him the priesthood of the people.

⁸He honoured him by giving him majesty and putting a glorious robe upon him. His vestments and ornaments were splendid in their perfection, breeches, cloak and ephod. ⁹As a fringe to his vestment he placed pomegranates and many golden bells to tinkle as he walked and so be heard in the Temple as a reminder to the sons of his people.

¹⁰The Lord gave Aaron sacred vestments of gold, blue and purple, the work of artists, the pectoral of judgment, the Urim and Thummim, scarlet yarn spun by a craftsman, ¹¹precious stones with engravings in a setting of gold, the work of a jeweller, to serve as a memorial with graven inscriptions of the tribes of Israel. ¹²He gave him the turban with a golden diadem engraved with the words of his consecration, a superb ornament, expertly crafted and a delight to the eyes.

¹³Such things had never been seen before Aaron's time; no outsider ever put them on or ever will, only his children and descendants.

¹⁴His sacrifices were to be completely burned twice daily in perpetuity.

¹⁵It was Moses who consecrated him and anointed him with holy oil. It was for him an eternal alliance and for his descendants, for as long as the heavens would last, to serve the Lord as his priests and bless the people in his name. ¹⁶He chose him among all the living to offer sacrifice to the Lord and sweet smelling incense as a memorial to make atonement for the people.

¹⁷The Lord gave him to interpret his commandments uttering decisions to teach Jacob the divine words and enlighten Israel with his Law. ¹⁸Outsiders conspired against him and were jealous of him in the desert – Dathan and Abiram and their followers and the supporters of Korah, all violent and full of hate. ¹⁹The Lord saw it and was angry and in his wrath he destroyed them. He wrought wonders against them, consuming them in the flames of fire.

²⁰He increased Aaron's glory, by giving him a heritage. He allotted to him the first fruits and to begin with, bread in abundance. ²¹For their food is the sacrifice offered to the Lord, given by him to Aaron and his descendants.

²²But he was to inherit no land as patrimony, no special portion was to be his own, for the Lord himself is his portion and inheritance.

Phinehas

²³As for Phinehas, son of Eleazar, he is the third in glory, for he was full of zeal in the fear of the Lord when he stood firm among a rebellious people with noble courage and made atonement for Israel.

²⁶May the Lord give them wisdom of heart to judge his people with justice, so that their prosperity may not dwindle and their glory live on in their descendants!

Joshua and the judges

46 ¹Joshua, son of Nun, was a valiant warrior and as a prophet he was the successor of Moses. He lived up to his name proving himself to be a saviour God's chosen people, punishing the enemies that attacked them and leading Israel to claim their land.

²How magnificent to see him, arm raised and his sword ready to attack the cities!

³Who before him had such staying power? He was, indeed, Yahweh's warrior. ⁴Was it not he who held back the sun making one day as long as two? ⁵He called on the Most High when the enemy pressed on every side, and the Mighty Lord responded with hailstones of exceptional size. ⁶He attacked the enemy nation and destroyed the assailants at the pass of Beth-horan, so that the nations might know the strength of Joshua and that they were fighting against the Lord.

⁷Joshua was loyal and devoted to the Almighty in the time of Moses, he and Caleb, son of Jephunneh. They stood firm against the assembly and tried to keep them from sinning and to silence their wicked murmuring.

⁹The Lord gifted Caleb with strength; this he enjoyed to the end of his days, and he went into the hill country that was given to his children in heritage. ¹⁰With this it was clear to all Israel that it is good to follow the Lord. ¹¹After that came the judges. Although each of them won his own renown, all were men of faithful heart who did not turn away from the Lord. Blessed be their memory! ¹²May their bones spring to life from the tomb and the names of these illustrious men live on in their children!

Samuel

¹³Samuel was prophet and beloved of the Lord. He established the kingdom and anointed rulers to govern his people.

¹⁴He judged the assembly according to the Law of the Lord and the Lord protected Jacob.

¹⁵He was accepted as prophet because of his faithfulness and proved that his words were of a trustworthy seer.

¹⁶He called on the Almighty Lord when the enemy pressed from all directions and he offered a sucking lamb.

¹⁷Then with a mighty roar the Lord thundered from heaven ¹⁸and destroyed all the enemy's leaders and the tyrants of Philistia.

¹⁹Before his time came for eternal rest, Samuel called men to witness before the Lord and his anointed: "I have not taken anyone's belongings, not even his sandals", and there was no one to accuse him.

²⁰Even after he died he prophesied and revealed to the king his death. From the grave he spoke as a prophet to blot out the wickedness of his people.

David

47 ¹After him the Lord raised Nathan to prophesy in the time of David.

²As fat is selected from the peace offering so David was chosen from among the Israelites.

³He played with lions and bears as if they were lambs or young goats.

⁴He was still young when he slew a giant to restore the honour of his people; with a sling he aimed a stone that killed the arrogant Goliath.

⁵He invoked the Lord Most High who gave him strength to slay a mighty warrior and so exalt the power of his people.

⁶So they glorified him for his ten thousands and praised him as a blessing from the Lord when he was chosen king.

⁷For he wiped out his enemies on all sides and annihilated his adversaries, the Philistines, crushing their power forever.

⁸In all that he did he gave thanks to the Most High and showed his love for his Maker by singing with all his heart.

⁹He placed singers accompanied by harps before the altar to make beautiful music; ¹⁰he gave splendour to feasts and even greater magnificence to the more solemn occasions, exalting the holy Name of the Lord and having the sanctuary ring with his praises from early morning.

¹¹The Lord forgave David's sins and established his power forever; he made a covenant with him for the benefit of the Kings and gave him a glorious throne in Israel.

Solomon

¹²A wise son succeeded him and fared well because of him.

¹³Solomon reigned during times of peace and God gave him rest from war to enable him to build a house for his Name, a sanctuary that would stand forever.

4. Jos 10, 13	7. Num 14, 6	9. Jos 14, 10	13. 1 S 10; 16, 13	16. 1 S 7, 9	19. 1 S 12

¹⁴ How wise you were in your youth, Solomon! as full of understanding as a river. ¹⁵ Your spirit covered the earth, you filled it with proverbs and parables. ¹⁶ Your reputation reached distant islands and you were loved for your peace. ¹⁷ Your songs, proverbs, parables and interpretation drew the admiration of the world.

¹⁹ But you gave your body to women and became the slave of your senses; ²⁰ you stained your reputation and defiled your descendants, bringing wrath and disaster upon your children because of your foolishness.

²¹ It divided the nation and from Ephraim came a kingdom in revolt.

²⁴ As for Jeroboam, son of Nebat, it was he who caused Israel to sin and taught Ephraim the way of evil.

From then on their sins increased and later brought about their exile, ²⁵ for they were intent on doing every sort of evil until vengeance fell on them.

Elijah and Elisha

48 ¹ Then came the prophet Elijah like a fire, his words a burning torch.

² He brought a famine on the people and in his zealous love had them reduced in number.

³ Speaking in the name of the Lord he closed the heavens and on three occasions called down fire.

⁹ You were taken up by a whirlwind of flames in a chariot drawn by fiery horses.

¹⁰ It was written that you should be the one to calm God's anger in the future before it broke out in fury, to turn the heart of fathers to their sons and to restore the tribes of Jacob.

¹² Such was Elijah, taken up in a whirlwind, and Elisha was filled with his spirit.

During his life no leader could shake him, no one dominated him. ¹³ Nothing was too difficult for him and even in death his body prophesied. ¹⁴ In life he worked wonders, in death his deeds were amazing.

¹⁵ For all this the people were not converted and did not turn away from sin; not until they were deported far from their country and scattered over the earth.

¹⁷ Hezekiah fortified his city and brought water within its walls, tunnelling the rock with iron tools for the construction of cisterns.

¹⁸ During his reign Sennacherib began his campaigns and sent off Rabshakeh, and insolent and arrogant as he was, he raised his arm against Zion.

¹⁹ Then their courage was shaken, their hands trembled, they felt anguish like women in labour. ²⁰ They stretched out their hands and called on the merciful Lord.

From heaven the Holy One quickly heard them and saved them by the hand of Isaiah.

²¹ The Lord struck the Assyrian camp and his angel wiped them out.

²³ In his time the sun went back and he lengthened the life of the king.

²⁴ In the power of the spirit he foresaw the last things and consoled the afflicted people of Zion. ²⁵ He revealed what would happen until the end of time and made hidden events known before they occurred.

49 ¹ The memory of Josiah is like blended incense carefully prepared by the perfumer; it is like delicious honey to every mouth, like music during a banquet.

² He followed the right way in converting the people and removing the horror of idolatry.

³ He set his heart on the Lord and succeeded in having godliness prevail over wickedness.

⁴ With the exception of David, Hezekiah and Josiah, the kings were very sinful men. they abandoned the Law of the Most High bringing an end to the kings of Judah.

⁵They surrendered their power and their honour to foreign nations. ⁶Their enemies set fire to the holy city, making its streets desolate ⁷as Jeremiah had foretold.

⁸It was Ezechiel who saw the vision of Glory when the Lord showed it to him above the chariot of the cherubim. ⁹He also remembered Job, the one who always followed the way of justice.

¹⁰As for the twelve prophets, may their bones spring to life from the tomb for they comforted the people of Jacob and saved them with confident hope.

¹¹Can we ever adequately praise Zerubbabel and ¹²likewise Joshua, son of Jozadak? They were men who in their days built the Temple and directed to the Lord a holy people destined for everlasting glory. ¹³Lasting too is the memory of Nehemiah who rebuilt our ruined walls, provided gates and bars and rebuilt our homes.

¹⁴No one on earth was created to equal Enoch for he was taken up from the earth.

¹⁵And never was there a man like Joseph, the greatest among his brothers, the leader of his people: his bones were honoured.

o ¹⁶Shem and Seth were exalted among men but Adam's glory greater than any other living being.

Simon the priest

50 ¹The High Priest Simon, son of Onias, repaired the Temple during his life-time.

²He laid the foundations for the high double wall and for the fortifications surrounding the Temple.

³In his days a reservoir for water, a cistern as great as a sea, was excavated.

⁴Anxious lest his people might perish he fortified the city against a siege.

+ ⁵How magnificent he was when surrounded by his people he emerged from the inner sanctuary ⁶like the morning star amidst the clouds, like the full moon ⁷like the sun shining on the Temple of the Most High or a rainbow in a glory of clouds!

⁸He was like a rose in spring, a lily beside a stream, or a twig of frankincense on a summer day, ⁹or incense burning in the censer.

He could be likened to a massive, golden vase adorned with every kind of precious stone, ¹⁰or to an olive tree heavy with fruit or to a cypress rising to the clouds, ¹¹when robed in ceremonial garb and in perfect splendour, he went to the sacred altar filling the court of the sanctuary with glory.

¹²There he would receive from the hand of the priests the portions of the sacrifice, as he stood by the hearth of the altar encircled by his brethren like a young cedar on Lebanon.

¹³It was as if he was surrounded by palm trees when all the sons of Aaron in their splendour, with the offerings to the Lord in their hands, stood before the assembly of Israel.

¹⁴When he had completed the service at the altar and presented with dignity the offering to the Almighty and Most High, ¹⁵he took the cup in his hand and poured out a libation of the juice of the grape at the foot of the altar, a pleasing aroma to the Most High, King of the world.

¹⁶Then the sons of Aaron shouted; they blew their trumpets of solid silver making a great noise as a memorial before the Most high.

¹⁷Then suddenly all the people bowed down with their faces to the ground and adored the Lord, the Almighty and most High God.

o Suddenly, before praising the high priest Simon, his contemporary, Ben Sira remembers the origins. At the beginning, the first man. Surpassing the current ideas of the Jews who, until then, did not look much further than their own history, Ben Sira thinks about the first man, the father of all humanity. Adam represents all sinful humanity, called to salvation. But he is also the first man who bears in him the destiny of all the rest. In Rom 5:12-20. Paul will speak of Christ as the New Adam. Of him one can say: "Adam is above every living being."

+ Let us underline this lengthy portrait of Simon, the high priest. Ben Sira, who carried out responsibilities and knew life, feels no shame

²¹ Then for a second time the people bowed in worship to receive the blessing of the Most High:

²² "And now bless the Lord of the universe who everywhere does great things, who exalts our days from birth and is merciful to us.

²⁴ May he continue to give us his blessings and be a saviour to us in our days."

²⁸ Happy the one who pays attention to this teaching and gains wisdom by taking it to heart.

²⁹ Doing that he will be strong in all circumstances, for the light of the Lord is his path.

Prayer of Jesus, son of Sira

51 ¹ I will give thanks to you, O Lord and King; I praise you, my God and Saviour, I give thanks to your Name.

² For you are my protector and help and you delivered my body from destruction, from the snare of the wicked tongue and from lips that speak lies.

In the presence of those who stood against me you were my helper, my deliverer.

³ In the fullness of mercy and the glory of your Name, you delivered me from the teeth of those ready to do it, and from the hand of those wanting to take my life. ⁴ You rescued me from the countless trials I suffered from choking fire on every side; I passed through fire and was not burned.

⁷ They surrounded me on every side with no one to help me.

⁸ Then, Lord, I remembered your mercy and your deeds from all eternity, knowing that you deliver those who hope in you and save them from the hands of their enemies.

⁹ I sent up my prayer from the earth, begging to be delivered from death.

20. Num 6, 25

24. Am 8, 1

26. Is 55, 1; Mt 11, 29

in expressing his great admiration for the Temple rituals. As for any Jewish believer, the sacred vestments, the music and the solemn ceremonies were revealing something to him about the world of God which is splendour, happiness, celebration and praise.

■ This is thanksgiving for a liberation. The listing of the dangers from which God can free people, recalls for us the heroes of the Old Testament: Daniel in the lions' den, Daniel and his friends in the furnace, Joseph imprisoned, Susanna, David.

This is used for the feasts of martyrs in the liturgy of the Church. Their death (see Wisdom 3:1) was a liberation from evil. Like Jesus, martyrs did not escape from evil and from death, but they conquered both, overcoming natural fear and accepting to forgive their enemies.

¹⁰ I called on the Lord, the Father of my Lord: "Do not forsake me in the day of my affliction, when I am helpless against arrogant enemies; I will praise your name continually and sing to you my thanksgiving."

¹¹ And my prayer was heard, you saved me from destruction and delivered me from an evil plight.

¹³ In my youth before set out on my travels, I openly sought wisdom in prayer; ¹⁴ before the Temple I asked for her and I will pursue her to the end of my days.

¹⁵ While she blossomed, like a ripening cluster, my heart was delighted in her; my feet followed the right path because from my youth I searched for her.

¹⁶ As soon as I began listening to her she was given to me and with her much instruction.

¹⁹ My soul has struggled with her help. I have been attentive to observe the Law, and after my faults I have stretched my hands to heaven and lamented my ignorance of her.

²⁰ My love of her increased and I found her in repentance. It was through her from the beginning that I learned to possess my heart. She will not forsake me.

²¹ With my whole being I sought her; that is why I won what is best.

²² In return for this the Lord has given me words to praise him.

²³ Come near, you are without understanding and join her school.

²⁴ Why do you say you are deprived of all this and that your souls are thirsty?

²⁷ See for yourselves how easy it was for me to have much rest.

²⁸ Be instructed whatever the cost and you will gain what is better than gold.

²⁹ Let your soul find joy in the mercy of the Lord and do not be ashamed to praise him.

³⁰ Do your work within the appointed time and the Lord in his time will give you his reward.

Why all the Bibles do not have the same Books

At the time of Jesus no Jew doubted that the books of Moses and the Prophets were the word of God. In the course of time other books known as Writings or Wisdom books had been welcomed and added to the first but it was not made clear what degree of authority should be given them.

A part of these books was written not in Hebrew but in Greek, which was the international language. That is why there were more books in the Greek bible which was used by the Jews outside Palestine and even in many Palestinian synagogues.

It was only after Jesus – and after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans – that the Pharisees in the year 95, summoned a council in Jamnia, to reorganize the Jewish community. It was then that they definitively established the canon, that is, the standard of the Jewish bible. Although they accepted some of the more recent books, for example that of Daniel, they systematically excluded all that were written in Greek.

Meanwhile the Church used the Greek bible as the apostles had done, and was only concerned with what should be included in the New Testament.

In the year 384 the so-called Decree of Damasius finally established the canon of the Christian bible and accepted some of the books proper to the Greek bible that the Jews had rejected in Jamnia, in spite of a minority opinion that placed them in a lower rank. These books are called deuterocanonical, that is, books of the second standard.

When the Protestants departed from the Church, twelve centuries later, they had not thought of criticizing the standard of the New Testament, but as they were divided on the deuterocanonical books, they considered it safer to exclude them. They called them apocrypha, that is, non-authentic. But up to the nineteenth century they usually published them in their bible. Later they were totally excluded.

The deuterocanonical books are:

1st and 2nd Maccabees	Tobit	Wisdom of Solomon
chapters 13-14 of Daniel	Judith	Sirach
chapters 11-16 of Esther	Baruch

All the modern biblical studies point out the importance of these deuterocanonical books as a link between the Hebrew books of the Old Testament and those in Greek which make up the New Testament.

Note that the only way to know which are the sacred books and which books are not to be included in the Bible is to refer to the decision of the Church. Those who now accuse the Church in the name of the Bible would not know where the word of God is to be found if the Church had not declared it.

PSALM 1

The two ways. -- God, the creator of human nature, only wishes man's happiness. It is very significant to note that this first psalm speaks on the theme of happiness just as Jesus' first discourse will begin by "happy."

who follows not the counsel of the wicked,

nor stands in the way of sinners, nor sits where the scoffers sit;

² instead, he finds delight in the law of the Lord and meditates day and night on his commandments.

³ He is like a tree beside a brook producing its fruits in due season, its leaves never withering.

Everything he does is a success.

⁴ But it is different with the wicked.
They are like chaff driven away by the wind.

⁵ The wicked will not stand when judgment comes, nor the sinners when the righteous assemble.

⁶ For the Lord keeps the way of the righteous
but cuts off the way of the wicked.

Happy New Year! Many happy returns! Our own language expresses man's just and eternal longing for happiness.

But, according to the Bible, happiness must be first sought first in external things (money, pleasure, power, etc.) P comes to the people who follow God's Law.

With images taken from natural life -- that of the tree and of the chaff -- the psalm expresses the man who accepts God and the one who rejects him. The first enjoys strength, constancy, and fruitfulness while the second is empty and futile.

Jesus is the open, and fruitful tree, ever verdant. All that is good, great, beautiful, and holy, in man's hearts matures in the tree of the Cross.

PSALM 2

We know of king Herod's fear on finding out about the birth of the King of the Jews in Bethlehem; this happens again and again in the course of history.

On one hand, we have those who want to be in charge of their own destiny without submitting to a law above men. These are the "kings of the earth," the "princes of the earth;" they are not only the persecuting rulers, but all those with power over the minds of people, those who fabricate the public opinion of the masses.

On the other hand, we have God and at his side, Christ the Victor, called here the Anointed one and the Son.

The two reigns. – This struggle between the "kings of the earth" and the Anointed of God announce the book of Revelation. We must not, however, totally identify these antagonistic forces with the Church and those opposed to it, since the barrier between them passes through every man's heart. This struggle exists in all ages, but in these years, we witness a growing opposition of the powerful to the church of Christ and its poor.

¹Why do the nations conspire?

Why do the peoples plot in vain?

²The kings of the earth brace themselves and the rulers together take their stand against the Lord and his anointed.

³They say "Let us break their bonds!
Let us cast away their chains!"

⁴The One enthroned in heaven laughs;
the Lord looks at them in derision.

⁵Then in anger he speaks to them, terrifying them in the fury of his wrath:

⁶"Behold the king I have installed upon my holy hill, Zion!"

⁷I will proclaim the decree of the Lord.
He said to me: "You are my son.
This day I have begotten you.

⁸Ask of me and I will give you the nations for your inheritance, the ends of the earth for your possession.

⁹You shall rule them with iron scepter and dash them to pieces as a potter's ware."

¹⁰Now therefore, learn wisdom, O kings; be warned, O rulers of the earth.

¹¹Serve the Lord with fear and fall at his feet;
lest he be angry and you perish when his anger flares up suddenly.
Blessed are all who take refuge in him!

PSALM 3

How many are my enemies! – Just like every Christian, King David has an ally stronger than all his enemies: God.

²O Lord, how great in number are my foes!
How numerous are those who rise up against me!

³How many are they who say of my soul:
"There is no help for him in God!"

⁴But you are my shield, O Lord, my glory, you lift up my head.

⁵Aloud I cry to the Lord, and from his holy hill he answers me.

⁶When I lie down and sleep, again I awake, for the Lord sustains me.
⁷I fear not the thousands standing against me.
⁸Arise, O Lord!
Deliver me, O my God!
You strike on the cheekbone all my enemies, you have broken the teeth of the wicked.
⁹Salvation comes from the Lord.
May your blessing be upon your people!

PSALM 4

A good prayer for believers living in the world, surrounded by evil, besieged by their own weakness and threatened by scoundrels. But, they always have something for which to give thanks to the Lord because there is also the experience of the good achieved.

Below we cite another evening prayer, a very ancient hymn of the Eastern church.

Happy light of the holy and immortal glory of the Father,

Holy and blessed Jesus Christ!

Having reached the sunset hour, we sing to the Father, to the Son and to the Holy Spirit of God.

You are always worthy of being praised by holy voices.

O Son of God who gives life

Evening prayer. – An evening prayer for people who trust God in spite of their difficulties because they remember how often the Lord has sustained them in their anguish.

²Answer me when I call, O my God of justice!
When I was in distress, you gave me solace.
Have compassion on me and now hear my plea.

³O sons of men, how long will you harden your hearts?
How long will you delight in deceit?
How long will you love falsehood?

⁴But you must know that the Lord has shown his kindness to me.
When I call to him, he listens to me.

⁵You may feel indignant, but do not sin.
Search your heart
when you are in bed, and be still.

⁶Offer the sacrifice commanded by the Law and put your trust in the Lord your God.

⁷Many ask, "Who will show us any good?"
Let your favor shine upon us, O Lord!

⁸Let them rejoice in their abundant wine and grain, you have given more to me.

⁹I lie down and rest in peace, for you alone, O Lord, make me feel safe and at ease.

PSALM 5

Prayer on waking up. – This psalm invites us to begin our day by calling on God to be our light and our strength and also by going to the House of God, his temple, where his light and his strength are within our reach.

²O Lord, listen to my words. Give consideration to my sad plight,

³give heed to the sound of my sighs, I beseech you, my King and my God.

⁴From dawn you hear my voice, from dawn I pledge to you and wait in expectation.

⁵You are not a God who takes delight in wickedness; evil does not abide in you.

⁶The arrogant cannot stand before your sight. You hate all who do evil;

⁷you destroy all who speak falsehood, who thirst for blood and live on lies; all of them the Lord detests.

⁸But I, by your love and grace may come into your house. In reverence I will bow down and worship at your holy temple.

⁹Lead me, O Lord, through your path of righteousness; make your way straight before me, for my enemies are lying in wait.

¹⁰Not a word of their mouth can be trusted, for their heart is filled with mischief. Their throat is an open grave; their tongue flatters with deceit.

¹¹O Lord, make them suffer from their guilt. Let their snares boomerang on them.

Cast them out for their many sins – for their offense and rebellion.

¹²But for those who take refuge in you, let them ever sing and rejoice. Spread out your deliverance over them, that they may praise you in gladness – those who love your name, O Lord.

¹³You bless all who live in righteousness; with your favor you cover them, as though with a shield.

PSALM 6

Prayer of the afflicted.

²O Lord, in your anger, reprove me not; in your fury, chastise me not.

³Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I have no strength left.

O Lord, heal me, for my bones are in torment.

⁴My soul also is troubled greatly.

How long, O Lord – how long will you be?

⁵Turn back to me, O Lord, deliver my life; rescue me for the sake of your love.

⁶For no one remembers you in the grave, no one can give you praise in the world of the dead.

⁷I have become wearied with moaning; I weep by night, drenching my bed with tears.

⁸My eyes have grown dim because of woes; they have weakened because of my foes.

⁵At dawn you hear my voice. When we wake up in the morning we look ahead to the day we are about to live. Throughout the day, we will have to choose between good and evil, between God's calls and worldly attractions. However, it is hard to carry out what we have found to be God's will and this is why we cry out to God.

Punish them, O God, as they deserve. This meditation of the Hebrew psalmist is expressed in a language which seems unlike the Gospel when he calls unbelievers "foolish," "wicked," "liars" and begs God to punish them. We must remember that in the Jewish mentality there was no distinction between actions and people, between sin and sinner. More than the hatred or fanaticism of the just this language reveals their passionate attachment to God's Law.

⁹Away from me, you who rejoice in evil, for the Lord has heard my plaintive voice.
¹⁰The Lord has given heed to what I implore;
the Lord will grant all that I pray for.
¹¹All my enemies fall back in shame, all of a sudden – the whole bunch of them!

PSALM 7

Free me from my persecutors. – A cry demanding justice rises from the depth of the soul. God listens.

²O Lord, my God, in you I take shelter; deliver me from all my pursuers. ³Lest I become like prey of a lion, torn to pieces and rescued by none.

⁴O Lord, my God, if my hands are stained with guilt – ⁵if with evil I have repaid good, if I have helped some oppressor, ⁶let the enemy pursue me as does a hound, let him trample my life to the ground and lay down my glory in the dust.

⁷Arise, O Lord, in your wrath; rise up against the fury of my foes. Awake, O my God, for the time of judgment.

⁸Let the nations gather round you, and take your seat high above them.

⁹The Lord judges the nations. Proclaim, O Lord, my righteousness; you see that I am blameless.

¹⁰Bring to an end the power of the wicked, but set the just up on his feet,

O righteous God, searcher of mind and heart.

¹¹Covering me as a shield is God, who protects the upright of heart.

¹²A righteous judge is God, who is always indignant at those who refuse to repent.

¹³God has his sword ready and sharpened, his bow bent and arrows aimed.

¹⁴He has in hand, ever in watch, his deadly weapons and fiery darts.

¹⁵He who conceives iniquity and is pregnant with mischief gives birth to destruction.

¹⁶He digs a pit and makes it deep, and falls into the trap he made.

¹⁷His evil intent recoils upon his head; his wicked design comes back in his face.

¹⁸I will rejoice in the Lord for his justice, and sing to the Most High in gratitude and praise.

PSALM 8

Glorious God and dignity of man. – Thanks to scientific progress, the universe reveals the glory and the beauty of God to men, though never as much as in our own days. But, in becoming man, the Son of God has placed men above all the material creation and he has underlined the fundamental equality of all people.

²O Lord, our Lord, how great is your name throughout the world!
In the heavens above, your glory is praised in chants ³from the mouths of children and infants.

You have built a rampart against your foes to thwart their vengeful plots and hostile acts.

⁴ When I observe the heavens, all wrought by your hands,
the moon and the stars arrayed in a vault – ⁵ what is man that you should be mindful of him, the son of man that you should care for him?

⁶ Yet you have made him a little lower than the angels;

you have crowned him with glory and honor.

⁷ You have given him dominion over the works of your hands;

you have put all things under his feet –

⁸ the sheep and the oxen

the beasts of the field,

⁹ the birds of the air,

the fishes of the sea, and all that swim the paths of the ocean.

¹⁰ O Lord, our Lord, how great is your name all over the world!

PSALM 9

God, refuge of the oppressed.

² Let my heart praise the Lord, I will proclaim all your marvelous deeds.

³ I will rejoice and exult in you. I will sing praise to your name, O Most High.

⁴ As my enemies fell back in retreat, they stumbled before you and perished.

⁵ You have upheld my right and my cause, seated on your throne, O just judge.

⁶ You have turned back the nations; you have battered down the wicked and struck out their names forever and ever.

⁷ Your enemies lay in endless ruin, their cities trampled, their memory blotted out.

⁸ But the Lord shall reign forever, having set up his throne for judgment.

⁹ He will judge the nations with justice and govern the peoples in righteousness.

¹⁰ The Lord is a rampart for the oppressed, a refuge in times of distress.

¹¹ Those who cherish your name, O Lord, can rely on you, for you have never forsaken those who look to you.

¹² Sing praises to the Lord en-

⁹ This psalm was written at a time of anguish. It opposes two types of men: the oppressed who acknowledge God and the oppressors who despise God as much as they despise men (the poor, the orphans, the workers). The godless are not concerned about the judgment of God, because he is far away and does not intervene.

God, in fact, appears very remote, passive and silent. Thus, the psalmist expresses his complaint in a passionate way: Lord extend your hand, break the arm of the godless. God is Lord and he will have the final word, to the extent that we should fear no one here since even man is "made of clay." God will do justice for the oppressed and for those who suffer.

Every Christian with enough earthly possessions must seriously ask himself if he is not responsible, to some degree and in some way, for these injustices and oppressions. We know, from the book of Exodus, that God's judgment can fall over the oppressors in a tremendous way. We also know that authentic love, the source of justice, can change the face of the earth.

throned in Zion, proclaim his deeds among the nations.

¹³ For he who avenges blood remembers and has not turned a deaf ear to the cries of the multitude that suffers.

¹⁴ Have mercy on me, O Lord. See how my foes have afflicted me. Oh, lift me up from the gates of death, ¹⁵ that I may declare all your praise, that in the gates of the daughter of Zion I may rejoice in your salvation.

¹⁶ The nations have sunk into the pit they have dug, their own feet ensnared by the trap they laid.

¹⁷ The Lord has made himself manifest in the execution of his judgment – the wicked plotters have been trapped by the work of their own hands.

¹⁸ To the netherworld the wicked will depart, all the nations that turn away from God.

¹⁹ For the needy will not always be forgotten, nor the hope of the poor perish forever.

²⁰ Rise, O Lord, let not man prevail; let the nations stand on trial before you.

²¹ With terror, O Lord, strike at them; let the people realize that they are but men.

PSALM 10 (9)

Continuation of the previous psalm.

¹ Why, O Lord, do you stand afar? Why hide from us in trouble and war?

² The weak suffer harassment from the wicked acting in arrogance; the poor become victims of the evil-doer's vicious contrivance.

³ The exploiter wallows in his power and greed; the covetous blasphemes and renounces God.

⁴ In his pride the wicked says,

"There is no God to ask me for account."

⁷ His mouth is full of curses, deceit and oppressive language; under his tongue are spite and mischief.

⁸ He lies in ambush near the villages, murdering the innocent and the unfortunate, spying upon his next victim.

⁹ He lurks in secret, like a lion in its covert, waiting to seize his prey and drag him off in his net.

¹⁰ Stooping, lying prone or crouching, he waits till the hapless victim falls into his power.

¹¹ He thinks to himself: "God has forgotten; he has hidden his face and will never see this."

¹² Rise, Lord, O God, raise your hand, do not forget the afflicted.

¹³ Why do the wicked revile Go and assure themselves, saying, "He cannot hold me accountable for what I do"?

¹⁴ But you see those in misery, O God, and you take them into your hands. The unfortunate commits himself to you; the orphan turns to you for help.

¹⁵ Break the power of the wicked – seek out their wickedness till there is none to be found.

¹⁶ The Lord is king forever and ever; the pagans are doomed to vanish from his land.

¹⁷ You hear, O Lord, the longings of the afflicted, and you strengthen their hearts; ¹⁸ you give heed to the miserable plight of the exploited, so that man may no longer strike terror on earth.

PSALM 11 (10)

If the foundations are in ruins, what can the just man do? This is what the Tempter suggests: you will achieve nothing by denouncing evil. Everybody does it, do as they do and shut up: "Flee, you half wit, to the mountain"; you have seen nothing; forget injustice and mind your own business. Or else, simply comply with your religious practices.

The just are not afraid. – If God is with us, who will condemn us? May he free us from fear when we have to remain steadfast before the threats or the scorn of others.

¹In the Lord I take refuge.
How, then, can you say to me,
"Flee to the mountains like a bird"?

²Look, the wicked fit their arrows to the string and bend their bows.
They get ready to shoot in the dark, they take aim at the upright of heart.

³When foundations fall to ruin, what can they do – the righteous men?

⁴The Lord is in his holy mountain – our God whose throne is in heaven.
He looks down to the earth to observe the children of men.

⁵The Lord examines both righteous and wicked.
He hates those who delight in violence.

⁶Upon the wicked, he will rain coals of fire and brimstone; a burning blast will be their lot.

⁷For the Lord is righteous;
he loves justice.
The upright man will see his face.

PSALM 12 (11)

Against the world of lies. – Lies, propaganda, false prophets of the easy life, all of this hides the daily injustices. On the contrary, the Word of God is truthful and it will judge everyone. In the Word of God become flesh, that is to say, in Christ, there is no "yes" with "no": in him all of God's promises have become a "yes."

²Help us, O Lord, for the godly are all gone, and the faithful are no longer seen.

³Everybody lies and with flattering lips speaks from a double-dealing heart.

⁴May the Lord cut off every insincere lip, every glib tongue that utters deceit.

⁵Many say, "Our strength lies in our tongue.
We know how to speak, who will lord it over us?"

⁶"The poor are despoiled and the needy suffer,
I will now save them," says the Lord.
"I will give them security."

⁷The promises of the Lord are clear and strong – silver refined from the furnace, seven times, and freed from dross.

⁸ Do save us, O Lord, for your keeping; protect us always from this generation, ⁹ where on all sides the wicked prowls, and the basest of them are exalted.

PSALM 13 (12)

Look and listen to me. – God does not forget his children; he raised up Christ. May he lead his people from the present trials to his glory.

¹ Till when, O Lord, will you forget me?
Till when will you hide your face from me?
² Till when must I suffer pain in my soul and bear grief in my heart all the day long?
Till when shall my enemy triumph over me?
³ Look upon me and answer, O Lord my God!
Give light to my eyes,
lest I sleep the sleep of death;
⁴ lest my enemy say,
"I have put him to rout";
lest my foes rejoice in seeing me brought to naught.
⁵ But I put my trust in your unfailing love, my heart rejoices in your redeeming grace.
I will sing to Yahweh, for he has been good to me!

PSALM 14 (13)

The world without God. – There is not a single just person in our sinful world. The believer remains confident: God is faithful.

¹ The fool says in his heart,
"God does not exist."
All have strayed,
all are perverted,
there is no one who does good.
² The Lord looks down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there are any who seek God and act wisely.
³ They have all turned aside:
corrupt – all of them alike.
⁴ Will they ever learn – these doers of evil,
For they devour my people, just as they devour their food and call not upon the Lord.

⁵ They shall be in such great terror as has never been known before, for God is on the side of the virtuous.

⁶ You may confound the hope of the poor, but you will get nowhere, for the Lord is there refuge.

⁷ Oh that out of Zion would come Israel's salvation!
When the Lord brings home his people from exile – what joy will it be for Jacob, what happiness for Israel!

PSALM 15 (14)

Following are two prayers from the baptismal ceremony:

"Receive this white garment and present it without stain at the tribunal of Jesus Christ, in such a way as to possess eternal life."

"Receive this lighted candle and keep the grace of your baptism with abiding faithfulness. Observe God's commandments so that when the Lord comes for the eternal wedding feast, you will meet him with all the saints of the heavenly court and live
for ever and ever."

Lord, who shall dwell in your tent? – May the Lord help us to follow his commands.

¹ O Lord who will dwell in your tent and reside on your holy mount?

² He who walks blameless and does what is right; who speaks truth from his heart
³ and controls his words;

⁴ who looks down on evildoers but highly regards God's servants who at all cost stands
by a pledged word;

⁵ who does not lend money with interest and refuses a bribe to victimize the innocent.
He who does all this will never be shaken.

PSALM 16 (15)

The Israelites lived in the midst of pagan nations, but even among this people, there were those who shared pagan superstitions even though they professed to believe in the one God. When they participated in the sacrifices offered to the local gods, they were mixing authentic religion with idolatry.

The author of this psalm struggles against this attitude. The God of Israel is their Lord, his most precious asset, the part allotted to him in entering this world (the cup they used in drawing lots). This allegiance to God does not manifest itself only in visible ways, religious practices, but it

The Lord is part of my inheritance. – God is part of my inheritance since I chose him as the only Lord. I will delight in him for all eternity.

¹ Keep me safe, O God, for in you I take refuge.

² I say to the Lord,
"You, my Lord, are my only good."

³ How many people in your land delight in other deities.

⁴ Those who ran after foreign gods only have their sorrows multiplied.
I will not shed blood for them and never will I rely on them.

penetrates the core of his being. God is the center of his thoughts and his desires night and day. "You cannot abandon me soul to hell nor allow your friend to be corrupted." The psalmist is certain that God can pull him out of that dark and sad place, "sheol," where, according to Jewish mentality the souls of the dead were located, in order to introduce him at his right hand, in the fullness of life and joy for ever. From the beginning, Christians realized that these words applied in a special way to the Risen Jesus (Acts 2:25 and 13:35). Because Jesus had been the perfect servant of his Father, God snatched him from the corruption of the grave on the day of his Resurrection.

This psalm also applies to each one of us. Through baptism the Christian becomes a member of Christ and thus he belongs to God. Some experience this in a more radical sense when they renounce the world to dedicate themselves exclusively to the service of the Gospel. Yet, all Christians are called, in one form or another, to give witness to God as the only Lord, among men. Even among those who claim to be Christians, there are some people who sacrifice their Christian dignity on the altar of money and success.

⁵ O Lord, my heritage and my cup, my chosen portion – hold secure my lot.

⁶ Pleasant places have been marked out for me by the measuring lines.
Delightful indeed is my inheritance!

⁷ I bless the Lord who counsels me;
even at night, my inmost self instructs me.

⁸ I keep the Lord always before me; for with him at my right hand – never will I be shaken or troubled.

⁹ My heart, therefore, exults, my soul rejoices;
my body, too will rest assured.

¹⁰ For you will not abandon my soul to the grave, nor will you suffer your holy one to see decay in the land of the dead.

¹¹ You will show me the path of life, in your presence the fullness of joy, at your right hand happiness for ever and ever.

PSALM 17 (16)

Outcry of the innocent.

¹ Hear a just cause, O Lord, listen to my pleading word.
Give heed to my prayer which my lips free from deceit utter.

² Let my defense come forth from you;
your eyes see what is right.

³ Probe my heart, search me at night, test me by fire, and you will see no wickedness in me.

⁴ I have not sinned by my words as humans do;
I have kept your word and followed your ways.

⁵ Hold firm my steps upon your path, that my feet stumble not.

⁶ I call on you, for you will answer me, O God; incline your ear to me; hear my word.

⁷ Show your wonderful love, O saviour of those who flee from their persecutors to seek refuge at your right hand.

⁸ Keep me as the apple of your eye;
under the shadow of your wings hide me,

⁹far away from my violent pursuers, from the onslaught of my wicked despoilers.

¹⁰Their mouths speaking arrogantly they have shut their hearts to mercy.

¹¹They surround me now, their eyes eager to see me overthrown.

¹²They are like lions made fierce by hunger, wanting nothing but to kill and tear.

¹³Arise, O Lord, confront them!
Let your sword deliver me from the wicked.

¹⁴O Lord, do away with them; strike them with your hand and give them no share with the living.
May their belly be filled with what you have stored up for them.
And may their sons have more than enough to leave to their descendants.

¹⁵As for me, righteous in your sight,
I shall see your face and, awakening, gaze my fill on your likeness.

PSALM 18 (17)

A liberator gives thanks to God. – This psalm was written after a victory. We are impressed by the underlying enthusiasm, the fervor of the gratitude and the marvelous idea the psalmist has of God.

²I love you, O Lord, my strength.

³The Lord is my rock, my rampart, my deliverer and my God, the rock in whom I take refuge. He is my shield, the horn of my salvation, my stronghold.

⁴I call on the Lord, who is worthy of praise; he saves me from my enemies.

⁵Torrents of destruction in a violent rampage, rushed at me in their vicious rage.

⁶Caught as by the cords of the grave, I was utterly helpless before the snares of death.

⁷But I called upon the Lord in my distress, to my God I cried for help; and from his temple he heard my voice, my cry of grief reached his ears. Then the earth reeled and rocked; the foundations of the mountains shook; they trembled at his fury.

⁹Smoke rose from his nostrils, from his mouth a devouring fire throwing off live embers.

¹⁰He bent the heavens and came down with dark clouds under his feet.

¹¹He rode on a cherub and flew, borne on the swift wings of the wind.

¹²Veiled with darkness surrounding him, he made misty rain clouds his tent.

¹³Then from the brightness of his presence hail and fiery embers broke ¹⁸He inclined the heavens and came down. He literally did this when his own Son came down among us and became one of us in order to deliver mankind from their interior (sin, suffering) and also exterior enemies (the control of others, cultural imperialism, ignorance).

Christian worship and especially the mass is "thanks giving" to God for this work. However, the entire life of men must be one of gratitude to God.

By being transformed, by becoming the image and likeness of God ever more clearly and purely, we are praising God.

forth. ¹⁴From heaven the Lord thundered: the voice of the Most High resounded.

¹⁵Sending out a hail of arrows, he scattered them; flashing forth bolts of lightning, he routed them.

¹⁶The beds of the seas lay uncovered as the foundations of the world were bared at the rebuke the Lord uttered, at the blast of his nostril's breath.

¹⁷Reaching down from above, he drew me out of the deep waters.

¹⁸Too strong for me were my enemies, but he rescued me from my adversaries.

¹⁹They launched their attack in an opportune day but the Lord has been my stay.

²⁰In the open he has set me free. How great indeed is his love for me!

²¹The Lord rewarded me according to his justice, and according also to my righteousness.

²²For I have been faithful to the Lord's way and from my God have not fallen away.

²³With his ordinances all before me, I have always followed his statutes.

²⁴Before him I have done uprightly and kept myself from iniquity.

²⁵Therefore the Lord has given me recompense according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands.

²⁶To the faithful you show yourself faithful; to the blameless you show yourself blameless; ²⁷to the pure you show yourself pure; but to the crooked you show yourself astute.

²⁸For you raise up the humble and bring down the arrogant.

²⁹Lord, you give light to my lamp. O my God, you brighten up the dark.

³⁰Yes, with you I can crush an armed band, and by my God I can leap over a wall.

³¹This God – his way is perfect; the word of the Lord is always fulfilled.

For those who seek refuge in him, he is a shield.

³²There is no other God but the Lord. There is no other rock but our God.

³³He is the God who girds me with strength and keeps my path unerring and safe.

³⁴He has made my feet as swift as the hinds'; he has set me secure on the heights.

³⁵He trains my hands for war and my arms to bend a bow of brass.

³⁶You have given me your shield for protection, your right hand has upheld me, and your help has made me great.

³⁷You have given a wide space for my steps, so that they never faltered.

³⁸I have pursued my enemies and overtaken them; I did not turn back till I had destroyed them.

³⁹Thrusting them through, I did not give them time to rise as they fell under my feet.

⁴⁰You have given me strength for the battle; you have subdued my adversaries beneath me;

⁴¹you have put my enemies to flight and destroyed those who hated me.

⁴²They cried for help, but no one came. They cried to the Lord; he did not answer them.

⁴³I pulverized them as dust before the wind; like mud in the streets I trampled them.

⁴⁴You have delivered me from the people's assault and have made me head over the nations. They came to serve me – people I have not known.

⁴⁵At the sound of my voice, they rose to obey. Foreigners approached me cringing and fawning. ⁴⁶Staggering out of their fortresses, they came to me trembling in fear.

⁴⁷The Lord lives! Praised be my rock! Exalted be my saviour God –

⁴⁸the God who granted me vengeance and subdued the peoples for me.

⁴⁹He delivered me from my foes; he exalted me above my adversaries; he rescued me from men of violence.

⁵⁰For this I will extol you, O Lord, among the nations; I will sing praise to your name.

⁵¹You have given your king great victory; you have shown your love to your anointed David, and to his descendants forever.

PSALM 19 (18)

The Lord, the sun of justice. – We have a tiny glimpse of God's glory in the splendor of the sky. We also have a sense of his presence when we meditate on his commandments, light and happiness to the soul.

² The heavens declare the glory of God; the firmament proclaims the work of his hands.

³ Day talks it over with day; night hands on the knowledge to night.

⁴ No speech, no words, no voice heard –

⁵ but the call goes on throughout the universe;

the message is felt to the ends of the earth.

⁶ High above, he has pitched a tent for the sun, which comes out as a bridegroom from his pavilion, or as a relay champion all set to run his course.

⁷ Rising from one end, it makes its circuit of the heavens, and sets at the other end; and nothing is hidden from its heat.

⁸ The law of the Lord is perfect: it gives life to the soul.

The word of the Lord is trustworthy: it gives wisdom to the simple.

⁹ The precepts of the Lord are right: they give joy to the heart.

The commandments of the Lord are clear: they enlighten the eyes.

¹⁰ The fear of the Lord is pure, it endures forever;

the judgments of the Lord are true, altogether just and right.

¹¹ More precious are they than gold – even pure gold of the highest quality; they are much sweeter than honey and drippings from the honeycomb.

¹² They are a light to your servant, keeping them is indeed a great reward.

Following are some lines from the book, The Imitation of Christ (3:1), inviting us to discover those other wonders that God works in us.

Happy the soul who listens to the Lord speaking to it deep within, gathering from his lips the Word of life and joy!

Happy the eyes closing to external spectacles in order to be more attentive to the inner vision.

Focus on these things, my soul, close the door to your senses, in order to be able to hear what the Lord, your God is saying.

¹³ But how can I discern my own errors?
 Forgive my failings of which I am unaware.

¹⁴ Help me also keep away from willful sin;
 do not let it get the better of your servant.
 Would that I walk blameless and innocent of transgression!

¹⁵ May the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart find favor in your sight,
 O Lord – my redeemer, my rock!

PSALM 20 (19)

Prayer of the Jews for their king. – For the one they call "Christ," that is, the Anointed of God. May the Lord protect those who struggle to bring about the reign of truth as he protected Christ, our king.

² May the Lord answer you in time of calamity; may the name of Jacob's God give you protection.

³ May he send you help from the sanctuary and give you support from Mount Zion.

⁴ May he remember all your oblations tenderly and regard your burnt offerings favorably.

⁵ May he grant you the desire of your heart and the fulfillment of all your plans.

⁶ In your victory we will shout for joy and in God's name raise our banner.
 May the Lord grant all your requests.

⁷ Now I know that the Lord saves his anointed; he has answered him from his holy heaven with victories of his right hand.

⁸ Some boast of chariots, some of horses;
 but our boast is in the name of the Lord our God.

⁹ Their forces will collapse and be crushed, but ours will rise resolute and undeterred.

¹⁰ When we call, answer us –
 O Lord, make the king victorious!

PSALM 21 (20)

Thanksgiving for our King. – "He asked life of you and you gave it to him, to live many years, forever and ever."

² In your power the king rejoices,
 O Lord; for you gave him victory.

³ His desire you have granted him;
 his request you have not rejected.

⁴ Surely you have welcomed him with rich blessings; you have placed a golden crown upon his head.

⁵ When he asked for it, you gave him life: for length of days – forever and ever.

⁶Great is his glory through your victory; you have bestowed on him splendor and majesty.

⁷You have conferred on him eternal blessings; you have made him glad with your presence.

⁸Since the king trusts in the Lord, through the love of the Most High, his reign will be unshaken.

⁹Your hand will reach all your enemies; and lay hold of all your foes.

¹⁰When you appear you will make of them a blazing furnace. The Lord will devour them in his wrath; his fire will engulf them, burning them up.

¹¹You will destroy their fruit from the earth and their posterity from humanity.

¹²Against you they may plot evil, they may devise wicked schemes, but they will never win;

¹³for they will fall back in fear when you aim your arrows at them.

¹⁴Be exalted, O Lord, in your strength! We will sing in praise of your might.

PSALM 22 (21)

The prayer of Christ on the Cross. – Reading this psalm reminds us of going from night to dawn. The first part is gloomy, dark; the second is like the sunrise lighting up the fields, bringing things back to life, and happiness to men's hearts. The theme of this psalm is in fact, that of the persecuted one, who on the verge of the abyss, recovers assurance and confidence.

²My God, my God, why have you forsaken me? Why are you so far from me, so far from the words of my groaning?

³O my God, I call all day, but you do not answer; and all night I cry to you but find no rest.

⁴Yet you are enthroned the Holy One, the praise of Israel.

⁵In you our fathers put their trust, and you delivered them

⁶To you they cried and they were saved; in you they trusted and were not frustrated.

⁷But I am a worm and not a man, scorned by men, despised by people.

⁸All who see me make a jest of me; they sneer and shake their heads.

⁹"He put his trust in the Lord, let the Lord rescue him! If the Lord is his friend, let him help him!"

¹⁰Yet it is you who brought me out of the womb and kept me safe at my mother's breasts.

¹¹I have been yours since I was born; you are my God from my mother's womb.

¹²Stay not far from me for trouble is near, and there is no one to help me.

¹³I am surrounded by a herd of bulls – strong bulls of Bashan closing in on me, ¹⁴their mouths open, like lions roaring at their prey.

¹⁵I am like water drained out; my bones are all out of joint, my heart melts away like wax.

¹⁶My strength is dried up like a potsherd; my tongue is stuck to my palate. You have laid me down in the dust of death.

¹⁷Round about me are vicious dogs; encircling me are villainous rogues. They have pierced my hands and feet.

¹⁸I can count all my bones. There they are, gloating over me, ¹⁹dividing among them my gar-

²¹ When we read the Bible it does not seem that, with so many blessings from God, the kings of Israel, his chosen ones, were more successful than any other king. But the Word of God is true: God's elect discover with amazement that by persevering in their faithfulness, God works wonders in their lives.

²² Christian tradition applied this psalm to Jesus himself from the beginning. In fact, in reading it we find many references to the details of Jesus' Passion. The 'bulls,' the 'lion,' the 'dogs' point to his enemies, the comparison with the worm fits the humiliation of the blows and the infamy of the cross; the division of his ments and casting lots for my raiment.

²⁰O Lord, be not far from me! O my strength, hurry to my aid!

⁴¹Deliver my soul from the sword, my life from the powerful grip of the dog.

²²Rescue me from the jaws of the lion, my soul from the horns of the wild bull.

²³I will proclaim your name to my brothers, I will praise you in the assembly.

²⁴All you who fear the Lord, praise him! All you sons of Jacob, glorify him! All you sons of Israel, revere him!

²⁵For he has not scorned or loathed the afflicted in his misery. He has not hidden his face from him but has listened when he cried to him.

²⁶My praise is of you in the great assembly. I will fulfill my vows before those who fear you.

²⁷The poor will eat and be satisfied. Those who seek the Lord will praise him. May your hearts live forever!

²⁸From one end to the other the whole earth will remember and turn to the Lord; all the pagan nations will worship him.

²⁹For dominion belongs to the Lord and he reigns over the nations.

³⁰Before him all the rich will bow down; all who go down to the dust will bow. And for him my soul will live.

³¹My descendants will serve him, and proclaim the Lord to the coming generation; ³²they will announce his salvation to a people yet unborn. These are the things that he has done.

PSALM 23 (22)

The Lord is my shepherd. – He is my shepherd; there is nothing I shall want. Before me are the table and the cup of Christ. Better than the anointing with holy oil, I have received the anointing of the Holy Spirit (John 2:27); I look forward not to the rest of death, but to resurrection beside the Father.

¹ The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.

² He makes me lie down in green pastures.

He leads me beside the still waters.

³ He restores my soul.

He guides me through the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

⁴ Although I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,

I fear no evil.

for you are beside me.

Your rod and your staff are there to comfort me.

⁵ You prepare a table before me in the presence of my foes.

clothes also takes place exactly as it had been anointed.

However, there is much more than that. Jesus applied this psalm to himself when he cried from the cross: "My God, why have you abandoned me?" Jesus himself had the feeling of having called his Father in vain, as the Father is silent and deprives his Son of all heavenly consolation. Such was the supreme trial which Jesus wanted to endure in order to take on our sins.

Yet, in the midst of this tremendous darkness, deep down in Jesus' soul, there is a light which does not flicker. He knows that in spite of silence, the Father is always with him and the entire second part of the psalm is a song of trust which rises and grows into a triumphant shout: the Crucified of Good Friday is transformed into the Glorious Lord and his rule will be universal. Jesus had said: "When I am lifted up above the earth, I will draw all things to me."

The Christian life involves passing from death to life. What is marvelous is that through Jesus, we can always draw good out of evil, happiness out of suffering and out of death itself.

You anoint my head with oil;
my cup is overflowing.

⁶ Goodness and kindness will follow me all the days of my life,
I shall dwell in the house of the Lord as long as I live.

PSALM 24 (23)

Modern man's claim to advance more through scientific progress and social planning is not, in and of itself, pride but rather the manifestation of his great destiny. This destiny tends to more than earthly conquests; it tends to the life of God. Thus, God had to come to earth in order to bring men to his own dwelling.

The earth and its fullness are the Lord's. A procession makes its way to the Temple; the Israelites joyfully carry the Ark of the Covenant to the place where God himself, the Creator of the Universe, will dwell in their midst.

O gates, lift up your lintels so that the king of glory may come in. Let us contemplate this mystery: the Almighty comes to live in our midst and he dwells in the humble home we prepare for him. He became man in Mary's womb.

Who is this king of glory? On the day of his Resurrection and Ascension, Christ became the king of glory; he went up the "Holy Mountain" and was the first one to enter God's eternal dwelling place. All those who share his upright life and seek God with a sincere heart, will follow after him, also in the glory of Jesus and they will share eternal happiness.

The destiny of man. – God created the universe to display his riches in it; but the world is not finished until God has visited man, until the birth of the new Man, the son of God.

To the Lord belong the earth and its fullness – the world and all that dwell in it.

² He has founded it upon the ocean, and set it firmly upon the waters.

³ Who will ascend the mountain of the Lord?
Who will stand in his holy place?

⁴ Those who are clean of hands and pure of heart, who desire not what is vain, who never swear to a lie.

⁵ They will receive blessings from the Lord and be holy for God, their saviour.

⁶ Such are the people who seek him, who seek the face of Jacob's God.

⁷ Lift up, O gateways, your lintels, open up, you ancient doors,
that the King of glory may enter!

⁸ Who is the king of glory?
The Lord, the strong, the mighty, the Lord, the valiant in battle.

⁹ Lift up your lintels, O gateways,
open up, you ancient doors,
that the King of glory may enter!

¹⁰ Who is the King of glory?
The Lord of Hosts,
he is the King of glory!

PSALM 25 (24)

Calling on God in trials. – The Bible does not know despair. Even in the most difficult situations when man is broken by misfortune, anxiety, the weight of his own sins, he is always left with a way out. All our ways, even the worst, can finally lead to a Love stronger than all the powers of this world.

To you, O Lord, I lift my soul.

² O my God, in you I trust; let me not be put to shame, let not my enemies exult over me.

³ May those who hope in you never be humbled; those who turn away

Where shall we find some likeness of the wonderful and magnificent God?

Shanty towns: inexhaustible reserves of hope and joy.

from you without cause suffer disgrace!

⁴Teach me your ways, O Lord; make me know your paths.

⁵Guide me in your truth and instruct me, for you are my God, my saviour, for I hope in you all the day long.

⁶Remember your compassion, O Lord, your unfailing love from of old.

⁷Remember not the sins of my youth, my transgressions and rebellious ways; but in your love remember me, O Lord!

⁸Good and upright, the Lord instructs the sinners in their paths.

⁹He teaches the humble of heart and guides them in what is right.

¹⁰The ways of the Lord are love and faithfulness for those who keep his covenant and precepts.

¹¹For the sake of your name, Lord, forgive my iniquity, no matter how great it be.

¹²Those who fear the Lord will learn from him how to choose their way.

¹³In prosperity they will stand, and their descendants will inherit the land.

¹⁴The Lord comes to those who fear him and he makes his covenant known to them.

¹⁵My eyes are on the Lord forever, for he will free my feet from the snare.

¹⁶Turn to me and have compassion on my loneliness and affliction.

¹⁷Free my heart of its bitterness; relieve me from this harrowing distress.

¹⁸Consider my trouble and all my sufferings, and forgive all my sins.

¹⁹See how my enemies have increased and how they look at me with violent hatred.

²⁰Deliver my life from them; let me not be put to shame, for it is to you that I look for rescue.

²¹Let integrity and uprightness preserve me, for all my hope, O Lord, lies in you.

²²Redeem, O God, redeem Israel from her troubles!

PSALM 26 (25)

Prayer of the just man. – Let us adopt the prayer of this "just" confirming his faithfulness. We should pay no attention to our merits, as the Pharisees do, but to the new person we put on in baptism: Christ has purified and enriched us.

Vindicate me, O Lord, for with integrity have I lived; my trust in the Lord has never wavered.

²Prove me, O Lord, put me to the test; examine my soul and search my heart.

³For your love is ever before my sight, and I live my life in truth and faith.

⁴I do not associate with the deceitful nor do I enjoy the acquaintance of hypocrites;

⁵I hate to be in league with evildoers or come together with the wicked.

⁶I wash my hands free of guilt and walk in procession round your altar, ⁷singing in praise and proclaiming your wondrous deeds.

²⁵ Lord, remember all your kindness from of old, do not remember our sins. God's love for men has been sealed forever by Jesus' blood. God will never abandon his people. Every mass is a celebration of that covenant between God and men in the blood of Jesus.

²⁶ Following is a prayer of St. Anselm (11th century) asking for "justice":

Give me a pure and faithful soul, true and practical knowledge, with the love of your commandments and the ability to follow them in such a way. Lord, that I may walk with constant humility on the road to perfection and never go wrong.

Do not abandon me, Lord, to my own will, nor to human ignorance or weakness, nor to my merits, nor to anything other than your careful Providence.

That through me and in me, your holy will may be always followed.

"O Lord, I love the house where you dwell and the tabernacle of your glory.

⁹Let not my soul partake of the sinners' lot; let me not share the fate ¹⁰in whose hands are the guilt of their crimes, whose right hands are weighed down with bribes.

¹¹But I will keep on living a life of integrity. Redeem me, O God, be gracious to me. ¹²I will praise you, O Lord, in your assemblies.

PSALM 27 (26)

Close to God, there is no fear. – "It is your face, O Lord, that I seek." "I hope to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living." In the midst of the struggles of this life the fighter does not get discouraged because of the great hope the Lord has in store for him at the end of the struggle.

What I seek is to dwell in the house of the Lord. All the struggles, trials and temptations will not make us forget that the house of the Lord is at the end of the road.

He will shelter me in his home in the day of trouble. Those who have understood the countless riches of Christ's heart find in him a place of refuge always accessible.

"I will place the victor as a pillar in the Temple of my God. On him I will write the name of my God and my own new name" (Rv 3:12)

¹ The Lord is my light, my salvation – whom shall I be afraid of?

the Lord is my battlement, my defender – whom I shall I fear?

² When the wicked rush at me to eat up my flesh,
You make them stumble and fall.

³ Though a whole army encamp against me, my heart will not fail;
though war break out against me,
I will still be confident.

⁴ One thing I ask of the Lord, one thing I seek – that I dwell in his house all the days of my life, that I may ever gaze at his beauty and seek counsel in his sanctuary.

⁵ For he will keep me safe in his shelter in times of calamity;
he will hide me beneath his roof and find me a high place upon a rock.

⁶ Then my head will be lifted up over the enemies round about me.
I will offer oblations at his tabernacle together with shouts of joy;
I will sing and make music in praise of the Lord.

⁷ Hear my voice when I call, O Lord, have mercy on me and answer me.

⁸ You have said, "Seek my face" and my heart says to you,
"Yes, Lord, your face I seek."

⁹ Do not hide your face from me or turn away your servant in anger.
You have been my protector, do not refuse or abandon me,
O God of my salvation!

¹⁰ Though my father and mother forsake me, the Lord in his love will yet receive me.

¹¹ O Lord, teach me your way; lead me along a straight path.

¹² Save me from the will of my enemies; false witness have gathered against me to pin me down in their violence.

¹³ I hope to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living.

¹⁴ Trust in the Lord, be strong, be courageous – yes, put your hope in the Lord!

PSALM 28 (27)

Do not be deaf to me, O my Rock.

To you I call, O Lord, be not deaf to me, my rock.

For if you heed me not – like the rest I go down to the pit.

² Hear my cry for compassion as I call to you for protection, as I lift up my hands toward your innermost sanctuary.

³ Drag me not away with the wicked, with those evil-scheming men who mouth peace for neighbors and nation, while they sow mischief and confusion.

⁴ Punish them for their evil designs and their wicked deeds; give them their reward. Since they have no regard for the works of the Lord, he will tear them down and never let them rise again.

⁶ Blessed be the Lord! He has heard my cry for help.

⁷ The Lord is my strength, my shield; in him my heart trusts. He helps me and my heart exults, and with my song I give him thanks.

⁸ The Lord is the strength of his people, the saving refuge of his anointed.

⁹ Save your people, and bless your inheritance. Be their shepherd and carry them forever.

PSALM 29 (28)

The storm: it is the Lord passing. – God speaks through the storm: he manifests his power and his glory.

Give the Lord, O angels of God, give the Lord glory and strength, ² give the Lord the glory due his name;
worship the Lord in sacred garments.

³ The voice of the Lord is over the waters; the God of glory thunders, the Lord thunders over vast waters.

⁴ How powerful, how majestic is the voice of the Lord!

⁵ The voice of the Lord tears up the cedars, the Lord shatters the cedars of Lebanon.

⁶ He makes Lebanon skip like a calf, and Sirion like a young wild bull.

⁷ The voice of the Lord breaks forth with flashes of fire.

⁸ The voice of the Lord makes the wilderness quake.

The Lord shakes the wilderness of Kadesh.

⁹ The voice of the Lord makes the oaks shudder, the Lord strips the forests bare. And in his temple all cry, "Glory!"

¹⁰ Over the flood the Lord sits enthroned; the Lord is king and he reigns for ever.

¹¹ May the Lord give his people strength; may the Lord bless his people with peace!

PSALM 30 (29)

I will praise you because you have freed me. —In this life, nothing is definitive. For each of us, the Lord alternates between joys and trials according to what we need to grow in faith. Often we are caught by surprise: trials depress us as if God no longer existed and when God's blessings come, we do not dare believe they are real.

² I extol you, O Lord, for having rescued me from the depths, for not allowing my enemies to gloat over me.

³ O Lord my God, I called to you for help, and you healed me.

⁴ O Lord, you brought me up from the grave and saved me from going down to the pit.

⁵ Sing to the Lord, O you saints of his, give thanks and praise to his holy name.

⁶ For his anger lasts a little while, but his kindness all through life.

Weeping may tarry for the night, but rejoicing comes with the dawn.

⁷ Once in my prosperity I said, "I shall not be troubled."

⁸ In your good will, O Lord, you built my stronghold but when you hid your face, how greatly terrified I was!

⁹ To you, O Lord, I called; to the Lord I begged for mercy:

¹⁰ What good would there be in my destruction, in my going down to the pit? Would the dust give you praise?

Would it proclaim your faithfulness?

¹¹ Hear, O Lord, and have mercy on me; O Lord, be my protector."

¹² Since then, you have turned my mourning into rejoicing; you have taken off my sackcloth and wrapped me in the garments of gladness.

¹³ And so my soul, no longer silent, now sings praise without ceasing. O Lord my God, forever will I give you thanks.

PSALM 31 (30)

I seek refuge in you O Lord.

² In you, O Lord, I take refuge, never let me be disgraced; deliver me in your justice.

³ Give heed to my plea, and make haste to rescue me.

Be a rock for my refuge, ⁴a strong fortress for my safety. My rock and my stronghold, lead me for your name's sake; ⁵free me from the snare that they have set for me. Indeed you are my protector.

⁶ Into your hands I commend my spirit; you have redeemed me, O Lord, faithful God.

⁷ You hate those who worship worthless idols; but I put all my trust in the Lord.

⁸ I will rejoice and be glad in your love, for you have seen my affliction, you know the agony of my soul, ⁹and instead of handing me over to the enemy you gave me room to move freely.

¹⁰ Be merciful to me, O Lord, in my affliction; my eyes have grown dim with sorrow, my body emaciated, my soul weakened.

¹¹ For my life is wracked with grief, and my years worn out in anguish. My strength fails because of my iniquity which consumes me to the very bones.

¹² I have become an object of reproach for my foes, and for my neighbours. I have become so horrible to my friends that they hurry away from me when they see me in the streets.

I am like the dead, unremembered; I have become like a broken pot, thrown away, discarded.

¹⁴ I hear the whispering among the crowd, rumors that frighten me from every side – their conspiracies, their schemes, their plot to take my life.

¹⁵ But I put my trust in you, O Lord. You are my God;

¹⁶ my days are in your hand. Deliver me from evil men, from those after my skin.

¹⁷ Make your face shine upon your servant; save me in your love.

¹⁸ Let not my honor be assailed, O Lord, for it is on you that I have called; but may the wicked lie dishon-oured in their grave, dumb and baffled.

¹⁹ Let their lying lips close in silence for speaking against the just in malice and arrogance.

²⁰ How great your goodness which is stored for those who fear you, O Lord, for those who take refuge in you in the sight of men!

²¹ In the covert of your presence you hide them from men's wiles; you keep them in your dwelling, safe from the intrigues of wagging tongues.

²² Blessed be the Lord for his wonderful love! He has strengthened my heart.

²³ I said in my fright: "I have been cut off from your sight!"

But when I cried, you heard; when I called for mercy, you listened.

²⁴ Love the Lord, all you saints of his! The Lord preserves his faithful, But he fully requites the arrogant.

²⁵ Be strong and take courage, all you whose hope is in the Lord.

PSALM 32 (31)

When we pray that God will heal a sick person, we do not separate the health of the body from that of the soul. This is expressed in the following prayer from the Anointing of the Sick.

"O Jesus our Saviour, we beg you in virtue of the Holy Spirit, to cure this man's illness; cure his wounds; forgive his sins; discard everything torturing his body and soul; give him back, we pray, physical and spiritual health so that, healed by your goodness, he may again return to his work."

Relief of the person who confessed his sin. – Hidden sins ruin our conscience. Confession is already a liberation.

Blessed is the one whose sin is forgiven, whose iniquity is wiped away.

² Blessed are those to whom the Lord imputes no guilt and in whose spirit is found no deceit.

³ When I kept my sin secret, my body wasted away suffering all day.

⁴ Upon me lay your heavy hand; I felt its weight day and night, weakening me, parching my heart, as in the heat of a summer drought.

⁵ Then I made known to you my failings and uncovered before you my iniquity, saying to myself, "To the Lord I will now confess my wrong." And you, you forgave my sin, you removed my guilt.

⁶ So let the faithful ones pray to you in the time of distress and overflowing waters;

the flood will not reach them.

⁷ You are my refuge you protect me from distress and surround me with songs of salvation.

⁸ I will teach you and show the way that you should follow.
I will watch over you and give you counsel.

⁹ Do not be like the horse or the mule – senseless and led by bit and bridle.

¹⁰ The woes awaiting the wicked are beyond measure, but the Lord's mercy and faithful love assure the man whose hope and trust in God endure.

¹¹ Rejoice in the Lord, and be glad, you who are upright;
sing and shout for joy,
you who are clean of heart.

PSALM 33 (32)

God's Providence looks after the world. – "Happy the people whose God is the Lord." The Lord looks upon those who fear him.

¹ Rejoice in the Lord, you who are just, praise is fitting for the upright.

² Give thanks to him on the harp and lyre, making melody and chanting praises.

³ Amid loud shouts of joy, sing to him a new song and play the ten-stringed harp.

⁴ For upright is the Lord's word and worthy of trust is his work.

⁵ The Lord loves justice and righteousness;
the earth is full of his kindness.

⁶ By the word of the Lord were the heavens made,
and all their starry host, by his mouth's breath.
⁷ He gathered the waters of the sea into a heap, and stored the deep in cellars.

⁸ Let the whole earth fear the Lord, let the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him.

⁹ For he spoke, and all were created;
and there they were, as he commanded.

¹⁰ The Lord frustrates the plans of the nations and brings to nothing the people's designs.

¹¹ But his plan stands forever, and his heart's design through all generations.

¹² Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord – the people he has chosen for his inheritance.

¹³ The Lord looks down from heaven and he sees all the sons of men.

¹⁴ From where he sits he watches all those who dwell on earth –

¹⁵ he who fashions the heart of each, observes all their deeds.

¹⁶ A king is not saved by his large army, nor a warrior rescued by his powerful strength.

¹⁷ In war, the horse is vain hope for glory;
its great strength gives no assurance of victory.

¹⁸ But the Lord's eyes are upon those who fear him,

upon those who trust in his loving kindness

¹⁹ to deliver them from death and preserve them from famine and distress.

²⁰ In hope we wait for the Lord, for he is our help and our shield.

²¹ Our hearts rejoice in him, for we trust in his holy name.

²² O Lord, let your love rest upon us, even as we let our hope rest upon you.

PSALM 34 (33)

Taste and see how good is the Lord. – Let us listen to the experience of the poor and the humble: God becomes very close to those who have no other support except him.

² I will extol the Lord always; on my lips will ever be his praise.

³ In the Lord my soul makes its boast; let the afflicted hear and rejoice.

⁴ Oh, let us together glorify the Lord, let us together glorify his name!

⁵ I sought the Lord, and he answered me; from all my fears he delivered me.

⁶ Radiant with joy are those who look to him, their faces never clouded with shame.

⁷ When the poor cry out, the Lord hears and saves them from distress.

⁸ The Lord's angel encamps around those who fear him, and he keeps them safe.

⁹ Oh, see and feel the goodness of the Lord!
Blessed is the one who finds shelter in him!
¹⁰ Oh, fear the Lord, all you his saints, for those who fear him do not live in want.
¹¹ The mighty may be in hunger and wanting, but those who seek the Lord lack nothing.
¹² Come and listen to me, my sons;
I will show you how to fear the Lord.
¹³ Those among you who desire long life and enjoyment of prosperity, ¹⁴ keep your tongue from falsehood, keep your lips from deceit; ¹⁵ turn away from evil and do good;
seek peace and pursue it.
¹⁶ The eyes of the Lord are turned towards the righteous;
his ears are inclined to their cries.
¹⁷ But his face is set against the wicked to destroy their memory from the earth.
¹⁸ The Lord hears the righteous' cry for help and rescues them from all their troubles.
¹⁹ The Lord is close to the brokenhearted and helps those crushed in spirit.
²⁰ Many are the troubles of the just,
but the Lord delivers them out of them all.
²¹ He keeps intact all their bones, and none of them will be broken.
²² Evil will slay the wicked;
the enemies of the just will be doomed.
²³ But the Lord redeems the life of his servants;
none of those who trust him will be doomed.

PSALM 35 (34)

Petition of a persecuted just one. – In many parts this psalm resembles psalm 22 which announces Christ's Passion in such a moving way.

O Lord attack those who attack me;
Battle those who battle me.
² Come to my aid with your sword and buckler;
³ stand with your lance and halt my pursuers. Say to my son, "I am your deliverer."
⁴ Let them be shamed and dishonored, they who seek my life. Let them be routed and destroyed, they who plot my ruin.

⁵ Let them be like chaff before the wind, with the Lord's angel driving them away.

⁶ Let their escape path be dark and precipitous, with the Lord's angel always at their heels.

⁷ They set their net against me for no cause, they dug a pit for me without reason.

⁸ Let ruin come upon them unexpectedly, let them be entangled in their own snare; let them fall into the trap of their own making.

⁹ Then will my soul rejoice in the Lord and exult in his salvation.

¹⁰ My whole being will exclaim, "O Lord, who is like you, who deliver the oppressed from stronger oppressors, who rescue the poor and the afflicted from their despoilers?"

¹¹ False witnesses take the stand, accusing me of crimes of which I am innocent.

¹² With evil they return my kindness, making my life forlorn.

¹³ When they were sick, I also felt afflicted; in commiseration, I wore sackcloth and fasted.

I prayed hard with head bowed, ¹⁴ as if I were bereft of a friend or brother; I shed tears in grief, as if I were mourning the death of my mother.

¹⁵ But when I stumbled they gathered in glee and, to my surprise, began attacking me; even cripples who were strangers to me came out with their fabricated charges.

¹⁶ Like the ungodly circle of mockers, they gnashed their teeth and made me the butt of their buffoonery.

¹⁷ How long, O Lord, will you look on? Rescue me from their ravages, deliver my life from these lions.

¹⁸ Then I will thank you in the great assembly; I will praise you in the mighty throng.

¹⁹ Do not let them gloat over me – those who, unprovoked, have become my foes. Do not let them wink maliciously – those who hate me without cause.

²⁰ Sowing discontent with their tongue and mind, they devise false accusations against the peace-loving people of the land.

²¹ Against me they open wide their mouths: "Aha, aha!" they say, "We have seen it with our own eyes!"

²² But it is you, O Lord, who see the truth. Do not keep silent. Do not stand aside.

²³ Stir yourself up, stand for my right and for my cause, my God and my Lord!

²⁴ Vindicate me, O Lord, my God, according to your justice. Do not give them the opportunity to gloat over me.

²⁵ Do not let them say to themselves, "Aha, just what we wanted!" Never give them the reason to say, "We have trampled him down!"

²⁶ Let them be utterly disgraced and confounded, who exult over my calamity. Let them be ashamed and dishonored, who rejoice at my distress.

²⁷ But let them be glad and rejoice, who are in sympathy with my cause. And may they ever say, "Great is the Lord, who gives his servant the deserved reward."

²⁸ My tongue will then proclaim your goodness, and sing your praises all day long.

PSALM 36 (35)

The wickedness of the sinner and the goodness of God.
– The very evil in men urges us to trust in God's goodness.

² Wickedness speaks to the wicked in the depths of his heart: there is no fear of God before his eyes. His eyes so blinded by conceit, he fails to see his guilt.

⁴ With a mouth full of malice and deceit; they no longer think of doing good.

⁵ Ever persistent in their crooked ways, they keep plotting mischief even in bed; they are committed to a life of sin and know not how to reject evil.

⁶Your love, O Lord, rises to the heavens; your faithfulness to the clouds.

⁷Great is your justice like mighty mountains, and your judgment like the unfathomable deep. You preserve, O Lord, both man and beast.

⁸How precious, O God, is your constant love! The children of men, rich and poor alike, take refuge in the shadow of your wings.

⁹In your house they feast in abundance you give them drink from your spring of delight, ¹⁰for with you is the fountain of life. We see the light by your own light.

¹¹Bestow your love unfailingly on your faithful and your salvation upon the upright in heart.

¹²Let not the arrogant foot trample me down, nor the wicked hand drive me away.

¹³See how the evildoers lie fallen, battered and never to rise again.

PSALM 37 (36)

There will be happiness for the just and downfall for the wicked. – "Do not be scandalized or envious of the success of evildoers." This psalm develops the teaching of the wise men of Israel: neither power nor wealth give access to the inheritance that God promised to his children.

Do not get worried over evil people nor be envious of wrongdoers.

²For they will fade as any green herb and soon be gone like withered grass.

³Trust in the Lord and do good, dwell in the land and be at ease.

⁴Make the Lord your delight, and he will grant your heart's desire.

⁵Commit your way to the Lord; put your trust in him and let him act.

⁶Then will your vindication come, beautiful as the dawn, and the justification of your cause, bright as the noonday sun.

⁷Keep calm before the Lord, wait for him in patience; do not fret if others succeed when they carry out evil schemes.

⁸Refrain from anger, turn away from wrath; fret not, for it only leads to evil.

⁹Remember this: the wicked will perish, but those who hope in the Lord will have the land for their inheritance.

¹⁰Just tarry for a little while, and the wicked shall be no more. Though you look for them, they will not be found; ¹¹but the humble of heart will inherit the land and enjoy peace in abundance.

¹²The wicked plot against the virtuous and gnash their teeth at them; ¹³but the Lord derides the wicked, for he sees their day coming.

¹⁴The wicked draw their swords and bend their bows; they aim at the poor and the afflicted, they get ready to slay the righteous.

¹⁵But their bows will be shattered; they will be slain by their own swords.

¹⁶The little that the righteous possess is better than the abundance of the wicked.

¹⁷For the power of the wicked will be shattered, and the righteous will be upheld by the Lord.

¹⁸The Lord watches over the lives of the upright; forever will their inheritance abide.

¹⁹They do not suffer loss in times of calamity; when famine strikes, they still have plenty.

²⁰But the wicked will perish; the enemies of the Lord will vanish like smoke, like the beauty of the fields.

²¹The wicked borrow and do not pay back, but the righteous generously give.

²²They will inherit the land – those whom the Lord blesses; but they will be cut off – those whom the Lord curses.

²³For those who delight in the Lord, he makes firm their steps.

²⁴They may stumble, but they will not fall, for the Lord holds them by the hand.

²⁵From my youth to old age, I have yet to see a virtuous man forsaken or his children begging for alms.

²⁶The righteous always lend and give freely, and their children are a blessing to them.

²⁷Do good and shun evil, so that you will live secure forever.

²⁸For the Lord loves the just and the right and never forsakes his faithful ones. Forever will the righteous be protected, and the children of the wicked cut off.

²⁹The righteous will possess the land; they will make it their home forever.

³⁰The mouth of the virtuous tells of wisdom and their tongue speaks of what is right.

³¹Their steps have never faltered, for the law of God is in their heart.

³²The wicked spies on the just man and lies in wait to slay him.

³³But the Lord will never abandon the just to the power of his persecutor nor let him be condemned when he is tried.

³⁴Hope in the Lord and follow his way, for he will exalt you and give you the land as your inheritance. But the wicked will be destroyed – you can be sure of that.

³⁵I have seen a wicked one mighty, towering like cedars of Lebanon.

³⁶But when I passed by again, he was no longer there. I looked for him and he was nowhere.

³⁷Mark the blameless, watch the upright, and you will see that there is a future for the person of peace.

³⁸But all sinners will be destroyed; the future of the wicked will be shattered.

³⁹The Lord is the salvation of the righteous; in time of distress, he is their refuge.

⁴⁰The Lord helps and delivers them, and rescues them from the oppressor; he saves them for they seek shelter in him.

PSALM 38 (37)

Prayer in time of trouble. – At times of illness or misfortune, people begin to meditate and they discover that their greatest affliction is being sinners.

²O Lord, rebuke me not in your rage, punish me not in your fury.

³Your arrows have sunk deep into my flesh; your hand has come down heavily upon me.

⁴Your anger has spared no part of my body, my sin gives no peace to my bones.

⁵For my transgressions overwhelm me; they weigh me down like ¹²When we are patient and watchful, we shall see that "the tree which was not planted by the Father will be uprooted." History shows the final failure of those who persecute the Church or use lies and violence to dominate the world.

³⁸Here we add a few lines from a prayer by Pascal, which continues this psalm:

"Lord, as I am, make me conform to your will and being sick as I am, may I glorify you in my sufferings."

Without these, I cannot, come to Glory. You yourself, O my Saviour, did not want to reach Glory except through them.

Your disciples recognized you in the marks of your sufferings; and you recognize those who are your disciples in their sufferings.

Acknowledge me, then, as your disciple in the hurt that I suffer, in my body as in my spirit, because of the sins I committed.

an unbearable load. ⁶My wounds stink and fester within me, the outcome of my sinful folly.

⁷Stooped and bowed down, I go about mourning all day.

⁸My loins burn, my flesh is diseased, ⁹my body languid and utterly crushed; I groan in pain and anguish of heart.

¹⁰Before you, O Lord, all my longing lies open; from you my sighing is not hidden.

¹¹My heart pounds as my strength ebbs; even the light has deserted my eyes.

¹²My friends avoid me because of my wounds; my neighbors stay afar off.

¹³Those who seek my life lay snares for me; those who wish my harm speak of my ruin and plot against me all the day long.

¹⁴But like a deaf-mute, neither do I hear nor open my mouth.

¹⁵I am like one whose ears hear not and whose mouth has no answer.

¹⁶For I put my trust in you, O Lord; you will answer for me, Lord God.

¹⁷I pray, "Don't let them gloat over me, nor take advantage of my helplessness when I miss a step or my foot slips."

¹⁸For I am about to fall, ever with me is my pain. ¹⁹I confess my transgression, I repent of my sin.

²⁰Many are my foes with no valid cause; many are those who hate me for no reason, ²¹those who pay me evil for good those who condemn me because I seek good.

²²Forsake me not, O Lord, stay not far from me, O my God.

²³Come quickly to my aid, O Lord, my saviour!

PSALM 39 (38)

Man is nothing before his God. – Although in giving us his Son, God has given us everything, we have nothing and we will continue to hope everything from his mercy. "Make me see how frail I am."

²I said: "I will watch my ways and keep my tongue from sin; I will muzzle my mouth in front of the wicked.

³So I did. But as I kept silent their happiness made my anguish grow.

⁴My heart began to burn within, and when I could no longer contain my searing thoughts, I blurted out:

⁵Lord, let me know when my end will come, let me know the number of my days; show me how frail and fleeting is my life.

⁶You allow me to live in but too short a span; before you, all my years are in vain. Human existence is a mere whiff of breath, ⁷mankind a shadow that goes about on earth.

Man is always in relentless pursuit, but all his labor leads to naught; doggedly he toils to rake in wealth, not knowing who will amass it next.

⁸But now, O Lord, what do I await? All my hope rests in you. ⁹Rescue me from sins; I need your salvation. Do not allow me to be the fool's derision.

¹⁰I am mute and shall not open my mouth, since you have done this to me.

¹¹Only remove from me your scourge; for I am done in with your blows.

¹²You punish and cure a man from his sin; you bring to naught what he holds dear. Man is a mere whiff of wind!

¹³Hear, O Lord, my supplication, listen to my cry for protection; do not be deaf to my lamentation. For I dwell with you as an alien – a pilgrim, as all my ancestors have been.

¹⁴Turn from me awhile, that I may find relief, before I depart and be no more.

PSALM 40 (39)

In the Bible I am told to do your will. – May the Lord give us authentic faith by which we listen and submit to his will. Obedience which is not frustration: on the contrary it leads to fullness, to truth: "blessed the one who places his trust in the Lord."

²With resolve I waited for the Lord; he listened and heard me beg.

³Out of the horrid pit he drew me, out of the quagmire in the bog. He settled my feet upon a rock and made my steps steady.

⁴He put a new song in my mouth, a song of praise to our God. Many will see and be awed and put their trust in the Lord.

⁵Blessed is the man who relies on the Lord and does not look to the proud nor go astray after false gods.

⁶How numerous, O Lord my God, are your wonderful deeds! In your marvelous plans for us you are indeed beyond compare! How many they are – if I were to declare, I would be at a loss to recount their number.

⁷Sacrifice and oblation you do not desire; but you have given me an open ear. Burnt offering and sin offering you do not require.

⁸Then I said, "Here I come! as the scroll says of me.

⁹To do your will is my delight, O God. For your law is within my heart."

¹⁰In the congregation I have proclaimed the good news of salvation. My lips, O Lord, I do not seal – you know that very well.

¹¹I have not merely kept within my heart your saving help, but have spoken about it – your deliverance and your faithfulness; I have made no secret of your truth and your kindness in the great congregation.

¹²Do not withhold from me, O Lord, your mercy; let your love and faithfulness preserve me constantly.

¹³For troubles beyond numbering have closed in on me; I am all covered by sins and I cannot see. They are more than the hairs of my head – so numerous that I am losing courage.

¹⁴May it please you, O Lord, to rescue me, to make haste, O Lord, in helping me!

¹⁵May those who seek to put me to death be brought to shame and degradation; may those who desire to see me destroyed be turned back in confusion.

¹⁶May those who taunt me with "Aha, aha!" be filled with shame and consternation.

¹⁷But may all those who seek you rejoice and be glad in you; and may all who love your saving grace continually say, "The Lord is great!"

¹⁸Though I am afflicted and am poor, yet the Lord thinks of me.

You are my help and my saviour – O my God, do not tarry!

¹⁰ In this psalm we have two prayers put together

I have waited for the Lord with great trust. This first part is thanksgiving for unexpected salvation. A man's life develops in the midst of trials and liberations; these put us on the road to the final trial of death in order to be raised to life

He drew me out of the fatal pit – on seeing this, many will look in awe and trust in him. Several expressions in this psalm remind us of Christ's triumph in his Resurrection. If it is a fact that God demands of everyone inner obedience more than external sacrifices, it is only in Christ that Then I said: behold I am coming is perfectly fulfilled.

PSALM 41 (40)

Prayer of an abandoned sick person. – Sick, mocked, betrayed: this is the situation of the one who prays. Perhaps, we know him and he may be at our side awaiting consolation.

²Blessed is he who regards the poor;
the Lord delivers him in time of trouble.

³The Lord protects him, preserves his life, and gives him happiness in the land;
he yields him not to the will of his foes.

⁴The Lord helps him when he gets sick, and heals him of all his ailments.

⁵I have pleaded, "O Lord, have mercy on me; heal me, in spite of all my iniquity."

⁶My enemies ask of me in malice,

⁷"When will he die and his name perish?"

When one of them pays me a visit, he talks emptily with the hidden intent of gathering slanderous gossip.

When he leaves, he goes to disseminate his prattle abroad.

⁸Then all my enemies whisper together, imagining the worst for me:

⁹"The vilest of diseases – that is what his ailment is.
He will never get up again!"

¹⁰Even my most trusted friend, with whom I have shared my food, has lifted his heel against me.

¹¹But you, O Lord, have mercy on me;
lift me up to give them recompense.

¹²This will assure me that I enjoy your favor:
if my enemies do not triumph over me,

¹³if you uphold me in my integrity and let me stand in your presence forever.

¹⁴Praise the Lord, the God of Israel, from all eternity and forever!
Amen. Amen!

PSALM 42 (41)

When shall I go to contemplate the face of the Lord? In exile the psalmist remembers the years of grace.

²As a deer longs for flowing streams, so my soul longs for you, O God.

³My soul thirsts for God, for the living God.
When shall I go and see the face of God?

⁴Day and night my tears have been my food; men say to me, day after day,

"Where is your God?"

⁵Now as I pour out my soul,
I remember this all – how I used to lead the faithful in procession to the house of God, amid shouts of joy and thanksgiving, among the feasting throng.

⁶Why are you so downcast, my soul,
why are you so troubled within me?
Hope in God, for again
I will praise him –
my saviour and my God.

⁷So downcast is my soul, that I remember you:
from the land of Jordan and of Hermon, from Mount Mizar.

⁸Deep calls to deep as your cataracts thunder;
your waves and breakers have gone over me.

⁹By day the Lord directs his love;
by night his song is upon my lips –
a prayer to the God of my life.

¹⁰I say to God, my rock,
"Why have you forgotten me?
Why should I go about mourning, harassed by the enemy?"

¹¹My whole being suffers in mortal agony, as my adversaries taunt me continually.
"Where is your God?"

¹²Why are you so downcast, my soul,
why are you so troubled within me?
Hope in God, for again
I will praise him –
my saviour and my God.

PSALM 43 (42)

The author of this psalm was a servant of the Jerusalem Temple, exiled in Babylon: with nostalgia, he recalls Solomon's magnificent sanctuary already destroyed and the splendour of the liturgies of past days, while the pagans of Babylon proudly show him their gods of gold and marble, and ironically ask him: "Where is your God?"

Fervent calls on God and cries of Continuation of the previous psalm. – This is the fervent prayer which the believer – immersed in an adverse atmosphere – addresses to God in order not to waver in his faith.

¹Vindicate me, O God, and fight for my cause against an ungodly people; deliver me from the wicked and deceitful.

²You are my God, my stronghold.
Why have you cast me out,
when I take refuge in you?
Why should I go about mourning, hope mark the entire psalm as a refrain repeated three times.

Which one of us cannot make this psalm his own? Human progress, however great and beneficial it may be, brings new evils, and besides, it sharpens our desires. We would like to have everything and right now; and we feel unhappy when we are disillusioned; above all, death is at the end of our earthly pilgrimage. So, in the same way as the psalmist, we are, in a way, imprisoned and exiled.

harassed and oppressed by the enemy?

³Send forth your light and your truth;
let them be my guide,
let them take me to your holy mountain, to the place where you reside.

⁴Then will I go to the altar of God, to God, my gladness and delight.
I will praise you with the lyre and harp,
O Lord, my God.

⁵Why are you so downcast, my soul,
why are you so troubled within me?
Hope in God, for again
I will praise him –
my saviour and my God.

PSALM 44 (43)

National lament. – The believing people feel vanquished and they complain to God.

²With our ears, O God, we have heard; our fathers have declared to us the works you did in their days of old – ³how you drove out the nations and put our ancestors in their land, how you battered down the peoples to make room for them.

⁴For it is not with their own sword that they have conquered the land nor have they been victors by their own hand; but it was by your right hand and arm and by the light of your countenance; for you truly loved them.

⁵It was you, my King and my God, who ordained victories for Jacob.

⁶Through you we battered down our foes; through your name we shattered our enemies.

⁷For it is not in my bow that I trust, nor in my sword to make me victorious.

⁸But it is you who have given us victory, you who have brought our adversaries to shame.

⁹It is always in God that we find glory. Forever shall we praise your name.

¹⁰Yet you have now rejected and humbled us; you no longer go forth with our armies.

¹¹You let our enemies drive us back and our adversaries plunder us.

⁴⁴Everywhere and even in "Christian countries," authentic Christians are but a minority in the midst of a mass of people of other religions or having only some kind of vague religiosity. Perhaps, this is why there is a certain nostalgia in evoking other times when all the people as one professed the same faith and all took part in all the religious manifestations.

The situation of the Jews at the time this psalm was written was very similar. They were not in Jerusalem, but in exile in Babylon.

In a poetic contrast, the psalmist opposes that great national catastrophe with the triumphant conquest of Palestine, six centuries before, by the Israelites coming from Egypt under the leadership of Moses and Joshua (2-9).

In 10-17, this humiliated people, express their grief for having not only lost their national independence, but even God himself: the pagans ridicule them in their defeat and God seems to remain silent: he does not work wonders as he had done before to confuse Israel's enemies and to prove he is the only God. Nevertheless, this passionate complaint (24-25) is not desperate since the psalmist is convinced that God is the most powerful and that his love is faithful (27). In fact, God will respond: the Israelites will return to Jerusalem and their religious lives will be purer, more spiritual and more inspired by the hope of the only Saviour.

The same thing happens with us. Despite Christians' responsibility for the present situation, God can bring a greater good out of it. We are less numerous but our faith is more personal and freer and our concept of God is greater and also purer. The Church does not have the same influence in public life as it did in other times; but it is stripped of certain features which were more or less hiding its authentic face.

¹⁴ You have made us the butt of our neighbors' insult, the scorn and laughing-stock of those around us. ¹⁵ You have made us a byword among the nations, a fair game for peoples to shake their heads.

¹⁶ Before me all day long is my disgrace, shame is all over my face, ¹⁷ at the voice of the mocker and reviler, in the presence of the enemy and the avenger.

¹⁸ All this has happened to us, although we have not forgotten you, nor have we been untrue to your covenant.

¹⁹ Our heart has not turned back nor have our steps faltered; ²⁰ yet you have reduced us into a miserable place and covered us completely with deep darkness.

²¹ Had we forgotten the name of our God and stretched forth our hands to an alien god, ²² God would have discovered this, for the secrets of the heart are not hidden from him.

²³ For your sake we are slain all day and accounted as sheep for slaughter.

²⁴ Awake, O Lord! Why are you asleep? Arise! Reject us not forever.

²⁵ Why hide your face from us? Why forget our misery and woes?

²⁶ Our souls are humbled in the dust, our bodies smashed to the ground.

²⁷ Arise! Come to our aid. Deliver us for your kindness' sake.

PSALM 45 (44)

For the King's wedding. – Human love involves a mystery which flows into the very mystery of God. God wants to reveal himself to mankind as a husband to his wife, and this is already fulfilled in the person of Christ.

This psalm may have been written on the occasion of the wedding of a king of Israel with a foreign princess.

But, it may be a figurative way of mixing Israel, the chosen people, to enter fully into the Covenant of their God and spouse, who manifests his presence through his Messianic King, anointed by him (v. 9). Israel comes to the divine wedding, followed by all the nations receiving their teaching about God and about salvation: this is what is expressed in a figurative way in verses 13-16 and also in Is 60-62.

All of this can be applied to the church and also to each and everyone of us. On our baptismal day we were united with Christ and we entered into intimacy with God.

Hear, O daughter, forget your people. When a man marries, he must leave behind previous customs. Those who proclaim the Gospel must let go of their own ways of seeing things and become everything to everyone. Your children will have the place of your fathers. This could be seen as Jesus' promises to ² My heart is moved by an exalted theme as I deliver my ode for the king, my tongue as nimble as a writer's pen.

³ You are the finest among the sons of men, your lips are anointed with grace, for God has blessed you forever.

⁴ Gird your sword upon your thigh, O mighty; array yourself with splendor and majesty.

⁵ Glorious and triumphant, ride on for the cause of truth, virtue and religion. Your right hand will teach you marvelous deeds his apostles who left everything to serve him.

⁶ Sharp are your arrows aimed at the hearts of the king's enemies; nations fall beneath your feet.

⁷ Your divine throne will last forever and ever; a scepter of justice is your scepter.

⁸ You love righteousness and hate wickedness; therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness, above your fellow kings.

Some day God will be everything to everyone, but to come to that, people must forget "their people and their families," that is to say, they must change their thoughts and their customs for those of God.

⁹Your robes are all fragrant with myrrh and aloes and cassia.
Music of strings gladdens your palace adorned and glowing with ivory.

¹⁰Among your ladies of honor are daughters of kings;
at your right hand, in gold of Ophir, stands the queen.

¹¹Listen, O daughter, pay attention; forget your father's house and your nation.

¹²The king is in love with you; honor him, for he is your lord.

¹³The people of Tyre will come with gifts;
the wealthiest nations will seek your favor.

¹⁴All glorious as she enters is the princess in her gold-woven robes.

¹⁵She is led to the king, following behind is her train of virgins.

¹⁶Amid cheers and general rejoicing, they enter the palace of the king.

¹⁷Forget your fathers and think of your sons, you will make them prince throughout the land.

¹⁸I will perpetuate your name through generations;
may you be praised forever by all nations!

PSALM 46 (45)

We will not be afraid if the mountains fall into the depths of the sea. The history of Israel has been quite tormented by inner crises and enemy invasions. Yet it is not a chaotic history, a mere outcome of chance, or of the power of human passions. This history has been guided by the invisible, powerful and loving hand of God.

The very name of Jerusalem in Hebrew includes "peace": the river running through it is a sort of earthly paradise, a symbol of life and fruitfulness. Above all, God dwells there, in the Temple, his dwelling place. Thus, Israel will never die, though the city and the Temple may be destroyed.

God puts an end to war in the whole world. The ancient empires have disappeared. On the contrary, the spiritual Israel, the Church, lives God is with us. – "A river with its streamlets gladdens the city of God." To the troubles expressed in a figurative way in the first stanza, the psalmist opposes a vision of serenity, that of the Holy City, Jerusalem, the Church.

²God is our strength and protection an ever present help in affliction.

³We will not fear, therefore, though the earth be shaken and the mountains plunge into the deepest ocean,

⁴though its waters foam and roar, though the mountains quake and totter.
For with us is the Lord of hosts, the God of Jacob, our stronghold.

⁵There is a river whose streams bring joy to the city of God, the holy place where the Most High dwells.

⁶God is inside, the city cannot fall, for God's help is upon her at the break of day.

on throughout the world; to the end of time the People of God will keep proclaiming the wonders of the Almighty and his plan to love all people and to gather them into an eternal kingdom.

What refers to the church also concerns us. Beyond the troubles of our spiritual lives, the crises of faith, the sins and discouragement, there is God with his gift and his love.

⁷ Kingdoms totter, nations are in turmoil; at the sound of his voice the earth melts away.

⁸ But with us is the Lord of hosts,
the God of Jacob, our refuge.

⁹ Come, see the works of the Lord – the marvelous things he has done in the world.

¹⁰ He has put an end to wars, broken the bows and splintered the spears, set the shields and chariots afire.

¹¹ Keep still, know that I am God.
I am exalted among the nations,
I am exalted over the earth!

¹² With us is the Lord of hosts,
the God of Jacob, our refuge.

PSALM 47 (46)

On their yearly pilgrimage to Jerusalem, the Jews used to contemplate God's dwelling among men. The church is the new Jerusalem, the unshakable city, the center of the world and the pillar of truth. It is in the church that we receive every gift.

To the king of all the nations. – At the end of time the Lord comes to begin his kingdom. Here, he is shown going up to his Temple in Jerusalem. He is no longer the God of a small nation, of a minority church, but all the nations acknowledge him. In some way, this triumphal ascent began with the Ascension.

² Clap your hands, all you peoples; acclaim God with shouts of joy and songs of praise.

³ For the Lord, the Most High, is awe-inspiring;
all over the earth he is a great king.

⁴ He brought peoples under our dominion and gave us authority over the nations.

⁵ He chose our inheritance for us – the pride of Jacob whom he loves!

⁶ God has gone up amid joyful shouts, the Lord amid trumpet blasts.

⁷ Sing praises to God, sing praises!
Sing praises to our King, sing praises!

⁸ God is king of all the earth;
sing to him a hymn of praise.

⁹ God rules over the nations,
God reigns on his holy throne.

¹⁰ The leaders of the nations rally together with the people of the God of Abraham.
For the shields of the earth belong to God who reigns supreme.

PSALM 48 (47)

The Church-Zion: the mountain of God. – Zion is the other name for Jerusalem, the Holy City. This psalm recalls how God favoured and protected it on several occasions. Let believers rejoice: the Lord looks after us.

² Great is the Lord, most worthy of praise in the city of God, his holy mountain.

³ Beautifully elevated, it is the joy of all the earth – Mount Zion in the far north, the city of the great King.

⁴ Here within her lines of defense, God has shown himself to be her fortress.

⁵ The kings assembled together, advanced toward the city.

⁶ But as soon as they saw it, they were astounded; they panicked and took to flight.

⁷ Seized with fear, they trembled, like a woman in travail, ⁸ or like the ships of Tarshish, shattered by a strong wind from the east.

⁹ Just as we have heard, so have we seen, in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God, the city God founded forever.

¹⁰ We meditate on your unfailing love, O God, inside your temple.

¹¹ Your praise reaches to the ends of the earth, as does your name, O God. Your right hand is ever victorious.

¹² Let Mount Zion rejoice, let the villages of Judah be glad, in the fulfillment of your justice.

¹³ Walk around Zion, count her towers, ¹⁴ consider well her ramparts, examine her fortification, that you may tell the next generation ¹⁵ that such is God, our God who will always be our guide.

PSALM 49 (48)

The irresponsibility of the rich.

"Carefully avoid all sorts of greed because even when one has everything, it is not possessions which give life.

² Hear this, all you peoples!
Listen, all you inhabitants of the world

³ high and low together, rich and poor alike!

⁴ Words of wisdom will come from my mouth, an utterance of discernment from my heart.

⁵ To a proverb I will incline my ear, and solve my riddle to the rhythm of my lyre.

⁶ Why should I fear when evil days come, when wicked deceivers ring me round –

⁷ men trusting in their wealth and boasting of their great riches?

⁸ For no one may redeem himself or pay God the ransom for his life.

⁹ For redeeming one's life demands too high a price and no ransom will ever suffice

¹⁰ for him to remain forever alive and never see the grave.

¹¹ For he can see that even wise men die, the fool and the stupid alike pass away,

The Great City fell! All the rulers of the world sinned with her and the merchants of the earth became rich with her wild luxury. O my people, depart from her, for fear you might become an accomplice in her sins. In this city was found the blood of the prophets and the saints, the blood of all those who were murdered on the earth' (Rv 18:2-24).

leaving to others their fortune and wealth.

¹² Their graves are their eternal homes, from generation to generation, no matter how big the tracts of land they own.

¹³ People in wealth are like mute beasts, they understand nothing.

¹⁴ This is the fate of fools who trust in themselves, and those who follow them.

¹⁶ But God will rescue my soul from the grave by receiving me unto himself.

¹⁷ Fear not when a man grows rich, when his power becomes oppressively great.

¹⁸ for nothing will he take when he dies; his wealth and pomp he will leave behind.

¹⁹ Though in his lifetime he was counted blessed, having done well for himself, ²⁰ he will join the generation of his forebears, who will never again see the light.

²¹ People in wealth are like mute beasts, they understand nothing.

PSALM 50 (49)

Serve God with a sincere heart. – God is coming to judge his people. He condemns those who replace the obedience of the heart by offerings and material sacrifices and those who recite the commandments instead of putting them into practice.

² From Zion, perfect in beauty, God shines forth. ³ Our God comes, and is silent no more; before him is a devouring fire, round about him a raging storm.

⁴ He calls to the heavens above and to the earth below, that he may judge his people:

⁵ "Gather before me my faithful ones, who made a covenant with me by sacrifice." ⁶ The heavens proclaim his justice, for God himself has come to judge.

⁷ "Hear, O my people, listen. I will testify against you, O Israel. I am God, your God!

⁸ Not for your sacrifices do I reprove you, for your burnt offerings are ever before me.

⁹ I need not a bull from your stalls, nor a he-goat from your pens.

¹⁰ For I own all animals – all of them that dwell in the forest, all that roam my thousand hills.

¹¹ All the birds of the air I know; all that move in the fields are mine.

¹² I need not tell you if I were hungry, for mine is the world and all that it contains.

¹³ Do I eat the flesh of bulls or drink the blood of goats?

¹⁴ Offer to God a sacrifice of thanks, and fulfill your vows to the Most High.

¹⁵ Call on me in time of calamity; I will deliver you, and you will glorify me."

¹⁶ But God says this is to the wicked: "What right have you to mouth my laws or to talk cant about my covenant?"

¹⁷ You hate my instruction and cast my words behind you.

¹⁸ You join a thief when you meet one; you keep company with adulterers.

¹⁹ You have a mouth of evil and a deceitful tongue. ²⁰ You speak ill of your brother, and slander your own mother's son.

²¹ Because I have been silent while you did all these things, you thought I was also like you. Now I am rebuking you; I am making this charge against you.

²² Give this a thought, you who forget God, lest I tear you to pieces and there be no one to help you.

²³ He who gives thanks and praise as his sacrifice honors me, and to him who prepares his way uprightly, I will show the salvation of God."

PSALM 51 (50)

For some people – including Christians – the word sin is outdated. Sin is seen only as a weakness in people or, something coming from evil social structures and thus those with the solution to sin are doctors, psychiatrists, sociologists, economists and the politicians.

Nevertheless, deep down at the center, we experience the presence of a negative force, a rejection of the light and of self-surrender. This force is not something external, it is part of our "self" and we are responsible for it. Whenever we are guided by it instead of following the call of the light, its power grows stronger and more demanding.

Have mercy on me, O Lord, in your kindness. This psalm which deals with David's adultery (2 Sam 11), expresses the feeling of personal guilt simply and clearly (5-6), even if it is toned down, granted man's deficient moral condition from the time of his birth (7). Moreover, we do not know ourselves: God alone can teach us self-knowledge.

Yet, with similar assurance, the psalmist proclaims his hope: men are not corrupt; purity of heart is not an impossible dream since beyond all evil there is God's forgiveness; beyond all evil forces, there is the Power of God. God who created man by giving him his spirit can also recreate and renew him (12-13): the only requirement is for man to acknowledge his sinfulness since God wants the truth (8). God can pound the heart

Have mercy on me, O Lord. – Let us admit to our sin before the God of truth. Our humiliation will not be lacking in hope since we know that God can create a new heart in us.

³ Have mercy on me, O God:

In your constant love, in your great compassion, blot out my sin.

⁴ Wash me thoroughly of my guilt;
cleanse me of my evil.

⁵ For I acknowledge my wrongdoings and always have my sins in mind.

⁶ I have sinned against you alone;
what is evil in your sight I have done.

You are right when you pass sentence and blameless in your judgement.

⁵ For indeed I was born guilt-ridden, a sinner from my mother's womb.

⁸ Since you desire truth in the heart teach me wisdom in my inmost part.

⁹ Cleanse me with hyssop, wash me whiter than snow.

¹⁰ Fill me with joy and gladness;
let the bones you crashed find happiness.

¹¹ Turn your face away from my sins and blot out all my offenses.

¹² Create in me, O God, a pure heart; give me a new and upright spirit.

¹³ Do not cast me out of your presence nor take your Holy Spirit away from me.

(18) to bring about tears of sorrow, just as Moses struck the rock in the desert, to provide the people with the water they were lacking. This is the sacrifice pleasing to God, much more than the external penitential practices.

This entire psalm breathes an atmosphere of serenity (10-14) because God does not wish the sinner to die, but to live. And the sinner, forgiven and assured of God's constant forgiveness, will be the witness of divine mercy to an embittered and pessimistic world.

The Gospel merely gives this admirable psalm a more precise content. Jesus' cross is both the sign that sin exists and that it is destroyed at the root. Jesus came for sinners: unfortunate is the one who believes he is just! Whenever we receive the sacrament of forgiveness in the Church, we encounter Jesus himself, the Saviour who intercedes and the Father who forgives. Every one of our confessions is a joyful celebration of the merciful God, and the source of renewal.

¹⁴ Give me back the joy of your salvation and sustain me with a willing spirit.
¹⁵ Then I will show your ways to wrongdoers and teach conversion to sinners.

¹⁶ Deliver me from the guilt of blood, and of your justice I shall sing aloud.

¹⁷ O Lord, open my lips, and I will declare your praise.

¹⁸ Sacrifice gives you no pleasure; if I were to give a burnt offering, you would not take delight in it.

¹⁹ O God, my sacrifice is a broken spirit and a contrite heart which you will not despise.

²⁰ Shower Zion with your favor; rebuild the walls of Jerusalem.

²¹ Then you will take delight in fitting sacrifices, in whole burnt offerings, and bulls offered on your altar.

PSALM 52 (51)

¹ Why boast of your wickedness, strong man? Why make a boast of it all the day long ² that you are plotting destruction?

Your tongue is like a sharp razor; ³ you love evil more than the good, and falsehood more than the truth.

⁴ You love words that inflict harm. O you deceitful tongue!

⁵ But God will bring you down to ruin; he will tear you away from your tent; he will uproot you from the land of the living.

⁶ The good will take fear at the sight; they will say concerning his fate:

⁷ "This is the man who would not rely on God but put his trust in ill-gotten wealth and sought strength in others' destruction."

⁸ But I am as a green olive tree that thrives in the house of God; I trust in God's unfailing love forever and ever.

⁹ I will praise you forever for what you have done, and proclaim your good name before your faithful ones.

PSALM 53 (52)

² The fool says in his heart, "There is no

God." They are corrupt, their ways wicked; not one of them does good.

³ From heaven God looks down upon the sons of men, to see if there is anyone who seeks God and understands.

⁵ Will these evil doers never learn? They devour my people just as they devour food and never call on God.

⁶ And so there they are – afraid when there is nothing to be feared. For God will scatter their bones; they will be put to shame because God has rejected them.

⁷ Would that Israel's salvation came forth from Zion! When God restores his people's fortune, Jacob will be glad, Israel will rejoice.

PSALM 54 (53)

³ By your name, O God, save me; by your might vindicate me.

⁴ Hear my prayer, O God; listen to the words of my mouth.

⁵ Strangers are against me – ruthless men seeking my life, men without regard for God.

⁶See, God is my helper; the Lord upholds my life.

⁷May their evil plots rebound on them; in your faithfulness destroy them!

⁸I will offer sacrifice to you freely; I will praise your name, O Lord, for it is good.

⁹You have delivered me from calamity and I look down on my foes.

PSALM 55 (54)

Prayer of the persecuted. – The supremacy of money, violence, luxury, prostitution, the exploitation of men. In the midst of a perverted society, the just one feels cornered and persecuted. Cast your care upon the Lord.

²Listen to my prayer, O God, do not be deaf to my pleading; ³give heed to me and answer me.

I am greatly troubled ⁴at the outcry of the enemy and the clamour of the wicked.

I am distraught with the way they revile me and persecute me in their fury.

⁵My heart is in agony within me; the terrors of death fall upon me. ⁶I tremble in fear – horror has got the better of me.

⁷I said, "If I had wings like a dove, I would fly away and be at rest;

⁸I would seek a home in the desert ⁹or hurry to find a cave for shelter from the tempest."

¹⁰O Lord, shatter their plans. In the city I see strife and violence; ¹¹day and night they prow about its walls, while inside evil prevails.

¹²Forces of tyranny and treachery are at work undermining the city.

¹³If it were a rival insulting me, I could bear with him; if it were a foe in pursuit of me, I could hide from him.

¹⁴But it is you, an equal of mine, my bosom friend, my companion ¹⁵whose fellowship I have enjoyed as we walked together in the house of the Lord.

¹⁶Let death come to them suddenly, let them go down to the grave alive, for within them evil and mischief thrive.

¹⁷But in God I seek refuge; the Lord will rescue me.

¹⁸Morning and evening, even at noon, I cry out my grievance and moan; surely he will hear my voice.

¹⁹He will deliver me in safety from the battle waged against me, no matter how strong my opponents are:

²⁰God who is enthroned forever will hear me and humble them, for they never change their ways nor do they stand in awe of God.

²¹My friend has attacked his associates and has violated his pact with them.

²²His words were smoother than butter, yet war was in his heart; his utterances were more soothing than oil yet they were swords ready and drawn.

²³Place your burden on the Lord, and he will sustain you, for he never lets the upright fall.

²⁴But you, O God, will cast the wicked into the pit of corruption; blood thirsty men and traitors will not live out half their days. But for my part, in you alone, O Lord, I trust.

PSALM 56 (55)

The just one will not fall. – Prayer of the millions of oppressed whose lives have not been shining with hope: "You, O Lord, have gathered our tears."

²O God, show your mercy to me, for my foes are in hot pursuit of me; they press their attack on every side.

³My accusers pursue me all day long, many people attack me.

⁴But when I am afraid, O Mighty One, I put my trust in you, ⁵With God whose word I praise, with God whom I trust without fear – what can mortal men do against me?

⁶All day long they hatch their evil plans, plotting mischief to injure my cause.

⁷They conspire and lurk around, watching my every move, bent upon taking my life.

⁸They must not be allowed to go unpunished; therefore, O God, in your fury, bring the nations down.

⁹You have a record of my lament; my tears are stored in your wineskin. Are they not written in your scroll?

¹⁰My enemies will turn back when I call on you for help; by this I will know that God is with me.

¹¹With God whose word I praise, ¹²with God in whom I trust without fear – what can mortal men do against me?

¹³I am bound to you by my vows, O God; accept then my thanksgiving. ¹⁴For you have rescued my soul from death and even my feet from stumbling, that I may walk in God's presence in the light of the living.

PSALM 57 (56)

²Have mercy on me, O God, have mercy, for my soul takes refuge in you; I will shelter in your wings' shadow till disaster has passed away.

³I call on God the Most High, on God who has done everything for me, ⁴to send from heaven a saviour and put my oppressors to shame. May God send me his kindness and love.

⁵I lie prostrate in the midst of lions that greedily devour the sons of men, their teeth pointed as spears and arrows, their tongues as sharpened swords.

⁶Be exalted, O God, above the heavens! Your glory be over all the earth!

⁷They have set a snare for my steps; my soul was bowed down in distress. They have dug a pit along my path, but they themselves have fallen in it.

⁸My heart is steadfast, O God, my heart is steadfast. I will sing and make music.

⁹Awake, my soul, awake, O harp and lyre! I will awake the dawn.

¹⁰I will give thanks to you, O Lord, among the peoples; I will sing praise to you among the nations.

¹¹For great is your love as the heavens, and your faithfulness beyond the clouds. ¹²Be exalted, O God, above the heavens! Your glory be over the earth!

PSALM 58 (57)

God judges rulers. – God denounces the leaders who establish and preserve a corrupt order instead of being the instruments of his justice.

²Rulers of men, are your decrees just, and are your judgments upright?

³No, you willfully commit crimes; you deal in violence and corruption.

⁴Even from the womb the wicked go astray; even from birth they are wayward liars.

⁵They are venomous like deadly adders, deaf as the snake ⁶that stubbornly stops its ear so as not to hear the charmer's voice casting spells.

⁷Break the teeth in their mouths, O God; tear out the fangs of the lions, O Lord.

⁸Let them vanish like spilled water; let them be trodden down like grass that withers.

⁹Let them be like snails that sink into slime, like untimely births that never see the sun.¹⁰ Before your pots can feel the heat of burning thorns, green or dry – let them be swept away!

¹¹The upright will rejoice when they are avenged; they will bathe their feet in the blood of the wicked.

¹²Then will men say, "Surely the righteous are rewarded; surely there is a God who gives judgment on earth."

PSALM 59 (58)

²Deliver me from my enemies, O God, from those who rise up against me.

³Deliver me from evildoers; rescue me from the bloodthirsty.

⁴Look, they lie in wait for my life – fierce men conspiring against me, for no fault of mine, O Lord.

⁵I have done them no wrong, yet they have prepared to attack me. Rise and help me, look on my plight, ⁶O lord God of hosts, God of Israel! Arise and punish all the pagans; have no mercy on wicked traitors.

⁷Each evening they return, howling like dogs, prowling about the city, ⁸saying that not even God hears or sees their wicked deeds.

⁹But you, O Lord, laugh at them; you look down upon the wicked.

¹⁰O my Strength, I look up to you, for you, O God, are my fortress.

¹¹My loving God will come to my aid and show me how my enemies fall.

¹²But slay them not, lest my people forget; just shake them by your power, and bring them down, O Lord, our shield.

¹³For the sins of their mouths, for the words of their lips, let them be caught in their arrogance.

For the curses and lies they utter, ¹⁴destroy them in your vengeance, destroy them till they are no more. Then it will be known that God rules over Jacob to the ends of the earth.

¹⁵Each evening let them return, howling like dogs, prowling about the city, ¹⁶roaming about for food, growling and never filled.

¹⁷But I will sing of your might; in the morning I will sing of your love. For you have been to me a fortress, a refuge in time of distress. ¹⁸O my Strength, I will sing praises to you, for you, O God, are my stronghold; you are a loving God.

⁵⁸The rulers and those in charge of social justice are called "gods" because they represent God himself in the exercise of their functions.

PSALM 60 (59)

Petition after a defeat.

³O God, you have rejected us and broken our defenses; you have been angry, but restore us.

⁴You have shaken the land and torn it open; mend its cracks for it totters.

⁵You have made your people suffer; you have given us wine that makes us stagger.

⁶You set the banner behind us and your own fled from bow and arrow.

⁷Help us and listen to us, that your beloved may be rescued.

⁸God has spoken in his sanctuary: "In triumph I will divide up Shechem and parcel out the Valley of Succoth.

⁹Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine; Ephraim is my helmet, Judah my sceptre.

¹⁰Moab is my washbasin; upon Edom I cast my sandal; over Philistia I shout in triumph."

¹¹Who will take me to the fortified city? Who will lead me to Edom?

¹²Have you not rejected us, O God? You no longer go with our armies.

¹³Give us aid against the foe, for the help of man is not worth a straw.

¹⁴With God we will attain victory; he will crush the enemy for us.

PSALM 61 (60)

²Hear my cry, O God; listen to my prayer.

³I call to you from the ends of the earth; I call to you as my heart grows faint. Lead me to the rock too high for me, ⁴for you are my refuge, a strong tower against the enemy.

⁵Let me dwell in your tent forever and take refuge in your wings' shelter.

⁶Indeed you have heard my vows, O God, and the wish of those who fear your name.

⁷Increase the days of the king's life: prolong his years for many generations.

⁸May he be ever enthroned in God's presence; let your love and truth watch over him.

⁹So I will ever sing praises to your name and fulfill my vows day after day.

PSALM 62 (61)

God spoke once; twice I heard him. This is a Hebrew expression for a stronger affirmation. God has appeared as the permanent truth, as a power above all human resources. Our century has witnessed the collapse of many myths, systems, deceptive values and empires. The one who created man to share his own life and happiness with him forever, knows the way man must follow to come to the end of his path.

My soul rests in God alone. – Believers themselves feel the attraction of money, power and pleasure. But, in pretending to respond to our hopes, all these things are deceptive since they cannot fill our hearts. They are powerless and fleeting, while God is the ultimate fullness and no one can destroy him.

²My soul finds rest in God alone; from him comes my salvation.

³He alone is my rock, my protection; with him as my stronghold, I shall not be overcome.

⁴How long will you assault a man, all of you, to bring him down – like a leaning wall, a tottering fence?

⁴Indeed they plan to topple me. They take pleasure in telling lies; with their mouths they bless, but in their hearts they curse.

⁶My soul finds rest in God alone; from him comes my hope.

⁷He alone is my rock, my protection; with him as my stronghold, I shall not be overcome.

⁸On God rests my salvation and my honour; he is my refuge, my mighty rock.

⁹Trust in him at all times, my people;

before him pour out your hearts;
God is our refuge.

¹⁰Men of low rank are only a breath, important men, merely an illusion.
If weighed together they are nothing, even lighter than a puff of wind.

¹¹Do not set your heart on extortion, nor your hopes upon corrupt gains.
Even if your wealth accumulates, keep your heart detached.

¹²God has spoken once, but I have heard it twice:
that you, O God, are powerful, and only with you, O Lord, does man succeed.
you reward each one according to his deeds.

PSALM 63 (62)

There are more suicides and rebellious youth in the richest and most developed countries: men grow tired of everything. Even the most profound, pure and lasting human love does not fully satisfy because the shadow of death looms over it. Only he who is the fountain of living water and not "broken cisterns" (Jer 2:13) can satisfy men's fundamental thirst. St. Augustine expressed it in this famous phrase: "You have made us for yourself, O Lord, and our hearts will not rest until they rest in you."

The psalmist uses suggestive images to express his desire for communion with God: he wants to embrace God; to be in the shadow of his wings; to lean on his right hand. This desire is the basic spiritual feeling. Jesus, and Mary also in the "Magnificat", proclaim blessed those who hunger and thirst for God, and cursed those who have their fill.

This marvelous psalm has many spiritual applications. Alas for us if we stop being pilgrims, always going further, and looking for more! True love is limitless and this is precisely why it always leaves us unsatisfied. Blessed are we, if at certain times in our lives, in meditating on God's Word, praying or worshipping, in generously responding to divine calls, in loving our neighbor unselfishly, we experience God through the feelings revealing him: peace, joy, security and inner conviction, fullness. And we are even more blessed if, because of our serenity and hope in the midst of the difficulties and trials of life, we give to others the love and desire for God.

My soul thirsts for you. – However desirable all the riches of the world may be, men will always find themselves in the desert until they have discovered the fountain of living water. God himself.

²O God, you are my God, it is you I seek;
for you my body longs and my soul thirsts, as a dry and weary land without water.

³Thus have I looked upon you in the sanctuary, observing your power and your glory.

⁴Because your love is better than life, my lips will glorify you.

⁵I will bless you as long as I live, lift up my hands and call on your name.

⁶As with the richest food my soul will feast; my mouth will praise you with joyful lips.

⁷When I remember you on my bed
I think of you throughout the night,

⁸for you have been my help;
I sing in the shadow of your wings.

⁹To you my soul clings as your right hand upholds me.

¹⁰Those who are after my life will go down to the depths of the earth;

¹¹they will be delivered over to the sword, and become prey for jackals.

¹²But the king will rejoice in God.
All who swear by God's name will glory, but all mouths that speak falsely will be silenced.

PSALM 64 (63)

Slanderers will be punished.

²Hear, O God, my voice in lament; protect my life from the enemy's threat.

³Hide me from the scheming of the wicked, from the corrupt designs of evil-plotters, ⁴who sharpen their tongues like swords and aim their bitter words like arrows, ⁵shooting at the innocent from cover, shooting suddenly without fear.

⁶Determined to carry out their evil purpose, they discuss how to lay their snares, saying, "No one will see us."

⁷So they contrive a wicked scheme, and hide the plot they hatch.

How cunning are men's mind and heart!

⁸But God will shoot his arrows at them; suddenly they will be struck down ⁹and brought to ruin by their own tongue; all who see them will shake their heads.

¹⁰All mankind will stand in awe;
they will proclaim the works of God and ponder on what he has done.

¹¹The upright will rejoice and take refuge in the Lord; the upright of heart will glory in him

PSALM 65 (64)

You visit the earth and fill it with abundance. – The psalmist gives thanks for the rich harvest of a fruitful year. This earthly prosperity reminds us of another one which God lavishes upon his friends. For the Church as well, there are spring rains, summer harvest and songs of happiness.

²Praise belongs to you in Zion, O God; here people come to fulfil their vows.

³All mortals ascend to you,
O God, who answers prayers.

⁴Though our evils prevail over us, you forgive our sins.

⁵Blessed is the man you choose and take to dwell in your courts.
satisfy us with the goodness of your house, your holy temple.

⁶With awesome deeds of righteousness you answer us, O God our saviour, hope of all the ends of the earth and of the distant islands.

⁷By your power the mountains were formed.

⁸By your strength the seas are becalmed;
you lull their roaring waves and the turmoil of the nations.

⁹Those who dwell at the ends of the earth stand in awe of your marvelous deeds.
You make joyful the dawn and the coming of dusk.

¹⁰You water the land and care for it, enriching it with natural resources.
God's streams are filled with water;

people are provided with grain;
for it is you who have ordained it so.

¹¹ You drench the furrows in the land;
you level the ridges,
you soften the soil with showers and bless its crops.

¹² You crown the year with your goodness;
abundance is to be seen everywhere.

¹³ The deserts have become pasture land, the hills are clothed with gladness,

¹⁴ the meadows covered with flocks, the valleys decked with grain – shouting and singing together with joy.

PSALM 66 (65)

The psalmist knows that God is not only the creator of nature, but he also protects his people in the midst of a hostile world, and he remembers his saving wonders.

We give you thanks, Lord, Almighty God, because you have begun your reign. The nations had become furious, but then came your anger, the moment to judge the dead, to reward your servants the prophets, the saints and all those who honor your Name, and to destroy those who were destroying the earth. (Rv 11:17-18).

Thanksgiving after the struggle. – On behalf of everyone, the community leader gives thanks to God who freed his people from their trials.

Shout with joy to God, all you on earth;
² sing to the glory of his name; proclaim his glorious praise.

³ Say to God, "How great are your deeds!
How formidable is your power that makes your enemies cower!"

⁴ All the earth bows down to you, making music in praise of you, singing in honour of your name,"

⁵ Come and see what God has done, how great his works for men.

⁶ He has turned the sea into dry land, and men passed through the river on foot.
Let us therefore, rejoice in him.

⁷ He rules by his might forever, his eyes keeping watch on the peoples, his arm holding the rebels in check.

⁸ Praise our God, O nations, let the sound of his praise be heard, ⁹ for he has preserved us among the living and kept our feet from stumbling.

¹⁰ You have tested us, O God;
you have refined us like silver.

¹¹ You have given us into the snare;
you have burdened us with disgrace

¹² and allowed a wicked man to rule over us and we have gone through fire and water, but you have brought us to safety at last.

¹³ I will bring offerings to your house in fulfillment of the vows ¹⁴ I made when assailed by troubles.
¹⁵ I will offer holocausts of fatlings, sending up smoke of burning rams, and a sacrifice of goats and bulls.
¹⁶ All you who fear God, come and listen;
let me tell you what he has done.
¹⁷ I cried aloud to him, extolling him with my tongue.
¹⁸ If in my heart I had nurtured wickedness, then he would not have heard.
¹⁹ But truly God has listened; to my prayer he has given heed.
²⁰ May God be blessed!
He has not rejected my prayer;
nor withheld his love from me.

PSALM 67 (66)

All the nations will know you.

² May God be gracious and bless us;
may he let his face shine upon us.
³ May your way be known on earth and your salvation among the nations.
⁴ May the peoples praise you, O God, may all the peoples praise you!
⁵ May the nations rejoice and sing gladly, for you rule the peoples justly and guide the nations with equity.
⁶ May the peoples, praise you, O God,
may all the peoples praise you!
⁷ The land has given its harvest;
God, our God, has blessed us.
⁸ May God always bless us, and may he always be feared to the very ends of the earth.

PSALM 68 (67)

Triumphal procession of God, the victor. – To believers, the history of the Church seems like a new triumphal procession. The Risen Christ, present in her midst through his Spirit, leads her to heaven, where he has prepared a place for her.

² Arise, O God, scatter your enemies; let your foes flee before you.
³ As smoke is blown by the wind, so blow them away; as wax melts before the fire, so let the wicked perish before you.

⁴ But let the righteous be glad and exult before God;

let them be full of joy.

⁵Sing to God, sing praises to his name; extole him who rides upon the clouds; the Lord is his name. Rejoice in his presence.

⁶Father of orphans and protector of widows – such is our God.

⁷He gives shelter to the homeless, leads out prisoners to prosperity, but lets the rebels live in an aridland.

⁸O God, when you went forth to lead your people through the desert, ⁹the earth trembled, the heavens poured down rain, at the presence of God, the God of Israel, the One of Sinai.

¹⁰You gave rain in abundance to comfort your weary children.

¹¹Your people found a dwelling, and from your bounty, O God, you provided for the needy.

¹²The Lord has sent good news; he tells his numerous army, ¹³"The kings and their armies flee, yes, they flee, they flee!"

¹⁴Women at home divide the spoils, the wings of a dove are covered with silver, its pinions with shining gold.

¹⁵When the Lord routed the kings, snow fell on the Dark Mountain.

¹⁶O mighty mountain of Bashan, high and rugged mountain, ¹⁷why look with envy upon the mountain where God chooses to reign, where the Lord will dwell forever?

¹⁸With myriads of his powerful chariots, the Lord came from Sinai into his sanctuary.

¹⁹He ascended the high mountain, leading captives in his train, taking men as tributes, even rebels, to his dwelling.

²⁰Blessed be the Lord, God our saviour, who daily bears our burdens!

²¹Ours is a God who saves; our Lord lets us escape from death.

²²But he crushes the heads of his enemies, the hairy crowns of the criminals. ²³The Lord said, "I will bring them back from Bashan, I will bring them back from the depths of the sea, ²⁴that you may bathe your feet in blood, and the tongues of your dogs may have their share of your foes."

²⁵I will remember the procession of my God, as they came into the sanctuary: ²⁶the singers in front, the musicians last, between them maidens playing tambourines.

²⁷Praise God in the great congregation, praise the Lord, fount of Israel.

²⁸There in the lead is the least of them, the little tribe of Benjamin; the princes of Judah in their throng; the princes of Naphtali, and of Zebulun.

²⁹Summon your power, O God; show the strength you have wielded for us.

³⁰At your temple in Jerusalem, kings will come to you with gifts.

³¹Rebuke the beast that dwells in the reeds, the herd of bulls and calves of any people. Humble them; let them bring gold and silver. Scatter the nations who delight in war.

³²Let wealth come from Egypt; let Ethiopia extend its hands to God.

³³Sing to God, O kingdoms of the world; sing praises to the Lord, ³⁴to him who rides the ancient heavens and speaks in the voice of thunder.

³⁵Proclaim the might of God; his majesty is over Israel, his power is in the skies.

⁶⁶This psalm used to be sung in the processions going up to the Jerusalem temple. The faithful know that God is among them, and the procession becomes the entrance of the triumphant God in his temple. This explains the images we find in his hymn.

The Lord God crosses the desert from Sinai to the Holy Land and his wonders touch nature itself. Enemy kings are defeated: this refers to Deborah's victory at the torrent of Kishon (see Jgs 4). Then, the psalmist recalls the choosing of God's Mountain, Jerusalem. It concludes with a vision of the future filled with hope: the God who rides on the clouds will be revealed to all the nations.

³⁶ Awesome is God in his sanctuary. The God of Israel gives power and strength to his people. Blessed be God!

PSALM 69 (68)

The waters reach up to my neck. – The servant of God, almost sinking in the waters of suffering and death, asks the Lord for help. Christ applied various words of this prayer to himself. After being liberated from death, he will be the happiness of all those who look for God.

² Save me, O God, for the waters have come up to my neck. ³ I am sunk in the miry depths where there is no foothold; into deep waters I have come, swept and engulfed by the flood.

⁴ I am weary from calling for help; my throat is hoarse and parched. My eyes have grown dim looking for my God.

⁵ More than the hairs of my head are those who hate me for no reason; mighty are those who attack me, many are my enemies without cause. What I did not steal I am forced to restore.

⁶ O God, you know my folly; my faults are not hidden from you.

⁷ Let me not bring disgrace to those who hope in you, O Lord God of hosts; may I cause no dishonour to those who seek you, O God of Israel – ⁸ since I am held in contempt for your sake, and shame has covered my face.

⁹ I have become a stranger to my brothers, a foreigner to my own mother's sons.

¹⁰ Zeal for your house consumes me as a fire and those who insult you insult me as well.

¹¹ When I humbled myself with fasting, I was scorned for it.

¹² When I put on sackcloth, I was made a laughing-stock.

¹³ I have become the talk of those who sit at the gates, the topic of the drunkards' songs.

¹⁴ But I pray to you, O Lord, at a time most favourable to you. In your great love, O God, answer me with your unfailing help.

¹⁵ Rescue me lest I sink in the mire; deliver me from my enemies and from the deep waters.

¹⁶ Let not the flood engulf me, nor the deep suck me in, nor the pit close its mouth upon me.

¹⁷ In your unfailing love, O Lord, answer me; in the abundance of your mercy, turn to me.

¹⁸ Hide not your face from your servant; answer me at once for I am in distress.

¹⁹ Come and rescue me; from the snares of my enemies, set me free.

²⁰ You know the disgrace I suffer, and you know all my oppressors.

²¹ Dishonour has driven me to despair; I looked for sympathy and there was none, for comforters and there was no one.

²² They gave me poison for food; they gave me vinegar to drink.

²³ Let their own table be a snare for them; let their sacrificial feasts be a trap.

²⁴ Let them be blind so they will not see; let their loins be stricken with palsy.

²⁵ Pour out your fury upon them, and let your burning anger overtake them.

²⁶ Make their camp desolate; let no one dwell in their tents, ²⁷ for they persecute the one you have wounded.

²⁸ Charge them with crime upon crime, and do not acquit them.

²⁹ Blot them out of the book of life, and do not enroll them among the upright.

³⁰ But I myself am wounded and in pain; let your salvation, O God, lift me up.

³¹ I will praise the name of God in song; I will glorify him with thanksgiving.

³² This will please the Lord more than an ox or a bull with horns and divided hooves.

³³ Let the oppressed witness this and be glad. You who seek God, may your hearts be revived.

³⁴ For the Lord hears the needy and does not despise those in captivity.

³⁵ Let heaven and earth praise him, the seas and whatever moves in them.

³⁶ For God will save Zion and rebuild the cities of Judah.

People will settle there and possess it; ³⁷ the children of his servants will inherit it, and those who love his name will dwell in it.

PSALM 70 (69)

During persecution.

² Be pleased, O God, to rescue me! Make haste, O Lord, to help me!

³ Let those who seek my destruction be put to shame and confusion. Let those who desire my fall be turned back like fools.

⁴ Let those who say "Aha, Aha!" to me feel shame and anxiety.

⁵ May all who seek you be glad and rejoice in you. May those who love your saving power say ever more, "Great is God!"

⁶ But I am afflicted and needy; hasten to me, O God, my help and my deliverer. O Lord, do not delay!

PSALM 71 (70)

Prayer of an old man. – We will have a better knowledge of the mercy of God at the end of our lives and it will be easy for us to remember the wonders he worked for us. Let us implore God to grant us true consolation when our present lives end.

¹ In you, O Lord, I seek refuge; let me not be disgraced.

² In your justice deliver me, turn your ear to me and save me! ³ Be my rock of refuge, a stronghold to give me safety, for you are my rock and my fortress.

⁴ Rescue me, O my God, from the hand of the wicked, from the grasp of the cruel and violent.

⁵ For you, O Lord, have been my hope, my trust, O God, from my youth.

⁶ I have relied on you from birth; from my mother's womb you brought me forth. My praise is of you continually.

⁷ I have become like a portent to many, but you are my strong refuge.

⁸ My mouth is filled with your praise, announcing your glory day by day.

⁹ Do not cast me off in my old age, do not desert me when my strength fails.

¹⁰ For my enemies speak ill of me; those after my life hatch their conspiracy.

¹¹ They say, "God has forsaken him; let us pursue and seize him, for there is no one to rescue him."

¹² O God, be not far from me; my God, make haste to help me!

¹³ Let my accusers be destroyed in shame; let those who seek my ruin be covered with disgrace and scorn.

¹⁴ But I shall always hope and praise you more and more.

¹⁵ My lips will tell of your righteousness, of your salvation day by day, though its greatness is beyond me.

¹⁶ I will come to your strength, O Lord, and announce justice that is yours alone.

¹⁷ You have taught me from my younger days and I proclaim your marvels still.

¹⁸ So when I grow old and have grey hair, do not leave me, O God; give me enough time to declare your might to the next generation, your power to all who come.

¹⁹ Your justice, O God, reaches to heaven; you have done great things. Who is like you, O God?

²⁰ You have sent me hardship and misery, but once more you will revive me; from the depths of the earth you will bring me up again.

²¹ You will increase my honour, and comfort me more and more.

²² I will praise you with the harp for your faithfulness, O my God; will sing your praise with the lyre, C. Holy One of Israel.

²³ My lips will rejoice, and like wise my soul which you have rescued.

²⁴ I will sing of your justice the whole day long, for those who sought to do me harm have been confused and put to shame.

PSALM 72 (71)

The King of Peace. – The ideal kingdom described here will never be achieved here below, but the Risen Lord will inaugurate it at the end time. Yet, we Christians must discover the signs of the coming of the Kingdom in this world: humankind is moving toward its unification while the longing for justice and peace for all men and all nations, becomes stronger.

This psalm is the joyful manifestation of the King of Peace who "brings good news to the poor" (Luke 4:18). He will defend the right of the little people, he will free the humble, help the weak and there will be an abundance of wheat for all. These words reflect universal longings and speak to our times. We are a long way from the Universal Charter of Human Rights being a reality: many people do not have a standard of living and culture enabling them to be free and responsible for themselves.

He will free the poor when he cries out. This, obviously, does not mean that men should passively wait for the beginning of this Rule in our world. God is so considerate of men, created in his image, that he wants to associate us to all his works, including the realization of the eternal city. This will, naturally, be a gift from God, but not purely a gift as was the appearance of the universe, for it will be the crowning of all that men have begun to achieve on earth, through their efforts to build a more fraternal society. In order to believe in the possibility of this eternal city, men must already see here, in the earthly city, an outline of the other one.

O God, endow the king with your justice, the royal son with your righteousness.

² May he rule your people justly and your afflicted ones compassionately.

³ Let the mountains bring prosperity, and the hills peace and integrity.

⁴ May he defend the cause of the poor, deliver the children of the needy, and crush the oppressor.

⁵ May he endure as the sun and as the moon through all generations.

⁶ May he be like rain falling on the fields, like showers watering the earth.

⁷ May justice flower in his days, and peace abound till the moon be no more.

⁸ May he reign from sea to sea, from the River to the ends of the earth.

⁹ May his foes be crushed before him, and his enemies lick the dust.

¹⁰ May the kings of Tarshish and the islands render him tribute, the kings of Sheba and Seba bring gifts,

¹¹ all kings bow down to him, and all nations serve him.

¹² He delivers the needy who call on him, the afflicted with no one to help them.

¹³ His mercy is upon the weak and the poor, to whom he is a protector.

¹⁴ He rescues them from oppression and strife for their life is precious to him.

¹⁵ May he live long, may gold from Sheba be given him.
May people always pray for him, and blessings be invoked for him all day.

¹⁶ May grain abound throughout the land, waving and rustling as in Lebanon;
may cities teem with people.

¹⁷ May his name endure forever;
may his name be as lasting as the sun.
All nations will be blessed through him, and he will be blessed by all people.

¹⁸ Praised be the Lord, God of Israel, who alone works so marvelously.

¹⁹ Praised be his glorious name forever;
may the whole earth be filled with his glory!
Amen. Amen.

^a This concludes the prayers of David, son of Jesse.

PSALM 73 (72)

Wait for the end says the psalmist. Why have I been honest? asks the father of a family who cannot rise above poverty and who feels insulted by the luxury of those who became rich at the expense of others.

Suddenly, they are destroyed! The wicked will vanish while God leads his friends to share in his glory.

These are the ones who survived the great persecution. The one sitting on the throne will protect them: never again will they suffer from hunger or thirst, nor will they be burdened by the blazing sun or wind. Because the Lamb who is sitting on the throne will take them to the fountain of living waters and God will wipe away their tears' (Rv 7:14-17)

Why are the wicked successful? – Our faith almost weakens when we see the wicked succeed in all aspects of life: the violent, those without scruples, those who have the money to corrupt, those who are masters of deceit.

¹ Surely God is good to the virtuous, to the clean of heart.

² But, as for me, I almost stumbled,
I nearly lost my foothold,

³ because I was envious of the arrogant, when I saw them prosper in their wickedness.

⁴ For they suffer no pain;
they are strong and sound of body,

⁵ free from troubles common to mortals;
they are not stricken by human ills.

⁶ That is why pride becomes their necklace, and violence the robe that covers them.

⁷ Evil comes from their callous hearts, boundless evil from their corrupt minds.

⁸ They scoff and speak with malice, and in their arrogance they threaten oppression.

⁹ Their mouths defy the heavens and their tongues dictate on earth.
¹⁰ People, therefore, look up to them and lap up every word they utter.
¹¹ "How will God ever find out?" they say.
 "Is everything known to the Most High?"
¹² Such are the wicked – always carefree while they rake in riches.
¹³ In vain have I kept my heart clean and washed my hands in innocence.
¹⁴ All day long I have been stricken and punished every morning."
¹⁵ Had I spoken as they do,
 I would have been unworthy of belonging to your children.
¹⁶ Although I tried to understand this,
 it seemed to me a difficult task, ¹⁷ until I entered the sanctuary of God.
 Only then was I enlightened and I perceived their approaching doom.
¹⁸ You place them on slippery ground to ensure their ruin.
¹⁹ How suddenly they are destroyed, how completely swept away by terror!
²⁰ As one awakes from a nightmare, so when you get up, O Lord,
 you discard them as insignificant.
²¹ But my heart had been so embittered, my spirit so distraught ²² that I failed to understand;
 I was like a stupid beast in your presence.
²³ Yet I shall always remain with you.
 You take hold of my right hand, ²⁴ you guide me with your counsel, and in the end, you will take me to glory.
²⁵ I have no one in heaven but you;
 I desire nothing on earth but you.
²⁶ My flesh and my heart waste away for you, my beloved and my rock.
 God is my portion forever.
²⁷ For those who abandon you will perish;
 you destroy all who are unfaithful to you.
²⁸ But as for me, my joy is to be near God;
 so I have made the Lord my refuge, and I will proclaim all his works.

PSALM 74 (73)

Arise, O God and defend your cause! This psalm reminds us of the persecution during the time of the Maccabees.

O God, have you rejected us forever? Why vent your anger on the sheep of your own fold?

²Remember the people you have formed of old, the tribe you have redeemed as your inheritance. Remember Mount Zion where you once lived.

³Retrace your way to the sanctuary, and see the ruins left by the enemy.

⁴In your shrine your foes roared triumphantly and set up their banner in victory.

⁵Like men cutting down a clump of trees, ⁶they smashed at all the carved panelling with their hatchets, hammers and axes.

⁷They defiled your sanctuary and set aflame the dwelling place of your name.

⁸Furiously they said, "Let us destroy them." They razed to the ground all the shrines of God in the land.

⁹With no signs and no prophets, no one can tell how long this will last.

¹⁰How long, O God, will the foe blaspheme? How long will the enemy revile your name?

¹¹Why do you hold back your right hand? Why keep your hand hidden?

¹²Yet O God, my king since birth, you have brought salvation to earth.

¹³You split the sea in two by your power; you broke the monster's heads in the water; ¹⁴you crushed the heads of Leviathan and fed him to the dolphins.

¹⁵You opened up rivers and springs and dried up ever-flowing streams.

¹⁶You own the day as well as the night; you made the sun and all that gives light.

¹⁷You fixed the earth's borders and created the seasons.

¹⁸Remember, O Lord, how the lawless scoff at your name and cast you off.

¹⁹Do not betray your turtledove to the beast, do not forget the life of the poor whom you love.

²⁰Have regard for your covenant, for violence lurks in the dark of the land.

²¹Do not let the oppressed be put to shame; let the poor and needy praise your name.

²²Arise, O God, and defend your cause against the blasphemy of evil-doers.

²³Do not forget the clamour of your foes, the continuous uproar of your enemies.

PSALM 75 (74)

We thank you, Lord, because you are the judge. – God already judged the world by the cross and resurrection of Christ and he gave the just the assurance they would triumph.

²We give you thanks, O God, we give thanks, for your name is near. Men recount your wonderful deeds.

³At a set time I will judge fairly.

⁴The earth totters, all who dwell in it tremble; but it is I who hold its pillars firm.

⁵To the proud I say, "Be proud no more." And to the wicked, "Raise not your head. ⁶Do not lift yourself so high, do not insult God."

⁷God comes, though not from the east or from the west, or the mountains, or the desert;

⁸God comes to judge, putting down one and lifting up another.

⁹In the hand of the Lord is a cup filled with spiced and foaming wine; he pours it out for the wicked who drain it to the dregs.

¹⁰ As for me, I will rejoice forever and sing praises to the God of Jacob.

¹¹ I will break the power of the wicked, but the power of the virtuous will be exalted.

PSALM 76 (75)

After a victory. – God has defeated the kings who were attacking the Holy City, Jerusalem. This announces another final victory when the humble will be saved. "As the lightning flashes across the sky from East to West, so will be the coming of the Son of Man."

² God is now famous in Judah in Israel his name is great.

³ Salem is indeed his tent;
he has made Zion his dwelling place.

⁴ There he has broken the flashing arrow, the shield and sword, the spear and bow.

⁵ You are glorious and majestic, enthroned on mountains of plunder.

⁶ Valiant men lie despoiled, sleeping their last sleep, not one of them able to lift a hand.

⁷ At your rebuke, O God of Jacob, both rider and horse lay stunned.

⁸ But you – how terrible you are!
Who can stand the fury of your onslaught?

⁹ You uttered judgment from the heavens;
while the earth trembled and lay still,

¹⁰ as you, O God, arose to judge and to save all the humble of the earth.

¹¹ Pagan nations will bring you praise, their survivors will celebrate your name.

¹² Make vows to the Lord, your God, and fulfill them; let the peoples bring offerings to the Fearsome One

¹³ who breaks the spirit of rulers, and is formidable to the kings of the earth.

PSALM 77 (76)

I recall the deeds of the Lord. – We easily look upon the past as more wonderful than it actually was. With the passing of time we will see better that God was present and at work in the present moment.

² I cry aloud to God – aloud that he may hear me.

³ When in trouble I seek the Lord, I stretch out my hand untiringly, my soul refusing to be consoled.

⁴ When I think of God I sigh; when I meditate my spirit weakens.

⁵ You keep me awake and my eyes watchful; I cannot speak for I am so troubled, ⁶ I remember the days of old.

⁷ At night I consider the years of long ago and my spirit wonders.

⁸ "Will the Lord reject us forever? Will he never show his favour again?"

⁹ Has his love vanished and his promise ended for all time?

¹⁰ Has God forgotten to be merciful? Has he in anger withheld his compassion?"

¹¹ This is what makes me distraught – that the Most High no longer acts as before.

¹² I remember the deeds of the Lord; I recall his marvels of old.

¹³ I meditate on all your work, and consider your mighty deeds.

¹⁴ Your way, O God, is most holy. Is there any god greater than you, our God?

¹⁵ You alone are the God who works wonders, who has displayed your power to all.

¹⁶ With power you have redeemed your people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph.

¹⁷ When the waters saw you, O God, they were afraid and the deep trembled.

¹⁸ The clouds poured down rain; the skies resounded with thunder; your arrows flashed from every side.

¹⁹ Your thunder rolled with the whirlwind; your lightning lit up the world; the earth shook and trembled.

²⁰ Your path led through the sea, your way through the great water, but your footprints were nowhere to be seen.

²¹ You led your people as a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM 78 (77)

How many times did they tempt God! This psalm draws a lesson from Israel's history: God's gifts and the ingratitude of his people.

Give heed, O my people, to my teaching; listen to the words of my mouth!

² I will speak in parables, I will talk of old mysteries ³ which we have heard and known, which our fathers have told us.

⁴ We will not keep them hidden from our children; we will announce them to the coming generation: the glorious deeds of the Lord, his might and his wonders.

⁵ He decreed statutes for Jacob and set up a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers to teach their children.

⁶ so the next generation would learn and in turn teach their own offspring.

⁷ They would then put their trust in God, remembering his deeds and his commands.

⁸ They would not be like their fathers who were stubborn and rebellious, disloyal and unfaithful to God.

⁹ The Ephraimites, well armed with bow, took flight when the time came to do battle.

¹⁰ They did not keep God's covenant and refused to live by his law.

¹¹ They forgot the marvels he had done ¹² what their fathers had seen in

Similarly, the present crisis in the Church may appear as its collapse; but in the next generation it will have turned out to be a resurrection. Also, in a believer's life, there are moments when God reveals himself and lifts us off our feet and times when he asks us to be faithful, without offering us any incentives.

I remember the deeds of the Lord and his wonders. Let us say with Paul, "God who gave his Son for our sakes, how would he not give us everything else with him?"

It is up to us to remember the past in our lives, our people, our Christian community in order to discover God's patience and to see in our misfortunes the deserved result of our sins. The division of Christians in various churches, in particular, must appear as the proof that we were not faithful to Christ's teaching.

the land of Egypt, in the fields of Zoan.

¹³ He divided the sea and led them through; he made the water stand like a wall.

¹⁴ By day he led them with a cloud, and by night with a fiery light.

¹⁵ In the desert he split rocks to give them abundant drink.

¹⁶ He made streams come out of a rock and caused water to flow like a river.

¹⁷ Yet they sinned against him even more and rebelled against the Most High, ¹⁸ testing God in the desert, demanding the food they craved.

¹⁹ They blasphemed against God, saying: "Can God spread a table in the desert?"

²⁰ He made water flow out of the rock; can he also give his people bread or meat?"

²¹ When the Lord heard this he was enraged; his fire broke out against Jacob, his anger flared up against Israel, ²² for they had no faith in God nor trust in his deliverance.

²³ Yet he commanded the skies above and opened the doors of heaven; ²⁴ then he rained down manna upon them and fed them with the heavenly grain.

²⁵ They ate and had more than their fill of the bread of angels.

²⁶ Then from heaven he stirred the east wind, and by his power let loose the south wind, ²⁷ to rain down meat on them like dust.

Birds as thick as the sand on the seashore ²⁸ came falling down inside their camp, lying all around their tents.

²⁹ They ate till they had more than enough, for he had given them what they craved.

³⁰ But even before they were satisfied, while the food was still in their mouths, ³¹ God's anger rose against them; he slew the strongest among them and laid low the young men of Israel.

³² In spite of this and all his wonders, they kept on sinning and not believing, ³³ so he swept away their days suddenly as a storm, and their years in terror. ³⁴ Whenever he slew them, they repented and sought him again in earnest.

³⁵ They remembered that God was their rock, that the Most High was their redeemer.

³⁶ They flattered him with their mouths; they lied to him with their tongues, ³⁷ while their hearts were unfaithful; they were untrue to his covenant.

³⁸ Even then, in his compassion, he forgave them their offenses and desisted from destroying them.

Many a time he restrained his anger and did not fully stir up his wrath.

³⁹ He considered that they were but flesh, a breeze that passes and never returns.

⁴⁰ How often did they rebel against him in the wilderness, how often did they grieve him in the desert!

⁴¹ Again and again they tested him, and provoked the Holy One of Israel.

⁴² They did not remember his power and their redemption from the oppressor; ⁴³ neither his marvels shown in Egypt nor his wonders in the region of Zoan, ⁴⁴ when he turned the rivers to blood so the oppressors had nothing to drink.

⁴⁵ He sent swarms of flies that devoured them, frogs that devastated them.

⁴⁶ He gave their crops to the caterpillar and their produce to the locust.

⁴⁷ He destroyed their vines with hail and their sycamores with frost.

⁴⁸ He struck their herds with plague and their flocks with thunderbolts.

⁴⁹ He unleashed his fury against them, his wrath, indignation and strife — a band of destroying angels.

⁵⁰ Giving vent to his anger, he did not spare them from death, but gave them over to the plague.

⁵¹ He struck down all Egypt's firstborn, manhood's firstfruits in the tents of Ham.

⁵² Then he led forth his people like a flock, and guided them like sheep through the desert.

⁵³ He led them safely, so they were unafraid as they saw the sea engulfed their enemies.

⁵⁴ He brought them to his holy land, to the mountain his right hand had won.

⁵⁵ He gave them as inheritance the land of the peoples he drove out before them, and they pitched their tents in it.

⁵⁶ But they challenged and rebelled against God the Most High, and disobeyed his decrees.

⁵⁷ They were unfaithful like their fathers, deceitful and crooked as a twisted bow.

⁵⁸ They angered him with their high places; they aroused his jealousy with their idols.

⁵⁹ Filled with wrath, God rejected Israel.

⁶⁰ He abandoned the tabernacle at Shiloh, the tent where he dwelt among men.

⁶¹ He lead his glory into captivity, his ark into the hand of the enemy..

⁶² He gave his people over to the sword, so furious was he at his inheritance.

⁶³ Fire devoured their young men; their maidens were deprived of wedding songs.

⁶⁴ As their priests fell by the sword, no lament was heard from their widows.

⁶⁵ Then the Lord awoke, shouting, as from sleep induced by wine; ⁶⁶ he struck his enemies on their back and put them to everlasting shame.

⁶⁷ He rejected the house of Joseph, and did not choose the tribe of Ephraim, ⁶⁸ but the tribe of Judah and Zion, his beloved mountain.

⁶⁹ He built his sanctuary like heaven, like the earth he founded forever.

⁷⁰ He chose David his servant and took him from the sheepfolds; ⁷¹ from tending the sheep and their young, he brought him to shepherd Jacob, the people of Israel, his inheritance.

⁷² And with upright heart David pastured them; with skillful hands he led them.

PSALM 79 (78)

How long will you be upset? Let God do justice to his people. The Lord does not owe us anything since we are sinners. However, let him consider his own honour, let him liberate and vindicate the "just."

O God, the nations have invaded your inheritance; they have defiled your holy temple and reduced Jerusalem to rubble.

² They have given to the birds your servants' corpses, and the flesh of your saints to the beasts of the earth.

³ They have poured out the blood of your faithful like water all around Jerusalem, and there is no one to bury them.

⁴ Mocked and reviled by those around us, we have been scorned by our neighbours.

⁵ How long will this take, O Lord? Will you be angry forever? Will your jealous wrath always burn like fire?

⁶ Pour out your anger on the nations that do not acknowledge you; pour it out on the kingdoms that do not call on your name.

⁷ For they have devoured Jacob and laid waste his homeland. Remember not against us the sins of our fathers.

⁸ Lift us up in your compassion, for we have been brought very low.

⁹ Help us, God of our salvation, for the glory of your name.

¹⁰ Give not to the nations a chance to say, "Where is their God?" Before our eyes let them know that you avenge the spilled blood of your servants.

¹¹ Listen to the groans of the imprisoned; by the strength of your arm, deliver those doomed to die.

¹² To our neighbours, O Lord, return sevenfold the taunts with which they have taunted you.

¹³ Then we, your people, the flock of your pasture, will give thanks to you forever; we will recount your praise from generation to generation.

PSALM 80 (79)

Manifest yourself, O Lord! - God is our shepherd; has he forgotten his people and his Church? When the church seems discredited, it is Christ's salvation which seems to have failed. Lord. "Restore us and convert us."

² Listen, O shepherd of Israel, you who lead Joseph like a flock, you who sit enthroned between the cherubim.

³ Shine forth before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasseh. Awaken your might and come to save us.

⁴ Restore us O God of hosts: make your face shine upon us, that we may be saved.

⁵ O Lord of hosts, how long will your anger burn against the prayer of your peoples?

⁶ You have fed them with the bread of woe, and gave them tears to drink in their sorrow.

⁷ You have made us the scorn of our neighbours and the laughing-stock of our oppressors.

⁸ Restore us, O God of hosts; make your face shine upon us, that we may be saved.

⁹ You drove the nations out, and in their land you planted a vine which you brought from Egypt.

¹⁰ On the ground that you cleared, it took root, and filled the land.

¹¹ Its shade covered the mountain: as it towered over the mighty cedars ¹² its branches reached out to the sea and its shoots to the River.

¹³ Why, then, have you broker down its walls, so that all who pass by pluck its fruits, ¹⁴ the beast from the forest ravage it and all creatures of the field feed on it?

¹⁵ Turn again, O Lord of hosts, look down from heaven and see; care for this vine, ¹⁶ the stock planted by your right hand.

¹⁷ Let those who burned it down perish before you at your rebuke.

¹⁸ But lay your hand upon your instrument, upon the son of man whom you make strong for yourself.

¹⁹ Then we will never turn our back on you; give us life, and we will call on your name.

²⁰ Restore us, O Lord, God of hosts; make your face shine upon us that we may be saved.

PSALM 81 (80)

Open your mouth and I will fill it. God speaks and recalls the message he gave on Sinai. He promised to fill the mouths of the faithful with nourishment and wisdom.

I will feed my people with the best of wheat. This is the time to remember all that Jesus, "the bread of life," says in John 6.

"Israel, why do you stay in the land of your enemies and grow old in a strange nation where you live with impure people and are among those going to the nether world? It is because you abandoned the fountain of Wisdom. If you had followed God's way, you would have lived with enduring peace" (Baruch 3:10-13).

Open your mouth and I will fill it. – "If my people would hear me, then I would subdue their enemies." We are weak and we lack dynamism to evangelize and change the world. This is because we do not completely let go of our false gods.

² Joyfully sing to God, our strength; acclaim aloud the God of Jacob.

³ Start the music, strike the timbrel, play the harp and the lyre sweetly.

⁴ Sound the trumpet at the new moon, and on our feast day when the moon is full.

⁵ This is a decree for Israel, an ordinance of the God of Jacob,

⁶ a statute he wrote for Joseph when he went out of Egypt.

⁷ They heard a voice they did not know:

"I relieved your shoulder of the burden; I freed your hands from the basket.

⁸ You called in distress, and I saved you; unseen, I answered you in thunder; I tested you at the waters of Meribah.

⁹ Hear, my people, as I admonish you.
 If only you would listen, O Israel!
¹⁰ There shall be no strange god among you, you shall not worship any alien god, ¹¹ for I the Lord am your God, who led you forth from the land of Egypt.
 Open wide your mouth, and I will fill it.
¹² But my people did not listen;
 Israel did not obey.
¹³ So I gave them over to their stubbornness and they followed their own counsels.
¹⁴ If only my people would listen, if only Israel would walk in my ways, ¹⁵ I would quickly subdue their adversaries and turn my hand against their enemies.
¹⁶ Those who hate the Lord would cringe before him,
 and their punishment would last forever.
¹⁷ I would feed you with the finest wheat and satisfy you with honey from the rock."

PSALM 82 (81)

God gathers the rulers of the world called "gods" because to judge and rule men is God's prerogative and those who are in charge of this function do this in the name of God.

God reminds them of the sacred right of the people. Rulers are mortal too and they are accountable.

God judges the judges

God presides in the divine council;
 he gives judgment among the gods:
² "How long will you judge unjustly and show partiality to the wicked?
³ Give justice to the weak and the orphan; defend the poor and the oppressed.
⁴ Rescue the helpless and the needy; deliver them from the hand of the wicked."
⁵ Without knowledge and understanding, they walk about in darkness;
 all the earth's foundations are shaken.
⁶ "You are gods," I said
 "you are all sons of the Most High; ⁷ but you will all die like other men;
 you will all fall like any ruler.
⁸ Rise, O God, judge the earth, you who rule over all the world.

PSALM 83 (82)Everyone is against us.

² Do not keep silent, O God, hold not your peace, be not unmoved! ³ See how your enemies are astir, those who hate you rear their heads.

⁴ Craftily they plot against your people, they conspire against your protected ones.

⁵ They say, "Let us destroy them as a nation. Let the name of Israel be forgotten!"

⁶ With one heart they devise a scheme and form an alliance against you: ⁷ the people of Edom and the Ishmaelites, Moab and the progeny of Hagar, ⁸ Gebal and Ammon and Amalek, Philistia, with the people of Tyre.

⁹ In league with them are the Assyrians who lend support to Lot's descendants.

¹⁰ Deal with them as you did with Midian, with Sisera and Yabin at the river Kishon;

¹¹ they perished at Endor and became dung on the ground.

¹² Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeeb, all their chiefs like Zebah and Zalmunna, ¹³ who said, "Let us take possession of the pasture lands of God."

¹⁴ O my God, make them like leaves caught in a whirlwind, like chaff helpless before the wind.

¹⁵ As fire consumes the forest, as flames set the mountains ablaze, ¹⁶ so pursue them with your tempest and terrify them with your storm.

¹⁷ Cover their faces with shame, O Lord, that they may seek your name:

¹⁸ Let them be dismayed and abashed forever; let them perish in disgrace.

¹⁹ Let them know that you alone, whose name is the Lord, are the Most High over all the world.

PSALM 84 (83)

I want to see the living God. – The man who is far from Jerusalem is thinking of the happiness of those who go there on a pilgrimage to take part in the Temple celebrations. Let us kindle our yearning for our eternal home even when we are happy to be able to celebrate the Eucharist in our churches.

² How lovely is your dwelling place,
O Lord of hosts!

³ My soul yearns, pines even,
for the courts of the Lord.
My heart and my flesh cry out for the living God.

⁴ Even the sparrow finds a home, and the swallow a nest for its young,
where she may lay her young,
at your altars, O Lord of hosts,
my King and my God!

⁵ Happy are those who live in your house, singing continually of your praise!

⁶ Happy are the pilgrims whom you strengthen encouraging them to make the ascent to Zion.

⁷ As they pass through the Valley, they make it a place of springs, the early rain covers it with blessings.

⁸ They go from strength to strength till they appear before God in Zion.

⁹O Lord of hosts, hear my prayer;
give ear, O God of Jacob!
Look upon our shield, O God;
¹⁰look upon the face of your anointed!

¹¹One day in your courts is better than a thousand elsewhere.
I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of the wicked.

¹²For the Lord God is a sun and a shield;
he bestows favour and glory.
The Lord withholds no good thing from those who walk in uprightness.

¹³O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man who trusts in you.

PSALM 85 (84)

This psalm, written when the Israelites returned from captivity in Babylon, is filled with the most basic and universal words in the human language: freedom, life, joy, salvation, love, justice, peace, happiness.

Yet, the return of the exiled Jews was only one more step toward authentic liberation. Nothing is forever, and each stage in the realization of God's plan is the image of another stage. The people of God were always going forward.

Even the present rule of the risen Christ and the work of salvation achieved through the church are nothing more than the figure of the eternal kingdom: when man will be definitively liberated from suffering and from death, totally reconciled with himself, with nature and with other men, when God will be "all in all."

This psalm has two very relevant local points for today.

In the first place, it is said that, in spite of everything, our earth is loved by God. When we are upset and disheartened by so many ugly things, the injustice and violence taking place in the world, we should come back to the statements of this psalm: O Lord, how good you have been with your land. God has looked upon us, the Glory of God dwells in our land.

All of this has been achieved in Jesus Christ. In him, heaven and earth are radically and profoundly reconciled. The river of human history, in spite of all its curves and rubbish, Justice and peace have embraced each other. – This psalm describes Christ's work as a kind of marriage between heaven and earth, the cooperation between God and men. He is the fullness of God and the fruit of our earth.

²You have favoured your land, O Lord;
you have brought back the exiles of Jacob.

³You have forgiven the sin of your people;
you have pardoned their offenses.

⁴You have done away with your wrath and turned from your burning rage.

⁵But restore us to wholeness, God our saviour;
put away altogether your indignation.

⁶Will your anger be always with us and carried over to all generations?

⁷Will you not give us life anew, that your people may rejoice in you?

⁸Show us, O Lord, your unfailing love and grant us your saving help.

⁹I will listen to God's proclamation, for he promises peace to his people,
his saints – that they renounce their folly.

¹⁰His salvation is near to those who fear him, and glory will dwell in our land.

¹¹Love and faithfulness have met; righteousness and peace have embraced.

¹²Faithfulness will reach up from the earth while justice leans down from heaven.

flows into the infinite ocean of God. Salvation comes from God, but it is achieved through a man of flesh and bones. Christ, freely welcomed by a woman in the name of all humanity. Starting with the Incarnation, it is not possible to believe in God without trusting men; we cannot love God without loving men and all that is connected with human life.

¹³ The Lord will give what is good, and our land will yield its harvest.
¹⁴ Justice will go ahead of him, and peace will tread along his path.

PSALM 86 (85)

Prayer in affliction. – The Servant of God, oppressed by sin and anguished by death, implores the help of the One who is pure goodness.

Listen, O Lord, and answer me, for I am afflicted and needy.

² Preserve my life for I am God-fearing; save your servant for you are my God.

³ Bring joy to the soul of your servant, for to you, O Lord, I lift up my soul. ⁴ Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I cry to you all day.

⁵ You are good and forgiving, O Lord, abounding in love to all who call on you.

⁶ Listen, O Lord, to my prayer, hear the voice of my pleading.

⁷ I call on you in my calamity for I know you will answer me.

⁸ None is like you among the gods, and your works are beyond compare.

⁹ All the nations you have made will come; they will worship before you, O Lord, and bring glory to your name.

¹⁰ For you are great, and wonderful are your deeds; you alone are God.

¹¹ Teach me your way, O Lord, teach me to walk in your truth; instruct my heart to fear your name.

¹² I heartily thank you, O Lord my God; I will glorify your name forever.

¹³ Your love for me has been great, you have saved me from the grave.

¹⁴ Up against me, are ruthless men, O God; a band of cut-throats, evildoers who do not hold you in reverence.

¹⁵ But you, O Lord God, are merciful, slow to anger, loving and faithful.

¹⁶ Turn to me, take pity on me; give your strength to your servant, and save the son of your handmaid.

¹⁷ Give me a sign of your grace, that my foes may see to their disgrace, that you, O Lord, are my help and comfort.

PSALM 87 (86)

My God loves the gates of Zion. – The psalmist recalls that God has chosen Jerusalem-Zion, that is the Church, as the capital of his people and the mother of all the nations.

On the holy mountain is the city he built;
² the Lord prefers the gates of Zion

⁸⁶ Here we present a few verses of the Imitation of Christ: Christ calls us to share his anguish:

I have many people in love with my kingdom; but few are concerned about carrying my cross.

Many wish for my consolation, but few my tribulations. I have many companions at my table, but few in my deprivation.

They all want to rejoice with me, but few want to suffer on my account.

Many follow me to the breaking of the bread, but few to the drinking of the cup of my passion.

Many revere my miracles; but few cling to the ignominy of my cross.

Many love me as long as they are not put to the test.

Many praise and bless me as long as they receive some favours.

But if I hide and leave them for one instant, they complain and fall into the worst depression.

On the contrary, those who love me for myself and not because of some particular interest, bless me in trials and anguish of heart, as well as in the greatest joys.

These were also born there. God looks on all the people of the world and inscribes them in his book as if they were children of his Holy City.

But of Zion, they will say: Mother. The New Jerusalem is the Church, the mother of all the peoples. The living image of the church is Mary, the mother of all believers. Because she is also the mother of all the faithful to any of Jacob's towns.

³Great things have been foretold of you, O city of God:

⁴I will have Egypt and Babylon among those who know me; and also Philistia, Tyre, Ethiopia; of them people say in pride, "So and so was born here."

⁵But of Zion it shall be said, "All men are born in her."

For the Most High himself has founded her.

⁶And the Lord notes in the people's register: "All those were also born in Zion."

⁷And all will dance and sing joyfully for you.

PSALM 88 (87)

Prayer of the sick person close to death. – It seems that those of us who know Christ should never sink into despair. Yet, we have days when heaven is hidden to us as it was for Christ in his agony.

²O Lord, my God, I call for help by day; before you I cry out by night.

³May my prayer come to you; incline your ear to my cry for help.

⁴My soul is full of trouble; my life draws near to the grave. I am a man without strength.

⁵Counted among those going down the pit – I lie forsaken, among the dead, like the slain deprived of any grave, like those you remember no more, cut off from your care.

⁶You have plunged me into the lowest and darkest depths of the pit.

⁷With your wrath heavy upon me, you have buffeted me with all your waves.

⁸You have taken away my closest friends; you have made me repulsive to them. I cannot escape from my confinement.

⁹My eyes have grown dim with grief; spreading out my hands to you, I call upon you every day, O Lord.

¹⁰Are your wonders meant for the dead? Will ghosts rise to give you thanks?

¹¹Is your love and faithfulness remembered among those gone to the netherworld?

¹²Are your wonders known in the dark, your salvation in the land of forgetfulness?

¹³But to you, O Lord, I cry for help; every morning I pray to you.

¹⁴O Lord, why do you reject me, why do you hide your face?

¹⁵Afflicted and close to death from youth, I have suffered terrors and helplessness.

¹⁶Your wrath has swept over me; your assaults have destroyed me.

¹⁷Now they surround me like a flood; and completely engulf me.

¹⁸Bereft of loved ones and now alone, I have only darkness as my companion.

⁸⁸ On the cross the Lord entrusted us to his mother so that she would alleviate our pain in days of anguish.

PSALM 89 (88)

Your favour and your faithfulness. – God is faithful: he is in charge of history and he guides our lives according to his promises which never fail.

²I will sing forever, O Lord, of your love and proclaim your faithfulness from age to age.

³I will declare how lasting is your love, how firm your faithfulness in heaven.

⁴You said, "I have made a covenant with David, my chosen one; I have made a pledge to my servant⁵ to establish his descendants forever and to build his throne for all generations."

⁶The heavens proclaim your wonders, O Lord; the assembly of the holy ones recalls your faithfulness.
⁷Who in the skies can compare with the Lord; who of the heaven-born is like him?

⁸A God feared in the council of holy ones, awesome to those who approach him.

⁹O Lord God of hosts, who is like you, clothed in might and faithfulness?

¹⁰You reign over the surging sea; you pacify its raging waves.

¹¹You crushed Rahab like a carcass; with your strong arm you routed your foes.

¹²Yours are the heavens and the earth; you founded the world and everything in it.

¹³You created the north and the south – Tabor and Hermon rejoice at your name.

¹⁴What a powerful arm you have – a mighty hand, an exalted right hand!

¹⁵Your throne is founded on justice and virtue; love and faithfulness go before you.

¹⁶Blessed are the people who know your praise. They walk in the light of your face.
¹⁷They rejoice all day in your presence and are exalted by your protection.

¹⁸You are our glory and power; and your favour lifts us up.

¹⁹Our king is in the hands of the Lord, the God of Israel provides us with a saviour.

²⁰In the past you spoke in a vision; you said to your faithful people: "I have set the crown upon a mighty one; from among you I have chosen a young man."

²¹I have found my servant David, and with my holy oil I have anointed him.

²²Since my hand will be ever with him and my arm will constantly sustain him, ²³no enemy shall outwit him nor wicked man oppress him.

²⁴I will crush his foes before him and strike down his adversaries.

²⁵My faithful love will be with him, and my powerful help will lift him up.

²⁶I will set his hand over the sea, his right hand over the rivers.

²⁷Of me he will say, "You are my Father, my God, my Rock, my Saviour."

²⁸I will make him the firstborn, the highest of the kings of the earth.

²⁹I will keep my covenant forever firm, and my love for him will endure.

³⁰His dynasty will last forever, and his throne endure as the heavens.

³¹If his sons forsake my law and fail to follow my decrees, ³²if they

⁸⁹ Favour and faithfulness are the theme of this psalm. These two outstanding qualities of God appear throughout the Bible: Favour, or grace, goodness, tenderness, mercy; Faithfulness, that is to say: loyalty, truth.

In the bitter days of the Exile, the author of this psalm recalls God's promises: Where is the saving King who was to give glory and prosperity to his people? At times the modern believer feels driven to ask: "Lord, what happened to your promises? Why is there no bread for your children? Where is your justice? Why does the Church not live according to the Gospel?"

violate my statutes and keep not my commandments,

³³ I will punish their crime with the rod and their offences with the scourge; ³⁴ yet I will not withdraw my love from him, nor will I betray my faithfulness.

³⁵ I will keep my covenant and be true to my promises.

³⁶ I have sworn by my holiness and I will not lie to David.

³⁷ His dynasty will last forever, and his throne endure as the sun.

³⁸ Like the moon it will shine forever and stand firm as the skies.

³⁹ But now you have rejected, disowned and raged at your anointed.

⁴⁰ You have disregarded your covenant and cast off the crown of your servant.

⁴¹ You have destroyed his walls and reduced his strongholds to rubble. ⁴² Taken advantage of by despoilers, he has become the scorn of his neighbours.

⁴³ You have exalted the right hand of his foes; you have made all his enemies rejoice.

⁴⁴ You have turned the edge of his sword, and have not stood by him in battle.

⁴⁵ You have wrenched the sceptre from his hand and flung his throne to the ground.

⁴⁶ You have shortened the time of his splendour and covered him with shame.

⁴⁷ How long, O Lord? Will you hide forever? How long will you be angry?

⁴⁸ Consider how short my life span is, how shadowy the destiny of man.

⁴⁹ What mortal can live and never see death? What man can evade the netherworld?

⁵⁰ O Lord, where is your former great love, which in faithfulness you pledged to David?

⁵¹ Remember how your servant is despised, how I suffer the scorn of the peoples, ⁵² the taunts with which your enemies have mocked every step of your anointed.

⁵³ Blessed be the Lord forever! Amen, Amen.

PSALM 90 (89)

Our days pass away like a sigh. – Our earthly life is short and frail before the eternal and unchanging God. He is our refuge and he can give meaning to our existence. Let us ask him to fill it with his wisdom, which is to love, praise and serve him.

Lord, you have been our refuge through all generations.

² Before the mountains were formed, before you made the earth and the world, from eternity to eternity – you are God.

³ You turn men back to dust, saying, "Return, O sons of men!"

⁴ A thousand years in your sight are like a day that has passed, or like a watch in the night.

⁵ You put an end to men's existence like a dream, like grass in the morning, ⁶ springing up anew at dawn, but fading and withering in the evening.

⁷ Your fury consumes us like fire, and we are helpless before your anger.

⁸ Our evils lie before you who scrutinize our hidden sins.

⁹ Our days pass away under your wrath; our years are gone in no time.

¹⁰ Seventy years is our life's length, or eighty if we have the strength, yet most of them are sorrow and trouble; speeding by, they sweep us along.

¹¹ Who knows the extent of your anger? Who has seen the end of your wrath?

¹² So teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain wisdom of heart.

¹³ How long will you be angry, O Lord? Have mercy on your servant.

¹⁴ Fill us at daybreak with your love, that we may be glad the whole day.

¹⁵ Make our future just as happy as our past was sad.

¹⁶ Let your work be seen by your servants and your glorious power by their children.

¹⁷ May the favour of the Lord be upon us; may he prosper the work of our hands.

PSALM 91 (90)

This psalm is addressed to the pilgrims who have come to spend the night in the patios of the Temple. There, they are the Lord's guests: he will keep on sheltering them.

Night prayer. – A prayer which the believer prays with assurance: God protects the one who trusts in him.

¹ You who dwell in the shelter of the Most High, who rest in the shadow of the Almighty,

² say to the Lord, "My stronghold, my refuge, my God in whom I trust!"

³ He will rescue you from the fowler's snare and from the deadly pestilence.

⁴ He will cover you with his pinions and give you refuge under his wings; his faithfulness is your shield.

⁵ You shall not fear the terror of the night nor the arrows that fly by day, ⁶ nor the pestilence that stalks by night, and the plague that destroys at noonday.

⁷ A thousand may fall at your side, ten thousand at your right hand, but nothing shall befall you.

⁸ Look and see how the wicked are repaid.

⁹ If you have made the Lord your refuge, the Most High your stronghold, ¹⁰ no harm will come upon you, no disaster will draw near your tent.

¹¹ For he will command his angels to guard you in all your ways.

¹² They will lift you up with their hands so that your foot will not hit a stone.

¹³ You will trample under foot the lion and the snake.

¹⁴ "Because he clings to me in love, I will rescue him," says the Lord.

"I will protect him for he knows my name.

¹⁵ When he calls to me, I will answer; in time of trouble I will be with him; I will deliver and honour him.

¹⁶I will satisfy him with long life and show him my salvation."

PSALM 92 (91)

The holy man will grow like the palm tree. – Great human achievements deserve admiration, of course, but they must not make us "senseless," that is, insensitive to the workings of divine grace. However ordinary the latter may be, their fruitfulness is greater and their reach more in depth. The saints are the ones who leave the most profound and lasting impression on human history.

²It is good to give thanks to the Lord, to sing praise to your name, O Most High,

³to proclaim your love in the morning, to declare your faithfulness at night, ⁴accompanied by music from the lyre and melody from the lute and harp.

⁵For you make me glad with your deeds, O Lord, and I sing for joy at the work of your hands.

⁶How great are your works,
O Lord, how deep your thoughts!

⁷The senseless will not know, nor will the stupid understand them.

⁸For although the wicked prosper and the evildoers flourish like grass, they are doomed to eternal destruction.

⁹But you, O Lord, are forever exalted.

¹⁰Your enemies will perish, evildoers will be scattered.

¹¹You have made me stronger than the wild ox you have poured fresh oil on me.

¹²I have seen the downfall of my enemies;
I have heard the doom of my assailants.

¹³The virtuous will flourish like palm trees, they will thrive like the cedars of Lebanon.

¹⁴Planted in the house of the Lord, they will prosper in the courts of God.

¹⁵In old age they will still bear fruit they will stay ever fresh and green,

¹⁶to show that the Lord is upright, that he is my Rock,
and there is no injustice in him.

PSALM 93 (92)

The Lord rules dressed in splendour. – God rules as the creator of the universe. God rules in the person of the risen Christ.

¹The Lord reigns, robed in majesty;
the Lord is bound with strength.

Firmly founded, the world cannot be moved.

² Since then your throne stands, from all eternity you are.

³ The floods have lifted up, O Lord, the floods have lifted up their roaring, the floods have lifted up their pounding waves.

⁴ Mightier than the thunder of great waters, mightier than the breakers of the sea,
the Lord on high is mighty!

⁵ Your statutes stand firm; holiness adorns your house for days without end, O Lord.

PSALM 94 (93)

Against evil rulers.

¹ O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongs, O God who avenges, show yourself!

² Arise, O judge of the earth; repay the proud with what they deserve.

³ How long shall the wicked, O Lord, how long shall the wicked exult?

⁴ Pouring out words of arrogance, evildoers make a show of their insolence.

⁵ They crush your people, O Lord, they oppress your inheritance.

⁶ They murder the widow and the guest they massacre the helpless; ⁷ and they say, "The Lord does not see; the God of Jacob does not care."

⁸ Remember this, you stupid men!
When will you understand, you fools!

⁹ He who made the ear, does he not hear? He who formed the eye, does he not see?

¹⁰ He who rebukes nations and teaches man knowledge.

¹¹ The Lord knows the thoughts of men, that they are a puff of wind.

¹² Blessed is the man you chasten,
O Lord, the man you teach your law;

¹³ you give him relief from distress until a pit is dug for the wicked.

¹⁴ The Lord will not abandon his people nor will he forsake his heritage.

¹⁵ Justice will be restored, and the upright will follow in its wake.

¹⁶ Who will rise up for me against the wicked?

Who will stand by me against the evildoers?

¹⁷ Had not the Lord given me help,
I would have fallen into the silence of death.

¹⁸ I need only think, "My foot is slipping," and your love, O Lord, holds me up at once.

¹⁹ In the midst of anxiety and trouble your consolation comes, cheering my soul.

²⁰ You do not agree with wicked rulers who bypass the law through corrupt decrees.

²¹ They plot together against the virtuous and condemn the innocent to death.

²² But the Lord is my stronghold, my God, my rock of refuge.

²³ He will repay them for their evil and destroy them for their wickedness; the Lord, our God, will blot them out.

PSALM 95 (94)

*A prayer by P. Teilhard de Chardin is quite fitting here:

In the distance, the sun has just illuminated the remote outline of the first Orient. Once again, under the changing cascade of its rays, the live surface of the earth awakens, shudders and begins again its amazing labor. O my God, I will offer you the desired harvest of this first effort. In my cup, I will present to you the sap of all the fruits which will be crushed today.

O Lord, I will bring to your presence the depths of my soul widely open to all the forces which, within a moment, are going to go up to every point in the world and converge toward the Spirit. In former times, the first fruits of the harvest and the best of the flocks were brought to your temple. The offering which you really seek, what you mysteriously need daily to satisfy your hunger, to quench your thirst, is nothing less than the development of the world urged by universal progress.

Receive, Lord, this whole Host which Creation, moved by your attractiveness, offers you in the new dawn. The bread, our effort, is not in itself. I know, more than immense decay. The wine, our grief, is only a dissolving drink. But in the heart of this formless mass, you placed – I am sure of it because I feel it – an irresistible and sanctifying desire which, from the wicked to the faithful, makes us all shout: "Lord, make us one."

PSALM 96 (95)

Come, let us sing to the Lord. – When we come to praise God, let us be disposed to listen to his words and let us attempt to follow his will in our daily lives.

¹ Come, let us sing to the Lord, let us make a joyful sound to the Rock of our salvation.

² Let us come to him with thanksgiving, let us extol him with music and song.

³ For the Lord is the great God, the great King above all gods.

⁴ In his hand are the depths of the earth and the mountain heights.

⁵ the sea is his, for he made it, giving shape to the dry land.

⁶ Come and worship; let us bow down, kneel before the Lord, our Maker.

⁷ He is our God, and we his people;
we are the flock of his pasture.

⁸ If today you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts, as at Meribah, as in the desert, on that day at Massah,

⁹ when your fathers tested me even though they had seen my work.

¹⁰ For forty years they wearied me and I said,
"They are a people of unreliable heart;
they have not known my ways."

¹¹ So I declared on oath in my anger, "Never shall they enter my rest."

God loves justice. – More than the splendour and beauty of the universe, what gives glory to God, is the human society founded on justice. Therefore, all of creation rejoices when God establishes his kingdom among men. Joy of the universe which until now was wasted by man's unbounded ambition. Joy of the nations that discover their reason for being in God.

¹ Sing to the Lord a new song, sing to the Lord, all the earth!

² Sing to the Lord, praise his name; proclaim his salvation day after day.

³ Declare his glory among the nations, his wonderful deeds among the peoples.

Here we present a medieval prayer: Christ rules from his cross.

The thief said: "Remember me, Lord, when you come to your kingdom." He might have seen you give sight to the blind or raise the dead. He might not have adored you then. But, when he sees you hanging from the tree, he adores you: "Remember me, Lord, when you come to your kingdom." What your miracles could not have done, your cross did. He recognized you more surely and perfectly on the cross than in your preaching and miracles. Power of the cross, triumph of the crucified!

Excellent Lord, what answer do you give the imploring thief? "Today, you will be with me in Paradise."

⁴How great is the Lord and worthy of praise!
above all gods he is to be feared.

⁵For all other gods are worthless idols, but the Lord himself made the heavens.

⁶Before him are splendour and majesty;
in his sanctuary are strength and glory.

⁷Give to the Lord, O families of nations, give to the Lord glory and strength.

⁸Give to the Lord the glory due his name;
bring an offering and come into his courts.

⁹Worship the Lord in his holy place stand in awe of him, all the earth.

¹⁰Say among the nations, "The Lord reigns!"
He has made the world firm, immovable;
he will judge the people with justice.

¹¹Let the heavens be glad, the earth rejoice;
let the sea resound and all that is in it;

¹²let the fields exult and everything in them.
then all the forest trees will sing for joy.

¹³They will sing before the Lord who comes to judge the earth.
He will judge the world with justice and the people with his truth.

PSALM 97 (96)

God rules and the idols disappear. – "The light already dawns for the just." It already rules in the person of the risen Christ. We already contemplate the success of his rule in the midst of the difficulties and trials we encounter and which his Church suffers daily.

¹The Lord reigns; let the earth rejoice;
let the distant islands be glad.

²He whose throne is founded on justice and righteousness is surrounded by clouds and thick darkness

³Before him a fire goes right and left, which consumes his foes,

⁴His lighting lights up the world, while the earth watches and trembles.

⁵Like wax the mountains melt before the Lord of all the earth.

⁶The heavens proclaim his integrity, and all the peoples see his glory.

⁷Image worshippers who make a vain show of their worthless idols stand in awe.

All you gods, bow down as he passes!

⁸Zion hears and rejoices, and the towns of Judah exult, because of your judgments, O God.

⁹For you are the Master of the universe, exalted far above all gods.

¹⁰You who love the Lord, hate evil, for he preserves the lives of his faithful, he delivers them from their foes.

¹¹He sheds light upon the upright, and gladness upon the virtuous.

¹²Rejoice in the Lord, you who are blameless, and give praise to his holy name.

PSALM 98 (97)

Sing a new song to the Lord. – Mankind has found the way to liberation and salvation:

- in the coming of Christ, God become man.
- in his resurrection .

¹Sing to the Lord a new song, for he has done wonders; his right hand, his holy arm, has won victory for him.

²The Lord has shown his salvation, revealing his justice to the nations.

³He has not forgotten his love and his faithfulness to Israel. To the farthest ends of the earth all have seen God's saving power.

⁴All you lands, make a joyful noise, break into song and sing praise,

⁵with the melody of the lyre and with the music of the harp.

⁶With trumpet blast and sound of horn, rejoice before the King, the Lord!

⁷Let the sea resound and everything in it, the world and all that dwell in it.

⁸Let rivers and lakes clap their hands, hills and mountains sing with joy ⁹before the Lord, for he comes to give judgment to the earth. He will judge the world uprightly and the peoples with justice.

PSALM 99 (98)

Holy is the Lord. – Who rises up against me?

It is I, says Christ. I am the one who destroyed death.
who triumphed over the enemy, conquered hell.
I am the Passover of salvation.
I am the Lamb offered for you.
I am the one who purifies.
I am life for you.

¹The Lord reigns – let the nations tremble. He is enthroned upon the cherubim; let the earth quake.

²Great is the Lord in Zion; he is exalted over all the nations.

³May they give glory to your great name, "Holy is he, and mighty!"

⁴You are a king who loves justice, teaching virtue and righteousness, as you did for Jacob.

⁵Extol the Lord, our God; worship at his footstool. Holy is he, and mighty!

⁶Among his priests were Moses and Aaron, and Samuel among those who called on his name. They cried to the Lord, and he answered them.

⁷In the pillar of cloud he spoke to them, and they kept his statutes and the decrees he handed to them.

⁸O Lord God, you responded to them; you were a forgiving God to them, but you punished their wrongs ⁹Extol the Lord our God; worship at his holy mountain. Holy is the Lord; our God!

PSALM 100 (99)

Acclaim the Lord, all you lands. – Let all the lands sing to the Lord! "Serve him with joy."

¹All you lands, acclaim the Lord!

²Serve the Lord joyfully; come into his presence with joyful songs.

³Know that the Lord is God; he created us and we are his, his people, the sheep of his fold.

⁴Enter his gates with thanksgiving, his courts with praise. Give thanks to him and bless his name.

⁵For the Lord is good; his love endures forever and his faithfulness through all generations.

PSALM 101 (100)

A king examines his conscience. – "I will follow the path of justice, when will you come to me?" When he begins his daily work, the believer intends to live according to the truth, to fight for justice, while hoping for the coming of the Lord.

I will sing of your love and justice; to you, O Lord, I will sing praise.

²I will walk the way of integrity – O Lord, when will you come to me? With a blameless heart I will walk within my house.

³I will not set before my eyes anything that is vile. I hate the deeds of faithless men; they shall not come near me.

⁴Depart from me, you wicked hearts, for I disown your evil.

⁵He who deals with others treacherously, I will seek to destroy. He who talks and acts arrogantly, I will not endure.

⁶I will regard the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me; only he who walks in integrity shall be honoured as my servant.

⁷No man of deceit and lies shall dwell in my house; no man who utters falsehood shall stand before my eyes.

⁸Each morning I will destroy all the wicked of the land; I will uproot all the evildoers from the city of the Lord.

PSALM 102 (101)

Prayer of the afflicted.

²O Lord, hear my supplication; listen to my cry for protection.

³Hide not your face from me when I am in trouble. Incline your ear to me; answer me at once when I call.

⁴My days are passing away like smoke, my bones burning like a furnace.

⁵Like withered grass, my heart is blighted, and I forget to eat my bread.

⁶Because of my grief and loud moans I have been reduced to skin and bones.

⁷I am like an owl in the wilderness, like a vulture among the ruins.

⁸On the housetop I am like a homeless lonely bird.

⁹All day I am taunted by my mockers; my enemies use my name for a curse.

¹⁰I eat ashes as if they were my food, and mix my drink with tears.

¹⁰²Two poems are combined in this psalm: the prayer of an abandoned sick man and a prayer for the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

¹¹ for your wrath has thrown me aside.

¹² My days are like the shadows of night; I am like grass that withers with blight.

¹³ But you, O Lord, are forever enthroned; your name endures through all generations.

¹⁴ Arise, have mercy on Zion; the appointed time has come to show her your compassion.

¹⁵ For your servants cherish her stones, and are moved to pity by her dust.

¹⁶ O Lord, the nations will revere your name, and the kings of the earth your glory.

¹⁷ For the Lord will rebuild Zion and appear in all his splendour; ¹⁸ he will answer the prayer of the needy and will not despise their plea.

¹⁹ Let this be recorded for a future time, that the Lord may be praised by a people yet unborn:

²⁰ "From his holy height in heaven, the Lord has looked on the earth ²¹ to hear the prisoners groaning, and free those condemned to death."

²² Then the name of the Lord will be declared in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem, ²³ when the peoples and the kingdoms assemble to worship him.

²⁴ My strength has already run out, he has cut short my days.

²⁵ I cry to him, "My God, do not take my life away in mid-course before it matures, whereas your own endures forever."

²⁶ In the beginning you laid the earth's foundation, you made the heavens by your own hands.

²⁷ Although they perish, you will remain; they will all wear out like a garment, you change them like raiment: they pass away ²⁸ but you remain the same, your years unending.

²⁹ Your servants' children will dwell secure; their posterity will endure without fail.

PSALM 103 (102)

The Lord showers his blessings upon you. – This psalm looks on God, man, and God's mercy toward men: from these three, praise is born.

¹ Bless the Lord, my soul; my inmost being, bless his holy name!

² Bless the Lord, my soul, and do not forget all his kindness; ³ he forgives all my sins and heals all my sickness; ⁴ he redeems my life from destruction and crowns me with love and compassion; ⁵ he gives fulfilment to my years, and renews my life like the eagle's.

⁶ The Lord restores righteousness and shows justice to all the oppressed.

⁷ He made known his ways to ¹⁰³ By his origin and inconsistency, man is "dust." He is feeling like the grass in the fields. But, he is also the work of God and his son. God is the transcendent and almighty Being, but his authentic greatness is his power to love without limits, to nourish the flame of his love with his own fire. What is peculiar to God is "to have mercy and to forgive."

To that effect, the psalmist uses a simple but majestic image: the vast distance separating heaven from earth, the East from the West is not so much a figure of the vastness of the divine Being as it is a figure of his merciful love.

The Christian discovers many a resonance in this psalm:

– God is lenient since he not only knows that we are "dust," but he, himself, wanted to experience this by becoming man, enduring suffering, death and even temptation.

– His forgiveness took a tangible form: the cross of Jesus Christ raised above the world and history until the end of time.

– His Covenant with Israel which became definitive and universal.

– The blessings which came to us through Christ go far beyond what the psalmist hoped for: the truth of the Gospel and the gift of Redemption will take us to eternal life.

The permanence of the Church, the "cloud of witnesses" of Jesus Christ – those of yesterday and those of today – and finally, the experience of God that we have in our own lives: these are some of the reasons why we believe and hope in God, why we celebrate his great glory.

Moses and his deeds to the people of Israel.

⁸The Lord is gracious and merciful, abounding in love and slow to anger; ⁹he will not remain resentful nor will he be angry forever.

¹⁰He does not treat us according to our sins, nor does he punish us as we deserve.

¹¹As the heavens are high above the earth, so great is his love for his faithful; ¹²as far as the east is from the west, so far does he remove the sins of his people.

¹³As a father pities his children, so the Lord pities those who fear him.

¹⁴For he knows how we are formed, he remembers that we are dust.

¹⁵The days of man are like grass; he blooms like a flower in the fields;

¹⁶But the wind passes, and he is gone, never to be seen there again.

¹⁷But eternal and everlasting is the Lord's love for those who fear him, his justice for their children's offspring, ¹⁸for those who keep his covenant and remember to obey his commandments.

¹⁹The Lord has set his throne in heaven; his eternal kingdom reigns over all.

²⁰Praise the Lord, all you his angels, you mighty ones who do his bidding, you who obey the word he speaks.

²¹Praise the Lord, all his hosts, all his servants who do his will.

²²Praise the Lord, all his works everywhere in his kingdom. Bless the Lord, my soul!

PSALM 104 (103)

The universe praises its creator. – In contemplating the universe, God's work, the believer is filled with admiration and optimism. Everything comes from God, but it also exists for men, and now, God is completing his creation through men's work and the radiance of his witnesses. "Send your Spirit who renews the face of the earth."

Not only does everything come from God, but everything belongs to him. This universal dominion is expressed through some simple but majestic comparisons: the light is God's garment; the clouds, his chariot; the firmament, his tent above which he has his dwelling place. Still more, this psalm shows God constantly supporting all beings whom he holds in the palm of his hand. If for a single instant he withdrew his spirit, his breath from them, they would not only fall into chaos, but into nothingness. Let us think of what happens when there is a power failure: there is no light, no energy no movement; it is almost as if the world stopped living.

¹Bless the Lord, my soul!

Clothed with majesty and splendour;
My God, how great you are!

²You wrap yourself in light as with a garment;
you stretch out the heavens like a tent,

³you build your house above the waters, you make the clouds your chariot and ride on the wings of the wind; ⁴you make the winds your messengers, and fire and flame your ministers.

⁵You set the earth on its foundations, and never will it be shaken.

⁶Like a garment you covered it with ocean, and waters spread over the mountains.

⁷But at your rebuke the waters fled, at the sound of your thunder they took to flight.

⁸Brought to the mountains, they flow down again to settle in the valleys.

Optimism is another characteristic of this psalm. All the creatures are good and they relate among themselves in an harmonious way. The psalmist named them one by one, from the great cosmic forces to the birds, the wild beasts and the fish, in admiring and almost tender way. But, above all, this psalm has a deeply human touch: everything exists for the benefit of men.

Although today we have a scientific vision of the world very different from what people thought twenty-five hundred years ago, this psalm preserves all its value. The world we know is much larger, much more diversified and marvelous.

How can we think that it emerged by itself, or that it is the product of a blind accident? With regard to the universe, man is called to be the consciousness which understands and admires it, the voice praising the Creator, the artisan who must adorn it and organize it "for the service of man and of all men" (Paul VI in "The Development of the Nations"). Our psalms and songs of praise would be in vain if they did not express man's efforts to build a world reflecting the infinite purity and richness of God, day by day.

"The Lord formed me from the beginning, at the start, before the earth. When he built the foundations of the earth, I was seated at his side as the architect of his works, and I was his delight day by day, always playing in his presence; I delighted in going through his creation and I found delight in the sons of men." (Pv 8:23-31).

- ⁹ You set a limit they could not cross, so as never again to flood the earth.
¹⁰ You make springs flow in ravines winding among mountains and hills, ¹¹ giving drink to the beasts of the field, quenching the thirst of donkeys.
¹² Birds build their nests close by and sing among the branches of trees.
¹³ You water the mountains from your abode and fill the earth with the fruit of your work.
¹⁴ You make grass grow for the cattle and plants for man to cultivate, that he may bring forth food from the earth:
¹⁵ wine to gladden his heart, oil to make his face shine,
and bread to strengthen him.
¹⁶ The Lord waters his trees, the cedars of Lebanon which he planted.
¹⁷ The birds build their nests, the stork has its home in the pine trees.
¹⁸ High mountains are for wild goats, the cliffs a refuge for badgers.
¹⁹ You made the moon to mark the seasons, and the sun that knows when to set;
²⁰ when you bring the darkness of the night, all the beasts of the forest begin to prowl:
²¹ the lions roaring for their prey claiming their food from God.
²² When the sun rises, the beasts steal away, returning to rest in their dens.
²³ Man then goes out to his work, and toils till evening comes.
²⁴ How varied O Lord, are your works!
In wisdom you have made them all – the earth full of your creatures.
²⁵ Behold the sea, wide and vast, teeming with countless creatures, living things both great and small, ²⁶ a strange world reserved for the ships and the monster Leviathan, your pet.
²⁷ They all look to you for their food in due time.
²⁸ You give it to them, and they gather it up;
you open your hand,
they are filled with good things.

"You are beautiful, my beloved. Turn your eyes from me for they captivate me. Your hair is like a flock of goats streaming down the slopes of Gilead: your teeth are like a flock of ewes coming up from the water: your cheeks, like a half-pomegranate behind your veil. - I belong to my lover and his desire is for me" (Sg 6).

²⁹ When you hide your face, they become afraid;
you take away their breath and they return to dust.

³⁰ When you send forth your spirit, they are created,
and the face of the earth is renewed.

³¹ May the glory of the Lord endure forever; may the Lord rejoice in his works!

³² He looks on the earth, and it quakes;
he touches the mountain, and it smokes.

³³ I will sing to the Lord all my life;
I will sing praise to God while I live.

³⁴ May my words give him pleasure, as the Lord gives me delight.

³⁵ May sinners vanish from the earth, and may the wicked be no more.
Bless the Lord, my soul!
Praise the Lord!

PSALM 105 (104)

The beginning of Sacred History. - Recalling the past can be a prayer: when we try to see the work of God and to give him thanks. Here, we are dealing with the beginning of Israel, from Abraham to Moses: all the events were prophetic, that is, they were announcing the favours of God in which we delight now.

¹ Give thanks to the Lord, call on his name; make known his works among the nations.

³ Glory in his holy name; let those who seek the Lord rejoice.

⁴ Look to the Lord and his strength; seek his face always.

⁵ Remember his wonderful works, his miracles and his judgments,

⁶ O descendants of his servant Abraham, O sons of Jacob, his chosen ones!

⁷ He is the Lord our God; his judgments prevail on earth.

⁸ He remembers his covenant forever, his promise to a thousand generations, ⁹ the pact he made with Abraham, the promise he swore to Isaac.

¹⁰ He confirmed his decree to Jacob, to Israel his eternal covenant.

¹¹ "To you I will give the land of Canaan as part of your inheritance."

¹² When they were few in number, strangers in the land, ¹³ wandering from nation to nation, from one kingdom to another, ¹⁴ he allowed no one to oppress them, and for their sake he rebuked kings:

¹⁵ "Touch not my anointed ones," he warned, "do my prophets no harm!"

¹⁶ Then he sent a famine and ruined the crop that sustained the land; ¹⁷ he sent a man ahead of them, Joseph, who was sold as a slave;

¹⁸ his feet in shackles, his neck in irons ¹⁹ till what he foretold came to pass, and the Lord's word proved him true.

²⁰ The king sent for him, set him free, ²¹ and put him in charge of his household and made him ruler of all his possessions, ²² so that he would train their princes and teach wisdom to the elders.

²³ Then Israel came to Egypt, Jacob settled in the land of Ham. ²⁴ The Lord made his people fruitful and much stronger than their foes, ²⁵ whose hearts he turned to hate and conspire against his people.

²⁶ Then he sent Moses his servant, and Aaron whom he had chosen.

²⁷ They performed his signs among them, his miracles in the land of Ham.

²⁸ He sent darkness to the land, but they rebelled against his words.

²⁹ He turned their waters into blood, causing their fish to die.

³⁰ Their land teemed with frogs, invading even the king's bedroom

³¹ He spoke, and flies and gnats swarmed throughout the country.

³² He gave them hail for rain, and lightning flashed over the land.

³³ He blighted their vines and fig trees, shattered the trees in the countryside.

³⁴ He spoke and locusts came, grasshoppers without number; ³⁵ they devoured all the vegetation, and ate the produce of the soil. ³⁶ Then he smote all the firstborn, the firstfruits of their manhood.

³⁷ He led Israel out of the alien land, laden with silver and gold, and none was left behind.

³⁸ Egypt was glad when they departed, so filled were they with dread.

³⁹ He spread a cloud as covering, and fire to give them light at night.

⁴⁰ They asked for food; he gave them quails and fed them with bread from heaven.

⁴¹ He opened the rock, and water gushed out, flowing like a river through the desert.

⁴² For he remembered his covenant with Abraham, his servant.

⁴³ So he led forth his people with joy, his chosen ones with singing.

⁴⁴ He gave them the lands of the nations, and let them take the fruit of peoples' toil, ⁴⁵ that they might keep his statutes and remain obedient to his laws.

PSALM 106 (105)

Another look at the history of Israel. – Like psalm 78, this psalm contrasts the mercy of God and Israel's rebellions. God punishes, but he always gives his grace again.

Alleluia!

¹ Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his love endures forever.

² Who can count the Lord's mighty deeds, or declare his praises enough?

³ Blessed are they who remain just and act at all times in righteousness.

⁴ Remember me, O Lord, when you show favour to your people: rescue me when you deliver them; ⁵ let me see the triumph of your faithful. let me share the joy of your nation, and join your inheritance in praising you.

⁶ We have sinned like our fathers; we have done wrong and acted wickedly.

⁸ Yet he saved them for his name's sake, to make his mighty power known.

⁹ He rebuked the sea, and it dried up; he led them through the deep as on dry land.

¹⁰ He saved them from hostility, freeing them from the hand of the enemy.

¹¹ Waters covered their pursuers, and none of them was left alive.

¹² Then they believed his promises and all at once sang his praises.

¹³ But soon they forgot his works and did not wait for his counsel.

¹⁴ They gave way to wanton craving and tempted God in the desert.

¹⁵ He gave them what they wanted, then sent them a wasting disease.

¹⁶ In the camp they grew envious of Moses and Aaron, the holy one of the Lord.

¹⁷ So the earth opened, swallowed Dathan, and buried the company of Abiram; ¹⁸ fire broke out, burning up the wicked.

¹⁹ They made a calf at Horeb and worshipped the molten image.

²⁰ They exchanged the glory of God for the image of a bull that eats grass.

²¹ They forgot their Saviour God, who had done great things in Egypt, ²²wonderful works in the land of Ham, and awesome deeds by the Sea of Reeds.

²³So he decided to destroy them, had not Moses, his chosen one, stood in the breach before him, to shield them from destruction.

²⁴Yet they despised the promised land, for they had no faith in his word.

²⁵They grumbled in their tents and would not listen to the voice of the Lord.

²⁶So he swore to them with his hand raised that he would let them perish in the desert, ²⁷scatter their descendants among the nations and disperse them throughout the lands.

²⁸They joined the rites of Baal-peor and ate sacrifices to lifeless gods.

²⁹Their deeds provoked the Lord to anger, and a plague broke out among them.

³⁰But Phineas stood up and intervened, and the plague came to an end.

³¹This was credited to his uprightness, making him remembered for all ages.

³²Angered by them at Meribah's waters, the Lord took it out on Moses ³³for the rash words he uttered, when they rebelled against God.

³⁴They dared not destroy the pagans, as the Lord commanded; ³⁵they mingled with these nations and learned to do as they did.

³⁶In serving the idols of the pagans, they were trapped ³⁷into sacrificing children to demons, ³⁸shedding the innocent blood of their sons and daughters to the idols of Canaan, polluting the country with blood. ³⁹They defiled themselves by what they did, playing the harlot in their worship.

⁴⁰The anger of the Lord grew intense and he abhorred his inheritance.

⁴¹He handed them over to the nations, and their foes ruled them with arrogance.

⁴²Brought by the enemy into subjection, they suffered the agony of oppression.

⁴³He delivered them many a time, but they went on defying him and sinking deeper into their sin.

⁴⁴But he heard their cry of affliction and looked on them with compassion.

⁴⁵Remembering his covenant, he relented for their sake, because of his great love.

⁴⁶He let them be pitied by all those who held them captive.

⁴⁷Save us, O Lord, our God, gather us from among the nations, that we may give thanks to you and praise your holy name.

⁴⁸Blessed be the Lord, God of Israel, from eternity to eternity. Let all the people say, "Amen!" Praise the Lord!

PSALM 107 (106)

Third look at the history of Israel. - Like the two previous psalms, this one recalls the past, drawing another lesson from it: whenever they cried to the Lord, he listened to them. "Give thanks for his love for the sons of men."

¹Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his love endures forever.

²Let the redeemed of the Lord say this, those he redeemed from the hand of the foe, ³those he gathered from the lands, from east and west, from north and south.

⁴Some strayed in the wilderness and were lost, far away from the city.

⁵They wandered about hungry and thirsty, their lives ebbing away.

⁶Then they cried to the Lord in anguish, and he rescued them from their distress.

⁷He led them by a straight way to a city where they could dwell.

⁸Let them thank the Lord for his love and wondrous deeds for men.

⁹He quenches the thirst of the soul and satisfies the hunger of the heart.

¹⁰They lived in the darkness of death like prisoners suffering in chains, ¹¹for they rebelled against the word of God and despised the counsel of the Most High.

¹²Their backs bent in hard labour, they fell down, and there was no one to help.

¹³Then they cried to the Lord in anguish, and he rescued them from their distress.

¹⁴He brought them out of the dark and gloom, and he tore asunder their bonds.

¹⁵Let them thank the Lord for his love and wondrous deeds for men.

¹⁶For he breaks open gates of bronze and batters down bars of iron.

¹⁷They were sick because of their wrongs, they were afflicted for their iniquities.

¹⁸Unable to take any food they drew near the gates of death.

¹⁹Then they cried to the Lord in anguish, and he rescued them from their distress.

²⁰He sent forth his word and healed them, and delivered them from destruction.

²¹Let them thank the Lord for his love and wondrous deeds for men.

²²Let them offer sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his deeds in joyful song.

²³Those who went to the sea in ships, merchants on the mighty waters, ²⁴saw the marvels of the Lord, his wonderful deeds in the deep.

²⁵For he spoke and stirred up a storm whipping up the waves of the sea.

²⁶Flung upward and plunged to the depths, they lost courage in the ordeal; ²⁷reeling like drunkards, they were adrift, in spite of all their sea-manship.

²⁸Then they cried to the Lord in anguish, and he rescued them from their distress.

²⁹He stilled the storm to a gentle breeze and hushed the billows to silent waves.

³⁰How glad they were! He brought them safe and sound to the port where they were bound.

³¹Let them thank the Lord for his love and wondrous deeds for men.

³²Let them extol him in the congregation, praise him in the assembly of the people.

³³Sometimes he turned rivers into wastelands, flowing springs into parched grounds, ³⁴and fruitful valleys into salt-flats, because of the wickedness of their inhabitants.

³⁵Yet he also turned deserts into water-sheds and parched land into flowing springs.

³⁶There he let the hungry settle and found a city where they could dwell.

³⁷They planted vineyards, they sowed fields, and from them got fruitful yields.

³⁸By his blessing their numbers increased, and their herds and flocks did not diminish.

³⁹But then they dwindled and were humbled through oppression, sorrow and distress.

⁴⁰And he who pours contempt upon princes and makes them wander in trackless wastes ⁴¹rescued the needy from their affliction and made their families flourish like flocks.

⁴²The virtuous see it and are glad, but the wicked shut their mouths.

⁴³Let the wise consider all this and understand the Lord's great love.

PSALM 108 (107)

Song of victory. – This psalm combines part of psalm 57 and of psalm 60.

²My heart is ready, O God! I will sing praise and make music. Awake my soul!

³Awake, harp and lyre! I will awake the dawn.

⁴I will thank you, O Lord, among the nations. I will sing praise to you among the peoples.

⁵For great is your love above the heavens, your faithfulness beyond the skies.

⁶Be exalted, O God, above the heavens. Let your glory be over the earth.

⁷Give help and save us by your right hand, and rescue those you love.

⁸God has spoken in his sanctuary: "In triumph I will divide up Shechem and parcel out the Valley of Succoth.

⁹Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine; Ephraim is my helmet, Judah my scepter.

¹⁰Moab is my washbasin; upon Edom I cast my sandal; over Philistia I shout in triumph."

¹¹Who will take me to the fortified city? Who will lead me to Edom?

¹²O God! have you really rejected us? You no longer go with our armies.

¹³Give us aid against the foe, for the help of man is not worth a straw.

¹⁴With God we will gain victory; he will crush the enemy for us.

PSALM 109 (108)

Have no pity for them. – A person who had only words of friendship has been accused and slandered. He asks justice from God who remains at the side of the poor. God will show no mercy toward those whose hearts are merciless.

Break your silence, O God whom I praise, ²now that wicked and deceitful men hurl their false accusations at me.

³They assail me with words of hate; they attack me for no valid cause.

⁴They return my friendship with slander, and yet I pray for them.

⁵They repay me evil for good, and hatred for my love.

⁶Appoint a wicked man against him; find an accuser to repeat this curse:

⁷"Let him be found guilty when tried; let his own plea condemn him.

⁸May his days be numbered, his office be taken by another.

⁹May his children lose a father and his wife a husband.

¹⁰May his children go begging, driven out of their ruined homes.

¹¹May the creditor seize all his belongings and strangers plunder the fruits of his toil.

¹²Let no one extend kindness to him or take pity on his orphaned children.

¹³May his posterity be destroyed, their names blotted out in the next generation.

¹⁴May his father's evil be remembered before the Lord; may his mother's sin never be effaced.

¹⁵May their sins be ever before the Lord, and their memory cut off from the earth."

¹⁶For he did not remember to show kindness, but hounded the poor and the needy, and the brokenhearted to their death.

¹⁷He loved to curse; may he be cursed. He loathed blessing; may it be far from him.

¹⁸He wrapped himself in cursing; may it soak into his body like water, penetrate his bones like oil.

¹⁹May it be like a garment he wears, like the belt he ties around himself.

²⁰May the Lord reward my accusers with this, and others who speak evil of me.

²¹But as for me, O God my Lord, for your name's sake, act on my behalf, deliver me, in the goodness of your love ²²For I am poor and needy, my heart is stricken within me.

²³Like an evening shadow, I fade away; like a locust, I am swept away.

²⁴My knees have become weak from fasting, my body is gaunt and thin.

²⁵I have become the butt for the scorn of my foes; people shake their heads at me in derision.

²⁶Help me, O Lord my God, and save me for the sake of your love.

²⁷Let them know that this is your hand, that it is you, Lord, who do this.

²⁸They may curse, but you will bless; when they attack, they will be disgraced; but may your servant rejoice!

²⁹Let my accusers be clothed with dishonour; let them be wrapped in their own shame.

³⁰To the Lord, I will give my thanks; I will praise him in the great assembly.

³¹He stands at the right hand of the needy, to save him from those who condemn him.

PSALM 110 (109)

Word of the Lord to my Lord. - The fundamental force ruling the destiny of mankind, the world and of history, is the victory of Jesus Christ, Son of God, made man in order to bring us close to him, and to share his eternal glory with us.

Word of the Lord to my Lord. At times we have the impression of being locked in life's problems as if we were in jail. This psalm is like a flash of lightning illuminating the jail and it shows us an unexpected exit door leading above.

In spite of obscure expressions - because they are ancient - the general meaning is quite clear: from Zion, there will come a man who, as the warlike expressions of verses 5-6 indicate, will victoriously overcome all hostile powers. It will be a difficult struggle; he will have to drink water from the torrent, that is to say, he will be overwhelmed with suffering. But God will seat him at his right hand and will subject everything to him.

Thus we have a sketch of the figure of Christ, a man in whom there is something beyond what is human, like Melchizedek, the mysterious character of Genesis, "without father or mother, to whom Abraham offered the tenth part of his possessions" (Heb 7).

¹The Lord says to my Lord,
"Sit at my right hand till I make your foes your footstool."

²From Zion, the Lord will extend your mighty scepter and you will rule in the midst of your enemies.

³Yours is royal dignity from the day you were born in holy majesty.
From the womb of the dawn, like dew,
I have begotten you.

⁴The Lord has sworn, and he will not take back his word:

"You are a priest forever in the order of Melchizedek."

⁵The Lord is at your right hand;
he will crush kingdoms on his day of wrath.

⁶He will judge the nations, heaping up corpses,
crushing the rulers of the earth.

⁷Pausing for a drink by the wayside, he will lift up his head in triumph.

PSALM 111 (110)

This is an "alphabetical" psalm, namely, the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet (in order) begin the twenty-two verses. Other psalms are written this way, with twenty-two verses or twenty-two stanzas (for example: 34; 37; 119).

God creates, saves and guides us.

¹*Alleluia!*

I thank the Lord with all my heart in the council of the upright, in the assembly of the just.

²The wonders of the Lord are great and pondered by all who delight in them.

³Glorious and majestic are his deeds, his righteousness endures forever.

⁴He lets us remember his wonders;
the Lord is merciful and kind.

⁵Always mindful of his covenant, he provides food for those who fear him.

⁶He shows his people the power of his arm by giving them the lands of other nations.

⁷The works of his hands are faithful and just, trustworthy are all his precepts,

⁸ordained to last forever, to be performed in faith and uprightness.

⁹He provided deliverance for his people and enacted his covenant forever.

His holy name is to be revered!

¹⁰The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom;

prudent are those who live by his precepts.
To him belongs everlasting praise.

PSALM 112 (111)

This is how the just man is. – Similarly to the previous one, this psalm is also alphabetical. It uses the same words, but this time it is to praise the just man, the image of God.

¹*Alleluia!*

Blessed is the man who fears the Lord, who finds delight in his word.

²His children will be powerful on earth;
the upright generation will be blessed.

³Wealth and riches are for his family;
he will be revered for his generosity.

⁴In the darkness, light dawns for the virtuous, for the gracious, merciful and righteous.

⁵It will be well with him who lends freely, who leads a life of justice and integrity.

⁶For the righteous will never be moved;
he will be remembered and loved forever.

⁷He will have no fear of evil news, for his heart is firm, trusting in the Lord.

⁸He need not fear since his life is secure, he shall triumph over his foes.

⁹Since he has given generously to the poor, his virtue will endure forever and his head will be raised in honour.

¹⁰The wicked will see this and be furious:
he will gnash his teeth in seething envy.
The evil man's desires will fail.

PSALM 113 (112)

You poor and humble people, praise the Lord! What differentiates God from men – even great ones – is not only the vast work of his Creation, but his way of being with us, his preference for what men despise. God likes to choose weak instruments to achieve his deeds of grace.

¹*Alleluia!*

Praise, O servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord!

²Blessed be the name of the Lord henceforth and forever!

³From east to west,
may the name of the Lord be praised!

⁴The Lord is exalted over the nations, his glory above the heavens.

⁵Who is like the Lord our God, who sits enthroned on high,

⁶who looks over the heavens and down upon the earth?

⁷He lifts up the poor from the dust and the needy from the ash heap.

⁸He makes them sit with princes, with rulers of his people.

⁹He gives a home to the barren woman, and makes her a joyful mother.
praise the Lord!

PSALM 114 (113 A)

The power of the Saving God manifests itself in the first Passover, the departure from Egypt. In a different way, the resurrection of Christ touches the universe.

The departure from Egypt.

¹*Alleluia!*

When Israel came out of Egypt, the family of Jacob from a people of alien tongue,

²Judah became his sanctuary,
Israel his dominion.

³At his sight the sea fled and the Jordan retreated;

⁴ the mountains skipped like rams, the hills frolicked like lambs.

⁵ Why is it, sea, that you flee?
Jordan, that you turn back?

⁶ Mountains, that you skip like rams?
Hills, that you frolic like lambs?

⁷ Tremble, O earth, at the Lord's presence, at the presence of the God of Jacob,

⁸ who turned the rock into a stream, and the flint into a spring.

PSALM 115 (113 B)

The people of God have no idols. – Since we have received the knowledge of the only true God, let us leave aside everything which is not God.

We must constantly denounce the idols of ordinary people as well as of those who pretend to be free from all prejudices. Below is a thought of the poet, Paul Claudel:

"Blessed are you, O my God, who freed me from all the idols and who made me adore you alone, and not Isis or Osiris, or Justice, Progress, Truth, Divinity, Humanity, the Laws of nature, of art or of beauty."

And who has not permitted these things to exist, that are not, or are the vacuum left by your absence. I know that you are not the God of the dead, but of the living."

*Lord, I found you! The one who finds you no longer tolerates
death."*

¹ Not to us, O Lord, not to us, but to your name be the glory,
for the sake of your love and faithfulness.

² Why should the pagans say,
"Where is their God?"

³ There in heaven is our God; whatever he wishes, he does.

⁴ Not so the man-made idols, crafted in silver and gold.

⁵ They have mouths that cannot speak, eyes that cannot see,

⁶ ears that cannot hear,
noses that cannot smell.

⁷ They have hands but cannot feel, feet, but cannot walk;
neither can they make a sound in their throat.

⁸ Their makers will be like them, so will all who trust in them.

⁹ O Israel, trust in the Lord;
he is our help and shield!

¹⁰ O family of Aaron, trust in the Lord;
he is our help and shield!

¹¹ You who fear the Lord, trust in him;
he is our help and shield!

¹² The Lord remembers us and will bless us;
he will bless the family of Israel;
he will bless the family of Aaron;

¹³ he will bless those who fear the Lord, both the small and the great.

¹⁴ May the Lord increase your numbers, yours and your children's as well.

¹⁵ May you be blessed by the Lord,
Maker of heaven and earth.

¹⁶ Heaven belongs to the Lord, but the earth he has given to man.

¹⁷ It is not the dead who praise the Lord, for they have gone down to silence;

¹⁸ but it is the living who bless him, from this time forth and forever.
Praise the Lord!

PSALM 116 (114-115)

Jesus prayed this psalm at the beginning of his passion. Some words of these verses take on a different meaning if we relate them to Jesus: I love the Lord, he saved me from death; I will raise the cup of salvation; the death of his faithful ones is precious in the eyes of the Lord.

The mass represents Christ's sacrifice and it is called Eucharist, meaning: Thanksgiving. Following we offer one of the prayers accompanying the celebration in the early church; it is found in the Didache:

Like this broken bread – once spread over the hills – was gathered to form a single whole, may your church also be gathered from all the ends of the earth into your kingdom.

To you, Glory forever!

Holy Father, we give you thanks, for your holy Name, which you have made to dwell in our hearts, and for the knowledge, the faith and the immortality which you revealed to us through Jesus, your Servant.

You are the all-powerful Master who created us for the praise of your Name, who gave food and drink to men for their delight, so they would give you praise. But you have granted us spiritual food and drink and eternal life, through your Servant, Jesus. Before all else, we thank you for your power.

Remember your church, O Lord; free her from all evil; make her perfect in loving you. From the four cardinal points, gather your holy church in the kingdom you have prepared for her.

Glory to you forever. Amen!

You have freed me from death. – "I will walk in the presence of the Lord in the land of the living." With all the people whom God saved from death, with our Saviour Jesus Christ, we offer our gratitude.

¹ Alleluia!

I love the Lord, for he has heard my voice in supplication.

² Because he has not been deaf to me,
I will call on him as long as I live.

³ When the cords of death entangled me, the snares of the grave laid hold of me,
when affliction got the better of me,

⁴ I called upon the name of the Lord:
"O Lord, save my life!"

⁵ Gracious and righteous is the Lord;
full of compassion is our God.

⁶ the Lord protects the simple:
he saved me when I was humbled.

⁷ Return, O my soul, to your rest, for the Lord has been good to you.

⁸ He has freed my soul from death, my eyes from weeping,
my feet from stumbling;

⁹ I will walk before the Lord
in the land of the living.

¹⁰ I have kept faith even when I said,
"I am greatly afflicted."

¹¹ I have said in my dismay,
"To hope in man is vain."

¹² How can I repay the Lord for all his goodness to me?

¹³ I will lift up the cup of salvation and call on the name of the Lord.

¹⁴I will fulfil my vows to the Lord
under the eyes of his people.

¹⁵It is painful to the Lord to see the death of his faithful.

¹⁶O Lord, I am your servant, truly your servant, your handmaid's son.
You have freed me of my bonds.

¹⁷I will offer you a thanksgiving sacrifice;
I will call on the name of the Lord.

¹⁸I will carry out my vows to the Lord
under the eyes of his people,

¹⁹in the courts of the house of the Lord, in your midst, O Jerusalem.
Praise the Lord!

¹*Alleluia!*

Praise the Lord, all you nations;
extol him, all you peoples.

²How great is his love for us!
His faithfulness lasts forever.
The Lord be praised!

PSALM 118 (117)

I will not die, I will live! – "The stone which the builders rejected became the cornerstone." Jesus applied to himself the image of the rejected stone (Mt 21:42; 1 Pt 2:4). And when he enters the Temple, children sing: "Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord."

This psalm was sung when the processions entered the Jerusalem Temple. The people and their leader alternated with the choir of Levites.

What does Israel sing? Their thanksgiving to God who saves them from death or who raises them; to God who chooses the poor and the despised of this world to build his kingdom with them.

In its own way, this psalm already proclaimed Christ's resurrection.

¹Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good,
his love endures forever.

²Let Israel say,
"His love endures forever."

³Let the house of Aaron say,
"His love endures forever."

⁴Let those who fear the Lord say,
"His love endures forever."

⁵In anguish I cried to the Lord;
he answered by setting me free.

⁶With the Lord beside me I need not fear.
What can man do to me?

⁷The Lord is with me, ready to help;
I can look in triumph upon my enemies.

⁸It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in the help of man.

⁹It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in the might of princes.

¹⁰ All the nations surrounded me;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.

¹¹ They surrounded me on every side;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.

¹² Like swarms of bees they encircled me, but were extinguished like burning thorns;
in the name of the Lord I crushed them.

¹³ I was pressed and about to fall, but the Lord came to my help.

¹⁴ The Lord is my strength and my song;
he has become my salvation.

¹⁵ Joyful shouts of victory are heard in the tents of the virtuous:

"The right hand of the Lord strikes mightily,

¹⁶ the right hand of the Lord is lifted high,
the right hand of the Lord strikes mightily!"

¹⁷ I shall not die, but live to proclaim what the Lord has done.

¹⁸ The Lord has punished me severely, but he has delivered me from death.

¹⁹ Open to me the gates of justice, and let me enter to give thanks.

²⁰ _ "This is the Lord's gate through which the righteous enter." _

²¹ I thank you for having answered me, for having delivered me.

²² The stone rejected by the builders has become the keystone.

²³ This was the Lord's doing and we marvel at it.

²⁴ This is the day the Lord has made;
so let us rejoice and be glad.

²⁵ Save us, O Lord, grant us success!

²⁶ Blessed is he who comes in the Lord's name!
We bless you from the house of the Lord.

²⁷ The Lord is God; he has made his light shine upon us."

With leafy boughs, join in procession up to the horns of the altar.

²⁸ You are my God, and I give you thanks.
You are my God, and I give you praise.

²⁹ Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good;
his steadfast love endures forever!

PSALM 119 (118)

Psalm about the Law. – Again and again, the longest psalm in the Bible says that to follow the words of God is life and happiness.

¹Blessed are they whose ways are upright, who follow the law of the Lord.

²Blessed are they who cherish his word and seek him with all their heart.

³They do no wrong; they walk in the ways of righteousness.

⁴You have laid down precepts to be obeyed. ⁵Oh, that my ways were steadfast in observing your statutes!

⁶Then I would not be put to disgrace, having paid attention to your decrees.

⁷I will praise you with an upright spirit when I learn your precepts by heart.

⁸I mean to observe your commandments. Oh, never abandon me.

⁹How can a young man remain pure? By living according to your word.

¹⁰I seek you with my whole heart; let me not stray from your commands.

¹¹In my heart I have kept your word, that I may not sin against my Lord.

¹²Praise be to you, O God; instruct me in your statutes, ¹³that with my lips I may declare all the ordinances from your mouth.

¹⁴I delight in following your decrees, more so than in all riches.

¹⁵I will meditate on your precepts and concentrate on your ways.

¹⁶In your laws I will rejoice and will not neglect your words.

¹⁷Be kind to your servant, that I may live to observe your word.

¹⁸Open my eyes that I may perceive the marvelous truths in your law.

¹⁹From me, a wanderer on earth, hide not your commandments.

²⁰My soul is consumed with desire for your ordinances at all times.

²¹You reprove the accursed ones who stray arrogantly from your commands.

²²Remove from me their scorn and contempt, since I have followed your precepts.

²³Although princes conspire against me, your servant will observe your decrees.

²⁴Your laws are my delight, my counselors who uphold me.

²⁵In the dust I lie prostrate; lift me up, as promised by your word.

²⁶When I explained my ways, you responded; instruct me then in your precepts.

²⁷Explain to me all your ordinances, and I will meditate on your wondrous deeds.

²⁸My soul is weary with sorrow; strengthen me according to your word.

²⁹Keep me away from deceitful paths; be gracious and teach me your law.

³⁰I have chosen the way of truth; I have set my heart upon your laws.

³¹Since I cling to your decrees, O Lord, save me from disgrace.

³²I will run in the way of your commands, for you have freed my heart at last.

³³Explain to me, O Lord, your commandments, and I will be ever faithful to them.

³⁴Give me understanding, that I may keep and observe your law with all my heart.

³⁵Guide me in obeying your instructions, for my pleasure lies in them.

³⁶Incline my heart to follow your will and not my own selfish desire.

³⁷Turn my eyes away from vanities and direct them to your life-giving word.

³⁸Fulfill your promise to your servant, so that others may revere you.

³⁹Ward off the reproach I fear, for the good of your law and order.

⁴⁰Oh, how I long for your precepts! Renew my life in your righteousness.

⁴¹Give me your unfailing love, O Lord, your salvation as you have promised.

⁴²Strengthened by my trust in your words, I can answer my enemy's reproach.

⁴³Take not the word of truth from my mouth, for you would take also my hope in your word.

⁴⁴I desire to cherish your word continually, for ever and ever; ⁴⁵and I shall walk about in freedom, having sought out your laws.

⁴⁶I will proclaim your word before kings, and I will not be confused or ashamed.

⁴⁷For I delight in your word, which I fear. ⁴⁸I revere your word, which I hold dear; and I meditate on your commandments.

⁴⁹Remember your word to your servant, your word which has given me hope.

⁵⁰My consolation in suffering is this: that your promise renews my life.

⁵¹The arrogant mock me without end, but to your word I faithfully cling.

⁵²Remembering your ordinances of old, I find comfort in them, O Lord.

⁵³I feel indignant at the wicked who have forsaken your law.

⁵⁴Your decrees are the theme of my song, in this my place of exile.

⁵⁵Each night I call on your name, O Lord, and renew my vow to keep your word.

⁵⁶This has been my practice, and I have kept your precepts.

⁵⁷You are my portion, O Lord; I have promised to obey your word.

⁵⁸With all my heart I have sought your face; be gracious to me according to your promise.

⁵⁹I have considered my ways and have turned my steps to your paths.

⁶⁰I will hurry and no longer delay in keeping your commands.

⁶¹The wicked have me trapped in their snares, but I have not forgotten your laws.

⁶²At midnight I rise to praise you for the justice of your ordinances.

⁶³I am an ally for those who fear you, for those who keep your precepts.

⁶⁴The earth is full of your love, O Lord! Teach me your decrees.

⁶⁵Be good to your servant, O Lord; in accordance with your words.

⁶⁶Give me knowledge and good judgment, for I believe in your commandments.

⁶⁷Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I obey your word.

⁶⁸You are good, and good are your works; teach me your decrees.

⁶⁹I am slandered by the arrogant, but I keep your precepts within my heart.

⁷⁰Their hearts have grown callous with pride, but I delight in your laws.

⁷¹It is good for me to have been afflicted, for I have deeply learned your statutes.

⁷²Your law is more precious to me than thousands of pieces of silver and gold.

⁷³Give me discernment to know your commands, since I have been formed by your hands.

⁷⁴Those who fear you will be glad, seeing that I hope in your word.

⁷⁵I know, O Lord, that your laws are just, and there is justice in my affliction.

⁷⁶ Comfort me then with your un-failing love, as you promised your servant.

⁷⁷ Let your mercy come to give me life, for your law is my delight.

⁷⁸ Humble the arrogant who oppress me as I meditate on your precepts.

⁷⁹ Let those who fear you turn to me, that they may understand your statutes.

⁸⁰ May my heart be blameless in your decrees, that I may not be held in disgrace.

⁸¹ My soul longs for your protection; your word is my hope of salvation.

⁸² I have kept watch for your promise. "When will you comfort me?" I ask.

⁸³ I have become as dry as a wine-skin, yet I have not forgotten your statutes.

⁸⁴ How long must your servant endure? When will you judge my persecutor?

⁸⁵ The arrogant have dug pitfalls for me in defiance of your law.

⁸⁶ Your law indeed is trustworthy, but my persecutor's cause is blame-worthy.

⁸⁷ They have almost put an end to me on earth, and yet I have not forsaken your precepts.

⁸⁸ In your kindness preserve my life, that I may keep the decrees of your mouth.

⁸⁹ O Lord, your word stands forever, firmly fixed in the heavens.

⁹⁰ Your truth endures throughout all generations – as long as the earth that you established.

⁹¹ Your ordinances endure to this day for all things are made to serve you.

⁹² If your law had not been my pleasure, I would have perished in my affliction.

⁹³ Never will I forget your precepts, for by them have I been given life.

⁹⁴ Save me for I am yours, for I have sought your statutes.

⁹⁵ The wicked lie in wait to destroy me, but I look to your word for salvation.

⁹⁶ I saw that all perfection is limited but your commandment has no limit at all.

⁹⁷ How I have learned to love your law, meditating on it all day!

⁹⁸ Your commandment ever with me has made me wiser than my enemy.

⁹⁹ I have more insight than my teachers for I meditate on your decrees.

¹⁰⁰ I have more discernment than the elders for I abide by your precepts.

¹⁰¹ I have held back my feet from evil paths, that I may keep step with your word.

¹⁰² I have not departed from your decrees for you yourself have instructed me.

¹⁰³ How sweet are your promises to my taste, sweeter than honey to my taste!

¹⁰⁴ Your precepts have enriched my perception, and made me hate all deceptive ways.

¹⁰⁵ Your word is a lamp to my feet, a light for my path.

¹⁰⁶ I have taken an oath to observe and keep your righteous ordinances.

¹⁰⁷ I have suffered much, O Lord; renew my life according to your word.

¹⁰⁸ Accept my offerings of praise, O Lord, and teach me your decrees.

¹⁰⁹ I am ready to sacrifice my life for your Law that is always in my heart.

¹¹⁰ The wicked have laid a snare for me but I do not stray from your precepts.

¹¹¹ Your statutes are my heritage forever, they are the joy of my heart.

¹¹² From age to age, I am determined to fulfil your decrees until the end.

¹¹³ I detest double-dealing men, but I treasure the truth of your law.

¹¹⁴ You are my shield, my refuge; my hope is in your word.

¹¹⁵ Leave me alone, you evildoers; let me keep the commandments of my God.

¹¹⁶ Uphold me, O Lord, that I may live according to your promises; let me not be disappointed in my hope.

¹¹⁷ Support me and I shall be safe, and faithfully keep your decrees.

¹¹⁸ You spurn all who stray from your decrees, for vain is their deceit.

¹¹⁹ You discard all the wicked as dross; that is why I love your statutes.

¹²⁰ My flesh trembles in fear of you; I stand in awe before your laws.

¹²¹ I have done what is just and right; do not leave me to my oppressors.

¹²² Ensure the well-being of your servant; let not the arrogant oppress me.

¹²³ I strain my eyes looking for your salvation, watching for the fulfilment of your promise.

¹²⁴ Treat your servant with compassion, and instruct me in your decrees.

¹²⁵ Give me discernment; I am your servant who desires to understand your statutes.

¹²⁶ It is time for you, O Lord, to act, for they have broken your law.

¹²⁷ Because I love your commandments more than gold, no matter how pure it may be,

¹²⁸ because my steps are guided by your precepts, I hate and shun all deceitful paths.

¹²⁹ So wonderful are your decrees that my soul cannot but keep them.

¹³⁰ As your words unfold, light is shed, and the simple-hearted understand.

¹³¹ I gasp in ardent yearning for your commandments that I love.

¹³² Turn to me then and be gracious as you do to those who love your name.

¹³³ You promised to direct my steps; free my path from evil.

¹³⁴ Rescue me from man's oppression, and help me keep your precepts.

¹³⁵ Favour me with your smile and teach me your statutes.

¹³⁶ I shed tears for men who disobey your law.

¹³⁷ O Lord, you are just, and your judgments proper.

¹³⁸ You have pronounced your decrees in justice and faithfulness.

¹³⁹ I am filled with unwearied zeal, seeing how my foes ignore your words.

¹⁴⁰ Your promises have been tested, and in them rests your servant's hope.

¹⁴¹ Though I am lowly and despised, I do not forget your precepts.

¹⁴² Your justice is eternal and your Law is trustworthy.

¹⁴³ In calamity and in anguish, your ordinances are my delight.

¹⁴⁴ Your commandments are forever just; give me discernment, that I may live by them.

¹⁴⁵ Sincerely I call; answer me, O Lord: help me observe your statutes.

¹⁴⁶ I call upon you, save me and I will keep your decrees.

¹⁴⁷ Before dawn I rise and cry for help, putting all my hope in your words.

¹⁴⁸ I lie awake through the night meditating on your promises.

¹⁴⁹ Hear my voice, in your unfailing love; in your justice, O Lord, preserve my life.

¹⁵⁰ My persecutors close in with their evil intent; they have gone far from your Law.

¹⁵¹ But you, O Lord, are closer still, and all your commandments are true.

¹⁵² Long have I known that your decrees were founded to last forever.

¹⁵³ Look upon my suffering and rescue me, for I have not forgotten your Law.

¹⁵⁴ Plead my cause and redeem me; and, as you promised, give me life anew.

¹⁵⁵ Salvation is far from the wicked, for they do not seek your statutes.

¹⁵⁶ Great is your compassion, O Lord; renew my life according to your word.

¹⁵⁷ Many foes persecute me, but I have not turned away from your law.

¹⁵⁸ I look upon the faithless with loathing, because they do not obey your ruling.

¹⁵⁹ See how I love to follow your precepts; give me life, O Lord, in your kindness.

¹⁶⁰ The essence of your word is truth, everlasting are your just ordinances.

¹⁶¹ Rulers persecute me for no cause, yet my heart stands in awe of your words.

¹⁶² I rejoice because of your promise, as one who has found great riches.

¹⁶³ I hate and abhor falsehood, but I love your law.

¹⁶⁴ Seven times a day I praise you for your just ordinances.

¹⁶⁵ Lovers of your Law have found great peace; nothing can make them stumble, not even distress.

¹⁶⁶ O Lord, I wait for your salvation, and I keep your commands in faith.

¹⁶⁷ My soul clings to your words for I truly cherish them.

¹⁶⁸ I obey your precepts and your decrees, for my ways are always before you.

¹⁶⁹ Let my cry come to you, O Lord; give me discernment according to your word.

¹⁷⁰ May my prayer come before you; rescue me as you have promised.

¹⁷¹ Let my lips overflow with praise, for you teach me your decrees.

¹⁷² Let my tongue sing of your good news, for all your utterances are true.

¹⁷³ Let your hand be ready to help me, for I have chosen your precepts.

¹⁷⁴ I long for your salvation, O Lord; my delight is in your law.

¹⁷⁵ Long may I live to sing your praise, may your ordinances ever be my help!

¹⁷⁶ Like a stray sheep I wander about – come and look for your lost servant. I always have your commandments in mind.

PSALM 120 (119)

Pilgrims often came to the Temple with many preoccupations: some were not at peace with their neighbours; others were complaining of not living with believers, but with pagans. They were longing for the peace which God gives those who come close to him.

Psalms 120 to 134 have the same title: 'Song of Ascents.' They were, no doubt, sung by the Jewish pilgrims walking up to the temple of Jerusalem. This is why, we often find ¹ I call to the Lord in my distress, and he answers me.

² Deliver me, O Lord, from lying lips and from deceitful tongues.

in them, an antiphon which the crowd of pilgrims used to repeat.

³How shall he pay you back,
O deceitful and lying tongue?
⁴He will punish you with sharp arrows with glowing coals of the broom tree!
⁵This is worse than exile in Meshech, much worse than dwelling in Kedar.
⁶Long have I dwelt among those who hate peace; ⁷but when I speak of peace, they all talk of war.

PSALM 121 (120)

God is faithful: night and day, he neither sleeps nor dozes. He is concerned, attentive to what is happening.

On the road to Emmaus, Jesus walks along with them and they do not recognize him.

"If God is for us, who can be against us?"

This can be the prayer of Christians who undertake a difficult task: a convert: a new home: a future priest: someone with an important commitment in society (unions, politics, the common good).

God will not fail you. – The pilgrim on the way to Jerusalem is thinking about the hardships of the journey: the difficulty of the road, the heat of the day, perhaps the dangers from thieves. But he knows that God is with him and that he accompanies him on the way.

¹I lift up my eyes to the mountains – from where shall come my help?
²My help comes from the Lord,
maker of heaven and earth.
³He will not let your foot slip.
He watches over you and will not slumber.
⁴Look, he who keeps Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps.
⁵The Lord is your guardian;
the Lord is your shade.
⁶The sun will not harm you by day, nor the moon by night.
⁷The Lord will guard you from evil;
he will protect your life.
⁸The Lord will watch over your coming and going both now and forever.

PSALM 122 (121)

The Temple was the symbol of God present among his people.

Jesus admired, especially, the kingdom of God in the hearts of believers: "Believe me, woman, an hour is coming when they will neither adore the Father in Jerusalem... The true worshippers will worship the Father in spirit and in truth" (Jn 4:21).

We will go to the house of the Lord. – A hymn filled with the enthusiasm and happiness of a pilgrim upon arriving at the Jerusalem Temple. Admiration for the building. Pride in seeing the crowd arriving. And something even more profound: an experience of sharing life with other believers.

¹I rejoiced with those who told me, "Let us go to the house of the Lord!"
²And now we have set foot within your gates, O Jerusalem!
³Jerusalem, built as a city, firmly bound together!

"You are the Temple of the Holy Spirit" (1 Cor 6:19).

This may be the prayer of the believer who admires the presence of God in the church, as well as of the person who doubts and seeks ways to believe.

⁴There the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord,
to give thanks to the Lord's name,
as was decreed for Israel.

⁵There stand the courts of justice where judgment is given by the sons of David.

⁶Pray for the peace of Jerusalem:
"May those who love you prosper!"

⁷May peace be within your walls and security within your citadels!"

⁸For the sake of my relatives and friends
I will say, "Peace be with you!"

⁹For the sake of the house of our Lord,
I will pray for your good.

PSALM 123 (122)

Prayer of the afflicted.

The cry of petition and hope of the Jews who, upon returning from the exile, are humiliated and despised by their pagan neighbors.

How often we hear, in the Gospel, this same cry of the afflicted. Think especially about the persistent attitude of the Cannanite woman: "Lord, have pity on me." She pursues Christ with desperate insistence: he is her only salvation.

Lord, with all the people who, today, suffer from lies and evil, the humiliated, the marginalized, we beg you to manifest your goodness.

Psalm of hope. – We know that our good Father always listens to us. We must keep our eyes fixed upon the Lord, without growing tired, until he tells us: "See, your faith has saved you."

¹To you I lift up my eyes, to you whose throne is in heaven.

²As the eyes of servants look to the hand of their master, as the eyes of maids look to the hand of their mistress, so our eyes look to the Lord our God, till he shows us his mercy.

³Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us,
for we have our fill of contempt.

⁴Too long have our souls been filled with the scorn of the arrogant, with the ridicule of the insolent.

PSALM 124 (123)

Thanksgiving for overcoming trials

With admiration and gratitude, the people of God remember the trials which they have overcome because the Lord was with them.

Call to give thanks. From the ten lepers who were healed, in the Gospel, only one comes back to thank the Lord. "Were not ten healed? Where are the other nine?" (Lk 17:17).

We forget to give thanks because we do not know how to discover the

We escaped from the hunter's snare. – "The very hairs of your head are numbered, you are worth much more than the birds."

¹Had not the Lord been on our side – let Israel say –

²had not the Lord been on our side, when men rose up against us,

³then they would have swallowed us alive.

When their anger flared up against us,

⁴then the flood would have engulfed us, the torrent would have swept over us,

⁵the raging waters would have swept us away.

wonders of God in our lives and in the world.

⁶Blessed be the Lord, who did not hand us over to their jaws.
⁷Like a bird we were rescued from the snare of the fowler;
the snare was broken and we were freed.
⁸Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

PSALM 125 (124)

This psalm helps us understand the Lord's promise: "Know that I am with you until the end of the world" (Mt 28:20). "I will not leave you orphans. I will come back to you" (Jn 14:18).

Prayer for the dark moments of life, when things do not turn out right, when the fruit of our actions is not seen.

When we feel helpless in the face of injustice and organized violence, before the corruption and the complacency which perhaps penetrated within the church.

Trust in the Lord. – The pilgrim could admire the walls of Jerusalem, almost inaccessible to enemies. This is an image of God's protection.

¹Those who trust in the Lord are like Mount Zion, which is immovable and stands forever.
²As mountains surround Jerusalem, so the Lord encompasses his people,
now and forever.
³The sceptre of the wicked will not remain over the land allotted to the upright, for then the upright might learn to put their hands to evil deeds.
⁴Be good, O Lord, to those who are good, to those who are upright in heart.
⁵But those who turn to crooked ways, the Lord will drive out with the evildoers.
May peace remain upon Israel.

PSALM 126 (125)

Prayer upon returning from the exile which was the great trial of the people. It shows the happiness over the end of captivity, something which seemed incredible to them: We were like men dreaming.

We cannot help recalling the thanksgiving of the Virgin Mary: "The Lord has done great things for me. Holy is my God" or Peter's prayer when he left the jail (Acts 12:9-11).

In a world seeking economic independence and access to culture, it would be good to pray this psalm to strengthen our hope and to stimulate our persevering efforts.

They go in tears and they will come back with their sheaves. – This psalm expresses the mystery of life springing up from death. It refers to the afflicted and to those who are disappointed because they do not see the fruit of their labor.

¹When the Lord brought the exiles back to Zion, we were like those moving in a dream.
²Then our mouths were filled with laughter, and our tongues with songs of joy.
Among the nations it was said,
"The Lord has done great things for them."
³The Lord has done great things for us, and now we are glad indeed.
⁴Restore our fortunes, O Lord, like fresh streams in the desert.
⁵May those who sow in tears reap with songs and shouts of joy.
⁶May those who go forth weeping, bearing the seeds for sowing,
come home with joyful shouts, bringing their sheaves of harvest.

PSALM 127 (126)

The believer lives his life day by day.

He does not eliminate the time of prayer, of family fellowship, participation in the Christian community, nor does he waste away his health in overwork. He knows that families with the largest incomes are not always the ones who best make ends meet, and that the richest home is not where people are the happiest. The Father asks us to work, but he also gave us the law of the Sabbath.

What is built without God will fail. – It is useless to spend our days and years in search of a thousand things, innovations and comfort if, with these, we pass through so many events and joys which the present moment was preserving for us, as if we were blind and insensitive.

¹Unless the Lord builds the house, in vain do its builders labour.
Unless the Lord guards the city, in vain does the guard stay awake.

²It is in vain that you rise early and stay up late, putting off your rest, toiling for your hard-earned bread;
for he provides for his loved ones
even when they are asleep.

³Sons are a gift from the Lord;
the fruit of the womb is a reward.

⁴Like arrows in the hands of a warrior are the sons of one's youth.

⁵Blessed is the man who has filled his quiver with arrows of this kind, for he will not be put to shame when he contends with his foes at the gate.

PSALM 128 (127)

This psalm celebrates the happiness God grants the just man in his home, his wife and his children: It will go well for him.

“Seek first the Kingdom of God and his justice and the rest will be given to you besides” (Mt 6:33).

The blessing of the home. – Contrasting with those who are anxious and impatient, the believer tries to see the good side of life and of the world. He recognizes the blessings God granted his home and the Christian community.

¹Blessed are you who fear the Lord and walk in his ways.

²You will eat the fruit of your toil;
blessed will you be, and favoured.

³Blessed be your wife the fruitful vine of your house;
blessed be your children,
the olive shoots around your table.

⁴Such are the blessings bestowed upon the man who fears the Lord. “

⁵May the Lord bless you from Zion at every moment of your life.

⁶May you live long to see the children of your own children.
Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 129 (128)

From its youth in the desert, the people of God were persecuted. – In the end, their enemies were dispersed while they remained. May the Lord grant us “to produce the fruits of constancy.”

Happy are those who are humble of heart. What pleases God is not selfish tranquility, but the trust of a child who knows he can rely on his father's support to act, to serve: "I did not come to be served, but to serve."

Prayer of the concerned and generous man who needs to know that God is with him. "Do not be distressed by anything, but always say everything to God in prayer."

¹They have oppressed me hard from my youth – let Israel say – ²They have oppressed me hard from my youth – but have not put me down.

³Upon my back the plowmen have plowed long and deep furrows

⁴But the Lord, who is just, has shattered the yoke of the wicked.

⁵May all who hate Zion be thrown into confusion.

⁶May they be like grass on the housetop, which withers before it springs up.

⁷No reaper sets his hands on it, no one gathers it to fill his arms.

⁸Never shall the passers-by say of them; "The blessing of the Lord be upon you!" We bless you in the name of the Lord!

PSALM 130 (129)

When man is crushed is when he most feels his condition as a sinner. He addresses God who, for a moment, hides from him. He knows that with persistent and loud cries, he will succeed in being heard by the one who always forgives.

I wait for the Lord; I trust in his word. This, which the Jews prayed while hoping for liberation by God, is valid for us as well, since we continue to live by Christ's promises. We have everything in hope. We do not travel the path of faith in the midst of God's favors and carried away by enthusiasm, but instead, after the easy fervor of the beginnings, we must grope along, in the dark. Just like the sentinel waits for the dawn, the believer waits for the second coming of Christ.

From the depths I cry to you. – Penitential psalm, but above all, a prayer of trust in God.

¹Out of the depths I cry to you,

²O Lord, hear my voice!
Let your ears pay attention to the voice of my supplication.

³If you should mark our evil,
O Lord, who could stand?

⁴But with you is forgiveness, and for that you are revered.

⁵I wait for the Lord, my soul waits, and I put my hope in his word.

⁶My soul waits for the Lord more eagerly than watchmen wait for the morning.

⁷O Israel, hope in the Lord, for with him is unfailing love and fullness of redemption.

⁸He will deliver Israel from all its transgression.

PSALM 131 (130)

Childlike trust in the Lord. – A simple and humble prayer filled with trust. It reminds us of the calm of a little child in his mother's arms. Is not this the attitude which Jesus praises?

¹O Lord, my heart is not proud nor do I expect too much.

I am not engrossed in ambitious matters, nor in things too great for me.

²I have quieted and stilled my soul like a weaned child on its mother's lap; like a contented child is my soul.

³Hope in the Lord, O Israel,
now and forever.

PSALM 132 (131)

Do not forget the descendants of your servant David.

¹Remember David, O Lord, and all the hardships he endured. ²how he swore an oath to the Lord, to the Mighty One of Jacob.

³"I will not enter my house nor get into bed.

⁴I will give no sleep to my eyes, no slumber to my eyelids, ⁵until I find a place for the Lord, a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob."

⁶We heard of his Ark in Ephrathah we found it in the fields of Jaar:

⁷Let us go where he dwells and worship at his footstool!

⁸Arise, O Lord, and come to your rest, you and the ark of your might.

⁹May your priests be arrayed in righteousness; may your faithful ones shout in gladness.

¹⁰For the sake of your servant, David, do not turn away the face of your anointed.

¹¹The Lord swore to David a promise, and he will remain true to it:

"I promise that a son of yours will sit upon your throne.

¹²If your sons keep my covenant and the decrees I have taught them, their sons, too, will sit forever upon your throne."

¹³For the Lord has chosen Zion; he has desired it for his dwelling:

¹⁴"This is my resting place forever; here I will dwell, for that is my desire.

¹⁵I will bless her fruits, her bread, and the poor will be satisfied.

¹⁶I will clothe her priests with glory and her faithful will sing in gladness.

¹⁷From here a saviour shall come forth, a son of David; here shall shine forever the lamp of my anointed.

¹⁸In shame will I clothe his enemies, but upon his head a crown shall flourish.

PSALM 133 (132)

What a great thing fraternal life is! The sweetness and intimacy of fraternal life are a gift of God and they come from above through the Holy Spirit poured into our hearts. The example of the early Christian communities contributed to the spreading of the faith. "May they all be one so that the world may believe."

¹How good and delightful to see brothers living together in unity!

²It is like precious oil poured upon Aaron's head, running down his beard onto the collar of his robes.

³It is like the dew of Hermon coming down the mountains of Zion, where the Lord confers his blessing:
life everlasting.

PSALM 134 (133)

A song of praise: it may have been used in the Temple during a night ceremony when the priests would take turns to assure God of unceasing praise.

Christ spent a lot of time, and on occasions entire nights, praying for his disciples: "Jesus went up the hill to pray alone."

We may think about our companions at work, whose turn it is to work nights, about the sick people who do not sleep, so that their work, their fatigue, their sufferings may be a song of praise to the Lord.

¹Come, bless the Lord,
all you servants of the Lord, who minister by night
in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

²Raise your hands to the sanctuary and bless the Lord.

³May the Lord bless you from Zion, he who made heaven and earth.

PSALM 135 (134)

Praise the Lord who chose us for himself.

¹Alleluia! Praise the name of the Lord. O servants of the Lord, praise him, ²you who serve in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

³Praise the Lord, for he is good, praise his name, for it is beautiful ⁴for the Lord has chosen Jacob as his own, Israel as his possession.

⁵I know that the Lord is great, that our Lord is above all gods.

⁶Whatever the Lord pleases, he does – in heaven and on earth, in the seas and in their depths.

⁷He raises clouds from the ends of the earth; he hurls down lightning with the rain; and from his vaults he lets loose the wind.

⁸It was he who slew the firstborn in Egypt, both of man and of beast.

⁹It was he who sent signs and wonders into your midst, O Egypt, against Pharaoh and all his officers.

¹⁰He destroyed mighty nations and kings –

¹¹Sihon, king of the Amorites, Og, king of Bashan, all the kings of Canaan.

¹²He gave their land as inheritance to Israel, his people.

¹³Your name, O Lord, endures forever; your renown, O Lord, throughout the ages.

¹⁴For the Lord will vindicate his people and show mercy to his servants.

¹⁵The nations' idols of gold and silver are the work of human hands.

¹⁶They have mouths that cannot speak, eyes that cannot see, ¹⁷ears that cannot hear; neither is there breath in their mouths.

¹⁸Their makers will be like them, so will all who trust in them.

¹⁹Bless the Lord, house of Israel; bless the Lord, house of Aaron; ²⁰bless the Lord, house of Levi; bless the Lord, all you who fear him.

²¹Blessed be the Lord from Zion, he who dwells in Jerusalem. Praise the Lord!

PSALM 136 (135)

Give thanks to the Lord. Thanksgiving hymn, used for the Passover feast, the feast of the liberation of God's people. "Your love is everlasting" and in eternity, we will never stop, nor grow tired of discovering it.

¹Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good,
his love endures forever.

²Give thanks to the God of gods,
his love endures forever.
³Give thanks to the Lord of lords,
his love endures forever.
⁴He alone does great marvels,
his love endures forever.
⁵In wisdom he made the heavens,
his love endures forever.
⁶He set the earth upon the waters,
his love endures forever.
⁷He made the great lights,
his love endures forever, ⁸the sun to rule over the day,
his love endures forever, ⁹the moon and stars to rule the night,
his love endures forever.
¹⁰He slew the firstborn of Egypt,
his love endures forever, ¹¹and brought Israel out,
his love endures forever, ¹²with strong hand and outstretched arm,
his love endures forever.
¹³He split the Sea of Reeds,
his love endures forever, ¹⁴and made Israel pass through it,

his love endures forever, ¹⁵drowning Pharaoh and his army,
his love endures forever, ¹⁶and led his people through the desert,
his love endures forever.
¹⁷He struck down great kings,
his love endures forever, ¹⁸and killed mighty kings,
his love endures forever, ¹⁹Sihon, king of the Amorites,
his love endures forever, ²⁰and Og, king of Bashan,
his love endures forever.
²¹He gave their land as inheritance,
his love endures forever, ²²a heritage to Israel his servant,
his love endures forever.
²³He remembered us in our humiliation,
his love endures forever, ²⁴and freed us from our oppressors,
his love endures forever, ²⁵he who gives food to all creatures,
his love endures forever.
²⁶Give thanks to the God of heaven,
his love endures forever!

PSALM 137 (136)

Jerusalem, I will not forget you.

¹By the streams of Babylon, we sat and wept as we remembered Zion.

²There on the poplars we hung our harps and lyres ³when our captors asked for song.

Our tormentors wanted songs of joy: "Sing to us one of the songs of Zion!"

⁴How could we sing the Lord's song in a strange and alien land?

⁵If I forget you, O Jerusalem, may my right hand leave me!

⁶May my tongue cleave to my palate if I remember you not, if I consider not Jerusalem above all that gives me joy.

⁷Remember, O Lord, the Edomites
— what they did and said when Jerusalem fell. They cried, "Tear the city down, tear it down to its foundations!"

⁸O daughter of Babylon, doomed to destruction, happy is he who repays you for what you have done to us!

⁹Happy is he who seizes and dashes your infants against the rocks!

¹³⁶ Praise of the marvels of God, creation of the world; liberation from Egypt; Providence (the daily bread).

To us, this thanksgiving may, perhaps, seem too limited to the Jewish national history, but, though our horizons have expanded (see Paul's praise in Eph 1:3-14), this must not prevent us from recognizing God's presence in every day events and even in politics: "All things come from God and were made for him."

PSALM 138 (137)

¹I thank you, O Lord, with all my heart, for you have heard the word of my lips.
I sing your praise in the presence of the gods.

²I bow down towards your holy temple and give thanks to your name, for your love and faithfulness, for you have exalted your promise above all.
³You answered me when I called;
you made me strong and bold.

⁴O Lord, all kings on earth will give you praise, when they have heard your words.

⁵The ways of the Lord they will celebrate, for the glory of the Lord is great!

⁶From above, the Lord watches over the lowly;
from afar, he marks down the haughty.

⁷Though I walk in the midst of trouble, you give me life.

With outstretched arm, you save me from the wrath of my foes, with your right hand you deliver me.

⁸The Lord will do everything for me.
Your love, O Lord, endures forever.
Forsake not the work of your hands.

PSALM 139 (138)

God knows everything. – A prayer filled with admiration, before God's wisdom: everything is exposed and open in the sight of him to whom we are accountable" (Heb 4.13).

¹O Lord, you know me: you have scrutinized me.

²You know when I sit and when I rise; from far away you discern my thoughts.

³You observe my activities and times of rest; you are familiar with all my ways.

⁴Before a word is formed in my mouth, you know it entirely, O Lord,

⁵From front to back you hedge me round, shielding me with your protecting hand.

⁶Such marvels are beyond me, too lofty for me to attain.

⁷Where else could I go from your Spirit? Where could I flee from your presence?

⁸You are there if I ascend the heavens; you are there if I descend to the depths.

⁹If I ride on the wings of the dawn and settle on the far side of the sea, ¹⁰even there your hand shall guide me and your right hand shall pin me down.

¹¹Shall I say, "Let darkness hide me, and light become night about me?"

¹²But darkness for you is not dark and night for you shines as the day.

¹³It was you who formed my inmost part and knit me together in my mother's womb.

¹⁴I thank you for the wonders you have done, and my heart praises you for your marvelous deeds.

¹⁵Even my bones were known to you when I was being formed in secret, fashioned in the depths of the earth.

¹⁶You have scrutinized my actions and all my days are ordained by you; you have recorded them all in your book before any one of them ever existed.

¹⁷How difficult it is to grasp your thoughts, O God! Their number cannot be counted.

¹⁸If I tried to do so, they would outnumber the sands. When I awake I am still with you.

¹⁹If only you would slay the wicked, O God, and would drive away from me the men of blood!

²⁰Against you they speak wickedly; your foes blaspheme your name.

²¹I hate those who hate you, O Lord, and loathe those who defy you.

²²I hate them and I consider them as my foe.

²³Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts.

²⁴See if my steps have gone astray, and lead me in your eternal way.

PSALM 140 (139)

Free me from the wicked man.

²O Lord, deliver me from men of evil, protect me from violent people, ³forever plotting evil and stirring up strife.

⁴They have tongues sharp as a serpent's and fangs poisonous as a viper's.

⁵Save me, O Lord, from the hands of the wicked, preserve me from the hands of the violent, who have planned to trip my feet.

⁶The arrogant have set a snare for me; they have spread out their nets to entrap me along my path.

⁷I say to the Lord, "You are my God." Hear, O Lord, my voice in supplication.

⁸O God, my Lord, my strength and salvation, in the day of battle you shield my head.

⁹Do not grant, O Lord, the desires of the wicked; do not let their evil schemes succeed.

¹⁰Those who surround me defy me; let them be overwhelmed by the mischief they have threatened.

¹¹Let burning coals rain upon them; let them be cast into the depths, never to rise again.

¹²Do not let the slanderer thrive on earth; let disaster hunt down the violent.

¹³I know that the Lord upholds the cause of the afflicted, and maintains justice for the poor and oppressed.

¹⁴Surely the just shall praise your name, the upright shall dwell in your presence.

PSALM 141 (140)

"Do not lead us into temptation." – May God grant that we resist the seduction of the world around us.

¹Lord, hear my voice and hasten to help me! Listen to my plea when I call to you.

²Let my prayer rise to you like incense, and my hands be lifted up as in an evening sacrifice.

³O Lord, set a guard at my mouth, keep watch at the gate of my lips.

⁴Let not my heart be drawn to evil; let me not be enticed into evil acts in company with sinners, and let me not partake of their delights.

⁵Let a just man strike me, but let not my head be anointed with the oil of the wicked – my prayer is ever against their evil deeds.

⁶When their rulers are flung upon the rock, only then will the wicked learn that my words have been well spoken, ⁷when the earth opens to swallow them and their bones are scattered at the edge of the netherworld.

⁸But my eyes are turned to you, O Lord; strip me not of life, for you are my refuge.

⁹Keep me from the trap they have set for me, keep me from the net laid by evildoers.

¹⁰Let the wicked fall into their own snares, while I alone escape safe and free.

PSALM 142 (141)

In the time of testing. – The prayer of someone in the most dire poverty. This psalm fits the Passion of Christ, and St. Francis of Assisi prayed it when he was dying.

²I cry aloud to the Lord, in a loud voice I beseech the Lord.

³Before him I pour out my sorrows, before him I lay bare my woes.

⁴My spirit grows faint, but you know my path.
Along the way I walk they have hidden a trap for me.

⁵Look to the right and see:
no one takes notice of me.
I have lost all means of escape;
no one wants to help me.

⁶I cry to you, O Lord;
I say, "You are my refuge;
in the land of the living,
my portion, my heritage."

⁷Listen to my groaning, for I have been brought low indeed.
Rescue me from my pursuers, for they are too strong for me.

⁸Oh, set me free from captivity, that I may praise your name!
Then the righteous will gather about me when they see your goodness to me.

PSALM 143 (142)

¹O Lord, hear my prayer, listen to my cry for mercy; answer me faithfully and righteously.

²Do not bring your servant to judgment, for no mortal is just in your sight.

³The enemy has pursued me, crushing my life to the ground, making me dwell in darkness like those long dead.

⁴And so my spirit fails me, my heart is full of fear.

⁵I remember the days of long ago; I meditate on what you have done and consider the work of your hand.

⁶I stretch out my hands to you, and thirst for you like a parched land.

⁷O Lord, answer me quickly: my spirit is faint with yearning. Do not hide your face from me; save me from going down to the pit.

⁸Let the dawn bring me word of your love, for in you alone I put my trust. Show me the way I should walk, for to you I lift up my soul.

⁹Rescue me from my enemies, O Lord, for to you I flee for refuge.

¹⁰Teach me to do your will, for you are my God. Let your Spirit lead me on level ground.

¹¹Preserve me, O Lord, for your name's sake; free me from distress, in your justice.

¹²If you love me, crush my enemies and destroy all my foes, for I am your servant.

PSALM 144 (143)

The first part repeats verses of other psalms, especially Psalm 18. The second part, with simple images, refers to the yearning for heaven, where there will be no more tears, nor foremen, nor grief. "Happy is the people whose God is the Lord."

¹Blessed be the Lord, my rock, who trains my hands for war and my fingers for battle – ²my loving God, my fortress; my protector and deliverer, my shield where I take refuge, who conquers nations, and subjects them to my rule.

³O Lord, what is man that you should be mindful of him, the son of man that you should care for him?

⁴Man is a mere puff of breath, his days pass like a shadow on earth.

⁵Bend your heavens, O Lord, and come down; touch the mountain and make it smoke.

⁶Flash forth lightning and rout the foe; shoot your arrows and scatter them.

⁷From above, reach down and draw me out of the deep waters, from the hands of foreigners ⁸whose mouths speak falsehood, whose words are full of deceit.

⁹I will sing a new song to you, O

God, I will make music on the ten-stringed harp, ¹⁰for you who give victory to kings and deliver David, your servant.

¹¹Rescue me from the evil sword and from the hands of foreigners, whose mouths speak falsehood, whose words are full of deceit.

¹²May our sons be like plants well-nurtured and full grown, and our daughters like pillars that adorn the corners of the temple.

¹³May our barns be full, with every kind of provision.

May our sheep increase by thousands, even by myriads, in our pastures.

¹⁴May our cattle be strong and fruitful; and may there be an end to raids and exile, to cries of distress in our streets.

¹⁵Happy are the people so blessed; happy the people whose God is the Lord!

PSALM 145 (144)

This psalm is like a litany: God is justice, faithfulness, goodness, the author of wonders. It invites us to discover the immense wealth of God through his works, his revelation in the person of Christ, made man.

I will extol you, my God and King;
I will bless your name forever.

² I will praise you day after day and extal your name forever.

³ Great is the Lord, most worthy of praise; and his deeds are beyond measure.

⁴ Fathers, commend your works to their children and celebrate your acts of power.

⁵ I will meditate on the splendour of your majesty and the wondrous works manifesting your glory.

⁶ People will proclaim the might of your deeds, and I will declare your awesome greatness.

⁷ They will celebrate your abundant kindness, and rejoice in singing of your justice.

⁸ Compassionate and gracious is the Lord, slow to anger and abounding in love.

⁹ The Lord is merciful to everyone;
his love is for all his creation.

¹⁰ All your works will give you thanks; all your saints, O Lord, will praise you.

¹¹ They will tell of the glory of your kingdom and speak of your power,

¹² that all may know of your mighty deeds, your kingdom and its glorious splendour.

¹³ Your reign is from age to age; your dominion endures from generation to generation.

The Lord is true to his promises and shows love in all he does.

¹⁴ The Lord lifts up those who are fallen and raises those who are beaten down.

¹⁵ All creatures look to you to be fed in due season; ¹⁶ with open hand you satisfy the living according to their needs.

¹⁷ Righteous is the Lord in all his ways, and loving in all his deeds.

¹⁸ He is near those who call on him, who call in truth upon his name.

¹⁹ He fulfils the wish of those who fear him; he hears their cry and rescues them.

²⁰ For those who love him, the Lord has compassion; but the wicked, he will destroy.

²¹ Let my mouth speak in praise of the Lord, let every creature bless his holy name, for ever and ever.

PSALM 146 (145)

The Lord frees the oppressed. – The extent of human anguish: the hungry, the prisoners, the oppressed, – has reached such a degree that, on their own, the powerful of this earth are incapable of finding a solution for it. Only God can truly give the world, justice, peace, hope.

¹ Alleluia!

Praise the Lord, my soul!

² I will sing to the Lord all my life;
I will sing praise to God while I live.

³ Do not put your trust in princes, in mortal man who cannot save.

⁴ His spirit leaves him, he goes back to the earth;
on that very day his plans fall apart.

⁵ Blessed is he whose help is the God of Jacob, whose hope is in the Lord his God.

"You have sent me to announce the Good news to the poor, to proclaim freedom to prisoners..."

Let us not be dazzled by those who give orders, be money and conveniences, but let us look at the reality: the world is full of evil and injustice and we are asked to "straighten what is crooked."

We must proclaim, without fear, that God is the one who liberates the poor. The more we are convinced of that, the more we will try to share the Lord's thoughts, placing our lives at the service of the marginalized, the hungry and the humiliated.

PSALM 147

*The Lord is Jerusalem's builder.
Jerusalem, praise the Lord.*

For the Jews, more than the capital, Jerusalem was the Holy City where God was dwelling hidden in the cloud of the Temple, and whose presence protected the city and the people against hostile forces: Jerusalem is the church.

The Lord is its builder, the one who gathered the dispersed children of God there. Our God fills the distance between the order of the universe and the life of each one of us. He calls the stars by name and helps the humble.

⁶maker of heaven and earth, the sea and all they contain.

The Lord is forever faithful; ⁷he gives justice to the oppressed and gives food to the hungry.

The Lord sets the prisoners free ⁸and gives sight to the blind.

The Lord straightens the bent, and loves the virtuous.

⁹The Lord protects the stranger, sustains the widow and the orphan;
but the way of the wicked he brings to ruin.

¹⁰The Lord will reign forever, your God, O Zion,
from generation to generation. Alleluia!

Rejoice, Jerusalem. – Let the Church rejoice because the Lord "strengthened the bars of her gates." The powers of evil and death will not overcome her. The Lord blessed her children and gave them "his" peace, not that of the world. He feeds her with his word and with the best of wheat: his body made Bread of Life.

How good it is to sing to our God, how sweet and befitting to praise him!

² The Lord rebuilds Jerusalem;
he gathers the exiles of Israel;
³ he heals their broken hearts and binds up their wounds.

⁴ He determines the number of stars, he calls each of them by name.

⁵ The Lord is great and mighty in power;
his wisdom is beyond measure.

⁶ The Lord lifts up the humble, but casts the wicked to the ground.

⁷ Sing to the Lord with thanksgiving, make music on the harp for our God.

⁸ With clouds he covers the sky, he waters the earth with rain and makes grass grow upon the hill.

⁹ He provides food for the cattle and the young ravens when they call.

¹⁰ He is not concerned with the strength of a horse;
nor is he pleased with men's agility;

¹¹ The Lord delights in those who fear him and who put their hope in his constant love.

¹² Exalt the Lord, O Jerusalem; praise your God, O Zion!

The Jews marveled at the transformation of water into ice: how can God transform the elements this way? In the same way the church marvels at seeing how, in God's hands, the crises of the world serve his plan.

¹³ For he strengthens the bars of your gates and blesses your children within you.

¹⁴ He grants peace to your borders and feeds you with the finest grain.

¹⁵ He sends his command to the earth and swiftly runs his word.

¹⁶ He spreads snow like wool; he scatters frost like ashes.

¹⁷ He hurls down hail like pebbles; his icy blasts make waters freeze.

¹⁸ But he sends his word and melts the snow; he makes his breeze blow, and again the waters flow.

¹⁹ He proclaimed his word to Jacob, his laws and decrees to Israel.

²⁰ He has done this for no other nation, so his laws remain unknown to them.

Alleluia!

PSALM 148

Alleluia!

² Praise him, all his angels; praise him, all his heavenly hosts.

³ Praise him, sun and moon; praise him, all you shining stars.

⁴ Praise him, you highest heavens and you waters above the skies.

⁵ Let them praise the name of the Lord, at whose command they were made.

⁶ He established them forever and gave each a fixed and lasting duty.

⁷ Praise the Lord from the earth, you sea creatures and all the depths, ⁸ clouds and snow, hail and lightning, storm winds that do his bidding, ⁹ you mountains and all you hills, you fruit trees and cedars, ¹⁰ you wild beasts and tame animals, you creeping things and winged fowl.

¹¹ Kings of the earth and nations, princes and all rulers of the world, ¹² young men and maidens, old men and children – ¹³ let them praise the name of the Lord.

For his name alone is exalted; his majesty is above earth and heaven; ¹⁴ and he has given his people glory.

This is his praise from his faithful, from the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia.

PSALM 149

National hymn. – The people of God know that they are called to glory and happiness. They will be the instruments of God's justice. God uses his poor, the humble people, gathered by Christ, in order to judge the world and bring it to salvation.

¹ Alleluia! Sing to the Lord a new song of praise in the assembly of his saints.

² Let Israel rejoice in his Maker, let the sons of Zion glory in their King!

³ Let them dance in praise of his name and make music for him with harp and lyre and timbrel.

⁴For the Lord delights in his people; he crowns the lowly with victory.

⁵Let the saints exult in his honour and praise him; even at night on their couches, ⁶let the praise of God be on their lips.

Let them take hold of two-edged swords ⁷to wreak vengeance on the nations and punishment on the peoples, ⁸to bind their kings in chains and their nobles in iron fetters, ⁹to execute on them the written sentence.

This is the glory of all his saints.
Alleluia!

PSALM 150

Universal symphony! The book of psalms concludes with a song performed by the whole orchestra. This is symbolic: to be complete, the praise of God requires the participation of all nations, races, civilizations and cultures.

Let all that breathes praise the Lord. It will be said again in Revelation (5:13): "And I heard them answer: To the one who is seated on the throne and to Christ, praise, honor, glory and power forever and ever."

¹ Alleluia!

Praise God in his sanctuary;
praise him in the vault of heaven.

² Praise him for his mighty deeds; praise him for his own greatness.

³ Praise him with trumpet blast; praise him with lyre and harp.

⁴ Praise him with dance and tambourines; praise him with pipe and strings.

⁵ Praise him with clashing cymbals; praise him with clanging cymbals.

⁶ Let everything that breathes praise him.
Alleluia!

NEW TESTAMENT

The New Testament is the collection of 27 books in the Bible which were written in the seventy years following the resurrection of Jesus. The church of the apostles saw in them the authentic expression of their faith. No matter how much they may have been inspired by God, these books did not fall down from heaven, rather we owe them to the apostles and the evangelists of the early church. They make no pretense at answering all our questions concerning the faith: they are testimonies about the impact which the unique person of Jesus Christ made on his contemporaries.

But, why is there a New Testament after the Old?

Simply because they form two parts of sacred history, separated by the cross of Jesus.

In the Old Testament a people is being formed. They grow through their experiences, and after having hoped for the thousand and one things that people look for, they understand that what really matters is to hope for and to seek the Kingdom of Justice in which persons will be made new. When we read Sacred History, we see the direction it takes and discern stages and key people. Israel discovers the great values of existence and of social life. We understand why it took them so many centuries to discover something of the beyond. We grasp why the prosperity of the ancient kingdom of Israel could not last and why it was necessary for the people of God to gain in insight and interiority what they were losing in earthly power and glory. We see why, after so many saviours, the unique Saviour came to them when they were experiencing the final crisis under Roman oppression and the radicalization of political forces.

Thus, the message of Jesus was a call to overcome the narrow-mindedness of their nationalism and fanaticism in order to find the kingdom and the justice of God. The history of Israel had to flow into a new era with a universal people of God, who would be rich in the knowledge of the Father and of the Son. Such a people would practice nonviolence which can overcome divisions and oppression. And we know the Jewish nation collapsed in a few years because they did not welcome the message of Jesus: the end of one world and the rupture of a destiny.

The Jewish people, who did not believe in Jesus, did not lose their divine vocation because of that. They continued being a people different from all others, conscious of being the Servant of the One God for the salvation of all. The Old Testament, which they faithfully followed, was prolonged in a living tradition which enabled them to have a role in history out of all proportion to their smallness.

But there were also those who did believe. When attempts to evangelize the Jews in Palestine failed, the first Jewish Christians turned, with added incentive, to other peoples and announced the Gospel to them. Within a few years, the church began to spread throughout the world known then, that is to say, the nations of the Greco-Roman empire. At first, it was a common belief among Christians that the message would shortly reach the ends of the world and Jesus would then return in glory for judgment. But in the seventies this illusion disappeared: history might last longer than they had expected.

The Christian communities then began to gather what had been written down to preserve the preaching of the apostles. They also spent time recalling significant experiences of the first Christians. Of the books thus produced, the church approved those which expressed the faith as it was received from the apostles and rejected others which, although very commendable, did not seem to transmit the most fundamental and universal message of the faith.

The New Testament does not replace the Old. Jesus' preaching does not make the warnings of the prophets irrelevant. Love does not replace justice. The salvation promised to the Jewish people is not replaced by a "salvation of souls," but rather the Gospel is presented as the liberating truth which redirects history and moves all civilizations toward the goal of reunion and reconciliation in Christ of all human powers and creative energy in the universe.

HOW THE GOSPELS WERE WRITTEN

The Four Gospels

As far back as we go in church history, it is an unquestionable fact that reference is made to four Gospels attributed to Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. These are our Gospels. All the publications of the New Testament and of the Gospels in particular, whether they be in English, Spanish, or any other language, are translations of original texts written in Greek. Ancient manuscripts containing these texts were copied quite a number of times until each of these texts was fixed with the invention of printing.

Those copying the manuscripts could not avoid making some mistakes. By comparing the various manuscripts, grouped according to their differences and their origin, critics can determine what were the original texts which the Catholic church recognized as the expression of the apostolic faith, and as the word of God. But who wrote these first Gospels and what was their source?

The Tradition of the Apostles

We know that Jesus died when he was still young and that he died without having written anything. But Jesus had dedicated most of his time to forming the twelve apostles whom he had chosen. They lived with him, as was the custom with disciples of Jewish masters. Jesus had them learn his teaching by heart. Instead of multiplying discourses, Jesus repeated the essential truths in many ways. The apostles had engraved in their memory the instructions of their Master as well as all the events they had witnessed. And we cannot doubt that after the days of Pentecost their concern was to give form to these instructions of Jesus which were to be the catechesis of the early church.

We call tradition of the apostles all the events and teachings of Jesus that the apostles preached and commented on to make Jesus and his work known. Jesus is the Messiah of the Jews and the Saviour of all humankind, the Son of God come-from-God who rose from the dead. As we have already said, all that we know about Jesus is what we received from his apostles. We would like, of course, to have the very words of Jesus just as they were heard, but the faith of the church holds that the apostles alone were his authentic witnesses and they understood him as God wanted him to be understood and believed. The word of God is not only what Jesus said and what they heard; it is also what the apostles told us about Jesus.

From the Aramaic of Jesus to the Greek of the Gospel

Jesus and his contemporaries spoke Aramaic, the commonly-used language which had replaced Hebrew in Palestine since the return from Exile. Yet, Hebrew continued to be taught and even spoken. Many Jews understood it and the religious writing was often in that language. We point out here that Hebrew and Aramaic are two very similar languages belonging to the same family of Semitic languages.

Greek, on the other hand, was the language used for trading and in cities throughout the countries in the Roman Empire. Like English in our days, it made communication possible among very different people who were united under Roman authority and law. Greek was understood by a good number of Jews in Palestine. Latin, on the contrary, was the language of the Romans and it was used only for administrative purposes. The big number of Jews in all the great cities of the Roman Empire and the Christians, who were going to increase in the same places, spoke Greek and already used the Bible translated into Greek called the Septuagint (Version of the LXX).

The Synoptic Gospels

At first reading, something is immediately evident: the first three Gospels Matthew, Mark and Luke – resemble one another in many passages, they relate the same events, often in the same sequence. This is why they are called the Synoptic Gospels, which means that we could place them in three columns to compare the three ways of relating the same event in rather similar words. There are so many similarities and also so many differences that, to this day, it has not been possible to explain them both.

We can easily see that Matthew, Mark and Luke adapt their text to the basic requirements of catechesis. The purpose of these Gospels was to give sufficient knowledge of Jesus to support the oral teaching transmitted in the church by the apostles, the prophets and the teachers, and to affirm the faith of the beginners. John, however, wants to bring us to a more profound knowledge of the person of Jesus and to specify the bases and forms of authentic Christian experience.

For these reasons, we shall begin by speaking of the Synoptic Gospels.

Origin, authors and dates of the Synoptic Gospels

We can only provide some dates concerning these points and we must take into account the fact that modern studies have profoundly renewed what was believed to be true a few years back.

a) The Synoptic Gospels are translations into the Greek of more ancient texts which may have been written in Hebrew.

Every day more arguments come up in favour of the idea that the Gospels of Matthew and Mark were first written in a Semitic language. This could have been Aramaic, but most probably it was Hebrew.

These Hebrew original texts of the Gospels were written in the Christian communities of Palestine for their own use in the early years of the church. They were later translated into Greek with so much precaution not to betray their meaning that the translator often preserved even the Hebrew expressions, running the risk of creating a heavy style or of being more difficult for a Greek reader to understand.

Luke also translated original Hebrew texts, the most important of which had been the foundation of Matthew's Gospel. But Luke was not satisfied with merely translating these texts, he took some liberty in the style of putting them together.

b) Testimony of ancient Christian authors

In 110, Papias of Hierapolis (near Ephesus) wrote: "Mark, Peter's interpreter, wrote with precision, though not in an orderly manner, all that he recalled about the sayings and deeds of the Lord. He accompanied Peter who taught according to the needs of the moment, not in the form of a composition, and he made no mistakes in including some things as he remembered them. Matthew put together the sayings of the Lord in Hebrew, and from then on everyone translated them according to his ability."

In 185, bishop and martyr Saint Irenaeus wrote: "Matthew published a gospel among the Hebrews and in their language while Peter and Paul went out to evangelize Rome and to establish the church. After they left, Mark, a disciple and Peter's translator, wrote down Peter's preaching. Luke, Paul's companion, also wrote a book with the Gospel preached by Paul."

These ancient sources, to which we should add a lot more, were looked down upon by many modern biblical scholars. Lately, they have once again been seen as information of great historical value.

c) Date of the writing of the Synoptic Gospels

Most contemporary biblical scholars, often under the influence of subjective considerations, claim that Mark was written in the year 70; Matthew and Luke between 80 and 85. However the most prominent of them have confessed that they have no solid arguments to support their theory. More recent studies have come up with proof that these very late dates are difficult to maintain. On comparing the Gospels with ancient Jewish writings, the Jewish masters of Jerusalem Hebraic University conclude that it would have been impossible to write them as they are after the years 50-55.

Many reasons suggest that the gospels of Mark and Matthew were written in Hebrew in the years 40-50. Luke must have written his gospel in Greek between 50-60 and shortly after him, in the years 60-63, Matthew's and Mark's were translated into Greek.

Two Pauline texts - unfortunately not very clear - could support these dates: 2 Cor 8:18 and 2 Cor 3:14; the first of these may be referring to Luke's Gospel.

Mark, Matthew and Luke: The Two Sources

We all know that Mark's Gospel is much shorter than Matthew's or Luke's. However, we can easily see that all the events related in Mark are also found in Matthew and in Luke.

On the other hand, the Gospels of Matthew and Luke both include some deeds and many sayings of Jesus which are not found in Mark. In Luke, we find them mostly in chapters 9: 52 to 18: 14, where they form one continuous segment of the Gospel, whereas the same sentences are scattered throughout Matthew. This is why, many scholars speak about Two Sources for the three synoptic Gospels. The first of these which was either a writing or an oral tradition contained, more or less, the same events we find in Mark. Matthew and Luke may have used the same source. The other source must have compiled more than anything else sayings of Jesus. It was used by Matthew as well as by Luke, although it may have contained much more than what they took from it. This second source is usually called Q or the Sayings of the Lord, but it is not preserved in writing.

Undoubtedly, the apostle Matthew wrote a "Gospel," but in Hebrew and for Hebrews, that is to say, for the Jews of Palestine who had been converted to Christ. But we do not know if his work was the Sayings of the Lord, or the composition based on these Sayings and the first source that is known as Matthew's Gospel. This can have been translated into Greek around the year 60.

Luke, for his part, placed the Sayings of the Lord between the two parts of the first "source" which is the pattern found in Mark. Mark distinguished between the deeds of Jesus in Galilee (Mk 1-10) and the deeds of Jesus in Jerusalem before his Passion (11-16). Luke used the literary device a journey of Jesus to Jerusalem (Lk 9: 51-18:14) in which he put these Sayings. Luke was Greek and he was writing for the Greeks. He did not reproduce the texts of the Gospel referring to Jewish laws and customs which would have made little sense to his readers (Mk 8: 8; 9: 11) or those which could have offended them (Mk 8:31; 9: 43; 11:11). As a good Greek, he eliminated all the repetitions, so dear to the Jews, or episodes too similar to others previously narrated (Mk 8:22; 14:3). Luke also gave his Gospel an introduction and a conclusion of its own.

The Gospel of John

In the Gospel of John we find parts of an ancient Gospel as simple as Mark's, with more deeds than words of Jesus, which may have been addressed to the Christian communities of Samaria, and which was written in Aramaic. But this was nothing more than the foundation on which John developed those long discourses of Jesus which show that salvation transforms man and renews creation. In this Gospel, the mystery of God the Father, Son and Holy Spirit is revealed and so is God's intimate communication with us through community life and the sacraments of the church. This Gospel appeared only after John's death, around the year 95.

CAN WE BELIEVE WHAT THE GOSPEL SAYS?

1. Do not take everything literally

With the preceding explanations, we readily understand the following:

- All the deeds and words of Jesus are not found in the Gospel.
- In relating the words of Jesus, each evangelist expresses them in his own way and adapts them for the better understanding of his readers.
- The events are not always told in the order in which they took place, and things that Jesus said on different occasions can be mixed together in the same passage.

In the Gospel, we cannot, therefore, find a "picture" of Jesus, or a "recording" of his words. However, this does not in any way mean that we cannot believe the testimony of the evangelists.

2. The unique place of the Gospel in literature

The Gospel is an exceptional and unique work among the literary writings of all times. Any comparison with other writings of its time, Christian or otherwise, shows a tremendous contrast. In the Gospel, the simplicity and the desire to be temperate. In the other texts, the marvelous, the complexity, the "not down-to-earth." A modern philosopher – not a believer – wondered why there were not many miracles in the Gospel. The Gospel witnesses to its own authenticity. Taking into account what was said in the former paragraph, modern criticism has not been able to find falsehood in the Gospel, even though it has been scrutinized with a magnifying glass for more than a century and has undergone countless tests, as has never been done to any other book.

3. Those who doubt

Nevertheless, those who question the testimony of the Gospels are many. At times, this is because they think they see some contradictions in the Gospels; more often, because it seems impossible for them to accept the miracles. Even among believers who study the Gospels, some have reservations concerning the historical value of the Gospel episodes which speak of God's interventions for Jesus.

This may be due to the fact that these scholars usually come from well-to-do backgrounds and countries and they have been trained in a "scientific" culture which relies only on human resources in order to solve every problem. There, little is expected from God and God does not multiply miracles.

And so, they reason the following way: If now I cannot see anything similar to what happened in the Gospel, how am I to believe that such things happened then? Everything would be different if they were involved in a church of the poor and if they could witness the constant interventions of God for the benefit of those who hope in him alone.

In fact, it is impossible to study the Gospel "impartially," as we would do with any ordinary book. If we share the same faith of the apostles, we have no difficulty accepting the sacred book while remaining aware of the critical questions. But, if we do not fulfill the conditions that would allow us to "see God," we feel uneasy until we find some reason to "reduce" Gospel's testimony. This is why many persons, though they admire the Gospel and refuse to consider it a lie, search for a thousand reasons to deny its very contents.

4. Some objections

Therefore they cling especially to three arguments:

- They say that the Gospels were not written by an historian but rather they combine testimonies from several witnesses: they belong to popular literature in which we can find everything, except historical certainty.
- They also say that the Gospels were writings destined for the catechesis and the teaching of the Christian people: the facts they relate are aimed at supporting what is being taught. Hence it is not important whether Jesus walked on the water or not: the episode was written to show that Jesus possessed divine power.
- They say that the Gospels were written many years after the death of Jesus when popular imagination had already placed a halo around him. And so, they do not reveal the reality of Jesus to us, but rather the faith of the church in the first century. (Let us remember what we said about the date when the gospels were written.)

But, what about the apostles? They had been Jesus' witnesses, and their function was for to remain his official witnesses within the church. They knew what had actually happened; would they have stayed quiet while some people were distorting the history of Jesus? The guarantee of the Gospel is found in the very structure of the Catholic church which never was a group of spontaneous believers carried away by enthusiasm or opportunism. From the start the church was an organized group, with a respected hierarchy which had the final say in questions of faith and traditions.

The four Gospels were not a popular work created on the basis of legends, of words heard and distorted, of miracles invented in part to justify what was being said of Jesus. The Gospels came from the tradition of the apostles, and the church retained them because it recognized this tradition in them. In those very years and during the following century, other "gospels" were written: "the gospels of Peter," "the gospel of Thomas," "the gospel of Nicodemus," "the proto-gospel of James." The church, however, did not believe them because of the fabulous events recorded in them, or because of theological orientations which did not conform to the teaching received from the apostles.

The fact that the Gospels were written with a view to catechesis does not mean that the history was adulterated to better convince the listeners. As if the facts alone cannot speak to those who are open to understanding! And what about Jesus' apostles, formed by Jesus? Would they not have the basic integrity to respect truth?

A great deal of importance has been given to the literary patterns which are used to relate the events. Since several miracles are told according to the same framework, some scholars conclude that everything is fictitious. Would it not be simpler to think that the events and the miracles were presented in certain patterns which made their teaching and memorizing much easier?

Another typical case is that of the Annunciation to Mary. Luke tells it by borrowing from texts referring to the birth of Ishmael and Samson. Some people say immediately: since Luke imitated the style of legendary stories, it is because his story is a legend; Mary's virginity and the annunciation of the angel are no more than fiction and all they pretend to do is to celebrate the divinity of Christ. Why look for such strange explanations? Luke and his contemporaries considered these ancient texts to be historical. So Luke copied their style to emphasize that the birth of Jesus was also part of sacred history. Luke told the events which were the basis of his own faith; if these events had not happened, he would not have believed.

MATTHEW

The Ancestors of JESUS

1-this is a list of the ancestors of Jesus Christ, son of David, son of Abraham. Abraham was the father of Isaac, Isaac the father of Jacob.

INTRODUCTION

Who was Matthew? In the Gospel we read that Matthew, also known as Levi, was a tax collector whom Jesus called to be one of the Twelve apostles (Mt 9:9 and Mk 2:13). Matthew wished to present in an orderly manner what Jesus had taught. He did not mention many details about the deeds of Jesus that he included, but brought out instead his words.

As an Introduction, Matthew set at the beginning of his Gospel some stories about the infancy of Jesus. The rest of the Gospel is divided into five parts. Each begins with deeds of Jesus and continues with a discourse. These discourses are:

Discourse on the mountain: 5-7.

Instructions to the missionaries: 10.

Parables of the kingdom: 13.

Admonitions for the Christian community: 18.

The future of the Church: 23-25.

The Gospel of Matthew was written for the use of Christian communities in which the majority were Jews. Because of this it brings out that Jesus was the Messiah expected by the Jews, quoting many verses from the Old Testament which foretold the Messiah and described his ways: 4:14; 8:17; 12:17 ...

It repeats this message many times: the kingdom of God had to be preached to the Jews, but Jesus knew that they would reject it and that, because of this, the Church should address the pagan nations.

For Matthew, Jesus is first the Teacher of humankind. His speeches and parables show us a way to perfection and lay down the guidelines for community sharing in a Church of the poor, where everyone is equal.

In the present edition there is no commentary on paragraphs found in an identical form in the Gospel of Mark and that are commented on there.

1 This is a list of the ancestors of Jesus Christ, son of David, son of Abraham.

² Abraham was the father of Isaac, Isaac the father of Jacob, Jacob the father of Judah and his brothers.

³ Judah was the father of Perez and Zarah (their mother was Tamar), Perez was the father of Hezron, and Hezron of Ram. ⁴Ram was the father of Amminadab, Amminadab of Nahshon, Nahshon of Salmon.

⁵Salmon was the father of Boaz. His mother was Rahab. Boaz was the father of Obed. His mother was Ruth. Obed was the father of Jesse.

⁶Jesse was the father of David, the king. David was the father of Solomon. His mother had been Uriah's wife.

o The Saviour has blossomed from our land and from the chosen race of Israel (Is 7:45:8). There are 42 names in the list, arranged in three series of 14 names each, a symbolic number for the Jews. It is obvious that it is not a complete list.

Jesus is the son of Abraham. Abraham is the father of the believers. God promised to unite all nations around his race. The first series of names appears in Ruth 4:18.

As promised to Israel, Jesus is also the son of David. The kings of Israel, descendants of David, play a part in the sacred history. Some of them had a very good reputation, others very bad. As to the descendants of Zerubbabel, the Bible is silent (Ezr 3 & 4).

The list extends to Joseph, the adoptive father of Jesus. Among the Jews, this adoption was sufficient for Jesus to be considered, like Joseph, son of David.

Four names included in the list belong to women, all described in the Bible: Tamar, who gave everything so as not to lose the divine blessings; Rahab, a foreign prostitute whom the Bible praises (Jos 2); Ruth, another foreigner of exemplary conduct; and the widow of Urias, the beautiful Bathsheba, who shared David's sin.

⁷Solomon was the father of Rehoboam. Then came the kings: Abijah, Asa, ⁸Jehoshaphat, Joram, Uzziah, ⁹Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, ¹⁰Manasseh, Amon, Josiah.

¹¹Josiah was the father of Jeconiah and his brothers at the time of the deportation to Babylon.

¹²After the deportation to Babylon Jeconiah was the father of Shealtiel, the father of Zerubbabel.

¹³Zerubbabel was the father of Abiud, Abiud of Eliakim, and Eliakim of Azor. ¹⁴Azor was the father of Zadok, Zadok the father of Ackim, and Ackim the father of Eliud. ¹⁵Eliud was the father of Eleazar, Eleazar of Matthan, and Matthan of Jacob.

¹⁶Jacob was the father of Joseph, the husband of Mary, and from her came Jesus who is called the Messiah – the Anointed.

¹⁷So, then, there were fourteen generations from Abraham to David, and fourteen from David to the deportation to Babylon, and again fourteen to the birth of the Christ – the Anointed.

Jesus born of a virgin mother

(Lk 1:27)

◆¹⁸ This is how Jesus Christ was born. Mary his mother was engaged to Joseph; but before they came together as husband and wife, she became pregnant through the Holy Spirit.

¹⁹Joseph, her husband, was an upright man. As he regarded her highly, he did not want to expose her and he made plans to divorce her in all secrecy.

²⁰While he was trying to make up his mind about this, an angel of the Lord appeared to him in a dream and said, "Joseph, descendant of David, do not be afraid to take Mary as your wife. Having conceived by the Holy

21. 1, 25; Lk 1, 31; Acts 4, 12

All of this background discreetly announces him who came down to save sinners and to open the Kingdom of Israel to the multitudes coming from the pagan world.

This list represents what Jesus inherited from Joseph. And Jesus will hand down this spiritual inheritance from Israel to his own people, the Church. We have received very much from the Jews, e.g. the Old Testament which is the Bible of the Jews.

So Jesus takes root in our human race. He is the fruit of many centuries of history marked by suffering and sin, but also by hope and grace. The long and slow education of the Jewish people reaches its climax in the coming of the Saviour. We must understand that we are in solidarity with Christ first of all through human ties. The history of the present times, as well as the history of our families, prepare for the second coming of Christ to humankind.

◆ These short and almost bashful sentences do not dare to unveil the mystery of Mary, the virgin through whom life on earth touches God and offers itself as an oblation. A messenger breaks through the night and speaks with silent words: the world is opened to the active presence of God.

With reference to the virginity of Mary, see Lk

Mary was engaged. Engagements gave to the Jewish people practically every right of marriage, especially conjugal rights. The only difference was that women continued living under the parents tutelage and in their parental home. Jews were markedly a "macho" society. A woman necessarily belonged to a man, either to her father, her husband, or her son. Mary was already the wife of Joseph, but she would not be under his authority until he brought her to his home (v. 20 & 24).

Those who reflect deeply on the attitude of Mary, basing their reflection on the Gospel and on the faith and experience of the Church, think that Mary must have already consecrated herself to God. Such a decision would be totally unheard of in Jewish society. But if God had infused into Mary such an intention, she then had to look for a man who, honouring her virginity, would extend to her the legal status of a marriage.

If the virginity of Mary was a very unusual commitment, it would not have been so unusual for Joseph to choose a life of celibacy. For we know that in those days groups of Jews, known as the Essenes, lived a life of celibacy like monks. Joseph, surely, was not going to be an obstacle to Mary but rather a support.

Spirit, ²¹she will bear a son, whom you are to call 'Jesus' for he will set his people free from their sins."

²²All this happened in order to fulfill what the Lord had said through the prophet: ²³*The virgin will conceive and bear a son, and he will be called Emmanuel* which means: God-with-us. ²⁴When Joseph woke up, he did what the angel of the Lord had told him to do and he took his wife with him. ²⁵But he had not had intercourse with her when the son was born. And he called him Jesus.

Wise men from the east

2 ¹When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, in Judea, during the days of King Herod, wise men from the east arrived in Jerusalem. ²They asked, "Where is the new born king of the Jews? We observed the rising of his star and have come to honor him."

³When Herod heard this he was greatly disturbed and with him all the people in Jerusalem. ⁴He immediately called a meeting of all high ranking priests and experts of the Law and asked them where the Messiah was to be born.

⁵They told him, "In the town of Bethlehem in Judea, for this is what the prophet wrote: ⁶*And you, Bethlehem, land of Judah, you are by no means the least among the clans of Judah, for from you will come a leader, the one who is to shepherd my people Israel.*"

⁷So Herod called the wise men to a private meeting and gathered more precise information about the appearance of the star. ⁸Then he sent them to Bethlehem with the instruction, "Go and get precise information about the child. As soon as you have found it, report to me, so that I too may go and honour him."

⁹After the meeting with the king, they left. The star that they had seen in the East went ahead of them and Joseph made plans to divorce in all secrecy. The Gospel tells us that Joseph was planning to leave Mary so as not to disgrace her, but it does not tell us why he was going to do so.

- Perhaps knowing her to be pregnant but having no explanation from Mary, he had a feeling of some mystery and could not find any other solution.
- Perhaps he had already learned from Mary the mystery and did not want to be an obstacle to such a great happening.

It is difficult to imagine Joseph entertaining doubts about the faithfulness of Mary. Neither of the two were the kind of people who could be unfaithful and Joseph knew that very well.

According to some exegetes, the text in verses 20-21 should be translated like this: "Although the child conceived in her womb comes from the Holy Spirit, you will be the one to give the name of Jesus to the boy who will be born of her." It is obvious that the intervention of the angel is not mainly to justify Mary by saying: Look she conceived by the Holy Spirit... but rather to tell Joseph about his role in God's plan: You will give him the name Jesus and receive him as your son.

Joseph was a descendant of David. According to biblical prophecies, the Saviour had to be a descendant of King David, from the tribe of Judah. Very likely Mary did not belong to this tribe but, like her cousin Elizabeth, belonged to a family of priests from the tribe of Levi. God had disposed that through Joseph, adoptive father of the child, the prophecies would be fulfilled (Is 7:14).

You are to call him Jesus. Jesus is the English form of Jeshuah, which means Saviour, a common Jewish name.

Joseph's fosterfatherhood remains as a symbol of a deeper religious truth. How many men remain doubtful even after reading this page! Not even God can do without them! But that is precisely the point: there is no place for two fathers, because Jesus, born in time of Mary, is the only Son of the Father, born of God in eternity.

This text shows us to what extent the Son of God in his incarnation accepted all the hazards of the human condition, except sin. He did not spare Joseph of confusion or Mary of possible embarrassment in this crucial event.

In order to understand this chapter well, we have to keep in mind that it belongs to a kind of literature very much in vogue among the Jews of that time, when history and fiction were intertwined with the objective of teaching through figures.

stopped over the place where the child was. ¹⁰The wise men were overjoyed on seeing the star again. ¹¹They went into the house and when they saw the child with Mary his mother, they knelt down and worshipped him. They opened their bags and presented to him their gifts of gold, incense and myrrh.

¹²In a dream they were warned not to go back to Herod, so they returned to their home country by another road.

Escape to Egypt

o ¹³After the wise men had left, an angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph and said, "Get up, take the child and his mother and go as fast as you can to Egypt, and stay there until further notice. Herod will soon be looking for the child in order to kill him."

¹⁴Joseph got up, took the child and his mother, and left that very night for Egypt; ¹⁵and he stayed there until the death of Herod. In this way, what the Lord had said through the prophet could be fully understood: I called my son out of Egypt.

¹⁶When Herod found out that he had been tricked by the wise men, he became furious. He gave orders to kill all the boys in Bethlehem and its neighbourhood who were two years old or under. This was done in line with what he had learned from the wise men about the time when the star appeared.

¹⁷In this way, what the prophet Jeremiah had said could be fully understood: ¹⁸A cry is heard in Ramah, weeping and loud lamentation: Rachel is crying for her children. She refuses to be comforted, for they are no more.

Joseph and Mary return to Nazareth

+ ¹⁹After Herod died, an angel of the Lord appeared in a dream to Joseph and said, ²⁰"Get up, take the child and his mother and go to Israel, because those who tried to kill the child are dead." ²¹So Joseph got up, took the child and his mother and went to Israel.

²²But when Joseph heard that Archelaus had succeeded his father Herod as king of Judea, he was afraid to go there. He was given further instructions in a dream, and went to the region of Galilee.

The Wise Men were not kings, but seers and priests of a pagan religion. While the Jewish priests, chiefs of the people of God, do not receive notice of the birth of Jesus, God communicates the news to some of his friends in the pagan world. This lesson is good for all times: Jesus is the Saviour of all people, and not only of those who belong to the Church.

The star reminds us that God calls each one according to his own personality. Jesus calls the fishermen of Galilee after a miraculous catch of fish; the pagans who look at the stars, God calls by means of a star. God knows how to communicate with us by means of events and through our own ideals which guide us as stars. But those who do not seek truth, justice and forgiveness, how will they find Christ?

o In relating the story about the slaughter of innocent children and the Flight into Egypt, Matthew quotes two words from the prophets Hosea and Jeremiah about the trials and sufferings of God's people in past times. Jesus must live in exile and in anguish as did his ancestors. Persecution begins with his birth and will follow him till his death.

Likewise, we learn here that from the very beginning, Mary (and Joseph to a lesser degree) were associated with Jesus' sufferings and saving mission.

Herod is an example of so many government officials who are more zealous for power than for service. But no matter how much innocent blood the enemies of the Gospel spill, they will not be able to extinguish the Church or to block God's plans.

+ Jesus was probably about two years old when Joseph brought Mary and Jesus back to his village, Nazareth. Jesus would spend 30 years in this small village where he would grow up and work as the carpenter (Mk 6:13), while ■ ²¹There he settled in a town called Nazareth. In this way the word of the prophet was fulfilled: He shall be called a Nazorean.

John the Baptist prepares the way
 (Mk 1:1; Lk 3:1; Jn 1:19)

3 ¹About that time John the Baptist came to the desert of Judea ²and started proclaiming, "Change your ways, the Kingdom of Heaven is near!" ³It was about him that the prophet Isaiah had spoken when he said, I hear a voice shouting in the desert: prepare a way for the Lord; make his paths straight.

⁷When he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees coming for baptism, he said to them, "Brood of vipers! Who told you that you could escape the punishment that is to come? ⁸Produce evidence that you are serious in your conversion, ⁹and stop thinking: We have Abraham for our father. I tell you that God can raise children for Abraham from these stones! ¹⁰The ax is already laid to the roots of the trees; any tree that does not bear good fruit will be cut down and thrown in the fire.

¹¹I baptize you in water for conversion, but the one who is coming after me is to do much more than I – indeed I am not worthy to carry his sandals. He will baptize you in the Holy Spirit and fire. ¹²He has the winnowing fan in his hand to thresh out all the grain. He will gather his wheat into the barn, but the chaff he will burn in an everlasting fire."

the world waited for its salvation. But since his life was totally consecrated to the Father, Jesus was already saving the world.

■ He shall be called a Nazorean. Matthew plays with this word which brings to mind nezer, or shoot (Is 11:1) and nazorite (Nm 6). In those days there were religious groups who preached and baptized, as did John, and they were considered nazorites. Jesus was both nezer and nazorite.

Many people wonder what Jesus did between the ages of twelve, when he was seen in the Temple (Lk 2:41), and thirty, the approximate age of Jesus when he began his ministry. False pretenders take advantage of this Gospel's silence to speculate that Jesus went to India to learn magic and how to work miracles from the fakirs. (Hindu wonder workers) or even that he visited some outerspace goblins. It does not take much to imagine things!

Let's remember, first of all, that the Gospel is not a biography of Jesus, a narration of his life from birth to death. It seeks only to tell us the most important deeds and words of Jesus by which he gives us his message. It does not tell us what Jesus looked like, whether he was tall or stout, blond or dark, and many other things that did not interest the first Christians. The Gospels of Mark and Luke open with Jesus' baptism by John, after which Jesus began teaching. Later on, Matthew and Luke wrote a little about Jesus' childhood to help us understand the secret of his person.

Secondly, let's read Matthew 13:54-56. The people of Nazareth, astounded by his deeds, do not say: surely Jesus has learned this in foreign countries because he was abroad so much. But they wonder: what has happened to the carpenter's son? We have known him for a long time ... what happened to him?

Thirdly, we can say that to speak the word of God is at the same time to speak a word of human experience. The prophets speak words of God, not as a tape recorder, but as men who feel something and have something to cry out. Jesus could not speak the word of God if he had not acquired, as a man, an exceptional wisdom of what is inside man (Jn 2:2). The years Jesus spent in Nazareth were not really lost. He absorbed the culture of his people and observed events affecting his nation: he experienced manual labour, human relations, feelings, suffering and oppression. Jesus had to experience all these things to be our saviour, so that his words would be true, weighty and valuable for all times.

Jesus baptized by John

(Mk 1:9; Lk 3:2; Jn 1:29)

¹⁴At that time Jesus arrived from Galilee and came to John at the Jordan to be baptized by him. ¹⁵But John tried to stop him, and said, "I need to be baptized by you, and yet you come to me!"

¹⁵But Jesus answered him, "Let it be so for now. We must do justice to God's plan". John agreed.

¹⁶As soon as he was baptized, Jesus came up from the water and he saw the Spirit of God come down like a dove and rest upon him. ¹⁷At the same time a voice from heaven said, "This is my Son, the Beloved; he is my Elected one."

Jesus tempted in the wilderness

(Lk 4:1; Mk 1:2)

+ 4 ¹Then the spirit led Jesus into the desert. There he was tempted by the devil. ²After spending forty days and forty nights without food, Jesus was hungry.

³Then the devil came to him and said, "If you are son of God, order these stones to turn into bread." ⁴But Jesus answered, "Scripture says: people cannot live on bread alone, they need every word that God speaks."

⁵Then the devil took Jesus to the holy city, set him on the highest point of the temple, and said to him, ⁶"If you are son of God, throw yourself down, for the scripture says, God will charge his angels to rescue you. They will carry you lest you hurt your foot against a stone." ⁷Jesus answered, ⁸"But the scripture also says: You shall not challenge the Lord your God."

⁹Then the devil took Jesus to a very high mountain and showed him all the nations of the world in all their greatness and splendour. And he said, ¹⁰"All this I will give you, if you kneel and worship me." ¹¹Then Jesus an-

+ This event is commented on in the footnotes to the Gospel of Luke (4:1-13).

Before Jesus began his public mission, when he was not yet known, he defeated the evil spirit. The devil tried to convince him that it was nonsense to pretend to save the world by the ways God proposed.

Order these stones to turn into bread. Jesus could, if he wanted, fill the multitudes with enthusiasm by giving them free food and solving their economic problems without demanding of them a personal renewal.

Throw yourself down. The devil lures Jesus to carry out his mission of salvation through means which will bring instant success: attract people by a spectacular use of his supernatural powers. If Jesus used this means, there would have been no room for faith, for conversion through love and the mystery of the cross. Moreover, Jesus had not come to be admired, but to reveal to us the person of the Father.

I will give you all this if you kneel before me. Since people usually do not want to change their ways, Jesus could have considered it as a lesser evil to just accept reality and make a pact with the devil. Had he done this, Jesus would have kept hidden what the world did not want to receive and in so doing, he would have used the same means which bring success to unjust rulers or governments, to mafias and all exploiters.

Jesus comes out a winner. But after him the Church will also face these temptations. She can be tempted to satisfy human wishes instead of offering true salvation. Jesus teaches us how to be strong against the traps of the devil: following him, we must first gain a genuine understanding of the word of God.

These three temptations remind us of the three temptations suffered by the chosen people of Israel in the desert (Ex 16:2; Ex 17:1; Ex 32). First they complained that God was leading them through difficult roads: what have we done to be treated like this? Then they doubted: can He do anything for us? And finally they abandoned God to make for themselves a more human god – this was a calf.

He spent forty days and forty nights without food: Ex 24:18; 1 K 19:8.

The angels came to serve him. After rejecting the temptations, Jesus finds total peace. His purity of heart opens up to him a spiritual world hidden from human eyes, a world as real as the material things and beings surrounding him. In ¹¹Then the devil left him, and the angels came to serve him.

¹²When Jesus heard that John had been arrested, he took refuge in Galilee. ¹³He did not settle in Nazareth, but went to live in Capernaum, a town by the lake of Galilee, in the territory of Zebulun and Naphtali.

¹⁶The people who lived in darkness have seen a great light; on those who live in the land of the shadow of death, a light has shone.

¹⁸ As Jesus walked by the lake of Galilee he saw two brothers, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the lake, for they were fishermen. ¹⁹ He said to them, ²⁰They left the nets then and there and followed him.

²¹He went on from there and saw two other brothers, James, the son of Zebedee, and his brother John in a boat with their father Zebedee, mending their nets. Jesus called them.

²²There and then they left the boat and their father and followed him.

²³Jesus went all over Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, proclaiming the good news of the Kingdom, and curing all kinds of sickness and disease among the people.

²⁴The news about him spread through the whole of Syria, and the people brought all their sick to him, and all those who suffered pain, the possessed, the deranged, the paralyzed, and he healed them all. ²⁵Large crowds followed him from Galilee and the Ten Cities, from Jerusalem, Judea, and from across the Jordan.

The Beatitudes (Lk 6)

5 ¹When Jesus saw the crowds, he went up the mountain. He sat down and his disciples gathered around him. ²Then he spoke and began to teach them:

this spiritual world, as Son of God he is king among the spirits who are servants of his Father.

◆ Change your ways. We use these word to translate: conversion. The biblical meaning of "convert" is: to take another road (see commentary on Mk 1:14). But this term can be understood in many ways. In the mouth of John the Baptist "Be converted" means: turn away from your sins. With Jesus, "conversion" means a renewal of life from inside out. The Gospel will tell us that this renewal follows the discovery of God's mercy and is the work of his Spirit within us.

Christian conversion includes these two dimensions: a change of heart by the grace of God and a change of deeds and lifestyle, something much more than mere good intentions and wishful thinking.

- Centuries earlier, God had given the Law on the Mountain of Sinai (Ex 20). Now, on another mountain, the Son of God gives the New Law. In this, the first speech of his public ministry, Jesus gives an overview of a whole program for his followers. And with this, he defines himself in relation to the law of Moses.

The Beatitudes are included in the Gospels of both Matthew and Luke, but each treats them in a different way (see Lk. 6:20-26). We know that Luke presents four blessings (the poor, the hungry, those who weep and the persecuted) while Matthew gives eight. In fact, all develop the same theme, so the number is not important. The main difference between Matthew and Luke lies in the fact that the Beatitudes are addressed to two different audiences.

Luke presents the Beatitudes in the way they were proclaimed by Jesus. In Luke, Jesus addresses the whole assembly of common people, speaking as one of them. Like the prophets he ³Fortunate are those who have the spirit of the poor, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven.

⁴Fortunate are those who mourn, they shall be comforted.

⁵Fortunate are the gentle, they shall own the earth.

⁶Fortunate are those who hunger and thirst for justice, for they shall be satisfied.

⁷Fortunate are the merciful, for they shall find mercy.

⁸Fortunate are those with a pure heart, for they shall see God.

⁹Fortunate are those who work for peace, they shall be called sons of God.

¹⁰Fortunate are those who are persecuted for the cause of justice, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven.

¹¹Fortunate are you, when people insult you and persecute you and speak all kinds of evil against you because you are my followers. ¹²Be glad and joyful, for a great reward is kept for you in God. This is how this people persecuted the prophets who lived before you.

speaks boldly and clearly: you, the poor, are the first beneficiaries of the promises of God. Rejoice because God is giving you the great message and you shall be the ones to transmit the secrets of God's mercy to the world. You, who are totally dependent on others and on circumstances, are in the best position to experience the kindness of God.

Matthew adapts Jesus' words to his audience of Christian believers. The Church had already spread and Christian communities brought together all kinds of people: slaves, ordinary people and wealthy ones. So Matthew tells them that the Gospel is significant for each of them. It is not only by being poor that they will please God, but by their inner attitudes and way of life. He says: Fortunate are those who are spiritually poor, adding the pure of heart, those who work for peace...

So Luke points out those to whom the Gospel gives priority: the masses who are poor, the workers, peasants and the marginalized. His Beatitudes are a call for those who have not yet joined the Church. While Matthew teaches those already within the Church how they should behave to be worthy of the God who chose them. His Beatitudes are like a new law, or religion, which demands spiritual readiness rather than external acts.

Fortunate... Jesus offers to all the gift of true happiness. People tend to confuse "happiness" with "contentment," and "to be happy" with "to be content." Happiness is deeply moral and spiritual; it is really human fulfillment. Contentment has to do merely with our senses and material achievements. Unfortunately, many people look for contentment and not for happiness; thus the enormous human relevance of the Beatitudes. This happiness coincides with the riches of the Kingdom of Heaven, as stated in these Beatitudes, a Kingdom to be participated in here and now, but to become complete only in our life after death. Thus, the Beatitudes offer both hope in the present and plenitude in the future.

Fortunate ... for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven. This term heaven must be understood in the same sense that it was used in the days of Jesus. Being exceedingly respectful of God, the Jews would not pronounce his name, referring to him with other words like Heaven, The Glory, The Power ... The Kingdom of Heaven means literally the Kingdom of God, like the Father of Heaven means simply: God, the Father. On reading the word Heaven, remember that Jesus usually meant by this word, not the reward we will obtain after death "in heaven" but the Kingdom of God which comes to us on this earth together with Jesus.

Fortunate ... because they shall own the earth. Is Jesus promising a material reward, or a spiritual and "heavenly" earth? The Gospel does not present the spiritual and the material as opposed to one another and, in fact, the word "spiritual" does not even appear in the whole Gospel. When God spoke through the prophets, he promised his people a happy world where all their needs would be satisfied: banquets with exquisite meat, long life, rain to water the land, liberation from oppressors, a kingdom of justice. But it was clear that, in giving all this, God would live among humankind and communicate his spirit to them: They will be my people and I will be their God.

Because of this, Jesus presents the beatitudes like a litany in which all the promises point to the same reality. The kingdom of God is both, the land of Palestine promised to the children of Abraham, and the earth in which peace prevails and God dwells. Those hungry for justice will receive the bread and the holiness of God, because justice, in the Bible, means also: to be at peace with God.

Fortunate ... because they will be comforted. We are comforted by knowing that God loves and cares for us. We are comforted by knowing that, even when he does not seem to hear our prayers, our cross has a meaning and a purpose. We are comforted at seeing steps taken towards creating a world where justice and dignity are given to the marginalized. We are comforted by knowing that God will give us in the next life an excess of whatever we could hope for and deserve.

Salt and light

■ ¹³You are the salt of the earth. But if salt has lost its taste, how can it be made salty again? It has become useless. It can only be thrown away and people will trample on it.

Fortunate... those who mourn. Jesus does not have in mind people full of self-pity who look only for their own comfort. In the Bible, those who weep (Is 61:1), the patient ones (Ps 37:11) are people who hope for a city of justice. For God's purpose is not to satisfy egocentric prayers, but as he promised to Abraham from the beginning, to grant blessings and salvation to all humankind.

Fortunate... the persecuted. And Matthew, like Luke, includes one more beatitude: Happy are you when people persecute you and speak evil things against you because of me. It is impossible to announce the Gospel without suffering persecution. Many people accept superficially the words of God in the Gospel, but, as soon as somebody tries to point out those same words of God in order to change lives and the world itself, he is persecuted openly or in an underhanded way. This occurs in politics and in all other fields of human interaction, including the religious life.

Fortunate says Jesus. He has not come into this world to remind people, as other religious leaders do, of commandments new or old. His first mission is to proclaim the end of one era and the beginning of a new one – which is the kingdom of God.

Before Jesus' arrival, the prophets chosen by God to speak in his name, announced a kingdom to come; they encouraged the believers with hope for the future. But Jesus, and the Church after him, announce a Kingdom already present and at work amongst us (Mt 12:28). Total liberation and reconciliation with God become a personal experience and a way of life, expressed through these Beatitudes: we shall be comforted, we shall obtain mercy, we shall see God... Yet we do not forget our troubles, or our actual situation, and the Church would not be the Church if the word justice were not pronounced and heard within it as it is throughout the Bible. But we are more advanced than the ancient prophets, because God has come and we have been reconciled. Jesus says: They will see God. Now we understand the patience of God because we experience a renewal and security that cannot be expressed, and we taste the very presence and sweetness of God. We can truly sow peace because we possess it and we are not in anguish when we compare the powers of evil with our nothingness.

They shall be called sons of God: because in truth we are: 1 Jn 3:1.

■ Jesus calls us to save the world. This does not mean that all people are to enter the Church, but that the Church has to be salt and light to the world. The Bible mentions salt as the element that preserves food. The covenant of salt was the covenant of God with those who were to serve him forever (Nm 18:19). So the disciples of Jesus are called salt of the earth because through them the world benefits from the Covenant with God. They must continually enkindle in the world the desire and struggle for true justice and perfection, and not allow human societies to become satisfied with mediocrity.

o The Church, in its totality, must be a city built on a hill (see Is 2:2; 4:2), that everybody can see: a dwelling place for truth and fraternity. To think of the Church and all Christians as light, as witnesses of faith, hope and love in the midst of the world is to bring out the essence of a Christian's identity and the absolute value of the Gospel they share, which cannot be reduced, diluted or confused with any culture, ideology or social organization. Christianity is a light to the peoples because it is the fullness of the presence of the saving God and his communion and humankind.

+ As long as heavens and earth last... until it all be fulfilled. In Jesus' time the Law had several meanings:

First of all, it meant all the commandments have not come to destroy but to fulfill them. ¹⁸I tell you this: as long as heaven and earth last, not one letter of the Law will change until all is fulfilled.

¹⁹So then, whoever breaks the least important of the commandments, and teaches others to do the same will be the least in the kingdom of Heaven. On the other hand, whoever obeys the Law and teaches others to do the same, will be great in the kingdom of Heaven.

²⁰I tell you, then, that if you are not righteous in a better way than the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees, you will never enter the kingdom of Heaven.

◆²¹You have heard that it was said: to our people in the past: Do not commit murder; anyone who does kill will have to face trial. ²²But now I tell you: whoever gets angry with his brother will have to face trial. Whoever insults his brother deserves to be brought before the council, whoever humiliates his brother deserves to be thrown into the fire of hell. ²³So, if you are about to offer your gift at the altar and you remember that your brother has something against you, ²⁴leave your gift there in front of the altar, go at once and make peace with your brother, and then come back and offer your gift to God.

and practices based on the teaching of Moses.

- The Law was also another term for the Bible, as was the Law and the Prophets.
- There are several places in the Bible where The Law designates the religion of the Jews, which was based on the Bible.

With this explanation we will better understand the apparently contradictory sayings of Jesus regarding the Law.

Everything is to be fulfilled (5:10). Jesus does not refer to the commandments. Rather he affirms that the religion founded on the Old Testament's Scripture was a provisional, yet necessary, step in the history of salvation. The prophecies had to be fulfilled; also the rites and sacrifices of that religion served to instruct the people about the mystery of sin and mercy that would be fulfilled in the person and the work of Jesus. With him comes the perfect and definitive fellowship of God with man.

In 5:19 Jesus is referring to the commandments.

In 5:20, If your righteousness is not more, Jesus refers to the spirit of the Law.

THE SPIRIT OF THE LAW

The Laws of Israel were written, adapted and completed over the course of many centuries. Those laws are in the Bible and it is not easy to reconcile so many commandments which are not always in agreement with one another. Due to that confusion, even before Jesus the teachers of the Law began teaching and writing many explanations, and adapting these commandments for the use of Jews who now lived in a different situation.

That work was useful, but when Jesus proposes a perfect law, he does not intend like other Jewish teachers to reform the religious laws or to increase them: he exhorts us to receive the spirit which inspired the Law.

Imitate God (5:48). This is the spirit of the Law. It is more important to always consider the mercy of God than to continually meditate on the commandments. He who intends to live as a child of God becomes more perfect than the Pharisees who were preoccupied only with the fulfillment of external duties. When Jesus shows us the Father and how to live in his sight, he gives us the perfect Law.

But, many could misinterpret the words of Jesus and say: It would be better if religion were less demanding and easier to practice! Because of this Jesus points out that anyone who does not intend to fulfill the entire Law will not enter the Kingdom. Likewise those who have ready excuses for their laziness: these commandments are not so important! But to those who obey the Law, Jesus shows the spirit of the Law. For such as these the Gospel is not a comfortable road, but the call to a more perfect life.

◆Before God we will give an account of our life. He is Truth. Therefore, let us not call sin only that which is seen or condemned as such by people. For my sins are all the bad thoughts that I keep inside and that produce evil fruits when the opportunity comes.

The comparison of the two enemies walking side by side teaches us that we must not continually delay the moment for settling accounts and for rectifying our lives. Better today than tomorrow. The point is not only to repent but to repair the damage done. Repairing the damage means:

your opponent before you are summoned to court. Otherwise he will turn you over to the judge, who will hand you over to the police, who will put you in jail. ²⁶There you will stay, until you pay your fine down to the last penny.

■ ²⁷You have heard that it was said: Do not commit adultery. ²⁸But I tell you this: anyone who looks at a woman with the intention of possessing her has in fact already committed adultery with her in his heart.

²⁹So, if your right eye causes you to sin, take it out and throw it away! It is much better for you to lose a part of your body than to have your whole body thrown into hell. ³⁰If your right hand causes you to sin, cut it off and throw it away! It is better for you to lose a part of your body than to have your whole body thrown into hell.

+ ³¹It was also said: anyone who divorces his wife must give her a written notice of divorce. ³²But what I tell you is this: If a man divorces his wife for any cause other than unfaithfulness, he causes her to commit adultery. And the man who marries a divorced woman commits adultery.

27. Ex 20, 14 30. 18, 8; Mk 9, 43 31. Dt 24, 1; Mal 2, 14 32. 19, 7; Mk 10, 4; Lk 16, 18; 1 Cor 7, 10 more than just returning the money or the tool I have illegally taken. I must also question why I am so weak that I am carried away by any desire. So I have to strengthen my weak will by means of prayer and self-control.

Often we recognize how lukewarm our love for God is and how short-lived our perseverance in doing good. This is the first of many years of wrongdoing. We are able to forget about the wrong we have done but we fail to repair the damage caused to our whole person. Although we may feel happy and unconcerned, we carry a deadness within ourselves from the unsettled debts and accounts.

Until you pay your fine down to the last penny. Every evil deed and falsehood on our conscience shall be brought to light before we may enjoy the happiness and eternity of God. If we are not purified during this life, we will be during or after our death, the Church calls this painful purification "Purgatory."

We must not think of Purgatory as a "waiting room" for heaven, or as penalties from God to punish us before admitting us into his presence. Purgatory is an expression of God's love, for it purifies a person of the remnants of evil which make one unable to fully enjoy the plenitude of love and happiness that is found in God. As a damp log before it catches fire must first be purified of its humidity by the same fire, so we must be purified by God's love.

■ If your right eye... this has to do with the Christian sense of self-denial, or asceticism. Christians, and any person concerned with ethics, are sometimes called to renounce certain things, persons and involvements.

First of all, we are called to renounce things if they are evil (e.g. an immoral job such as selling drugs) and, therefore, incompatible with our Christian call. In such cases, self-denial must be absolute.

Secondly, we must renounce things that are in themselves good, but which impede our inner freedom and love, due to our tendency towards selfishness (e.g. an exclusive sort of friendship, or an all-absorbing hobby). This renunciation is relative: as a general rule we must not undermine values or good things; creation at large is good in itself (Gen 1:31), and was given to us by God for our human growth and happiness. But we must learn to control it, and avoid becoming enslaved by it. Therefore renunciation of persons, situations, social, cultural and political values is required only to the extent needed for us to again become free in their use. Spiritual writers call this Christian asceticism.

There is, however, one case that Jesus refers to, in this text, in which we must break away from good things or values (our eye, our hand, our good things). It is the case in which we are so over-attached and enslaved to a value, that this turns out to be an idol, or a replacement of God, against which our efforts for a balanced control are hopeless. In these limited cases, which do happen occasionally in our lives, we must be ready to make a complete break.

+ If a man divorces his wife... See commentaries on Mk 10:1; Mt 19:2.

Here this saying of Jesus is given as an example of the courageous decisions that a Christian may be called upon to make. God sometimes asks for heroic sacrifices and anyone who does not choose the difficult way necessarily loses something of the Gospel.

Except for unfaithfulness. In this case, the most ancient Christian writings taught that the spouse could divorce, but not marry again.

Except for unfaithfulness. It is a fact that the Greek text of the Gospel is not always clear. These words can also be translated as: out of unlawful marriage. In this instance Matthew would be referring to the great number of Christians who were formerly pagans and who upon being accepted into the Church, dissolved illegal

Oaths

◆ ³³You have also heard that people were told in the past: Do not break your oath; an oath sworn to the Lord must be kept. ³⁴But I tell you this: do not take an oath for any promise. Do not swear by the heavens, for they are God's throne, ³⁵nor by the earth, because it is his footstool, nor by Jerusalem because it is the city of the great king. ³⁶Do not even swear by your head, because you cannot make a single hair on it white or black. ³⁷Say yes when you mean yes and say no when you mean no. Anything else you say comes from the devil.

unions and had to send their partners away (see 1 Cor 7:12-16).

◆ Many invoke the name of God on any occasion. Is it because they truly know him and have him in mind? If we use his name just for any flimsy reason, it is because we do not experience the weight of his presence. How irreligious it is to swear in the name of God and make him a witness of our sincerity when we do not even know ourselves and our low motivations!

Anything else comes from the devil. We apologize because we are anxious for the approval of others. The children of God allow the Father to take care of them and more so to defend their good name. The truth will always come forth and when we are content to merely give our testimony, we honour the Father greatly. See also Mt 23:16; James 5:12.

○ If someone forces you... Jesus speaks to an audience of farmers who are vexed and oppressed by foreign troops. Their usual reaction is silent submission that harbours hatred and awaits revenge.

Do not oppose evil with evil. If we are the only ones vexed or harmed, let us forgive, and let us put our cause in the hands of God instead of fighting. For every conflict, no matter how lawful, will make us more worried about our own interests and our own rights. God sees and will do better than our own justice can do.

However there are many occasions when we must resist the oppressor because it is the only way to educate him and force him to act in a more human manner. Very often, if I accept the abuses of another, I encourage him to do the same to my neighbour and I become an accomplice in social injustice.

Love for enemies (Lk 6:29)

○ ³⁸You have heard that it was said: An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. ³⁹But I tell you this: do not oppose evil with evil; if someone slaps you on your right cheek, turn and offer him the other. ⁴⁰If someone sues you in court for your shirt, let him have your coat as well. ⁴¹If someone forces you to go one mile, go two miles with him. ⁴²Give when asked and do not turn your back on anyone who wants to borrow from you.

+ ⁴³You have heard that it was said: Love your fellowman and hate your

Do not oppose evil with evil. Jesus gives this advice to the strong of spirit, who can understand that sometimes, by conceding more than the adversary demands, they will bring about a change in his attitude. But for timid people, the first step towards justice and salvation which they must learn is solidarity; they have to unite and organize with other oppressed people to demand their rights, inspired in justice and solidary love and not in revenge and hatred. We know that the Bible first taught God's people to struggle, and only later, to forgive.

Offer your left cheek. With this provoking advice, Jesus opens our mind to an understanding of violence and teaches us the secret of non-violence. Violence, like desire and greed, awakens within us at seeing violence, desire and greed. There are many things that for years we did not desire, but, as soon as others appreciate and keep them, we die to have them also. Likewise, upon seeing others successfully use force, we want to do the same. But mutual violence never brings about justice; for, with victory over an oppressor, yesterday's victims become the oppressors of tomorrow.

Jesus does not address those who look for immediate solutions, which are always deceptive, but rather those who are ready to take part in the slow and painful building of the Kingdom. Such as these will find means other than the "holy war" which so many revolutionaries dream of.

Those practicing judo are taught how to put the adversary off balance: if he pushes you, bring him toward you; if he pulls you forward, do not resist, but rather throw yourself forward, that he may fall down. Likewise Jesus teaches us to give the opponent twice as much as he demands, in order to disconcert his defenses, so that, in the end, he will realize that he was mistaken.

enemy. ⁴⁴But this I tell you: Love your enemies, and pray for those who persecute you, ⁴⁵so that you may be sons (& d.) of your Father in Heaven. For he makes his sun rise on both bad and good, and he gives rain to both the just and the unjust.

⁴⁶If you love those who love you, what is special about that? Do even tax collectors not do as much as that? ⁴⁷And if you are friendly only to your brethren, what is so exceptional about that? Do not even the pagans do as much? ⁴⁸For your part you shall be righteous and perfect in the way your heavenly Father is righteous and perfect.

Doing good for God alone

6 ¹Be careful not to make a show of your righteousness before people. If you do so, you do not gain anything from your Father in Heaven. ²When you give something to the poor, do not have it trumpeted before you, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets in order to be praised by the people. I assure you, they have been already paid in full.

³If you give something to the poor, do not let your left hand know what your right hand is doing, ⁴so that your gift remains really secret. Your Father who sees what is kept secret, will reward you.

⁵When you pray, do not be like the hypocrites. They love to stand and pray in the synagogues or on street corners to be seen by everyone. I assure you, they have been already paid in full. ⁶When you pray, go into your room, close the door and pray to your Father who is with you in secret; and your Father who sees what is kept secret will reward you.

+ Jesus spoke only once of being perfect as the Father is. This was in reference to not differentiating between friends and enemies. God loves everyone and we are to imitate him. (See commentary on Lk 6:32). To do this we must not only cultivate a heart of love but also an ability to understand others. As long as we condemn others, love will be affected. When we realize that there is a place for everyone in the present world and that God directs everything for the benefit of all, we attain the criteria of God and are perfect as the Father is perfect.

Love your neighbour. In the Old Testament, neighbour (or fellowman) refers to a fellow Jew. Jewish laws promoted solidarity among the people of Israel, but they never thought of a universal brotherhood and sisterhood.

Hate your enemy. This can be read in a similar form in Deut 7:2. Pointing to national enemies (not to personal ones), it cautioned the Jews to distrust them and live far away from them, so as not to share in their misdeeds.

Love your enemies: Mk 12:31; Lk 10:27; Rom 13:9; Gal 5:14; Rom 12:20; Lk 23:34; Acts 7:60; Rom 12:14; Eph 5:1.

◆ God cannot reward us as long as we seek our own interest and the approval of others. He will begin listening and showing himself to us when we make him the only witness of our life. A believer is one who sees what cannot be seen, and is happy to know that God sees and knows him.

o The value of prayer does not lie in the quantity of words and the mere repetition of formulas, as if accomplishing a task. The value of prayer lies chiefly in our inner attitude of faith and love of God. We should try to put our minds and hearts on God as a Father and a friend, a God who loves us and is always waiting for us to share a silent moment with him. To pray is not to talk much, but to surrender our lives into God's loving hands.

Jesus gave his disciples the Our Father as the perfect prayer that comes from the heart of God's children, because in it they express all their desires in the proper order and form. Jesus composed the Our Father very carefully, as did the teachers of his time, so that it could be easily memorized. In the language spoken by Jesus, the first letter of each verse when put together chance they have of being heard. ⁸Do not be like them. Your Father knows what you need, even before you ask him.

⁹This then, is how you should pray:

Our Father in Heaven, holy be your name, ¹⁰your kingdom come,
your will be done
on earth as in heaven.

¹¹Give us today our daily bread.

¹²Forgive us our debts as we forgive those who are in debt to us.

¹³Do not bring us to the test but deliver us from the Evil One.

¹⁴If you forgive others their wrongs, your Father in Heaven will also forgive yours. ¹⁵If you do not forgive others, then your Father will not forgive you either.

formed the word "to come" which is the key of this prayer: Your Kingdom come.

The contemporaries of Jesus used the word Heaven to signify God, because they would not pronounce his name. Jesus says likewise: Father of Heaven, meaning: God, the Father.

Heaven is for us a beautiful world where God is all. On calling upon the Father of Heaven, we do not mean that he is far or near, above or below or inside. We only intend to raise our spirits to Him. We recognize that our words are not worthy, that our concerns are selfish and limited when we compare them with the breadth of God's thoughts and the generosity of His love. That we can address God and call him Father is not something natural, but a very special privilege. "My Father," says Jesus; also: "your Father." For he is the only one, and we are adopted children, by the mercy of God who allowed us to be born again (Jn 3:1).

The Bible speaks of God, and also of the Name of God. All of creation is but a manifestation of God, who fills this universe. But he is not contained in it, nor is he in a determined place. Because of this, we speak of his Name as a way of designating God's active presence, radiance, and splendour which covers everything.

Holy be your name! May your Name be known and proclaimed Holy! May your splendour and generosity be seen in those who become your children. May your perfection be recognized through their good works (5:16). May your presence and your riches be welcomed by those who keep your word, according to John 14:23. The Father only wants to pour out his holiness and happiness on the children he has chosen and loved. He wants to seal us with his Name, so that day and night we will be united with him, like the Father and the Son are united by the Holy Spirit.

Your Kingdom come. With the coming of Jesus, that Kingdom has come near to us. God reigns, not because he can now rule more easily, but because he is now known in truth. The believers now perceive him, not as a God who imposes obligations, nor as a Saviour more powerful than the evil ones, but instead recognize him in the gift of his Son, in the humiliation of the Son and in their mutual love. From this discovery, love and mercy pour forth and, in time, we will see on earth some fruits of this Kingdom. The reconciled children of God are a leavening element in society, and the whole human person with his projects, labor, economic and political plans moves towards a common goal: everyone and everything must return to the Father.

But whether we are good, bad or indifferent, the Kingdom of God will come, with or without our help, because actually it is already here.

Your will be done. These are the words of Jesus in Gethsemane (Mt 26:39). Some people consider themselves to have much faith because they always wait for God to solve their problems. But that is not the way to please him. The children of God lift up their spirit to him so that God's will may be, at last, their own will.

On earth as in heaven. This applies to the previous three petitions. It reminds us that everything in this world which is created and subject to time, depends on another world, not created, where time does not exist. There God the Father enjoys the riches he has communicated to his creation. He sees his chosen people as they will be at the end of the world, united in Christ. There his will is realized and glorified by everyone. But we, who live in time, are anguished by an imperfect situation, by a world in labour where evil appears to triumph. And we pray that everything may come about according to the initial plan of God, as it truly will.

We ask the Father for the bread he has promised to those who listen to his word. A modern man believes that material welfare depends only on personal effort. But the Bible says that it depends on both God and ourselves. Alone we can bring about for a while some economic miracles, but we may waste the accumulated riches. Only by listening to the word of God (Deut 8:3) will people have bread, and be able to distribute it. A person who expects from God, not his bread, but our bread, will strive to o ¹⁶When you fast, do not put on a miserable face as do the hypocrites. They put on a gloomy face, so people can see they are fasting. find work, to work in useful ways, and to promote justice where he is working.

The Our Father speaks of debts that we must forgive (6:12). But in 6:14, we read wrongs. Jesus considers debts and wrongs as the same thing. When we forgive someone who asks for forgiveness, we are not doing that person a favour, nor do we deserve any merit for doing it: we actually free ourselves from some rancour or hatred that is poisoning us. Inasmuch as we stick to our rights, we hold fast to this world. God wants to forgive us and bring us closer to him, but how can he if we remain anchored to the things of this world?

Jesus speaks to the poor who are accustomed to being burdened with debts, which many times they cannot settle. They are obliged to live together with neighbors they have not chosen. All this increases the occasions for offending one another. Many people today live very independent lives and hold as an ideal not to owe anything to anyone. This independence can make it harder for us to understand God's mercy towards us, poor as we really are before God.

Do not bring us to the test. Thus speaks one who knows his weaknesses and little faith. No matter how confident he may feel at the present moment, he knows that, if God hides his face, he will be left alone. We are not afraid to fight difficult battles if God requires it, because he who commands also gives us the necessary strength. But we know that by ourselves we are nothing.

We will be still more prudent if we know that the enemy is not the evil, but the devil. Somebody, stronger than ourselves, is watching to deceive us, to make us lose faith and fall as soon as we feel sure of ourselves and abandon the means given by Jesus for perseverance in the faith and in the Church.

See another shorter text in Luke 11:1.

o Here Jesus neither justifies nor condemns fasting. He himself fasted: 4:2; 9:5; 17:2. But fasting is unworthy when done to obtain men's approval rather than God's.

All religions know fasting. It is a way of calling upon God, especially when great misfortunes come upon us (Joel 2:12); it befits people who feel guilty and want to move to compassion the one who forgives them (Jonah 3:8). It also teaches self-control and integrates our energies in preparation for divine communications.

Scripture puts limited emphasis on fasting. The prophets asserted that fasting without justice towards the neighbour is of no use: Is 58; Zac 7:4.

Fasting is also used by persons and groups as a means of social pressure, as a political weapon to call attention to some demands. This is all right, although it is different from the religious fast Jesus speaks of. The difference is that a religious fast is addressed to God, not to public opinion (Mt 6:18), and it entails an inner disposition of conversion and sorrow for personal sin on the part of the fasting person.

■ Do not keep riches on earth. What are the things on which we spend our energies, about which we dream and feel proud? Which riches do we keep safe at home? Which are the beloved riches stored in our memory for the enjoyment of recalling them?

There will be your heart. (The heart, in Jewish culture, means the mind.) I will not own them; they will own me and prevent me from seeing life clearly. Because of them I refuse to listen, and do not dare to seek the truth, for fear of being judged by the truth.

The believer uses money, makes plans, lives in the world. But he seeks and loves only what is important here and now, according to the Gospel.

+ Jesus' warning about the danger of a blind conscience, which can lead us astray, is congruent with his admonition that our hearts should be where true values are. It is commonly accepted in Christian spirituality that blindness of the heart comes about when we are inordinately attached to ideas, persons, things, money ...

Set your heart on the kingdom

o ²⁴ No one can serve two masters; for he will either hate one and love the other or he will be loyal to the first and look down on the second. You cannot at the same time serve God and money.

²⁵ This is why I tell you, not to be worried about food and drink for yourself, or about clothes for your body. Is not life more important than food and is not the body more important than clothes? ²⁶ Look at the birds in the sky; they do not sow, they do not harvest and do not store food in barns, and yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not worth much more than the birds?

²⁷ Which of you can add a day to his life by worrying about it? ²⁸ Why are you so worried about your clothes? Look at the flowers in the fields how they grow. They do not toil or spin. ²⁹ But I tell you that not even Solomon in all his wealth was clothed like one of these. ³⁰ If God gives such clothes to the grass in the field – which blooms today and is to be burned tomorrow in an oven, how much more will he clothe you? How little faith you have!

³¹ Do not worry and say: What are we going to eat? What are we going to drink? Or: what shall we wear? ³² The pagans keep themselves busy with such things; but your heavenly Father knows that you need them all. ³³ Set your heart first on the kingdom and the justice of God and all these things will be given to you. ³⁴ Do not worry about tomorrow for tomorrow will worry about itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own.

Children of the Kingdom

(Lk 6:37; 11:9; 6:31; 13:23)

◆ 7 ¹ Do not judge and you will not be judged. ² In the same way you judge others, you will be judged, and the measure you use for

26. 10, 31 29. 1 K 10 32. 6, 7; 1 k 12, 30 34. Ex 16, 4 1. 1 Cor 4, 5 2. Rom 2, 1; 14, 4

o No one can be a servant of two masters. This opening line helps us understand what follows, that Jesus wants us to be free, not of concerns, but of all worries in order to serve God.

Scripture had already taught that we must choose between God and false gods. Jesus affirms that money is a false god, because it offers happiness and security for the future, but robs us of our only riches that is the present time. Caught up in making money, we are unable to live truly and freely; we neglect our personal growth and family life, keep silent before evil and lie. We ignore our neighbour and crawl in front of the powerful.

Why are you worried? After worrying much because we do not have money, or because we are having a bad time, or because our work is being delayed, we are ashamed at meeting simple persons who share the little they possess with others poorer than they, without feeling sad or thinking they have done something great. Liberation is the work of God throughout history, and we, shall we have enough faith to free ourselves from so many worries?

The comparison with the flowers and the birds does not mean that we can fold our arms and be idle, because when God gave us arms and brains, it was for us to use them. Rather Jesus teaches that, if God takes care of and beautifies the smallest of creatures, the more he cares for us and desires our lives to be beautiful and perfect.

Look first for the Kingdom. Jesus wants us to take risks for what is true, rather than worrying about our security and future. We are called to battle every day to win more justice, beauty and greatness, and to that end we must forget ourselves, sacrifice our own interests, and perhaps the financial security for our children. Perhaps we have to dedicate ourselves to apostolic work with little or no remuneration.

◆ Do not judge. We must exercise good judgement to distinguish between the good and evil around us. We must not make ourselves judge of our neighbour, as if we were better than he and had to condemn him.

When we look at our own lives, we realize that those who helped us grow were those who supported and understood us, not those who judged and condemned us.

Do not judge. See Rom 2:1; 14:4; 1 Cor 5:12; James 4:11.

How are we to judge the wrongdoing of our neighbour in order to correct him? Paul explains, how in Gal 6:15. See also Jesus' attitude in Jn. 8:1-11.

others, will be used for you.³ Why do you look at the speck in your brother's eye? ⁴How can you say to your brother: 'Come, let me take the speck from your eye,' as long as that plank is in your own? ⁵Hypocrites, take first the plank out of your own eye, then you will see clear enough to take the speck out of your brother's eye.

o ⁶Do not give what is holy to the dogs, or throw your pearls to the pigs, for them to trample on and even turn on you and tear you to pieces.

◆ ⁷Ask, and you will receive; seek and you will find; knock and the door will be opened. ⁸For everyone who asks, receives; the one who seeks, finds; and the door will be opened to him who knocks. ⁹Would any of you give a stone to your son when he asks for bread? ¹⁰Or give him a snake, when he asks for a fish? ¹¹As bad as you are, you know how to give good things to your children. How much more, then, will your Father in Heaven give good things to those who ask him!

¹²So, do to others whatever you would that others do to you, that is the meaning of the Law and the Prophets.

■ ¹³Enter through the narrow gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the road that leads to destruction, and many go that way. ¹⁴How narrow is the gate that leads to life and how rough the road, and there are few people who find it.

The tree is known by its fruits

o Do not throw your pearls to the pigs. Jesus addressed this warning to his followers living in a hostile world. They should not tell everything to everyone. God has given each of us wonderful gifts: we must not share them with everyone at once, believing that it will bring them to faith.

◆ See commentary on Lk 11:9; Mk 11:24; Jn 14:13; 15:7; James 1:5.

■ Enter through the narrow gate. We could ask, "Who will be saved?" (Mt 19:25). In no instance did Jesus say whether those who would share in eternal life would be many or few. But he said many times that very few would be chosen from among the many called. That means that among the many people who would be privileged to meet him, very few would experience the Gospel's riches and bring forth fruit in themselves and for others. The chosen or approved are those who persevere and strive for perfect freedom.

Many choose the road leading to perdition. They stray from leading a life in which Jesus is everything to them. They waste the gifts of God entrusted to them and apparently become useless for the Kingdom. Yet, even so, they are not deprived of God's mercy.

+ False prophets are people and trends that lead us in a wrong direction. We acclaim such a prophet to be good, because we like the person, and easily find arguments to justify his deeds and what results from them. We become enthusiastic, without good reason, for this or that way of life and if it brings us far from the Gospel then we declare that the Gospel is not to be followed literally. Young people enslaved by sex and consumerism, common and working people divided by jealousy and egoism, families where spouses do not communicate and do not know any other relaxation than watching T.V.... these are some fruits of bad trees.

Thornbushes do not bear grapes. Plans and theories have to be tested before they can be judged: Jesus invites us to look at the facts before coming to conclusions. In discerning about socio-political ideologies and programs, it's not enough to look into the ideal purposes (they are usually appealing). One must chiefly look into their factual and historical performance. But we find it hard to examine the reality in which we live. We prefer to discuss and debate about ideas rather than to analyze particular situations. Jesus, accustomed to manual labor, distrusts ideas and theories.

Most people distrust and belittle those who belong to a party other than their own, but they justify the mistakes and even the crimes of their own party. Jesus, instead, condemns those ¹⁷A good tree always yields good fruit, a rotten tree yields bad fruit. ¹⁸A good tree cannot produce bad fruit and a rotten tree cannot bear good fruit. ¹⁹Any tree that does not bear good fruit is cut down and thrown in the fire. ²⁰So you will recognize them by their fruit.

Wise and foolish builders

◆ ²¹Not everyone who says to me: Lord! Lord! will enter into the kingdom of Heaven, but the one who does the will of my Father in Heaven. ²²Many will say to me on that day, "Lord, Lord, did we not speak in your name? Did we not cast out devils and perform many miracles in your name?" ²³Then I will tell them openly: I never knew you; away from me, you wicked people!

²⁴So then, anyone who hears these words of mine and acts accordingly is like a wise man, who built his house on rock. ²⁵The rain poured, the rivers flooded, and the wind blew against that house, but it did not collapse because it was built on rock. ²⁶But anyone who hears these words of mine and does not act accordingly, is like a fool who built his house on sand. ²⁷The rain poured, the rivers flooded, and the wind blew against that house, and it collapsed and the ruin was complete."

²⁸When Jesus had finished this discourse, the crowds were amazed at his teaching, ²⁹for he taught with authority unlike their teachers of the Law.

Cure of a leper

(Mk 1:40; Lk 5:12)

8 When Jesus came down from the mountain, large crowds followed him.

²Then a leper came forward. He greeted him respectfully and said, "Sir, if only you will, you can make me clean." ³Jesus stretched out his hand, touched him, and said, "I will it, be clean again." At that very moment the man was cleansed from his leprosy. ⁴Then Jesus said to him, "Take care, do not tell anyone, but go to the priest, have yourself declared clean, and offer the gift that Moses ordered as a proof of it."

The faith of the centurion

(Lk 7:1; Jn 4:46)

⁵When Jesus entered Capernaum, an army captain approached him to ask his help, ⁶"Sir, my servant lies sick at home. He is paralyzed and suffers terribly." ⁷Jesus said to him, "I will come and heal him."

promoting divisions, lies and violence, even if they claim to be serving a just cause. By doing so, he affirms a basic moral principle: the end does not justify the means.

◆ In the day of judgment many will say to me. Jesus refers to members of the Church, and especially to the influential ones who are highly regarded by others and by themselves. Whether we teach or work miracles, these abilities and ministries given us for the good of the community do not assure us that we are in the grace of God. True faith works through love (Gal 5:6) and moves us to fulfill all the Law: James 2:8.

He who hears my words. Jesus means those who listen to his words and are converted: they believe themselves already saved. But if they do not use their initial enthusiasm to build their lives on solid foundations, such as scriptural meditation, generosity, resistance to evil inclinations, sharing in the Christian community – then everything will tumble later on.

With this paragraph Matthew closes the first Discourse wherein he gathers words of Jesus that could serve as a "call to all people of good will." A new Discourse will begin in Chapter 10.

healed. ⁹For I myself am a man under orders and I have soldiers under me. And if I say to one; 'Go,' he goes, and if I say to another: 'Come,' he comes, and to my servant: 'Do this,' he does it."

¹⁰When Jesus heard this he was astonished and said to those who were following him. "I tell you, I have not found such faith in Israel. ¹¹I say to you, many will come from east and west and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob at the feast in the kingdom of Heaven; ¹²but those who expected the kingdom will be thrown out into the darkness; there they will cry and grind their teeth."

¹³Then Jesus said to the captain, "Go home now. What you believed will happen." And that very moment his servant was healed ¹⁴Jesus went to Peter's house and found Peter's mother-in-law in bed with fever. ¹⁵He took her by the hand and the fever left her; she got up and began to wait on him.

¹⁶Towards the evening they brought to Jesus many possessed by evil spirits and with a word he drove out the spirits. He also healed all who were sick. ¹⁷This way he fulfilled what was said by the prophet Isaiah: He took away our infirmities and our diseases.

¹⁸When he saw the crowd around him, Jesus gave orders to cross to the other shore. ¹⁹A teacher of the Law approached him and said, "Master, I will follow you wherever you go." ²⁰Jesus said to him, "Foxes have holes and birds have nests, but the Son of Man does not even have a stone on which to lay his head."

²¹Another disciple said to him, "Lord let me go and bury my father first." ²²But Jesus answered him,

"Follow me, and let the dead bury their own dead."

Jesus calms the storm

(Mk 4:35; Lk 8:22)

²³Jesus got into the boat and his disciples followed him. ²⁴Without warning a fierce storm hit the lake, and the waves swept over the boat. But Jesus was asleep.

²⁵They woke him and cried, "Lord save us! We are lost!" ²⁶But Jesus answered, "Why are you so afraid, you of little faith?" Then he ordered the waves and sea, and it was completely calm.

²⁷The people were astonished. They said, "What kind of man is this, even the winds and the sea obey him."

The demoniacs and the pigs

(Mk 5:1; Lk 8:26)

²⁸When Jesus reached Gadara on the other side, he was met by two men who came out from the tombs. They were so fierce that no one dared to pass that way. ²⁹Suddenly they shouted, "What do you want with us, you, Son of God! Have you come to torture us before the time?"

³⁰At some distance there was a large herd of pigs feeding. ³¹So the demons begged him, "If you drive us out, send us into that herd of pigs."

³²Jesus told them, "Go." So they left and went into the pigs. The whole herd rushed down the cliff into the lake and drowned.

³³The men in charge of them ran off to the town, where they told the whole story, also what had happened to the men possessed with the demons. ³⁴Then the whole town went out to meet Jesus; and when they saw him, they begged him to leave their area.

Jesus cures a paralytic

(Mk 2:1; Lk 5:17)

9 Jesus got back into the boat, crossed the lake again, and came back to his hometown. ²Here they brought a paralyzed man to him, lying on a bed. Jesus saw their faith and said to the paralytic, "Courage, my son! Your sins are forgiven."

³Then some teachers of the Law said to themselves, "This man insults God." ⁴Jesus was aware of what they were thinking, and said, "Why have you such evil thoughts? ⁵Which is easier to say: 'Your sins are forgiven' or 'Stand up and walk'? ⁶You must know that the Son of Man has the authority on earth to forgive sins." He then said to the paralyzed man, "Stand up! take your bed and go home." ⁷The man got up, and went off home.

⁸When the crowds saw this, they were filled with awe and praised God for giving such power to people.

Jesus calls Matthew

(Mk 2:13; Lk 5:27)

+ ⁹As Jesus moved on from there, he saw a man named Matthew at his seat in the custom-house, and he said to him, "Follow me." And Matthew got up and followed him. ¹⁰Now it happened, while Jesus was at table in Matthew's house, many tax collectors and other sinners joined Jesus and his disciples. ¹¹When the Pharisees saw this they said to his disciples, "Why is it that your master eats with those sinners and tax collectors?"

¹²When Jesus heard this he said, "Healthy people do not need a doctor, but sick people do. ¹³Go and find out what it means: 'What I want is mercy, not sacrifice.' I did not come to call the righteous but sinners."

¹⁴Then the disciples of John came to him with the question, "How is it that we and the Pharisees fast on many occasions, but your disciples do not fast?"

¹⁵Jesus answered them, "How can you expect wedding guests to mourn as long as the bridegroom is with them? Time will come when the bridegroom will be taken away from them, then they will fast.

¹⁶No one patches an old coat with a piece of unshrunk cloth, for the patch will shrink and tear an even bigger hole in the coat. ¹⁷Besides you don't put new wine in old wine-skins. If you do, the wine-skins will burst and the wine be spilt. No, you put new wine in fresh skins; then both are preserved."

The dead girl and the sick woman

(Mk 5:21; Lk 8:40)

They praised God for giving such power to people (v. 8). Matthew means not only Jesus but also the members of the Christian community, because all of them share in the power of forgiveness. Christian communities of the early Church were more aware of the power given to them than we are today. Responsible ministers act more directly in forgiving or retaining sins, but they do so for the sake of the community and every Christian has to contribute to the rescue and reconciliation of his brothers and sisters (1 Cor 5:3-5; 2 Cor 2:5-11). Without denying the value of the priest's absolution, we know that the whole community enjoys the presence of Christ. When we establish relations of mercy and trust, and accept fraternal correction humbly, when there is mutual forgiveness between spouses, Christ is the one who forgives and pardons, and what is forgiven among us on earth, is forgiven in heaven (Mt 18:18).

just died, but come and place your hands on her, and she will live." ¹⁹So Jesus got up and went with him, and so did his disciples.

²⁰ Then a woman who had suffered from severe bleedings for twelve years came up from behind, and touched the edge of his cloak. ²¹For she thought, "If I only touch his cloak, I will be healed." ²²Jesus turned, saw her and said, "Courage my daughter, your faith has healed you." And from that moment the woman was cured.

²³ When Jesus arrived at the president's house and saw the flute players and the excited crowd, he said, ²⁴"Go away! The girl is not dead. She is only sleeping!" And they laughed at him. ²⁵But once the crowd was out, Jesus went in and took the girl by the hand, and she got up. ²⁶The news of this spread through that whole area.

o ²⁷ As Jesus moved on from there two blind men followed him, shouting, "Son of David, help us!" ²⁸ When he was about to enter the house, the blind men caught up with him, and Jesus said to them, "Do you believe that I have the power to do what you want?" They answered, "Yes, sir!"

²⁹ Then Jesus touched their eyes and said, "As you have believed, so let it be." ³⁰ And their eyes were opened. Then Jesus gave them a stern warning, "Be careful and let no one know about this." ³¹ But as soon as they went off, they spread the news about him through the whole area.

+ ³⁵ Jesus went around all the towns and villages, teaching in their synagogues and proclaiming the good news of the Kingdom and he cured every sickness and disease. ³⁶ When he saw the crowds he was moved with pity, for they were harassed and helpless like sheep without a shepherd. ³⁷ Then he said to his disciples, "The harvest is abundant but the workers are only few. ³⁸ Ask the master of the harvest to send workers to gather his harvest."

good Jew. Jesus had fringes on his cloak (Nm 15:38; Mt 23:5).

o They followed him shouting. In what manner, if they were blind? Stumbling and being carried by others. When you sin, shout to the Lord and keep on looking for Christ.

+ His heart was filled with pity, because they were like sheep without a shepherd. See Nm 27:7; Ez 34:5; Zac 10:2; Jn 4:35; Mk 6:34; and Lk 10:2.

God himself, in Jesus, had come down to cure humankind. Because this work would be very long and painful, it was necessary to provide some visible signs to help people believe in this almost imperceptible healing.

Jesus ought to heal sick persons and, even in our days, the Christian community should give signs of what they preach. They must cure today's world of its sicknesses. The gifts of healing are not limited to healing bodily ills and the devil is responsible for more than individual maladies.

People seek after those who can cure their illnesses, and so great crowds followed Jesus. For him, however, sickness as well as the exploitation of the human person, hunger and war, are only fruits and signs of a deeper illness attached to our heart, which is sin. Constant work and the unity of all people of goodwill are sufficient to remedy some of our misfortunes, but the only spirits and to heal every disease and sickness.

² These are the names of the twelve apostles: first Simon, called Peter, and his brother Andrew; ³ James, the son of Zebedee, and his brother John; Philip and Bartholomew, thomas and Matthew, the tax collector; James, the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddaeus; ⁴ Simon, the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, the man who would betray him.

Jesus sends the first missionaries (Lk 9:1; 10:1; Mk 6:8)

o ⁵ Jesus sent these twelve on mission with the instruction: "Do not visit pagan territory and do not enter a Samaritan town. ⁶ Go instead to the lost sheep of the people of Israel.

⁷ Go and proclaim the message: the kingdom of Heaven is near. ⁸ Heal the sick, bring the dead back to life, cleanse the lepers, and drive out demons. You received this as a gift, so give it as a gift. ⁹ Do not carry any gold, silver or copper in your purses. ¹⁰ Do not carry a traveller's bag, or extra shirt, or sandals, or walking-stick, for a worker deserves his living.

way to eradicate evil at its roots is to restore human persons to their dignity as children of God. This requires a personal transformation which comes from God sending us his Spirit.

◆ Jesus asks each of us to serve humankind with our own talents. But he needs also workers for the harvest of the Kingdom, that is, to gather into the Church those who receive a call from God. "Pray," says Jesus, "and you will perhaps hear God's call."

Jesus did not say that we should pray for many priests or ministers, because, normally, every Christian community has to provide for its own heads and shepherds. He wants us to pray for missionary and apostolic workers; those are and will always be too few, especially those serving among the poor.

Till then, Jesus had spoken only in the synagogues around Capernaum. Now he has fame and followers and begins to attract multitudes. In that moment he establishes the group of the "Twelve." He needs them to prepare meetings, to spread his doctrine, to multiply the miraculous signs effected among the sick.

At the same time Jesus is planning his Church and wants to give it a head: this will be the group of the apostles. They will be the witnesses of Jesus among people and he teaches them a way of living and common life that will serve as a pattern for the Church.

He called those he wanted (Mk 3:13). These, in turn, will call others. In the Church everyone can do "apostolic work." But nobody makes himself an apostle, an official witness of Christ: one has to be called to this responsibility.

Regarding these twelve, see commentary on Mk 3:19.

o In this new Discourse, Matthew gathers statements of Jesus related to Mission. In the first part (5-16) Jesus addresses the first missionaries of Galilee. After that come Jesus' words to those who will be in the future his witnesses in a hostile world.

See commentary on Mk 6:7 and Lk 10:1.

This was the first mission. The word "mission" means "sending." The Father is the one who sends messengers to the world to gather those who believe in his love and his promises.

The Father sends messengers of his word, but he also sends his Spirit to move the mind and the heart of their listeners. Through the Spirit, they will recognize the word of God in the poor speeches of these uneducated messengers.

The Father sends his Son to earth, and in turn, the Son sends his apostles. The Father entrusts to Jesus the realization of his plan, and the Church takes upon herself the continuation of the work initiated by Jesus.

Do not visit pagan territory. Jesus follows his Father's plan of salvation as described in the Bible. The Saviour should first gather the strayed sheep of Israel, and then bring salvation to all the pagan nations: Is 49:6; 60:1-10; Za 14:16; Mt 15:24.

Whoever welcomes you (v. 40). To reject the messengers is to ignore the call of the Father and to lose the greatest opportunity of one's life.

not accept you or listen to your words, leave that house and that town and shake the dust off your feet.¹⁵ I assure you, it will go easier for the people of Sodom and Gomorrah on the day of judgement than it will for the people of that town.

You will be persecuted

(Lk 12:11; Mk 13:9; 8:38)

+ ¹⁶ Look, I send you out like sheep among wolves. You must be clever as snakes and innocent as doves.¹⁷ Be on your guard with respect to men, for they will hand you over to their courts and they will flog you in their synagogues.¹⁸ You will be brought to trial before rulers and kings because of me to witness to them and the pagans.

o ¹⁹ But when you are arrested, do not worry about what you are to say; when the hour comes, you will be given what you are to say.²⁰ For it is not you who will be speaking; but it will be the Spirit of your Father in you.

+ In this page Jesus speaks to his disciples of all times who will be facing persecutions. "Martyr" means "witness" and we apply this word to the witnesses of Jesus who gave their lives and suffered for the faith. However, not every murdered Christian is a martyr.

Only Christians persecuted because of Christ and whose lives are consistent with the Gospel can be considered martyrs. If they showed in their death the same sentiments of Jesus in his Passion, they are really witnesses.

In some places we find ambiguous and unclear situations. On the one hand, civil authorities recognize Christianity and celebrate religious ceremonies but, on the other hand, excellent Christians and priests are imprisoned, tortured and killed. In such cases those same persons exclaim: "These are not martyrs, but they were repressed as dissenters." The same confusion existed for the martyrs of past centuries. When the Catholics of England, France and China refused to form national churches separated from the Catholic communion of Rome, were they not unfaithful to the laws of their country? But they were witnesses to Christ's will with regard to the Church. They had to obey God and not men.

We have the same ambiguity today. There are believers who do not stand up against all the inhuman policies and structures accepted by society. They would give their life for Jesus Christ, but they do not find reason enough to oppose common misbehaviour or forced submission.

Others realize the contradictions which exist between the Gospel and a situation of social corruption and inhumanity. Because of that they try to be witnesses of the Good News, and work for justice, truth and liberation in line with the Gospel. Consequently, they face the calumnies and repression by which society defends itself.

From among them, some are actively involved in uplifting the outcasts, as Jesus did; others refuse to bow before the rich and the tyrants, as Jesus did. These activities will be interpreted as political by those who have only political criteria; but they will be seen as a demonstration of faith by those who live the faith. In fact, it does not matter whether people always recognize who are the authentic martyrs of Christ and who are not: He himself will recognize them before his Father, when he comes in Glory.

o Do not worry. The witnesses of Jesus do not work on their own, and the more they are identified with Jesus in persecution and in prison, the more they are assisted by the Spirit. By worrying while preparing their legal case, they would hinder the freedom of the Spirit and also lose the peace that the Spirit grants the persecuted.

◆ You will not have gone through... (v. 23). This sentence would have been better placed in the first part of the speech, which is about the mission in Galilee. But Matthew wanted to refer it to future missionaries, giving it a different been called Beelzebul, how much more the members of the family! So, do not be afraid of them.

²⁶ There is nothing covered that will not be uncovered, and nothing hidden that will not be made known.

²⁷ What I am telling you in the dark, you must speak in the light. What you hear in private, proclaim from the housetops.

■ ²⁸ Do not be afraid of those who kill the body, but not the person. Rather be afraid of him who can destroy both body and soul in hell. ²⁹ For only a few cents you can buy two sparrows, yet not one sparrow falls to the ground without your Father's consent. ³⁰ As for you, every hair of your head has been counted. ³¹ So do not be afraid: you are worth much more than many sparrows.

+ ³² Whoever acknowledges me before men I will acknowledge before my Father in Heaven. ³³ Whoever rejects me before men I will reject before my Father in Heaven.

o ³⁴ Do not think that I have come to ³⁵ For I have come to set a man against his father and daughter against her mother; a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. ³⁶ Your enemies will be the members of your family.

³⁷ Whoever loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me. And whoever loves son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me. ³⁸ And whoever does not take up his cross and come after me, is not worthy of me. ³⁹ He who cares only for his own life will lose it; he who loses his life for my sake will find it.

⁴⁰ He who welcomes you welcomes me, and he who welcomes me welcomes him who sent me. ⁴¹ The one who welcomes a prophet as a prophet will receive the reward of a prophet; the one who welcomes a just man because he is just will receive the reward of a just man. ⁴² And if anyone gives so much as a cup of cold water to one of these little ones, because he is a disciple of mine, I assure you, he will not go unrewarded."

meaning: though people may cast them out, they will never be short of work until the second coming of Jesus.

■ We are cowards and Jesus is aware of this. He already said, "Do not fear," when he invited us not to look for security in money. Now, dealing with the fear of repression, he adds, "If you cannot free yourselves from your cowardice, think of where the greater threat from, God or from men?"

This is the only time Jesus refers to "fear of God." When the Old Testament mentioned fear of God, it generally meant giving due respect to God. But respect is far from fear. Respect is an attitude proper to a free person. When some tyrant, however, requires our obedience, there is no place for respect but only for fear. God does not threaten, to throw us into hell; rather he reminds us that to lose him is to lose ourselves also, and this is hell.

+ If anyone acknowledges me. After stressing the sovereign power of his Father, Jesus puts himself on the same level: He will decide our eternal fate. Jesus not only refers to recognizing him in the ultimate sense, that is, by not denying our Christian faith before others; his words also convey a day by day demand. We must not be ashamed to act or talk as people of faith, to go public about our Christian convictions when necessary.

o Do not think that I have come to establish peace. The peace of the believer comes from the certainty that he is loved by God: the angels of Bethlehem said so: Lk 2:14.

But Jesus gives no peace to the world, because the rest of the world is made out of confusions, half-truths, people in balance between greed and fear of risking. The peace of the world, whether in a family or in society, veils unjust settlement imposed by the strongest, or a shared mediocrity. The Gospel awakens everywhere a critical spirit; so that the presence of only one Christian living by the truth is enough to worry many persons: Jn 3:20; 15:18.

The Gospel moves us to make decisions with Jesus and John the Baptist

(Lk 7:18; 16:16; 10:12)

11 ¹When Jesus had finished giving his twelve disciples these instructions, he went on from there to teach and to proclaim his message in their towns. ²When John the Baptist heard in prison about the activities of Christ, he sent a message by his disciples ³to ask him: "Are you the one who is to come or should we expect someone else?"

⁴Jesus answered them, "Go back and report to John what you hear and see: ⁵the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are made clean, the deaf hear, the dead are brought back to life and good news is reaching the poor. ⁶And fortunate is the one who does not take offense at me."

⁷As the messengers left, Jesus began to speak to the crowds about John, "When you went out to the desert, what did you expect to see? A reed swept by the wind? ⁸What did you go out to see? A man dressed up in fine clothes? People who wear fine clothes live in palaces. ⁹What did you actually go out to see? A prophet? Yes, indeed, and even more than a prophet. ¹⁰He is the man of whom the scripture says: I send my messenger ahead of you to prepare your way before you.

¹¹I tell you this; never has a greater prophet than John the Baptist appeared, and yet the least in the kingdom of Heaven is greater than he. ¹²From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of Heaven has been forcefully advancing and forceful people have become part of it.

¹³The time of the Prophets and the Law extends up to John. It was the time of prophecy ¹⁴and if you accept their message, John is this Elijah, whose coming was predicted. ¹⁵If greater freedom, disregarding the criticism of those close to us whenever we are convinced that they cannot understand the Gospel values which motivate us. Take for example, a girl in the family way resisting her parents' advice to obtain an abortion. Christians have been persecuted in many countries for teaching that divine law is above parental authority, which was considered as the supreme authority. Thus it happened with the ancient Romans, more recently, in Korea and China.

Moreover, the devil stirs up persecutions against every person who became converted, in order to scare him and make him turn away.

He is not worthy ... (v. 37). Jesus addresses this to others besides missionaries or persons with an exceptional mission. Each one must break away from forms of dependency within the family which do not nurture the human and spiritual growth of the members. One who loves Christ finds a thousand and one opportunities for freeing himself from activities wasting time, worrying about his own family, which were keeping both him and them at a mediocre level.

♦ See commentary on Lk 7:18.

Good news is reaching the poor ... (v. 5). Jesus's message includes a preferential love of God to the poor and to those who share with them in their poverty. The Gospel is not also for them, but for them first.

EVANGELIZATION OF THE POOR AS A PRIORITY

Good news is reaching the poor. This text is to be read together with Lk 1:52; 4:18; 6:20; 10:23.

Some people misunderstand this text when they think that Jesus calls them only to catechize the poor. In the time of Jesus the Pharisees already thought their duty was to teach simple and uneducated people; Jesus instead sent his apostles, poor among the poor, to proclaim to them and enable them to discover the presence and working of God the Father. This is the context in which fundamental experiences occur that will renew the world and the religious life of everyone.

v. 6 – See another way of translating this sentence in Lk 7:23.

v. 11 – Matthew says literally: never has arisen someone greater than John. This verb refers to a prophet.

v. 12 – The Kingdom of God is the moving force that makes history progress, taking advantage of both gentle and violent changes in human condition. The believers are called to participate actively in this constant transformation. Death and Resurrection are at work among us and all over the world.

anyone has ears to hear, let him listen.

¹⁶ Now, to what can I compare the people of this day? They are like children sitting in the market place and some others complain to them: ¹⁷ 'We played the flute for you but you would not dance. We sang a funeral-song but you would not cry!'

¹⁸ The same way John came fasting and people said: 'He is possessed.' ¹⁹ Then the Son of Man came, he ate and drank, and people said: 'Look at this man! A glutton and drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners!' Yet the wisdom of God has been vindicated by the results."

■ ²⁰ Then Jesus started to denounce the cities in which he had performed most of his miracles, because the people there did not change their ways, ²¹ "Alas for you Chorazin and Bethsaida! If the miracles worked in you had taken place in Tyre and Sidon, the people there would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. ²² But I assure you, for Tyre and Sidon it will be more bearable on the day of judgement than for you. ²³ And you, Capernaum, will you be lifted up to heaven? You will be thrown down to hell! For if the miracles which were performed in you had taken place in Sodom, Sodom would still be in existence today! ²⁴ But I tell you, it will be more bearable for Sodom on the day of judgement than for you."

Take my yoke upon you

(Lk 10:21)

◆ ²⁵ On that occasion Jesus said: "Father, Lord of Heaven and earth, I praise you, because you have hidden these things from the wise and learned and revealed them to simple people. ²⁶ Yes, Father, this is what pleased you.

²⁷ Everything has been entrusted to me by my Father. No one knows the Son except the Father, and no one knows the Father except the Son and those to whom the Son chooses to reveal him.

²⁸ Come to me, all of you who work hard and who carry heavy burdens and I will refresh you. ²⁹ Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble of heart; and you will find rest. ³⁰ For my yoke is good and my burden is light."

■ Chorazin and Bethsaida: these two cities were the seats of higher schools of religion but had not received the Gospel. Tyre and Sidon: two pagan cities, cursed by the prophets.

◆ Jesus' intimacy with the Father is highlighted in the many occasions when Jesus gave himself to prayer. Jesus' prayer impressed the disciples. In this text it's a short prayer, prompted by the most recent events; events and daily life are also a source of prayer. This prayer teaches us an important lesson: the conditions for Christian discipleship are humility of heart and openness to God. Proud, over-rational and self-sufficient people are not well disposed to be enlightened by Jesus' revelation.

He is the Son, who knows the Father as the Father knows him. Being God himself, he can demand everything of us, because he does not come to us from outside: his influence reaches the depths of our heart. See Lk 10:21.

Come to me: I will not relieve you of your load, but by placing my yoke on you, I give you the means of carrying the load.

Jesus plays with the two words yoke and load, for the Jews used to call 'load' the divine teachings imparted to pupils, and yoke the balancing of the teacher's sentences, which should be learned by heart.

Jesus, the patient and humble teacher, enables us to see the mercy of God in our lives and in our own cross. He shows us the love of God they began to pick some heads of wheat and eat the grain.² When the Pharisees noticed this, they said to Jesus, "Look at your disciples; they are doing what is prohibited on the Sabbath!"

³Jesus answered, "Have you not read what David did when he and his men were hungry?⁴ He went into the house of God, and ate the bread offered to God, although neither he nor his men had the right to eat it, but only the priests.⁵ And have you not read in the Law that on the Sabbath the priests in the Temple break the Sabbath rest, yet they are not guilty?"

⁶I tell you, there is something greater than the Temple here.⁷ If you really knew the meaning of the words: It is mercy I want, not sacrifice, you would not have condemned the innocent.

⁸Besides the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath."

⁹Jesus then left that place and went into their synagogue.¹⁰ A man was there with a paralyzed hand, and they asked Jesus, "Is it permitted to heal on the Sabbath?" These people wanted to bring a charge against him.

¹¹But he said to them, "What if one of you has a sheep and it falls into a pit on the Sabbath? Will you not take hold of your sheep and pull it out?"

¹²But a human person is much more valuable than a sheep! It is therefore permitted to do good on the Sabbath."

¹³Then Jesus said to the man, "Stretch out your arm." He stretched it out and it was as sound as the other one.

plans to kill him.¹⁵ Jesus was aware of the plot, so he went away from that place. Many people followed him. He cured all who were sick¹⁶ and gave them strict orders not to give publicity to him.

¹⁷In this way was fulfilled Isaiah's prophecy:

¹⁸*Here is my servant whom I have chosen, the one I love, and with whom I am pleased. I will put my Spirit upon him and he will announce my judgment to the nations.*

¹⁹*He will not argue or shout, nor will his voice be heard in the streets.*
²⁰*The bruised reed he will not crush; nor snuff out the smouldering wick. He will persist until justice is made victorious.*
²¹*And in him all the nations will put their hope."*

The unforgivable sin

(Mk 3:22; Lk 11:15)

■ ²²Then some people brought to him a possessed man who was blind and who could not talk. Jesus healed the man, so that he was able to talk and see.²³ All in the crowd were amazed and wondered, "Could he be the Son of David?"²⁴ When the Pharisees heard this, they said, "It is by Beelzebul, prince of the devils, that this man drives out devils."

²⁵Jesus knew what they were thinking, so he said to them, "Every kingdom that is divided against itself will fall apart, and every town or household that is divided against itself cannot last.²⁶ So if one Satan drives out the other Satan, he is divided against himself. How then can ²⁸ But if it is by the Spirit of God that I drive out devils, then the kingdom of God has already come upon you. ²⁹ How can anyone break into a strong man's house and make off with his belongings unless he first ties up the strong man? Only then can he plunder his house.

³⁰ He who is not with me is against me, and he who does not gather with me scatters.

³¹ And so I tell you this: people can be forgiven any sin and any evil thing they say, but whoever says evil things against the Spirit will not be forgiven.

³² He who says something against the Son of Man, will be forgiven; but he who says something against the Holy Spirit will not be forgiven, either in this age or in the age to come.

Jesus criticizes his own generation

(Mk 8:11; Lk 11:16)

o ³⁸ Then some teachers of the Law and some Pharisees spoke up, "Teacher, we want to see a sign from you." ³⁹ Jesus answered them, "An evil and unfaithful people want a sign, but the only sign that will be given is that of the prophet Jonah. ⁴⁰ In the same way that Jonah spent three days and nights in the belly of the big fish, so will the Son of Man spend three days and three nights in the depth of the earth.

⁴¹ At the judgment, the people of Niniveh will rise with this generation and condemn it, because they reformed their lives at the preaching of means attributing to the devil the good actions of the Spirit, as we see in Mk 3:30. Who could save him whose conscience is perverted?

In this age or in the age to come (v. 32). This is a Jewish idiom, meaning that this sin cannot be forgiven, before God or people. How can God forgive one who puts himself out of reach of the forgiving God.

Make a tree sound (v. 33). There is another application of the sentence read in 7:16. It deals here with the accusation against the Pharisees: they slander whatever is good because they have an evil heart. You will be judged by your words (37). God will judge each one according to his conscience. One who always criticizes and accuses will be accused. He who forgives will be forgiven. God will not judge us from outside, as people do; from inside will come the light that will show our sins. We are, by this, far, far away from God the Judge, as perceived by many.

o Jesus did not perform any miracle that day because the experts in religion were demanding an account of him, instead of listening to him. Jesus had already performed many miracles and they had not believed.

An evil and unfaithful people. This expression in the Bible means the unfaithful believe who, without denying God in words, retain other gods in himself.

The line about the evil spirit, that is the devil points to the contemporaries of Jesus. The came to him and welcomed his message for while. In time they will return to their former blindness.

Jonah, and here there is greater than Jonah. ⁴²At the judgment, the Queen of the South will stand up and condemn you. She came from the other side of the world to listen to the wisdom of Solomon, and here there is greater than Solomon.

⁴³When an evil spirit goes out of a person, it wanders over arid wastelands looking for a place to rest. If it cannot find one, ⁴⁴it says to itself: 'I will go back to my house which I had to leave.' So it goes back and finds the house empty, clean, and in order. ⁴⁵Off it goes again to bring back with it this time seven spirits, more evil than itself. They move in and settle there, so that this person is finally in a worse state than he was at the beginning. This is what will happen to this evil generation."

◆ ⁴⁶While Jesus was still talking to the people, his mother and his brothers came to speak to him and they waited outside. ⁴⁷So someone said to him, "Your mother and your brothers are here outside; they want to speak with you."

mother? Who are my brothers?"

⁴⁹Then he pointed to his disciples and said, "Look! Here are my mother and my brothers. ⁵⁰Whoever does the will of my Father in Heaven is my brother, my sister, and my mother."

The parable of the sower

(Mk 4:1; Lk 8:4; 10:23; 13:26)

+13 ¹That same day Jesus left the house and sat down by the lakeside. ²As many people gathered in front and around him, he got in a boat. There he sat while the whole crowd stood on the shore, ³and he spoke to them in parables about many things.

⁴Jesus said, "The sower went out to sow and, as he sowed, some seed fell along the path and the birds came and ate it up. ⁵Other seeds fell on rocky ground where there was little soil, and the seeds sprouted quickly because the soil was not deep. ⁶Then the sun came up and the plants were scorched and withered because they had no roots. ⁷Again other seeds fell among thistles; and the thistles grew up and choked the plants. ⁸Still other

◆ His mother and his brothers. If they were true brothers of Jesus, sons of Mary, the Gospel would say: "his mother and the sons of his mother," for this was the Jewish manner of speaking. See com. on Mk 3:31.

+ Here begins the third Discourse in Matthew's Gospel, which includes seven parables of Jesus about the kingdom of God. Each parable presents a different aspect of the Kingdom and, by putting them together, we can come to some understanding of this multifaceted reality which is growing secretly among us all throughout history.

Jesus now spoke by means of comparisons, as farmers and labourers are accustomed to do. This mode of teaching is very appropriate for presenting moral teachings and the religious teachers of that time made great use of comparisons, or parables.

However, when Jesus proclaimed that the kingdom of God had come, the multitudes who gathered around him wanted to hear a clear message. For them the term kingdom of God sounded like "liberation" does in our time, as being politically tainted. And everyone wondered why Jesus was making use of parables instead of speaking plainly.

Among the listeners were spies who would relate to Herod or the Romans any seditious word. Was Jesus afraid of them? He was more concerned because these people looked only for political solutions; they did not see anything but their own dreams and were unable to receive the gift of God: When they hear, they do not listen; they do not want to change nor that I should heal them.

Christ is sowing and the seeds are words of truth and eternal life which need to grow and mature in human hearts. The seed grows even today and with it the Kingdom of God spreads on earth. It does not require spectacular success (in many listeners it does not sprout or grow at all) – but where it grows, what a marvelous harvest! See commentaries on Mk 4:1; 4:14.

seeds fell on good soil and produced a crop; some yielded a hundredfold, others sixty and others thirty. ⁹If you have ears, then hear!"

■ ¹⁰Then his disciples came to him with the question, "Why do you speak to them in parables?"

¹¹Jesus answered them, "To you it is given to know the secrets of the kingdom of Heaven, but not to these people. ¹²For the one who has will be given more and he will have an abundance. But the one who does not have will be deprived of even what he has. ¹³That is why I speak to them in parables, because they look and yet do not see; they hear, but they do not listen or understand.

¹⁴In them the words of the prophet Isaiah come true: Much as you hear, you do not understand; much as you see, you do not perceive.

¹⁵*For the heart of this people has grown dull. Their ears hardly hear and their eyes do not dare to see. If* they could see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their heart, they would turn back and I would heal them.

¹⁶But blessed are your eyes because they see, and your ears, because they hear.

¹⁷For I tell you that many prophets and upright people would have liked to see the things you see, but they did not, and to hear the things you hear, but they did not hear it.

◆ ¹⁸Now listen to the parable of the sower.

¹⁹When a person hears the message of the Kingdom but fails to commit himself to it, the devil comes and snatches away what has been sown in his heart. This is the seed that fell along the footpath.

²⁰The seed that fell on rocky ground, stands for the one who hears the word and accepts it at once with joy. ²¹But it has no roots in him, and lasts only for a short while. When he

■ It has been given to you to know the secrets of the Kingdom. To you who took Christ's call seriously and decided to follow him. And because you came to be the fellow workers of Christ, the Father will reveal to you his secrets.

The Kingdom of Heaven. We already said that "Heaven" was a Jewish expression referring to God. The kingdom of Heaven is the kingdom of God, as the Father of Heaven is God the Father. Not realizing this, many have been mistakenly thought that the Gospel announced only the kingdom of God in Heaven after our present life. Actually Jesus came to tell us that God had come to rule freely and clearly among us.

Kingdom or Reign of God? See commentary on Lk 8:10.

◆ If the seed brings forth fruit in some and not in others, it is not because some are intelligent and others are not, some disposed toward devotion and others not. The seed grows where there is Hope, and not in people unable to hope.

A person of hope is one who can strive all his life for a great ideal; who is capable of risking and works tirelessly to attain that which cannot yet be seen (Heb 11:1). The person of hope is at the same time a person of faith, capable of loving in the way God does.

Those along the footpath are those not interested in the word they have received, perhaps because they cannot see further than their own interests (they are selfish), or perhaps they have taken another direction in life.

Next come those who do not dare to face contradiction and are easily discouraged and cowed: these are soon burnt. Yet to hope means to be firm despite any obstacle. If God puts us on a road in life, this road will lead somewhere, no matter how great the difficulties along the way. Hope is courage and endurance.

Next are those sown among thistles. They are believers, but the fruits to be harvested along the difficult path seem not to satisfy them. They want to "save their lives," to serve God and Money at the same time. How many good children and young people educated in Catholic colleges or formed in parishes will remain within the Church all through their lives, but be fruitless for the Kingdom of God? They are dragged down by their aim of winning material success, and hope in the Kingdom of God becomes but a flimsy desire for them.

◦ With the parable of the weeds, Jesus answers those who are scandalized at seeing evil everywhere. Good and bad will be mixed till the is harassed or persecuted because of the word, he backs out in no time.

²² The seed that fell among the thistles is the one who hears the word, but then the concern for this world and the empty promises of wealth choke the word, and it does not bear fruit.

²³ But the seed that fell on good soil is the one who hears the word and understands it; he bears fruit and yields a hundred, or sixty, or thirtyfold.

The parable of the weeds

o ²⁴ Jesus told them another parable. "The kingdom of Heaven can be compared to a man who sowed good seed in his field. ²⁵ While everyone was asleep, his enemy came and sowed weeds among the wheat and left.

²⁶ When the plants sprouted and began to yield grain, the weeds also appeared. ²⁷ Then the servants of the owner came to him and said: 'Sir, it was good seed that you sowed in your field; where did the weeds come from?'

²⁸ He answered them: 'This is the work of an enemy.' They asked him: 'Do you want us to go and pull up the weeds?' ²⁹ He told them: 'No, when you pull up the weeds, you might take the wheat along with them. ³⁰ Let them just grow together until harvest; then I will tell the workers: Pull up the weeds first, tie them in bundles and burn them; then collect the wheat into my barn.'

The mustard seed and the yeast

(Mk 4:30; Lk 13:18)

♦ ³¹ Jesus put another parable before them, "The kingdom of Heaven is like a mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field.

³² It is smaller than the rest of the seeds, but once it has fully grown, it is bigger than any garden plant; like a tree, the birds come and rest in its branches."

³³ He told them another parable, "The kingdom of Heaven is like the yeast which a woman took and buried into three measures of flour until the whole mass of dough began to rise."

end of the world. Good and evil will always be found together in persons and institutions.

God respects people. He knows that temptation is often stronger than their good intentions and they need time to find and to choose steadily what is good.

God is patient. The reconciliation of so many contradictory groups, forces and cultural currents active in the world, will be attained only at the end of time. In the meantime we are not to label any of them as "the" good ones and "the" bad ones.

Jesus himself commented on this parable: see v. 36.

♦ With the parable of the mustard seed Jesus shows us that the Kingdom of God must be a sign: it has to be something very noticeable in the world.

Any spiritual aspiration, cultural innovation or revolutionary movement must be expressed concretely through one or several institutions to make it a clearer and more visible entity. Likewise Jesus projects his Church as the bearer (not the exclusive owner) of the Kingdom of God. Church means: "Assembly of those called together." Two of the characteristics of this Church as indicated here:

- First it must be very visible and fruitful for the world, like a tree giving shade to birds.
- Secondly, it must be immersed in human reality.

Believers are not to separate from those who do not believe, for they are the yeast of the world.

Jesus does not want an "invisible Church," that is an emotional fellowship and spiritual communion among all those in the whole world who believe in him. He wants a gigantic tree (in another place Jesus says: a city built on a hill), so that everyone can recognize that the seed was good and full of life. We need organized Christian communities, and ties between these communities, a hierarchy... Nevertheless the believers are not to enclose themselves in their chapels or little communities or to spend all their energies working for "their" Church. They must be

+ ³⁶ Then he sent the crowds away and went into the house. And his disciples came to him with the question, "Explain to us the parable of the weeds in the field." ³⁷ Jesus answered them, "The one who sows the good seed is the Son of Man. ³⁸ The field is the world; the good seed are the people of the Kingdom; the weeds are those who belong to the evil one. ³⁹ The enemy who sows them is the devil; the harvest is the end of time and the workers are the angels.

⁴⁰ Just as the weeds are pulled up and burned in the fire, so will it be at the end of time. ⁴¹ The Son of Man will send his angels, and they will weed out of his kingdom all that is scandalous and all who do evil. ⁴² And these will be thrown in the blazing furnace, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. ⁴³ Then the just will shine like the sun in the kingdom of their Father. If you have ears, then hear.

The treasure, the pearl and the net

◆⁴⁴ The kingdom of Heaven is like a treasure hidden in a field. The man who finds it buries it again; and so happy is he, that he goes and sells everything he has, so that he may buy that field.

useful and fruitful in the world they have to save, together with all people of good will working in every area of human promotion.

Let them be yeast for the dough and not small separate and finer dough. The yeast transforms human history, not by bringing all people into the Church, but by infusing into human activity the spirit which gives life to humankind.

■ He taught them by means of parables. On reading Matthew 13:12, we could think that Jesus speaks in parables in order to hide his teaching. But here we find another explanation that corrects and completes the first. Jesus spoke in parables because that was the best method to convey a teaching relevant for all times.

I will speak in parables. These are the first words of Psalms 78, as adapted by the evangelist. He means that the secrets of the Kingdom of God revealed by Jesus answer the most important questions of humankind.

From the beginning of civilization, man was confronted with problems and challenges he could not solve on his own, and Jesus offers him the key to these contradictions. Science has discovered many elements of human destiny, but it cannot explain the mystery of evil within.

Jesus answers, not with theories, but with figures and enigmas for each one to ponder during his life, and for people to learn from till the end of history. For only as time progresses will we come to understand their whole meaning.

+ The field is the world. This parable does not refer to what happens within each of us, or only in the Church, as described in the net (13:47). Rather it teaches that the Kingdom of God is and grows in the world, in all dimensions of the secular world. Sacred history is not only an ancient history in the land of Jesus, but entire human story, of which the risen Christ is Lord.

Jesus denounces our secret violence which prevents us from understanding the ways of God. The servants do not realize that the same violent spirit which they condemn in others is also animating them. They think only of repressing and excluding those whom they see as bad, so that goodness can win out. God, on the other hand, lets evil develop all its potential before being defeated by the mystery of the cross. Justice will win out at the end. We are taught to conquer evil with good (Rom 12:21).

◆ The parables of the treasure and the pearl invite us not to let opportunities pass by, when the kingdom of God comes to us.

Some had been waiting for years for that word, or person or sign of hope that would give new meaning to their lives. One day they found it. Sometimes it was found through simple things: a forgiving word, a friendly smile, a first commitment offered to them and accepted. Then they understood that this was the way to be at the end of time; the angels will go out to separate the wicked from the just, ⁵⁰ and throw them into the blazing furnace, where they will cry and gnash their teeth."

⁴⁵ Again the kingdom of Heaven is like a trader who is looking for fine pearls. ⁴⁶ Once he has found a pearl of exceptional quality, he goes away, sells everything he has and buys it.

⁵¹ Jesus asked, "Have you understood all these things?" "Yes," they answered. ⁵² So he said to them, "You will see that every teacher of the Law who becomes a disciple of the Kingdom is like a householder who can produce from his store both new and old."

50. Dn 3, 6; Mt 13, 42 gain all they were waiting for, and they entered the Kingdom happily.

But the parable says: he hides it again. Obviously it is God who hides the treasure again after having shown it to us, for it will be really ours when we have worked for it and persevered.

Everything must be sold. We have to divest ourselves of all those habits, pleasures... that occupy our hearts without filling them. And when trials come upon us like a frosty, icy night, we should not forget the treasure we have once seen, until we recover it. Plato, the great pagan philosopher, said, "It is during the night that it is beautiful to believe in the light."

The pearl in some sense is Christ himself. Those who enter the religious life are aimed at meeting him again and possessing him definitely.

EVIL IN THE CHURCH

+ The Church has attracted a great many people, but not all who become Catholic are good, nor do all of them become children of the Kingdom. Part of them belong to the visible family of the chosen ones, without having the spirit of the Kingdom.

By speaking of the net, Jesus reminds us that the first activity of the Church must be mission: "to catch people." Every mission brings in all kinds of people. Some will withdraw soon, but some persevere and become active and committed members, and the Church is renewed.

How we would like a perfect Church, made of upright persons, in which each one would have discovered the gifts of God! Christ, however, did not want a Church like that, nor is that the way for the Church to save the world. This parable tells us not to be surprised at scandals existing in the Church, but it does not tell us to tolerate them passively.

Some will be thrown out. The blazing furnace means the unbearable suffering and desperation of those put out of the Kingdom where love is the Law. The separation will be definitive, as the kingdom will become definitive on that very day.

At the end Jesus talks about the teacher of the Law, that is, about the man devoted to go deeper into the things of God. By meditating constantly on these words, he will gain new insights adapted to different circumstances.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD. A SUMMARY

As we read Jesus' parables about the Kingdom of God in the light of Church tradition, what overall picture do we get? How can we synthesize what the Kingdom of God is all about?

- From our end (not from God's end) the Kingdom is complex. It cannot be simplified, by saying: "the Kingdom of God is justice and fraternity in societies," or it is "to live in the grace of God," and such like. Because the Kingdom seems complex to us, Jesus explained it through so many parables and examples.
- The Kingdom of God is God himself fully at work in the world through the Spirit of Christ, "making everything anew" (Rev 21:5).
- The fountain and the full expression of the Kingdom is Jesus Christ himself. He not only inaugurates the Kingdom by his coming; he also embodies the Kingdom and its riches perfectly.
- As God's Incarnation, the Kingdom of God is also a mystery, and therefore a paradox to us. It is a gift from God ("the sown seed" of the parables), it is also our doing (Mt 13:19-23). It is already present (Mt 4:17; 12:28; Mk 1:15...), but men, history and creation are waiting for its fulfillment in future life (parables of the wheat and the weeds, of the net and the fish; also Mk 14:25; Rom 8:18-25). The Kingdom is an absolute that relativizes everything (parables of the treasure and the pearl), but is in fact mingled with human condition and history (parable of the leaven...).

Synthesizing, the Kingdom of God entails o⁵³ When Jesus had finished these parables, he left the place.⁵⁴ He went to his hometown and taught the people in their synagogue. They were amazed and said, "Where did he get this wisdom and these special powers?"⁵⁵ Is he not the carpenter's son? Is not Mary his mother and are not James, Joseph, Simon and Judas his brothers?⁵⁶ Are not all his sisters living here? How did he get all this?"⁵⁷ And so they took offense at him.

Jesus said to them, "A prophet is respected everywhere except in his hometown and in his own family."⁵⁸ And he did not perform many miracles there, because of their lack of faith.

John the Baptist beheaded

(Mk 6:4; Lk 9:7)

◆14¹ At that time the news about Jesus reached King Herod.² And he said to his servants, "He is John the Baptist. John has risen from the dead, and that is why miraculous powers are at work in him."

³ Herod had in fact ordered that John be arrested, bound in chains and put in prison because of Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip.⁴ For John had said to him, "It is not right for you to have her as wife."⁵ Herod wanted to kill him, but he did not dare because he feared the people who regarded John as a prophet.

⁶ On Herod's birthday the daughter of Herodias danced in the midst of the guests; she so delighted Herod⁷ that he promised under oath to give her anything she requested.⁸ The girl, following the advice of her mother, said, "Give me the head of John the Baptist here on a plate."

⁹ The king felt sad, but because he had made this promise under oath in the presence of the guests, he ordered it to be given her.¹⁰ So he had John beheaded in the prison¹¹ and his head brought on a plate and given to the girl. The girl then took it to her mother.

¹² Then John's disciples came to take his body and bury it. And they went to bring the news to Jesus.

First miracle of the loaves

(Mk 6:32; Jn 6)

■¹³ On hearing this, Jesus set out secretly by boat for a secluded place. But the people heard of it, and they followed him on foot from their towns.¹⁴ As Jesus went ashore, he saw the crowd gathered there and he had compassion on them. And he healed their sick.

¹⁵ When it was evening, his disciples came to him and said, "We are four dimensions, which are inseparable and dependent on one another:

- The Kingdom is eternal life. The only future is the plenitude of the Kingdom and its values.
- The Kingdom is embodied in the Catholic Church, as the sacrament of Christ in this life, and as the privileged place of the Spirit. We find, of course, values and achievements of the Kingdom outside the visible Church, but the Church remains, nevertheless, the "fatherland" of the Kingdom, its full explicitation in history, its sacrament and generator.
- The Kingdom of God is in our hearts. It comes to each of us by way of conversion, faith, hope, charity and grace. The Kingdom entails our personal sanctification and spirituality.

- The Kingdom of God comes not to individual souls, but to human persons. Change of heart initiates a progressive transformation of the whole person, that includes all relations with the surrounding world. So the riches of the Kingdom come about in social life: more fraternity and solidarity, justice and peace, humanization of cultures, and so on.

in a lonely place and it is now late. You should send these people away so they can go to the villages and buy something for themselves to eat."

¹⁶ But Jesus replied, "They do not need to go away; you give them something to eat." ¹⁷ They answered, "We have nothing here but five loaves and two fishes." ¹⁸ Jesus said to them, "Bring them here to me."

¹⁹ Then he had everyone sit down on the grass. He took the five loaves and the two fishes, raised his eyes to heaven, pronounced the blessing, broke the loaves and handed them to the disciples to distribute to the people. ²⁰ And they all ate, and everyone had enough; then the disciples gathered up the leftovers, filling twelve baskets. ²¹ About five thousand men had eaten there without counting women and children.

Jesus walks on the water

(Mk 6:45; Jn 6:16)

+ ²² Immediately Jesus made his disciples get into the boat and go ahead of him to the other side, while he sent the crowd away.

²³ And having sent the people off, he went up the mountain by himself to pray. At nightfall, he was there alone.

²⁴ Meanwhile, the boat was by now very far from the land, dangerously rocked by the waves for the wind was against it.

²⁵ By daybreak, Jesus came to them walking on the lake. ²⁶ When they saw him walking on the lake, they were terrified, thinking that it was a ghost. And they began to cry. ²⁷ But at once Jesus said to them, "Courage! Do not be afraid, it is I." ²⁸ Peter answered, "Lord, if it is you, command me to come to you walking on the water."

²⁹ Jesus said to him, "Come." And Peter got out of the boat, walking on the water to go to Jesus. ³⁰ But, in face of the strong wind, he was afraid and began to sink. So he cried out, "Lord, save me!" ³¹ Jesus immediately stretched out his hand and took hold of him, saying, "Man of little faith, why did you doubt?"

³² When they got into the boat, the wind ceased. ³³ Then those in the boat bowed before Jesus saying, "Truly, you are the Son of God!"

³⁴ They came ashore at Genesareth. ³⁵ The men of that place recognized Jesus, so they spread the news throughout the region. They brought to him all the sick, ³⁶ begging him to let them touch just the fringe of his cloak. All who touched it became perfectly well.

God's command and human tradition

(Mk 7:1)

15 ¹ Then some Pharisees and teachers of the Law who had come from Jerusalem gathered around Jesus. And they said to him, ² "Why do your disciples not follow the tradition of the elders? In fact,

They were terrified. By their lack of faith, the disciples took Jesus for a ghost, and were scared. To believe in ghosts and such like is a form of superstition. Lack of faith or an ill-formed faith might lead to superstition and fear, but strong faith overcomes fear and the danger of superstition.

Order me to go to you. Matthew is not interested in emphasizing Peter's doubt, but his faith.

Peter alone dared to attempt something that seemed to be reserved for Jesus, and after joining his companions again in the boat he was, though soaked, the happiest of them.

Man of little faith. Once more Jesus' reproaches are addressed to his best disciples (as in 6:30; 8:26; 16:8; 17:20) – in order to convince future disciples, like us, that much is still lacking to our faith.

■ See commentary on Mk 7:1.

they do not wash their hands before eating."

³ Jesus answered, "And you, why do you break God's command for the sake of your traditions? ⁴For God commanded: Do your duty to your father and your mother, and: whoever curses his father or his mother is to be put to death. ⁵ But you say that anyone may say to his father or mother: 'I cannot help you for I have kept all I possess for the Temple.' ⁶ In this case, according to you, this person is free from his duty to his father and mother. And so, you have nullified the command of God for the sake of your traditions.

⁷ Hypocrites! Isaiah rightly prophesied of you when he said: ⁸*This people honours me with their lips, but their heart is far from me*. ⁹*The worship they offer me is worthless, for they only teach man-made rules*."

Washing hands and cleanness of heart (Mk 7:14; Lk 6:39)

+ ¹⁰ Jesus then had the people come near him and said to them, "Listen and understand: 'what enters into the mouth does not make a person unclean, but what comes out of his mouth may defile him.'"

¹² After a while the disciples gathered around Jesus and said, "Do you know that the Pharisees were offended by what you said?" ¹³ Jesus answered, "Every plant which my heavenly Father has not planted shall be uprooted. ¹⁴ Pay no attention to them! They are blind leading the blind. When a blind man leads another, the two will fall into a pit."

¹⁵ Peter said to him, "Explain this sentence to us." ¹⁶ Jesus replied, "Are you still so dull? ¹⁷ Do you not see that whatever enters the mouth goes into the stomach, and then out of the body? ¹⁸ But that which comes out of the mouth comes from the heart, and that is what makes a person unclean."

¹⁹ Indeed, it is from the heart that evil desires come – murder, adultery, immorality, theft, lies, slander. ²⁰ These are the things that make a person unclean; but eating without washing the hands does not make a person unclean.

The faith of the Canaanite woman (Mk 7:24)

²¹ Leaving that place, Jesus withdrew to the region of Tyre and Sidon. ²² Now a Canaanite woman came from those borders and began to cry:

3. Ex 20, 12; 21, 17; Eph 6, 2 8. Is 29, 13; Ps 78, 36 14. 23, 16; Lk 6, 39; Rom 2, 19

+ See commentary on Mk 7:14.

All societies have felt the necessity of separating good from evil, but they have done so according to human criteria. Jesus judges that criteria.

For the Jewish people, the worship of God was everything and they felt very much concerned about exactly who and what things were worthy of being part of this worship. Thus they made a distinction between the clean and the unclean. Jesus shows that true purity does not depend on external conditions. People become unclean not because of what goes into them: food, money, social relationship, religious rites... but by what comes out of them: good intentions that produce good feelings and actions.

We live in a different world. Modern societies worship money and operate according to laws imposed by money. Advertising and experience show that only the rich are treated like persons. The poor, the labourers are looked upon as inferior persons and excluded as unclean from whatever "decent" place.

These classist criteria are adhered to not only by the rich. The poor also accept them unwittingly when they strive to appear well-to-do despite their poverty. They are ashamed to do manual work and feel inferior because they live in conditions that society considers as proper for the poor. Jesus would tell modern Christians that they must rid themselves of such thinking before they can bring others to liberation and salvation.

out, "Lord, Son of David, have pity on me! My daughter is tormented by a demon." ²³ But Jesus did not answer her, not even a word. So his disciples approached him and said, "Send her away: see how she cries out after us."

²⁴ Then Jesus said to her, "I was sent only to the lost sheep of the nation of Israel."

²⁵ But the woman was already kneeling before Jesus and said, "Sir, help me!" ²⁶ Jesus answered, "It is not right to throw the children's bread to the dogs." ²⁷ The woman replied, "It is true, sir, but even the little dogs eat the crumbs which fall from their masters' table." ²⁸ Then Jesus said, "Woman, how great is your faith! So be it as you want." And her daughter was healed at that moment.

Second miracle of the loaves

²⁹ From there Jesus went to the shore of Lake Galilee, and then went up into the hills where he sat down. ³⁰ Great crowds came to him, bringing the dumb, the blind, the lame, the maimed, and persons with many other infirmities. The people carried them to the feet of Jesus, and he healed them. ³¹ All were astonished when they saw the dumb speaking, the lame walking, the maimed healed and the blind able to see; so they glorified the God of Israel.

³² Jesus called his disciples and said to them, "I am filled with compassion for these people; they have already followed me for three days and now have nothing to eat. I do not want to send them away fasting, or they may faint on the way." ³³ His disciples said to him, "And where shall we find enough bread in this wilderness to feed such a crowd?" ³⁴ Jesus said to them, "How many loaves do you have?" They answered, "Seven and a few small fish."

³⁵ So Jesus ordered the people to sit on the ground. ³⁶ Then he took the seven loaves and the small fish and gave thanks to God. He broke them and gave them to his disciples, who distributed them to the people.

³⁷ They all ate and were satisfied, and the leftover broken pieces filled seven wicker baskets. ³⁸ Four thousand men had eaten, not counting the women and children. ³⁹ Then Jesus sent away the crowd, got into the boat and went to Magdala.

The Pharisees ask for a sign

(Mk 8:11; Lk 11:16; 12:54)

16 ¹ The Pharisees and Sadducees appeared. They wanted to put Jesus to the test and asked him for some heavenly sign.

² Jesus answered, "(When evening comes, you say: 'It will be a good day for the sky is red.' ³ And in the morning you say: 'Stormy weather today, for the sky to the east is red.' Hypocrites! If you know how to interpret the appearance of the sky, why can you not interpret the signs of the times?) ⁴ What an evil and adulterous generation! They ask for a sign, but no sign will be given to them except the sign of Jonah."

So Jesus left them and went away.

o They asked for some heavenly sign. They want a miracle that would be undoubtedly the work of God.

No sign will be given to them. Jesus refuses to prove his authority by multiplying miracles. People who love truth and seek what is right will recognize the seal of God in the deeds of Jesus – and of his followers, no matter how many speak ill of them.

The sign of Jonah is the resurrection of Jesus (see 12:40). Yet this resurrection which is the most decisive sign, will be understandable only

■ ⁵ When the disciples went to the other side, they saw they had forgotten to take bread. ⁶ It was then that Jesus said to them, "Beware and do not trust the yeast of the Pharisees and Sadducees." ⁷ And the disciples said to one another, "He means the bread we did not bring."

⁸ Jesus was aware of this, so he said to them, "You of little faith! Why do you speak about the bread you haven't got?" ⁹ Do you still not understand? Do you not remember the five loaves for the five thousand and how many baskets you gathered? ¹⁰ Or the seven loaves for the four thousand and how many wicker baskets were filled with what was left?

¹¹ How can you fail to understand that I was not talking of bread when I told you: Beware of the yeast of the Pharisees and Sadducees?" ¹² Then they understood that he was not talking of yeast for bread, but of the teaching of the Pharisees and Sadducees.

Peter's faith; Jesus' promises (Mk 8:27; Lk 9:18; Jn 6:69)

◆ ¹³ After that Jesus came to Caesarea Philippi. He asked his disciples, "What do people say of the Son of Man? Who do they say I am?" ¹⁴ They said, "For some of them you are John the Baptist, for others Elijah or Jeremiah or one of the prophets."

¹⁵ Jesus asked them, "But you, who do you say I am?" ¹⁶ Peter answered, "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God." ¹⁷ Jesus replied, "You are a happy man, Simon Barjona, for it is not flesh or blood that has revealed this to you but my Father in Heaven."

¹⁸ And now I say to you: You are Peter (or Rock) and on this rock I will build my Church; and never will the powers of the netherworld overcome it.

¹⁹ I will give you the keys of the kingdom of Heaven: whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in Heaven, and what you unbind on earth shall be unbound in Heaven."

to the believers. Thus people who demand miracles before they will believe, receive no answer.

■ Beware of the Pharisees' yeast: see on Mk 8:11.

The apostles could not understand that they should worry more about sin than about lack of bread; neither can we.

◆ One parable of the Kingdom of God already foretold the Church (Mt 13:31-33). This present text openly refers to the Church.

- It tells us what its foundation is: faith in Jesus, the Christ and Son of God.
- It focuses on the primacy of Peter among all the apostles.
- It suggests that the Church will always need a visible head. This is the successor of Peter, the Pope.

Faith in Christ, the Son of God, which Peter is among the apostles, the first to proclaim, really comes from God. This faith is not a human opinion, or a sentimental attachment. It does not come from flesh and blood, an expression which for the Jews meant what is purely human, what a human being does and understands from his own capacity. And the words by which Jesus greets Peter, happy are you, Simon, are true for all the believers. For it is the Father who has chosen us and has brought us to Christ: see John 6:37; 6:44.

Then the primacy of Peter is emphasized. We address him as Peter (that means Rock, or Stone), in spite of the fact that his name was Simon. Jesus upon meeting him (Jn 1:40), gave him this surname of Rock, foreseeing that he would be for his Church a foundation rock. Other texts attest to the leadership and faith of Peter: Mt 10:2; 14:28; 17:25; Lk 5:8-10; 22:32; Jn 6:68 & 22:15-19.

But what Jesus tells Peter, is it true also of his successors? No one can deny that even in the Old Testament God wanted his people to have a visible head. Jerusalem and the nation had as their center the Temple and the kings, sons of David. When God chose David, the first king of Israel, he promised him that his sons would rule the Kingdom of God forever: this promise was fulfilled in Christ. Now Jesus chooses Peter to be forever the visible foundation of the building. In the future his successors will be the visible head of the Church in the same way that Peter was in the early Church.

Obviously, for the Church to continue through the centuries it must necessarily have ²⁰ Then he ordered his disciples not to tell anyone that he was the Christ.

Jesus predicts his death

(Mk 8:31; Lk 9:22; 12:9; 14:27)

+ ²¹ From that day Jesus Christ began to make it clear to his disciples that he had to go to Jerusalem; he would suffer many things from the Jewish authorities, the chief priests and the teachers of the Law. He would be killed and be raised on the third day.

²² Then Peter took him aside and began to reproach him, "Never, Lord! No, this can never happen to you."

²³ But Jesus turned to him and said, "Get behind me, Satan! You would have me stumble. Your thoughts are not from God but from man."

²⁴ Then Jesus said to his disciples, "If anyone wants to follow me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me. ²⁵ For he who chooses to save his life will lose it, but the one who loses his life for my sake will find it. ²⁶ What will a man gain by winning the whole world if he destroys himself? There is nothing he can give to recover his own self.

²⁷ Know that the Son of Man will come in the Glory of his Father with the holy angels, and he will reward each one according to his deeds. ²⁸ Truly, I tell you, some of you will not die before they see the Son of Man coming as king."

The transfiguration of Jesus

(Mk 9:2; Lk 9)

17 ¹ Six days later, Jesus took with him Peter and James and his brother John, and led them apart up a high mountain. ² Jesus' appearance was changed before them: his face shone like the sun and his clothes became bright as light. ³ Then Moses and Elijah appeared to them, talking with Jesus.

⁴ Peter spoke and said to Jesus, "Master, it is good that we are here. If you so wish, I will make three tents:

20. 17, 9; Mk 9, 9	21. 17, 12; 20, 17; Lk 2, 38; 13, 33	24. 10, 38; Lk 14, 27
25. Lk 17, 33; Jn 12, 25	26. 4, 8	27. 25, 31; 2 Thes 1, 7; Ps 62, 13; Ps 28, 4; Rev 22, 12

some persons in authority to determine who belongs and who do not belong to the body of the believers; how to understand the faith and the demands of the Gospel. For the Jews, to bind and to unbind meant to state what is forbidden and what is allowed. This is the duty of Peter and his successors. In spite of the fact that as men they can commit mistakes, Christ does not like to ignore what they ultimately decide on: what you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven.

But, in acknowledging this special mission, we do not say that the Pope's preaching should silence other voices in the Church, or that his authority requires a strongly centralized Church. Peter is the doorkeeper (Mk 13:34) but not the Master or the Father (Mt 23:9).

The powers of the netherworld. These are forces at the service of the devil which keep the world under the power of sin and death. They cannot overcome one who seeks shelter in the Church. And no matter how they try to crush the Church, they will not prevent her from fulfilling her salvific mission. This confrontation is described in Rev 12:17.

The fact that Peter is the foundation of the Church does not contradict other verses which say that its basis are the Twelve Apostles (Eph 2:20 and Rev 21:4). They also receive the power to bind or loose in Jn 20:21, but in this case it refers to the forgiveness of sins which is needed to maintain communion among the believers.

There are more words of Christ directed to Peter: Lk 22:31; Jn 21:15.

Upon reading the narratives in Mk 8:27 & Lk 9:18, some questions regarding Peter's faith arise: see commentary on Lk 9:18.

Jesus, Rock and Foundation: Mk 10:12; 1 Cor 3:11; 1 Pet 2:6.

+ See commentary on Mk 8:31.

Who could accept that Jesus would ultimately be defeated? Yet to defeat the power of the devil there is no other way but through self-sacrifice.

Get behind me, Satan ... When Peter stands in front of Jesus to block the way to the cross, Jesus recognizes in his words the same spirit that tempted him in the desert. And Jesus calls him Satan, meaning tempter. Let Peter get behind Jesus and follow him as is proper for a disciple.

one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elijah."

⁵Peter was still speaking when a bright cloud covered them in shadow, and a voice from the cloud said, "This is my Son, the Beloved, my Chosen One. Listen to him."

⁶On hearing the voice, the disciples fell to the ground, full of fear.

⁷But Jesus went near, touched them and said, "Stand up, do not be afraid."

⁸When they raised their eyes, they no longer saw anyone except Jesus.

⁹And as they came down the mountain, Jesus commanded them not to tell anyone what they had just seen, until the Son of Man be raised from the dead.

¹⁰The disciples asked him, "Why do the teachers of the Law say that Elijah must come first?" ¹¹And Jesus answered, "Elijah must come first to set everything as it has to be. ¹²But I tell you, Elijah has come, and they did not recognize him but treated him as they pleased. And they will also make the Son of Man suffer."

¹³Then the disciples understood that Jesus was referring to John the Baptist.

Jesus heals an epileptic boy

(Mk 9:14; Lk 9:37)

◆ ¹⁴When they met up with the people, a man approached Jesus,

◆ See commentary on Mk 9:14.

○ Several times Jesus announced his death: see 16:21; 20:17. Never did he present it as a misfortune that could counteract his mission. Neither can we see it as passive resignation, for he accepted it from the beginning, in fact, he even looked for it as the means for giving glory to his Father and reconciling humankind. Jesus speaks of himself in the third person: the Son of Man, because he looks at his destiny as an outsider. This is the will of his Father, and he is not concerned about himself.

■ All the Jews paid a tax for the main-knelt before him and said, ¹⁵"Sir, have pity on my son who is an epileptic and is in a wretched state. He has often fallen into the fire and at other times into the water. ¹⁶I brought him to you, disciples but they could not heal him."

¹⁷Jesus replied, "You, faithless and evil people! How long must I be with you? How long must I put up with you? Bring him here to me."

¹⁹The disciples then gathered around Jesus and asked him privately, "Why couldn't we drive out the spirit?" ²⁰Jesus said to them, "Because you have little faith. I say to you: if only you had faith the size of a mustard seed, you would tell that mountain to move from here to there, and the mountain would obey. Nothing would be impossible to you. ²¹Yes, only prayer and fasting can drive out this kind of spirit."

○ ²²While Jesus was in Galilee, with the Twelve, he said to them, "The Son of Man will be delivered into the hands of men, ²³and they will kill him. But he will rise on the third day." So they were deeply grieved.

The Temple tax

■ ²⁴On returning to Capernaum, the Temple tax collectors came to tainance of the Temple.

The collectors approach Peter as owner of the house where Jesus also lives. But they are not sure what answer Jesus will give and are somehow ashamed to confront him about taxes. Besides, if these collectors are honest and faithful Jews, they are personally interested in knowing what Jesus thinks of this religious duty.

Jesus observes the Law, but takes this opportunity to give a hint as to who he is: the collectors do not realize they are addressing "the Son." Notice how the Lord has control over all creatures even fish, and see also his intimate solidarity with Peter.

Peter and asked him, "Does your master pay the tax?" ²⁵ He answered, "Certainly."

Peter then entered the house, but immediately Jesus asked him, "What do you think, Simon? Who pay taxes or tributes to the kings of the earth: their sons or the foreigners?" ²⁶ Peter replied, "The foreigners." And Jesus told him, "The sons, then, are tax-exempt. ²⁷ But so as not to offend this people, go to the sea, throw in a hook and open the mouth of the first fish you catch. You will find a coin in it, take it and you have to pay for you and for me."

Who is the greatest? Scandals

18 ¹ At that time the disciples came to Jesus and asked him, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven?"

² Then Jesus called a little child, set him in the midst of the disciples, ³ and said, "I assure you that unless you change and become like little children, you cannot enter the kingdom of Heaven. ⁴ Whoever makes himself like this child is the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven, ⁵ and whoever receives such a child in my name receives me.

⁶ If anyone should cause one of these little ones who believe in me to stumble and fall, it would be better for him to be thrown into the depths of the sea with a great millstone around his neck.

⁷ Woe to the world because of so many scandals! These scandals necessarily come, but woe to the one who causes others to fall!

⁸ If your hand or foot drags you into sin, cut it off and throw it away. It is better for you to enter life without a hand or a foot than to be thrown into eternal fire with your two hands and two feet. ⁹ And if your eye drags you into sin, tear it out and throw it away. It is better for you to enter life with one eye than to be thrown into the fire of hell with your two eyes.

¹⁰ See that you do not despise any of these little ones, for I tell you: their angels in Heaven continually see the face of my heavenly Father.

♦ THE LITTLE ONES

For commentary on the first paragraph of this page, refer to Mk 9:33.

Later, Jesus passes from the children to the little ones, that is, simple people. They are little, because they do not count for much in society, and because their faith is more sincere than that of people of a higher economic level.

Jesus thinks about those who make little ones fall either deliberately or through their bad example, because influence, money or power enable them to exert pressures upon the poor.

Jesus also speaks (v. 7) of the harm caused by social pressures. Many times the little ones strive to raise their standard of living and become more self-reliant, better educated and to earn more. But, often enough, society puts obstacles in the way of anyone who does not want to play dirty and who refuses to imitate the lifestyle of selfish persons. Because of this, the little ones will have to give up, to accept failure, to lose an eye before losing the most important thing, which is to live in the sight of God.

It is better for you to enter life without a foot. Jesus stresses the incomparable value of eternal life. Our destiny is won in this life, and there will be no other place between the Kingdom of God and the final condemnation. At times, to gain the Kingdom we will have to sacrifice even our job, our security and our life.

Woe to the world, because of so many scandals. Sometimes it is an individual who leads others to sin; at other times it is society itself with its corruption, violence and unjust social structures. Jesus invites us to be aware of sin, personal and social.

Woe to the world, because the bad structures will be destroyed, no matter how, by tears and blood (Lk 23:28). Woe to man, because everything will be accounted for (see also Mt 26:24).

These scandals necessarily come. Jesus lived in a world of violence but, apparently, he did not complain about the situation. He did not o ¹² What do you think of this? If a man has a hundred sheep and one of them strays, will he not leave the ninety-nine on the mountains to go and look for the stray one? ¹³ And I tell you: when he finally finds it, he is more pleased about it than about the ninety-nine that did not get lost. ¹⁴ For your heavenly Father will not have one of these little ones lost.

Living together in the church (Lk 17:3)

■ ¹⁵ If your brother has sinned against you, go and speak to him alone, and if he listens to you, you have won your brother. ¹⁶ If he does not listen to you, take with you two or three others so that the case may be decided by the evidence of two or three witnesses. ¹⁷ If he still refuses to listen to them, inform the assembled church about him. But if he does not listen to the church, then regard him as a pagan or a publican.

¹⁸ I say to you: whatever you bind on earth, Heaven will keep bound; and whatever you unbind on earth, Heaven will keep unbound.

¹⁹ In like manner, I say to you: if on earth two of you are united in asking for anything, it will be done for them by my heavenly Father. ²⁰ For where two or three are gathered in my Name, I am there in their midst."

encourage us to dream of a paradise on earth. While some Christian communities aspire to be a flock of sheep meekly surrounding their shepherd, Jesus has a different vision of Christian life.

The real world, the one created by God and which he is saving, was not created to be an oasis of happiness, but a place where free persons grow through their struggles. Scandals are part and parcel of this world, but the power of evil does not diminish in any way the glory that God will receive in the end. Through suffering and hunger for justice God will awaken love and make it grow.

o The parable of the one hundred sheep is also found in the gospel of Luke (Lk 15:1). It teaches us several things: Jesus' special concern for sinners and those who stray, and, therefore the missionary dimension of his apostolate. In fact, Jesus came "to seek and save the lost" (Lk 19:10), "to call the outcasts, not the respectable people" (Mt 9:13). This attitude should impel our parishes and Christian communities to constantly reach out to the unchurched and far away, instead of just working with those who already are in touch with the Church.

THE CHURCH AS SACRAMENT OF GOD

■ If your brother has sinned ... Jesus had told Peter before: Whatever you tie on earth will be tied in Heaven. He declares it now for the whole Church. The believers must attempt to settle their cases among themselves first, before going to legal arbiters (1 Cor 6:1).

Gathered in the name of Jesus. The prayer of the community, of the apostolic group, of the Christian couple. It is necessary to arrive at deep understanding among ourselves before we present our common desire to God.

Generally people seek God in temples, or in the contemplation of nature, or in peace of soul. But God wants us to first seek his presence in the Christian community. He is present when we gather to pray "in the name of Jesus." He is present in the development of the community in its crises, in its problems. He is present in the history of the Church.

While we participate in the common activities, overcoming unavoidable conflicts, and persevering in apostolic work, we grow as children of God in truth, thus knowing the Father in truth. The Church, therefore, is that sacred place where we find God, and to express this reality we say that the Church is "the sacrament of God."

We also speak of several "Sacraments": Baptism, Eucharist ... Some people want to receive the sacraments without having any commitment to the Church; they forget that baptism and religious rites are sacraments and confer the grace of God because they are gestures of the Church, which is "The" sacrament of God. God is not contained inside things, but rather reveals himself through the family of Christ, where he wants us to find him: Whatever you tie on earth... Our faithfulness within the Christian community, even if we have to dissent from it, is a sign that we are in the grace of God.

+ Seventy-seven times. Compare with Gen 4:24. Forgiveness must replace the thirst for revenge.

This is about the forgiveness of one who returns repentant: see Lk 17:1. The text of 18:15 is doubtful. Perhaps it was written if your

+ ²¹ Then Peter asked him, "Lord, how many times must I forgive the offenses of my brother? Seven times?"

²² Jesus answered, "No, not seven times, but seventy-seven times.

The unmerciful servant

o ²³ This story throws light on the kingdom of Heaven. A king decided to settle the accounts of his servants. ²⁴ Among the first ones brought was one who owed him ten thousand pieces of gold. ²⁵ As the man had nothing to repay him, the king commanded that he be sold as a slave with his wife, children and all his goods as payment.

²⁶ The official threw himself at the feet of the king and said, "If you give me time, I will pay back everything to you." ²⁷ The king took pity on him and not only set him free but even cancelled his debt."

²⁸ This official then left the king's presence and he met one of his companions who owed him a hundred pieces of money. He grabbed him by the neck and almost strangled him, shouting, "Pay me what you owe!" ²⁹ His companion threw himself at his feet and asked him, "If you give me time, I will pay back everything to you." ³⁰ The other did not agree, but instead sent him to prison until he had paid back all his debt.

³¹ The others saw what happened. They were indignant and so they went and reported everything to their lord. ³² Then the lord summoned his official and said, "Wicked servant, I forgave you all that you owed when you begged me to do so. ³³ Should you not have had pity on your companion as I had pity on you?" ³⁴ The lord was now angry, so he handed his servant over to the court until he had paid all his debt."

³⁵ Jesus added, "So will my heavenly Father do with you unless each of you sincerely forgives his brothers."

Jesus speaks about divorce

(Mk 10:2; Mt 5:31; Lk 16:19)

19 ¹ When Jesus had finished teaching this, he left Galilee and went to the province of Judea, beyond the Jordan River. ² A great crowd followed him, and there too he healed their sick.

brother has sinned, go talk ... In which case it would refer to the effort of the Christian community to correct one who has gone astray.

o THE PARDON

The offenses we suffer from our companions are nothing compared with our offenses towards God. And while God forgives all, we do not even give others some breathing space. God does not demand his rights, but we, in demanding them behave like wicked servants (see Mt 5:43).

This parable goes beyond personal problems. The world needs above everything else the forgiveness of God, and those who want a more just society will not achieve it through accusations and hatred.

The parable helps us understand much better another verse in the Bible: Revenge is mine, says the Lord; I will pay each one according to his own conduct. God will not demand an account regarding his own rights, (what we owe him), but regarding the rights of the little ones who, unable to pay, were deprived. And he will also demand an accounting regarding those who were sorry for their sins, but were not forgiven by others.

The fourth Discourse of Matthew's Gospel ends with this parable on the duty to forgive. The Church has not always been as holy as she should have been. And yet nobody could deny that, at all times, in the Church the mercy of God has been preached and people have learned to forgive.

◆ See commentary on Mk 10:2; Mt 5:31.

For the Christian, total faithfulness is not servitude, because Jesus came to give us the spirit which makes us able to fulfill the law.

Jesus, who did not marry and who never knew woman, manifested throughout his life what the law of married spouses should be: faithfulness, understanding, love, sacrifice for each other (Eph 5:22). Without this spirit, the

⁴ Jesus replied, "Have you not read that in the beginning the Creator made them male and female,⁵ and he said: *Man has now to leave father and mother, and be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one body?*⁶ So they are no longer two but one body; let no one separate what God has joined."

¹⁰ The disciples said, "If that is the condition of a married man, it is better not to marry."¹¹ Jesus said to them, "Not everybody understands what you have just said, but only those who have received this gift.¹² Some are born incapable of marriage. Others have been made that way by men. But there are others who have given up the possibility of marriage for the sake of the kingdom of Heaven. He who can accept this, let him accept it."

Jesus and the children

(Mk 10:13; Lk 18:15)

¹³ Then little children were brought to Jesus that he might lay his hands on them with a prayer. But the disciples scolded those who brought them.¹⁴ Jesus then said, "Let them be! Do not stop them from coming to me, for the kingdom of Heaven belongs to people such as these."¹⁵ So Jesus laid his hands on them and went his way.

The rich young man

(Mk 10:17; Lk 18:18; 1:33; 22:29)

¹⁶ At that moment, a young man approached him and asked, "Master, what good work must I do to receive eternal life?"¹⁷ Jesus answered, "Why do you ask me about what is good?" Only one is Good. If you want to enter eternal life, keep the commandments."¹⁸ The young man said, "Which commandments?" Jesus replied, "Do not kill, do not commit adultery, do not steal, do not bear false witness, honour your father and mother, and love your neighbour as yourself."

²⁰ The young man said to him, "I have kept all these commandments. what else should I do?"²¹ Jesus answered, "If you wish to be perfect, go and sell all that you possess and give Better not to marry. Jesus does not apologize for these demanding words. He only proposes something more difficult to understand. He praises those who choose celibacy as a way of life for love of the Kingdom. He recognizes, however, that this is a special vocation and grace.

• See commentary on Mk 10:17.

Only one is Good. The man comes to Jesus and Jesus sends him back to the Father, as he always does. This is a very dangerous distortion – because it is very subtle – of Christian faith: to speak only of Jesus: "Jesus is looking at you.... Jesus loves you.... Jesus is love...." as if we should not live for God. Loving the Father means doing his will and working for his Kingdom, perhaps by taking the path of true poverty. We are not here to seek sentimental consolation by looking at a picture of a green-eyed Jesus very similar to Ramakrishna who saves those who look at him. Let us not wait for Jesus: "to understand us," but let us, instead, try to understand others and give our lives to fulfill the loving plan of the Father, as his Only Son did.

the money to the poor to become the owner of a treasure in Heaven. Then come back and follow me."

²² On hearing this answer, the young man went away sorrowful for he was a man of great wealth.

²³ Then Jesus said to his disciples, "Truly I say to you: it will be hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of Heaven. ²⁴ Yes, believe me: it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of Heaven."

²⁵ On hearing this the disciples were astonished and said, "Who, then, can be saved?" ²⁶ Jesus looked steadily at them and answered, "For man it is impossible, but for God all things are possible."

²⁷ Then Peter spoke up and said, "You see we have given up everything to follow you: what will be our lot?"

²⁸ Jesus answered, "You who have followed me, listen to my words: on the Day of Renewal, when the Son of Man sits on his throne in glory, you too, will sit on twelve thrones to rule the twelve tribes of Israel. ²⁹ And everyone who has left houses, brothers, sisters, father, mother, children or property for my Name's sake will receive a hundredfold and be given eternal life. ³⁰ Many who are now first will be last, and many who are now last will be first."

³ He went out again at about nine in the morning, and as he saw men idle in the square, ⁴ he said to them: 'You too go to my vineyard and I will pay you what is just.' And they went to work.

■ THE MASTERS

Many are surprised at this parable. They find it unfair to give the same retribution to everyone, without taking into account the labour and sacrifices of everyone. But they do not grasp the meaning of the parable. Jesus makes a comparison, not of several labourers, but of several groups of labourers. Each group represents a nation or a social class, and while some of them have long ago received the word of God, others have just become believers.

All throughout history, God has been calling different people to work in his vineyard. He called Abraham first and placed his descendants in charge of his work in the world. But that did not make the race of Abraham the owner of the Kingdom of God. God was the owner of the vineyard and they were his labourers.

Later on, during Moses' time, many people of all kinds, together with the descendants of Abraham became the people of Israel. They were convinced that they were the people of God and thus continuously claimed their right to be treated better by God than other people were. God was bound to make the other nations submissive to them. But the vineyard had not been entrusted to them exclusively.

Then, with the coming of Christ, the Gospel was brought to other nations which were until then pagan. They came into the Church and shaped Christianity. They also claimed to be owners of the Kingdom of God and the Church. Christian colonizers could hardly understand how other people who were newly converted should have the same rights in the Church as they had.

To this day, many families consider themselves catholic by birthright. There are also social groups, generally the wealthy and powerful ones, who are amazed when the Church criticizes their demand for privileges and does not assign them the first benches in the temple. They complain of the Church's treason, for they had always believed that the Church was theirs.

In this parable, Jesus says that people already inside the Church must allow others to come in on equal terms (all receive one silver coin). Let them be happy with the honour of working with Christ. Of course, those who built the chapel are mistaken if they think that they have rights over the community; as the clergy are mistaken when they do not accept the participation of lay persons.

day and at three in the afternoon, looking for more workers. ⁶ Finally he went out at the last working hour and he saw others standing there. So he said to them: 'Why do you stay idle the whole day?' ⁷ They answered: 'Because no one has hired us.' The master said: 'Go and work in my vineyard.'

⁸ When evening came, the owner of the vineyard said to his manager: 'Call the workers and pay them their wage, beginning from the last and ending with the first.' ⁹ Those who had come to work for the last hour turned up and were given a denarius each (a silver coin). ¹⁰ When it was the turn of the first, they thought they would receive more. ¹¹ But they also received a denarius each. So, on receiving it, they began to complain against the landowner.

¹² They said: 'These last hardly worked an hour, yet you dealt with them as you did with us who endured the day's burden and heat.' ¹³ The owner said to one of them: 'Friend, I have not been unjust with you. Did we not agree on a denarius a day?' ¹⁴ So take what is yours and go. I want to give to the last the same as I give to you. ¹⁵ Do I not have the right to do as I please with my money? Why are you envious when I am kind?'

¹⁶ So will it be: the last will be first, the first will be last."

Third prophecy of the passion

(Mk 10:32; Lk 18:31)

¹⁷ When Jesus was going to Jerusalem, he took his twelve apostles aside and said to them on the way, ¹⁸ "See, we are going to Jerusalem. There the Son of Man will be given over to the chief priests and the teachers of the Law who will condemn him to death. ¹⁹ They will hand him over to the foreigners who will make fun of him; scourge him and crucify him. But he will rise on the third day."

The mother of James and John asks for the first seats

(Mk 10:35)

²⁰ Then the mother of James and John came to Jesus with her sons, and she knelt down to ask a favour. ²¹ Jesus said to her, "What do you want?" And she answered, "Here are my two sons. Grant that they may sit one at your right and one at your left when you are in your kingdom."

²² Jesus said to the brothers, "You do not know what you are asking. Can you drink the cup that I have to drink?" They answered, "We can." ²³ Jesus replied, "You will indeed drink my cup, but to sit at my right or at my left is not for me to grant. That will be for those for whom the Father has prepared it."

²⁴ The other ten heard all this and were angry with the two brothers. ²⁵ Then Jesus called them to him and said, "You know that the rulers of the nations lord it over them, and the powerful oppress them. ²⁶ It shall not be so among you; whoever wants to be more important in your group shall make himself your servant. ²⁷ And whoever wants to be first must make himself the slave of all. ²⁸ Be like the Son of Man who has come, not to be served but to serve and to give his life to redeem many."

²⁹ As they left Jericho, a great crowd followed them on the way. ³⁰ Two blind men were sitting by the roadside, and when they heard that Jesus was passing by, they began to call out, "Son of David, have mercy on us!"³¹ The people told them to keep quiet. But they shouted even louder, "Lord, Son of David, have mercy on us!"³² Jesus stopped to call them and asked, "What do you want me to do for you?"³³ They said, "Lord, open our eyes."

³⁴ Jesus was moved with compassion and touched their eyes. Immediately they recovered their sight and they began to follow Jesus.

Jesus enters Jerusalem

(Mk 11:1; Jn 12:12; Lk 19:12)

21 ¹When they drew near Jerusalem and arrived at Bethphage, on the mount of Olives, Jesus sent two of his disciples, ²saying, "Go to the village on the other side, and there you will find a donkey tied up with its colt by its side. Untie them and bring them here. ³If anyone says anything to you, say: The Lord needs them but he will send them back immediately."

⁴This happened in fulfillment of what the prophet said: ⁵*Say to the daughter of Sion: See, your king comes to you in all simplicity, riding on a donkey, a beast of burden, with its colt.*

⁶The disciples went as Jesus had instructed them, ⁷and they brought the donkey with its colt. Then they threw their cloaks on its back, and Jesus sat upon it.

⁸Many people also spread their cloaks on the road, while others cut leafy branches from the trees and spread them on the ground. ⁹The people who walked ahead of Jesus and those who followed him began to shout: "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord! Hosanna, glory in the highest!"

¹⁰When Jesus entered Jerusalem, all the city was disturbed. The people ◆ See commentary on Mk 11. Matthew, Mark and Luke place the incident about those selling in the Temple at the time of Jesus' entrance into Jerusalem. John, on the other hand, situates this event at the beginning of Jesus' mission. It is difficult to determine who is right. Each evangelist groups events according to his own plan, and not always according to the time when it actually happened.

Besides, there are several details in this triumphant entrance of Jesus that remind us more of the Feast of the Tabernacles (which was celebrated in September), than of the days before the Passover:

- The joyous spirit of the people is more appropriate to said feastday, which was the most popular of all.

- The branches and Palms, as in the procession of said feastday, on the way to the fountain of Siloe, while singing Psalms 118: "Blessed be he who comes in the name of the Lord!" and shouts of "Hosannah!" (that is: Save us!).

- Mention of the Mountain of Olives, where tents of branches and leaves were erected for the feast.

See, in this respect Za 14 which refers to this feastday (14:16) and foretells the purification of the Temple.

Very possibly, the evangelists placed the entrance of Jesus into Jerusalem on the eve of the Passover for the simple reason that they only related one trip of Jesus to Jerusalem.

They arrived at Bethphage. The small village of Bethphage was the entrance to the district of Jerusalem towards the east. According to the Law, the Passover should be celebrated in Jerusalem, but the city was not big enough to accommodate more than a hundred and fifty thousands pilgrims for the festival. So it was necessary to enlarge the juridical limits of Jerusalem, embracing therefore some small villages like Bethphage. During those days, Jesus also used to lodge in Bethany (21:17).

You have found praise. These words of Psalm 8 were addressed to God, but Jesus applies them to himself, as he did in some other circumstances.

+ See commentary on Mk 11:15.

Jesus cleanses the Temple, fulfilling the prophecy of Zac 14:21. Malachi 3 also foretold this event: The Lord would come to purify his people and his temple. Jesus comes as a prophet to demand respect for God. Also, as God, he inaugurates the new era of religion in spirit and in truth. That is how John also understood this asked, "Who is this man?" ¹¹ And the crowd answered, "This is the Prophet Jesus from Nazareth of Galilee."

Jesus expels the dealers

(Mk 11:11; Lk 13:35; Jn 2:14)

+ ¹² So Jesus went into the Temple and drove away all who were buying and selling in the temple area. He overturned the tables of the money changers, and the stools of those who sold pigeons. ¹³ And he said to them, "My house will be called a house of prayer. But you have turned it into a den of thieves."

¹⁴ The blind and the lame also came to him in the Temple and Jesus healed them.

¹⁵ The chief priests and the teachers of the Law saw the wonderful things Jesus had just done and heard the children shouting in the temple area, "Hosanna to the Son of David!"

¹⁶ They became indignant and said to Jesus, "Do you hear what they say?" Jesus answered them, "Yes. Have you never read this text: From the mouths of children and infants you have found perfect praise?"

¹⁷ So leaving them he went out of the city and came to Bethany where he spent the night.

Jesus curses the fig tree

(Mk 11:12; Lk 1:6)

■ ¹⁸ On returning early to the city, Jesus felt hungry. ¹⁹ He noticed a fig tree by the road, went up to it and found nothing but leaves. Then he cursed the tree, "May you never bear fruit!" And immediately, the fig tree withered.

²⁰ When the disciples saw this, they were astonished and they said, "How did the fig tree dry up at once!" ²¹ Jesus told them, "Truly, I say to you: if you had faith and did not doubt, not only could you do what I have done with the fig tree, but you could even say to that mountain: 'Get up and throw yourself into the sea!' and it would be done. ²² Whatever you ask in prayer, full of faith, you will receive."

Jesus' response to the authorities

(Mk 11:27; Lk 20:1)

²³ As Jesus was entering the Temple, the chief priests, the teachers of the Law and the Jewish authorities, came to him and asked, "What right have you to do all this? Who gave you this authority?"

²⁴ Jesus answered them, "I will also ask you a question, only one. And if you give me an answer, then I will tell you by what right I do these things. Was John's ministry and baptism from God, or was it merely something human?"

²⁵ They reasoned out among themselves, "If we answer that the baptism of John was from God, he will say: 'Why, then, did you not believe him?'"

²⁶ And if we say: The baptism of John was merely something human, we will turn the people against us, since all hold John as a prophet." ²⁷ So they answered Jesus, "We do not know."

And Jesus said to them, "Neither will I tell you by what right I do these things."

event in Jn 2:21, where he speaks of the new Temple, Christ.

■ This incident helps us understand the strange behaviour of Christ in looking for figs out of season and then cursing the tree as if it were responsible. Jesus behaved this way for a purpose: to call something to the attention of the apostles, through a teaching method used by the prophets. The fig tree is a figure of the Jewish people, who did not produce the fruits expected by God.

The parable of the two sons

+ ²⁸ Jesus went on to say, "What do you think of this? A man had two sons. He went to the first and said to him: 'Son, today go and work in my vineyard.' ²⁹ And the son answered: 'I do not want to.' But later he thought better of it and went. ³⁰ Then the father went to the second and gave him the same command. This son replied: 'I will go, sir.' But he did not go."

³¹ Jesus then asked, "Which of the two sons did what the father wanted?" They answered, "The first." And Jesus said to them, "Truly, I say to you: the publicans and the prostitutes are ahead of you on the way to the kingdom of Heaven. ³² For John came to show you the way of goodness but you did not believe him, yet the publicans and the prostitutes did. You were witnesses of this, but you neither repented nor believed him."

The parable of the tenants

(Mk 12:1; Lk 20)

³³ Listen to another example: There was a landowner who planted a vineyard. He put a fence around it, dug a hole for the winepress, built a watchtower, leased the vineyard to tenants and then went to a far country. ³⁴ When the harvest time came, the landowner sent his servants to the tenants to collect his share of the harvest. ³⁵ But the tenants seized his servants, beat one, killed another and stoned another.

³⁶ Again the owner sent more servants, but they treated them in the same way.

³⁷ Finally, he sent his son, thinking: 'They will respect my son.' ³⁸ But when the tenants saw the son, they thought: 'This is the heir. Let us kill him and the property will be ours.' ³⁹ So they seized him, threw him out of the vineyard and killed him.

⁴⁰ Now, what will the owner of the vineyard do with the tenants when he comes?" ⁴¹ They said to him, "He will have no mercy on those wicked men and will kill them, and lease the vineyard to others who will pay him in due time."

⁴² And Jesus replied, "Have you never read what the Scriptures say? The stone which the builders rejected has become the keystone. This was the Lord's doing; and we marvel at it.

⁴³ Therefore I say to you: the kingdom of Heaven will be taken from you and given to a people who will bear fruit.

⁴⁴ (Whoever falls on this stone will be broken to pieces, and he on whom it falls will be ground to dust.)"

⁴⁵ When the chief priests and the Pharisees heard these parables, they realized that Jesus was referring to them. ⁴⁶ They would have arrested him but they were afraid of the crowd who regarded him as a prophet.

+ This parable refers to the refusal of the chief priests to recognize John the Baptist as a messenger of God.

A good number of sinners were converted by John's preaching, and confessed their sins. Such people were well disposed to receive the message of Jesus which opened for them the Kingdom of God and showed them the true face of God the Father. Because of that, they were ahead of the priests, who were indifferent to John's call, for they felt neither the desire nor the need to change.

Every parish organizing a mission experiences the same thing: many uncommitted Christians will neither work among the missionaries, nor receive them, believing they do not need conversion.

• THE BANQUET

This parable contains two parts. In the first part, God invites us to a banquet

The wedding feast

(Lk 14:15)

22 ¹Jesus went on speaking to them in parables:

²"This story throws light on the kingdom of Heaven. A king celebrated the wedding of his son. ³He sent his servants to call the invited guests to the wedding feast, but the guests refused to come.

⁴Again he sent other servants ordering them to say to the invited guests: 'I have prepared a banquet, slaughtered my fattened calves and other animals, and now everything is ready; come then, to the wedding feast.' ⁵But they paid no attention and went away, some to their fields, and others to their work. ⁶While the rest seized the servants of the king, insulted them and killed them.

⁷The king became angry. He sent his troops to destroy those murderers and burn their city. ⁸Then he said to his servants: 'The wedding banquet is prepared, but the invited guests were not worthy. ⁹Go, then, to the exits of the ways and invite everyone you find to the wedding feast.'

¹⁰The servants went out at once into the streets and gathered everyone they found, good and bad alike, so that the hall was filled with guests.

¹¹The king came in to see those who were at table, and he noticed a man not wearing the festal garment. ¹²So he said to him: 'Friend, how did you get in without the wedding garment?' But the man kept silent. ¹³So the king said to his servants: 'Bind his hands and feet and throw him into the dark where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth.'

+ ¹⁴Know that many are called, but few are selected."

1. Pro 9, 1-6 3. 21, 34 8. Rev 19, 7 10. 13, 47 12. Rev 19, 8 13. 8, 12; 25, 30; Lk 13, 28

where there is a place for everyone. He has been sending his prophets all through history to preach justice, the mercy of God and trust in him. The Jewish nation, however, did not heed God's call through these prophets and now will give less heed to Jesus. But God's plan will not fail. He will send his apostles to preach the Gospel in foreign nations (go to the exits of the ways) so that non-Jews, too, may enter the Church. Some Jews, however, the selected few among so many called, will be the first members of the Church.

The king celebrates the wedding of his son, Christ, who deserves to be called the bridegroom of humankind (Mk 2:19), because he has become one body with it. All throughout history the Risen Christ gathers together mortal and divided human beings. The Spirit of God will transform and raise them from the dead, so that they may sit at the table of the living, according to the parable.

The only table of Christ that Christians usually know is the Eucharist. But while taking part in it, we must not forget what has been said above. Our meeting in the Mass has to remind us that God calls us to prepare, in our daily lives, for the banquet reserved by him for all humankind. Ours is the task of uniting and reconciling all people.

What if we do not answer? Then, little by little, the life of the Holy and Universal Church will be withdrawn from our assemblies of comfortable Christians, and others will be called to take charge of the Work of God: invite to the wedding.

The second part of the parable points this out: You Christians, who are already inside the Church, do you wear the new garment – a life of justice, honesty and truthworthiness?

Let us not believe that the surprised guest who was not properly dressed for the occasion was some kind of poor person. No, for it was customary during those times to supply all guests with the robe they should wear at the banquet. This one could have put on the robe but did not, so he had nothing to answer.

o Many are called (v 14). Some are disturbed upon reading this: does it mean that only a few persons will be saved?

If we associate this sentence with the first part of the parable, it means that, of those first invited, few will enter the banquet. These guests were the Jews and very few, indeed, entered the Church of Jesus. Interpreted in connection with the second part of the parable, it would mean that few of those entering the Church have the necessary dispositions, so the majority would be condemned at the time of judgement. But this contradicts what was related, because only one of the guests was thrown out.

It is better not to associate this saying too much with the parable of the banquet, because we find it also in other places in the Gospel. Here

Paying taxes to Caesar

¹⁵ The Pharisees withdrew and took counsel on how they could trap Jesus with his own words. ¹⁶ They then sent their disciples with the members of Herod's party for this purpose.

¹⁷ They said to Jesus, "Master, we know that you are an honest man and truly teach God's way: you are not influenced by others nor are you afraid of anyone. Tell us, then, what you think: is it against the Law to pay taxes to Caesar? Should we pay them or not?"

¹⁸ But Jesus understood their evil intent, and said to them, "Hypocrites! why are you testing me? ¹⁹ Show me the coin with which you pay taxes."

They showed him a denarius, ²⁰ and Jesus said to them, "Whose head is this, and whose name?" ²¹ They answered, "Caesar's." Then Jesus replied, "Therefore, give to Caesar what belongs to Caesar, and to God what belongs to God."

²² They were greatly astonished at his answer, so they left him and went away.

The resurrection of the dead

(Mk 12:18; Lk 20:27)

²³ That same day, some of the Sadducees came to Jesus. Since they claim that there is no resurrection, they questioned him in this way, ²⁴ "Master, Moses said that if anyone dies without any children, his brother must take the wife and have a child who will be considered the dead man's child. ²⁵ Now, there were seven brothers. The first married a wife, and he died; since he had no children, he left his wife to his brother. ²⁶ The same thing happened to the second and to the third until the seventh. ²⁷ Then, last of all, the woman also died. ²⁸ Now, in the resurrection of the dead, to which of the seven will she be wife, for all had her as wife?"

²⁹ Jesus answered, "You are totally wrong because you understand neither the Scriptures nor the power of God. ³⁰ First of all, in the resurrection of the dead, neither men nor women will marry, but they will be like the angels in Heaven. ³¹ And about the resurrection of the dead, have you never reflected on what God said to you: 'I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob'? He is God, not of the dead but of the living."

³³ The people who heard him were astonished at his teaching.

³⁴ The Pharisees saw how Jesus had silenced the Sadducees, so they agreed to gather around him. ³⁵ One of them, a teacher of the Law, tried to test him with this question, ³⁶ "Teacher, which is the most important commandment in the Law?"

³⁷ Jesus answered, "You shall love the Lord, your God, with all your heart, with all your soul and with all your mind." ³⁸ This is the first and the most important of the commandments. ³⁹ But after this there is another one very similar to it: You shall love your neighbour as yourself. ⁴⁰ The whole Law and the Prophets are founded on these two commandments."

⁴³Jesus then asked, "Why did David, inspired by God, call the Christ Lord? For he says in a psalm: ⁴⁴The Lord said to my Lord: Sit at my right until I put your enemies under your feet. ⁴⁵If David calls him Lord, how can he be his son?"

⁴⁶No one could answer him, not even a word. From that day on, no one dared question him anymore.

Do not imitate the teachers of the Law (Lk 20:45; Mk 12:38)

23 ¹Then Jesus said to the crowds and to his disciples:

+ ²"The teachers of the Law and the Pharisees occupy the seat of Moses. ³Listen and do all they say, but do not imitate them, ⁴for they do not practise what they teach. They prepare heavy burdens that are very difficult to carry, and lay them on the shoulders of the people. But they do not even raise a finger to move them. ⁵They do everything in order to be seen by people; so they wear very wide bands of the Law around their necks, and robes with large tassels. ⁶They like to occupy the first places at feasts and reserved seats in the synagogues; ⁷they also enjoy being greeted in the marketplace and to be called 'Master' by the people.

◆ The fifth Discourse of Matthew's Gospel begins here. We are within a few days of Jesus' departure from this world, and he is looking at the course his Church will follow in history. He points to two events:

The first will be fairly soon: the Church, just born, is to face strong opposition from the Jewish powers, especially the Pharisees. Then, she must follow her own road and depart from the Jewish communities. This is the substance of chapter 23.

The second event will take place at the end of history: the Judgment of God. This is presented in chapter 25.

Chapter 24 deals with both events.

+ RELIGIOUS AUTHORITIES

Jesus was not from the tribe of Levi, to which the priests and those in charge of religious activities belonged. He did not, likewise, belong to any religious association, as the Pharisees did. He stood among common people, watching the behaviour of the chiefs and of the educated society.

Jesus was critical of the Pharisees (Mk 8:11). In disclosing their failures, he warned beforehand the authorities of the Church and any group pretending to be the best, or the most aware, or the most prepared, or the most efficient in the Church. The Pharisees wanted to be, and were somehow, the most instructed and the most efficient among the Jewish believers.

The teachers of the Law and the Pharisees occupy the seat of Moses. The Gospel says it with more precision: they have seated themselves in the chair of Moses. Ironically this line means that their authority comes from God somehow, but in fact they strived strongly to win it. Matthew, in writing these words of Jesus, wants to preserve in the Church fundamental equality. It is the community which enjoys the Holy Spirit, and the heads or doctors will have no authority unless they are deeply rooted in the community's life.

Do what they say. The bad example of the authorities does not discredit the word of God. Nor does it lessen the principle of authority. What discredits and lessens it is a pretense at being superior to others.

Then Jesus speaks of the form of authority.

Do not let yourselves be called Master or Father. In fact, the title is not the most important thing. One can be called simply "brother" or "companion," and demand the blind obedience which is due only to God.

They do everything in order to be seen. The teacher is also human and a sinner, so he can easily neglect the words of God that require from him a true, interior conversion. Then he may pay more attention to external things which are easy to accomplish for one whose life is comfortable, as happens with many ministers of religion. Such were the Pharisees who loved money, but were severe with the common people who did not know or fulfill all the religious rules.

The heads of the Church serve only in the name of Jesus. They have authority as the Heaven. ¹⁰Nor should you be called Teacher, because Christ is the only Teacher for you. ¹¹Let the greatest among you be the servant of all. ¹²For whoever makes himself great shall be humbled, and whoever humbles himself shall be made great.

Seven woes for the Pharisees (Lk 11:39)

o ¹³Therefore, woe to you, teachers of the Law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You close the door and prevent people to enter the kingdom of Heaven. You neither enter nor allow those who were entering to do so.

¹⁴Woe to you, teachers of the Law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! ¹⁵You travel by sea and land to win a pagan, yet once he is converted, you turn him into a son of hell, much worse than yourselves.

¹⁶Woe to you, blind guides! You say: To swear by the Temple is not binding, but to swear by the treasure of the Temple is. ¹⁷Blind fools! Which is of more worth? The gold in the Temple or the Temple which makes the gold a sacred treasure? You say:

¹⁸If anyone swears by the altar, he is not bound; but if he swears by the offering on the altar, he is bound. ¹⁹Blind men! Which is of more value: the offering on the altar or the altar which makes the offering sacred? ²⁰Whoever swears by the altar is swearing by the altar and by everything on it. ²¹Whoever swears by the Temple is swearing by it and by God who dwells in the Temple. ²²Whoever swears by heaven is swearing by the throne of God and by him who is seated on it.

²³Woe to you, teachers of the Law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You do not forget the mint, anise and cummin seeds when you pay the tenths of everything, but then you do not fulfill what is most important in the Law: justice, mercy and faith. These you must put into practice, without neglecting the others. ²⁴Blind guides! You strain a mosquito, but swallow a camel.

apostles had, to safeguard the faith and shepherd the sheep. If Jesus commanded the Israelites to listen to the successors of Moses, how much more are we to listen now to the successors of the apostles. These cannot renounce their authority under pretense of humble service, to become the executors of the will of the majority. For their service is precisely to serve and to command.

The Church must remain, however, a community of free persons, who express themselves with frankness and retain the right to criticize even the highest authority.

Authorities in the Church must not obscure the only father and they are not exempt from listening sincerely to their brothers and sisters, in order to discern manifestations of the Holy Spirit guiding the Church. The Church would be sinning if it regarded its bishops and apostles according to the "cult of personality" with which human societies affirm the power of their leaders.

o You close the door to the Kingdom of God (v. 13). Let us remember that the Kingdom of Heaven means the Kingdom of God. These teachers close the path to true knowledge of God the Father, and the way to freedom and confidence which is proper for the children of God. How can we forget that even in the Church, teachers sometimes developed a way of religious education that primarily urged moral behaviour and the performance of civic duties instead of awakening in Christian people the desire for more instruction in the faith, more personal contact with the word of God, more apostolic creativity. How many millions of Christians lived with scruples, fear and human traditions!

You say: To swear by the Temple (v. 16-22). Jesus refers to common practices in his times. Some teachers found ways to circumvent certain oaths. In that manner, clever people could swear falsely and deceive their opponents by swearing firmly without promising much.

²⁷ Woe to you, teachers of the Law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You are like whitewashed tombs beautiful in appearance, but inside there are only dead bones and uncleanness. ²⁸ In the same way you appear as religious men before people, but you are full of hypocrisy and wickedness within.

◆ ²⁹ Woe to you, teachers of the Law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You build tombs for the prophets and decorate the monuments of holy men. ³⁰ You say: Had we lived in the time of our fathers, we would not have agreed when they killed the prophets. ³¹ So, you yourselves confess to be sons of those who murdered the prophets. ³² And now, finish off what your fathers have begun!

³³ Serpents, race of vipers! How can you escape condemnation to hell? ³⁴ From now on, I will send you prophets, wise men and teachers, but you will behead and crucify them, and flog others in the synagogues or drive them from one city to another.

³⁵ Because of this you will be accountable for all the innocent blood that was shed on the earth, from the blood of upright Abel to the blood of Zechariah, son of Berachiah, whom you murdered by the altar within the Temple. ³⁶ Truly, I say to you: the present generation will pay for all this.

THE DEFENDERS OF THE FAITH

How could Jesus call such men hypocrites when they were so versed in the knowledge of the Holy Bible?

In the language of Jesus, the word "hypocrite" does not only mean to appear to be what one is not, but, more than anything else, it refers to him who makes fun of the things of God and who causes loss of respect for them. Not all the Pharisees were hypocrites, of course, but Jesus attacks their institution: it was a bad tree (Mt 15:13). Why? Because it was an elitist group, a group that felt themselves to be better than the rest, the group of the "defenders of the faith."

The mystery of God is so deep that no man can present himself as his lieutenant. When our time comes to serve him we should do it with humility, knowing that our way to serve him and to sacrifice ourselves for him is not free from mistakes that may cause some loss or respect for the things of God. The Pharisees practised, taught, and won new followers to the faith, but they did not notice that they nullified all they did because of their pride and their love for money; they did not develop a spirit of the poor nor did they give to God the key to their heart.

One who stays away from sinners and the humble, stays away from the mercy of God and from God himself.

THE PROPHETS

◆ On one side, the Prophets, on the other, those who kill the Prophets; and they kill the prophets to defend religious institutions!

We need religious institutions like the parishes, the schools, the apostolic groups to keep ourselves on the right path. These institutions, however, while helping us to live with faith, excuse us from making great efforts. So we easily accustom ourselves to live according to the norms of "conventional" and "comfortable" Christianity.

The best among us want to respond with more generosity to the calls of God, but they know that the group gathered in this or that institution and parish is not ready to go beyond the safe paths or to accept risks.

As soon as they try a new way, our conscience feels tormented because it becomes clear that until then we had been living a life of half-lies and mediocrity. Then we can listen and change or we can also oppose. This is how the very institutions of the Church often ignore the prophets, that is to say, those who have heard the call of God. However, after fifty or a hundred years, everybody will honour him who was rejected in his own day.

The Jewish people, cornered by foreign pressure, closed ranks around the Temple, the religious practices and the association of the Pharisees. Moved by fear, the Jews did what any other society would do when threatened: they became fanatical conservatives. They felt secure with the institutions that God gave them. (It is the same thing we now observe in so-called fundamentalist groups.)

As for the chiefs and defenders of the faith, they were not ready to listen. It was one thing to honour past prophets and keep the Holy Scriptures but quite another thing to accept criticisms that God gave them in those days, not written in books, but spoken by a carpenter, Jesus.

So they let the hour pass in which God visited!

+ ³⁷ Jerusalem, Jerusalem! You murder the prophets and stone those sent to you by God. How often would I have gathered your children, yet you refused! ³⁸ Now you will be left with an empty Temple. ³⁹ I tell you that you will no longer see me until you say: "Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord!"

The ruin of Jerusalem and the end of the world

(Mk 13; Lk 21; 17:23; 12:36)

•24 ¹ Jesus left the Temple and as he was walking away, his disciples came to him and pointed out the imposing Temple buildings. ² But he said, "You see all this? Truly I say to you: not one stone will be left upon another here. All will be thrown down."

³ When Jesus was sitting on the Mount of Olives, the disciples approached him privately and asked, "Tell us when this will take place. What signs will be given us before your coming and the end of history?"

⁴ Jesus answered, "Be on your guard and let no one mislead you. ⁵ Many will present themselves as the Saviour, and say: 'I am the Messiah,' and they will deceive many people. ⁶ You will hear about war and threats of war, but do not be troubled, for it is not the end yet. ⁷ Nations will fight one another, and kingdom oppose kingdom. There will be famines and earthquakes in several places, ⁸ but all these will be like the first pains of childbirth.

⁹ Then they will arrest you, and they will torture and kill you. All nations will hate you for you bear my name. ¹⁰ In those days, many will stumble and fall; they will betray one another and become enemies. ¹¹ Besides, false prophets will appear and mislead many people.

¹² And because of such great wickedness, love will grow cold in many people. ¹³ But the one who holds out to the end will be saved. ¹⁴ This Gospel of the Kingdom will be proclaimed throughout the world for all the nations to know; then the end will come.

¹⁵ When you see the idol of the invader set up in the Temple according to what the prophet Daniel foretold (may the reader understand!), ¹⁶ then let those in Judah flee to the mountains.

¹⁷ If you are on the housetop, do not them, and went on a road that brought their nation to ruin. Henceforth they could find God neither in their books nor in the Temple of Jerusalem left empty (like in Ezk 8) and there would be no other intervention of God to restore and gather the Jewish people until the day that they would recognize Christ.

The example of the Jewish nation must serve as a warning to us. We also shall be lost, if we remain too attached to the past; if we refuse to build a poorer church, more demanding, less worried for its own security than for the salvation of the world.

+ What aggressiveness in the words of Jesus! Jerusalem had been destroyed in the year 587 b.c. If we read the prophets, we find that Jerusalem's destruction was a punishment for its crimes. Now, Jesus announces another destruction, that will be a punishment for bloodshed, the blood of the prophets, the blood of Christ, the blood of the first Christians killed by the Jews.

Jesus came to gather the scattered children of Israel, but they did not recognize the hour in which God visited them. The presence of God would abandon them to reside among the converted pagans as happened in the past (Ezek 8).

◆ With reference to this great discourse see commentary on Mk 13.

For the Jews of Jesus' time, to announce the destruction of the Temple (that had just been reconstructed more beautifully and luxuriously) was a subversive thing to do, for the whole nation lived only for the Temple; so, the closest friends of Jesus question him in private (v. 3).

They have two questions: when will this happen? When will the end of history be? The ²¹For this will be a time of great trial as never known from the beginning of the world until now, and never to be known again.²² And if that time were not to be shortened, no one would survive. But God will shorten it for the sake of his chosen ones.²³ Then, if anyone says to you: 'Look! The Messiah is here! He is there!' do not believe it.²⁴ For false Christs and false prophets will appear and perform signs and wonders able to deceive even God's chosen people, if that were possible.²⁵ See, I have told you everything ahead of time.

²⁶ So, if anyone tells you: 'He is in

The coming of the Son of Man (Mk 13:28; Lk 17:29)

²⁹ For later, after that distress, *the sun will grow dark, the moon will not give its light, the stars will fall out of the skies, and the whole universe will be shaken.*³⁰ Then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in the heaven: *as all the nations of the earth beat their breasts, they will see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with divine power and the fulness of Glory.*³¹ He will send his angels to sound the trumpet and gather the apostles confuse somewhat the 2 questions, but Jesus makes a clear distinction:

In paragraph 24, 4-28 Jesus speaks of the days of anguish (21 & 29), that will conclude with the destruction of Jerusalem which the listeners of Jesus will witness. It will be possible to run away before the disaster occurs (15-20). It will be a time for evangelization, a time for persecutions and for Christians' testimony before the Jewish and pagan worlds (9-14). The Jewish people who did not recognize Jesus as their Saviour, will let other saviours, or messiahs, stir them up against the Romans.

In paragraph 26-28. Jesus shows that this general confusion about the true saviour is very far moved from what will happen when he returns at the end of time.

In paragraph 29-31 Jesus talks about his glorious coming. Then Jesus reasserts two things: the events and signs which refer to the end of Jerusalem will take place in the present generation (32-35). But the day of Jesus (36 & 42) will come much later.

The comparison of the two men (or women) working together means that, upon the coming of Jesus, the Judgement will take place, then there could be a separation within the same social or family group: some headed towards the Lord, others to be condemned (37-41).

How is it that Jesus related the destruction of Jerusalem to the end of time? Simply, because each event concludes one phase of Holy Scripture.

First, we have the time of the Old Testament. God taught the people of Israel and nurtured their development in order that their history and experiences might serve as a model for other peoples. At the end of this period, Jesus came during a national crisis, to help this people take a definite step, in a situation where people were engaged in more and more violent and divisive antagonisms. Jesus preached the Gospel to them: "Believe or die." A minority believed but the nation perished.

Then the message was brought to other nations and thus began the era of the New Testament. The Church became the educator of all nations who had to mature as a people and as Christians. When the world has reached a certain stage (as in the case of the Jewish people), the Church will also have a new awareness of what the Gospel means for humankind and will have it as the centre of all her teachings and actions. Amid a crisis, universal this time, in which all humankind will be submerged in violence and hatred, a new era of intense evangelization will take place with reconciliation as its main theme: "Believe or perish." This will be the time when the New Testament and history will be fulfilled: with the coming of Jesus.

chosen ones from the four winds, from one end of the earth to the other.

³² Learn a lesson from the fig tree. When its branches become tender and its leaves begin to sprout, you know that summer is near. ³³ In the same way, when you see all that I have told you, know that the time is near, even at the door. ³⁴ Truly, I say to you, this generation will not pass away until all these things have happened. ³⁵ Heaven and earth will pass away, but my word will not pass away.

³⁶ But as for that day and that hour, no one knows when it will come, not even the angels of God nor the Son, but only the Father.

³⁷ At the coming of the Son of Man it will be just as it was in the time of Noah. ³⁸ In those days before the Flood, people were eating and drinking, and marrying, until the day when Noah went into the ark. ³⁹ Yet they did not know what would happen until the flood came and swept them away. So will it be at the coming of the Son of Man. ⁴⁰ Of two men in the field, one will be taken and the other left. ⁴¹ Of two women grinding wheat together at the mill, one will be taken and the other left.

Be on the alert

⁴² Stay awake, then, for you do not know on what day your Lord will come. ⁴³ Just think about this: if the owner of the house knew that the thief would come by night around a certain hour, he would stay awake to prevent him from breaking into his house. ⁴⁴ So be alert, for the Son of Man will come at the hour you least expect.

⁴⁸ Not so with the bad servant who thinks: My master is delayed. ⁴⁹ And he begins ill-treating his fellow servants while eating and drinking with drunkards. ⁵⁰ But his master will come on the day and at the hour he least expects. And he will dismiss that servant. ⁵¹ His lot will be with the hypocrites where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

The ten bridesmaids

(Mk 13:35; Lk 13:25)

25 ¹ This story throws light on what will happen in the kingdom of Heaven. Ten bridesmaids went out with their lamps to receive the bridegroom. ² Five of them were careless while the others were foreseeing.

■ FAITHFULNESS

The following three parables present three aspects of God's judgment. The first one is addressed to the members of the Church.

The kingdom of God is compared to a wedding, in which some young girls are chosen to form part of the entourage. Like them, we have also been selected by God to prepare for the wedding of the Lord Jesus with humanity.

The girls were ready for the wedding, but Jesus delays, and time passes by. The sleep which takes possession of the girls is not the result of negligence on their part but it simply means that the time when they could have entered without problems was over. We, likewise, when we began our journey in faith, could not foresee that we would meet trials. Young people do not believe that some day it will cost them everything to remain faithful to their commitment. They do not realize that, as time goes by, their attitudes and obedience to the faith will change.

The careless ones did not take extra oil. They did not think of building up their lives, or surrendering themselves; nor did they make the ³The careless bridesmaids took their lamps as they were without providing extra oil. ⁴But those who were foreseeing, brought with their lamps flasks of oil. ⁵As the bridegroom delayed, they all grew drowsy and fell asleep.

⁶But at midnight, a call rang out: 'The bridegroom is here, come out and meet him!' ⁷All the maidens woke up at once and trimmed their lamps. ⁸Then the careless ones said to the sensible ones: 'Give us some oil, for our lamps are going out.' ⁹The provident ones answered: 'There may not be enough for both you and us. You had better gone to those who sell and bought some.'

¹⁰They had gone to buy it when the bridegroom came, and those who were ready went with him to the wedding feast, and the doors were shut.

¹¹Later the rest of the maidens arrived and called out: 'Lord, Lord, open to us.' ¹²But he answered: 'Truly I do not know you.'

¹³So, stay awake, for you do not know the day or the hour."

The parable of the talents

(Lk 19:12; Mk 4:25; 13:34)

¹⁴"Imagine a man who, before going abroad, summoned his servants to entrust his property to them. ¹⁵He gave five talents of gold to the first, then two to the other, and one to the third, each one according to his ability; and he went away.

¹⁹Long after, the master of those servants returned and asked them for reckoning. ²⁰The one who received five talents came with another five talents, saying: 'Lord, you entrusted me with five talents, but see I gained five more with them.' ²¹The master answered: 'Very well, good and faithful servant; since you have been faithful in a few things, I will entrust much more to you. Come and share the joy of your master.'

²²Then the one who had two ta-commitments that would allow them to endure. The oil for the flame is lacking; so also is the giving of oneself and of everything one has: faith, hope and love are like the fire that fades away when there is nothing left to burn.

I do not know you. Neither baptism nor a period of fervent devotion are of value to us, if afterwards we are content with a life of routine religious practices. The Lord demands faithfulness and perseverance of those he has chosen: this is how we save a world which seeks everywhere for truth, and does not know to which Lord to surrender.

o TO WORK – TO TRUST ONESELF

During the time of Jesus, a talent was a coin worth thirty kilograms of precious metal but in this parable, when Jesus spoke of talents he meant the abilities given by God to each of us. Since then, people came to understand the word talent in this sense.

The way to wait for the Kingdom is to work for it to be realized. The servant who hid his talent represents the lazy or the indifferent person who considers faith as a family inheritance, or the coward who never dares to take initiatives that would be helpful for everyone. God needs the cooperation of all of us.

We build by our faith, by our work, by our capacity to understand others, but what we build on earth is not definitive and so God says: I will entrust you with more. The justice of the kingdom and the dignity of man will be different and likewise the wealth that is to be distributed. We work in little, and God will establish us in plenty.

You knew that I reap where I have not sown. Apparently God is represented here as a hard master who takes advantage of his servants. But when God demands something from us, is it because he lacks something or because he wants us to surpass ourselves? God does not tolerate mediocrity. This demanding master does not oppress people, as atheists want us to believe, but rather he spurs them to action.

To trust God is also to trust oneself. God has given me many qualities and abilities for the good of others and whenever I accept responsibilities without fear of criticism or failure, he will entrust me with more, because there are many.

lents came and said: 'Lord, you entrusted two talents to me; I have two more which I gained with them.'

²³ The master said: 'Well, good and faithful servant; since you have been faithful in little things, I will entrust you with much more. Come and share the joy of your master.'

²⁴ Finally, the one who had received a talent came and said: 'Master, I know that you are an exacting man. You reap what you have not sown and gather what you have not invested. ²⁵ I was afraid, so I hid your money in the ground. Here take what is yours.' ²⁶ But his master replied: 'Wicked and worthless servant, you know that I reap where I have not sown and gather where I have not threshed. ²⁷ Then, you should have deposited my money in the bank, and you would have given it back to me with its interest on my return.'

²⁸ Therefore, take the talent from him, and give it to the other who has ten. ²⁹ For to him who is productive, more will be given, and he will have abundance; but he who is unproductive, even what he has will be taken from him. ³⁰ As for that useless servant, throw him out into the dark where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

The last judgement (Lk 9:26)

³⁴ The King will say to those on his right: 'Come, blessed of my Father! Take possession of the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the world. ³⁵ For I was hungry and you fed me, I was thirsty and you gave me drink. ³⁶ I was a stranger and you welcomed me into your house. I was naked and you clothed me. I was sick and you visited me. I was in prison and you went to see me.'

³⁷ Then the upright will ask him: 'Lord, when did we see you hungry and give you food; thirsty and give you drink, ³⁸ or a stranger and welcome you, or naked and clothe you? ³⁹ When did we see you sick or in prison and go to see you?' ⁴⁰ The King will answer, 'Truly, I say to you: whenever you did this to one of the least, to my brothers, you did it to me.'

⁴¹ Then he will say to those on his

◆ THE JUDGMENT OF NON-CHRISTIANS

How will God judge the 1 billion Chinese, officially atheist? And what about the 800 million Hindus, and the Muslims and all the others who have not heard about Jesus? We know that Christians are a minority in the world. As we do now, the Jews thought about the majority of people in the world who were not among the Chosen People and did not know about God or his promises. The Jews envisioned a huge multitude, ready to "devour them," a restless world where God should one day impose His law. They used to call them: the nations.

Jesus answers these fears in the last parable of the Gospel of Matthew, saying that he will return as King of all the nations. All those who, without knowing Christ, have shared in the common destiny of humankind, will be judged by him. In fact, he never abandoned them, but placed at their side "those little ones who are his brothers," as his representatives.

Who are these less important ones? Christians who live among pagans? Or perhaps, the less important ones of all kinds whom we find in all sectors of society? Yet Jesus is present left: 'Cursed people, go away from me into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devil and his angels!

⁴²For I was hungry and you did not give me anything to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me nothing to drink; ⁴³I was a stranger and you did not welcome me into your house; I was naked and you did not clothe me; I was sick and in prison and you did not visit me.'

⁴⁴They, too, will ask: 'Lord, when did we see you hungry, thirsty, naked or a stranger, sick or in prison, and did not help you?' ⁴⁵The King will answer them: 'Truly, I say to you: whatever you did not do for one of the least of these, who are my brothers, you did not do to me.'

⁴⁶And these will go into eternal punishment, but the just to eternal life."

26 ¹When Jesus had finished all he wanted to say, he told his disciples, ²"You know that in two days' time it will be the Passover and the Son of Man will be handed over to be crucified."

³Then the chief priests and the Jewish authorities gathered together at the palace of the High Priest whose name was Caiaphas, ⁴and they agreed to trap Jesus and kill him. ⁵But they said among themselves, "Not during the feast, lest there be an uprising among the people."

The anointing at Bethany (Jn 12; Mk 14:9)

⁶While Jesus was in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, ⁷a woman came up to him carrying a precious jar of expensive perfume and she poured it on Jesus' head. ⁸Seeing this the disciples became indignant, protesting, "What a useless waste!" ⁹The perfume could have been sold for a large sum and given to the poor."

¹⁰But Jesus was aware of this, so

41. 7, 23; Mk 9, 48; Rev 20, 10 46. Dn 12, 2; Jn 5, 29 1. Ex 12, 1 | 3. Jn 11, 47; Acts 4, 25 | 7. Lk 7, 3 through them in the most indifferent and unbelieving environments, and people are judged by the way they have cared for these little ones.

See, Christ reveal the innumerable human deeds that have built what is best in our civilization, and people brought before him, look with amazement at the God whom they loved or despised in the person of their neighbour. Although the majority of them never thought of the afterlife, the Kingdom of God is presented to them with its only law: Love.

There is no neutral place. The fire means the torment of those who condemned themselves by closing and freezing their hearts so that they became incapable of love. During their lives, they became indifferent to the misfortune of their rejected and hungry brothers and sisters: now the splendour of God who is love burns and pains them.

What you did to one of my brothers. Jesus talks of looking after our neighbour, be he friend or foe, not of serving the community, or a class, or a nation in general, because a nation or a class or even humankind are just human concepts we have created and which we form and deform according to our ideology. Using these words, we often exclude a group of our brothers, who do not belong to our nation or to our class. On the other hand, one who really loves, acknowledges his brothers and sisters without giving too much importance to these labels: it is the person who exists and lives for God.

Another insight into the above statement Jesus identifies himself "with the least of our brothers and sisters." On the one hand, there is a mysterious identification between Jesus and all human beings, regardless of their social condition. On the other hand, the least of our neighbours – the forsaken, the suffering and the oppressed – bring a privileged and more radical presence of Christ.

What Jesus says on judging these non-Christian people likewise applies to us. But we would be mistaken if we repeatedly presented this parable as expressing the totality of Christian duties. What the world needs above all is no bread and water and clothing, but the truth and the hope that God entrusted to his chosen people. Christians would be unfaithful to their mission if they confined themselves to merely talking about assistance, housing and such like and forgot what is really life for humankind – first, the knowledge and love of their Lord. He takes to himself everything we do for our brothers and sisters but does not want to be confused with them.

he said to them, "Why are you troubling this woman? What she has just done for me is indeed a good work. ¹¹ You have always the poor with you but you will not have me forever. ¹² And she has anointed my body as a part of my funeral care. ¹³ Truly, I say to you: wherever the Gospel is proclaimed, all over the world, what she has done will be told in praise of her."

¹⁴ Then one of the Twelve, who was called Judas Iscariot, went off to the chief priests and said, ¹⁵ "How much will you give me if I hand him over to you?" They promised to give him thirty pieces of silver, ¹⁶ and from then on, he kept looking for the best way to hand him over to them.

The last supper

(Mk 14:12; Lk 22:7; Jn 13:1)

¹⁷ On the first day of the Festival of the Unleavened Bread, the disciples came to Jesus and said to him, "Where do you want us to prepare the Passover meal for you?" ¹⁸ Jesus answered, "Go into the city, to the house of a certain man, and tell him: 'The Master says: My hour is near, and I will celebrate the Passover with my disciples in your house.'"

¹⁹ The disciples did as Jesus had ordered and prepared the Passover meal.

²⁰ When it was evening, Jesus sat at table with the Twelve. ²¹ While they were eating, Jesus said, "Truly, I say to you: one of you will betray me."

²² They were deeply distressed and asked him in turn, "You do not mean me, do you, Lord?"

²³ He answered, "He who will betray me is one of those who dips the bread in the dish with me. ²⁴ The Son of Man is going as the Scriptures say he will. But alas for that man who betrays the Son of Man; better for him if he had never been born." ²⁵ Judas, who was betraying him, also asked, "You do not mean me, Master, do you?" Jesus replied, "You have said it."

²⁶ While they were eating, Jesus took bread, said a blessing and broke it, and gave it to his disciples saying, "Take and eat; this is my body."

²⁷ Then he took a cup and gave thanks, and passed it to them saying, "Drink this, all of you, ²⁸ for this is my blood, the blood of the Covenant, which is poured out for many, for the forgiveness of sins. ²⁹ Yes, I say to you: I will not taste the fruit of the vine from now until the day I drink with you new wine in my Father's kingdom."

³⁰ After singing psalms of praise, they went out to the Mount of Olives.

³¹ Then Jesus said to them, "Your trust in me will fail tonight, all will fall. For the Scripture says: I will strike the shepherd and the sheep will be scattered. ³² But after my resurrection I will go to Galilee ahead of you."

³³ Peter responded, "Even though all doubt you and fall, I will never fall." ³⁴ Jesus replied, "Truly, I say to you: this very night before the cock crows, you will deny me three times."

³⁵ Peter said, "Though I have to die with you, I will never deny you." And all the disciples said the same.

Gethsemane

(Mk 14:26; Lk 22:39)

³⁶ Jesus came with them to a place called Gethsemane, and he said to his disciples, "Sit here while I go over to pray."

³⁷ He took Peter and the two sons of Zebedee along with him, and he be-³⁹He went a little farther and fell to the ground with his face touching the earth, saying this prayer, "Father, if it is possible, take this cup away from me. Yet not what I want, but what you want."⁴⁰ He went back to his disciples and found them asleep, and he said to Peter, "Could you not stay awake with me for even an hour?"⁴¹ Stay awake and pray, so that you may not slip into temptation. The spirit indeed is eager, but nature is weak."

⁴²He again went to pray and said, "Father, if this cup cannot be taken away from me without my drinking it, let your will be done."⁴³When he came back to his disciples, he found them asleep again, for they could not keep their eyes open.⁴⁴ He left them and again went to pray the third time, saying the same words.

⁴⁵Then he came back to his disciples and said to them, "You can sleep on now and take your rest! The hour has come and the Son of Man is now given over into the power of sinful men."⁴⁶ Get up, let us go. Look: the betrayer is here."

Jesus arrested

◆⁴⁷ Jesus was still speaking when Judas, one of the Twelve, arrived. With him was a mob armed with swords and clubs, who had been sent by the chief priests and the Jewish authorities.⁴⁸ The traitor had arranged a signal for them: "The one I kiss, he is the man; arrest him."⁴⁹ And he went directly to Jesus and said, "Good evening, Master" and he gave him a kiss.⁵⁰ But Jesus said to him, "Friend! do what you came for." Then they surrounded and arrested Jesus.

⁵¹One of those who were with Jesus drew his sword and struck at the servant of the High Priest, cutting off his ear.⁵² So Jesus said to him, "Put your sword back into its place, for he who uses the sword will perish by the sword."⁵³ Do you not know that I could call on my Father, and he would at once send me more than twelve legions of angels.⁵⁴ But how would the Scriptures be fulfilled? This is what has to be."

⁵⁵At that moment, Jesus said to the crowd, "Why do you come to arrest me with swords and clubs, as if I were a robber? Day after day I was seated among you teaching in the Temple, yet you did not arrest me."⁵⁶ But all this has come about in fulfillment of what the Prophets said." Then all his disciples deserted him and fled.

Jesus before the Sanhedrin

(Mk 14:53; Lk 28:54)

■⁵⁷ Those who had arrested Jesus brought him to the house of the High Priest Caiaphas where the teachers of the Law and the Jewish authorities were assembled.

The kiss of Judas: this was the usual way a disciple greeted his master.

He drew his sword. Peter, like other apostles who had taken part in resistance movements against Roman oppression, had brought swords (Lk 23:38).

He who uses the sword. This sentence does not condemn soldiers and policemen in a world of violence but Jesus asserts that power does not establish the kingdom of God, nor does it lead to life. It always brings death (one way or another) to him who uses it, even when done out of necessity.

■ We find two accusations against Jesus. The first: I can destroy (v. 61) is false in one sense, but it refers to the words Jesus had spoken about replacing the Temple of Jerusalem with another ⁵⁸ Peter followed him at a distance as far as the courtyard of the High Priest; he entered and sat with the guards, waiting to see the end.

⁵⁹ The chief priests and the whole of the Supreme Council needed some false evidence against Jesus, so that they might put him to death. ⁶⁰ But they were unable to find any, even though many false witnesses came forward. ⁶¹ At last, two men came up and declared, "This man said: I am able to destroy the temple of God and rebuild it in three days."

⁶² The High Priest then stood up and asked Jesus, "Have you no answer at all? What about this evidence against you?" ⁶³ But Jesus kept silent.

So the High Priest said to him, "In the name of the living God, I command you to tell us: Are you the Christ, the Son of God?" ⁶⁴ Jesus answered, "It is just as you say. I tell you more: from now on, you will see the Son of Man seated at the right hand of the Most Powerful God and coming on the clouds of heaven."

⁶⁵ Then the High Priest tore his clothes, saying, "He has blasphemed. What more evidence do we need? You have just heard these blasphemous words. ⁶⁶ What is your decision?" They answered, "He must die!" ⁶⁷ They began to spit on Jesus and strike him, ⁶⁸ saying, "Christ, tell us who hit you."

Peter disowns Jesus (Mk 14:66; Lk 22:56)

+ ⁶⁹ Meanwhile, as Peter sat outside in the courtyard, a young servant-girl of the house said to him, "You also were with Jesus of Galilee." ⁷⁰ But he denied it before all, saying, "I do not understand what you are talking about."

⁷¹ And as Peter was going out to the gateway, another servant-girl saw him and told the bystanders, "This man was with Jesus of Nazareth."

⁷² Peter denied it the second time, swearing, "I do not know that man."

⁷³ After a little while, those who were standing there approached Peter and said to him, "Of course you are one of the Galileans; your accent gives you away." ⁷⁴ Peter began to justify himself with curses and oaths protesting that he did not know that man. Just then a cock crowed.

⁷⁵ And Peter remembered the words of Jesus, "Before the cock crows, you will deny me three times." And he went away weeping bitterly.

religion centered in his own person (John 2:10) and that was very subversive.

Nothing was more sacred to the Jews than the Temple of Jerusalem, and to attack the Temple was, at the same time, to threaten the position of the priests whose power was based on the fact that they alone could perform sacrificial rites in the Temple. In defending the holy things they were also protecting their own interests.

For the second accusation which is the most important, see commentary on Mark 14:53.

Jesus remained silent. Not out of contempt for those men, who were the religious authorities, but because he saw it was useless to argue with them. He remained silent and felt assured as those who put their cause in the hands of God.

It is just as you say. Perhaps this answer of Jesus should be translated: "You are the one saying it," which is to say that Jesus did not agree with the terms used by Caiaphas. The expression "Son of God" signified the kings and saviours of Israel, and Jesus is the Son of God in a very different sense. Jesus identifies himself with the prophecy of Daniel 7:13, announcing a Saviour, a Son of Man, who comes directly from God from all eternity.

+ This denial by Peter is most amazing. His friend John is well known in the house of the High Priest and Peter was introduced as his friend (John 18:16). The young girl knows very well who John is and does not say anything, only an ironic word to Peter. Nobody is threatening him, least of all the men; instead they mock him for his provincial Galilean accent, the same as putting Jesus to death.² They had him bound and led him away to be handed over to Pilate, the governor.

The death of Judas

■³ When Judas, the traitor, realized that Jesus had been condemned, he was filled with remorse and returned the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and the elders,⁴ saying, "I have sinned, betraying an innocent man to death." They answered, "What does it matter to us? That is your concern."⁵ So, throwing the money into the Temple, he went away and hanged himself.

⁹ And what the prophet Jeremiah said was fulfilled: *They took the thirty pieces of silver, the price the sons of Israel set on him.*¹⁰ And they gave them for the Potter's Field, as the Lord commanded me.

Jesus before Pilate

(Mk 15:1; Lk 23:2; Jn 18:29)

¹¹ Jesus stood before the governor who questioned him, "Are you the King of the Jews?" Jesus answered, "You say so."

¹² The chief priests and the Elders accused him, but he made no answer.¹³ Pilate said to him, "Do you hear all the charges they bring against you?"¹⁴ But he did not answer even a single question, so that the governor wondered.

○¹⁵ It was customary for the governor to release any prisoner the people asked for on the occasion of the Passover.¹⁶ Now there was a well-known prisoner called Barrabas.¹⁷ As the people had gathered, Pilate asked them, "Whom do you want me to set free: Barrabas, or Jesus called the Christ?"¹⁸ For he realized that Jesus had been handed over to him out of envy.

²⁰ But the chief priests and the Elders stirred the crowds to ask for the release of Barrabas and the death of Jesus.²¹ When the governor asked them again, "Which of the two do you want me to set free?" they answered, "Barrabas."²² Pilate said to them, "And what shall I do with Jesus called the Christ?" All answered, "Crucify him!"²³ Pilate insisted, "What evil has he done?" But they shouted louder, "Crucify him!"

◆²⁴ Pilate realized that he was getting nowhere and that instead there could be a riot. He then asked for water and washed his hands before the people, saying, "I am not responsible for his blood. It is your doing."²⁵ And all the people answered, "Let his blood be upon us and upon our children."

Jesus! But that was enough to make Peter lose his composure.

■ Judas, as soon as he betrays Jesus, disappears from the scene and dies. We do not even know what happened to the thirty coins: See Acts 1:18.

○ According to very old texts of the Gospel of Matthew the name of the troublemaker was Jesus, his nickname being Barrabas: Pilate proposes to the people a choice between Jesus called Barrabas and Jesus called the Christ.

◆ Pilate asked for water... (v. 24). The Jews understood this gesture as a clear expression of his refusal to become the judge or accuser of ⁴⁴ Even the robbers who were crucified with him insulted him.

⁴⁵ From midday darkness fell over the whole land until midafternoon.

⁴⁶ At about three o'clock, Jesus cried out in a loud voice, "Eloi, Eloi, lamma Sabbachthani?" which means: 'My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?' ⁴⁷ As soon as they heard this, some of the bystanders said, "He is calling for Elijah." ⁴⁸ And one of them went quickly, took a sponge and soaked it in vinegar and, putting it on a reed, gave him to drink. ⁴⁹ Others said, "Now, let us see whether Elijah comes to his rescue."

⁵⁰ Then Jesus cried out again in a loud voice and gave up his spirit.

After the death of Jesus

■ ⁵¹ Suddenly the curtain of the Temple sanctuary was torn in two from top to bottom, the earth quaked, rocks were split, ⁵² tombs were opened, and several holy people who had died were raised to life. ⁵³ They came out of the tombs after the resurrection of Jesus, entered the Holy City and appeared to many.

⁵⁴ The captain and the soldiers who guarded Jesus were greatly terrified when they saw the earthquake and all that had happened, and said, "Truly, this man was Son of God."

⁵⁵ There were also some women who watched from a distance; they had followed Jesus from Galilee and saw to his needs. ⁵⁶ Among them were Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of Zebedee's sons.

The burial

(Mk 15:42; Lk 23:50; Jn 19:38)

⁵⁷ It was now evening and there arrived a wealthy man from Arimathea, named Joseph, who was also a disciple of Jesus. ⁵⁸ He went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus, and the governor ordered that the body be given him. ⁵⁹ So Joseph took the body of Jesus, wrapped it in a clean linen sheet ⁶⁰ and laid it in his own new tomb which had been cut out of the rock. Then he rolled a huge stone across the entrance of the tomb and left. ⁶¹ Mary Magdalene and the other Mary remained sitting there in front of the tomb.

speaks of wine with bile (a detestable drink) to give us an inkling of all the bitterness that Jesus had to swallow, and also to recall Ps 69:22.

They crucified him with two robbers (v. 38). Perhaps they were, like Barrabas, nationalist terrorists opposed to the Romans. They could have been the companions of Barrabas, and their execution enhanced the favour done to Barrabas. If so, they would have to die along with Jesus instead of Barrabas. They could also have belonged to the group of bandits who assaulted and robbed pilgrims in the hills of Palestine.

This is the king of the Jews (v. 37). For Pilate and the people in general, this expression signified a nationalist leader in the movement for liberation from the Roman yoke.

The Jews are the people of God and the Father arranged that they would be associated, in a very special way, with the salvation Christ brings. In fact, they were later subjected to many trials and persecutions. Many Jews suffered like Jesus without believing in him, but confident in the promises of God and in the kingdom of Justice. Jesus is really their king.

In Latin, the letters I.N.R.I. (that we read on crucifixes) are the initial letters of Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews.

■ When Jesus rose from the dead some apparitions of dead persons were interpreted as a sign of fulfillment of the Prophecies of Dan 12:2 referring to the Day of Salvation. It also means that Jesus, before his resurrection, descended to the dead. He found the souls of the good people who died before him and were awaiting him in order to enter the presence of God.

sees went to Pilate⁶³ and said to him, "Sir, we remember that when that liar was still alive, he said: I will rise after three days."⁶⁴ Therefore, have his tomb secured until the third day, lest his disciples come and steal the body and say to the people: He rose from the dead. This would be a worse lie than the first."⁶⁵ Pilate answered them, "There you have the soldiers, go and take all the necessary precautions."⁶⁶ So they went to the tomb and secured it, sealing the stone and placing it under guard.

Jesus appears to the women

(Mk 16:1; Lk 24:1; Jn 20:1)

28 ¹ After the sabbath, at the appearance of the first star, on the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to visit the tomb.² Suddenly there was a violent earthquake: the Angel of the Lord came down from heaven, went to the tomb and rolled away the stone from the entrance of the tomb and sat on it.³ His face was like lightning and his garment white as snow.⁴ The guards trembled in fear and became like dead men when they saw the Angel.

⁵ The Angel said to the women, "Do not be afraid, for I know that you are looking for Jesus who was crucified.⁶ He is not here, for he is risen as he said. Come, see the place where they laid him.⁷ Now go at once and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead and is going ahead of you to Galilee. You will see him there. This is my message for you."

⁸ They left the tomb at once in holy

◆ THE RISEN CHURCH

The evangelist mentions the names of Mary of Magdalene and the other Mary, the mother of James the Minor, a relative of Mary, the mother of Jesus. Before they arrived at the tomb, the angel of the Lord had come down: this was a biblical way of saying that a supernatural manifestation had taken place. But of course nobody, not even the guards, saw Jesus coming out of the Tomb. The risen Christ cannot be seen, unless he allows himself to be seen.

The women looking for Christ will see him: the soldiers and chiefs, who did not look for him, will not understand.

Then Jesus met them on the way (v. 9). It is obvious that Matthew is combining two different events: one, the discovery of the empty tomb, and the other, which happened later on, the apparition of Jesus to Mary Magdalene alone as related in John 20:11-18.

Go to Galilee (v. 10). why did Jesus say this date if he was going to appear later that same day in Jerusalem? (Lk 24:13-42). It is not clear and probably the evangelists have combined several apparitions to simplify the description. Anyway, time was needed for the apostles to believe in the Resurrection and understand something about it. After the two apparitions in Jerusalem, in which Jesus tried to convince them that he was not a phantom or a spirit, they would have to return to their provinces and environments, far away from the city that had caused them such trauma, in order to ponder what they had experienced. In Galilee, Jesus will manifest himself differently, making them understand that he was already glorified, that his existence was earthly no more.

A woman, Mary of Magdalene, conveys the message, in order to indicate that, in the Church, not everything will come from the authorities. God communicates with whomever he wishes, giving prophetic messages to simple people and to women.

The resurrection of Christ is the pivotal point of the Gospel; yet Matthew reports it briefly. Why? Because when Matthew wrote his Gospel, the Resurrection was considered too great an event to put into writing: rather, it should be proclaimed and witnessed to by the Spirit at work in the Christian communities.

Are we in a different situation? The Church that talks of the Risen Christ should never be a powerful Church but a Risen Church. If the Church finds itself in a situation where there is no apparent hope of salvation, and yet, revives by the power of God; if in each generation, the Church seems doomed to die because of its ancient structures, its worldly ways or the persecution it undergoes, but nevertheless is given new energies and new apostles by the Lord, then the Church is a witness that the Lord has risen and has given her the power to rise.

The Christian communities proclaim the resurrection, better when, for instance, they keep on in spite of the fact that their leaders have gone, or their most valuable apostles are opposed by the mediocre and the bad ones; when the community suffers but, in spite of this, does not lose its happiness.

fear, yet with great joy, and they ran to tell the news to the disciples.

⁹ Then, Jesus met them on the way and said, "Peace." The women approached him, embraced his feet and worshipped him. ¹⁰ Jesus immediately told them, "Do not be afraid. Go tell my brothers to go to Galilee; there they will see me."

¹¹ While the women were on their way, the guards returned to the city and some of them reported to the chief priests all that had happened. ¹² They met with the Jewish authorities and decided to give the soldiers a good sum of money, ¹³ with this instruction, "Say that while you were asleep, his disciples came by night and stole the body of Jesus. ¹⁴ If Pilate comes to know of this, we will satisfy him and keep you out of trouble."

¹⁵ The soldiers accepted the money and did as they were told. This lie has circulated among the Jews until this day.

Jesus sends the apostles

¹⁶ As for the Eleven disciples, they went to Galilee, to the mountain Jesus had told them to go. ¹⁷ When they saw Jesus, they bowed before him, although some doubted.

¹⁸ Then Jesus approached them and said, "I have been given all authority in heaven and on earth. ¹⁹ Therefore, go and make disciples from all nations. Baptize them in the Name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, ²⁰ and teach them to fulfill all I have commanded you. I am with you always until the end of this world."

● EVANGELIZATION – THE TRINITY

Jesus sent his apostles to evangelize the world. Although some doubted. With this, Matthew sums up the last apparitions of Jesus. Not all the disciples of Jesus (the Eleven and the rest) believed so quickly in the Resurrection of Jesus.

Make disciples from all nations. Jesus, following the example of Jewish teachers of his time, gathered around him a group of disciples who lived with him. The teacher knew his disciples and the disciples knew the teacher by sharing everyday life. The same holds true today: evangelization implies interpersonal sharing.

To evangelize means to help someone ponder on his former experiences until he can recognize in the person of Christ, in his death and resurrection, the truth that lights up his own life. That was what Jesus did with his apostles, showing them that the whole Bible, all the past experiences of their race, foretold his death and resurrection. (Lk 24:27; 44).

That is what the Church of today does when she reveals to people the meaning of this world and its tensions: only Christ reveals to us the way towards reconciliation.

Those who believe will be baptized in the one Name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, the Three Persons Christ taught us about. Of course, he named them separately because the Father is not the Son and the Son is not the Holy Spirit; in spite of that the Three are the same God. Upon entering the Church, the baptized will enter into communion with the Father, with the Son and with the Holy Spirit. The Church is, before anything else, communion.

See Acts 19:6 regarding baptism in the Name of the Lord Jesus.

Jesus speaks of his commandments to the Church; but he did not give any other commandments than these, which are precisely designed to promote and sustain life in communion.

I am with you all the days. The first Christian generation thought that Christ would not delay in coming back, but by the time the Gospels were written, they already understood that history had not yet reached its end. Jesus had committed himself totally to the Church of his apostles, just as God, in former times, had committed himself to the children of Israel.

The Catholic Church is different from other Christian churches, because it was founded by the apostles of Jesus. Only she feels obliged to remain united around the successors of the apostles, the bishops; this unity and continuity are at times hard to maintain, especially in situations where it would seem easier to form a new reformed community alongside her. But obedience to the will of the Father is the means by which he purifies and strengthens our faith. Jesus is and remains "Lord" regarding the destiny of "His" Church.

Christ, God and Lord, is with her in the painful and fruitful experiences that he wants her to go through. As a pilgrim Church she moves from century to century till the end of time and the work of salvation.

1 ¹This is the beginning of the Good News of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. ²This beginning had been foretold in the book of Isaiah, the prophet, "I am sending my messenger ahead of you to prepare your way. ³Let the people hear the voice calling in the desert: Prepare the way of the Lord, level out his paths."

⁴So John the Baptist appeared in the desert, preaching a baptism of repentance for the forgiveness of sins. ⁵All the people from the country of Judea and the city of Jerusalem went out to John to confess their sins and be baptized by him in the river Jordan.

⁶John was clothed in camel's hair and wore a leather belt around his waist. His food was locusts and honey. ⁷He preached to the people saying, "After me there will come one who is mightier than I am; ⁸I have baptized you with water, but he will baptize you in the Holy Spirit. As for me, I am not worthy to bend down and untie his sandals."

⁹At that time Jesus came from Nazareth, a town of Galilee, and was baptized by John in the Jordan. ¹⁰And the moment he came up out of the water, Heaven opened before him and he saw the Spirit coming down on him like a dove. ¹¹And these words were heard from Heaven, "You are my Son, my beloved one, whom I have chosen."

INTRODUCTION

When the apostles first presented Jesus' message to the world, they used the spoken word, proclaiming what they had seen and heard of him. None of them even thought of writing a "Life of Jesus." Perhaps some of them did not even know how to write. Yet, in various places, there appeared written discourses, parables and acts of Jesus.

Mark, who was with Peter and Paul in Rome, put together his Gospel from these accounts, adding many details about Jesus he had received from Peter.

Above all else, the Gospel of Mark shows us a Jesus who acts. It does not speak of Jesus' birth or his life in Nazareth, neither does it contain his long discourses; but he tries to show us Jesus in all his expression.

Jesus is the Son of God. This is confirmed in the first line of the Gospel; and the Roman official who watched Jesus die declares it again in the last page of the Gospel.

But what does this mean, Son of God? The entire Gospel of Mark tries to deal with this question answering it with a narration of Jesus' actions.

¹² Then the Spirit drove him into the desert, ¹³and Jesus stayed in the desert forty days and was tempted by Satan. He was with the wild animals, but angels ministered to him.

Jesus calls his first disciples

(Mt 4:12; Lk 4:14)

o ¹⁴ After John was arrested, Jesus went into Galilee and began preaching the Good News of God. ¹⁵ He said, "This is the time of fulfillment; the kingdom of God is at hand. Change your ways and believe the Good News."

¹⁶ As Jesus was walking along the shore of Lake Galilee, he saw Simon and his brother Andrew casting a net in the lake for they were fishermen.

¹⁷ And Jesus said to them, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

¹⁸ At once, they left their nets and followed him. ¹⁹ Jesus went a little farther on and saw James and John the sons of Zebedee; they were in their boat mending their nets. ²⁰ Immediately, Jesus called them and they followed him, leaving their father Zebedee in the boat with the hired men.

Jesus teaches and drives out an evil spirit (Lk 4:31; Mt 7:28)

■ ²¹ They went into the town of Capernaum and Jesus began to teach in the synagogue during the sabbath assemblies. ²² The people were astonished at the way he taught, for he spoke as one having authority and not like the teachers of the Law.

+ ²³ It happened that a man with an evil spirit was in their synagogue. ²⁴ and he screamed, "What do you

+ Here Mark sums up three important events that are the point of departure for Jesus' preaching and public life.

1. John the Baptist's preaching
 2. Jesus' Baptism by John
 3. The Desert Experience
- See Commentary on Lk 3:4.

o After this desert experience, Jesus returns to his province, Galilee, and establishes himself in Capernaum. Jesus lives in the house of Simon who appears to be already the leader of a group of fishermen and Jesus finds among them his disciples.

What would Jesus say in his first preaching? This is the time of fulfillment. Israel's long wait while God's promises were always delayed has come to an end. Jesus affirms that today a new time has begun. The Kingdom of God is at hand. There is no more waiting because we are at the threshold; but now, it is we who must take the first steps to enter this new world, a world in which God reigns (see commentary on Matt 5:1).

Believe in the Good News. God has come to us in order to reconcile us. God brings no more laws but only asks us to believe in his words.

Follow me (v. 17) Jesus' first words to his disciples are a call to commit themselves. And they began to follow him (1:18) sharing their lot with him, leaving behind their families and work. Jesus, like the religion teachers of his time, teaches them and has them memorize the teaching which they will pass on to others in the Church.

Simon, Andrew, James, and John: Jesus already knew them, for he had seen them where John preached. They were not idlers but responsible workers who, like many generous youth today, commit themselves fully to a great work.

They did not yet know what the Reign of God would mean but they trusted that Jesus would guide them. This for them was the beginning of faith. "I have much faith," say the people. "I believe that God will protect me, and I believe all will be well." That's all right but it's the same faith that other people of other beliefs have. It is not Christian faith. Christian faith starts when we take seriously Jesus' calling to "follow him," and change our way of life according to his ways.

■ Wherever Jesus goes, he leaves in everyone an impression of strength and confidence. At the beginning of his ministry, Jesus preaches in the synagogues. The synagogue is the Jewish house of prayer. They gather each Saturday for the chanting of the Psalms and the reading of the Bible. The one in charge preaches and invites others to join. This is where Jesus reveals himself. He is not like the teachers of the Law who repeat, interpret, and give others' opinions. Jesus speaks on his own and he speaks with authority, "In truth, I tell you."

+ With the same authority Jesus drives out demons. This act also signifies a teaching: Jesus-want with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come to destroy us? I know who you are: You are the Holy One of God." ²⁵ Then Jesus faced him and said with authority, "Be silent and come out of this man!" ²⁶ The evil spirit made the man shake violently and, after giving a loud shriek, came out of him.

²⁷ All the people were astonished and they wondered, "What is this? With what authority he preaches! He even orders evil spirits and they obey him!" ²⁸ And Jesus became famous throughout all the country of Galilee.

Jesus heals many

(Mt 8:14; Lk 4:38)

o ²⁹ As soon as they left the synagogue, Jesus went to the home of Simon and Andrew with James and John. ³⁰ As Simon's mother-in-law was sick in bed with fever, they immediately told him about her. ³¹ Jesus went to her and taking her by the hand, raised her up. The fever left her and she began to wait on them. ³² That evening just as the sun had set, people brought to Jesus all the sick and those who had evil spirits. ³³ The whole town was gathered near the door. ³⁴ Jesus healed many who had various diseases, and drove out many demons; but he did not let them speak, for they knew who he was.

Jesus' prayer at night

(Lk 4:42)

+ ³⁵ Very early in the morning, before daylight, Jesus got up and went away to a lonely place where he prayed. ³⁶ Simon and the others went out, too, searching for him; ³⁷ and when they found him they said, "Everyone is looking for you." ³⁸ Then Jesus answered, "Let's go to the nearby villages so that I may preach there also; for that is why I came." ³⁹ So Jesus set out for Galilee where he preached in all the synagogues and cast out demons.

delivers us from the influence of the Devil, who strives to destroy man created in the likeness of God.

This Master of this world (Jn 14:30) is present in the entire human business and culture to deceive human purposes and convert any progress to the cause of a new slavery.

In Jesus' times, but much more rarely in the Church's times (our times), there were some persons possessed by the Devil. This is a slavery and a disease, and Jesus freed quite a number of those persons. But physical possession is not the usual way of the devil's activity in men. The Devil operates (far more dangerously because we do not feel it) in the moral life of people. He blinds and confuses them with regard to the truth, under the disguise of the angel of light (2 Cor 11:14).

Not that the Devil is the cause of every sin and evil that people do. There is also the selfishness of our "flesh" and the lure of the false promises of "the world" but the Devil, as enemy of God's kingdom, is never at rest. He is always fostering our temptations. With holier persons who are not easy to tempt in a direct way, he goes about deceiving them: he persuades them to give more importance to their own good purposes than to the advice of others and the teaching of the Church.

The Devil notices at once those who are capable of weakening or destroying his empire. Then he awakens the bad, the mediocre, the foolish and the ill-fated against them. That is why wherever Jesus goes the Devil also appears. This first and impressive encounter with the Devil takes place in the House of Prayer. Actually this is not the first encounter with Evil: (see Mk 1:12). There will be others until the day the Jewish society agrees to eliminate the Son of God.

o Peter's simple faith is manifested. Jesus enters the house, bringing with him peace and health. Jesus shows us how to visit the sick. What a natural thing to do when Mass ends – to go to see the sick. The care and the love of their Christian brothers attracts God's favours upon them.

+ The apostles knew God since childhood through the Bible's teachings; perhaps they had not discovered God within their own lives but prayed to God as to a distant stranger. When they joined Jesus, immediately they understood that there was something extraordinary about him. They were especially taken with his apparent intimacy with God. The most extraordinary thing they noted in his manner and actions was his intimate and faithful union with his Father.

Jesus cures a leper

(Mt 8:2; Lk 5:12)

◆ ⁴⁰A leper came to Jesus and begged him, "If you so will, you can make me clean." ⁴¹Moved with pity, Jesus stretched out his hand and touched him, saying, "I will; be clean." ⁴²The leprosy left the man at once and he was made clean. ⁴³As Jesus sent the man away, he spoke strongly to him, ⁴⁴"Don't tell anyone about this, but go and show yourself to the priest and for the cleansing bring the offering ordered by Moses; this will be an evidence for everyone."

⁴⁵However, as soon as the man went out, he began spreading the news everywhere, so that Jesus could no longer publicly enter the town. But even though he stayed in the rural areas, people came to him from everywhere.

Living with Jesus, they begin to desire to know the Father more fully, a little like Jesus knows Him. (Mt 11:1, Jn 14:8, 15:15).

◆ THE MARGINALIZED

Jesus leaves Capernaum to announce the Good News to the most isolated and ignored families in the open country. There he finds the lepers. Leprosy is not only a grave disease that slowly rots the body but it is also contagious. Because of this, lepers had to live on the outskirts of the towns, far from the population. It was also a worldwide belief that leprosy was an affliction from God, so that the Jewish religion declared lepers unclean.

By Jesus' act, the flesh of the leper becomes clean. This is a true miracle much more important than lowering the fever of Peter's mother-in-law. Jesus achieves something far more important still: the leper is no longer marginalized. From now on, he will be like others and people will no longer avoid him. Both people and the Law of God will acknowledge his dignity.

The Good News does not remain mere words but it effects a change. From now on, they will no longer be marginalized people.

Don't tell anyone (see 5:42; 7:36; 8:26). Jesus invites us to seek the true riches (see commentary on Mt 9:35). But people are more concerned with these marvels than with receiving the Good News. So Jesus reserves himself for those who seek the Truth. Such people recognize him for his unique way of living and

Jesus forgives and cures a paralytic

(Mt 9:1; Lk 5:17)

2 ¹After some days Jesus returned to Capernaum. As the news spread that he was at home, ²so many people gathered that there was no longer room even outside the door. While Jesus was speaking the Word to them, ³some people brought to him a paralyzed man.

⁴The four men who carried him couldn't get near Jesus, so they opened the roof above the room where Jesus was and, through the hole, lowered the man on his mat.

⁵When Jesus saw the faith of these people, he said to the paralyzed man "My son, your sins are forgiven."

⁶Now, some teachers of the Law who were sitting there wondered within themselves, ⁷"How can he speaking (Jn 4:48). They pay little attention to his fame and miracles.

Jesus does not want them to call him Son of God (1:24; 8:30) because this title can be interpreted in various ways – but none of his contemporaries would give it its true meaning. The apostles will proclaim Jesus as Son of God when his death and resurrection have shown what this means.

○ With this miracle on the paralytic cured and forgiven, Jesus gives three answers at the same time: to the sick man, to his friends and to the Pharisees.

When Jesus noticed the faith of these people. These are the friends of the paralytic who had convinced their companion to go to Jesus, and Jesus rewards their faith.

Apparently, the paralytic did nothing more than consent to their advice. At once, Jesus tells him – your sins are forgiven. What a strange thing to say! How can Jesus forgive sins if the man is not conscious of any fault and, at the same time repentant and awaiting forgiveness? Certainly during his long infirmity, the man had asked himself why God was punishing him (the people of his time believed sickness was a punishment from God). Probably he was also aware of some sin that frightened him and while his friends prodded him to seek a cure, he probably doubted that for him there would be a miracle. But he is no sooner in the presence of Jesus than Jesus looks at him and assures him that he is forgiven, which is of more concern to him than speaking like this? He has no respect for God, because who can forgive sins except God?"

⁸At once Jesus knew in his spirit what they were thinking and asked, "Why do you wonder? ⁹Is it easier to say to this paralyzed man: 'Your sins are forgiven,' or to say: 'Rise, take up your mat and walk?' ¹⁰But now you shall know that the Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins."

And he said to the paralyzed man, ¹¹"Rise, take up your mat and go home." ¹²The man rose and, in the sight of all these people, he took up his mat and went out. All of them were astonished and praised God saying, "We have never seen anything like this!"

The call of Levi

(Mt 9:9; Lk 5:2)

■ ¹³When Jesus went out again beside the lake, a crowd came to him and he taught them. ¹⁴As he walked along, he saw a tax collector sitting in his office. This was Levi, the son of Alphaeus. Jesus said to him, "Follow me." And Levi got up and followed him.

¹⁵And it so happened that while Jesus was eating in Levi's house, tax collectors and sinners were sitting with him and his disciples – there were indeed many of them. ¹⁶But there were also teachers of the Law of the Pharisees' party among those who followed Jesus, and they said to his disciples, "Why! He eats with tax collectors and sinners!"

¹⁷Jesus heard them and answered, "Healthy people don't need a doctor, but sick people do. I did not come to call the righteous but sinners."

New wine, new skin

(Mt 9:14; Lk 5:33)

◆ ¹⁸One day, when the disciples of John the Baptist and the Pharisees his physical healing.

Later, the Pharisees arrive. When Jesus forgave the paralytic, the simple people did not realize how scandalous his words were. They did not have enough religious formation to realize immediately that only God could give absolution. It was the Pharisees and the teachers of the Law who were scandalized. Their indignation is justified because neither they, nor the others, nor the disciples yet understand that Jesus is the true Son of God. Jesus silences them: If I restore health in the same way God does, why would I not forgive also in the way God does?

Jesus disconcerts those who ask who he is. Better still, he shows that only he can save the whole person, body and soul.

FORGIVENESS OF SINS

Happy this man who was assured of his pardon through the glance and the words of Jesus! God is he who lives and loves and we need to meet him so that forgiveness can be true – his eyes meeting our eyes. Because of this God had to make himself man – Jesus forgives sins because he is a son of man (Jn 5:27) and from him we receive the pardon both of God and of men within the Christian community.

PUBLICANS

■ To enter into the family of God, we must change some of our values. This conversion is not as conspicuous as participation in religious practices but is much more valuable. First, we must liberate ourselves from prejudice which classifies people. Let us stop dividing people into good or bad; those we can greet and those we cannot; those whom we can love and help and those we cannot. Let us learn that God does not hate the rich or the uneducated, those on the left or those on the right. For God's merciful plan sees to the salvation of all.

The Gospel speaks about the publicans or the tax collectors, who served the foreign powers. For Jesus' nation was under the domination of the Roman Empire and the tax collectors were Jews who worked for foreigners.

Patriots considered them traitors. The people knew they filled their pockets; even the beggars refused to receive from the publicans. Yet Jesus did not condemn them but chose one of them, Levi, as one of his apostles of whom the majority were committed patriots.

The Teachers of the Law were like catechists or professors of religion. They were well versed in religion and they admired Jesus' teachings, but they did not consider as brothers the publicans and other sinners (that is to say people who did not fulfill the religious precepts).

Levi is probably the apostle Matthew (Mt 9:9).

were fasting, some people asked Jesus, "Why is it that both the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but yours do not?" ¹⁹Jesus answered, "How can the wedding guests fast while the bridegroom is with them? As long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast. ²⁰But the day will come when the bridegroom will be taken from them and on that day they will fast.

²¹No one sews a piece of new cloth on an old coat, because the new patch will shrink and tear away from the old cloth, making a worse tear. ²²Also no one puts new wine into old wineskins, for the wine would burst the skins and then both the wine and the skins would be lost. But new wine, new skin!"

(Mt 12:1; Lk 6:1)

o ²³One sabbath Jesus was walking through some grainfields. As his disciples walked along with him, they began to pick the heads of grain and crush them in their hands. ²⁴Then the Pharisees said to Jesus, "Look! they are doing what is prohibited on the sabbath!"

²⁵And he said to them, "Have you never read what David did in his time of need, when he and his men were very hungry?" ²⁶He went into the house of God when Abiathar was High Priest and ate the bread of offering which only the priests are allowed to eat, and he also gave some to the men who were with him." ²⁷Then Jesus said to them, "The sabbath was made for man, not man for the sabbath. ²⁸So the Son of Man is master even of the sabbath."

Cure of the man with a withered hand

(Lk 6:6; Mt 12:9; Lk 14:1)

+3 ¹Again Jesus entered the synagogue. A man who had a paralyzed hand was there ²and some people watched Jesus; if he would heal the man on the sabbath, they could accuse him.

³Jesus said to the man with the paralyzed hand, "Stand here in the centre." ⁴Then he asked them, "What ♦ Many religious leaders sympathized with Jesus. How they would have liked that he rekindle the faith of the nation! But Jesus did not feel that his primary task was to reorganize worship and multiply the devotions.

The Pharisees were fasting. Fasting, a sign of penance and repentance, supported the petitions to God that he come and liberate his people. But God comes in the form of Jesus: Joy and celebration are more appropriate than fasting. The prophets had announced the wedding feast of God with his people when he should come to visit us (Is. 62:4-5). Because of this, in presenting himself as the bridegroom, Jesus identified who he really is.

What is the new wine? It is of course the Gospel, and the intoxication with the Holy Spirit that leads the disciples to every kind of madness to make apparent the love of the Father and the freedom that they have acquired. In order to understand this, let us read the Acts of the Apostles and the lives of the saints, the real saints of course, not sad saints who are false.

Old skins: Those who blindly defend the ways of their fathers, those who fear the modern world, those who do not try to discover the causes of failure in things for fear that there would be much to change, those who are incapable of acquiring new ideas.

o It was normal that passersby when hungry would pick fruit or wheat. But the Pharisees were scandalized because Jesus' disciples did this on the sabbath, a day when all work was prohibited.

Sabbath was made for man. No law, no matter how holy it is, should be applied in a way that would oppress a person.

The Son of Man is master of the sabbath. For the Jews, the observance of the sabbath was the pillar of the Law, established by God. Why did Jesus think he was?

+ HUMAN ADVANCEMENT AND THE SABBATH

Some ask if Jesus was interested in the material advancement (well-being) of people or only in their spiritual progress. Actually, it is impossible to separate one from the other.

Jesus did not leave specific plans for bettering does the Law allow us to do on the sabbath? To do good or to do harm? To save life or to kill?" But they were silent.

⁵Then Jesus looked around at them with anger and deep sadness because they had closed their minds. And he said to the man, "Stretch out your hand." He stretched it out and his hand was healed. ⁶But as soon as the Pharisees left, they met with Herod's supporters, seeking how to destroy Jesus.

(Mt 12:15; Lk 6:17)

⁷Jesus and his disciples retired to the lakeside and a large crowd from Galilee followed him. A great number of people also came from Judea, ⁸Jerusalem, Idumea, Transjordan and from the region of Tyre and Sidon, for they had heard of all that he was doing.

⁹Because of the crowd, Jesus told his disciples to have a boat ready for him, to prevent the people from crushing him. ¹⁰He healed so many that all who had diseases kept pushing towards him to touch him. ¹¹Even the people who had evil spirits, whenever they saw him, would fall down before him and cry out, "You are the Son of God." ¹²But he warned them sternly not to tell anyone who he was.

The twelve apostles

(Mt 10:1; Lk 6:12)

◆ ¹³Then Jesus went up into the hill country and called those he wanted and they came to him. ¹⁴So he appointed twelve to be with him; he also wanted to send them out to preach. ¹⁵And he gave them authority to drive out demons.

¹⁶These are the Twelve: Simon, to whom he gave the name Peter; ¹⁷James, son of Zebedee, and John his brother, to whom he gave the name Boanerges, which means "men of thunder;" ¹⁸Andrew, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James son of Alpheus, Thaddeus, Simon the Cananean ¹⁹and Judas Scariot, the man who betrayed him.

the economy, education or the social organization but in this case, as in many others, he attacked the prejudices that prevent us from lifting up our fellow brothers and sisters. This was important to him and was a better way of liberating the human person than by making external changes only which are not accepted by the people.

People, then, have the capacity and the means to better their condition, but they use them poorly because they remain prisoners of principles or institutions that are considered sacred, and in order to respect them, they allow half the world to die.

Jewish law prohibited all work on the Sabbath, because that was the day of the week consecrated by God. Yet the Jews reinforced and added to the prohibitions of past generations, to the extent of not even allowing people to light a fire, or walk more than 1,000 paces or pick wheat, or heal the sick on the Sabbath.

Jesus looked at them with anger. Because God desires to give life. So then the Pharisees and the partisans of Herod unite against Jesus even though they are enemies, because it is not to their best interest that he awaken the people from their passivity.

◆ THE TWELVE

On the one hand are the countless afflicted who seek relief, and on the other is the group of the Twelve whom Jesus asks to be his co-builders of the kingdom of God.

What do we know of these twelve who would become Jesus' messengers, the foundations of the Church, the teachers of the faith? The nucleus of the group were fishermen and with them a tax collector, Matthew; a Teacher of the Law, Bartholomew; and some others of whom we only know that Jesus chose them from among the people.

He came in order to save all, but his work began with the poor. Jesus did not belong more to the poor than to the rich but, like all humans, he had to locate himself within a specific environment and social class.

Being a son of an artisan, he grew up among simple, humble people. In addition, Jesus made an important decision when he was eighteen or twenty years old. He chose to remain a manual worker rather than enter a school for Teachers of the Law. For these religious schools were open to all.

Jesus could have begun his preaching as a

The sin against the Spirit

(Mt 12:24; Lk 11:15; Mt 9:34)

o ²⁰When they went home, the crowd began to gather again and they couldn't even have a meal. ²¹Then his relatives came to take him away since people were saying, "He is out of his mind." ²²Moreover, the teachers of the Law who had come from Jerusalem said, "He is under the power of Beelzebul, the chief of the demons, and he drives out demons in the name of their chief."

²³Jesus called them to him and began teaching them by means of stories or parables, "How can Satan drive out Satan? ²⁴If a nation is divided by civil war, that nation cannot stand. ²⁵If a family divides itself into groups, that family will not survive.

²⁶In the same way, if Satan has risen against himself and is divided, he will not stand; he is finished. ²⁷No one can break into the house of the Strong one in order to plunder his goods, unless he first ties up the Strong one. Then indeed, he can plunder his house.

²⁸Truly, I say to you, every sin will be forgiven humankind, even insult to God, however numerous. ²⁹But whoever slanders the Holy Spirit will never be forgiven: he carries the guilt of his sin forever. ³⁰This was their sin for they said, "He has an evil spirit in him."

Jesus' true family

(Mt 12:46; Lk 8:19)

■ ³¹Then his mother and his brothers came. As they stood outside, they qualified Teacher and he certainly would have found his helpers among the sincere teachers of the Law, priests or Pharisees of good faith. But no, he preferred to educate himself through the worker's life with no other religious preparation than the teachings of the synagogue, with no other book than the book of life. Because of this, when the time came, he found his apostles among the common people, men who were simple but responsible people.

o He is under the power of Beelzebul. More than the healings, the exorcisms unsettled the Pharisees and the Teachers of the Law. They, the religious authorities, travelled from Jerusalem to see this Jesus for themselves. The Jews of Jesus' time were obsessed with the belief that illness was a form of possession. Jesus does not concern himself with distinguishing between what is illness or what is possession. Actually, the Devil is behind all of human misery. Beelzebul, the name of an ancient idol, was a Jewish term for the Devil.

Breaking into the house of the Strong one. That Strong one is the Devil and his house is the possessed person. "To plunder the house" is to take away the Devil's power over his victim.

Even insults to God shall be forgiven and Matthew adds: "And the one who speaks against the Son of Man will be forgiven." (Matthew 12:32).

Jesus allows himself to be criticized by those who do not understand him. Many Pharisees of good faith did not understand Jesus and were scandalized by him. This was excusable but it is a different thing to call evil that which is clearly good.

To slander (or: to blaspheme) the Holy Spirit is to attribute to a bad spirit a work that is manifestly good. Those who systematically attribute bad intentions to good work done by others, by the Church, by other parties, sin against the Holy Spirit. The one who recognizes the truth but not God is better off than the one who says he believes in God and does not recognize the truth.

About the exorcisms, Jesus concludes: "The kingdom of God has come." The victory over Satan is won, in reality, day by day. Indeed the members of the Church must demonstrate that where they are, the reign of Evil is disappearing and prejudice, evil, injustices, and slavery are diminishing.

■ Jesus lost his relatives but found his true brothers and sisters. When we commit ourselves to God's work, we discover new brothers and sisters and a mother, Mary, of whom the Gospel says, "Happy are you for having believed that God's promises would be fulfilled." Jesus does not say "He is my father," for the Father is one and He is in Heaven.

THE BROTHERS OF JESUS

The Church never doubted that Mary was a virgin and that Jesus was her only son, as he is the only son of the Father (see Luke's commentary 1:26). Why then does the Gospel speak of Jesus' brothers and sisters?

First, in Hebrew, any relative is called brother or sister. (See Jn 19:25 which mentions a certain Mary sister of Mary the mother of Jesus: If they were really sisters they would not bear the same name.) To avoid confusion the Jews used sent someone to call him.³² The crowd sitting around Jesus told him, "Your mother and your brothers and sisters are outside asking for you."³³ He replied, "Who are my mother and my brothers?"

³⁴ And looking around at those who sat there he said, "Here are my mother and my brothers.³⁵ Whoever does the will of God is brother and sister and mother to me."

The sower

(Mt 13:1; Lk 8:4)

4 ¹ Again Jesus began to teach by the lake, but such a large crowd gathered about him that he got into a boat and sat in it on the lake while the crowd stood on the shore.² He taught them many things through stories or parables. In his teaching he said,

³ "Listen! The sower went out to sow.⁴ As he sowed, some of the seed fell along a path and the birds came and ate it up.⁵ Some of the seed fell on rocky ground where it had little soil, and sprang up immediately because it had no depth;⁶ but when the sun rose and burned it, it withered because it had no roots.⁷ Other seed fell among thornbushes and the thorns grew and choked it, so it didn't produce any grain.⁸ But some seed fell on good soil, grew up and increased and yielded grain; some produced thirty times as much, others sixty and others one hundred times as much."⁹ And Jesus added, "Listen then, if you have ears."

some clearer forms. If the Gospel really meant brothers, son of Mary, on mentioning them together with her, it should have said, "Your mother and the sons of your mother are here." This was the only acceptable way of expressing it at that time.

On the other hand, in the first Christian Community, when the Gospels were written, there was a very influential group composed of Jesus' relatives and his countrymen of Nazareth. These were called "Brothers of the Lord" and one of them, James, became bishop of the Jerusalem community. Little is said of this group other than that they were late in believing in Jesus even though he lived with them for several years. (Mark 3:21, John 7:3-5). But upon speaking of them, the Gospel gives them the name the Christian community gave them, "brothers of the Lord" or "so and so, brother of Jesus."

◆ See commentary on Mt 13:1 and Lk 8:4.

Who is Jesus? After attracting so many people to himself, what would he do with them? Jesus would be neither a leader of a revolutionary movement nor a founder of a new religion. He would be the Sower of the kingdom of God.

The Jews spoke of the kingdom of God as we would speak of a world of justice and peace. Seeing that their nation was in a highly critical period, the Jews of Jesus' time were convinced that the reign of God would begin as a violent revolution or as a spectacular intervention by God, destroying the oppressors and punishing the profiteers.

It is true that the world of justice and peace would come. In fact, it is in our midst since the coming of Christ twenty centuries ago, yet it is still but a newly planted field. The Kingdom of God is made up of many things that have grown out of the teachings of Christ – for example, the lives of the saints, the catechism the Church has taught us. We remember also, the many Christian institutions of the past, born out of faith and easy to criticize now, but they have contributed to a better world. From the Gospel also comes the sense of unity, justice, and peace which shakes the world. From it also comes our confidence that we are not totally dependent on nature, that we are not persons subject to blind fate but persons called to build our life with God's blessings. Also, workers and farmers are given a sense of their own dignity and the Gospel gives us the security that history has meaning and that we must conquer all obstacles in the way of universal brotherhood.

All this is born of his words but has had to mature in the hearts of good people.

+ There is a mystery about the kingdom of God. Many people do not understand how God directs our lives and earthly events. But after giving the parable to all, Jesus will teach his disciples through the work and experiences of common apostolic life and reveal to them how the Kingdom grows through the Cross.

given to you. But for those outside, everything comes in parables, ¹²according to what is written in Scripture: These people may look, yet not see; hear, yet not understand; surely they will not change nor receive forgiveness."

o ¹³Jesus said to them, "Don't you understand this parable? How then will you understand any of the parables?"

¹⁴What the sower is sowing is the Word. ¹⁵Those along the path where the seed fell, are people who hear the word, but as soon as they do, Satan comes and takes away the word that was sown in them.

¹⁶Other people receive the word like rocky ground. As soon as they hear the word, they accept it with joy, ¹⁷but they have no roots so it lasts only a little while. No sooner does trouble or persecution come because of the word, than they fall.

¹⁸Others receive the seed as among thorns. After they hear the word, ¹⁹they are caught up in the worries of this life, false hopes of riches and other desires. All these come in and choke the word so that finally it produces nothing.

²⁰And there are others who receive the word as good soil. They hear the word, take it to heart and produce some thirty, some sixty and some one hundred times as much."

Parable of the lamp

(Mt 10:26; Lk 8:16)

+ ²¹Jesus also said to them, "Whom the light comes, is it to be put under a tub or a bed? Surely it is put on a lampstand. ²²Whatever is hidden will be disclosed, and whatever is kept secret will be brought to light. ²³Listen then, if you have ears!"

²⁴And he also said to them, "Pay attention to what you hear. In the measure you give, so shall you receive and still more will be given to you. ²⁵For to him who produces something, more will be given, and from him who doesn't produce anything, even what he has will be taken away from him."

For the outsiders (1 Cor 5:12) who do not share the faith and life of the Christian community, the Gospel remains just a collection of beautiful stories.

Everything comes to them in parables. The Outsiders live in a world of half-truths and they do not see that these truths are relative. Because they do not know themselves, they cannot know clearly the ways of God. While they move in this confused world, God can teach them only with hidden truths and confusing actions. When they hear Jesus' parables, they can gather some meaning from them (Is. 29:14). But Jesus does not allow them to clearly see their meaning because it would be of little help to them.

In fact, many Christian communities never grasp the real meaning of the words of Jesus: Some, because they use some Gospel verses, always the same ones, to justify their own ideas. They do not really want to listen. Others, because they look for practical things: that they be more generous, more patient etc., and they don't see that Jesus wants to show them a vision of the world and Church much wider than theirs.

o See Matthew's commentary on 13:18.

The parable of the Sower heads the other parables. Here Jesus tells us the purpose of his mission: he has come to initiate a new age of the human story: the kingdom of God is now among us.

The seed could be the Gospel word but, also the advice we receive and the suggestions from our conscience are also seeds. Sometimes, it appears that the Gospel does not have much power to transform life; but why have we trampled on so many seeds that the wind has brought us? It all depends on us.

Jesus speaks to us of thirty and one hundred fold. The word which is heeded transforms our life and strengthens our attempts to save the world. Who can tell what is possible for a free and liberated person?

+ Pay attention to what you hear. Jesus calls our attention, "You waste your time if you only listen to me and do not allow what you hear to bear fruit. The measure that you measure out will be used to measure what you receive. That is to say, if you begin to act according to what you

The seed growing by itself

o ²⁶ Jesus also said, "In the kingdom of God it is like this. A man scatters seed upon the soil. ²⁷ Whether he is asleep or awake, be it day or night, the seed sprouts and grows, he knows not how. ²⁸ The soil produces of itself; first the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear. ²⁹ But as soon as the grain is ripe, the man starts cutting it with a sickle, because harvest time has come."

The mustard seed

(Mt 13:31; Lk 13:18)

■ ³⁰ Jesus also said, "What is the kingdom of God like? To what shall we compare it? ³¹ It is like a mustard seed which, when sown, is the smallest of all the seeds scattered upon the soil. ³² But having been sown, it grows up and becomes the largest of the plants in the garden and even grows branches so big that the birds of the sky can take shelter in its shade."

³³ Jesus used many such stories or parables, to proclaim the word to them in a way they would be able to understand. ³⁴ He would not teach them without parables; but privately to his disciples he explained everything.

Jesus calms the storm

(Mt 8:18; Lk 8:22)

+ ³⁵ On that same day when evening had come, Jesus said to them, "Let's go across to the other side." ³⁶ So they left the crowd and took him away in the boat he had been sitting in, and other boats set out with him. ³⁷ Then a storm gathered and the wind began to blow. The waves spilled over into the boat so that it was already filled with water. ³⁸ And Jesus was in the stern, asleep on the cushion.

have learned, you will receive from God new strength and new knowledge. But if you do nothing, even your religious beliefs will be of no value to you, not even when you present yourself before God. You who read my Gospel, question yourselves before you follow any further.

Whatever is hidden. The word works within the secret of the heart but when we discover the transformation that is at work in our life, we readily proclaim Christ and make known to others the secret that has made us happy. (Eph 2:4; Col 3:3; Phil 2:10).

o In every period of time, people become impatient. When will the kingdom of Justice be realized? Will violence and corruption soon come to an end? Jesus answers: right now invincible forces are working: the world matures and the Kingdom grows on.

SEEDS

How many seeds are cast to the wind? A new style, a new song, a new device, a radio programme – Some seeds have grown and taken root, producing powerful streams that mobilize people. But let us recognize the humble beginnings of the work of God: goodwilled people meeting together to solve a community problem; a gesture of kindness in a closed unfriendly environment; a first attempt to smile at life after a great disappointment. The seed grows and the person who receives the word is more confident on the path in which God leads him.

■ See Matthew's commentary, 13:31.

+ Do you still have no faith? Jesus does not reprimand them for their fear of the storm but for not overcoming their fear. For they, together with Jesus, were working for the kingdom.

Jesus' disciples admired him greatly, as we admire a champion, a leader or a saint. This showed that they did not know him well. But on the night that Jesus confronted the storm, they suddenly saw him as the One whom nature obeyed. From then on, Jesus would remain their teacher and friend, but already doubt entered into their minds: "Who is this?" To whom had they entrusted themselves and where would he take them? They became frightened.

The Apostles, like us, were people of faith who honoured God but who kept him at a distance, because they were not ready to allow God into their daily lives, allowing him to witness their pettiness. They had been afraid to be left alone in the storm, but there was a greater fear on discovering God so near to them. Now we know why Jesus silenced the demons: he wanted to reveal himself gradually. What good would it do to know that Jesus is the Son of God when we are not yet used to living in the presence of God? First, Jesus had to teach them to be true to themselves and before God and then they would not be afraid to have him so close.

This crossing of the sea is an example of what we will all experience if we follow Christ. He

They woke him up and said to him, "Master, don't you care if we sink?"³⁹ As Jesus awoke, he rebuked the wind and ordered the sea, "Quiet now! Be still!" The wind dropped and there was a great calm.⁴⁰ Then Jesus said to them, "Why are you so frightened? Do you still have no faith?"

⁴¹But they were terribly afraid and they said to one another, "Who can this be that even the wind and the sea obey him?"

The Gerasenes demoniac

(Mt 8:28; Lk 8:26)

5 They arrived on the other side of the lake in the region of the Gerasenes.² No sooner did Jesus leave the boat than he was met by a man with evil spirits who had come from the tombs.³ He lived among the dead and no one could restrain him, even with a chain.⁴ He had often been bound with fetters and chains but he would pull the chains apart and smash the fetters, and no one had the strength to control him.⁵ Night and day he stayed among the tombs on the hill-sides, and was continually screaming and beating himself with stones.

⁶When he saw Jesus from afar, he ran and fell at his feet⁷ and cried with a loud voice, "What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God? For God's sake I beg you, do not torment me."⁸ He said this because Jesus had commanded, "Come out of the man, evil spirit."⁹ And when Jesus asked him, "What is your name?" he replied, "Mob is our name, for we are many."¹⁰ And all of them kept begging Jesus not to send them out of that region.

¹¹Now, a great herd of pigs was feeding on the hillside,¹² and the evil spirits begged him, "Send us to the pigs and let us go into them."¹³ So Jesus let them go and the evil spirits came out of the man and went into the pigs. These herds rushed down the cliff and were drowned in the lake.¹⁴ The herdsmen fled and reported this in the town and in the countryside, so all the people came to see what had happened.

¹⁵They came to Jesus and saw the man freed of the evil spirits sitting there, clothed and in his right mind, the very same man who had been possessed by the Mob. They were afraid.¹⁶ And when those who had seen it told what had happened to the man and to does not offer us a comfortable, calm life since sooner or later we will have to risk and undertake new things and the storm will come precisely when Jesus "sleeps," that is to say when we feel like we are completely alone. This crisis is precisely the necessary condition by which we arrive at the other shore, in other words, at a stronger, clearer faith.

◆ Jesus had the art of directly approaching the one responsible for the evil – the Devil (Mark 1:23). The Devil enters into the consciousness of the leaders of this world, and he enters into the workings of civilization. Jesus' contemporaries believed that the Devil manifested himself in mental illness. Certainly, they too easily held the Devil responsible for every kind of ailment of the nervous system but, in many cases, like the one above, they were not mistaken.

Jesus casts the demons into the pigs. Jesus sees that they still have some place in this world. This action is costly to the pigherders, but Jesus values one man more than many pigs.

These herds rushed down into the lake. (See Matthew 8:30 and Luke 8:32) The actual text of Mark says, "two thousand pigs rushed." This is an incredible number, for such large herds of pigs were never seen. But, in Hebrew, the word for herds is only distinguished from the word for 2,000 by an accent mark. Probably there was a mistake when Mark's Gospel was written in Greek.

Jesus did not include this man in his group of disciples but sent him on another mission – to his own hometown. Not everyone has the same vocation.

Tell them how much the Lord has done for you. Jesus is in a foreign land. He will not return there. Because of this, he does not fear that his miracle be known. The man will proclaim to the pagans that the Lord, this means the One God honoured by the Jews, was the one who cured him.

the pigs, ¹⁷the people begged Jesus to leave their neighbourhood.

¹⁸When Jesus was getting into the boat, the man who had been possessed begged to stay with him. ¹⁹Jesus would not let him and said, "Go home to your people and tell them how much the Lord has done for you and how he has had mercy on you." ²⁰So the man went throughout the country of Decapolis telling everyone how much Jesus had done for him. And all the people were astonished.

Jesus raises the daughter of Jairus (Mt 9:18; Lk 8:40)

+ ²¹Jesus then crossed to the other side of the lake and while he was still on the shore, a large crowd gathered around him. ²²Jairus, an official of the synagogue, came up and as soon as he saw Jesus, threw himself at his feet ²³and asked him earnestly, "My little daughter is at the point of death. Come and lay your hands on her so that she may get well and live."

²⁴Jesus went with him and many people followed, pushing from every side. ²⁵Among the crowd was a woman who had suffered from bleeding for twelve years. ²⁶She had suffered a lot at the hands of many doctors and had spent everything she had, but instead of getting better, she was getting worse. ²⁷Because she had heard about Jesus, this woman came up behind him and touched his cloak ²⁸thinking, "If I just touch his clothing, I shall get well." ²⁹Her flow of blood dried up at once, and she felt in her body that she was healed of her disease.

³⁰But Jesus was conscious that healing power had gone forth from him, so he turned around in the crowd and asked, "Who touched my clothes?" ³¹His disciples answered, "You see how the people are crowding around you. Why do you ask who touched you?" ³²But he kept looking around to see who had done it. ³³Then the woman, aware of what had happened, came forward trembling and afraid. She knelt before him and told him the whole truth.

◆³⁴Then Jesus said to her, "Daughter, your faith has saved you; go in

28. 3, 10; 6, 56; Acts 5, 15; 19, 11

30. Lk 6, 19

+ This woman was considered by the Jews as unclean because of her illness (Lev 15:19). She would also make "unclean" anyone who touched her. Because of this she was prohibited by the Law from mingling with others but she dared to enter into the crowd, and touch Jesus' cloak.

Faith drove her to break the Law of "purification," and to risk scandal. This woman did not know who Jesus was but she had faith that God would cure her through him.

The religiosity of this woman is akin to those who practice their faith according to what is called today "popular Catholicism." As seen in this woman, popular Catholicism is ill-instructed, yet shows much religious sense and trust in God. It is superficial and naive, expecting great results when touching images and religious things – Christ's garments in this case. As Jesus did, we should respect the religious expressions of popular Catholicism while at the same time, trying, like him, to help people discover deeper dimensions of their faith.

◆ FAITH AND MIRACLES

Who is responsible for a miracle? Does it come from the faith of the one who asks or is it from Christ who works the miracle? If the miracle depends solely on the faith of persons, then what is the difference between the faithful one who asks God for a cure and the one who goes to any faith healer? In this latter case, it would be enough that one convince oneself and the one actually doing the healing would not matter much.

Of course, these people coming to Jesus were very far from recognizing him as the Son of God, but they were convinced that God would give them some blessing through this prophet and holy man. This faith prepared them to receive healing in both body and spirit. How can God heal those who refuse to hope?

However, what stands out on this page is the power of Christ: Jesus was conscious that healing power had gone out from him.

Your faith has saved you. Jesus says, "it has saved" you; not, "it has healed" you. For this peace and be free of this illness."

³⁵While Jesus was still speaking, some people arrived from the official's house to inform him, "Your daughter is dead. Why trouble the Master any further?" ³⁶But Jesus ignored what they said and told the official, "Do not fear, just believe." ³⁷And he allowed no one to follow him except Peter, James and John, the brother of James.

o ³⁸When they arrived at the house, they saw a great commotion with people weeping and wailing loudly.

³⁹Jesus entered and said to them, "Why all this commotion and weeping? The child is not dead but asleep."

⁴⁰They laughed at him. But Jesus sent them outside and went with the child's father and mother and his companions into the room where the child lay. ⁴¹Taking her by the hand, he said to her, "Talitha kumi!" which means: "Little girl, get up!"

⁴²The girl got up at once and began to walk around. (She was twelve years old.) And there was astonishment, very great astonishment. ⁴³Jesus strictly ordered them not to let anyone know about it, and told them to give her something to eat.

Is he not the carpenter?

(Mt 13:53; Lk 4:16)

■ 6 ¹Leaving there, Jesus returned to his own country, and his disciples followed him. ²When the sabbath came, he began teaching in the synagogue, and most of those who heard him were astonished. They commented, "How did this come to him? What kind of wisdom has been woman had risked all and finally had seen how much God loved her.

2. Jn 7, 15

o Here Jesus comes in contact with the death of a youth who is called to live. Jairus was ruler of the synagogue, that is to say, one of those holding responsibility in the local Jewish community.

Why trouble the Master any further? We also ask God for healing but we do not dare to ask God to resurrect the dead because we consider death the final and insuperable stage of the human condition. But Jesus wants to show us that, for God, life not death is the stronger force.

People shouting and wailing. During Jesus' time, it was customary to hire professional mourners and musicians at a funeral. Today, at funerals, we also have long discourses and ceremonies to mask death because it shakes and discomforts us and shatters our apparent peace. Jesus does not allow himself to be taken in by our illusions.

The child is not dead, but asleep. She sleeps, hoping that Christ will awaken her, like those believers who somehow "sleep" awaiting the resurrection. The truly dead are those who have choked and sterilized all the good that God has sown in them. They have imprisoned themselves in their egoism and pride and have rejected the call to be sons and daughters of God. Because of this, they will remain dead eternally.

Get up! Because God calls you to life. A good part of the world's wealth is spent in prolonging the lives of old people in rich countries. It would be useless to prolong a life worn-out by sin and deception; instead we should discover the secret of new life founded on faith.

■ THE WISDOM OF JESUS

The brothers and sisters of Jesus are his relatives and acquaintances of Nazareth: see commentary on Mk 3:31.

"How did all this come to him?" Does this mean that Jesus had travelled to other countries? See the answer in the commentary on Mt 2:21.

Because he always lived among them and never demonstrated anything extraordinary, they were astonished that, in such a short time, he became famous throughout Galilee. Indeed, they did not know him. How can one live so close to another and yet be so blind to the gifts of the other?

A prophet is despised only in his own country. After living with him so long, and treating him like any other how could they then show respect and have faith in him?

Is not this the carpenter? The term the Gospel uses is craftsman. There is no further specification. Yet the first Christians of Palestine asserted that Jesus was a carpenter.

What does this wisdom mean? Many people say that because Christ was God he knew all things, but divine knowledge is nothing less than God himself. He knows all at once in an instant that never ends – this is eternity. On the other hand, humans think in ideas, and human thought is unraveled in time. That is why, from birth, Jesus had to learn to experiment and discover. Yet he had a clear awareness that he was the given to him that he performs also such miracles? ³Is he not the carpenter, the son of Mary and the brother of James and Joset and Judas and Simon... His sisters, too, are they not here among us?" So they took offense at him.

⁴And Jesus said to them, "A prophet is despised only in his own country, among his relatives and in his own family." ⁵And he could work no miracles there but only healed a few sick people by laying his hands on them. ⁶Jesus himself wondered why they would not believe.

Jesus sends out the Twelve (Mt 10:1; Lk 9:1; 10:1)

+ Jesus then walked around the villages teaching. ⁷He summoned the Twelve and began to send them out two by two, giving them authority over evil spirits. ⁸And he ordered them to take nothing for the journey except a stick; no food, no bag, no money in their belts. ⁹They were to wear sandals and were not to take an extra shirt.

¹⁰And he added, "In whatever house you are welcomed, stay until you leave the place. ¹¹If any place doesn't receive you and the people refuse to listen to you, leave after shaking the dust off your feet. It will be a testimony against them."

¹²So they set out to proclaim that this was the time to change. ¹³They drove out many demons and healed many sick people by anointing them.

John the Baptist beheaded (Mt 14:1; Lk 9:7)

o ¹⁴King Herod also heard about Jesus because his name had become well-known. Some people said, "John the Baptist has been raised from the dead and that is why miraculous powers are at work in him." ¹⁵Others thought, "He is Elijah," and others, "He is a prophet like the prophets of times past." ¹⁶But when Herod heard of Jesus, he exclaimed, "Although I had John beheaded, he has been raised from the dead!"

¹⁷For this is what had happened. Herod had ordered John arrested and Son, although he did not have the words to think or express this.

Jesus received his human learning from Mary, Joseph, and his neighbours in Nazareth. Jesus also acquired his wisdom from the Bible and the culture of his people. Yet the Father gave him his Spirit to judge as God does and to recognize God through all things. For him as well as for us, what was important was not reading or accumulating experiences but to be able to appreciate all that occurred. Jesus, inspired by the Spirit, uncovered a new awareness of the realities of life: this was Wisdom.

+ THE MISSION

See Commentary on Matthew 10:5; Lk 10:1; Mt 28:8. Jesus begins a third stage of his ministry by organizing a mission throughout the province. Before, the apostles accompanied Jesus but now he sends them ahead of him.

Jesus is an educator. He not only teaches his followers, he has them participate in his mission. His apostles must also proclaim their faith and perform healings as the Master does. By doing this, they concretize what they have discovered of the kingdom of God. The disciples should be the first ones to believe what they themselves proclaim: God makes himself present. Because of this, they must live day by day, trusting in the Father's Providence, not frightened but always conscious of God's mission and power.

Oil was used at the time as a remedy, but Jesus gives it a new meaning: more than just well-being, the healings will also be the sign of spiritual healing, the reconciliation of man with God. Jesus' concern for forming communities of believers is already present. He sends his disciples out two by two so that the message will not be from one person only, but an expression of a group united in the one mission. Jesus tells them to stay under one roof with one family so that this may be a centre radiating the faith.

o ¹⁸Herod respected John, but Herod was a prisoner of his environment and his vices. Many people believe that sexual faults are not important and have little to do with the progress of human salvation. The Bible illustrates that we cannot advance without responsible people who are capable of putting sexual energies at the service of love instead of becoming a slave to the had him bound and put in prison because of Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip. Herod had married her¹⁸ and John told him, "It is not right for you to live with your brother's wife."¹⁹ So Herodias held a grudge against John and wanted to kill him, but she could not²⁰ because Herod respected John. He knew John to be an upright and holy man and kept him safe. And he liked listening to him, although he became very disturbed whenever he heard him.

²¹Herodias had her chance on Herod's birthday, when he gave a dinner for all the senior government officials, military chiefs and leading men of Galilee. ²²On that occasion the daughter of Herodias came in and danced; and she delighted Herod and his guests. The king said to the girl, "Ask me for anything you want and I will give it to you."²³ And he went so far as to say with many oaths, "I will give you anything you ask, even half my kingdom."²⁴ She went out to consult her mother, "What shall I ask for?" The mother replied, "The head of John the Baptist."²⁵ The girl hurried to the king and made her request: "I want you to give me the head of John the Baptist, here and now, on a plate."

²⁶The king felt very sad, but he would not refuse in front of his guests because of his oaths. ²⁷So he sent one of the bodyguards with orders to bring John's head. The man went and beheaded John in prison; ²⁸then he brought the head on a plate and gave it to the girl. And the girl gave it to her mother. ²⁹When John's disciples heard about this, they came and took his body and buried it.

Jesus, shepherd and prophet

+ ³⁰The apostles returned and reported to Jesus all they had done and taught. ³¹Then he said to them, "Go off by yourselves to a remote place that you may have some rest." For there were so many people coming and going that the apostles had no time even to eat. ³²And they went away in the boat to a secluded area by themselves.

³³But people saw them leaving and many could guess where they were going. So, from all the towns they hurried there on foot, arriving ahead of them.

passions. Because of this, John the Baptist could not speak of justice without recalling the marriage vows. The messenger of the word of God had to judge Herod like any other citizen.

King Herod. This refers to Herod Antipas, son of the other Herod who reigned when Jesus was born.

People said that John the Baptist had been raised from the dead (6:14). They considered John a martyr, and believed he would rise from the dead to punish Herod. Some associated Jesus with John – Jesus performed the miracles that John had not done. Others, less informed, thought Jesus was an apparition of John.

+ The Apostles are exhausted. At the end of this journey, they need to rest and take account of their experiences. Jesus teaches them and also helps them reflect upon what they saw and did.

So many came and went. After the disciples went around through the villages of Galilee many people gathered who wanted to know who had sent them, and the crowd approached Jesus.

He had compassion on them. The Old Testament had shown the compassion of God as a Father, but now Jesus reveals this compassion in a different way. Men could not understand fully the mercy of God until the Son had come to share everything with us, making himself poor among the poor, able to feel with them instead of giving them his words and deeds of mercy from above.

This compassion of Jesus helps us understand that Christian commitment to the poor is not complete as long as the church is not deeply rooted in the lower class of society.

They were like sheep without a shepherd. These are people who have not yet found a true community. So Jesus has compassion for them. He is not concerned with those who constantly complain that they have not got enough priests or pastors. After ten years or so of being in the Church and of being committed to the Gospel, ³⁴As Jesus went ashore he saw a large crowd, and he had compassion on them for they were like sheep without a shepherd. And he started a long teaching session with them.

First miracle of the loaves

■ ³⁵It was now getting late, so his disciples came to him and said, "This is an unpopulated area and it is now late. ³⁶You should send the people away and let them go to the farms and villages around here so they can buy themselves something to eat."

³⁷Jesus replied, "You yourselves give them something to eat." They answered, "Should we go and buy two hundred silver coins' worth of bread, and give it to them?" ³⁸But Jesus said, "You have some loaves: how many? Go and see." The disciples found out and said, "There are five loaves and two fish."

³⁹Then he told them to have the people sit down together in groups on the green grass. ⁴⁰This they did in groups of hundreds and fifties. ⁴¹And Jesus took the five loaves and the two fish and, raising his eyes to heaven, he pronounced a blessing, broke the loaves and handed them to his disciples to distribute to the people. He also divided the two fish among the people.

⁴²They all ate and everyone had enough. ⁴³The disciples gathered up what was left and filled twelve baskets with broken pieces of bread and fish. ⁴⁴Five thousand men had eaten there.

Jesus walks on the water

(Mt 14:22; Jn 6:16)

+ ⁴⁵Immediately, Jesus obliged his disciples to get into the boat and go ahead of him to the other side, towards Bethsaida, while he himself sent the crowd away. ⁴⁶And having sent the people off, he went by himself to the hillside to pray.

these people should be the shepherds, the counselors, the animators and the prophets of the world around them.

He began to teach them for a long time. What did he tell them? – All that makes up the Gospel. Penetrating everyone's conscience with a prophetic gaze. Jesus showed each one where the real problem lay. Speaking like the prophets, Jesus never enclosed and isolated anyone within his personal problem: their personal progress had to be attained together with the renewal of their environment.

Jesus saw that they were burdened with difficulties but he would lift them up by giving them "signs of hope." In any situation there is something that we can do immediately to uplift ourselves; and even before any attempt of ours, God already gives us signs that he does not abandon us and that we must trust totally in him.

■ The Bible says that from the mouth of God comes bread and also the Word that we need (Deut 8:3). Jesus in the act of giving bread, demonstrates that his words are God's words. God gives bread to his people. (Ex 16; Ps 72:16; Ps 81:17; Ps 132:15; 147:14).

What comes from the mouth of God (Deut. 8:3; Sab 16:26; Mt 4:4).

In the light of the Old Testament, this narration helps us to see Jesus as the Shepherd foretold by the prophets.

The sheep without a Shepherd (Numbers 27:17; Is 40:11; Ez 34; Za 11:4-17; 12:8).

They sat in fresh pastures, (Psalm 23), and they are all satisfied. (Psalm 78:29). The crowd seated for a meal is the image of the Reign when Jesus will unite all of humanity in the fraternal banquet of God (Lk 14:18).

Raising his eyes to heaven. By this gesture, Jesus expresses his personal relationship with the Father instead of using any prayer that saints or prophets would have said on this occasion.

Jesus is the bread needed by humanity (John 6). God has set on this earth all that humanity needs for food and development, but if we do not know how to listen to the Word, we will not know how to solve the world's most urgent problem, the distribution of the riches of the earth. Faith in God's promises is the only force with which to fight against egoism and unequal privileges, and to eventually obtain food, peace, and freedom for all.

Because of this, Jesus had compassion for this crowd whose leaders had little concern for them. Without bothering about food, this crowd ⁴⁷When evening came, the boat was far out on the lake while he was alone on the land. ⁴⁸Jesus saw his disciples straining at the oars, for the wind was against them, and before daybreak he came to them walking on the lake; and he was going to pass them by.

⁴⁹When they saw him walking on the lake, they thought it was a ghost and cried out; ⁵⁰for they all saw him and were terrified. But at once he called to them, "Courage! It is I; don't be afraid." ⁵¹Then Jesus got into the boat with them and the wind died down, so that they were completely astonished. ⁵²For they had not really grasped the fact of the loaves; their minds were dull.

⁵³Having crossed the lake, they came ashore at Genesaret where they tied up the boat. ⁵⁴As soon as they got out of the boat, people recognized Jesus ⁵⁵and ran to spread the news throughout the countryside. Wherever he was they brought to him the sick lying on their mats. ⁵⁶And everywhere he went, to villages, towns or farms, they laid the sick in the marketplace and begged him to let the sick touch just the fringe of his cloak. And all who touched him were made well.

True cleanness

(Mt 15:10; Lk 6:39)

¹One day the Pharisees with some teachers of the Law who had just come from Jerusalem gathered around Jesus.

²They noticed that some of his disciples were eating their meal with unclean hands, that is, without washing them. ³Now the Pharisees, as well as the rest of the Jews, never eat without washing their hands for they observe the tradition received from their ancestors. ⁴Nor do they eat anything when they come from the market without first washing themselves. And there are many other traditions they observe, for example, the ritual washing of cups, pots and plates.

sat listening to him – while he conveyed to them the word of God which liberates people from blindness and emptiness. And in turn, being the shepherd and the True Bread of Life, he gave them food and distributed it.

+ Jesus obliged them to get into the boat. Why? John's Gospel explains this (John 6:15). Because the people, enthused by the miracle, wanted to make him a king and liberator, sent by God. Even the apostles were eager for this to happen.

Their minds were dull. Actually, these men understood the meaning of the miracle of the multiplication of the loaves: Jesus was the Shepherd long promised by God. But they interpreted it all in a political sense, expecting that God's promised liberation would be a national liberation.

♦ THE TRADITION AND TRADITIONS

No group, not even the Church, can sustain itself without traditions and customs. Yet even when they are good traditions, they are still made by humans. For example, the way the mass is celebrated, celebrations, novenas etc. All that past popes, bishops, and Christian communities have done can be changed by another pope, bishop or christian community, and because these can be changed, we understand that they are not essential in religion.

What does not change is God's teaching. Where can it be found? In the Bible and in Jesus' teachings. Yet there is a way of understanding Jesus as the apostles did. This is called the Tradition of the Apostles, and the Church, founded by the apostles, guards this tradition, that is, their spirit. Let us not confuse the traditions of Catholics with the Tradition of the Church.

However, we often make little effort to enter into the spirit and Tradition of the Church, but blindly grasp onto antiquated and bad traditions. Why are so many Christians today scandalized when the Church frees itself from these antiquated rites? Why do they hate so much more open priests and Christians who leave behind some traditional forms? Jesus gives us the reason: they grasp at these rites because they are incapable of believing. Their external religion replaces the authentic faith they do not have. They hang onto their ideas and their traditional political and cultural positions because these are the only things they have, and if they lose them, God would no longer have meaning for them.

⁵So the Pharisees and the teachers of the Law asked him, "Why do your disciples not follow the tradition of the elders, but instead eat with unclean hands?"

⁶Jesus answered, "You go no further than appearances. How well Isaiah prophesied of you when he wrote: This people honours me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. The worship they offer me is worthless, for what they teach are only man-made rules. ⁸You even put aside the commandment of God to hold fast to man-made tradition."

⁹And Jesus commented, "You have a fine way of disregarding the commandment of God in order to implant your own tradition. ¹⁰For example, Moses said: Do your duty to your father and your mother, and: Whoever curses his father or his mother is to be put to death. ¹¹But you let anyone tell his father or mother: 'I can't help you for I have kept all I possess for the Temple.' ¹²In this case, you no longer permit him to help his parents. ¹³So you nullify the word of God through the tradition you have handed on. And you do many other things like this."

+ ¹⁴Jesus then called the people to him again and told them, "Listen to me, all of you, and try to understand. ¹⁵Nothing that enters anyone from outside can make him unclean. That which comes out of him, that makes him unclean. ¹⁶Let everyone who has ears listen."

¹⁷When Jesus reached home and was away from the crowd, his disciples asked him about this saying ¹⁸and he replied, "So even you have not understood? Do you not see that whatever comes from outside cannot make a person unclean? ¹⁹Since it enters, not the heart but the stomach and is finally emptied out."

Thus Jesus said that all foods are clean.

²⁰And he went on, "What comes out of a person is what can make him unclean. ²¹for evil designs come out of the heart: immoral things, theft, murder, adultery, ²²jealousy, greed, maliciousness, deceit, indecency, slander, pride and folly. ²³All these evil things come from within and make a person unclean."

+ CLEAN AND UNCLEAN

An important practice of Judaism was to keep oneself clean: one could not participate in worship without being in a state of ritual purity. This word "purity" did not have the same meaning we attribute to it. The clean man was one who was not contaminated even inadvertently by things prohibited by Law. For example, pork and rabbit were considered unclean; they could not be eaten. A menstruating woman or a person with hemorrhoids were considered unclean for a certain number of days: no one could even touch them. A leper was considered unclean until cured. If a bug fell in oil, the oil was considered unclean, and had to be thrown out.

If contaminated even by no fault of his own, the person had to purify himself, usually with water, sometimes paying for sacrifices.

At one time, these laws were useful in encouraging a hygienic lifestyle. They also protected the faith of the Jews who lived among pagans (people who did not know God). How could they guard their faith in the one God if they had to live with other nations, befriend them, and even imitate their ways? But with so many religious practices to observe, the Jews had to live apart from those who did not share their faith and lifestyle.

Jesus does away with all these rites: nothing is unclean in all of God's creation; touching the sick, a corpse or a bloodstained object does not offend God. God is not bothered if we eat this or that. Sin is always something which comes from the heart and not something we do unintentionally.

It is true that the Bible teaches these concepts of purity and impurity, but these laws were written many centuries ago and not everything there, but he could not remain hidden.

²⁵A woman whose small daughter had an evil spirit, heard of him and came and fell at his feet. ²⁶Now this woman was a pagan, a Syrophenician by birth, and she begged him to drive the demon out of her daughter.

²⁷Jesus told her, "Let the children be fed first, for it is not right to take the children's bread and throw it to the dogs." ²⁸But she replied, "Sir, even the dogs under the table eat the crumbs from the children's bread." ²⁹Then Jesus said to her, "You may go your way; because of such a reply the demon has gone out of your daughter." ³⁰And when the woman went home, she found her child lying in bed and the demon gone.

Healing of a deaf and dumb man

■ ³¹Jesus returned from the neighbourhood of Tyre and Sidon and went to Lake Galilee passing through the region of the Decapolis country. ³²There a deaf man who also had a speech impediment was brought to him. They asked Jesus to lay his hands upon him.

³³Jesus took him aside by himself, away from the crowd, put his fingers into the man's ears and touched his tongue with spittle. ³⁴Then, looking up to heaven, he groaned and said to him, "Ephpheta," that is, "Be opened."

³⁵And his ears were opened, his tongue was loosened, and he began to speak clearly. ³⁶Jesus ordered them the Bible says is valid for all times. Through the teachings of the Bible, God educated his nation but the laws he gave them from the beginning, when they were barbaric and uneducated, are no longer what is necessary for a community with religious foundation.

Several things in the Bible seem contradictory, because they arose in different periods and under different circumstances. Because of this, without the assistance of the Church, we are unable to understand the Bible in its true sense.

o THE PAGANS

This is when the authorities come into conflict with Jesus. He must depart and wander along the border of Galilee where he is less watched and can easily flee. This incident occurs in Tyre, a province occupied by the Syrians and Phoenicians who were pagans.

We are used to calling people who have not received God's message, pagans. In their own way they believe in God, but not because they have been taught by God himself. During Jesus' time, only Jews knew of the word of God, all the rest were pagans.

Although Jesus came to save all, his Father desired that he not go beyond his own country. Nevertheless on certain occasions, he encountered pagans, and more than once, he admired their simplicity and faith. God desires to save all but he does not lead all on the same path. Some believe and know God; others, through no fault of their own, do not have the gift of faith but they all live and work together and together they build a society more worthy of humankind; in the end, together they will be saved.

During the centuries before Christ, God communicated only with the Jews and he let other nations grope for him. This was part of God's wise and merciful plan, but because of this special treatment, the Jews began to think that the pagans were unworthy in the eyes of God: the Jews were the sons or children and the pagans were looked down upon as no more than dogs.

Jesus answers the afflicted woman repeating this well-known scornful saying of the Jews. He said this to test this woman's faith: in effect, would she insist when it appeared that even God would reject her?

■ They asked him to lay hands on him. This was a way of invoking divine power but Jesus did not have to ask. His gesture was a way of teaching that he had within himself, within his human person, all the health and welfare that we need and he communicated this to the sick one.

Jesus gave a groan (see 8:12). Why? Because the man before him is an impressive symbol of those who have eyes and ears but neither see nor hear. The people bring him the deaf and mute, and ask him to heal him, but they themselves remain deaf.

Jesus asked them not to tell anyone about this (v. 31). How far Jesus is from the organizers of a "Miracle Crusade!" An unexpected miracle may help us discover the loving presence of God, but as soon as we begin to wait for them, we turn away from the Gospel. The Devil knows this and so he tempted Jesus in the desert (Mt 4:6): If you want the people to believe, do miracles. I can help you and, besides, I know some political groups very interested in spreading: such a religion, who are used to paying for advertising and for preachers!

not to tell anyone, but the more he insisted on this, the more they proclaimed it. ³⁷The people were completely astonished and said, "He has done all things well; he makes the deaf hear and the dumb speak."

Second miracle of the loaves

(Mt 15:32)

8 ¹Soon afterwards Jesus was in the midst of another large crowd who obviously had nothing to eat. So he called his disciples and said to them. ²"I feel compassion for these people because they have been with me for three days and now have nothing to eat. ³If I send them to their homes hungry, they will faint on the way because some of them have come a long way."

⁴His disciples replied, "Where in a deserted place like this could we get enough bread to feed these people?"

⁵He asked them, "How many loaves do you have?" And they answered, "Seven."

⁶Then he ordered the crowd to sit down on the ground. Taking the seven loaves and giving thanks, he broke them and handed them to his disciples to distribute. And they distributed them among the people. ⁷They also had some small fish, so Jesus said a blessing and asked that these be shared as well.

⁸The people ate and were satisfied. The broken pieces were collected, seven wicker baskets full of leftovers. ⁹Now there had been about four thousand people. Jesus sent them away ¹⁰and immediately got into the boat with his disciples and went to the region of Dalmanutha.

Why do they demand a sign?

(Mt 16:1; Lk 12:54)

+ ¹¹The Pharisees came and started to argue with Jesus. Hoping to o Some feel that the second account of the multiplication of loaves is only a repetition of the first account. Actually, it is different and has a different meaning. The first time, between Tiberias and Capernaum (that is, right at the centre of Jesus' work in Galilee) the people, more numerous and more urgent, approach Jesus to make him their liberator (John 6).

--------------	-------------	---

Jesus refuses but, later that afternoon, he multiplies the loaves – a clear sign that he is the Messiah foretold by the Prophets. The next day, Jesus in his turn, demands that they take him for what he is, and this is what produces the breakup (John 6:60).

Later, Jesus journeys to the boundaries of Galilee where much of the population are pagan. They also want to hear Jesus. So then, on the other side of the shore, the eastern part, Jesus offers them bread as a farewell meal, after they had followed him for two days through the desert land.

The two accounts of the multiplication of loaves differ not only in the number of loaves or the number of participants. Various details indicate that the first miracle took place among Jews and the second among Greeks, that is, aliens to the Jewish faith. For example, the baskets mentioned in Mk 6:42 refer to the stiff, osier basket of the Jews, and the wicker basket (8:8) to the Greek's folding bag.

Twice, then Jesus multiplies the loaves: this is one of his most impressive miracles. Not every extraordinary act is a miracle, (as people used to say) but only those that require God's intervention. These listeners of Jesus were given bread when there was absolutely no food at hand.

Note that throughout the history of the Church and up to the present time there have been several accounts of multiplication of loaves for those who gave all that they had.

+ See commentary on Mt 16:1

Jesus tells his apostles to beware of the Pharisee's spirit (of becoming like the Pharisees) but they don't listen, they are more concerned about the food.

THE PHARISEES

There are people who see nothing apart from their books and their own ideas. The Pharisees are like that, only concerned with the Law of God.

They do not see the fruits of Jesus' preaching. They do not see the people who are comforted and begin a better way of life. They do not see those who discover hope and faith. They do not see how God is saving the poor.

No sign will be given to this people. Jesus respects our freedom and does not want to force us if we do not care to acknowledge the truth.

Throughout the Gospel, Jesus confronts the Pharisees. They were a respected and powerful association, the most conspicuous within the embarrass him, they asked for some heavenly sign. ¹²Jesus gave a deep sigh and said, "Why do the people of this present time ask for a sign? Truly, I say to you, no sign shall be given to this people." ¹³Then he left them, got into the boat again and went to the other side of the lake.

¹⁴The disciples had forgotten to bring more bread and had only one loaf with them in the boat. ¹⁵Then Jesus warned them, "Keep your eyes open and beware of the yeast of the Pharisees and the yeast of Herod." ¹⁶And they said to one another, "He saw that we have no bread."

¹⁷Aware of this, Jesus asked them, "Why are you talking about the loaves you are short of? Do you not see or understand? Are your minds closed? ¹⁸Have you eyes that don't see and ears that don't hear? And do you not remember ¹⁹when I broke the five loaves among five thousand? How many baskets full of leftovers did you collect?" They answered, "Twelve."

²⁰"And having seven loaves for those four thousand, how many wicker baskets of leftovers did you collect?" They answered, "Seven." ²¹Then Jesus said to them, "Do you still not understand?"

Cure of the blind man at Bethsaida

²²When they came to Bethsaida Jesus was asked to touch a blind man who was brought to him. ²³He took the blind man by the hand and led him outside the village. When he had put spittle on his eyes and laid his hands upon him, he asked, "Can you see anything?" ²⁴The man, who was beginning to see, replied, "I see people; they look like trees, but they move around." ²⁵Then Jesus laid his hands on his eyes again and the man could see perfectly. His sight was restored so that he could see everything clearly.

²⁶Jesus sent him home saying, "Do not return to the village."

Jewish society. Nevertheless they oppose Jesus steadfastly – If Jesus came in our present time, would he not likewise offend some of the most powerful religious associations?

Jesus says: do not trust the leaven of the Pharisees, meaning their teaching (Mt 16:12). Jesus feared that his disciples, because of being common people, would let themselves be impressed by the knowledge and fame of the Pharisees and he warned them that these people built the religion on a mistaken basis.

The Pharisees were religious in a way that has always existed and still exists. Imagine a serious person who becomes aware that God's service is the most important thing. This person enjoys a good social status or a fine education; so he decides to work for God, especially by leading others, sinners, less capable or less instructed.

The Pharisee willingly serves God, but God, in turn, must acknowledge his services and reward him. The Pharisee wants to be without debt to God and carefully keeps himself from falling into sin because he dislikes being in need of God's pardon.

This is where things begin to go wrong. For no one can meet God, not even the rich and well-instructed, unless they discover their own misery and weakness. That is where we experience God's mercy and begin loving him wholeheartedly, meekly, feeling at one with the poorest and with sinners.

The Pharisees know everything about God except the true face of God and the happiness resulting from forgiveness. What is worse, they cannot see what they need. They always have reasons for not recognizing God's work in the midst of the poor, or, if they recognize it, they look down on it with pity.

The Pharisee avoids intimacy for fear that friends will discover his true sentiments. He is aware of having the same weaknesses as other people, in spite of being very observant, but he has no means of being freed because he is not humble enough to ask for God's help. Thus there is no other way for him apart from hiding his faults behind a flawless, exterior conduct and so he becomes a hypocrite.

Beware of the yeast, both of the Pharisees and of Herod, says Jesus.

o When a man, blind from birth, regains his sight, it takes time for him to gradually focus on objects and to understand what his new eyes see. That is why Jesus again laid his hands on the blind man's eyes.

The same is true in the spiritual realm. Jesus does not let us see everything at once, but

Peter's profession of faith

(Mt 16:13; Lk 9:18; Jn 6:69)

■²⁷ Jesus set out with his disciples for the villages around Caesarea Philippi; and on the way he asked them, "Who do people say I am?"²⁸ And they told him, "Some say you are John the Baptist; others say you are Elijah or one of the prophets."

Then Jesus asked them, ²⁹"But you, who do you say I am?" Peter answered, "You are the Messiah."³⁰ And he ordered them not to tell anyone about him.

³¹ Jesus then began to teach them that the Son of Man had to suffer many things and be rejected by the elders, the chief priests and the teachers of the Law. He would be killed and after three days rise again.³² Jesus said all this quite openly, so that Peter took him aside and began to rebuke him.³³ But Jesus turning around, saw his disciples very close. So he rebuked

Peter saying, "Get behind me Satan! Your thoughts are not from God, but from man."

Take up your cross

+³⁴ Then Jesus called the people and his disciples and said, "If you want to follow me, deny yourself, take up your cross and follow me.³⁵ For if you choose to save your life, you will lose it; and if you lose your life for my sake and for the sake of the Gospel, you will save it.

³⁶ What do you win by gaining the whole world but destroying yourself?³⁷ There is nothing you can give to recover your life.³⁸ I tell you: If anyone is ashamed of me and of my words among this adulterous and sinful people, the Son of Man will also be ashamed of him when he comes in the Glory of his Father with the holy angels."

conversion is realized bit by bit.

Don't even go into the village. If so, all the people would go looking for Jesus to see him and touch him and clamour for a miracle. Jesus instead, came for an authentic encounter with responsible people.

■ CHRIST - THE SON OF MAN

Here the Gospel already foretells the tragic end. For the first time, the apostles take account of who their Master is.

You are the Christ. Christ is a Greek word which means the Messiah in Hebrew. They both mean: the anointed or consecrated one. This term designated the long-awaited Saviour. The apostles discover that Jesus is the Christ, the Liberator, but he teaches them that the Son of Man has to suffer many things.

Why does Jesus call himself the Son of Man? For two reasons: First, because one page in the Bible speaks of the Son of Man who gloriously comes from God to judge all people and to rule all the nations (Daniel 7:13). And second, because Jesus is the perfect Man who bears the destiny of humanity.

Jesus had to suffer, because this is the fate of sinners. He had to suffer and be rejected by the authorities because this is the destiny of those who proclaim the truth to us. He had to freely go to his death because self-sacrifice is the only means for the salvation of the world.

+ It is necessary to lose oneself:

- To lose oneself like Abraham who, in his old age, went to strange lands.
- To lose oneself like Moses who agreed to be the leader of an irresponsible people.
- To lose oneself like Mary who entered a path wherein nobody could understand or help her.
- To rid oneself of this provisional existence so as to be reborn from God, like Ignatius the martyr. Condemned to be eaten by lions, he said, "I am the wheat of God: may I be ground by the teeth of wild animals to be converted into the pure bread of Christ. My passions are crucified in me; there is no carnal fire that can burn me; a fountain has sprouted in me that murmurs and speaks from within: come to the Father."

Take up your cross. Jesus tells us that to follow him is to follow the same path that took him to the cross. To reach maturity it is necessary to renounce our life; in other words, we must risk ourselves for something noble instead looking for a future; we must find a life style that will help us to excel in the way of love; and we must accept that our life may be a failure according to others' way of thinking (Lk 17:33; Jn 13:23-25).

Taking up our cross, by accepting freely the sacrifices that the Father sends each day, we re-

The transfiguration of Jesus

(Mt 17:1; Lk 9:28)

9 ¹And he went on to say, "Truly I tell you, there are some here who will not die before they see the kingdom of God coming with power."

²Six days later, Jesus took with him Peter and James and John, and led them up on a high mountain. There his appearance was changed before their eyes. ³Even his clothes shone, becoming as white as no bleach of this world could make them. ⁴Elijah and Moses appeared to them; the two were talking with Jesus.

⁵Then Peter spoke and said to Jesus, "Master, it is good that we are here; let us make three tents, one for you, one for Moses and one for Elijah." ⁶For he did not know what to say; they were overcome with awe. ⁷But a cloud formed, covering them in a shadow, and from the cloud came this word, "This is my Son, the Beloved; listen to him." ⁸And suddenly, as they looked around, they no longer saw anyone except Jesus with them.

⁹As they came down the mountain, he ordered them to tell no one what they had seen, until the Son of Man be risen from the dead. ¹⁰So they kept the word to themselves, though they discussed with one another what 'to rise from the dead' could mean.

The question about Elijah

¹¹Finally they asked him, "Aren't the teachers of the Law right in saying that Elijah must come first?" ¹²Jesus ceive from now on something more marvellous than what we have sacrificed: inner freedom and more profound happiness (Mk 10:30).

Think of what Jesus says: from me, for me, and not: from God, for God. For God has come in the person of Jesus to knock on our door and to propose to us very specific commitments.

If anyone is ashamed of me and of my words. The believer who follows the words of Christ without fear of what they may ask of him, is attacked without mercy by many who call themselves Christians. For we live in the midst of an adulterous people, in other words, people who without verbally denying God, in fact, serve other gods (Mt 16:24; Jn 8:42).

♦ The Transfiguration of Jesus is the centre of Mark's Gospel.

It is not by chance that Jesus brings them apart and invites them to go up the mountain with him, just like Moses who went up Mount Sinai to encounter the Glory of God. Certain conditions of solitude dispose man to receive God's communications (Mt 4:8; 28:16).

Who is Jesus? Peter has already answered this question, but now it is the Father who gives the answer. Jesus is the Beloved Son; the Eternal Love of the Father can only be satisfied by the Son who shares his own Divinity. Jesus is the Chosen One, in other words, the Saviour announced by the prophets (Is 42:1; Lk 3:21).

Moses and Elijah, the two most important persons in the Bible, come to Jesus. God had many times, and in many ways, spoken through the prophets (Heb 1:1), but now he gives all that he can give us by sending his own Son: Listen to him (see Deut 18:19), as the Prophet who gathers in himself all the prophets.

A cloud covered them with its shadow. The cloud mentioned here is that which in several episodes of the Bible both indicates and hides: the mysterious presence of God (Ex 19 & 1 Ks 8:10).

When Jesus worked miracles for the sick, and even over the forces of nature, he showed that the present order of the world is not definitive. Now the curtains are partially opened: would that the apostles understood that the Son of Man, as Jesus calls himself, is closer to his Resurrection. In a little while now his fellow men will hang him on a cross. In a little while too the Father will give him the Glory that awaits him. The shining cloud, the dazzling white clothes are external signs that let us know something of the mystery of Jesus: the day he rises from among the dead, all of his humanity will be transformed and extended by divine Energies, so that he may fill everything in everyone.

This is the Father's answer to the apostles who expected a kingdom of God, a golden age, a world of justice brought down from heaven to earth. He does not prepare a paradise on earth for us, but he offers us the chance of suffering with his Son so as to be transformed by him from the present life in a very mysterious way.

In the transfiguration the apostles got a glimpse of Jesus' inner life and glory. Somehow, contemplation of the risen Christ became a new experience of God. This was so intense that they answered them, "Of course, Elijah will come first so that everything may be as it should be... But, why do the Scriptures say that the Son of Man must suffer many things and be despised? ¹¹I tell you that Elijah has already come and they have treated him as they pleased, as the Scriptures say about him."

The boy with an evil spirit

o ¹⁴When they came to the place where they had left the disciples, they saw many people around and some teachers of the Law arguing with them. ¹⁵When the people saw Jesus, they were surprised and ran to greet him.

¹⁶He asked, "What are you arguing with them about?" A man answered him from the crowd, ¹⁷"Master, I brought my son to you for he has a dumb spirit. ¹⁸Whenever the spirit seizes him, it throws him down and he foams at the mouth, grinds his teeth and becomes stiff all over. I asked your disciples to drive the spirit out, but they could not."

¹⁹Jesus replied, "You faithless people. How long must I be with you? How long must I put up with you? Bring him to me." ²⁰And they brought the boy to him.

As soon as the spirit saw Jesus, it shook and convulsed the boy who fell on the ground and began rolling about, foaming at the mouth. ²¹Then Jesus asked the father, "How long has this been happening to him?" He replied, "From childhood. ²²And it has often thrown him into the fire and into the water to destroy him. If you can do anything, have pity on us and help us."

²³Jesus said to him, "Why do you say: 'If you can?' All things are possible for one who believes." ²⁴Immediately the father of the boy cried out, "I do believe, but help the little faith I have."

12. Is 52, 14

wished to stay there, just with Jesus, forgetting all the rest; they had discovered that the Lord was able to fill their lives.

+ On going down the mountain, the apostles feel uneasy. "Why did Moses and Elijah speak of the imminent death of Jesus?" They cling to their illusions finding support in the Bible which said that Elijah had to return to earth before the coming of the Messiah, so that he should not encounter any opposition (Mal 3:1 & 4:22).

But Jesus asserts again what he had said many times: he has to be rejected. Not all that is written in the Bible is to be understood literally. Elijah is not to return personally from heaven, but instead, John the Baptist has already come as a new Elijah (Lk 1:16).

o Everything is possible for one who believes. Everything is possible for God, but usually miracles are answers from the Father to those who trust in him.

Why couldn't we drive out the spirit? The apostles wonder: Did Jesus not give them power over the demons? But they are not aware of their lack of faith and easily forget how far they are from their Master. To them are directed the sharp words of Jesus: You faithless people! How many people think they are great believers when in fact their faith has still not moved anything!

Only prayer can drive this kind out. Possibly various people mentioned in the Gospels as being possessed were just mentally sick and could be cured by a magnetic force, by the laying on of hands (Mk 6:5). But not this lad. Sometimes we find ourselves like Jesus close to the power of evil, and prayer is needed to overcome it.

In the Gospel of Mark we find only four references to prayer and these in very few words. It is because prayer was not a novelty for the Jews. It was enough for them to open the Bible and find the Psalms, those marvellous prayers.

But what is prayer? It is to direct our spirit to God. There are thousands of ways of praying, of maintaining our spirit oriented toward God, striving towards him and listening to him: praying the Psalms and other prayers of the church, meditating on the rosary, singing, Bible reading ... But the end of all these prayers is that the Lord may give us the spirit of prayer, that we may be able to communicate with God in the depth of our spirit, even while working and giving our mind to our task.

Jesus shows us in these pages the way to expel the demon, because the evil spirit will multiply his obstacles to discourage us, as soon as he knows that we have decided to follow Christ (Mt 12:43; 13:19).

²⁵ Jesus saw that the crowd was increasing rapidly, so he ordered the evil spirit, "Dumb and deaf spirit, I command you: Leave the boy and never enter him again." ²⁶ The evil spirit shook and convulsed the boy and with a terrible shriek came out. The boy lay like a corpse and people said, "He is dead." ²⁷ But Jesus took him by the hand and lifted him and he stood up.

²⁸ After Jesus had gone indoors, his disciples asked him privately, "Why couldn't we drive out the spirit?" ²⁹ And he answered, "Only prayer can drive out this kind, nothing else."

Jesus again speaks of his passion (Mt 17:22; Lk 9:43)

+ ³⁰ After leaving that place, they made their way through Galilee; but Jesus did not want people to know where he was ³¹ because he was teaching his disciples. And he told them, "The Son of Man will be delivered into the hands of men. They will kill him, but three days after he has been killed, he will rise." ³² The disciples, however, did not understand these words and they were afraid to ask him what he meant.

Who is the greatest?

■ ³³ They came to Capernaum and once inside the house, Jesus asked them, "What were you discussing on the way?" ³⁴ But they did not answer because they had been arguing about who was the greatest.

o ³⁵ Then he sat down, called the Twelve and said to them, "If anyone wants to be first, he must be the very last and make himself the servant of all." ³⁶ Then he took a little child, set him in the midst of them, and putting his arms around him said to them ³⁷ "Whoever welcomes a child such as this in my name, welcomes me; and whoever welcomes me, welcomes not me but the One who sent me."

+ Time is running out for Jesus. He now dedicates himself chiefly to preparing the group of apostles who will have the tremendous responsibility of continuing his work. They did not understand about his death and resurrection: these things cannot be understood until they have happened. They prefer not to question or know; thus they leave Jesus very isolated.

■ SERVANTS

The apostles return to Capharnaum, the centre of their missionary expeditions, and they are most probably in the house of Simon Peter.

They have preached the kingdom of God, have performed miraculous cures, and have also expelled the demons. But they still lack the most important thing of all: to be humble.

We also follow Christ, we make sacrifices for him, we look like good Christians, and God performs through us some miracles great or small ... Can we compare ourselves with our neighbour? Do we have the right to impose ourselves when others prefer the services of another person? Should we consider ourselves superior to those who do not reach our level?

The last sentence of Jesus is as important as the first: He who receives a child like this in my name ... This for us is the basis of the dignity of the human person dignified by Christ.

o THE DIGNITY OF THE HUMAN PERSON

God does not wait for us to be baptized before he recognizes his Son in us. He created us "in Christ." This means that he created each of us so that we bear the likeness of his Son: see what Paul says in Ephesians.

But, of course, it is something much greater when God calls us to believe and chooses us to share in the mission and life of his Church.

The Church has always taught the eminent dignity of the human person and, in the end, convinced the world. More than anyone else, the martyrs taught us the superior value of the human person over any kind of interest or collective bonds. But it is impossible to separate this dignity of the human person from her relationship with the Father. Those who do not share in this belief cannot easily explain their commitment to human rights.

The greatest gift to man is not that he can think and love, but that he can say to God: "You are my Father," and that God looks at us thinking, "You are my son/daughter."

+ ³⁸ John said to him, "Master, we saw a man who drove out demons by calling upon your name, and we tried to stop him because he was not following us." ³⁹ Jesus answered, "Do not forbid him, for no one who performs a miracle in my name can soon after speak evil of me." ⁴⁰ For whoever is not against us if for us.

"If anyone gives you a drink of water because you belong to Christ and bear his name, truly, I say to you, he will not go without reward.

If your eye causes you to sin

(Mt 18:6; 5:13; Lk 17:1)

⁴³ If your hand makes you fall into sin, cut it off! It is better for you to enter life without a hand than with two hands to go to hell, to the fire that never goes out. ⁴⁵ And if your foot makes you fall into sin, cut it off! It is better for you to enter life without a foot than with both feet to be thrown into hell. ⁴⁷ And if your eye makes you fall into sin, tear it out! It is better for you to enter the kingdom of God with one eye than, keeping both eyes, to be thrown into hell ⁴⁸ where the worms that eat them never die, and the fire never goes out. ⁴⁹ The very fire will preserve them.

⁵⁰ Salt is a good thing; but if it loses its saltiness, how can you make it salty again? Have salt in yourselves and be at peace with one another."

+ SEPARATE CHURCHES

While Jesus prepares his apostles, whom he wants to leave in charge of his Church, others preach the Gospel and expel demons. In the same way, nowadays, outside the Catholic Church, Church of the apostles, others of diverse Christian denominations do apostolic work.

This evangelization outside the Church, sometimes against the Church, has the positive aspect of posing a challenge to the Church. If others evangelize, this may be because many people are not reached by the evangelization of the Church, and God himself helps them to do the work we do not do. If they form separate churches and the people come to them, then it may be due to the fact that the Catholic church needs to reform its ways: because numerous Catholics do not take the Gospel seriously, because parishioners have not been accustomed to take initiatives, leaving the priests and nuns to tell it all, because ... If through the efforts of other Churches the poor abandon their vices and discover what Christian community can be, this is something positive.

In saying this we do not forget the many riches of Christian tradition which have often been lost by those who left the Church, especially the certitude that everything human has to be redeemed and saved, and the joyful and humble way of believing and doing the will of the Father of which Mary is the symbol.

Several things seem to us out of place in these churches: the miracle used as an instrument of propaganda, the pressures on the sick, the threatening with the punishments of God ... Each one chooses the biblical texts that suit his own purpose, and finally many enclose themselves in their cults, far from the "world," making ecumenism impossible, that is the dialogue and common research with other Christians.

We must believe that God works somehow through the rival churches. We can regret that each one sets up the church that he likes. So he disobeys the will of Christ who built his Church to be only one, and disobeys the will of the Father who, in laying the foundation stones, that are the apostles of Jesus, founded in him, willed to be and to remain the only owner of his Church.

But there is no room for envy or hatred: who could harm us if we do the work of God?

■ See commentary on Mt 18:6.

To be thrown into Gehenna, says Jesus (v. 45). This word was used to designate hell.

To enter life ... to enter the kingdom; this is one and the same thing. The kingdom of God is not a place where God would put us; it is a life that invades us; it is a person's meeting with herself, the total realization of a person's potential; the perfect union with God through which the sons and daughters are transformed into the likeness of the Father.

Have salt in yourselves (50). This concludes the speech after the discussion of the apostles (9:34). Of course we should make ourselves servants of others (9:35). But that does not mean that we should be oppressed persons. The salt signifies the creativity and the talents of each

Divorce

(Mt 19:1; 5: 31; Lk 16:18)

◆10 ¹Jesus then left that place and went to the province of Judea, beyond the Jordan River. Once more crowds gathered around him and once more he taught them, as he always did. ²Some Pharisees also came and, in order to test him, asked, "Is it right for a husband to divorce his wife?" ³He replied, "What law did Moses give you?" ⁴They answered, "Moses allowed us to write a certificate of dismissal in order to divorce."

⁵Then Jesus said to them, "Moses wrote this law for you, because you are stubborn. ⁶But in the beginning of creation God made them male and female, ⁷and because of this, man has to leave father and mother and be joined to his wife, ⁸*and the two shall become one body.* So they are no longer two but one body. ⁹Therefore let no one separate what God has joined."

¹⁰When they were indoors at home, the disciples again asked him about this ¹¹and he told them, "Whoever divorces his wife and marries another commits adultery against his wife, ¹²and the woman who divorces her husband and marries another also commits adultery."

Let the children come to me

(Mt 19:13; Lk 18)

+ ¹³People were bringing their little children to him that he might touch them, and the disciples scolded them for this.

¹⁴When Jesus noticed it, he was very angry and said, "Let the children come to me and don't stop them, for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. ¹⁵Truly, I say to you, whoever does not receive the kingdom of God like a child will not enter it." ¹⁶Then he took the children in his arms and laying his hands on them, blessed them.

4. Mt 24, 1 6. Gen 1, 27; 2, 23 11. Mt 5, 32; Lk 16, 18; 1 Cor 7, 10

one. Let us be persons fully alive, even if that includes quarrelling, but always concerned about maintaining fraternal dealing and mutual respect.

◆ MATRIMONY (see notes on Mt 18:6).

The Bible clearly states God's plan regarding the division of the sexes in humankind. He made them man and woman, in other words, they are incomplete beings who need to unite with one another to constitute one human unit. God made them equal and wanted to unite them, through ties stronger than those existing between parents and children (Gen 1:26 & 2:24).

But, in fact, human beings have not respected the plan of God and this is because of two reasons. First, the immense majority of men, being stronger than women, have acted as owners of their wives. For women, adultery has been a crime, but the men felt proud to have many women. On the other hand, people do not know how to love according to the way of God, because they love without God, because they love without giving themselves totally, and they love only for a time. For God though, love and fidelity always go together. God is faithful to those whom he loves. He proved this when man, his creature, got lost. His faithfulness led him to become the Redeemer of all.

Love and fidelity are the law of matrimony for husband and wife. There is no other way. The words of Jesus are straightforward and the difficulties presented to him by his disciples, in order to justify divorce, do not make him change his stand. What if one of the spouses is unfaithful to the other? In that case, neither of them can consider himself relieved of all commitment. This is how the Church sees it, though it must show understanding and compassion for the victim of infidelity.

They are no longer two. The text of Genesis says: they shall be one body (2:24), and this could be understood as an ideal that spouses try to fulfill. But Jesus says: they are no longer two, but one body; thus their conjugal union binds them with an indestructible link.

Let no one separate. Here Jesus does not directly condemn the divorced (for he knows there are many excuses). But he denies authority to those who try to calm the conscience of the divorcees, as if God did not demand anything.

+ Jesus, despite having no children of his own, opens to everyone the richness of his heart. He marvels at the mystery of a life that begins full of hope, and he discovers the likeness of the Father in every unknown child. How could Jesus, who asks us to have hope, forget that the children are also our hope?

Whoever does not receive the kingdom of Jesus and the rich man

(Mt 19:16; Lk 18:18)

o ¹⁷ Just as Jesus was setting out on his journey again, a man ran up, knelt before him and asked, "Good Master, what must I do to receive eternal life?"

¹⁸ Jesus answered, "Why do you call me good? No one is good but God alone. ¹⁹ You know the commandments: Do not kill, do not commit adultery, do not steal, do not bear false witness, do not cheat, honor your father and mother." ²⁰ The man replied, "I have obeyed all these commandments since my childhood."

²¹ Then Jesus looked steadily at him and loved him and he said, "For you, one thing is lacking. Go, sell what you have and give the money to the poor, and you will have riches in heaven. Then come and follow me."

²² On hearing these words, his face fell and he went away sorrowful for he was a man of great wealth.

How hard for the rich to discover the kingdom!

■ ²³ Jesus looked around and said to his disciples, "How hard it is for those who have riches to enter the kingdom of God!" ²⁴ The disciples were shocked at these words, but Jesus insisted, "Children, how hard it is to enter the kingdom of God! ²⁵ It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God."

²⁶ They were more astonished than ever and wondered, "Who can be saved?" ²⁷ Jesus looked steadily at them and said, "For man it is impossible, but not for God; all things are possible with God."

19. Ex 20, 12

21. Mt 6, 20; Lk 12, 33

23. Mk 4, 19

God as a child. We must be like children in order to enter the kingdom of God. We must forget our wisdom and self-sufficiency, and the bitterness of past experience in order to receive God's gifts and words in wonder and simplicity.

o Jesus' influence was due not so much to the novelty of his teachings as to the mysterious attraction that his person radiated. Many just and religious people discovered suddenly what it meant to be perfect.

He who comes to Jesus is a young man, according to Matthew (19:9). Luke calls him an important man (18:18).

Jesus with deliberation asks him: Why do you call me good? Do you not see that you are thirsty for God and that you will find him if you live with me?

This man asks Jesus the way that leads to eternal life; but Jesus does not have any new commandment to teach. In the Old Testament everything had been said that a person has to do and how we can win eternal life by observing the commandments of Justice and compassion. Now Jesus proposes to him a new way and a new experience of liberty, through becoming his follower and imitator.

Sell all you have. Happiness does not consist in leaving all one has, but in being free of it all in order to submit oneself to Christ.

■ Jesus does not say that the rich person will not be saved, but that he will not enter the kingdom of God, which consists in sharing from now on the uncertainties, happiness and liberty of Christ.

In the Old Testament, wealth was never condemned provided that it was shared. Moreover, it was considered as a sign that a person knew how to direct his life well and that God had blessed him. While a person is not liberated from urgent material conditions, it is difficult for him to avoid living in a state of passivity. But Jesus proposes giving up all and following him as a condition for entering the Kingdom, that is to experience the presence of God as Father in our present life.

Who are the rich ones? Those who have money or those who do not take the risk of sharing what they have? Of course we can speak at length about who is really rich, and who is a little less than rich, and about the "rich in spirit" ... (For everyone the rich are only those who possess more than he himself does.) But here Jesus is not condemning some evil ones; he does not distinguish between good and bad rich. Jesus speaks of the rich in the common sense of this word (those who have riches) and asserts that their situation prevents them from experiencing the kingdom of God from inside. In speaking thus, Jesus discredits those who would want to bless the rich provided they are "spiritually poor."

Riches and the mentality they bring make people spiritually blind. They lead to confusing true and false values, beginning with the knowledge of God. For only by giving up everything

The reward for those who follow Jesus (Mt 19:27; Lk 18:26)

◆²⁸ Peter spoke up and said, "We have given up everything to follow you." ²⁹ Jesus answered, "Truly, whoever has left house or brothers or sisters, or father or mother, or children, or lands for my sake and for the Gospel, ³⁰ will not lose his reward. I say to you: he will receive a hundred times as many houses, brothers, sisters, mothers, children, and lands in the present time – and persecutions as well! And in the world to come he will receive eternal life. ³¹ Do pay attention: Many who now are first will be last, and the last, first."

³² They were on the road going up to Jerusalem, and Jesus was walking ahead. The Twelve were worried and anxious and those who followed were afraid. Once more Jesus took the Twelve aside to tell them what was to happen to him, ³³ "You see we are going up to Jerusalem, and the Son of Man will be given over to the chief priests and the teachers of the Law. They will condemn him to death and hand him over to the foreigners ³⁴ who will make fun of him, spit on him, scourge him and finally kill him; but three days later he will rise."

James and John ask for the first places (Mt 20:20; Lk 22:24)

+ ³⁵ James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came to Jesus and said to him: "Master, we want you to grant us what we are going to ask of you." ³⁶ And he said, "What do you want me to do for you?" ³⁷ They answered, "Grant us to sit one at your right and one at your left when you come into your Glory."

³⁸ But Jesus said to them, "You don't know what you are asking. Can you drink the cup that I drink or be baptized in the way I am baptized?"

31. Mt 20, 16; Lk 13, 30
39. Acts 12, 2; Lk 12, 50

32. Jn 11, 7; 11, 16

36. 10, 51

38. 14, 36; Ps 75, 9; Lk 51, 17

can we fulfill our vocation as sons of God (as Jesus did). Moreover rich people usually do not see the needs of others and, still less, their own social duties.

All things are possible to God. The question, "Who can be saved?" gives Jesus the opportunity to affirm once more that no one is saved by his own merits. God saves all, including the rich, by taking away all the benefits and false security provided by their wealth. It is better still if they themselves take the initiative to get rid of their wealth.

◆ Whoever has left house ... Jesus speaks not only of the reward in the next life. In the present world, too, one who sacrifices for the Kingdom will find friendship, happiness and human fulfillment: many things he never expected.

+ Jesus feels full of courage and confidence, as he himself walks ahead of them to Jerusalem, where his punishment awaits him. Prompted by James' and John's request, he tries to convince his followers that success in his Kingdom does not consist in prestige and power, but in following the ways of Jesus, their leader.

THE LEADERS – TO SERVE

What makes a leader? How should a leader be? How do leaders act, the head of a team, of a family? The heads of State smile at crowds and embrace a child who renders them homage, but who serves and who is to be served? Jesus has come to serve and his service to humanity will be his voluntary death: "He made himself obedient; took the condition of a slave and died on the cross" (Phil 2,9).

To "drink the cup" and "to be baptized" are figurative ways of describing the sufferings and death of Jesus.

In connection with this topic, we cite a short poem of Lao-Tseu, a wise old Chinese:

"What have the river and sea done to be kings of the hundred valleys? They put themselves below them and that is why they reign in the hundred valleys.

If the saint wants to be at the top of his people first he has to learn how to talk with humility.

If he wants to lead his people, he should be last.

That is how the saint is at the top of his people and he doesn't make them suffer. Willingly they place him at the top and do not get tired of him.

Since he doesn't compete with anybody nobody can compete with him."

³⁹They answered, "We can." And Jesus told them, "The cup that I drink you will drink, and you will be baptized in the way I am baptized." ⁴⁰But to sit at my right or at my left is not mine to grant. It has been prepared for others."

⁴¹On hearing this, the other ten were angry with James and John; ⁴²Jesus then called them to him and said, "As you know, the so-called rulers of the nations lord it over them and their great men make their importance felt."

⁴³But it shall not be so among you: whoever would be great among you must be your servant, ⁴⁴and whoever would be first among you shall make himself slave of all. ⁴⁵For the Son of Man has not come to be served but to serve and to give his life to redeem many."

The blind man of Jericho

(Mt 20:29; Lk 18:35)

o ⁴⁶They came to Jericho and, as Jesus was leaving Jericho with his disciples and a large crowd, a blind beggar, Bartimeus, the son of Timaeus, was sitting by the roadside. ⁴⁷On hearing that it was Jesus of Nazareth passing by, he began to call out, "Son of David, Jesus, have mercy on me!" ⁴⁸Many people scolded him and told him to keep quiet, but he shouted all the louder, "Son of David, have mercy on me!"

⁴⁹Jesus stopped and said, "Call him." So they called the blind man saying, "Take heart. Get up, he is calling you." ⁵⁰He immediately threw aside his cloak, jumped up and went to Jesus.

⁵¹Then Jesus asked him, "What do you want me to do for you?" The blind man said, "Master, let me see again!" ⁵²And Jesus said to him, "Go your way, your faith has made you well." And immediately he could see, and he followed Jesus along the road.

The triumphant entry into Jerusalem (Mt 21:4; Lk 19:28; Jn 12:12)

11 ¹When they drew near to Jerusalem and arrived at Bethphage and Bethany, at the Mount of Olives, Jesus sent two of his disciples with these instructions, ²"Go to the village on the other side and, as you enter it, you will find a colt tied up that no one has ridden. Untie it and bring it here. ³If anyone says to you: 'What are you doing?' give this answer: 'The Lord needs it, but he will send it back immediately.'"

⁴They went off and found the colt out in the street tied at the door. ⁵As they were untying it, some of the bystanders asked, "Why are you untying that colt?" ⁶They answered as Jesus had told them, and the people allowed them to continue.

⁷They brought the colt to Jesus,

1. 45. Is 53, 11; 1 Tim 2, 5 1. 14, 26; Zac 14, 4 2. Zac 9, 9 7. Is 62, 11

o God is the one who moves us to ask something of him. The blind man understands that if he lets this opportunity go by, there will not be another chance, and that is why he shouts all the more while the rest are trying to silence him.

Son of David! This was a way of designating the Messiah.

■ See notes on Mt 21:1.

THE SAVIOUR

From Jericho to Jerusalem, Jesus "goes up" with the people who will celebrate the Feast.

Many are from Galilee, the province of Jesus and, on seeing him among the pilgrims, they think he is about to proclaim himself as the Messiah.

Until then Jesus had refused to be proclaimed because the people expected from their Messiah a liberation very different from that which Jesus brought them. But at this moment when he is finishing his mission, the time has come for Jesus to define himself publicly. He is the Anointed of God and there will be no other after him.

Jesus was sent by God to all people, but above all he came as Saviour of the Jewish people. He threw their cloaks on its back, and Jesus sat upon it. "Many people also spread their cloaks on the road, while others spread leafy branches from the fields. "Then the people who walked ahead and those who followed behind Jesus began to shout, "Hosannah! Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord! "Blessed is the kingdom of our father David which comes! Hosannah in the highest!"

"So Jesus entered Jerusalem and went into the Temple. And after he had looked all around, as it was already late, he went out to Bethany with the Twelve.

Jesus curses the barren fig tree

(Mt 21:18; Lk 13:6)

o ¹²The next day, when they were leaving Bethany, he felt hungry. ¹³In the distance he noticed a fig tree covered with leaves, so he went to see if he could find anything on it. When he reached it, he found nothing but leaves, for it was not the season for figs. ¹⁴Then Jesus said to the fig tree "May no one ever eat your fruit!" And his disciples heard these words.

Jesus clears the Temple

◆ ¹⁵When they reached Jerusalem Jesus went to the Temple and began to drive away all the people he saw buying and selling there. He overturned the tables of the moneychangers and the stools of those who sold pigeons. ¹⁶And he would not let anyone carry anything through the Temple area.

¹⁷Jesus then taught the people "Does not God say in the Scriptures: My house will be called a House of Prayer for all the nations? But you have turned it into a den of thieves."

¹⁸The chief priests and the teachers of the Law heard of this, so the came precisely when this people needed to be saved, because things were not working out well for them. The prophets had announced a conciliatory king who would visit his people on a donkey as peaceful people did, not on a horse, like the generals of that time. That was why Jesus wanted to enter Jerusalem this way. Jerusalem was a big city. Though the enthusiasm of the Galileans shook the city, it did not conquer it.

The Jews did not think that their Saviour would be so meek. Throughout their history, God had saved them from oppression, hunger, and the irresponsibility of their famous leaders. This time he came in person, to show them the real path to salvation through pardon and non-violence but they did not recognize him. The people of Galilee who spontaneously mounted a triumphant entrance for Jesus hoping for a political announcement from him would later deny him.

◆ THE TEMPLE

The Temple of Jerusalem was for the Jews the only Temple of the only God. In each town they assembled in the synagogue to read the Bible and sing psalms, but only in the Temple did the priests sacrifice animals and celebrate the true worship. A regular-size building was at the centre of it. Only the priests in charge of offering incense entered this building, while the multitude crowded together in the courtyards. In these courtyards stood vendors and exchange brokers who supplied animals and birds for the offerings.

The presence of God rested on the Temple and from there protected and sanctified the Holy City and all the Jewish people. But people did not know how to live in the presence of God. While they defend their religion fanatically they do not strive to approach God in a sincere way or cleanse their churches of all that hinders true praying. There were vendors in the Temple, and also people little concerned about their ceremonies and prayers. The priests were used to this, and the High Priest, Caiaphas, made money by allowing vendors to stand in the very courtyard dedicated to prayer.

Jesus was not a priest or a Temple guard, but this Temple was the house of his Father. That was why he made a whip from ropes and cast them all out.

It will be called a House of Prayer for all the nations. The courtyards where the vendors stood were precisely those intended for the foreigners. "To clean the Temple" requires of us that we have an open church where everyone is welcome.

sought a way to destroy him. They were afraid of him because all the people were tremendously interested in his teaching.

¹⁹When evening came, Jesus left the city.

The power of faith

(Mt 21:20)

o ²⁰Early next morning, as they walked along the road, the disciples saw the fig tree withered to its roots. ²¹Peter then said to him, "Master, look! The fig tree you cursed has withered."

²²And Jesus replied, "Have faith in God. ²³Truly, I say to you, if you say to this mountain: 'Get up and throw yourself into the sea,' and have no doubt in your heart but believe that what you say will happen, it will be done for you. ²⁴Therefore, I tell you, whatever you ask in prayer, believe that you have received it, and it shall be done for you. ²⁵And when you stand to pray, forgive whatever you may hold against anyone, so that your divine Father may also forgive your sins."

By what authority do you act?

(Mt 21:23; Lk 20:1)

+ ²⁷They were once again in Jerusalem. As Jesus was walking in the Temple, the chief priests, the teachers of the Law and the elders came to him ²⁸and asked, "What right do you have to act like this? Who gave you authority to do the things you do?"

²⁹Jesus said to them, "I will ask you a question, only one, and if you give me an answer, then I will tell you what right I have to do the things I do. ³⁰Was John's ministry and baptism from God, or was it merely something human? Answer me."

³¹And they kept arguing among themselves, "If we answer that the baptism of John was from God, he will say: 'Why then did you not be-

o THE POWER OF FAITH

If you have no doubt in your heart, but believe. See the same in James 3:1.2. Jesus refers in a more precise way to "the faith that performs miracles" (See 1 Cor 13.2). Jesus does not say that this faith will be given to everybody and at every moment. It is a charism or gift of God that he gives to whomever he wishes (1 Cor 12:9). It is an interior certainty that God wants to perform a miracle, so that one dares act and command in his name.

But at the same time, this promise of Jesus applies to all our prayer. Of course we should not think that God will always work the miracles we ask of him. When a sick person tries to convince himself that he will be cured, it is possible that consequently he will get better more quickly, but this mental exercise or hope does not necessarily mean faith. And if I convince myself that God will make me the winner of a lottery, he is under no obligation to think that my becoming richer will make me a better person.

Actually, he who humbly loves God understands in the midst of his trials that God wants to lift him up. That is why he asks with faith because he knows that God wants to listen to him. He who is really anxious for the kingdom of God asks the Lord that his Almighty hand take away all the obstacles to the extension of that Kingdom. It is hard for us to ask big things, because if God refuses to give them to us, how will we still believe in him? But all those who risk everything for the Gospel, like the saints, dare to ask God for impossible things, obeying the very subtle suggestions of the Spirit of God.

Whatever you ask in prayer. Jesus invites us to ask with faith and perseverance until God assures us that our prayer has been heard, or else helps us understand that what we asked for was not good for us nor was it the will of God.

+ THE OPPORTUNIST PRIESTS

Jesus did not ask any authorization to teach in the Temple, or to drive out the vendors. He acted freely as a prophet. Since the priests were the ones in charge of maintaining the true faith, it was normal for them to check whether Jesus was a real prophet or not. But were they really concerned about truth? Were they ready to recognize that Jesus had come from God? Apparently they only thought of defending what was acceptable to them and, before even listening to Jesus, they held him to be subversive.

That is why Jesus asked them about John the lieve him?" ³²But neither could they answer before the people that the baptism of John was merely something human, for everyone regarded John as a prophet. ³³So they answered Jesus, "We don't know," and Jesus said to them, "Neither will I tell you what right I have to act as I do."

Parable of the tenants (Mt 21:33; Lk 20:9)

12 ¹Using parables, Jesus went on to say, "A man planted a vineyard, put a fence around it, dug a hole for the wine press and built a watchtower. Then he leased the vineyard to tenants and went abroad.

²In due time he sent a servant to receive from the tenants his share of the fruit. ³But they seized the servant, struck him and sent him back empty-handed. ⁴Again the man sent another servant. They also struck him over the head and treated him shamefully. ⁵He sent another and they killed him. In the same way they treated many others; some they struck and others they killed. ⁶One was still left, his beloved son. And so, last of all, he sent him to the tenants, for he said: "They will respect my son."

⁷But those tenants said to one another: "Here comes the owner's son who is to inherit the vineyard. Let's kill him and the property will be ours." ⁸So they seized him and killed him and threw him out of the vineyard! ⁹Now, what will the owner of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy those tenants and give the vineyard to others."

¹⁰And Jesus added, "Have you not read this text of the Scriptures: The stone which the builders rejected has become the keystone. ¹¹*This was the Lord's doing; and we marvel at it.*

¹²The Jewish leaders wanted to arrest him for they realized that Jesus meant this parable for them, but they were afraid of the crowd. So they left him and went away.

Paying taxes to Caesar (Mt 22:15; Lk 2:20)

◆¹³They sent to Jesus some Pharisees with members of Herod's party, with the purpose of trapping him in Baptist. Because John the Baptist's preaching was the most important happening in the previous two years, the priests should have taken a stand with regard to him. But they had not done so nor were they ready for that. How could they make demands of Jesus if they spoke out only when it suited them?

Jesus' attitude obliges religious leaders of all times to see if they deserve that others respect their declarations and condemnations.

■ THE CHOSEN ONES OF GOD

In this comparison, the vine represents the kingdom of God. The Jews were God's people and they came to consider that their own interests were those of God. He had to help them against others. They had confidence that they would be saved and were not concerned about the fate of others who did not recognize God.

God entrusted his Kingdom to them; in other words, he guided them throughout the long span of their history so they would be an example to others. They were to communicate their experience to others so that all would develop justice, a spirit of responsibility, a sense of brotherhood among them: these were the fruits God wanted to harvest.

God sent prophets to remind them of their debt: they were hardly heard. Finally, the only Son of God made man comes and the same thing will happen. He will be cast out of the vineyard, in other words, rejected by his own people. That is why the kingdom of God will be given to others, to those gathered in the Church of Christ.

Here ends the parable. But it could be applied to our days if the Church becomes a religion of one social class, or similar to the other religions, if we do not find in the Church more obedience to God, more commitment to values that will save the world. What would happen to Christian groups and their leaders if they began to feel they were the owners of the Kingdom and God's promises?

◆ POLITICS AND RELIGION - CAESAR

The trap is as follows: They ask about the tax that the Jews are obliged to pay to Caesar, Emperor of Rome, for the Jews have been colo-his own words. ¹⁴They said to Jesus, "Master, we know that you are true; you are not influenced by, nor are you afraid of anyone, but you truly teach God's way. Tell us, is it against the Law to pay taxes to Caesar? Should we pay them or not?"

¹⁵But Jesus saw through their trick and answered, "Why are you testing me? Bring me a silver coin and let me see it." ¹⁶They brought him one and Jesus asked, "Whose head is this, and whose name?" They answered, "Caesar's." ¹⁷Then Jesus said, "Give back to Caesar what belongs to Caesar, and to God what belongs to God."

And they were very astonished.

17. Rom 13, 7; Acts 23, 8

19. Dt 25, 5

nized by the Romans and are under their rule.

The Pharisees and partisans of Herod, who are political enemies, join together. The Pharisees oppose Roman domination; the partisans of Herod, on the other hand, accept it. If Jesus says they are to pay, the Pharisees will discredit him before the people. If he says no, the partisans of Herod will have him arrested by the Romans.

But Jesus does not condemn Roman imperialism, nor does he justify it. Is it because the problems of justice and peace are not "spiritual things" and do not concern him?

Actually, Jesus does not see political problems the way we see them. These problems are important, of course, but they are not the only field where human liberation is at stake. Sacred History teaches us that God wants freedom for each of us, and for each nation the possibility to develop its culture and national life. This amply justifies the political commitments of Christians.

But Jesus lived in a period of time when his compatriots were obsessed by politics, and divided into irreconcilable factions. By taking a determined political stand, Jesus would have achieved nothing. On the other hand, it was important to put politics in its right place and not to confuse faith with religious fanaticism.

For the Pharisees, to pay taxes to Caesar, a foreign ruler and pagan, was like denying God, the true Lord of Israel. They identified the Jewish National Party with the cause of God. This carried grave consequences since they thought that to serve God they must crush those of the opposition party. Since faith asks of us total obedience, people who confuse faith with political militancy, begin to justify, little by little, everything their party does, even lies and crimes.

The Caesar of Rome was not God, although

The resurrection

(Mt 22:23; Lk 20:27)

■ ¹⁸The Sadducees also came to Jesus. Since they claim that there is no resurrection, they questioned him in this way. ¹⁹"Master, in the Scriptures Moses gave us this law: 'If anyone dies and leaves a wife but no children, his brother must take the wife and give her a child who will be considered the dead man's child.' ²⁰Now, there were seven brothers. The first married a wife, but he died without leaving any children. ²¹The second took the wife and he, too, died leaving no children. The same thing happened to the third. ²²Finally the seven he pretended to be. He had imposed his authority and the use of Roman coins, but could not demand the obedience of conscience that was due only to God. Neither was he "the enemy of God," as the Pharisees thought he was, and to serve the kingdom of God, it was not necessary to refuse him taxes and civil obedience.

With his answer "to Caesar what belongs to him, to God ..." Jesus separates religion and politics, in cultures - Jewish and Roman alike - where politics always looked for religious justification. From now on, religion should not be manipulated for political purposes, nor should religion confuse her political opponents with the enemies of the Kingdom.

■ THE RESURRECTION

What is "resurrection"? When Jesus called the daughter of Jairus (Mk 5:21) or Lazarus (Jn 11:1) back to life, they only recovered the life they had before. The daughter went back to school. Lazarus went to work in the field and after this both had to die again. This was not true resurrection.

Many people think that there is "something" after death and that something in us, called "soul" survives. This belief is partly true but it is not the most important. The Resurrection points not to a survival of "something of us" but to a transformation and raising up of our whole person. This will be through grace and the work of God: we will be reborn from God himself.

Many persons are mistaken about resurrection, thinking that when people are raised they recover their actual body and, logically, they say this is ridiculous. It would be better for us to think of the transformation already achieved in us as Christians, followers of Christ. Something is developing in us: a new way to understand the things of God, a new vision of existence and re-died leaving no children. Last of all the woman died. ²³Now, in the resurrection, to which of them will she be wife? For the seven had her as wife."

²⁴Jesus replied, "You might be wrong in this regard because you understand neither the Scriptures nor the power of God. ²⁵When they rise from the dead, men and women do not marry but are like the angels in heaven.

²⁶Now, about the resurrection of the dead, have you never reflected on the chapter of the burning bush in the book of Moses? God said to him: I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. ²⁷Now, he is the God, not of the dead but of the living. You are totally wrong."

The greatest commandment

²⁸A teacher of the Law had been listening to this discussion and admired how Jesus answered them. So he came up and asked him, "Which commandment is the first of all?"

²⁹Jesus answered, "The first is: Hear, Israel! The Lord, our God, is One Lord; ³⁰*and you shall love the Lord, your God, with all your heart with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength.* ³¹And after this comes another one: You shall love your neighbour as yourself. There is no commandment greater than these two."

³²The teacher of the Law said to him, "Well spoken, Master; you are

newed conscience. While our "external self" is wasting away as St. Paul says, the "inner self" is growing in us. This is my true self which is being built up day by day by the Spirit of God and it is this inner self which will be raised by the Spirit.

There is no need to wonder if we will recover stomach and viscera, because in the new life there is no place for any biological functions proper to mortal beings, like eating, sleeping and sex: we will be in heaven like angels. Jesus did not say: "they will be angels" for we are and will be members of the one human family and, in the resurrection, we will form the saved humanity, the innumerable brothers of Christ. We will all enjoy God, we will know each and everyone and we will remain united through the bonds of Charity.

With this, we understand the double reproach of Jesus to the Sadducees:

They don't understand the power of God. They only imagine a caricature of the resurrection.

You don't understand the scriptures. Very few books of the Hebrew Bible speak of the resurrection but all of them refer to a living God who makes us his friends.

I am the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob. If God committed himself to them, could he be indifferent about their death and let them disappear forever while he enjoys Himself in his glory?

o TO LOVE GOD

You shall love the Lord, your God. This first commandment is not among the Ten Commandments of Moses, which only speak of "serving God." But we read it in Deut 6:4.

To love God is not a commandment like the others because the commandments show specific actions that we should undertake or avoid i.e., you shall rest on the day of the Lord, or you shall not commit adultery. On the other hand when it comes to loving God there is no limit.

The Commandments of the Bible, (especially the Ten Commandments of Moses), merely express in a clear manner the demands of our conscience. It should not be necessary to tell us not to steal, or to slander others. Nevertheless it is necessary to teach this to the children and to the unscrupulous person. Paul says, "The Law was not set for the good, but for those who do evil." (1 Tim 1:9)

Some people think they are perfect simply because they obey the Ten Commandments of Moses. It would be better to say that they only fulfill the minimum requirements of morality that Moses demanded from his primitive and irresponsible people more than thirty centuries ago. Instead of concentrating on these commandments which make them feel better about themselves, they should meditate on the First Commandment. All the rest are meaningless if the First Commandment is not understood.

You shall love God with all your heart. You shall love Him more than you love your loved ones. You shall long for him, you shall forget yourself so that, in everything, you search for what he wants most from you.

You shall love him with all your soul, with all your intelligence. You shall devote the best of your intelligence to know him. Looking into your own life, you shall understand how much he has guided you. You shall try to understand how right when you say that he is one and there is no other.³³ To love him with all our heart, with all our understanding and with all our strength, and to love our neighbour as ourselves is more important than any burnt offering or sacrifice."

³⁴Jesus approved this answer and said, "You are not far from the kingdom of God." But after that, no one dared to ask him any more questions.

Whose son is the Christ?

(Mt 22:41; Lk 20:41; Mt 23:6)

³⁵As Jesus was teaching in the Temple, he said, "The teachers of the Law say that the Messiah is the son of David. How can that be?" ³⁶For David himself, inspired by the Holy Spirit declared: The Lord said to my Lord: sit at my right until I put your enemies under your feet. ³⁷If David himself calls him Lord, in what way can he be his son?"

Many people came to Jesus and listened to him gladly.

+ ³⁸As he was teaching, he also said to them, "Beware of these teachers of the Law who enjoy walking around in long robes and being greeted in the marketplace,³⁹ and who like to occupy reserved seats in the synagogues and the first places at feasts.⁴⁰ They even devour the widow's and the orphan's goods while making a show of long prayers. How severe a sentence they will receive!"

The widow's offering

(Lk 21:1)

■ ⁴¹Jesus sat down opposite the Temple treasury and watched the people dropping money into the treasury box; and many rich people put in large offerings.⁴² But a poor widow also came and dropped in two small coins.

⁴³Then Jesus called his disciples and said to them, "Truly I say to you, this poor widow put in more than all those who gave offerings.⁴⁴ For all of them gave from their plenty, but she gave from her poverty and put in everything she had, her very living."

Jesus speaks of the end

13 ¹As Jesus left the Temple, one of his disciples said, "Look, Master, at the enormous stones and wonderful buildings the kingdom of God is coming through world and daily events. Praying and reading the Bible regularly, you shall ask God to give you his own Spirit so that you may understand him better.

You shall love him with all your strength. And since you are very weak in this, you shall ask for his help and strive to unite with the true servants of God, using the means that the Church makes available to you.

The Commandment to love your neighbour as you love yourself comes second, because it cannot be understood or fulfilled without love of God. For God asks for more than solidarity with one's neighbour, or concern for those who are suffering. We should make an effort to look at our brothers and sisters in the same way that the Father does. We should give them what the Father wants for them. Among so many good things we could do for our neighbour, we should select those which the Holy Spirit inspires us to do. All this requires that we first know and love God.

+ The teachers of the Law were not bad persons. They became teachers of religion because they were interested in religion, but as soon as the teacher stops trying to be a saint, he is only a weak man. The very respect that people show him leads him to overlook in himself many wrongs that in anybody else would be severely censured.

■ On the other hand, the poor widow was the only one from among so many worshippers who made retribution to God as he deserves. She was the personification of those uncountable poor who have practically nothing but, somehow, find a way to give part of the little they have. The humble person is capable of sacrificing part of his paid time to study or participate in common activities in order to help his companions. The small salary he loses is worth much more than here!" ²And Jesus answered, "You see these great buildings? Not one stone will be left upon another, but all will be torn down."

³After a while, when Jesus was sitting on the Mount of Olives, facing the Temple, Peter, James, John and Andrew approached him privately and asked, ⁴"Tell us when this will be. What signs will be given us before all this happens?"

⁵Then Jesus began to tell them, "Don't let anyone mislead you. ⁶Many will come, taking my place, and say: 'I am the one you are waiting for,' and they will deceive many people.

⁷When you hear about war and threats of war, don't be troubled; this must occur but the end is not yet.

⁸Nations will fight one another and kingdom will oppose kingdom. There will be earthquakes everywhere and famines, too. And these will be like the first pains of childbirth. ⁹Be on your guard, for you will be arrested and taken to Jewish courts. You will be beaten in synagogues; and you will stand before governors and kings for my sake to bear witness before them. ¹⁰For all the nations must hear the preaching of the Gospel: this is the very beginning.

¹¹So when you are arrested and brought to trial, don't worry about what you are to say; but say whatever is given you in that hour. For it is not you who speak but the Holy Spirit.

¹²Brother will betray brother, even to death, and the father his child. Children will turn against their parents and have them put to death. ¹³And you will be hated by all for my name's sake. But whoever holds out to the end will be saved.

◆ THE END OF THE WORLD

The prophets of the Bible had spoken in a rather obscure way of the end of the world that would initiate God's universal kingdom. According to them, all nations of the world would join forces to destroy the Holy City of Jerusalem but right at the moment of greatest despair, God would intervene in a triumphant way to establish his own Kingdom. (Is 66:18; Ez 38; Jl 4; Za 14)

That is why, when Jesus speaks of the destruction of the Temple, the apostles think of the end of the world. The answer of Jesus is clear: the tragedy that will end with the destruction of Jerusalem is near but that shall not be the end of the world.

This discourse contains Jesus' warnings about the destruction of the Jewish nation that would occur 30 years after, but what he said clarifies the meaning of the conflicts that occur at present in the whole world.

When you hear about wars (7). This does not mean that God leaves the world in the hands of evil. It is more a delivery than a failure because humanity is maturing and the nations encounter more complex problems in their life and development. The crisis suffered by the Jewish nation, in the time of Jesus, was similar to that experienced by other civilizations: something dies and something is born.

People, confused, are easily fooled by propaganda and ideologies. Fear turns them blind and they persecute those who do not share their fanaticism. That is why they hate the true believers. At the same time, Jesus asks his followers to bear witness to him (v. 9) as the only Saviour and to proclaim the demands of the Gospel for the individual as well as for society.

Thirty years after Jesus, the Jews rebelled against the Roman oppressors. The Roman Army reorganized after its first defeats and, its flags adorned with the image of their idols, approached the Holy City. Then many Messiahs (v. 22) appeared, that is, those who claimed to be the saviours of the Jewish Nation and led many followers.

The more fanatic Jews locked themselves in the City of Jerusalem waiting for God's intervention but they were so divided that they fought among themselves. Those who fled from the city, because of hunger were arrested by the Romans and crucified in front of the walls. In the end, when the Romans entered, burning the Temple and the palaces, all those that were not killed – men, women and children – were brought to Rome as slaves.

• Regarding the days after. After announcing the end of the Jewish world, Jesus speaks of ¹⁴So, when you see the idol of the oppressor set in the place where it should not be (may the reader understand!), then let those in Judea flee to the mountains. ¹⁵If you are on the housetop, don't come down to take anything with you. ¹⁶If you are in the field, don't turn back to fetch your cloak. ¹⁷How hard it will be then for pregnant women and mothers nursing their babies! ¹⁸Pray that it may not happen in winter. ¹⁹For the distress of those days will be greater than any that has been from the beginning, since God created the world until now or will ever be again. ²⁰So that if the Lord had not shortened that time, no one would survive; but he decided to shorten it for the sake of his chosen ones.

Last days of Jerusalem

²¹And if anyone says to you at that time: 'Look, here is the Messiah! Look, he is there!' – do not believe it. ²²For false Messiahs and false prophets will arise and perform signs and wonders in order to deceive even God's chosen people, if that were possible. ²³You must be on your guard. I have told you everything ahead of time.

The coming of the Son of Man

o ²⁴Now regarding the days after that disastrous time, the sun will grow dark, the moon will not give its light, the stars will fall out of the skies and the whole universe will be shaken. ²⁶Then people will see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. ²⁷And he will send the angels to gather his chosen people from the four winds, from the ends of the earth to the bounds of the sky.

²⁸Learn a lesson from the fig tree. As soon as its branches become tender and it begins to sprout leaves, you know that summer is near. ²⁹In the same way, when you see these things happening, know that the time is near, even at the door. ³⁰Truly, I say to you, this generation will not pass away until all this has happened. ³¹Heaven and earth will pass away, but my word will not pass away.

■ ³²But, regarding that Day and that Hour, no one knows when it will

24. Is 13, 10; Ezk 32, 7; Rev 6, 12 26. Dn 7, 13 an even more important event: the end of the world, or, better still, its transformation.

The sun will grow dark, the moon will not give its light (v. 24). These are images taken from Is 13:10 and 34:4, that express the confusion, the surprise and the disintegration of man and the Universe before the majesty of the Supreme Judge.

He will send the angels. This is also a common image of the Jewish books that spoke of God's judgement. Likewise, the trumpet referred to in Mt 24:31 and 1 Thes 4:16 should not be understood literally.

Learn a lesson. Jesus comes back to the destruction of Jerusalem.

■ In this paragraph, we return to the end of the world. The Day mentioned is the day of the Judgement, called the "Day of Yahweh" in the Prophets (Amos: Zeph 1:15).

No one knows when... Jesus states it clearly. Nevertheless, there have always been people who believe they know what the angels do not. And people in each century have foretold the end of the world. (2 Thes 2).

31. Mt 5, 18 32. 1 Thes 5, 1; Mk 10, 18; Acts 1, 7

Not even the Son, only the Father. Some are confused by this. Does this not mean that Jesus is not God as the Father is? But they must remember that when Jesus speaks of the Father and the Son, he speaks of himself, with his human consciousness in relation to the Father. God's infinite knowledge cannot be encompassed by the human mind of Jesus. (see notes on Lk 3:21 and Mk 6:1)

God the Father can communicate to Jesus certain prophecies but he cannot tell him, for example: "the end of the world will take place on the 12th of July of the year 1977" because the date is not fixed; it depends on how we make the kingdom of God mature through our efforts and prayers (2 Pt 3:12).

Modern science shows that time does not pass at the same speed for two persons if one is moving and the other is still; much less equal is the pace of time between God and us. God knows the time in eternity but this does not mean that it corresponds with a certain date in our calendar.

Conspiracy against Jesus (Mt 26:2; Lk 22:1; Jn 11:47)

3. Lk 7, 46

◆ This is like a summary of the parable of the talents (Mt 25:1) and that of the ten young women (Mt 25:14). It warns us that we should wait for the Lord who is at work. The doorman symbolizes those who have positions of responsibility in the Church, those who are not the owners of the Church but who only hold the keys of the Church.

HOW CHRIST COMES; CHRISTIAN COMMITMENT

In several parts of the Gospel, Jesus invites us to be vigilant while waiting for his arrival. How will he come? How can he come to us if we are meant to die before his coming in glory?

It is true that we will meet the Lord when we die. Nevertheless, Jesus comes to us in several ways while we await him, doing our work and living our lives.

Our work (34). One aspect of our commitment to Christ is our commitment to the Christian community, our Church. It is our participation in common prayer, in the Eucharist, in the Catechesis and other similar things, and as we participate in these commitments there is not only one but several "comings" of Christ. We see his coming in those of our brothers and sisters who are converted; he comes to us giving us strength and wisdom; he comes to us through prayer, giving us the inner certainty of his presence.

He also comes in our day-to-day living. The prophets have said time and again that the events that bring renewal and growth in values also bring the Lord. At times, he comes in his resurrection, through happy events that bring life and joy, and more justice and hope for the poor. At other times, he comes through his passion and death.

Precisely because Jesus comes in our daily history, we have a commitment to him to serve our contemporary world. As lay people, the major part of our commitment to Christ is expressed through the affairs of the world in our jobs, family, social and political endeavours – and there, each one in his own way, is to be "alert."

Alert in order not to become discouraged and to be able to resist the environment of corruption and the suggestions of the evil spirit. Alert to be able to keep waiting for Christ. For many begin with generosity, making commitments for the good of others but, because they do not have their eyes permanently on the Lord, they lose sight of the goal and turn out to be mere administrators and activists.

They are committed to works and movements but not to the Lord himself. That is why their life is full of contradictions. For a time they perform marvels and suddenly they fail. They do useful things, but are not aware of the moment they should stop them and follow another path. They do their own work, but do not let the Lord take over their brain, their heart, their whole life.

This does not happen to those who are alert: through them Christ comes to men.

+ EASTER, THE PASSOVER

The Jews were going to celebrate the 1480th anniversary of their departure from Egypt. Easter, that is the Passover of the Lord, was the feast of national independence and was the most important holiday of the religious calendar.

But for the past 40 years they had lost their independence. That is why the Passover would revive in them their desire for freedom and cause disturbances. From all parts of Palestine the Jews went up to Jerusalem in pilgrimage, because the Passover lamb would be sacrificed in the Temple and eaten in Jerusalem.

Each family was to eat the roasted lamb with lettuce and unleavened bread, alternating the singing of Psalms with the blessing of several cups according to an old and very precise ritual. The head of the family would recall the departure from Egypt and, on recalling the past everyone would ask the Lord to free his humiliated people.

But the vast majority, both of common people and of the authorities, were incapable of the house he enters and say to the owner, "The Master says: Where is the room where I may eat the Passover meal with my disciples?"¹⁵ Then he will show you a large upstairs room, already arranged and furnished. There you will prepare for us."¹⁶ The disciples went off. When they reached the city, they found everything just as Jesus had told them; and they prepared the Passover meal.

¹⁷ When it was evening, Jesus arrived with the Twelve.¹⁸ While they were at table eating, Jesus said, "Truly, I tell you, one of you will betray me, one who shares my meal."

¹⁹ They were deeply distressed at hearing this and asked him, one after the other, "You don't mean me, do you?"

²⁰ And Jesus answered, "It is one of you Twelve, one who dips his bread in the dish with me."²¹ The Son of Man is going as the Scriptures say he will. But alas for that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed; better for him: if he had never been born."

²² While they were eating, Jesus took bread, blessed and broke it, and gave it to them. "Take this," he said, "This is my body."²³ Then he took a cup and after he had given thanks, passed it to them and they all drank from it.²⁴ And he said, "This is my blood, the blood of the Covenant, which is to be poured out for many."²⁵ Truly, I say to you, I will not taste the fruit of the vine again until the day I drink the new wine in the kingdom of God."

Peter's denial foretold

would be "his" salvation? It was to bring human history to its fulfillment: peoples and races needed to mature, to confront one another and finally to be united in one body. The world would pass through a thousand crises and deaths in order to come to the Resurrection. Within such a history God could spread and distribute the riches of his Spirit and bring to holiness his elect. Jesus had presented a message that should guide humanity, but a people of God was also needed, a minority, a yeast who would feel committed to God's work, and to whom God would commit himself.

Twelve centuries before Jesus' birth, God had made a Covenant with the people of Israel on Mount Sinai: they and their children would be among all races, the chosen people of God. But as time passed and the infidelities of God's people appeared more clearly, the prophets understood that something more was needed: a covenant whose first effect would be the forgiveness of sins (Jer 31:31). The family of God could no longer be identified with a certain race, but would be a family of believers pardoned of their sins: that is the Church.

On the eve of his death, Jesus remembered the first Covenant on Sinai, when the blood of sacrificial animals was spilled (Ex 24:8). He would soon spill his blood for many, that is, for a multitude (Is 53:11). These many are, in a special way, the Church. So Jesus purified: through his death those who will be his own people in the world.

Whenever we celebrate the Eucharist (or Mass), we renew this Covenant. Jesus is among us while we remember his sacrifice. He becomes our spiritual bread and consecrates us to his Father so we may participate more and more in his work of salvation.

Jesus' last supper was the first Christian liturgy. Unlike the solemn Temple ceremonies the liturgical service of primary importance in the life of the Church would be a communal meal in which Jesus offers himself as the bread of life.

I will not taste the fruit of the vine again. The Eucharist not only reenacts Jesus' death but also announces the day when Christ, with all humanity reunited in him, will celebrate at the Banquet in the Kingdom.

To understand the meaning of the Lord's supper, it is necessary to read Jesus' farewell speeches to his apostles, which John situates on this very night of Holy Thursday (Jn 14-17). Jesus came, not only to preach, but to spread his Spirit among his believers. In the future he would be present and empower them in a special way: whenever they would gather to celebrate the Holy Supper. John explains this in Jn 6 and Paul in 1 Cor 11:17.

sheep will be scattered. ²⁸But after I am raised up, I will go to Galilee ahead of you."

²⁹Then Peter said to him, "Even though all the others fall away, I will not." ³⁰And Jesus replied, "Truly, I say to you, today, this very night before the cock crows twice, you will deny me three times." ³¹But Peter repeated more strongly, "Though I have to die with you, I will never deny you." And all of them said the same.

Gethsemane

(Lk 22:40; Jn 18:1)

■ ³²They came to a place which was called Gethsemane and Jesus said to his disciples, "Sit here while I pray."

³³But he took Peter, James and John along with him and, as he began to be filled with fear and distress, ³⁴he said to them, "My soul is filled with sorrow, even to death. Remain here and stay awake."

³⁵Then he went a little further on and fell to the ground, praying that if possible this hour might pass without striking him. Jesus said, ³⁶"Abba (Daddy), all things are possible for you; take this cup away from me. Yet not what I want, but what you want."

³⁷Then he came and found them asleep and said to Peter, "Simon, are you sleeping? Couldn't you stay awake for even one hour?" ³⁸Keep watch and pray, all of you, so that you may not slip into temptation. The spirit indeed is eager but nature is weak. ³⁹And going away he prayed saying the same words. ⁴⁰When he came back to the disciples, he found them asleep again; they could not keep their eyes open, and they did not know what to say to him.

⁴¹When he came back the third time, he said, "You can sleep on now and take your rest! It is all over, the time has come; the Son of Man is now given into the hands of sinful men. ⁴²Get up, let us go. Look: the one betraying me is right here."

■ THE SILENCE OF GOD

Jesus is alone as he confronts death to overcome it, carrying on his shoulders the destiny of all humanity. He sees the wickedness of people who will ill-treat him or let him be ill-treated. And he sees behind it all the power of Darkness.

At this moment Jesus is the man of sorrows, aware of all afflictions, made one with sin. He is burdened by all the wickedness on earth. For this his death will be the price, the atonement. Face to face in prayer with his beloved and just Father, Jesus experiences anguish as great as death.

Jesus keeps on repeating one phrase which expresses the perfect prayer: Father, your will be done. There are moments and places in which the persecuted church is in agony and cannot do anything other than pray for the will of God to be done. During these times her prayer is more effective than ever.

How mysterious is the agony of the Son of God (agony means struggle); He who will give countless martyrs the inner strength to face their tortures fearlessly, allows himself to experience the very extreme of human weakness. This is for us. Even filled with fear or a sense of weakness, we shall not doubt: he will make us firm.

Let us look at Jesus our Saviour, who had no faults or need to be purified. Yet he had to know humiliations, sufferings and even the silence of God to reach the maturity he still lacked in order to become "Man," the head of humanity.

+ JUDAS

Judas was one of the Twelve. After a night of prayer, how could Jesus have chosen the one who would betray him? When Judas followed Jesus, he waited, like the rest of the Apostles, for a liberator in the ordinary sense. The others, as they came to know Jesus better, accepted to change their ambitions, but Judas did not. Judas betrayed Jesus to take revenge against the Master who had disappointed him. Though Judas was among Jesus' closest group, he could not return the Master's affection for him and finally had to return hatred for love, falling into an abyss of evil.

Perhaps the other apostles contributed something to Judas' failure. Judas, like Levi-Matthew, joined the fishermen from Galilee who comprised the majority in the team. Had they tried enough to integrate him into their group?

o THE TRIAL OF JESUS

Jesus appeared before two courts. First be-

The arrest

(Mt 26:47; Lk 22:47; Jn 18:2)

+ ⁴³While Jesus was still speaking, Judas, one of the twelve, arrived. With him was a mob armed with swords and clubs, who had been sent by the chief priests, the teachers of the Law and the elders. ⁴⁴The traitor had arranged a signal for them, "The one I kiss, he is the man. Arrest him and take him away under guard."

⁴⁵So, when he came, he went directly to Jesus calling, "Master! Master!" and gave him a kiss. ⁴⁶Then they seized Jesus and took him. ⁴⁷One of the bystanders drew his sword and struck out at the High Priest's servant cutting off his ear.

⁴⁸Jesus turned to them saying, "So you set out against a robber! did you need swords and clubs to arrest me?"

⁴⁹Day after day I was among you teaching in the Temple and you could have arrested me. But let the Scriptures be fulfilled." ⁵⁰Then they all deserted him and ran away.

⁵¹A young man covered by nothing but a linen cloth followed Jesus. As they put their hands on him, ⁵²he left the cloth in their hands and fled away naked.

o ⁵³They led Jesus to the High Priest and all the chief priests assembled with the elders and the teachers of the Law. ⁵⁴Peter had followed him at a distance and went right into the courtyard of the High Priest, where he sat with the guards, warming himself at the fire.

⁵⁵Now the chief priests and the whole Council tried to find some evidence against Jesus so that they might put him to death, but they were unable to find any. ⁵⁶Even though many came up to speak falsely against him, their evidence did not agree. ⁵⁷At last some men stood up and told this lie, ⁵⁸"We heard him say: 'I will destroy this Temple made by hands and in three days I will build another not made by human hands.'" ⁵⁹But even so their evidence did not agree.

◆ ⁶⁰The High Priest then stood up in the midst of them and asked Jesus, "Have you no answer at all? What about this evidence against you?" ⁶¹But Jesus was silent and made no reply.

The High Priest put a second question to him, "Are you the Christ, the Son of the Blessed One?" ⁶²Then Jesus answered, "I am, and you will see the Son of Man seated at the right fore the Sanhedrin, or the Supreme Council of the Jews, where he was accused of blasphemy. Later he was brought before the Roman governor Pilate and accused of being a political agitator.

The reason for this double process was that the Jews, under Roman rule, had lost the power to issue death sentences. So, after judging Jesus according to their law, that is the laws of the Bible, they asked Pontius Pilate to implement the death penalty. To impress and convince Pilate, they submitted new charges.

It is very difficult to say whether Jesus' trial was dealt with in a legal way or not. It was similar to many other trials we know of, in which the authorities in power are able to twist the law and condemn their opponents without resorting to obvious fraud.

◆ THE SENTENCE OF JESUS

The priests could not sentence Jesus to death for minor violations of the Law. That is why they had to find something more important that occupies the central place in the Gospel: Are you the Son of God?

Jesus answered by combining two Biblical texts which reflect the divine personality of the Saviour. Son of Man who comes from God himself (Dan 7:13): who is seated at the right hand of God, as an equal (Psalm 110). With this assertion, Jesus clearly affirmed that he is not only a son of God like a saint or an envoy of God, but the Only One who shares the divinity of the Father.

The priests were not mistaken about what Jesus claimed to be as Son of God. It was not a matter of words, but they condemned him be-hand of the Most Powerful and coming with the clouds of heaven around him." ⁶³The High Priest tore his clothes to show his horror and said, "What more evidence do we need? ⁶⁴You have just heard his blasphemous words. What is your decision?" And they all condemned Jesus, "He must die."

⁶⁵Some of them began to spit on Jesus and, blindfolding him, they struck him saying, "Play the prophet!

Peter disowns Jesus

(Mt 26:69; Jn 18:15)

+ ⁶⁶While Peter was below in the courtyard, one of the High Priest's servant-girls came by. ⁶⁷Noticing Peter beside the fire, she looked straight at him and said, "You also were with Jesus, the Nazarene." ⁶⁸But he denied it, "I don't know or understand what you are talking about." And he went out into the gateway.

⁶⁹The servant-girl saw him there and told the bystanders, "This man is one of them." ⁷⁰But Peter denied it again. After a little while those standing by said to Peter, "Of course you are one of them: you are a Galilean, aren't you?" ⁷¹And Peter began to justify himself with curses and oaths, "I don't know this man you are talking about."

⁷²Just then a cock crowed a second time and Peter remembered what Jesus had said to him, "Before the cock crows twice you will deny me three times." And he broke down and wept.

Jesus before Pilate

(Mt 27:11; Lk 23:2; Jn 18:28)

15 ¹Early in the morning, the chief priests, the elders and the teachers of the Law (that is, the whole Council or Sanhedrin), had their plan ready. They put Jesus in chains, led him away and handed him over to Pilate.

²Pilate asked him, "Are you the King of the Jews?" Jesus answered, "You say so." ³As the chief priests accused Jesus of many things, ⁴Pilate asked him again, "Have you no answer at all? See how many charges they bring against you." ⁵But Jesus gave no more answers, so that Pilate wondered.

o ⁶At every Passover festival, Pi-cause in all his way of acting, Jesus put himself in the place fitting to God. They could soothe their conscience, for they were upholding the honour due to the Only One.

So they forgot that, in fact, they hated him because he had denounced their hypocrisy, their lack of faith and love for money. Jesus had felt free about the religious rules they defended and had made them fall from their pedestals. God had come in the person of Jesus to demand from them the fruits of the vineyard (Mk 12:2) calling them to account, and they had opposed him.

Jesus was condemned in the name of God. He did not rebel against the unjust sentence imposed by the religious leaders of his people who were the legal though unworthy, representatives of God. This was his perfect obedience to the Father.

+ The apostles did not lack character or courage; if so, Jesus would not have chosen them. Peter was sincere when he said: although all abandon you, I will not. They were ready to die for Jesus, as people do in the enthusiasm of a battle, but what happened was very different. When Jesus was arrested, the apostles became confused because he did not use his divine power and showed no resistance to his enemies. That is why it would be wrong to say that the apostles were cowards until they received the Holy Spirit.

It was an understandable reaction for them to flee from the scene of Jesus' arrest. Their fleeing, however, shook to the foundations all the faith they had after living day by day with Jesus for the past two years. It was more than fear which caused Peter to deny Jesus; in fact, he did not yet know who Jesus really was.

The denial of Peter was a real and serious fall, although God forgives the sin the instant Peter's gaze meets Jesus and Peter repents (Lk 22:16). This failure however, will compel him, until the end of his life, not to rely on himself. Peter, Rock and responsible for the Universal Church, will late used to free any prisoner the people asked for. ⁷ Now there was a man called Barabbas, jailed with the rioters who had committed murder in the uprising. ⁸ When the crowd went up and began to ask Pilate the usual favour, ⁹ he said to them, "Do you want me to set free the King of the Jews?" ¹⁰ For he realized that the chief priests had handed Jesus over to him out of envy. ¹¹ But the chief priests stirred up the crowd to ask instead for the release of Barabbas. ¹² Pilate replied, "And what shall I do with the man you call King of the Jews?" ¹³ The crowd shouted back, "Crucify him!" ¹⁴ Pilate asked, "What evil has he done?" But they shouted the louder, "Crucify him!"

Jesus crowned with thorns

(Mt 27:27; Jn 19:1)

¹⁵ As Pilate wanted to please the people, he freed Barabbas for them; then he had Jesus scourged, and after that delivered him up to be crucified.

¹⁶ The soldiers took him inside the courtyard known as the pretorium, and called the rest of their companions. ¹⁷ They dressed him up in a purple cloak and twisting a crown of thorns, they forced it onto his head. ¹⁸ Then they began saluting him, "Long life to the King of the Jews!" ¹⁹ With a stick they gave him blows on the head and spat on him; then they knelt down pretending to worship him.

²⁰ When they had finished mocking him, they pulled the purple cloak off and dressed him in his own clothes again.

The crucifixion

The soldiers led him out of the city to crucify him. ²¹ On the way they met Simon of Cyrene (the father of Alexander and Rufus), who was coming in from the country, and forced him to carry the cross of Jesus.

²² When they had led him to the place called Golgotha, which means the Skull, ²³ they offered him wine mixed with myrrh, but he would not remain ever conscious of his personal weakness and will never find peace until he follows Jesus by giving up his life for him (Jn 21:19).

o THE PEOPLE

The Jewish people asked for Jesus' death – the same people who had brought their sick to him and followed him for three days through remote areas, forgetting their hunger. Not necessarily the same individuals, but the same people.

The leaders delivered Jesus to death out of envy, and also because the Gospel is subversive of every system that defends itself instead of serving the people. The people abandoned Jesus and chose Barabbas. Why? Because Jesus proposed a path to liberation that requires time, responsibility and sacrifice, while the political agitator Barabbas used irresponsible violence which attracts the mediocre and satisfies their own hidden violence.

The Jewish people asked for Jesus' death. Of course, not all did so, but collectively they were all responsible. In any group, the evil that some do concerns all, because the others have not been sufficiently courageous or intelligent or persistent to stop it.

The evangelists blame the Jewish people and rightly so, because they also were Jews. The true believer first accuses oneself and one's own group. The Jews happened to be the murderers of God because he had decided to live among them; any other people to whom the Lord would have come would most likely have done the same in the name of God and their sacred laws.

Over the centuries, many so-called Christians persecuted the Jews calling them murderers of Christ. In this they were hypocrites: they themselves were murdering Christ in the person of numberless victims they killed for the sake of their political or religious fanaticism.

Jesus was subjected to torture and mockery and everything that befalls the condemned anywhere in the world when police and military no longer consider them as free persons and brothers and sisters. To comply with Roman law, Jesus was scourged, but this was not done out of cruelty; the loss of blood and exhaustion caused by such a scourging would hasten the death of the crucified man, thus shortening his agony.

A convicted man with his arms nailed to the cross would suffocate. To make breathing possible, he would shift his weight from his feet to take it. ²⁴Then they nailed him onto the cross and divided his clothes among themselves, casting lots to decide what each should take.

²⁵It was about nine o'clock in the morning when they crucified him. ²⁶The statement of his offense was displayed above his head and it read, "The King of the Jews." ²⁷They also crucified two robbers with him, one on his right and one on his left.

²⁸People passing by laughed at him, shook their head and jeered, "Aha! So you are able to tear down the Temple and build it up again in three days. ²⁹Now save yourself and come down from the cross!"

³⁰In the same way the chief priests and the teachers of the Law made fun of him saying to one another, "The man who saved others cannot save himself. ³¹Let's see the Messiah, the king of Israel, come down from his cross and then we will believe in him." Even the men who were crucified with Jesus insulted him.

The death of Jesus

(Mt 27:45; Lk 23:44; Jn 19:20)

◆³²When noon came, darkness fell over the whole land and lasted until three o'clock; ³³and at three o'clock Jesus cried out in a loud voice, "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachani?" which means "My God, my God, why do you forsake me?" ³⁴As soon as they heard these words, some of the bystanders said, "Listen! He is calling for Elijah." ³⁵And one of them went quickly to fill a sponge in bitter wine and, putting it on a reed, gave him to drink; and he said, "Now let's see whether Elijah comes to take him down."

³⁶But Jesus uttered a loud cry and gave up his spirit. ³⁷And immediately the curtain which enclosed the Temple sanctuary was torn in two from top to bottom.

³⁸The captain who was standing in front of him saw how Jesus died and heard the cry he gave; and he said, "Truly, this man was the Son of God."

his arms, thus increasing the unbearable pain caused by the nails in the feet and the wrists. As soon as he no longer had enough strength to do this, he would suffocate and die. The bitter wine offered was a drink commonly used by Roman soldiers. Although myrrh lessens pain, Jesus rejected what could have soothed his pain.

◆ RECONCILIATION

Eloi, Eloi lama sabachani? These are the opening words of psalm 22 that begins with a cry of anguish and ends with certainty of victory. This psalm makes constant reference to the passion of Jesus.

Jesus' shout at the moment of death presents a mystery: for a crucified man ordinarily would die from exhaustion and suffocation and be unable to cry out in this manner. But no one could take life away from Jesus: it was in his own power, and he surrendered his life when he chose to do so. Those near him were taken aback: was it a shout of defeat or of victory?

The death of a person is sometimes cause for division in a family. But at other times a death leads to reconciliation. The cross Jesus died on was made of two wooden beams, a vertical one pointed towards the skies, and the other, horizontal: stretched out between heaven and earth, Jesus reconciles all people with God and with each other.

Those who in Jesus' death see God's greatest manifestation of love for humanity, become reconciled with God. They are no longer controlled by their fear of God and come to understand that we are not subject to blind fate, but are always in God's loving care.

The curtain that enclosed the Sanctuary of the Temple was torn down. This means that God no longer remains in that place where no mortal could enter. God left the awe-inspiring temple shrine and is now present to all of us through his wounded Son – wounded, not only by sin, but also by the compassion he feels for us.

Reconciliation among persons and nations. Before Jesus entered our world, God had not begun to lift the barriers that divided people but had limited himself to relating with just one people, the Jewish people. But from the time of Jesus' birth, all were called to enter the Kingdom (Eph 2:11-16). Previously each people had their own religious rites and beliefs. But now, the knowledge of Jesus, of Jesus crucified would be the basis of faith and unity. Knowing and believing him, persons and nations would be reconciled despite the differences dividing them.

⁴⁰There were also some women watching from a distance; among them were Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James the younger and Joset and Salome. ⁴¹They had followed Jesus when he was in Galilee and helped him. There were also many others who had come up with him to Jerusalem.

The burial

+ ⁴²It was now evening and as it was Preparation Day, that is the day before the sabbath, ⁴³someone boldly went to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. This was Joseph of Arimathea, a respected member of the Council who was himself waiting for the kingdom of God.

⁴⁴Pilate was surprised that Jesus should have died so soon; so he summoned the captain and inquired if Jesus was already dead. ⁴⁵After hearing the captain, he let Joseph have the body.

⁴⁶Joseph took him down and wrapped him in the linen sheet he had bought. He laid him in a tomb which had been cut out of the rock and rolled a stone across the entrance to the tomb. ⁴⁷Now Mary of Magdala and Mary the mother of Joset took note of where he had been laid.

He has been raised, he is not here
(Mt 28; Lk 24; Jn 20)

16 ¹When the sabbath was over, Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought spices so that they might go and anoint him. ²And very early in the morning on the first day of the week, just after sunrise, they came to the tomb.

40. Mk 6, 3 42. Dt 21, 22 1. Jn 19, 40; 14, 8 2. Jn 11, 38

Truly this man was the Son of God. Assuredly, the Roman captain proclaimed that Jesus was a just man (Lk 23:47), that is an outstanding man. Mark intentionally places on the lips of the captain the words "Son of God," because this pagan officer represents the pagan nations who will recognize the Son of God in this crucified man.

On several occasions Jesus insisted that he not be proclaimed son of God (Mk 1:44). He did this because no one can know who God is or what being the Son of God means (Mt 11:27) until he has known how Jesus died and come to believe in his resurrection. See Rom 3:24.

+ Joseph of Arimathea hastened to claim and bury the body of Jesus because the Jewish law demanded burial before nightfall for the bodies of convicted men (Deut 21:22), and even more so on a day which preceded an important feast. The tomb selected had been cut from rock on a hillside. The entrance was very low and was sealed with a big round stone, similar to that used in a mill. See commentary on Jn 19:41.

Like the seed that is buried in the soil, the body of Jesus was buried so that new life could flourish (Rom 6:35). Also see comments on Mt 27:52.

o JESUS HAS BEEN RAISED FROM THE DEAD

Jesus' history comes to an end with the discovery of the empty tomb. In the last pages of the Gospel we find a brief account of the most important apparitions of Jesus after his death.

He is no longer the earthly Jesus but the resurrected one, born again from the Father and never to die again, as psalm 2 says: You are my son and on this very day I have given you life.

Jesus has risen. The Gospel narrates events that took place after his death and mentions the names of those who saw the resurrected Jesus. Can we believe them? We would want to know more details to support our faith, but if even thousands of interviews with eyewitnesses were published, with pictures in full color to support the statements, there would always be room for doubt. For we do not see him, we cannot find him. Where is he?

Actually, it is not important whether there are few or many witnesses. This is a matter of faith and faith is something personal.

We doubt, not because there is not enough evidence, but because the event overcomes us. How can we believe that a world of scandals and human suffering leads to a resurrection? The evidence, nevertheless is there and has withstood recurring criticisms and even modern studies. Finally, who will believe? Those whose own experience has prepared them to accept the most fundamental truth: the living God loves and restores people to life.

Some persons are predisposed to believe because they have experienced that God himself walks with them in their trials and gives them hope when everything seems lost. Because of this, they recognize in Christ the ideal human ³They were saying to one another, "Who will roll back the stone for us from the entrance to the tomb?" ⁴But as they looked up, they noticed that the stone had already been rolled away. It was a very big stone.

⁵As they entered the tomb, they saw a young man sitting on the right, dressed in a white robe, and they were amazed. ⁶But he said to them, "Don't be alarmed; you are looking for Jesus of Nazareth who was crucified; he has been raised and is not here. This is, however, the place where they laid him. ⁷Now go and tell his disciples and Peter: Jesus is going ahead of you to Galilee; you will see him there just as he told you." ⁸The women went out of the tomb and fled, beside themselves with fear. And they said nothing to anyone because of their fear.

Short conclusion of Mark's Gospel

◆ ⁹After Jesus rose early on the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary of Magdala from whom he had driven out seven demons. ¹⁰She went and reported the news to his followers, who were now mourning and weeping. ¹¹But when they heard that he lived and had been seen by her, they would not believe it.

¹²After this he showed himself in another form to two of them, as they were walking into the country. ¹³These men too went back and told the others, but they did not believe them.

¹⁴Later Jesus showed himself to the Eleven while they were at table. He scolded them for their unbelief and stubbornness in refusing to be-being and understand that he had to suffer before reaching his glory. They have learned to understand the ways of God and that is why they believe the witnesses of the resurrected Christ.

It is not more difficult to believe in Christ's resurrection than to believe in his words, for both go together. He who believes has overcome the world. John the apostle says (1 Jn 5:4). This means overcoming the false meaning that most people give to their existence due to their ignorance of God. Whoever believes has overcome the fears each of us has when we have to pass through uncharted paths, when we have to set reason aside and entrust ourselves in God's hands.

◆ In verse 8, there is an abrupt ending of Mark's Gospel. We were looking forward to the meeting between Jesus and the apostles in Galilee, but it does not take place. Why? We do not know. We find only a series of brief references to Jesus' appearances after his resurrection.

Proclaim the Good News to all creation. The Good News is the seed that will be planted in the world and will flourish, in proper time, in all the fields of human activity. Salvation is not a matter of saving isolated souls or individual beings. The Gospel is to be proclaimed to all creation in all activities and acts of those who have been renewed by Baptism. They are to be the yeast that transforms human history.

■ THE NAME OF JESUS

On the day of his resurrection, Jesus' human nature begins to participate fully in divine Glory. Jesus is now the "Son of God with power" (Rom 1:1). Jesus now asks us to believe in his Name, that is in the divine power he has just received and that works through him.

The Name is a word that has little or no meaning for us. But for the Jews it meant the active presence of God. This term allowed them to speak of God's mysterious presence in the world without disregarding his greatness. The Bible does not say that God walked with the Hebrews toward the promised land (for God does not walk); instead it says that his Name or his Face (Ex 33:14) was among them. God's presence could not be confined within his temple, but the Bible says that his Name dwelt in this temple, from whence he blessed all the activities of his people (1 Kg 8:27).

The Name, thus, means divine presence or power. And Paul says that the resurrected Jesus has received this Name that outshines any other (Phil 2:9). God the Father has given it to him and Jesus, who has received it, is not less than him since whatever belongs to his Father is now his as well. Jesus does not receive glory as one receives a title or an honour (as already proclaimed in Is 9:5), for divine glory can be granted only to God. If he receives a divine title, that is because he actually received divinity from the lieve those who had seen him after he had been raised.

■ ¹⁵ Then he told them, "Go out to the whole world and proclaim the Good News to all creation. ¹⁶ He who believes and is baptized will be saved; he who refuses to believe will be condemned. ¹⁷ Signs like these will accompany those who have believed: in my Name they will cast out demons and speak new languages; ¹⁸ they will pick up snakes and, if they drink anything poisonous, they will not be hurt. They will lay hands on the sick and the sick will be healed."

¹⁹ So then, after speaking to them, the Lord Jesus was taken up into heaven and took his seat at the right of God. ²⁰ The Eleven went forth and preached everywhere while the Lord continually worked with them and confirmed the message by the miracles which accompanied them.

Father in the beginning – divinity is his own being.

Thus, Jesus is as much God as the Father, but he is so in a different way, by receiving everything from God who possess all. That is why it is written that his Name is the Son (Heb 1:4). And when we speak to the Father in the Name of Jesus, this means much more than bolstering ourselves with his merits (Heb 5:9) or making use of his valuable intercession (Heb 7:25). We present ourselves as children, knowing that God embraces us with the same paternal love he has for his own Beloved one (Eph 1:6).

From then on, our Lord Jesus Christ, with divine power begins little by little to direct human history and the personal path of each one of us to himself. The apostles were sent into the world to heal and sanctify it. The miracles and healings are not ends in themselves; they are only signs and mean: The goal of evangelization is that all creation may be gathered around the person of the Son of God made man, through the power of his Spirit. "Do not fear," the Lord says, "my Church is not a shelter against the world, its temptations and problems; rather each of you is baptized to be an apostle."

Signs like these will accompany those who believe. The Acts of the Apostles reports these signs and miracles. Even today they can be seen wherever Christians fulfill their mission of evangelizing the world.

Luke, a Syrian doctor, converted to Christianity when the first missionaries left the Jerusalem and Caesarea communities to take the Gospel beyond the borders of the Jewish country. Then, he left his homeland to accompany the Apostle, Paul.

He arrived at Rome, the capital of the known world then. He stayed there for at least two years and he met Peter and Mark who were preaching among the Christians in Rome.

When he wrote his Gospel, around the year 70, various texts containing deeds and miracles of Jesus, were available to him, the same texts which Mark and Matthew had used. But in his travels, he had also picked up other stories coming from Jesus' first disciples. These stories were kept in the oldest churches of Jerusalem and Caesarea.

Such is the origin of those first two chapters of Luke's Gospel telling us about Jesus' infancy, based on information which his mother, Mary, must have supplied.

Luke's cultural background was Greek and he was writing for Greek people. He omitted several Marcan details, things dealing with Jewish laws and customs which would have been hard to understand for his readers.

Luke saw in the Gospel the power reconciling people with God and people among themselves. Therefore, he was concerned about giving us the parables of mercy and the words condemning money – a divisive factor between people. Likewise, Luke showed the very natural way Jesus treated woman who were completely marginalized by the world.

+ 1 Many people have already related the events that have taken place among us.² writing down what we were told by the first witnesses who became ministers of the word.³ Yet after I myself had gone carefully over the whole story from the beginning, it seemed good to me to write an orderly account for you, Theophilus,⁴ so that your Excellency may know the truth of all you have been taught.

+ Luke dedicates his work to Theophilus, who may have been a well-to-do Christian. According to the custom of the times (printing did not exist), Luke gave him his manuscript with the expectation that several copies would be made at his expense for the use of Christian communities. Luke will also dedicate the Acts of the Apostles to Theophilus curacy and reliability of the stories he used in his Gospel since history is not written on the basis of rumors and legends. But there is something more important: Luke realizes that Jesus' passage among men is going to change world history. Many times we view Christian faith only as the means to save our soul, or to go to heaven or to encourage us in the difficulties of life. We forget that Christ came to save the world not just to save souls.

Luke says that he, personally, verified the ac-

The birth of John the Baptist foretold

o ⁵In the days of Herod, king of Judea, there lived a priest named Zechariah, belonging to the priestly clan of Abiah. Elizabeth, Zechariah's wife, also belonged to a priestly family. ⁶Both of them were upright in the eyes of God and lived blamelessly in accordance with all the laws and commands of the Lord, ⁷but they had no child. Elizabeth could not have any and now they were both very old.

⁸Yet, while Zechariah and the other priests were fulfilling their office, ⁹it fell to him by lot, according to the custom of the priests, to enter the sanctuary of the Lord and burn incense. ¹⁰While all the people who had gathered for the incense service were praying outside, ¹¹an angel of the Lord appeared to him, standing on the right side of the altar of incense. ¹²On seeing the angel, Zechariah was deeply troubled and a holy fear took hold of him.

¹³But the angel said to him, "Don't be afraid, Zechariah, be assured that your prayer has been heard. Your wife Elizabeth will bear you a son and you shall name him John. ¹⁴He will bring joy and gladness to you and many will rejoice at his birth.

¹⁵This son of yours will be great in the eyes of the Lord. Listen: he shall never drink wine or strong drink, but he will be filled with holy spirit even from his mother's womb. ¹⁶Through him many of the people of Israel will turn to the Lord their God. ¹⁷He himself will open the way to the Lord with the spirit and power of the prophet Elijah; he will reconcile fathers and children, and lead the disobedient to o In the days of Herod. Herod was the last king of the Jews. When he died, Judea lost its autonomy. Since God had promised not to abandon the Jewish nation, either God's plan had failed, or something new was going to appear. However, beginnings are always humble and they never make the front page of newspapers.

Zechariah was a 'priest.' For the Jewish people, one was not a priest because of a personal decision, but through family rights. There were a number of priestly families, called Aaron's descendants. All the men from these families were priests from generation to generation. From time to time they had the privilege and duty to fulfill priestly functions in the Jerusalem temple, but the rest of the time, they worked as ordinary citizens.

Elizabeth could not have children. As with Sarah, Rebecca and Rachel, famous ancestors of the Jewish people, and Hannah, mother of the prophet Samuel, this occurred so that God's goodness and power shown to the humble and despised could be made more obvious (1 Sam 1).

Your prayer has been heard. Zechariah had wanted to have a son, but he no longer hoped for one. However, in the temple, he had just prayed for the salvation God would grant his people and he is promised both.

He will not drink wine. In Israel many men consecrated themselves to God in this way: they neither cut their hair nor drank alcoholic drinks and they withdrew from the world for a while (Nm. 6). They were called Nazirites.

But Zechariah's son must be a Nazirite from his mother's womb until his death, as Samsor had been (Jg 13:13). The one who will be known as John the Baptist receives the mission to preach repentance, and his very life will be a model of austerity (Mk 1:6). In that he will be the opposite of Jesus who, but for exceptional times: such as his fasting in the desert, will live like everybody else and will not request special fasts of his disciples (Lk 7:33-34).

Then, the angel indicates what John-Zechariah's son - will be: He will go in the spirit and power of Elijah. In Scripture, we see that after Elijah disappeared, having been taken to heaven in a flaming chariot (2 Kg 2:11), the community of believers kept wondering about the meaning of such an unusual event. They even thought that just as Elijah had worked during a time of religious crisis to bring his people back to faith, so he would also return from heaven before the coming of the Messiah to restore his people's faithfulness.

The text here refers to this Israelite expectation: one should not think that Elijah would return from heaven in person as Mal 4:23 seemed to say. Rather John the Baptist would operate with the spirit of Elijah to obtain reconwisdom and righteousness, in order to make ready for the Lord a people prepared."

¹⁸Zechariah said to the angel, "How can I believe such a thing? I am an old man and my wife is elderly too." ¹⁹The angel replied, "I am Gabriel, who stand before God, and I am the one sent to speak to you and bring you this good news! My words will come true in their time, although you would not believe. ²⁰But now you will be silent and unable to speak until this has happened."

²¹Meanwhile the people waited for Zechariah, and they were surprised that he delayed so long in the sanctuary. ²²When he finally appeared, he could not speak to them and they realized that he had seen a vision in the sanctuary. He remained dumb and made signs to them.

²³When his time of service was completed, Zechariah returned to his home ²⁴and some time later Elizabeth was pregnant. For five months she kept to herself, remaining at home, and thinking, ²⁵"What is the Lord doing for me! This is his time for mercy and for taking away my public disgrace."

The annunciation

(Mt 1:18)

+ ²⁶In the sixth month, the angel Gabriel was sent from God to a town of Galilee called Nazareth. He was sent ²⁷to a young virgin who was engaged to a man named Joseph, of the family of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

²⁸The angel came to her and said, "Rejoice, full of grace, the Lord is with you." ²⁹Mary listened and was ciliation for all through justice and faithfulness to God's law.

And so, in this remote corner of the world, the Good News begins with an elderly couple without children, because nothing is impossible with God but first, we must believe in his promises.

THE VIRGIN MARY

+ How considerate God is toward men! He does not save them without their consent. The Saviour is expected and welcomed by a mother: a young girl freely and knowingly accepts to be the servant of the Lord and becomes the mother of God.

The virgin's name was Mary. Lukes uses the word virgin. Why did he not say a young girl or a woman? Simply because he is referring to the words of the prophets stating that God would be received by the virgin of Israel. For centuries God had endured thousands of infidelities of his people and he had forgiven their sins. But at his coming, the Saviour was to be received by a virgin people, namely a people who would let go of their own ambition and place their future in God's hands. God must be welcomed with a pure heart, that is, a new heart not worn out in the experience of other loves. In Jesus' time many people concluded that the Messiah would be born of a Virgin mother when they read the prophecy of Isaiah 7:14.

Now then, Luke says: Mary is The Virgin.

How can I be a mother? The angel states that the baby will be born of Mary without Joseph's intervention. The one to be born of Mary in time is the same one who exists in God, born of God, Son of the Father (see Jn 1:1).

The power of the Most High will shadow over you. The sacred books spoke of a cloud or shadow filling the temple (1 Kg 8:10) as a sign of the divine presence over the holy city protecting it (Sir 24:4).

By using this image the Gospel conveys that Mary becomes God's dwelling place, through whom he works out his mysteries. The Holy Spirit comes, not first over the Son, but over Mary so that she may conceive through the power of the Spirit as we usually say, since a man's intervention is excluded. Jesus is conceived in Mary through her total surrender to the unique and eternal Word of the Father.

Jesus was conceived by a virgin mother. Before the angel came, had Mary thought about consecrating her virginity to God? The Gospel gives no indication to this effect other than Mary's word: I do not know man. Let us recall that Mary was about to be married and was engaged to Joseph, which, according to Jewish law, gave them the rights of marriage (Mt 1:20). Under these conditions, her words would make no sense or be difficult to explain if Mary had not been determined to remain a virgin.

Many people are surprised by such a decision on Mary's part. How could she think about remaining a virgin in marriage, especially among a people who did not value virginity? Many people in non-Catholic churches, when they read in the Gospel, the brothers of Jesus, troubled at these words, wondering what this greeting could mean.

³⁰ But the angel said, "Do not fear, Mary, for God has looked kindly on you. ³¹ You shall conceive and bear a son and you shall call him Jesus. ³² He will be great and shall rightly be called Son of the Most High. The Lord God will give him the kingdom of David, his ancestor; he will rule over the people of Jacob forever³³ and his reign shall have no end."

³⁴ Then Mary said to the angel, "How can this be if I do not have intercourse with a man?" ³⁵ And the angel said to her, "The Holy Spirit will come upon you and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore, the holy child to be born shall be called Son of God. ³⁶ Even simply conclude that Mary had other children after Jesus. We have already explained this point in Mk 3:31. The sad part is that such people are so eager to deny Mary's virginity.

The one who, from the beginning, was chosen by God to welcome his only Son through an act of perfect faith, had to be a virgin. She, who was to give Jesus his blood, his hereditary traits, his character, his first education, must have grown under the shadow of the Almighty like a secret flower belonging to no one else, who had renounced everything except the living God. From then on, she would be the model for everyone, since all believers, in varying degrees depending on one's mission, renounce many things in order to venture on a way in which the only reward is God.

For a believer – man or woman – it is not that exceptional to renounce sex altogether. There are many examples of young people who have sensed, from an early age, that this evangelical way is a more direct way to come closer to Jesus. Could Mary have been less intelligent than they were, less able to sense the things of God? And after being visited in a unique way by the Holy Spirit, who is the breath of God's love, would she still have needed the loving embraces of Joseph? If the history of the church gives us so many examples of God's jealous love for those who were his friends and his saints, would he ask less of the one who was called full of grace?

What irresponsible reasoning on the part of those who have not preserved the Apostles' tradition which proclaims that Mary was and always remained a virgin! Shall we reduce the marvels of God to what we ourselves are capable of understanding and practicing?

THE ANNUNCIATION

Only Mary could make known the mystery of Jesus' conception to the primitive church. How could she express such an inner experience and how would it be reported? God does not usually communicate with his great saints and prophets through visions, or when there are visions, they are not what is most important. Everything occurs in an intimate encounter from person to person. God engraves his words in the depths of the mind, and his grace so enables the spirit of his servants that they give the total response which God expects.

Therefore, in writing, Luke had to use biblical words and forms which would allow a better understanding of Mary's encounter with God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit: an encounter which could not be expressed in human words.

The angel Gabriel. The Jews of that time believed that only seven angels of the highest rank were allowed into God's presence and they called one of them, Gabriel, the one who appears in the book of Daniel to announce the hour of salvation (Dan 8:16 and 9:24). And so, in speaking of Gabriel, the Gospel implies that, for Mary, everything began with the assurance that this was the moment when the destiny of the world was being decided.

Rejoice. This was the joyful way in which prophets addressed the daughter of Zion, that is to say, the community of the humble, who looked forward to the coming of the Saviour (Zep 3:14; Zec 9:9).

Full of grace. The word used in the Gospel means specifically: beloved and favoured. Other people had been loved, chosen, favoured; but in this instance it becomes the very name of Mary.

She was troubled by these words. But the text does not speak of fear as it did in the case of Zechariah (1:12). From the first moment that Mary's spirit was awakened, she was aware of the presence of God inspiring her every decision, and so the divine revelation does not cause fear in her. But the divine words, revealing her unique vocation, trouble her.

You are going to conceive. We have already mentioned that the phrase refers to Isaiah's prophecy (7:14). Isaiah was announcing the one who would be Emmanuel meaning God-with-us. Mary will name him Jesus which means saviour.

He will rule over the people of Jacob forever (or the Israelites). This is a way of saying that Jesus is the Saviour, the son of David, announced by the prophets: 2 Sam 7:16; Is 9:16.

He will be great, but not in the way that John the Baptist would be great before God, for John was only a man (1:15). Jesus was to be son of the Most High and son of David: these two attributes pointed to the expected Messiah or your relative Elizabeth is expecting a son in her old age, although she was unable to have a child, and she is now in her sixth month. ³⁷So with God nothing is impossible."

³⁸Then Mary said, "I am the servant of the Lord, let it be done to me as you have said." And the angel left her.

Mary visits Elizabeth

■ ³⁹Mary then set out for a town in the Hills of Judah. ⁴⁰She entered the house of Zechariah and greeted Elizabeth. ⁴¹When Elizabeth heard Mary's greeting, the baby suddenly moved within her. Elizabeth was filled with holy spirit and, ⁴²giving a loud cry, said, "You are most blessed among women and blessed is the fruit of your womb! ⁴³How is it that the mother of my Lord comes to me?" ⁴⁴The moment your greeting sounded in my ears, the baby within me suddenly moved for joy. ⁴⁵Blessed are you who believed that the Lord's word would come true!"

Saviour (2 Sam 7: 14; Ps 2: 7). This is why it was made clear that Joseph was from the family of David: see commentary on Mt 1:20.

THE SERVANT OF THE LORD

I am the servant of the Lord. In saying this Mary does not lower herself with false humility, instead, she expresses her faith and her surrender.

From her will be born the one who is going to be both the servant announced by the prophets (Is 42: 1; 50: 1; 52: 13) and the only Son (Heb 1).

Many persons are so mistaken about the word servant that they view almighty God as using his servants to his own ends without taking the time to look at them and to love them. For them God would lose his greatness if he were to give Mary authentic responsibility in the incarnation of her Son and if he were to make her worthy of her Son. According to them it is characteristic of God to decide, act and create without us, as we are only God's instruments and God only needed Mary to provide a human body for his Son.

This, however, is contrary to the spirit of the Bible which highlights God's attempts to be close to men (Deut 4: 7; Prov 8: 31). God had no need of a woman to make a human body, but he wanted to have a mother for his Son; and for Mary to really be that mother, it was necessary that God had looked upon her with greater love than any other creature. Thus, Mary is called full of grace.

Grace is what we call the power God has to heal our spirit, to instill in us the disposition to believe, and to make us resonate with the truth so that the expression of real love comes from us in a spontaneous and unexpected way. We call grace what came from the living God to blossom on earth: Is 45: 8; Ps 85: 11.

Mary is really full of grace because Jesus was born of her as he is born of the Father. He is not her son only through the flesh, a stranger to his mother as some Christians believe, but he is son of her soul and of her faith, because she is the servant of the Lord, the one who believed (Lk

1: 45) and in whom God has done great things (Lk 1: 49).

This is why the church believes that Mary has a unique role in the work of our salvation. She is the marvel that God achieved at the outset of transforming humankind into his image. Along with the Son of God made man, she is the person whom God lifted up to unique intimacy with himself so that, through her, he could come into the world. Along with Christ, the new Adam (Rom 6: 14 and 1 Cor 15: 45), she is the true "mother of the living," the Woman of the new creation, in contrast with Eve, the sinner.

THE HUMBLE PEOPLE

■ Mary, in response to the angel's discreet invitation, went to share her joy with her elderly cousin, Elizabeth. And so was fulfilled the promise made to Zechariah, Your son will be filled with the Holy Spirit from his mother's womb.

What is most important in the story is not what is spectacular. The Gospel prefers to draw our attention to life-filled events.

A few years later, Jewish crowds will go to John the Baptist in search of salvation, and they will realize that God gave him the fire of his Spirit and of his Word, but no one will wonder how he received the Spirit of God and no one will know that a humble girl, Mary, put God's plan in motion on that Visitation day.

Blessed are you who believed! With great joy Mary discovers that her virginity has been fruitful. She, who gave up the possibility of having children and giving life as all women desire, communicates the life of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Jesus. Mary became the Temple of God.

About Mary's canticle. Mary, so unobtrusive in the Gospel, having no part in Jesus' ministry, is the one who proclaims the historical revolution begun with the coming of the Saviour.

She proclaims:

– the mercy of God who always keeps his promises,

⁴⁶ And Mary said:

"My soul proclaims the greatness of the Lord,

⁴⁷ my spirit exults in God my saviour,

⁴⁸ He has looked upon his servant in her lowliness, and people forever will call me blessed.

⁴⁹ The Mighty One has done great things for me, Holy is his Name!

⁵⁰ From age to age his mercy extends to those who live in his presence.

⁵¹ He has acted with power and done wonders, and scattered the proud with their plans.

⁵² He has put down the mighty from their thrones and lifted up those who are downtrodden.

⁵³ He has filled the hungry with good things but has sent the rich away empty.

⁵⁴ He held out his hand to Israel, his servant, for he remembered his mercy,

⁵⁵ even as he promised our fathers, Abraham and his descendants for ever."

⁵⁶ Mary remained with Elizabeth about three months and then returned home.

derful thing for her and they rejoiced with her.

- the change which is to take place in the human condition.

This is what, Martin Luther King, the emancipator of the Blacks, recalled: "Despite the fact that all too often people see in the church a power opposed to any change, in fact, the church preserves a powerful ideal which urges men toward the summits and opens their eyes as to their own destiny. From the hot spots of Africa to the black areas of Alabama, I have seen men rising and shaking off their chains. They had just discovered they were God's children, and that, as God's children, it was impossible to enslave them."

With the twentieth century comes the historical moment when it dawns on the world that the poor and lowly may topple oppressive powers, no matter how great, provided they do it without using the weapons of the rich and the violent.

The song of Mary also expresses the deepest feeling of the Christian soul. There is a time for us to seek truth, to discover what our major duties are and to become truly and essentially human. There is a time for asking from and serving God. But in the long run we come to understand that divine love seeks out what is poorer and weaker to fill it and make it great. Then our only prayer becomes thanksgiving to God for his understanding and merciful designs.

- o What was circumcision? (see Gen 17).

The child lived in the desert, that is the desert of Judea by the Dead Sea, where some large communities of people who looked forward to the coming of the Saviour in the near future, had settled. These communities, called the Essenes, devoted themselves to prayer and meditation on Scripture. They also took part in the education of children.

one in your family has that name;"
⁶²and they asked the father by means of signs for the name he wanted to give. ⁶³Zechariah asked for a writing tablet and wrote on it, "His name is John," and they were very surprised. ⁶⁴At that very time Zechariah could speak again and his first words were in praise of God.

⁶⁵A holy fear came on all in the neighbourhood, and throughout the Hills of Judah the people talked about these events. ⁶⁶As they heard this, they pondered it in their minds and wondered, "What will this child be?" For they understood that the hand of the Lord was with him.

⁶⁷Zechariah, filled with holy spirit sang this canticle, ⁶⁸"Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for he has come and redeemed his people.

⁶⁹He has raised up for us a victorious Saviour in the house of David his servant,

⁷⁰as he promised through his prophets of old,

⁷¹salvation from our enemies and from the hand of our foes.

⁷²He has shown mercy to our fathers and remembered his holy covenant,

⁷³the oath he swore to Abraham,

⁷⁴to deliver us from the enemy,

⁷⁵that we may serve him fearlessly as a holy and righteous people all the days of our life.

⁷⁶And you, my child, shall be called prophet of the Most High for you shall go before the Lord to prepare the way for him ⁷⁷and enable his people to know of their salvation when he comes to forgive the sins.

⁷⁸This is the work of the mercy of our God who comes as a rising sun

⁷⁹shining on those who live in darkness and in the shadow of death, and guiding our feet into the way of peace.

⁸⁰As the child grew up, he was seen to be strong in the Spirit; he lived in the desert till the day when he appeared openly in Israel.

The birth of Jesus

2 ¹At that time the emperor issued a decree that a census of the whole empire should be taken. ²This first census was taken while Quirinus was governor of Syria. ³Everyone has to be registered in his own town.

67. 2 K 3, 15; Eek 1, 3	69. 1 S 2, 10; Ps 18, 3; 132, 17	71. Ps 106, 10	72. Ex 2, 24; Lev 26, 42

+ The emperor issued a decree. The Jews formed a small nation under the rule of the Roman empire, which included many diverse peoples. The census took place when Quirinius was governor of Syria. This provides us with a fairly accurate date: the year 5 or 6 "before Christ." That is because there is a slight error in our way of counting the years "after Christ": in fact Christ was born before year 1 of the Christian era.

Because of the census, Joseph and Mary had to leave their Nazareth home at the time the child was to be born. Joseph, a descendant of David, must have had relatives in Bethlehem, the city of David and of his family. Jesus may have been born in the house of one of those relatives.

There are many caves in the Palestinian hills and many people would take over one of these caves as their first residence. Then, with time, they would add one or several rooms made of stone and wood. The people from the country used to keep the animals in the simplest room of their house. Since there was not enough room or privacy in the common room, Joseph and Mary settled in the area where the animals were kept.

Thus, it had been foreseen by the Father. Jesus would be educated in a real home where neither work nor bread would be lacking. But in his birth, as in his death, Jesus would resemble the most abandoned. In this voluntary poverty we see the love of God which does not fear

So the people travelled ⁴and Joseph set out from Nazareth of Galilee. As he belonged to the family of David and was even a descendant of his, he went to Judea to David's town of Bethlehem ⁵to be registered with Mary, his wife, who was with child.

⁶They were in Bethlehem when the time came for her to have her child, ⁷and she gave birth to a son, her firstborn. She wrapped him in clothes and laid him in the manger, because there was no place for them in the living room.

The shepherds and the angels

o ⁸There were shepherds camping in the countryside, keeping watch over their flocks by night. ⁹Suddenly an angel of the Lord appeared to them, with the Glory of the Lord shining around them.

As they were terrified, ¹⁰the angel said to them, "Don't be afraid; I am here to give you good news, great joy for all the people. ¹¹Today a Saviour has been born to you in David's town; he is the Messiah and the Lord. ¹²Let this be a sign to you: you will find a baby wrapped in clothes and lying in a manger."

¹³Just then the angel was surrounded by many more angels, praising God and saying, ¹⁴"Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth for God is blessing humankind."

¹⁵When the angels had left them and gone back to heaven, the shepherds said to one another, "Let's go as far as Bethlehem and see what the Lord has told us about." ¹⁶So they came hurriedly and found Mary and Joseph with the baby lying in the manger. ¹⁷On seeing this they related what they had been told about the child, ¹⁸and all were astonished on hearing the shepherds.

◆ ¹⁹As for Mary, she treasured all these messages and continually pondered over them.

humiliation and we understand that all the comforts and conveniences are nothing compared with the incomparable riches: Christ in our midst.

She gave birth to her firstborn son. This term was also used then to designate an only son, underlining that this first son was consecrated to God (Ex 13:1). See also Rom 8:29; Col 1:15.

Necessary stages in the religious formation of humankind being over, God sent his Son on earth to introduce us to true religion. And now the angel proclaims peace and graciousness to humankind. See how much God loves us! Let yourselves be caught up in his love! Why continue to fear? Have you not understood that God became a child and that from now on he will be among us as a silent and defenseless child? Fear of God, or rather joy and simplicity?

"Happy mother of God! Today you gave birth to the Saviour of all times and giving birth, you remained a virgin." In fact God was not too great for Mary: "From on high he sees the proud, but he becomes weak with the humble."

There have been many departures from faith during the past twenty centuries: one of the most common has been to misunderstand how God became man. We say that Mary is the mother of God and not only the mother of the man Jesus, because the Son of God become man cannot be divided.

o The glory of the Lord shone over them. Upon seeing themselves shrouded in the divine mystery, the shepherds are afraid. But then, we hear about joy because joy and peace are the first fruits of the Gospel when we welcome it.

Let this be a sign to you. They will recognize God who became poor for us in order to communicate his treasures to us.

They returned giving glory to God. While the world was in darkness, some shepherds saw God. Why were they called to the manger? Perhaps so that Mary and Joseph could have the comfort of seeing the poor reach their refuge, and also most probably, because God delights in revealing himself.

With the birth of Jesus a new age begins (the final age as the apostles will say) in which, on one hand, people hope for the salvation of the world, and on the other hand, they already enjoy this salvation. The shepherds are the models of those dedicated to contemplation. Following them, the church will never be totally involved in works of mercy or human promotion, but instead with its truest spirit, it will continue to look upon Christ, present in its midst, giving thanks and rejoicing in God.

Flashed by the sun, I am beautiful in his sight (Songs 1:5).

²⁰ The shepherds then returned giving glory and praise to God for all they had heard and seen, just as the angels had told them.

²¹ On the eighth day the circumcision of the baby had to be performed; he was named Jesus, the name the angel had given him before his mother was pregnant.

Jesus is presented in the Temple

o ²² The day came when the purification had to be performed according to the law of Moses. So they brought the baby up to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord. ²³ as it is written in the law of the Lord: Every firstborn male shall be consecrated to God. ²⁴ And they offered a sacrifice as ordered in the law of the Lord: a pair of turtle-doves or two young pigeons.

²⁵ There lived in Jerusalem at this time a very upright and devout man named Simeon; the Holy Spirit was in him. As he looked forward to the time when the Lord would comfort Israel, ²⁶ he had been assured by the Holy Spirit that he would not die before he had seen the Messiah of the Lord. ²⁷ So he was led into the Temple by the Holy Spirit at the time the parents brought the child Jesus to do for him according to the custom of the Law.

²⁸ Simeon took the child in his arms and blessed God, saying,

²⁹ "Now, O Lord, you can dismiss your servant in peace, for you have fulfilled your word

³⁰ and my eyes have seen your salvation

³¹ which you display in the sight of all the peoples.

³² Here is the light you will reveal to the nations and the glory of your people Israel."

³⁴ Simeon blessed them and said to Mary, his mother, "See him; the multitudes of Israel are to encounter him, for their rise or their fall. He shall stand as a controversial sign, ³⁵ while a sword will pierce your own soul. Then the secret thoughts of everyone will be brought to light."

♦ Mary kept all these things. because every event of her life was for her the way God revealed his plans to her, and all the more so now that she was living with Jesus. She wondered, marveled but was not confused, because her faith was beyond any wavering. However, she too had to discover the ways of salvation slowly and painfully. She pondered on these things until the time of the Resurrection and Pentecost when all the words and deeds of Jesus became clear.

o Mary and Joseph went to the temple to fulfill a ritual of the Jewish religion (Lev 12:8). Besides, Jesus being a firstborn male, he must be consecrated to God. In the temple the Holy Family met two elderly people who were also looking forward to salvation as did everyone. But they were the only ones who deserved to recognize the Saviour before he could express himself.

Simeon and Anna alike expected a Saviour in the purest sense: not a temporal or political saviour as was commonly expected in Jesus' time, but a universal saviour from evil and sin.

the initiator of God's true Kingdom. These two holy persons – and Mary and Joseph as well – belong to the "small remnant of Israel," a minority of Jews who were faithful to the best teaching of the prophets.

Simeon takes the child Jesus in his arms and raises him in an offering gesture. In fact, this old man offers his life which is about to end.

What is the meaning of the sword which will pierce Mary's soul? This probably indicates Mary's grief upon seeing her son die on the cross. But it also means that Mary will suffer because she will not always understand what this son does. Though she knows Jesus' intentions better than anyone else, at times she will not grasp the why of his actions and because she loves him so much, she will suffer all the more.

Christ is God's light, which enlightens people but which also blinds and confuses them at times. He is a sign that is opposed, but this is a mystery – those who oppose him are not always the worst ones. There are some people who believe in Christ, but do not follow him. Unable to see his light they do not know that it condemns ³⁶ There was also a prophetess named Anna, daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher. After leaving her father's home, she had been seven years with her husband and, since then, she had been continually about the Temple, serving God night and day in fasting and prayer. ³⁷ She was now a widow of eighty-four. ³⁸ Coming up at that time, she gave praise to God and spoke of the child to all who looked forward to the deliverance of Jerusalem.

³⁹ When the parents had fulfilled all that was required by the law of the Lord, they returned to their town, Nazareth in Galilee. ⁴⁰ There the child grew in stature and strength and was filled with wisdom: the grace of God was upon him.

I must be in my Father's house

◆ ⁴¹ Every year the parents of Jesus went to Jerusalem for the Feast of the Passover, as was customary. ⁴² And when Jesus was twelve years old, he went up with them according to the custom for this feast. ⁴³ After the festival was over, they returned, but the boy Jesus remained in Jerusalem and neither Joseph nor his mother knew it.

⁴⁴ The first day of the journey they thought he was in the company and looked for him among their relatives and friends. ⁴⁵ As they did not find him, they went back to Jerusalem searching for him ⁴⁶ and, after three days they found him in the Temple, sitting among the teachers, listening to them and asking questions. ⁴⁷ And all the people were amazed at his understanding and his answers.

⁴⁸ His parents were very surprised when they saw him and his mother said to him, "Son, why have you done this to us? Don't you realize that your father and I have been full of sorrow while searching for you?" ⁴⁹ Then he said to them, "Why were you looking for me? Do you not know that I must be in my Father's house?" ⁵⁰ But they did not understand this answer.

them. And there are good people who do not believe because God wills that they seek the light their whole life long.

◆ NAZARETH – ACHIEVING FREEDOM

During his Nazareth years Jesus discovers life as any child or youth of his age. He does not receive special education. He does not manifest extraordinary talents other than perfect judgment to assess and evaluate everything according to God's criteria.

At twelve an adolescent was to observe religious prescriptions, among them the pilgrimage to Jerusalem for the feasts. Seated in the shade of the Temple galleries, the teachers of the law used to teach groups of pilgrims and to dialogue with them.

On that occasion, Jesus manifested his independence for the first time. Why have you done this to us? The child could have asked for permission or have let his parents know where he was. How could he remain for two days without thinking how worried they would be? Actually, he achieved radical freedom before returning with them and he did not feel guilty about causing them such pain.

From then on, he would be obedient to them but he had shown them that he knew who he was, and that he was capable of any sacrifice or breaking of ties to serve his father in whatever way seemed good to him.

When reading this text, we should reflect on the respect that parents must have for the vocation of their children and the effort they must make to be able to understand them when they begin to be independent. Instead of speaking of the lost child, it would be more precise to say that the young Jesus had found himself.

It is surprising that Jesus' first conflict (at least to all appearances) was with Mary. It was a conflict of misunderstanding, in which neither Jesus nor Mary were to blame: they both acted right, from their own standpoints. Perhaps this symbolizes many of the conflicts happening within the Church. There are conflicts stemming from different and legitimate standpoints, ministries and charismas, which are not resolved by looking for whom to o ⁵² And Jesus increased in wisdom and age and grace with God and men.

John the Baptist prepares the way

(Mk 1:1; Mt 3:1; Jn 1:19)

3 ¹ It was the fifteenth year of the rule of the Emperor Tiberius; Pontius Pilatus was governor of Judea; Herod had authority over Galilee, his brother Philip ruled over the country of Iturea and Trachonitis, and Lysanias over Abilene. ² Annas and Caiaphas were the High Priests when the word of God came to John, the son of Zechariah in the desert.

■ ³ John promoted a baptism for repentant people to obtain forgiveness of sins and he went through the whole country bordering the Jordan River. ⁴ It was just as is written in the book of the prophet Isaiah: I hear a voice crying out in the desert: prepare the way of the Lord, make his path straight. ⁵ The valleys will be filled and the mountains and hills made low. Everything crooked will be made straight and the rough paths will be made smooth; ⁶ and every mortal will see the salvation of God.

⁷ John said to the crowds who came out to be baptized by him, "You, brood of snakes! How will you escape when divine punishment comes? ⁸ Produce now the fruits of a true change of heart, and don't deceive yourselves by saying: 'We are sons of Abraham.' For I tell you, God can make sons of Abraham from these stones. ⁹ The axe is already laid to the root of the tree and every tree that fails blame, but rather through dialogue and mutual understanding.

o Luke does not mention anything more about the life of Jesus in Nazareth until he reaches the age of thirty, when he begins to preach. He was Joseph's apprentice and after Joseph's death, he became the carpenter of Nazareth. Joseph must have died before Jesus revealed himself, because, otherwise, when Jesus left home, Mary would have remained with Joseph. Mary's son was a man among men and later the Christian community of Nazareth would keep things made by the carpenter Son of God for a long time.

+ Luke provides us with facts which enable us to situate Jesus in history. It is the year 27 after Christ and actually Jesus is about thirty or thirty-five years old. The Jews have lost their autonomy and their country is divided into four small provinces. Herod and Philip, sons of the Herod mentioned at the birth of Jesus (see Mt 2:1) rule over two of these provinces.

Those interested in the chronological commentaries can also read John 2:20.

In those years the Jews were suffering from Roman imperialism, the corruption of their own leaders, the materialism and lack of faith seen in priests, and political radicalization among the people who were divided into irreconcilable factions and parties. This very deterioration of the situation convinces them that God's promise about his coming is about to occur: the Reign of God will be now or never. That is why John's preaching awakens great interest.

■ THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS

John shows the way we must follow in order to be saved: we must acknowledge that we are sinners and that all of us are responsible for the dramatic situation in which we find ourselves.

People must admit they are sinners and ask God's forgiveness. This first step will not change the world, but it will open the way to authentic salvation. People who have asked for God's forgiveness will find means of renewing society different from those used by people who think they are the good and just ones in contending with those who exploit and are evil.

The Jewish people versed in Scripture, had a very strong consciousness of sin and so, they were open to hearing John when he spoke of seeking God's forgiveness.

Actually, not everyone was ready to change: we all have our good reasons for thinking that in our case, a sin is somehow justified: I am doing something wrong, but ... Besides, we convince ourselves that God will be understanding with us who belong to his church, who are on the side of the good guys, who defend the interests of religion: We are children of Abraham. We are real believers, and good Catholics ... and a brood of snakes.

People, anxious to obtain God's forgiveness, came to John from every group: even prostitutes, tax-collectors (Mk 2:13) and soldiers of the oppressor. John rejected no one but he did demand a personal commitment to justice from everyone. The Kingdom of God would not begin with a call to good will, a call which does not go to produce good fruit will be cut down and thrown to the fire."

¹⁰ The people asked him, "What are we to do?" ¹¹ And John answered, "If you have two shirts, give one to the man who has none; and if you have food, do the same."

¹² Even tax collectors came to be baptized and asked him, "Master, what must we do?" ¹³ John said to them, "Don't collect more than your fixed rate." ¹⁴ People serving as soldiers asked John, "What about us? What are we to do?" And he answered, "Don't take anything by force or threaten the people by denouncing them falsely. Be content with your pay."

◆ ¹⁵ The people were wondering about John's identity, "Could he be the Messiah?" ¹⁶ Then John answered them, "I baptize you with water, but the one who is coming will do much more: he will baptize you with Holy Spirit and fire. As for me, I am not worthy to untie his sandal. ¹⁷ He comes with a winnowing fan to clear his threshing floor and gather the grain into his barn. But the chaff he will burn with unquenchable fire."

¹⁸ In this way John encouraged the people and raised their hope ¹⁹ until Herod had him put in jail. For John reproached Herod for living with Herodias, his brother's wife, and for his evil deeds. ²⁰ Then Herod added another crime to all the rest by putting John in prison.

below words and good intentions: those who were baptized had given up their sins and from among them would come Jesus' disciples.

John invites us to share, that is, to prepare a society which cares and is concerned about giving to everyone what is necessary, and does not blindly accept the differences which emerge from money or power: Do not take advantage of people.

Our conversion will be deep and lasting if we can be critical of our false way of judging the world and people. To convert a rich man means to help him ask himself the why of his wealth in the face of so many poor. The husband who betrays his wife readily will have to realize both his male chauvinism and his inability to relate to his wife in a mature way.

John's call for a personal conversion brings about the renewal of society. It is not enough for a few prostitutes or drunks to be converted. We must ask ourselves about the network of complicity which allows widespread prostitution; about the economic circuit coming from alcoholism; about social mechanisms which marginalize the workers, peasants and blacks.

◆ Baptism means to be immersed in water and to rise. The Essenes in the desert were baptized on the occasion of certain feasts to show their desire to reach a purer life when the Saviour would come. John, in turn, baptizes those who want to straighten out their life, marking their commitment by a visible ritual.

Here the Gospel compares John with Jesus and John's baptism with Christian baptism.

All of us have heard words like: since Jesus was not baptized until he was thirty years old, one should be baptized as an adult. But this is a useless argument since we are not dealing with the same baptism and the demands are different.

Baptism in water ... baptism in fire: this refers to very common experiences. We wash stains off clothes in water, but what has been washed does not then resemble what is new. Besides there are stains which stay. On the other hand, fire purifies rusted metal so that shining metal comes out of the crucible as good as new. Moreover, fire is able to destroy the stain together with the thing that is stained.

John baptizes with water those who want to straighten out their life. For them, baptism is a way of expressing publicly their decisions and promises. Such resolutions are fallible as any human commitment is and insufficient for eradicating the root of evil from our heart.

Jesus, on the other hand, requests that his apostles baptize those who enter the church. At that moment, if baptism is accepted with faith, God gives his Spirit which transforms people interiorly.

John did not baptize children (or women). On the other hand, as Christian baptism draws its power, not so much from the commitment of the recipient, as from the gift of God making us his children, we can baptize children. They may receive the gift of God, provided that their family, and the Christian community take the responsibility for their growth in faith.

+ Jesus, neither needs to be converted, nor to receive John's baptism. But, being the Saviour,

Jesus is baptized by John

(Mt 3:13; Mk 1:9; Jn 1:29)

+ ²¹ Now, with all the people who came to be baptized, Jesus too was baptized. Then, as he was praying, the heaven opened: ²² the Holy Spirit came down upon him in the bodily form of a dove and a voice from heaven was heard, "You are my Son, the Beloved One, you are my Chosen One."

o ²³ When Jesus made his appearance, he had reached the age of thirty years. He was known as the son of Joseph, whose father and forefathers were:

Heli, ²⁴ Matthat, Levi, Melki, Jan-nai, Joseph, ²⁵ Matthatias, Amos, Nahum, Esli, Naggai, ²⁶ Maath, Mat-tathias, Semein, Josech, Joda, ²⁷ Joanan, Rhesa, Zerubbabel, Shealtiel, Neri, ²⁸ Melki, Addi, Cosam, Elmadam, Er, ²⁹ Joshua, Eliezer, Jorim, Matthat, Levi, ³⁰ Simeon, Ju-dah, Joseph, Jonam, Eliakim, ³¹ Me-lea, Menna, Matthata, Nathan, David, ³² Jesse, Obed, Boaz, Salmon, Nahson, ³³ Amminadab, Ram, Hezron, Perez, Judah, ³⁴ Jacob, Isaac, Abraham, Terah, Nahor, ³⁵ Serug, Reu, Peleg, Eber, Shelah, ³⁶ Cainan, Arphaxad, Shem, Noah, Lamech, ³⁷ Methuselah, Enoch, Jared, Ma-haleel, Cainan, ³⁸ Enos, Seth, and Adam – who was from God.

Jesus tempted in the wilderness

(Mt 4:1; Mk 1:12)

4 ¹ Jesus was now full of Holy Spirit. As he returned from the Jordan, he followed the Spirit who led him into the desert ² where he was he wants to be with his sinful brothers seeking the way to forgiveness. Upon receiving John's baptism, Jesus states that this is the right way: to seek justice and to reform one's life.

There had been no prophets for centuries. God seemed silent and the Jews were saying that "the heavens were closed." But now, God speaks again and Jesus takes over from the prophets. The heavens opened, means that Jesus received a divine revelation (see Ez 1:1 and Rev. 4:1).

You are my beloved. Who saw and who heard that voice is not clear from the Gospel (Mt 3:16; Mk 1:10; Jn 1:32). Studying the texts brings us to the following conclusion: Jesus was favored with a revelation from God which John the Baptist may have shared. But, why such a manifestation? Did Jesus need to know that he was the Son of God?

Let us not forget that the phrase son of God can be understood in various ways. In the period before Jesus, the king of Israel was called son of God. Son of God was also used to designate the expected Messiah, chosen by God to save Israel.

Jesus was Son of God in the sense of Only Son of God, begotten of God, from the time of his conception. From that moment on, he was conscious of being the Son of God.

On the other hand, it was only at the time of his baptism by John that Jesus received the call from God inviting him to begin his ministry of salvation, and that God made him his Son (in the old biblical sense), that is, prophet and king of his people. So, v. 20 recalls a phrase from Isaiah 42:1 referring to the Saviour.

Since the word of God (if it is really from God) is always effective and accomplishes what it says, Jesus receives at the same time the fullness of the Spirit who consecrates prophets and works miracles. From the moment of his conception Jesus enjoyed the fullness of the Spirit bonding him in a unique relationship with his Father. Now, he receives the Spirit enabling him to be the prophet and the servant of the Father.

Thus, Jesus is anointed to proclaim the Reign of God and to call the poor first (4:18). Different from so many liberators who, according to Scripture, received the Spirit with a view to a specific mission, Jesus is fully saviour. Different from us, always so concerned to reserve a way out of our commitments, Jesus will not rest until his word and witness to the truth lead him to his death.

In older texts from Luke 3:22 we read: You are my Son, today I have given you life (as in Ps 2:7). This is another way of proclaiming the Messiah Saviour.

John's Gospel shows that despite such an obvious revelation, Jesus took his time before going public. The following day, John the Baptist forced his hand when he sent some of his own disciples to Jesus (Jn 1:35), and a week later, it was Mary's intervention in the wedding at Cana which pushed him into action (Jn 2:1).

o Luke then presents a list of Jesus' ancestors, which is quite different from Matthew's (Mt 1:1). Luke not only goes back to Abraham, but tempted by the Devil for forty days. He did not eat anything during all this and, in the end, he was hungry. ³The Devil then said to him, "If you are son of God tell this stone to turn into bread." ⁴But Jesus answered, "The Scripture says: People cannot live on bread alone."

⁵Then the Devil took him up to a high place and showed him in a flash all the nations of the world. ⁶And he said to Jesus, "I can give you power over all the nations and their wealth will be yours, for power and wealth have been delivered to me and I give them to anyone I choose. ⁷All this will be yours provided you worship me."

⁸But Jesus replied, "The Scripture says: You shall worship the Lord your God and serve him alone."

⁹Then the Devil took him up to Jerusalem and set him on the highest wall of the Temple; and he said, "If you are son of God, throw yourself down from here, ¹⁰for it is written: God will order his angels to take care of you" and again: They will hold you up on their hands, in case you hurt your foot on the stones." ¹²But Jesus replied, "It is written: You shall not challenge the Lord your God."

¹³When the Devil had exhausted every way of tempting Jesus, he left him until an opportune time.

he also supplies the legendary list of Abraham's ancestors all the way back to the first man, as if to emphasize that Jesus has come to save all of humanity plunged into sin since Adam's disobedience. Moreover, from Joseph to Abraham, the list of ancestors varied depending on whether one counted natural parents or adoptive parents, since adoption was a frequent occurrence among the Jews.

he has made us fall, he then accuses us and tries to convince us that our fall will not be forgiven by God.

If you are God's Son. Jesus knew who he was, but he had not yet tested his power. Could he not, for a moment, release divine energy when his body was weak from hunger? Could he not, some day, get down from the cross to save himself?

Jesus refuses to be self-serving. He has higher goals: and so the Devil takes him higher. Knowing people as they are, Jesus is tempted to impose himself on the people and manipulate them. He is tempted to compromise and use weapons of the devil who respects neither the truth, nor freedom of conscience. It would then be easy to reign over the nations "in the name of God," since the devil gives them to whom he wishes.

But Jesus has chosen to serve only God. The devil asks, "Why, then, do you not begin your preaching with something spectacular, like dropping from a high place into the midst of the crowd coming to pray in the temple? – Don't you believe that God will perform a miracle for you?" – This time the Devil uses the very words of Scripture: in reading them, one could think, that with much faith, one would always be healthy and successful. Jesus warns against the error of a "faith" which pretends to remove the cross. Jesus will not demand miracles from his Father to avoid the suffering of humiliation and rejection which are the lot of God's messengers: this would be to challenge God under the pretense of trusting him.

The devil left him to return at an opportune time. In the Passion of Jesus, the devil will turn the people's wickedness against the Liberator whom he could not lead astray. See Jn 14:30.

THE TEMPTATION

■ In secular history, people only participate and cope with other people. But sacred history views things from another perspective: God's plan unfolds hindered by the disturbing devices of the evil spirit, and people are called to take part in this struggle which exceeds their own plans. This is why Jesus had to face the evil one.

We speak of temptation when we feel the pressure of bad instincts or when we feel dragged into doing evil by circumstances. Jesus did not have our bad instincts but the Holy Spirit led him to be tested in the desert – remember that to tempt and to test have the same meaning – and there he felt the strongest persuasion from the evil one trying to dissuade him from his mission (see also Mt 4:1).

Jesus, filled with the Holy Spirit, began his ministry by undergoing a very hard test: forty days of total solitude and fasting. In this situation, Jesus experienced his frailty as he faced a leap into the unknown: he was about to let go of life in Nazareth in surrender to the Father's will and begin a mission which would lead him to death within a few years.

The devil, or the accuser spoke to him; thus he is named in Scripture because he always criticizes. He leads us to accuse God, and when

Jesus proclaims his mission at Nazareth (Mt 13:53)

o ¹⁴ Jesus acted with the power of the Spirit and, on his return to Galilee, the news about him spread throughout all that territory. ¹⁵ He began teaching in the synagogues of the Jews and everyone praised him.

+ ¹⁶ When Jesus came to Nazareth where he had been brought up, he entered the synagogue on the sabbath as he usually did. ¹⁷ He stood up to read and they handed him the book of the prophet Isaiah.

Jesus then unrolled the scroll and found the place where it is written: ¹⁸ The Spirit of the Lord is upon me. He has anointed me to bring good news to the poor, to proclaim liberty to captives and to give new sight to the blind; to free the oppressed and announce the Lord's year of mercy."

²⁰ Jesus then rolled up the scroll, gave it to the attendant and sat down, while the eyes of all in the synagogue were fixed on him. ²¹ Then he said to them, "Today these prophetic words come true even as you listen."

²² All agreed with him and were lost in wonder while he kept on speak-

-----------	-----------------	---

o Jesus returns home in the company of some of John's followers who become his own disciples (Jn 1:35) and he performs his first sign in Cana (Jn 2:1). This miracle launches his ministry. From Capernaum where Jesus lives in the house of Simon and Andrew, near the lake, Jesus begins to preach in the synagogues of Galilee (Mk 1:35) and his words impress people because he works with the power of the Spirit, namely he speaks with authority and his miracles confirm his words.

He was teaching in the synagogues of the Jews. Jesus does not begin by preaching to the crowds who know nothing of him, instead, for months he makes himself known in the synagogues.

+ In Israel, there was only one Temple, that of Jerusalem, where priests used to offer sacrifices. But, in every place where at least ten men could meet, there was a synagogue where every Sabbath a liturgical service led by community members, was celebrated. It was easy to take part in the readings and their commentaries, and so, Jesus made himself known by participating in the Sabbath services of the synagogues of his area, Galilee.

After some time Jesus, already famous, passes through Nazareth where he is not welcome. In this account Luke shows why Jesus attracted the people and why, particularly in Nazareth, he was rejected.

He found the place where it is written: this paragraph is from Is. 61:1-2. The prophet is referring to his own mission: God had sent him to the Jews in exile to announce that soon God would visit them. Yet, his words prove even more appropriate in the case of Jesus who was sent in order to bring real freedom to a people waiting for it.

The phrase to set free the oppressed people is not found in Isaiah's text, but Luke takes it from another text of the same prophet (Is 58:61) and inserts it here because this expression 'to set free' summarizes better than any other word the very work of Jesus in his mission.

Today these prophetic words have become true. Jesus has come to inaugurate a new age in which God becomes present and reconciles men. Every fifty years Israel celebrated a jubilee year during which debts were forgiven and slaves recovered their freedom (Lev 25:10). In the same way a year of mercy from the Lord is beginning. Thus the time of promises and prophecies is over. God begins to show himself to humankind as he is: Jesus reveals the Father and the Father reveals his Son through the signs and the miracles which he performs.

He sent me to set free the oppressed people. Jesus brings real liberation to everyone since his deeds urge each one of us to live in truth: "the Son makes you free ... the truth will make you free ..." (Jn 8:30). The Jews, obviously, were looking first and foremost for political freedom, which is part of the total liberation of man. Why didn't Jesus undertake it? Was he only interested in "souls?"

Actually, the Old Testament had never promised 'the salvation of souls' which is emphasized these days in various groups and churches: such believers think they are saving their souls and yet they remain silent, frightened, paid or blind accomplices of the daily sins permeating all economic and social life.

The Old Testament announced Jesus as the Saviour of his people and of his race. His words and deeds were stirring people who had become helpless and opening the way for human liberation at all levels, but they were like seeds and could not produce immediate fruits. Jesus had no desire to join the fanatics and violent among his people in order to obtain a national sovereignty as oppressive as Roman domination. He was witnessing to the truth and building the foundations for all future liberation movements.

ing of the grace of God. Nevertheless they asked, "Who is this but Joseph's son?" ²³So he said, "Doubtless you will quote me the saying: Doctor, heal yourself! Do here in your town what they say you did in Capernaum."

²⁴Jesus added, "No prophet is honoured in his own country. ²⁵Truly, I say to you, there were many widows in Israel in the days of Elijah, when the heavens withheld rain for three years and six months and a great famine came over the whole land. ²⁶Yet Elijah was not sent to any of them, but to a widow of Zarephath, in the country of Sidon. ²⁷There were also many lepers in Israel in the time of Elisha, the prophet, and no one was healed except Naaman, the Syrian."

²⁸On hearing these words, the whole assembly became indignant. ²⁹They rose up and brought him out of the town, ³⁰to the edge of the hill on which Nazareth is built, intending to throw him down the cliff. But he passed through their midst and went his way.

With the power of the Spirit

(Mk 1:23; Mt 4:24; 8:14)

■ ³¹Jesus went down to Capernaum, a town of Galilee, and began teaching the people in the sabbath meetings.

³²They were astonished at the way he taught them, for his word was spoken with authority.

³³In the synagogue there was a man possessed by an evil spirit and he screamed out in a loud voice, ³⁴"What do you want with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come to destroy us? I recognize you: you are the Holy One of God." ³⁵Then Jesus said to him sharply, "Be silent and leave this man!" The evil spirit then threw the man down in front of them and came out of him without doing him harm.

³⁶Amazement seized all these people and they said to one another, "What does this mean? He commands the evil spirits with authority and power. He orders, and you see how they come out!" ³⁷And news about Jesus spread throughout the surrounding area.

³⁸Leaving the synagogue, Jesus went to the house of Simon, whose mother-in-law was suffering from high fever. They asked him to do something for her. ³⁹Bending over her, he rebuked the fever, and it left her. Immediately she got up and waited on them.

⁴⁰At sunset, people suffering from all sorts of sickness were brought to Jesus. Laying his hands on each one,

In the same way today, we can speak of evangelization if liberating deeds are seen. Evangelization takes on its full meaning when the hearers, or the local community or the whole world are going through exceptional times in which they either welcome God's grace or perish.

He sent me to bring Good News to the poor.
See commentary on Lk 6:20.

Then, Luke explains why the people of Nazareth rejected Jesus:

- First, because of their pride: common and mediocre people let themselves be dazzled by a stranger, but they fiercely deny that one of their own could stand out or be their teacher: is not this the son of Joseph (see comm. on Mk 6:1).
- Because of their selfishness: they do not agree that God's benefits should be shared with others. So, Jesus reminds them that the prophets of old did not limit their favours to their compatriots alone (see 1 Kg 17:7 and 2 Kg 5).

■ See commentary on Mark 1:21.

Why did Jesus order the unclean spirit to be quiet? We see the same thing in 4:41.

Jesus does not want people to refer to him as the Christ, or the Messiah, or the Holy One of God (all these words have the same meaning of saviour anointed by God), because he does not identify with the saviour expected by the people. And if the demons acclaim him, is it not to spread confusion and to ruin him by such fame? How could Jesus not be disgusted with such praise coming from the unclean spirit?

he cured them.⁴¹ He also drove out demons, who cried out as they went from their victims, "You are the Son of God!" He rebuked them and would not allow them to speak, for they knew he was the Messiah.

+ ⁴² Jesus left at daybreak and looked for a solitary place. People went out in search of him and, finding him, they tried to dissuade him from leaving.⁴³ But he said, "I have to go to other towns to announce the good news of the kingdom of God. That is what I was sent to do."⁴⁴ So Jesus continued to preach in the synagogues of the Jewish country.

You will catch people
(Mt 4:18 ; Mk 1:16)

5 ¹ One day, as Jesus stood by the Lake of Gennesaret, with a crowd gathered around him listening to the word of God, ² he caught sight of two boats left at the water's edge by the fishermen now washing their nets. ³ He got into one of the boats, the one belonging to Simon, and asked him to pull out a little from the shore. There he sat and continued to teach the crowd.

⁴ When he had finished speaking he said to Simon, "Put out into deep water and lower your nets for a catch."⁵ Simon replied, "Master, we worked hard all night and caught nothing. But if you say so, I will lower the nets."⁶ This they did and caught such a large number of fish that their nets began to break. ⁷ They signaled their mates in the other boat to come and help them. They came and helped fill both boats to sinking point.

⁸ Upon seeing this, Simon Peter fell at Jesus' knees, saying, "Leave me, Lord, for I am a sinful man!"⁹ For he and his companions were exceedingly amazed at the catch they had made;¹⁰ and so were Simon's partners James and John, Zebedee's sons.

Jesus said to Simon, "Do not be afraid. You will catch people from now on."¹¹ So they brought their boats to land and followed him, leaving everything.

+ Jesus is a model missionary. He no sooner gathers a few believers together than they want to keep him for themselves, either because they see in him a true prophet, or want to receive more formation, or form a true community under his guidance.

Jesus, however, leaves the task of shepherding (in the sense of guiding a specific community) to others, because he has in mind many more people still awaiting the Gospel.

◆ THE APOSTLES

Here Luke explains in more detail what we have already read in Mark (Mk 1:16)

Jesus invites himself aboard Peter's boat, and Peter is willing to render him this service. But Jesus looks for more: even though many are ready to assist him, he seeks those who are willing to totally surrender to his work. The listeners are many, but he needs apostles.

Miracles are another way in which Jesus teaches. The present miracle is God's word for future apostles. Lower your nets: Peter obeys even though there is no hope of catching anything. Similarly, the apostles will work and speak, trusting in Jesus' power rather than in their own abilities. The nets were at the breaking point: optimism and confidence in the result. You will be fishers of people: to unite people divided by sin, to unite the dispersed children of God in the unique church of Christ.

Depart from me: I am a sinful man. Such is the fear of the one who discovers that God has entered into his inner life: this is a first act of faith in the divinity of Jesus. Yet, Jesus calls on sinners to save sinners.

Leaving everything, they followed him. It is not that they had much, but it was their whole life: work, family and their whole past as fishermen.

Apostle means sent. Christ is the one who chooses his apostles and sends them in his name. But, where will he find someone to send except among those who are willing to cooperate with him? We could wonder why so many Catholics listen to the Gospel and so few really cooperate with Christ.

One begins to be an apostle, or at least to cooperate with Christ, when one looks for something more than performing good works for the

Cure of a leper

o ¹²One day in another town, a leper came to Jesus. Bowing down to the ground, the leper said, "Lord, if you want so, you can make me clean."

¹³Stretching out his hand, Jesus touched the man and said, "Yes, I want it. Be clean." In an instant the leper was healed. ¹⁴Then Jesus instructed him, "Tell this to no one. But go and show yourself to the priest. Make an offering for your healing, as Moses prescribed; that should be a proof to the people."

+ ¹⁵But the news about Jesus spread all the more, and large crowds came to him to listen and be healed of their sicknesses. ¹⁶As for him, he often would withdraw to solitary places and pray.

The paralytic saved

(Mk 2:1; Mt 9:1)

■¹⁷One day Jesus was teaching and many Pharisees and teachers of the Law had come from every town of Galilee and Judea and even from Jerusalem. They were sitting there while the power of the Lord was at work to heal the sick. ¹⁸Then some men brought a paralysed man who lay on his mat. They tried to enter the house to place him in front of Jesus, ¹⁹but they couldn't find a way because of the crowd. So they went up on the roof and, removing the tiles, they lowered him on his mat into the middle of the crowd, in front of Jesus.

²⁰When Jesus saw their faith, he said to the man, "My friend, your sins are forgiven." ²¹At once the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees began to wonder, "What a blasphemy! This man insults God. Who can forgive sins but only God?"

²²But Jesus knew their thoughts and asked them, "Why are you criticizing in your hearts? ²³Which is easier to say: 'Your sins are forgiven', or: 'Get up and walk'? ²⁴Do you want to know if the Son of Man has authority on earth to forgive sins?" And Jesus said to the paralysed man, "Get up, benefit of the parish, when one feels responsible for people: fisher of people.

Here, Luke may have combined two different events: the call of the disciples briefly presented in Mark 1:16 and the miraculous catch. John also relates a miraculous catch (Jn 21) but he places it after the resurrection. We have good reasons to think we are dealing with the same miracle, but it suited John to combine it with the appearance of the risen Jesus to the apostles, which occurred later in the same place.

o See commentary on Mark 1:40.

Offer the sacrifice ordered by Moses. The same law which demanded that a leper be isolated (Lev 13:45), provided that if the leper was healed, he could, after examination by the priests, be reintegrated into the community. Because leprosy was seen as God's punishment, healing meant that God had forgiven the sinner who was to express his gratitude with a sacrifice.

+ There he would pray. Luke mentions Jesus' prayer several times (3:21; 6:12; 9:28...) Jesus did not withdraw only to be still, but because on each occasion, prayer was a necessity for him.

■ See commentary on Mark 2:1.

There were many Pharisees and teachers of the Law. The Pharisees and the teachers of the Law were not yet against Jesus, but being men who had received much religious formation, they were the first to wonder about Jesus' religious claims: was he only a faithful believer respectful of God's law or was he promoting a new sect? Jesus took advantage of their presence to show that he was not simply a disciple of Moses and the prophets, but he was the master of them all.

We easily understand why the teachers of the Law were scandalized. How could this man without studies or title, stand up to them as if he were a teacher? They were looking for the coming of a God who would confirm their teaching and acknowledge their own merits. Jesus, however, was in the midst of common folk and did not pay attention to the authority of the masters of the law who looked down on them. Since the teachers of the Law could not believe, their only recourse was to oppose Jesus.

take your mat and go home." ²⁵At once the man stood before them. He took up the mat on which he lay and went home praising God.

²⁶Amazement seized the people and they praised God. They were filled with a holy fear and said, "What wonderful things we have seen to-day!"

Call of Levi

(Mk 2:13; Mt 9:9)

◆ ²⁷Afterwards Jesus went out and, as he noticed a tax collector named Levi, sitting in the tax-office, he said to him, "Follow me." ²⁸So Levi left everything. He got up and began to follow Jesus.

²⁹Levi gave a great feast for Jesus, and many tax collectors came to his house and took their place at table with the other people. ³⁰Then the Pharisees and their fellow teachers complained to Jesus' disciples, "How can it be that you eat and drink with tax collectors and other sinners?"

³¹But Jesus spoke up, "The doctor is not for the healthy; it is the sick who need him. ³²I have come to call to repentance; I call sinners, not the righteous."

³³Some people asked him, "The disciples of John fast often and say long prayers, and so do the disciples of the Pharisees. Why is it that your disciples eat and drink?" Then Jesus said to them, ³⁴"You can't make wedding guests fast while the bridegroom is with them. ³⁵Yet the bridegroom will be taken from them and they will fast in those days."

³⁶Jesus also told them this parable, "No one tears a piece from a new coat to put it on an old one. If he does, he will have torn the new coat and the piece taken from the new will not match the old. ³⁷No one puts new wine into old wineskins; if he does, the new wine will burst the skins and be spilled, and the skins will be destroyed as well. ³⁸But new wine must be put into fresh skins. ³⁹Yet no one who has tasted old wine is eager to get new, for he says: The old wine is good."

Jesus, Lord of the Sabbath

(Mk 2:23; Mt 12:1; Mk 3:1)

6 ¹One sabbath Jesus was going through the corn fields and his disciples began to pick heads of grain for food, breaking them in their hands. ²Some of the Pharisees asked them, "Why do you do what is forbid-

The events related in this chapter show how Jesus situates himself in society and with what people he relates: with a little bunch of fishermen who will be in charge of his new religion: with lepers and sick people who seek him. He calls people who, like Levi, belong to a despised group.

○ Here we have two conflicts between Jesus and the religious people of his time concerning the Sabbath.

See commentary on Mk 3:1.

Let us not forget that the word sabbath means rest. God had requested that one day be made holy each week, not primarily for religious assemblies, but to allow everyone to rest (Ex 20:10). God is glorified when man is not enslaved to his daily sustenance or to his work.

In the first episode, Jesus does not argue with the Pharisees who consider as work the mere act of pulling off a few ears and shelling them. First he recalls that great believers, like David, overlooked the law, at times. He then adds: The Son of Man rules over the sabbath. Among the Jews, however, no one, not even the High Priest, could dispense from the sabbath observance. And so Jesus leaves them perplexed and wondering: Who does Jesus pretend to be?

In the second case, Jesus could have said to the man: Why do you ask me to do something forbidden on the sabbath? Come back tomorrow to be healed. But Jesus prefers the confrontation because Gospel means liberation and man becomes free when he admits that there is nothing sacred in a society which attempts to impose its own standards. There is nothing sacred for God outside of the conscience, dignity den on the sabbath?" ³Then Jesus spoke, "Have you never read what David did when he and his men were hungry? ⁴He entered the house of God, took and ate the bread of the offering and even gave some to his men, even though only priests are allowed to eat that bread."⁵And Jesus added, "The Son of Man is Lord and rules over the sabbath."

⁶On another sabbath Jesus entered the synagogue and began teaching. There was a man with a paralysed hand and ⁷the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees watched him: Would Jesus heal the man on the sabbath? If he did, they could accuse him.

⁸But Jesus knew their thoughts and said to the man, "Get up and stand in the middle." ⁹Then he spoke to them, "I want to ask you: what is allowed by the Law on the sabbath, to do good or to do harm, to save life or to kill?" ¹⁰And Jesus looked around at them all.

Then he said to the man, "Stretch out your hand." He stretched it out and his hand was restored becoming as whole as the other. ¹¹But they were furious and began to discuss with one another what they could do to Jesus.

The Twelve

(Mk 3:13; Mt 10:1)

+ ¹²At this time Jesus went out into the hills to pray, spending the whole night in prayer with God. ¹³When day came, he called his disciples to him and chose twelve of them whom he called apostles: ¹⁴Simon, whom he named Peter, and his brother Andrew, James and John; Philip and Bartholomew; ¹⁵Matthew and Thomas; James son of Alphaeus and Simon called the Zealot; ¹⁶Judas son of James, and Judas Iscariot, who would be the traitor:

Blessings and woes

o ¹⁷Coming down the hill with them, Jesus stood on a level place. There were many of his disciples and a large crowd of people who had come from all parts of Judea and Jerusalem and from the coastal cities of Tyre and Sidon. ¹⁸They gathered to hear him and be healed of their diseases; and even people troubled by evil spirits were healed. ¹⁹All the crowd tried to touch him because of the power which went out from him and healed them all.

and sanctity of his children. As long as people are subject to an order, to laws and authorities which are considered sacred and which no one thinks of criticizing, those people are neither free nor true children of God. (See 1 Cor 3:21-23; 8:45; Col 2:20-23.) A respect for God which would destroy our critical sense would not be in keeping with the Gospel: a religion preventing us from seeking the truth and from questioning every area of human restlessness, would not be the true one. To study the Bible without daring to know and take into account the contributions of modern science for fear that our very naive vision of sacred history would fall apart, would be to sin against the Spirit.

It was necessary that, at least on some occasions, Jesus should disobey the most sacred law of his people. But his reason for doing that was the most powerful reason possible: to give life to his brothers and sisters.

+ Jesus keeps those he loves the most in his prayer. Until the resurrection, his mind cannot include everyone and so he focuses his attention on those who live close to him and who will be his apostles. The success of his mission will depend upon them; other people's faith will rest on them. Jesus does not want their call to be his own thing: before calling them, he wants to be certain through prayer that he is doing the Father's will (Heb 1:24). For the simple reason that Christ chose them and entrusted his church to them, they will be tested in a thousand ways (Lk 22:31). Therefore Jesus wants to safeguard them through the power of his prayer (Jn 17:9). The day before his death he will have their consolation that not one of those the Father gave him has been lost (Jn 17:12).

o See the commentary on the Beatitudes in Mt 5:1. Matthew adapts them for the members of the church of his time. Luke, on the other ²⁰ Then lifting up his eyes to his disciples, Jesus said,

"Fortunate are you who are poor, the kingdom of God is yours.

²¹ Fortunate are you who are hungry now, for you will be filled.

Fortunate are you who weep now, for you will laugh.

²² Fortunate are you when people hate you and reject you and insult you and number you among criminals because of the Son of Man. ²³ Rejoice in that day and leap for joy, for a great reward is kept for you within God. Remember that is how the fathers of these people treated the prophets.

²⁴ But unhappy are you who have wealth, for you have been comforted now.

²⁵ Unhappy are you who are full, for you will go hungry.

Unhappy are you who laugh now, for you will mourn and weep.

²⁶ Unhappy are you when the people speak well of you, for that is how the fathers of these people treated the false prophets.

Love of enemies (Mt 5:40)

+ ²⁷ But I say to you who hear me: Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you. ²⁸ Bless those who curse you and pray for those who mistreat you. ²⁹ To the one who strikes you on the cheek, turn the other cheek; from the one who takes your coat, do not keep back your shirt. ³⁰ Give to the one who asks and if anyone has taken something from you, do not demand it back.

hand, puts the beatitudes here just as Jesus proclaimed them to the people of Galilee. In the words of Jesus, the beatitudes were a call and a hope addressed to the forgotten of the world, beginning with the poor among his people, heirs of God's promise to the prophets.

The Gospel, as in Mary's Canticle (1:51-53), reverses the present situation. Since then God shows his mercy, especially by his generosity towards the poor and the despised. He also entrusts his Gospel to them and makes them the first to participate in his work in the world. If the mighty, the scientists and the organizers have their role in the world, the poor are the ones whose contribution is most indispensable in the building up of the kingdom.

There are a thousand ways to present Jesus and his work. However, in order for such teaching to deserve the name evangelization (or: communication of the Good News) it must be received as Good News first by the poor. If other social groups feel more identified with the teaching, or they are invited first, it means that something is lacking either in content or in the way of proclaiming the message in such a way that it does justice to the disinherited.

Luke goes on with the woes. Remember similar woes in Isaiah 65:13-14. The rich and the full are the blind ones who fail to recognize God when he manifests himself. They go about with a clear conscience because they are acclaimed by everyone. In fact, their life, their merits and their happiness are lies which vanish in the presence of the Gospel.

When everyone speaks well of you (1 Cor 4:8). The contrast between groups of people who are persecuted and those who are well-thought-of can exist within the very church. At times, we see within the Church groups of influential people who lack nothing and who know how to get official blessings, while other groups are slandered and persecuted for putting the demands of the Gospel into practice. This is the kind of scandal Jesus speaks of in Mt. 13:41. Saints have experienced such tests, but in spite of them, they did not leave the Church.

+ Here Luke presents only a few of Jesus' sayings which Matthew combines in chapters 5 to 7 of his Gospel, and which we have explained.

Some people feel cheated when they see that Jesus speaks about changing our life rather than about reforming society. They think that this is due to the culture of that time when people were not yet thinking about changing unjust social structures. Jesus, in fact, goes to the root of things. The root of evil is within people. It is obvious that evil structures prevent people from living and growing. But it is equally obvious that not a single revolution, however many benefits it may bring about, can establish a less oppressive society, as long as people are not transformed according to the Gospel. Jesus does not provide guidelines only to obtain a better society. His mission is to teach us the way to growth and freedom.

In fact, in any society, the rich, the middle class, the poor and the poorest need conversion to Jesus' word, though in different degrees, man-others do to you. ³² If you love only those who love you, what kind of graciousness is yours? Even sinners love those who love them. ³³ If you do favours only to the people who do you favours, what kind of graciousness is yours? Even sinners do the same. ³⁴ If you lend only when you expect to receive, what kind of graciousness is yours? For sinners also lend to sinners, expecting to receive something in return.

■ ³⁵ But love your enemies and do good to them, and lend when there is nothing to expect in return. Then will your reward be great and you will be sons of the Most High. For he is kind towards the ungrateful and the wicked. ³⁶ Be merciful, just as your Father is merciful.

³⁷ Be not a judge of others and you will not be judged; do not condemn and you will not be condemned; forgive and you will be forgiven; ³⁸ give and it will be given to you, and you will receive in your sack good measure, pressed down, full and running over. For the measure you give will be the measure you receive back."

³⁹ And Jesus offered this example, "Can a blind man lead another blind man? Surely both will fall into a ditch. ⁴⁰ No disciple is above his master; if he lets himself be formed, he will be like his master. ⁴¹ So why do you pay attention to the speck in your brother's eye while you have a log in your eye and are not conscious of it? ⁴² How can you say to your brother: 'Brother, let me take this speck out of your eye,' when you can't remove the log in your own? You hypocrite! First remove the log from your own eye, and then you will see clearly enough to remove the speck from your brother's eye.

ners and terms. Jesus obvious predilection for the poor and oppressed does not mean they are necessarily better. It means God is compassionate, sharing a deeper mercy where misery is deeper; offering hope and total liberation there where hope is dimmest. The oppressed person is not innocent: if he were not paralyzed by the fear, divisiveness, and greed for the advantages offered to him by his oppressor, he would promote solidarity and attain a moral power capable of renewing the world. Thus, the oppressed will not be freed unless they grow in confidence in God, which will enable them to risk an openness leading to an understanding of others and reconciliation.

The sayings of Jesus, which follow, point out the indispensable changes of heart and approach.

Give to the one who asks. Jesus does not give a rule which is automatically applicable in all situations: we know there are times when we should not give because it would be encouraging bad habits. Jesus wants to challenge our conscience: Why do you refuse to give? Are you afraid you will not be paid back? But, what if this were the opportunity to trust your Father and to let go of something which is "your treasure" (12:34)? You who wish to be perfect, why do you ignore so many opportunities to give up your own wisdom in order to let God take care of your interests?

◦ Here, as in Matthew 5:43, Jesus does not refer mainly to personal resentment and friendships, but to opposition in the social, political or religious order: treating differently the people of one's group or party and those of the opposite side. People usually help, respect and are kind to one another within their own group: but they refuse to help people of another group and show no concern for their rights: they view these people as bad and sinners.

Jesus invites us to overcome such differences: what counts is the individual and when my neighbour needs me. I must forget his colour or whatever label given him.

If you lend when you expect to receive. Once again, we are dealing with a social attitude: people who look for friends among those who can promote their social climbing and who avoid all who might be a burden because they are people without influence: Lk 14:2.

Then you will be sons of the Most High. Jesus shows us the way to be transformed into: the image and likeness of the Father on high. He demands that we overcome our social prejudices and that we drop our social barriers.

■ See commentary on Mt. 7:1. Perfection for us consists in imitating the Father. He is God by being compassionate; his compassion is his ability to be touched by the poverty and the anguish of his creatures, and to lavish upon them what he can give. The attitude of the person who ◆ ⁴³No healthy tree bears bad fruit, no poor tree bears good fruit. ⁴⁴And each tree is known by the fruit it bears. Moreover, you don't gather figs from thorns, or grapes from brambles. ⁴⁵Similarly a good person draws good things from the good in his heart, and an evil person draws evil things from the evil in his heart. For the mouth speaks from the fullness of the heart.

⁴⁶Why do you call me: 'Lord! Lord!' and not do what I say?

⁴⁷What comparison can I use for him who comes to me and listens to my words and acts according to them? ⁴⁸He is like the builder who dug deep and laid the foundations of his house on rock. The river overflowed and the stream dashed against the house, but could not shake it because the house had been well built.

⁴⁹But if anyone listens and does not act, he is like a man who built his house on the ground without a foundation. As soon as the flood burst against it, the house fell: and what a terrible waste that was!"

The faith of a pagan

(Mk 8:5; Jn 4:46)

7 ¹When Jesus had finished teaching in this way the people listening to him, he went to Capernaum.

²There was a captain whose servant was very sick and near to death, a man very dear to him. ³So, when he heard about Jesus, he sent some elders of the Jews to persuade him to come and save his servant's life. ⁴The elders came to Jesus and begged him earnestly, saying, ⁵"He deserves this of you, for he loves our people and even built a synagogue for us."

⁶Jesus went with them. He was not far from the house when the captain sent friends to give this message, "Sir, do not trouble yourself if I am not worthy to welcome you under my roof. ⁷You see I didn't approach you myself. Just give the order and my servant will be healed. ⁸For I myself, a junior officer, give orders to my soldiers and I say to this one: 'Go,' and he goes; and to the other: 'Come,' and he comes; and to my servant: 'Do this,' and he does it."

⁹On hearing these words, Jesus was filled with admiration. He turned around and said to the people with him, "I say to you, not even in Israel have I found such great faith." ¹⁰The people sent by the captain went back to his house; there they found that the servant was well.

judges his brothers is the very opposite of mercy. Can a blind man lead another blind man? Our pride is satisfied by comparing ourselves with others, and in order to appear better, we begin by criticizing and judging them. Jesus challenges us to look into our own faults first. Being honest with oneself enables one to see another person's situation more fairly.

◆ There is no healthy tree ... These sayings were already mentioned in Mt 7:15. Here, however, Luke gives them a different meaning by referring to a pure conscience. We must purify our mind and our spirit so that, later, the good tree may produce good fruits.

o THE POWER OF GOD

This captain of a foreign army had earned the esteem of the Jews. The amazing thing was not that he should have contributed to the building of the synagogue, but rather that the Jews should have accepted it from him. He must have been a good man. But he knew the Jews' prejudices too well to have dared to personally approach this Jesus of whom they spoke. Indeed, up to what point did Jesus share his compatriots' pride? Would he respond to the petition of a Roman official? That was why he was sending his Jewish friends to Jesus.

The man is really troubled: will Jesus consent to go to a pagan's house and "become impure?" (Mt 7:14) And the captain goes one step further: Jesus does not have to come to his house. While other sick people seek to be touched by the Master thinking that Jesus possesses some healing power, this man, instead, has grasped that Jesus has the very power of God and does not need to go to the sick servant: it would not be any more difficult to give a command from a distance to a life that was slipping away.

The son of the widow restored to life

◆ ¹¹ The next day Jesus went to a town called Naim and many of his disciples went with him – a great number of people. ¹² As he reached the gate of the town, a dead man was being carried out. He was the only son of his mother and she was a widow; there followed a large crowd of townspeople.

¹³ On seeing her, the Lord felt pity for her and said, "Don't cry." ¹⁴ Then he came up and touched the stretcher and the men who carried it stopped. Jesus said, "Young man, awake, I tell you." ¹⁵ And the dead man got up and began to speak, and Jesus gave him to his mother. ¹⁶ A holy fear came over them all and they praised God saying, "A great prophet has appeared among us; God has visited his people." ¹⁷ And throughout Judea and the surrounding lands, people talked about Jesus' deeds.

Jesus answers the messengers of John (Mt 11:2)

+ ¹⁸ The disciples of John gave him all this news. So he called two of them and ¹⁹ sent them to the Lord with this message, "Are you the one we are expecting, or should we wait for another?" ²⁰ These men came to Jesus and said, "John the Baptist sent us to ask you: Are you the one we expect, or should we wait for another?"

²¹ At that time Jesus healed many people of their sicknesses or diseases, and freed them from evil spirits, and he gave sight to the blind. ²² Then he answered the messengers, "Go back and tell John what you saw and heard: the blind see again, the lame walk, lepers are made clean, the deaf hear, the dead are raised to life, and the poor are given good news. Now, listen: ²³ Fortunate are those who encounter me, but not for their downfall."

■ ²⁴ When John's messengers had gone, Jesus started speaking to the

◆ No one has ever attributed power over death to any man. Only Jesus conquers death and he does so very simply.

The woman represents suffering humanity. "You will suffer because of your sons": This was said after the first sin. Humanity cannot avoid accompanying the dead, burying their young people with tears, while continuing to kill them. It kills them with wars, and when it exhausts the resources of the earth which should serve to prepare a better future. It kills them spiritually when it fails to teach them love and self-sacrifice and by destroying their most generous ideals.

THOSE WHO DOUBT

+ John the Baptist had announced the imminent coming of the judgment of God. But Herod had put him in jail and nothing had happened. John introduced Jesus as the awaited Messiah, but Jesus was not revolutionizing the world and in jail, John was beginning to have doubts. It might be more accurate to interpret his question as a pressing invitation: "If you are the one who is to come, why so much delay?"

John's disciples did witness the cures, but the cures are not everything and Jesus adds: the poor hear good news because real evangelization restores hope and leaves people renewed.

The blind see, the lame walk ... The prophets had announced these signs (Is 35:5) which were really something new, because in the past God had usually manifested himself as a powerful saviour. These healings pointed to the liberation that Jesus was bringing: not punishment of sinners (which was a great part of John the Baptist's preaching), but, before all else, a reconciliation suited to healing a world of sinners, of violent and resentful people.

Fortunate are those who encounter me but not for their downfall. And fortunate are those who do not doubt Christ's salvation after seeing the fruits of evangelization. Fortunate are those who do not say: this way is too slow. The Gospel first proves its fruitfulness in its power to lift people up. The person who believes is reconciled. The person who encounters Christ discovers himself and this person will not likely change from being oppressed to oppressing, nor from denouncing evils to complicity with evil. Wherever there are renewed people, the whole community becomes aware of its reality and unites in works of liberation.

It does not matter if the world seems to continue to surrender to the forces of evil. The presence of liberated people forces others to define people about John. And he said, "What did you want to see when you went to the desert? A tall reed blowing in the wind? ²⁵What was there, to see? A man dressed in fine clothes? But people who wear rich clothes and enjoy delicate food are found in palaces. ²⁶What did you go out to see? A prophet? Yes, I tell you, and more than a prophet. ²⁷For John is the one foretold in Scripture which reads: I am sending my messenger ahead of you to prepare your ways. ²⁸But, I tell you, although no one may be found greater than John, the least in the kingdom is greater than he.

²⁹All the people listening to Jesus, even the tax collectors, had acknowledged the will of God in receiving the baptism of John. ³⁰whereas the Pharisees and the teachers of the Law in not letting themselves be baptized by him, ignored this will of God.

³¹What story can I use for the behaviour of this people? What are they like? ³²They are like children sitting in the marketplace, about whom their companions complain: 'We piped you a tune and you wouldn't dance; we sang funeral songs and you wouldn't cry.'

³³The same has happened when John the Baptist didn't eat bread or drink wine, and you said: 'He has an evil spirit.' ³⁴Next came the Son of Man, eating and drinking, and you say: 'Look, a glutton for food and wine, a friend of tax collectors and sinners.' ³⁵Yet the wisdom of God settled all this and her children recognized her."

Jesus, the woman and the Pharisee

◆ ³⁶One of the Pharisees asked Jesus to share his meal, So he went to the Pharisee's home and as usual reclined on the sofa to eat. ³⁷And it themselves in terms of good and evil and this makes the world grow.

With this, Jesus answers the disciples of John, men who are self-sacrificing and concerned for the triumph of God's cause. Perhaps they are so absorbed in their search for justice that they fail to recognize God's powerful working in Jesus' actions which appeared so gentle and mild.

■ When John's messengers had gone. Most of John's disciples continued to follow him and did not acknowledge Jesus. Jesus did not accuse them, instead he praised John and situated himself with regard to him.

A prophet and more than a prophet: because the time of the prophets has ended with John. No one (the Gospel uses the Jewish term: among those born of woman, that simply means: no one) could be found greater than John. The common people considered John as the greatest figure of those years: Jesus agreed with them for this reason: John had introduced the Saviour and the kingdom of God.

The least in the kingdom is greater than he, in the sense that Jesus' disciples entered the kingdom which John only announced. However holy John may have been, he was not given the knowledge of God which permeated Jesus. John, the austere prophet, did not experience total reconciliation with the compassionate God, as was the privilege of Jesus' disciples.

Actually Jesus emphasized the superiority, not of his disciples as compared with John, but of his own mission when compared with John's.

John said that each person had to straighten out his life. Jesus insists instead, that all efforts are useless if a person does not believe in the Father's love. John's disciples used to fast; Jesus' disciples will know how to forgive. John attracted to the desert those who knew how to let go of conveniences they were accustomed to; Jesus lives among people and heals their wounds. The baptism of John signified a person's willingness to give up his vices; while the baptism of Jesus bestows the Spirit of God.

They are like children sitting... They do everything at the wrong time; they reproach John for his austerity and Jesus for his lack of austerity. With this answer, Jesus teaches not to always criticize the church of the past centuries, and take its experience into account. Every generation faces different problems and no generation can be totally free from the prejudices and limitations of the culture of the time.

Jesus came after John and he was superior to him, although he needed John. Every effort to evangelize will remain superficial and so will conversions, if the ground has not been prepared by movements which stir up concern for a world with more justice and inspire more self-sacrifice.

happened that a woman of this town, who was known as a sinner, heard that he was in the Pharisee's house. She brought a precious jar of perfume³⁸ and stood behind him at his feet, weeping. As she wet his feet with tears, she dried them with her hair and kissed his feet and poured the perfume on them.

³⁹The Pharisee who had invited Jesus was watching and thought, "If Jesus were a prophet, he would know what sort of person is touching him; is not this woman a sinner?"

⁴⁰Then Jesus spoke to the Pharisee and said, "Simon, I have something to ask you." He answered, "Speak, master." And Jesus said, ⁴¹"Two men were in debt to the same businessman. The first one owed him five hundred silver coins, and the other fifty. ⁴²As they were unable to pay him back, he graciously cancelled the debts of both. Now, which of them will love him more?"

⁴³Simon answered, "The one, I suppose, who was forgiven more." And Jesus said, "You are right."

⁴⁴And turning toward the woman, he said to Simon, "Do you see this woman? ⁴⁵You gave me no water for my feet when I entered your house; but she has washed my feet with her tears and dried them with her hair. You didn't welcome me with a kiss, but she has not stopped kissing my feet since she came in. ⁴⁶You provided no oil for my head, but she has poured perfume on my feet. ⁴⁷This is why, I tell you, her sins, her many sins, are forgiven, because she loved much. But the one who is forgiven little, returns little love."

⁴⁸Then Jesus said to the woman, "Your sins are forgiven." ⁴⁹The others sitting with him at the table began to wonder, "Now this man claims to forgive sins!" ⁵⁰But Jesus spoke again to the woman, "Your faith has saved you; go in peace."

◆ The Pharisee, Simon, had a few clear and simple religious principles: The world is divided between good people and sinners. Those who obey are the good people; sinners are those with notorious sins. God loves the good and does not love sinners; God stays away from sinners. Being good, Simon stays away from sinners. Since Jesus does not move away from the sinful woman, he must not be guided by the Spirit of God.

Strange, but God does not think like Simon does. He alone is good and thus does not distinguish between good and evil, but instead he wants to forgive everyone. God does not weigh our good and bad actions to see which weigh the most: that would be a child's game. God knows that we need time to test good and evil and also to arrive at a mature and stable orientation. He lets us sin because, in the end, we will know more clearly that we are bad and that we need only Him. Thus God easily forgets our sins and our excesses, if in spite of them or through them, we come to genuine love.

Simon did not welcome Jesus with the signs of hospitality customary at that time. In those days, they reclined on sofas around the table according to the custom of rich people, but Jesus was bored: how could he dialogue with this respectable man who believed he knew the things of God but was incapable of feeling them? And Jesus was waiting for the arrival of the sinful woman.

The one who is forgiven little (47). This is not always the case. Many of the people who loved Jesus passionately were not great sinners. Here Jesus speaks with irony to a very "decent" man: Simon, you think you owe little (and you are wrong in that), and for this reason you do not love much.

Therefore her sins are forgiven (47). Some see a contradiction between this verse and v. 42, where great love is the fruit of greater forgiveness. In v. 47 great love obtains this forgiveness. Jesus does not attempt to say which of the two – love for forgiveness – comes first: in fact, the two go together. Here Jesus is contrasting two forms of religion: the religion of the Pharisee which is something like bookkeeping: God takes note of good and bad works to later reward more fully the person with more entries for good works. True religion, instead, focuses only on the quality of love and trust and, usually, we love to the degree that we become aware of how much God has forgiven us.

Your sins are forgiven (v. 48). Try to understand the scandal such words must have caused. Actually, whom had the woman loved except Jesus? And who could forgive sins, except God?

This woman may have been the same as

The women who followed Jesus

8 ¹Jesus walked through towns and countryside, preaching the good news of the kingdom of God. The Twelve followed him ²and also some women who had been healed from evil spirits and diseases: Mary called Magdalene, who had had seven demons; ³Joanna, wife of Chuza, Herod's steward; Suzanna and some others who provided for them out of their own funds.

The parable of the sower

⁴As a great crowd gathered and people came to him from every town, Jesus began teaching them through stories, or parables. ⁵"The sower went out to sow the seed. And as he sowed, some of the grain fell along the way, was trodden on and the birds of the sky ate it up. ⁶Some fell on rocky ground, and no sooner had it come up than it withered because it had no water. ⁷Some fell among thorns; the thorns grew up with the seed and choked it. ⁸"But some fell on good soil and grew, producing fruit—a hundred times as much." And Jesus cried out, "Listen then, if you have ears to hear!"

o ⁹The disciples asked him, "What does this story mean?" ¹⁰And Jesus answered, "You have been granted to know the mystery of the kingdom of God. But to others it is given in the form of stories, or parables, so that seeing they may not see and hearing they may not understand. ¹¹Now, this is the point of the parable:

The seed is the word of God. ¹²Those along the wayside are people who hear it, but immediately the devil comes and takes the word from their minds, for he doesn't want them to believe and be saved. ¹³Those on the Mary, Martha's sister, the one who anointed Jesus' feet on the eve of his death (Jn 12:4). It is most likely that this somewhat strange action of anointing Jesus' feet took place only once and that it was before his passion. If this is the case, then Luke modified some details to make up the present story alluding to Mary's past.

In relating the same event, Matthew, Mark and John remark that Judas became indignant (Jn 12:4), but it is possible that Simon, Jesus' host, was shocked for other reasons: How could Jesus allow this woman to follow him, along with his apostles, even if she had repented of her past sins and demons? No religious teacher would ever have spoken to a woman in public: women did not even enter the synagogues.

JESUS AND THE CULTURE OF HIS TIME

+ See the commentary on Mt 1:18 concerning the tremendously inferior position of women in Jesus' time. Nevertheless, Jesus did not pay the least attention to such universally accepted prejudices. Various women took Jesus' words and attitude as a call to freedom. They even joined the circle of his intimate friends while ignoring the gossip. Here we have a fundamental testimony about the freedom of the Gospel.

Even today, many women are subject to their husbands, asking their permission to participate in the activities of an institution and they regret not being able to respond to the invitation of the church because their husbands do not allow it. To speak with them of the Christian life is useless as long as they have not taken the first step toward their own liberation by exercising personal freedom without fear of their husbands' anger.

Jesus was truly man, and as such he belonged to a race and to a culture: he was a Jew of his time and his gospel was attuned with the culture which he shared. Yet Jesus did not adopt the inhuman traits of his culture: he did not accept the prejudices of the Jews of his time with regard to women, to public sinners, pagans and so on nor did he share their views in regard to the sabbath. His gospel is a leaven changing cultures for the better: in many respects his way of life goes against the mainstream of cultures.

Mary of Magdala (Magdala was a village on the shore of Lake Tiberias) will be at the foot of the cross along with Mary, the wife of Cleophas, the mother of James and Josés. These two women, along with Joanna, will receive the first news of the Resurrection (Lk 24:10).

o See commentary on Mt 13:1-23.

This is the point of the parable. The comparison (parable) helps us to understand what happened around Jesus. Many people became very enthusiastic at the beginning, then after a rocky ground are people who receive the word with joy, but they have no root; they believe for a while and give way in time of temptation. ¹⁴ Among the thorns are people who hear the word but as they go their way, are choked by worries, riches, and the pleasures of life; they bring no fruit to maturity. ¹⁵ The good soil, instead, are people who receive the word and keep it in a gentle and generous mind; and persevering patiently, they bear fruit.

¹⁶ No one, after lighting a lamp covers it with a bowl or puts it under the bed; rather he puts it on a lampstand so that people coming in may see the light. In the same way, ¹⁷ there is nothing hidden that shall not be uncovered; nothing kept secret that shall not be known clearly. ¹⁸ Now, take care how well you listen, for whoever has will be given more, but from everyone who has not, even what he seems to have will be taken away from him."

Jesus' mother and brothers

(Mk 3:31; Mt 12:46)

+ ¹⁹ Then his mother and his relatives came to him, but they could not get to him because of the crowd. ²⁰ Someone told him, "Your mother and your brothers are standing outside and wish to meet you." ²¹ Then Jesus answered, "My mother and my brothers are those who hear the word of God and do it."

Jesus calms the storm

(Mk 4:35; Mk 8:18)

while, they left. Only a few persevered and they wondered: How will the kingdom of God come if no one is interested?

The Gospel records Jesus' explanation about the fields on which the seed fell. But there was a lot more to explain. First, the listeners must have been surprised by his comparing the kingdom of God with something which is sown. Throughout Sacred History, there had been abundant sowing and Jesus' contemporaries were expecting a harvest (see Rev 14:15).

We, like Jesus' contemporaries, want to reap, that is to enjoy the fruits of the kingdom of God, namely social peace, justice and happiness. And many wonder how it is possible that people continue to be so evil two thousand years after Christ.

If the kingdom of God has come and it is already in our midst, that does not mean we are going to enjoy its fruits. The kingdom of God is where God rules, and God rules where people accept him for what he is: where he can be Father and where his children can accept his plan for them. The disciple of Christ does not just know God: he knows the Father and the Son and this is enough to make a new person out of him.

From that moment on, people grow in a thousand ways, and social consciousness also develops. People become aware of their dignity and their common destiny, in spite of the fact that it seems more impossible every day to reach the goal.

KINGDOM OR REIGN OF GOD

Jesus spoke Aramaic, a language in which a single term means three different things: the kingdom, that is the place where God acts as king; the reign, or the fact that God acts as king; royalty, or the dignity of God the king.

Jesus often speaks of the kingdom properly: "you will not enter the kingdom of God"; elsewhere, however, the meaning is debatable as for example in the Our Father. Should we say: "Your kingdom come" or "Your reign come"?

In the present parables, traditionally called: the parables of the Kingdom, the two meanings go together. The great news that Jesus proclaimed was the coming of an age totally different from the times of sacred history as the Jews had experienced them. God was obviously present throughout human history, especially Israel's history, yet now he was coming in a different way. Now, and only now, would people know him as he is, and he would make them his children, through his Son become man.

The reign of God began with Jesus revealing: the true face of God; then at his rising as Lord of the living and the dead, he would begin to personally reorient human history.

In reading the marvelous things Paul says about the church (especially in Ephesians), we realize that for him, the church is somehow the very kingdom of God, or rather, the place from which it shines upon the world.

+ See commentary on Mk 3:31.

"Let us go across to the other side of the lake."²³ So they set out and, as they sailed, he fell asleep. Suddenly a storm came down on the lake and the boat began to fill with water, and they were in danger.²⁴ The disciples then went to Jesus to wake him, saying, "Master! Master! We are sinking!" Jesus woke up. He rebuked the wind and the rolling waves; and the storm subsided, and all was quiet.

²⁵ Then Jesus said to them, "Where is your faith?" They were afraid; they were astonished as well and said to one another, "Who can this be? See, he commands even the wind and the sea and they obey him!"

The possessed and the pigs

(Mk 5:1; Mt 8:28)

²⁶ Jesus and his disciples came to the country of the Gerasenes, which is opposite Galilee. ²⁷ As Jesus stepped ashore, a man from the town approached him. This man had demons in him and for a long time had gone without clothes. He would not live in a house but stayed among the tombstones. ²⁸ When he came nearer to Jesus, he yelled and threw himself on the ground before him, and then shouted, "What do you want with me, Jesus, son of the Most High God? I beg you, do not torment me;" ²⁹ for Jesus had ordered the evil spirit to leave the man.

This spirit had seized him many times, when he had been bound with ropes and chains and kept under control. He would then suddenly break the chains and be driven by the evil spirit into wild places.

When Jesus asked him, ³⁰ "What is your name?" the man said, "I am Mob," because many demons had entered into him. ³¹ And they begged Jesus not to command them to go into the bottomless pit ³² Nearby a great herd of pigs was feeding, so the demons asked to be allowed to enter into the pigs. When Jesus let them go,³³ the demons left the man and entered into the pigs, and the herd rushed down into the lake and was drowned.

³⁴ When the herdsmen saw what had happened, they fled and reported it in the town and countryside. ³⁵ Then people went out to see what had happened and came to Jesus. There they saw the man from whom the demons had been driven out. He was clothed and in his right mind, and was sitting at the feet of Jesus. They were afraid. ³⁶ Then people who had seen it told them how the man had been healed, ³⁷ and all this crowd from the Gerasene country asked Jesus to depart from them, for a great fear took hold of them. So Jesus got into the boat to return.

³⁸ It was then that the man from whom the devils had gone out asked Jesus if he could stay with him. ³⁹ But Jesus sent him on his way, "Go back to your family and tell them how much God has done for you." So the man went away, proclaiming through the whole town how much Jesus had done for him.

The dead girl and the sick woman

(Mk 5:21; Mt 9:18)

⁴⁰ When Jesus returned, the people welcomed him, for all had been waiting for him. ⁴¹ At that time a man named Jairus, a ruler of the synagogue, threw himself at Jesus' feet and begged him to come to his house ⁴² because his only daughter, about twelve years old, was dying.

As Jesus was on his way, the crowd pressed from every side.

⁴³ There was a woman who had suffered from a bleeding for twelve years. This woman had spent everything she had on doctors, but none of them had been able to cure her. ⁴⁴ Now she came up behind Jesus and touched the fringe of his cloak, and her bleeding stopped at once. ⁴⁵Then Jesus asked, "Who touched me?" Everyone denied it and Peter said, "Master, the crowd is pushing all around you." ⁴⁶But Jesus said, "Someone touched me, for I felt power go out from me."

⁴⁷The woman knew she had been discovered. She came trembling and knelt before Jesus. Then she told in front of everyone why she had touched him and how she had been instantly cured. ⁴⁸And Jesus said to her, "Daughter, your faith has healed you. Go in peace."

⁴⁹While Jesus was still speaking, someone arrived from the ruler's home to tell him, "Your daughter has just died; don't trouble the master any further." ⁵⁰But Jesus heard the news and said to the ruler, "Do not fear, only believe."

⁵¹When he entered the house, Jesus allowed no one to follow him except Peter, James and John, with the father and mother of the child. ⁵²As all the people were weeping and wailing loudly, Jesus said to them, "Do not weep, she is not dead." ⁵³And they laughed at him, knowing that she was dead. ⁵⁴As for Jesus, he took the child by the hand and said to her, "Child, awake!" ⁵⁵And her spirit returned and she got up at once; then Jesus told them to give her something to eat. ⁵⁶The parents were amazed, but Jesus ordered them not to let anyone know what had happened.

Jesus sends out the Twelve

(Mt 10:5; Mk 5:6)

9 ¹Then Jesus called his Twelve disciples and gave them power and authority to drive out all evil spirits and to heal diseases. ²And he sent them to proclaim the kingdom of God and to heal the sick. ³He instructed them, "Don't take anything for the journey, neither walking stick, nor bag, nor bread, nor silver coins; and don't bring even a spare tunic. ⁴Whatever house you enter, remain there until you leave that place. ⁵And wherever they don't welcome you, leave the town and shake the dust from your feet: it will be as a testimony against them."

⁶So they set out and went through the villages, proclaiming the good news and healing people everywhere.

⁷King Herod heard of all this and did not know what to think, for people said, "This is John, raised from the dead." ⁸Others believed that Elijah or one of the ancient prophets had come back to life. ⁹As for Herod, he said, "I had John beheaded; who is this man about whom I hear such wonders?" And he was anxious to see him.

¹⁰On their return the apostles told Jesus everything they had done. Then he took them aside to a lonely place, and they went away to a town called Bethsaida to be by themselves. ¹¹But the crowd heard of this and caught up with him. So he welcomed them and began speaking about the kingdom of God, curing those who needed healing.

Miracle of the loaves

(Mk 6:30; Mt 14:13; Jn 6:1)

■ ¹²The day was drawing to a close and the Twelve drew near to tell him, "Send the crowd away and let them go into the villages and farms around, to find lodging and food, for we are here in a lonely place." ¹³But Jesus replied, "You yourselves, give them something to eat." They answered, "We have only five loaves and two fish; where can we get food and pay for it for so many people?"

¹⁴For there were about five thousand men. Then Jesus said to his disciples, "Make people sit down in groups of fifties."

¹⁵So they made all these people settle down. ¹⁶Jesus then took the five loaves and two fish and, raising his eyes to heaven, pronounced a blessing over them; he broke them and gave them to the disciples to distribute to the crowd. ¹⁷They ate and everyone had enough; and when they gathered up what was left, twelve baskets were filled with broken pieces.

This multiplication of the loaves occurs in all four gospels, which is true of very few events of the Gospel. Besides this account, another multiplication of the loaves is related in Mt 15:32 and Mk 8:1.

This abundance of accounts may be due to the fact that the multiplication of bread is one of the miracles of Jesus which best shows his absolute power over the laws of nature (see commentary on Mk 8:1).

Remember also that the Jews of Jesus' time were a poor people, too numerous for a fertile, but limited land. The Roman occupants were claiming a good portion of the resources and politicians, like Herod, imposed heavy taxes which were partly justified by the need to occupy the extra manpower in grandiose projects.

Many people had no security regarding employment as is true today in many countries, and Jesus along with his followers, shared that situation. In that desolate area, Jesus felt responsible for all his brothers and sisters who became his guests (as also happens in Lk 11:5) and he acted according to faith. Every day, in those times and now, many people must have shared their last resources with someone poorer, confident that God would pay them back. Jesus, in turn, could do no less. The miracle he performed at that moment confirms in their faith many humble believers, who are perhaps not too devoted to the church, but who often know how to risk all they have left.

Jesus is not concerned that this miracle awakens in them a misguided enthusiasm which will end up with a split among his followers (see Mk 6:45). Jesus had not fed them to attract them to his church, but to fulfill God's promises to the poor.

Peter's profession of faith

(Mk 8:27; Mt 16:18)

◆ ¹⁸One day when Jesus was praying alone, not far from his disciples, he asked them, "What do people say about me?" ¹⁹And they answered, "Some say that you are John the Baptist; others say that you are Elijah, and still others that you are one of the former prophets risen from the dead." Again Jesus asked them, ²⁰"What then do you say I am?" Peter answered, "The Messiah of God." ²¹Then Jesus spoke to them, giving them strict orders not to tell this to anyone.

○ ²²And he added, "The Son of Man must suffer many things. He will

◆ This occurred near Caesarea Philippi, a famous spa located in the far north of Palestine, at the foot of Mount Hermon. Jesus had gone away because he was not safe in Galilee. As was his custom, he had sent the Twelve ahead of him to the villages he would visit, to prepare for his coming.

What do people say about me? And you, what did you tell them about me when you were among them? Who did you tell them I was? Peter answers first, confident that they were not wrong in presenting their teacher as the Messiah, the One sent by God.

Jesus does not deny that he is, but he forbids them to make it known from then on, because, according to the people, the Liberator had to crush his enemies. Can the apostles simply call Liberator, the one who will die on the cross?

By comparing this text with Mk 8:27 and Mt 16:13, we come to the following conclusion: Matthew combined in a single story two different events in which Peter was first in proclaiming his faith. The first episode is the one which Luke relates at this point.

In the second, Peter recognized Jesus as the Son of God and received the promise which Matthew recalls. Perhaps, this took place after the multiplication of the loaves: compare with John 6:66-69, or perhaps after the Resurrection: compare with John 21:15-17, which insists not on faith, but on the love that Jesus can see in Peter. See also Gal. 2:7-8.

○ Why did Jesus ask his apostles the questions we have just read? The Gospel answers clearly: because the time had come for Jesus to announce his passion to them. Jesus had not only come to teach people but to open for them the door leading to the Resurrection. Since his

²³ Jesus also said to all the people, "If you will be a follower of mine, deny yourself and take up your cross each day; and follow me. ²⁴ For if you choose to save your life, you will lose it, and if you lose your life for my sake, you will save it. ²⁵ What does it profit you to gain the whole world while you destroy and lose yourself? ²⁶ If someone feels ashamed of me and of my words, the Son of Man will be ashamed of him when he comes in his Glory and in the Glory of his Father with his holy angels. ²⁷ Truly, I say to you, there are some here who will not experience death before they see the kingdom of God."

The transfiguration

(Mk 9:2; Mt 17:1; Jn 12:28)

+ ²⁸ About eight days after Jesus had said all this, he took Peter, John and James and went up the mountain to pray. ²⁹ And as he was praying, his face was changed and his clothing became dazzling white. ³⁰ Two men were talking with Jesus: Moses and Elijah. ³¹ They had just appeared in heavenly glory and were telling him about his departure that had to take place in Jerusalem.

³² Peter and his companions had fallen asleep, but they awoke suddenly and saw Jesus' Glory and the two men standing with him. ³³ As Moses and Elijah were about to leave, Peter said to him, "Master, fortunately we are here for we can make three tents, one for you, one for Moses and apostles now know him to be the Saviour promised to Israel, they must learn that there is no salvation if death is not conquered (1 Cor 15:25). And Jesus will obtain this victory when he freely chooses the way of the cross: the Son of Man has to suffer much and be rejected by the authorities.

Immediately after that, Jesus adds that we must all share in his victory over death: You must deny your very self: this is the fundamental orientation of our life. We must choose between serving and being served, sacrificing ourselves for others or taking advantage of them. Or, as a well-known prayer puts it: Let me not so much seek to be consoled as to console, to be understood as to understand, to be loved as to love.

Take up your cross each day. Here comes the acceptance of the cross which the Lord gives to each one of us and which we do not have to choose because we find it in our destiny. We must not carry it because we are compelled to, but rather we must love it because the Lord wished it for us.

If you choose to save your life. Jesus refers to the general orientation of our life. He has nothing in common with those who are only concerned about avoiding "sins" while they pursue their ambitions and their desire to enjoy this life to the maximum. The mere fact of seeking to live without risks separates us from God's way.

If someone feels ashamed of me. Besides the cross given to us each day, God will ask us to witness to our faith and in that we will have to run risks, even if it is nothing more than the risk of being ridiculed by our friends and our bosses. There will also be times when faithfulness to the Gospel will mean risking death. When a country is ruled by violence and those promoting integrity and solidarity are murdered, Christians may well be tempted to resign themselves to "spiritual" meetings and keep silent about social sins around them. If you are ashamed of me and of my words. Among Jesus' words are those which announce liberation for the oppressed and demand our making common cause with them.

+ Recall the divine revelation Jesus received at the beginning of his ministry (Lk 3:21). This other divine manifestation Jesus receives at the Transfiguration is due to the beginning of a new stage: the Passion.

Jesus has already been preaching for two years, but there is no hope that Israel will overcome the violence which will lead to its ruin. Even if Jesus' miracles do not convince his compatriots, Jesus will have to face the forces of evil: his sacrifice will be more effective than his words in arousing love and the spirit of sacrifice in all the people who will continue his saving work in the future.

During the Transfiguration, Jesus is assured that he will soon die in Jerusalem (they were telling him about his departure from Jerusalem); he is also given a foretaste of the Resurrection. (See commentary on Mk 9:2).

He took Peter, James and John with him: these men had a privileged place among the Twelve (Mk 1:29; 3:16; 5:37; 10:35; 13:3). In spite of the fact that the Twelve worked and lived one for Elijah." For Peter didn't know what to say.³⁴ And no sooner had he spoken than a cloud appeared and covered them; and the disciples were afraid as they entered the cloud.³⁵ Then these words came from the cloud, "This is my Son, my Chosen one, listen to him."³⁶ And after the voice had spoken, Jesus was there alone.

The disciples kept this to themselves at the time, telling no one of anything they had seen.

The epileptic demoniac

(Mk 9:14; Mt 17:14)

³⁷ The next day, when they came down from the mountain, a large crowd met Jesus.³⁸ A man in the crowd called out, "Master, I beg you to look at my son, my only child. When the evil spirit seizes him, he suddenly screams.³⁹ The spirit throws him into a fit with foaming at the mouth; it scarcely ever leaves him and is wearing him out."⁴⁰ I begged your disciples to drive it out, but they could not."

⁴¹ Jesus answered, "You faithless people! How wrong you are! How long must I be with you and put up with you? Bring your son here."⁴² And while the boy was being brought, the demon knocked him to the ground and threw him into a fit. But Jesus spoke sharply to the evil spirit, healed the boy and gave him back to his father.⁴³ And all of them were astonished at God's wonderful work.

(Mk 9:30)

While all were amazed at everything Jesus did, he said to his disciples, ⁴⁴"Listen and remember what I tell you now: The Son of Man will be delivered into the hands of men."⁴⁵ But the disciples didn't understand this saying; something prevented them from grasping what he meant, and they were afraid to ask him about it.

Who is the greatest?

◆ ⁴⁶ One day the disciples were arguing about which of them was the most important.⁴⁷ But Jesus knew their thoughts, so he took a little child and stood him by his side.⁴⁸ Then he said to them, "Whoever welcomes this little child in my name welcomes me: and whoever welcomes me, welcomes the one who sent me. And listen: He who is found to be the least among you all, he is the greatest."

⁴⁹ Then John spoke up, "Master, we saw a man who drove out demons by together, they had not all reached the same level and they could not go with Jesus into the Cloud.

He went up into the mountain to pray. It is quite possible that it was during a night of prayer that the event that Jesus expected took place. Meanwhile, the apostles were asleep until the Glory of Jesus transfigured awakened them.

They saw his glory: this recalls how Moses' face was transfigured after talking with God (Ex 34 29-35). Here, however, the glory comes from Jesus himself and it even affects his clothing.

Listen to him: Jesus is the Prophet, announced by Moses, and all should hear him. For us, however, it is not a question of receiving new laws. Instead, we listen to the one who reveals the Father to us and who moves us to be reconciled with him. To achieve that, we must pay close attention to him as the apostles did.

◆ See commentary on Mk 9:33.

Mark remarks that Jesus took a child in his arms: something unusual for people of the time since children did not count, and religious teachers only urged that they be well punished. The model of religion seemed to be a serious man who did not laugh, did not run, did not look at less responsible people, especially women and children. Oftentimes, we see something of such a mentality in those who criticize children's baptism and first communion.

Jesus does not answer the apostles' question: Who is the greatest? because what matters is not becoming the greatest, but being the one closest to Christ. And in order to receive Christ, we must welcome him in the person of the little ones.

+ After remembering Jesus' deeds in Galilee, Luke begins the second part of his gospel in calling upon your name, and we tried to stop him because he doesn't follow you with us."⁵⁰ But Jesus said, "Don't stop him. He who is not against you is for you."

Jesus unwelcome in a Samaritan village

+ ⁵¹As the time drew near when Jesus would be taken up to heaven, he made up his mind to go to Jerusalem. ⁵²He had sent ahead of him some messengers who entered a Samaritan village to prepare a lodging for him. ⁵³But the people would not receive him because he was on his way to Jerusalem. ⁵⁴Seeing this, James and John, his disciples said, "Lord, do you want us to call down fire from heaven to reduce them to ashes?" ⁵⁵Jesus turned and rebuked them, ⁵⁶and they went on to another village.

The cost of following Jesus

◆⁵⁷ As they went on their way, a man said to him, "I will follow you wherever you go."⁵⁸ Jesus said to him, "Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay his head."

⁵⁹ To another Jesus said, "Follow me." But he answered, "Let me go back now, for first I want to bury my father." ⁶⁰ And Jesus said to him, "Let the dead bury their dead; as for you, leave them and proclaim the kingdom of God."

⁶¹Another said to him, "I will follow you, Lord, but first let me say good-bye to my family."⁶² And Jesus said to him, "Whoever has put his hand to the plough and looks back, is not fit for the kingdom of God."

which he puts together sayings and words that Jesus uttered on different occasions.

The first paragraph reminds us that between the two provinces of Galilee and Judea, there was Samaria. Its people were Samaritans, non-Jews, and the two people really hated each other. When Jews from Galilee were going on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, throughout Samaria every door was closed to them.

In this chapter Luke refers several times to the story of the prophet Elijah. Here Luke refers to the story told in 2 Kg 1:9: according to the story (or legend), those who despised the prophet were destroyed by the fire of God.

Here, Jesus calls on his apostles to be less impulsive: the Samaritans refusing to welcome Jesus on this occasion are not more guilty than those who close their doors to a stranger. Why destroy this little village if by doing this they still had to look for a place in another village? It was better to move on without delay.

Call fire down from heaven: fortunately Jesus did not give all of us the power to work miracles. We would often use this power for our own personal revenge, confusing God's cause with ours.

◆ BREAKTHROUGHS – BECOMING FREE

In contrast with Jesus' customary understanding attitude about human nature, here we see Jesus very demanding with the disciple who wants to follow him: Jesus cannot waste his time in forming men who are not ready to sacrifice everything for the sake of the Gospel.

The first of these admirers of Jesus had not realized that he was tied down by his love of comfort. The third, perhaps, was secretly hoping that at the time of saying good-by, his family would beg him not to do such a foolish thing, and so he would stay with his good intentions: I would like to, but...

The second case is different: the apostles must feel free from commitments to their families and their environment. It is difficult to think one is free if one has not had the opportunity to prove it by doing things differently from what is understood and accepted. Think about Francis of Assisi begging for bread in his own town after having lived as the son of a rich family.

For centuries, entrance into religious orders was almost the only way to liberation from an all-powerful family environment in order to be able to follow the gospel way better. In our age, we have to be freed, at times, from all kinds of social obligations – good things – but so numerous that we forget the only thing which is necessary.

I want first to bury my father: Perhaps this means that he had to bury his dead father; but perhaps the disciple wanted to look after his old father until he had buried him.

Let the dead bury their dead: we cannot look after the needs of everyone. Those who "are alive" dedicate themselves primarily to evangelization which only they understand. Meanwhile, there will be people from among "the dead" to Jesus sends out the seventy

(Mt 10:15; Mk 6:7)

10 ¹After this the Lord appointed seventy other disciples and sent them two by two ahead of him to every town and place where he himself was to go. ²And he said to them, "The harvest is rich, but the workers are few. So you must ask the Lord of the harvest to send workers to his harvest. ³Courage! I am sending you like lambs among wolves. ⁴Set off without purse or bag or sandals; and do not stop at your acquaintances' homes.

⁵Whatever house you enter, first bless them saying: 'Peace to this house.' ⁶If a man of peace lives there, the peace shall rest upon him. But if not, the blessing will return to you. ⁷Stay in that house eating and drinking at their table, for the worker deserves his wages. Do not move from house to house.

■ ⁸When they welcome you in any town, eat what they offer you. ⁹Heal the sick who are there and tell these people: 'The kingdom of God has drawn near to you.'

¹⁰But in any town where you are not welcomed, go to the market place and proclaim: ¹¹'Even the dust of your town that clings to our feet, we wipe off and leave with you. Yet know and be sure that the kingdom of God had come to you.' ¹²I tell you that on the Judgement Day it will be better for Sodom than for this town.

take care of the obligations of solidarity and compassion that we ourselves cannot attend to.

Let the dead bury their dead : It is obvious that Jesus speaks as the prophets did. In asserting this deep truth, he was not giving a law to be practiced systematically.

o See commentary on Mt 10:5 and Mk 6:7.

Luke reports a mission of the seventy (or 72) after the mission of the Twelve (9:1).

There were twelve apostles according to the number of the tribes of Israel: this means that at first, the Gospel was proclaimed to the people of Israel. Then came the mission of the seventy-two (or of the seventy): these numbers symbolized the multitude of pagan nations. This mission, then, is a figure of the task which is the responsibility of the church until the end of the world: to evangelize all nations (Mt 28:19).

When the church has been present long enough in a particular place, we tend to believe that everyone has had the opportunity to receive the Gospel: this is an illusion. Even in the best of circumstances, many families, especially the poorest ones, have waited for years for some missionary's visit.

In visiting homes, the first thing to do is to give peace, that is, to come as a friend, on behalf of Christ and his church, taking the time to listen to the people visited and to find out their concerns. Then, and only then, will we be able to give them a good answer and to tell them: the Kingdom has come to you, or, even though you may have a thousand problems, believe that today God has come closer to you to reconcile you. This is the time to be reconciled with family members and neighbours, to let go of resentments. Begin undertaking what you can do, and trust that, in his own way, God will solve what is beyond our own power.

Cure the sick: see what follows.

Many of the people who welcome the missionaries with joy are not going to persevere: they are not going to enter a Christian community. That does not necessarily mean that the missionaries' efforts have been wasted. These people will remember this moment of grace from the Lord and it will help them in keeping some degree of faith in their daily lives. In any case, there will be some whose hearts were touched by the Lord at that time and they will become active members of his church.

The mission helps form the missionaries and also awakens those they visit. Jesus formed his disciples not only through his teaching, but also by sending them on missions. That is the way he formed the seventy a few months after they met him. Likewise now, the best people for this missionary work are often those who have been recently converted.

CURING THE SICK

■ Cure the sick, Jesus says. We have already said that Jesus did not come to bring good health to all the sick people, but rather to bring us salvation. Since we are sinners, our salvation is worked out through suffering and through the cross.

Jesus' messengers do not try to replace doctors. They do not proclaim faith as a means to be cured; that would lower it. They do, however, offer "healing" to the people who have not yet discovered that the Kingdom of God and his mercy have come to them.

¹³Alas for you Corazin! Alas for you Bethsaida! So many miracles have been worked in you! If the same miracles had been performed in Tyre and Sidon, they would already be sitting in ashes and wearing the sack cloth of repentance. ¹⁴Surely for Tyre and Sidon it will be better than for you in the Judgment Day. ¹⁵And what of you, city of Capernaum? Will you be lifted up to heaven? You will be thrown down to the place of the dead.

¹⁶Whoever listens to you listens to me, and whoever rejects you rejects me; and he who rejects me, rejects the one who sent me."

Jesus gives thanks to the Father

(Mt 11:25)

o ¹⁷The seventy disciples returned full of joy. They said, "Lord, even the demons obeyed us when we called on your name." ¹⁸Then Jesus replied, "I saw Satan fall like lightning from heaven. ¹⁹You see, I have given you authority to trample on snakes and scorpions and to overcome all the power of the Enemy, so that nothing will harm you. ²⁰Nevertheless, don't rejoice because the evil spirits submit to you; rejoice rather that your names are written in heaven."

²¹At that time Jesus was filled with the joy of the Holy Spirit and said, "I praise you, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, for you have hidden these things from the wise and learned, and made them known to little children.

²²Yes, Father, such has been your gracious will. I have been given all things by my Father, so that no one knows the Son except the Father, and no one knows the Father except the Son and he to whom the Son chooses to reveal him."

Wherever there are communities of Christians, they must care for the sick and visit them as a sign of their being concerned for everyone and being everyone's family. The love shown by a visitor encourages the sick person, gives him joy and arouses gratitude in him, and thus disposes him for an in-depth renewal and for the forgiveness of sins. See also James 5:13.

In his first letter to the Corinthians 15:9, Paul speaks of the various gifts that the spirit gives to the Christian community and he singles out the gift to work miracles and to heal the sick. This last gift may correspond to a natural disposition the person had before.

The church must appreciate every form of care given to the sick. Obviously we should encourage those who can pray and impose their hands over the sick. But, doctors and hospital personnel must look on their skillful care of patients as a service done for the sick on behalf of God.

And do not stop at your acquaintances' home: that would be the same as taking provisions along. A missionary must rely only on the Father's Providence: he will know how to touch the heart of someone listening to the Good News so that the missionary will be welcome. Missionaries would certainly lose their missionary zeal if they lived with people who did not understand the Kingdom.

o At first, the person who preaches Christ and works for him is scared. Then, follows the joy of having surpassed oneself, and even more the joy of having believed and worked with the very power of Jesus. Jesus gives thanks for the seventy (or seventy-two) and for all those who will follow them.

What are these things that God has revealed to the little ones but the mysterious power of the Gospel to transform people and show them the truth? The apostles marvel at the power coming from the name of Jesus (Mk 16:9). Jesus underlines the defeat of the Adversary, Satan, the father of lies, of false freedom and of golden chains.

The learned and the clever think they know, but they do not know what is essential. They speak of a God who is no more than a caricature of the true God and they do not recognize him in Jesus. They do not know where the world is heading because they do not see how God's power is working wherever Jesus is being proclaimed.

The little ones, on the other hand, have understood. A short while ago they saw them selves as a sacrificed generation. For the little ones are used to sacrificing themselves for their children from generation to generation or they are sacrificed by powers under the pretext of bringing happiness to their descendants. They ciples and said to them privately, "Fortunate are you to see what you see,"²⁴ for I tell you that many prophets and kings would have liked to see what you see but did not, and to hear what you hear but did not hear it."

The good Samaritan

(Mt 22:24; Mk 12:28)

+ ²⁵ Then a teacher of the Law came and began putting Jesus to the test. And he said, "Master, what shall I do to receive eternal life?"²⁶ Jesus replied, "What is written in the Scripture? How do you understand it?"²⁷ The man answered, "It is written: You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your strength and with all your mind. And you shall love your neighbour as yourself."²⁸ Jesus replied, "What a good answer! Do this and you shall live."²⁹ The man wanted to keep up appearances, so he replied, "Who is my neighbour?"

³⁰ Jesus then said, "There was a man going down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and he fell into the hands of robbers. They stripped him, beat him and went off leaving him half dead.

³¹ It happened that a priest was going along that road, and saw the man, but passed by on the other side.³² Likewise a Levite saw the man and passed by the other side.³³ But a Samaritan, too, was going along that road and, as he came upon the man, was moved with compassion.³⁴ He went over to him and treated his wounds with oil and wine and wrapped them with bandages. Then he put him on his own animal and brought him to an inn where he took care of him.

³⁵ The next day he had to set off, but he gave two silver coins to the inn-did not live for themselves, rather they were preparing a place for others. But now, the little ones, namely, the humble believers have everything if they have Jesus because everything has been given to him by the Father.

Little ones live their faith in simple ways but they know that none of their sacrifices are lost. It is Jesus who reveals the Father to us, and knowing him in truth, we also share in his control over events. Our desires and our prayers are powerful because we have come to the center from which God directs the forces saving humankind: because we work for eternity, our names are already written in heaven.

To evangelize does not mean to advertise the Gospel but rather to prove its power to heal people from their demons and we need not become activists to that effect. We must admit that we have no power in these things and we must give thanks to God who enabled us to see, to hear and to communicate his salvation.

Fortunate are you to see... Stop being envious of famous people, kings and prophets of the past. You who are alive now and who are neither kings nor prophets have been given a better part.

+ Who is my neighbour? The teacher of the law expected to be given the precise limits of his obligation. Whom was he supposed to look after? members of his family? people of his own race? or perhaps everybody?

It is significant that Jesus concludes his story with a different question: Which of the three made himself neighbour? It is as if he said: do not try to figure out who is your neighbour, listen instead to the call within you, and become a neighbour, be close to your brother in need. As long as we see the command to love as an obligation, we are not loving as God wants.

Love does not simply consist in being moved by another person's distress. Notice how the Samaritan stopped by in spite of it being a dangerous place, how he paid for the expenses and promised to take care of whatever else might be necessary. Instead of just 'being charitable' he took unconditional and uncalculated risks for a stranger.

On one occasion, Martin Luther King pointed out that love is not satisfied with comforting those who suffer: "To begin with, we must be the good Samaritan to those who have fallen along the way. This, however, is only the beginning. Then, some day we will necessarily have to realize that the road to Jericho must be made in such a way that men and women are not constantly beaten and robbed while they are going along the paths of life."

With this example, Jesus also makes us see that, many times, those who seem to be religious officials, or who believe they fulfill the law, are incapable of loving. It was a Samaritan, considered a heretic by the Jews, who took care of the wounded man.

keeper and told him: "Take care of him and whatever you spend on him, I will repay when I come back."

³⁶Jesus then asked, "Which of these three, do you think, made himself neighbour to the man who fell into the hands of robbers?" ³⁷The teacher of the Law answered, "the one who had mercy on him." And Jesus said, "Go then and do the same."

Martha and Mary

◆³⁸As Jesus and his disciples were on their way, he entered a village and a woman called Martha welcomed him to her house. ³⁹She had a sister named Mary who sat down at the Lord's feet to listen to his words. ⁴⁰Martha, meanwhile, was busy with all the serving and finally she said, "Lord, don't you care that my sister has left me to do all the serving?"

⁴¹But the Lord answered, "Martha,

Martha, you worry and are troubled about many things, ⁴²whereas only one thing is needed. Mary has chosen the better part, and it will not be taken away from her."

Lord, teach us to pray

(Mt 6:9; 7:7)

11 ¹One day Jesus was praying in a certain place and when he had finished, one of his disciples said to him, "Lord, teach us to pray, just as John taught his disciples." ²And Jesus said to them, "When you pray, say this:

Father, hallowed be your name,
may your kingdom come,
³give us each day our daily bread, ⁴and forgive us our sins, for we also forgive all who do us wrong, and do not let us fall into temptation.

○⁵Jesus said to them, "Suppose

For the Jews, neighbours were the members of Israel, their own people, dignified by sharing the same religion; in fact, this fraternity came from "blood and flesh." For Jesus, instead, true fraternity leads us to give up any discrimination.

◆ There are many things which seem necessary in family life: cleaning, preparing meals, taking care of children. By doing this, somehow, we are looking after Christ. Yet, only one thing is needed for all: to listen to Christ when he is present. To do this, everything else must be put aside.

Martha offers her material services to Jesus when he wishes to give her eternal riches. She is working and worrying and does not have the time to be with Jesus. Love is something else. Jesus is peace and the person who does not attend to him in peace does not receive him. There is a way of serving and working feverishly which leaves us empty, whether it is at home or in the community; instead Jesus wants us to find him in our daily work.

Our prayer can also be a way of fidgeting like Martha: when we fret in saying prayers, when we use a lot of words to present our worries to the Lord a hundred times over; when the person responsible for the celebration becomes nervous and overly concerned about the perfection of the singing or the homily. All of us should look for a form of prayer in which we take time to put ourselves in the presence of God, before beginning to pray at all: we must listen, giving time to silent meditation on God's Word. We must silence our desires in order to direct our attention only to God who is present in secret. How strange that in some non-Christian religions, people learn to bring their minds to peace and silence and reach true serenity. Meanwhile, we enter prayer with our concerns and do not let go of them until the prayer is ended.

If the Mary in this episode were the same as Mary of Magdala who accompanied Jesus (Lk 8:2) we could imagine the following:

Mary is part of the group of disciples who, along with Jesus, are received by Martha, her "sister or relative." Mary is not in the least concerned about preparing the food and Martha is complaining. Jesus, then, praises Mary, not only because she is listening to him, but because a while back, she had already decided to follow him with the apostles. Like the apostles, Mary has chosen the better part.

■ The apostles already knew how to pray and they prayed in common as all the Jews did in the synagogue and at key times during the day. Yet, in living close to Jesus, they discovered a new way to live in close fellowship and they felt a need to address the Father. See Mt 6:9.

○ Jesus urges us to ask with perseverance without ever getting tired of asking, but rather one of you has a friend and goes to his house in the middle of the night and says: 'Friend, lend me three loaves, ⁶for a friend of mine who is travelling has just arrived and I have nothing to offer him.' ⁷Maybe your friend will answer from inside: 'Don't bother me now; the door is locked and my children and I are in bed, so I can't get up and give you anything.' ⁸But I tell you, even though this man will not get up and attend to him because he is a friend, yet he will get up because the other is a bother to him, and he will give him all he needs.

⁹And so I say to you, 'Ask and it will be given to you; seek and you will find; knock and it will be opened to you.' ¹⁰For the one who asks receives, and the one who seeks finds, and to him who knocks it will be opened.'

¹¹Many of you are fathers; if your

Jesus and Beelzebul

(Mk 3:22; Mt 12:23; Mk 4:21; 9:40)

◆ ¹⁴One day Jesus was driving out a dumb demon. When the demon had been driven out and the man could speak, the people were amazed. ¹⁵Yet some of them said, "He drives out demons by the power of Beelzebul, the chief of the demons." ¹⁶So others wanted to put him to the test, by asking him for a heavenly sign.

¹⁷But Jesus knew their thoughts and said to them, "Every nation di-ting God. God will not always give us what we ask for, nor in the way we ask, since we do not know what is good for us. But he will give us a holy spirit, or a clearer vision of his will, and at the same time, the courage to follow it.

Knock and it will be opened to you. A page from Father Molinier is a commentary on this verse. "If God does not open up at once, it is not because he enjoys making us wait. If we must persevere in prayer, it is not because we need a set number of invocations, but rather because a certain quality, a certain way of prayer is required. If we were able to have that at the beginning, our prayer would be heard immediately."

Prayer is the groaning of the Holy Spirit in us as Saint Paul says. Yet, we need repetition for this groaning to open a path in our stony heart, just as the drop of water wastes away the hardest rocks. When we repeat the Our Father and the Hail Mary with perseverance, one day we can pray them in a way which is in perfect harmony with God's will. He himself was waiting for this groaning, the only one which can move him since, in fact, it comes from his own heart.

As long as we have not played this note, or rather, drawn it from within, God cannot be conquered. It is not that God defends himself since he is pure tenderness and fluidity, and as long as there is nothing similar in us, the current cannot pass between him and us. Man gets tired of praying, yet if he perseveres instead of losing heart, he will gradually let go of his pride until being exhausted and overcome, he obtains much more than he could have wished for."

PETITIONS – THE SAINTS

Jesus invites us to ask with perseverance, not so that God will grant us our wishes, but so that we may be more attuned to his thoughts and desires. Persevering petitions cease being self-centered and become prayer, that is, they lift us up and bring us closer to God.

Jesus does not say anything about asking the saints because, very often, the person who begs the saints takes a road opposed to real prayer. Such a person is not interested in discovering God's mercy but in obtaining some favour. He does not care whom he addresses as long as he finds an efficient and automatic dispenser of benefits. And so begins the search for saints, shrines and devotions.

The church is a family. Just as we ask our friends to pray for us, so too and much more we should ask our brothers, the saints. No one will criticize us if, at times, we show our confidence in their intercession, especially the intercession of those whom we admire more because we know their lives and their deeds. This "petition" to the saints cannot, however, be confused with the perseverance in asking, which introduces us into God's mystery. Mary, the mother of God, is the only creature who can accompany us in prayer, because God made her our mother; because he deposited in her all the compassion he had for us; and because he united her to himself in such a way that when we look at her, we always find the living presence of God.

vided by civil war is on the road to ruin, and one after another will fall.

¹⁸If Satan also is divided, his empire is coming to an end. How can you say that I drive out demons by calling upon Beelzebul? ¹⁹If I drive them out by Beelzebul, by whom do your fellow members drive out demons? They themselves will give you the answer.

²⁰But suppose I am driving out demons by the finger of God; would not this mean that the kingdom of God has come upon you? ²¹As long as the strong and armed man guards his house, his goods are safe. ²²But when a stronger one attacks and overcomes him, the challenger takes away all the weapons he relied on and disposes of his spoils.

+ ²³Whoever is not with me is against me, and whoever does not gather with me, scatters.

■ ²⁴When the evil spirit goes out of man, he wanders through dry lands looking for a resting place. And finding none, he says, "I will return to my house from which I came." ²⁵So he returns and finds the house swept and everything in order. ²⁶Then he goes to fetch seven other spirits even worse than himself, to enter that house and settle in it. And the last state of that man is worse than the first.

o ²⁷As Jesus was speaking, a woman spoke from the crowd and said to him, "Blessed is the one who bore you and nursed you!" ²⁸Jesus replied, "Surely blessed are those who hear the word of God and keep it as well."

◆ ²⁹As the crowd increased, Jesus began to speak in this way, "People of the present time are evil people. They ask for a sign, but no sign will be given to them except the sign of Jonah. ³⁰As Jonah became a sign for the people of Nineveh, so will the Son of Man be a sign for this generation. ³¹The Queen of the South will rise up on Judgment Day with the people of these times and accuse them, for she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and here there is greater than Solomon. ³²The men of Nineveh will rise up on Judgment Day with the people of these times and accuse them, for Jonah's preaching made them turn from their sins, and here there is greater than Jonah.

By the finger of God (v. 20). In Exodus 10:15, the same expression is used to designate the power of God working miracles.

+ Whoever is not with me ... This phrase seems to contradict Lk 9:50: Whoever is not against you is with you. In fact, in Lk 9:50, Jesus admits that his spiritual family goes much beyond the visible group of his disciples: those who, without belonging to the church, work for the same goals, must be considered as friends.

In Luke 11:23, on the other hand, Jesus speaks of people who refuse to be defined in terms of his message and who want to remain uncommitted: they do not join him and later, they will criticize him.

■ The Jews believed that evil spirits preferred to live in the desert or, rather, that God had banished them there. Here, Jesus is speaking of people who only believe for a while because they do not repent enough of their past sins: they enjoyed listening to the word but they did not take the costly measures which would have allowed them to heal the root of evil.

o The woman is actually praising Jesus. When she says: Your mother is blessed, she means: Who can speak like you? Jesus, however, answers: if my words are so good, do not praise my relatives who may be proud of me, but rather those who make the most of my words.

As for Mary, the mother of Jesus, we have already said that she was the first one to believe (Lk 1:38); she was happy to have believed (Lk 1:45) and she kept all the words and deeds of the Lord in her heart (Lk 2:51).

◆ The Ninevites, being sinners, received no other divine sign than the coming of Jonah who invited them to repent. Jesus' contemporaries believe they are "good" because they belong to the people of God and they do not realize that the hour has come for them to repent.

Woe to you Pharisees!

o ³⁷ As Jesus was speaking, a Pharisee asked him to have a meal with him. So he went and sat at table. ³⁸ The Pharisee then wondered why Jesus did not first wash his hands before dinner. ³⁹ But the Lord said to him, "So then, you Pharisees, you clean the outside of the cup and the dish, but inside yourselves you are full of plundering and evil. ⁴⁰ Fools! He who made the outside, also made the inside. ⁴¹ But according to you, by the mere giving of alms everything is made clean.

⁴⁵ Then a teacher of the Law spoke up and said, "Master, when you speak like this, you insult us too." ⁴⁶ And Jesus answered, "A curse is on you also, teachers of the Law. For you prepare unbearable burdens and load them on the people, while you yourselves don't move a finger to help them. ⁴⁷ A curse is on you, for you build memorials to the prophets your fathers killed. ⁴⁸ So you approve and agree with what your fathers did. The Bible does not demand these ritual purifications which Mark also mentions in 7:3, but the teachers of Jesus' time insisted that they were necessary. Jesus rebels against these new religious obligations. Why do they not pay more attention to inner purification?

Then, we read about the reproaches Jesus addressed to the Pharisees on various occasions. All of these words and reproaches are also for us who appear to be the thinkers, or the pastors, or the best in the church. Theoretically it is a gift to be well informed about doctrine, to have a ministry, or to be part of a group more serious about Christian life. Yet, in practice, all of this makes it more difficult for us to be truly humble and many times, it prevents us from being in the last place which should be ours. Then, only God's visitation can save us. When he manifests himself, he and only he, can strip us of all the merits we thought we had and leave us with the vision of our sins. This is what happened to the Pharisee Paul (or Saul) when he encountered Jesus (Acts 9; Phil 3:4-11).

■ Those who before Luke, wrote down this saying of Jesus: I will send prophets ... (which we also read in Mt 23:34), introduced it with the formula: "Wisdom says," which was a way of designating Jesus. When Luke placed these lines within Jesus' discourse, he forgot to take out these words. Removing them would have made that has been shed since the foundation of the world,⁵¹ from the blood of Abel to the blood of Zechariah, who was murdered between the altar and the sanctuary. Yes, I tell you, the people of this time will have to answer for them all.

⁵² A curse is on you, the teachers of the Law, for you have taken the key of knowledge. You yourselves have not entered, and you prevented others from entering."

⁵³ As Jesus left that place, the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees began to harass him, ⁵⁴ asking him endless questions, setting traps to catch him in something he might say.

So do not fear: are you not worth more than thousands of sparrows?

See commentary on Mt 23:34. Jesus states that the Pharisees and the teachers of the law are going to be mainly responsible for the persecution against the first Christians (against those apostles and prophets he is going to send). Jesus also declares that the punishment for this persecution will fall on the present generation, and thus, he announces the destruction of the Jewish nation in 70 A.D.

Jesus' warning also applies to priests, religious, Christian institutions and the "good Christians," when their role in the church is similar to that of the Pharisees and teachers of the law in the Jewish religion and society of that time.

In our case, too, it might be that we build a Church allied with power, which is ruled by the most educated circles, and looking for respectability, unconsciously look down on the poor and the workers. With this, we, ourselves have prepared the persecution against the prophets of our time. In many places where militant Christians and even religious were repressed or murdered, there have been "church" people next to those who either ordered or approved those crimes.

You did not enter and you prevented those who want to enter from entering. Is not this one of the reasons why so many simple people go to other churches?

GREED – PRODUCTIVITY

o Who has appointed me as your judge? Jesus reserves his authority for what is essential: suppressing the greed ingrained in our hearts is more important than looking at every person's right with a magnifying glass.

Avoid every kind of greed: it is not a matter of being resigned to mediocrity or destitution, satisfied to have ten people sleep in the same room, and without any opportunity for education. We know that all this prevents the growth of people in awareness of their dignity and of their divine vocation. Jesus does not criticize our efforts to achieve a more just society, since the whole Bible requires it. Instead, he asks us to create a more authentic human community which cannot exist when only a few are in charge of wealth, culture and responsibilities.

But it is one thing to seek justice because without justice there is neither peace nor communion: it is quite another to look at what others have with the desire to share their greed. Today we clamour for justice but tomorrow we may only think of having more superfluous necessities. Such greed will never let us rest, and what is more, it will close the door of the Kingdom on us. (Mk 10:23; 1 Tim 6:8).

Possessions do not give life. Make sure that your concern to have what you lack does not make you neglect what could give you life now.

In this regard, we should allow the poor to speak, all those brothers and sisters of ours who, though immersed in poverty, continue to be persons who live, in the strongest sense of this word. Should we pity them, or should we count them among the few who already enjoy the Kingdom of God? One of the greatest obstacles preventing the liberation of people is their own greed. The day they agree to participate in powerful boycotts and not go their own way in the pursuit of advantages for one or other category, they shall begin to live as people.

What shall I do? The simplest thing to do was to share earthly riches created for the benefit of everyone. But, instead, he was worrying about keeping them and thus rendering them useless. The very same thing occurs now: The first concern of our societies is not to provide the basic necessities of life for all. Greed is the driving force of our economies. Because of this, production is wasted and many live in sub-human conditions. The rich man in the parable was planning bigger barns; today's manufacturers look for markets everywhere and their best recourse is to persuade people that they need lots of things they had never thought of before.

The person who works for God knows how to find happiness in the present moment. Wherever he is, he tries to create a network of social safe investments within God, where no thief comes and no moth destroys. ³⁴ For where your investments are, there will your heart be also.

²⁹ As for you: do not set your heart on what you are to eat and drink; stop worrying. ³⁰ Let all the nations of the world run after these things; your Father knows that you need them. ³¹ Seek rather the Kingdom and these things will be given to you as well.

Be ready

(Mk 13:33; Mt 24:43; 6:19)

■ ³⁵ Be ready, dressed for service, and keep your lamps lit, ³⁶ like people waiting for their master to return from the wedding. As soon as he comes and knocks, they will open to him. ³⁷ Happy are those servants whom the master finds wide-awake when he comes. ³⁸ Truly, I tell you, he will put on an apron and have them sit at table and wait on them. Happy are those servants if he finds them awake when he comes at midnight or day-break!

relationships through which everyone gives to others and receives from them instead of wanting and getting things in a selfish way.

THE POOR CHURCH

+ Do not fear little flock. Nowhere in the Gospel does Jesus allow us to believe that with time most people will be converted.

We know that the non-Christian world is numerically much more important than the "Christian" world and it grows more rapidly. While large numbers in the "Christian" world give up religious practice, we understand that the church is both a sign and a little flock.

Jesus asks each one of us to be detached from earthly things and he also asks the same of the flock. What matters for the church is not the building of powerful institutions nor the holding of key posts in society "for the greater glory of God," because the world is passing and we are waiting for the coming of the Lord.

Sell what you possess. Are the common people convinced that the Church has done this? Christian people rejoice when their bishop and pastors condemn injustice and remind them of the rights of the working class and the marginalized. But it is not enough for us to preach to others. God asks justice of the world and poverty of his Church. Our call for justice will not be heard as long as the Church does not accept for herself the whole Gospel.

It has pleased your Father to give you the kingdom: compare this with Lk 10:23 and Mt 16:16. If we really want to love the Father, we must always keep in mind that he has chosen us before others to be, in the world, this little flock that seeks what is essential.

■ Jesus develops the parable of the servant expecting his master's return. This servant is here contrasted with the rich man who is concerned about a long and comfortable life. The servant works for God.

Happy the servants whom the master finds wide-awake (v. 37). Wide-awake, that is, concerned about tomorrow's world. Wide-awake also means being aware of the truth: we do not consent to call 'good' evil, and 'evil' good; we do not forgive ourselves for allowing evil and we are not intimidated before injustice.

The Son of Man will come like a thief (v. 40). We should not think only of the day of death, nor should we be afraid of God's judgement if we live in his grace. Jesus tells us about the master returning from the wedding who is so happy that he reverses the usual order and begins to serve his servants. If we have been serving God for years, how could we not reach this other phase of spiritual life in which it would seem that God is concerned only in giving and feasting over us?

Peter said to him: (v. 41). This new paragraph is aimed at those who hold responsible positions in the church.

My master delays in coming (v. 45). Those who are responsible may betray their mission. More often, they make the mistake of seeing only to the good functioning of the institutions and they forget that Christ is coming.

God comes all the time through events which, unexpectedly, ruin our plans. Therefore, the ³⁹Pay attention to this: If the master of the house had known at what time the thief would come, he would not have let him break into his house. ⁴⁰You also must be ready, for the Son of Man will come at an hour you do not expect."

⁴¹Peter said, "Lord, did you tell this parable only for us, or for everyone?" ⁴²And the Lord replied, "Imagine, then, the wise and faithful steward whom the master sets over his other servants. ⁴³Fortunate is this servant if his master on coming home finds him doing his work. ⁴⁴Truly, I say to you, the master will put him in charge of all his property."

⁴⁵But it may be that the steward thinks: 'My Lord delays in coming,' and he begins to abuse the men servants and the servant girls, eating and drinking and getting drunk. ⁴⁶Then the master may come on a day he does not expect him and at an hour he doesn't know. He will discharge his steward and number him among the unreliable."

⁴⁷The servant who knew his master's will but did not prepare to do what his master wanted, will be punished with a sound beating; but the one who did what deserved a punishment ⁴⁸without knowing it shall receive a lighter beating. Much will be required of the one who has been given much, and as more things are entrusted to him, more will be asked of him.

⁴⁹I have come to bring fire upon the earth and how I wish it were already kindled; ⁵⁰but I have a baptism to undergo and what anguish I feel until it is over!

⁵¹Do you think that I have come to give peace on earth? No, I tell you, but rather division. ⁵²From now on, in one house five will be divided; three against two, and the two against the three. ⁵³They will be divided, father against son and son against father; mother against daughter and daughter against mother; mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law."

church must not rely too much on planning its activity: who knows what God has in store for us tomorrow? Instead the church should see to its prayer and its availability so that the Lord will let her be in the best situation when he shakes up our little universe.

Be awake to admire, rejoice in and discover the presence of God and his blessings which enlighten our lives.

o I have come to bring fire. Must we think of fire as referring to something precise such as love: the Gospel or the gift of the Holy Spirit would be? It is better to stay with the image of fire which purifies, burns all that is old, gives warmth and fosters life: fire of the judgement of God destroying all that is not submitted to its reforming action.

Jesus does not come to solve everyone's problems individually but to remake the world and to bring the jewels which will remain for eternity out of the rubble. But those wishing to have a share in the glory of God the Father, as Jesus does, must take part in this work of salvation which includes the whole world with its tensions, violence, its wise and crazy achievements.

I must receive a baptism ... Jesus is both the leader and the first one who is going to face death as a means of obtaining resurrection. This step as 'agonizing' for Jesus as it is for us, is the baptism of fire (see Lk 3:16) which introduces us into a glorious and eternal life. This is prefigured in some way when we receive Christian baptism (Rom 6:3-5).

I came to bring division: This is followed by words of Jesus which are so upsetting for those who wish to rest at his side. Jesus is a source of division among nations (see commentary on Jn 10:1-4) and social groups. Often people have tried to make religion into the cement of national unity or family peace. It is true that faith is a factor in peace and understanding; but it also separates those who are truly alive from those others, be they brothers or friends, who cannot have all that is now the most important to them. Many times, the wound and the scandal of this separation is so painful for them, that they turn +⁵⁴Jesus said to the crowds, "When you see a cloud rising in the west, you say at once: 'A shower is coming.' And so it happens. ⁵⁵And when the wind blows from the south, you say: 'It will be hot'; and so it is. ⁵⁶You superficial people! You understand the appearances of the earth and the sky, but you don't understand the present times. ⁵⁷And why do you not judge for yourselves what is fit? ⁵⁸When you go with your accuser before the court, try to settle with him on the way, lest he drag you to the judge and the judge deliver you to the jailer, and the jailer throw you in prison. ⁵⁹I tell you, you will not get out until you have paid the very last penny."

The fig tree without fruit

13 ¹One day some persons told Jesus what had occurred in the Temple: Pilate had Galileans killed and their blood mingled with the blood of their sacrifices. ²Jesus replied, "Do you think that these Galileans were worse sinners than all the other Galileans because they suffered this? ³I tell you: no. But unless you change your ways, you will all perish as they did.

⁴And those eighteen persons in Siloah who were crushed when the tower fell, do you think they were more guilty than all the others in Jerusalem? ⁵I tell you: no. But if you won't change your ways, you will all perish as they did."

⁶And Jesus continued with this story, "A man had a fig tree growing in his vineyard and he came looking for fruit on it, but found none. ⁷Then he said to the gardener: 'Look here, for three years now I have been looking for figs on this tree and I have found none. Cut it down, why should it use up the ground?' ⁸The gardener replied to him: 'Leave it one more year, so that I may dig around and put in some fertilizer; ⁹and perhaps it will bear fruit from now on. But if it doesn't, you can cut it down."

into our persecutors.

The Gospel does not put this world on the road to an earthly paradise, but it challenges it to grow. The death of Jesus brings into full light what was hidden in hearts (Lk 2:35); likewise it reveals the lies and the violence underlying our societies just as they did in the Jewish society of his time.

+ When you see a cloud. The signs revealed around Jesus are enough for everyone to understand that now is the time announced by the prophets when people must be converted and Israel must acknowledge its Saviour: tomorrow will be too late (v. 57-59).

When you are going before the court. In Matthew's Gospel this refers to brotherly reconciliation. Here instead, Luke refers this phrase to our conversion. We are on our way to God's judgement and it is the same as going before the authorities; therefore we must take advantage of the time given to us to straighten up our situation. We must not waste this moment when we can be saved from Judgement by believing in Christ's message.

◆ They told Jesus ... about an uprising of Galileans in the temple court and the immediate intervention of the Roman guard stationed at a nearby fortress. They profaned the holy grounds strictly reserved for the Jews and shed blood in the Holy Place.

Those relating the story expect that Jesus will answer in a way expressing his national and religious solidarity over the killing of his compatriots and the offense against God. But, Jesus does not want to focus on these issues: as usual he lets people become more absorbed in human rather than divine causes and he calls their attention to what counts: those Galilean patriots were violent men, just like the Roman soldiers who killed them. Right then, God was calling everyone to a conversion on which their survival depended. There was such a violent atmosphere that there is no way out for the dominated and insignificant Jewish people except through faith: because faith works through the spirit of forgiveness.

GOD'S PUNISHMENT

Suppose we have a neighbour and we think he is a very evil man, then the fields he has sown are burned by frost: we proclaim at once that God has punished him. And if a misfortune comes down on us, we ask: "What sin have I

The healing on a sabbath day

o ¹⁰ Jesus was teaching in a synagogue on the sabbath ¹¹ and a sick woman was there. An evil spirit had kept her bent for eighteen years so that she could not straighten up at all. ¹² On seeing her, Jesus called her and said, "Woman, you are freed from your infirmity." ¹³ Then he laid his hands upon her and immediately she was made straight and praised God.

¹⁴ But the ruler of the synagogue was indignant because Jesus had performed this healing on the sabbath day and he said to the people, "There are six days in which to work; come on those days to be healed and not on the sabbath."

¹⁵ But the Lord replied, "You hypocrites! Everyone of you unties his ox or his donkey on the sabbath and leads it out of the barn to give him water.

¹⁶ And here you have a daughter of Abraham whom Satan had bound for eighteen years. Should she not be freed from her bond on the sabbath?"

¹⁷ When Jesus said this, all his opponents felt ashamed. But the people rejoiced at the many wonders that happened through him.

Two parables

(Mt 13:31; Mk 4:30)

■ ¹⁸ Jesus continued speaking, "What is the kingdom of God like? What shall I compare it to? ¹⁹ Imagine a man who has taken a mustard seed and planted it in his garden. The seed has grown and become like a small tree, so that the birds of the air shelter in its branches."

²⁰ And Jesus said again, "What is the kingdom of God like? ²¹ Imagine a woman who has taken yeast and hidden it in three measures of flour until it is all leavened."

o ²² Jesus went through towns and villages teaching and making his way

10. 6, 6; 14, 1; Mt 12, 1

16. 19, 9

19. Dn 4, 9

20. Mt 13, 33

committed to be punished like this by the Lord?"

If we speak so readily about God's punishment, it is because of two mistakes we make:

- for one, we think that God's justice resembles men's and we believe we know who deserves to be punished by him.
- then, we totally ignore the other life beyond death and we think that God must punish (or reward) men in this life.

In fact, we have met the Father in his Son, Jesus. Jesus' way teaches us that the justice of God the Father – does not resemble ours. The Father is perfect: his sun shines on the bad and the good, and his rain falls on the just and on sinners (Mt 5:45).

Yet, it is true that God warns us through signs although he does not always convert sinners by sending them misfortunes. At times, an unexpected favour confuses us and we say with shame: How God looks after me in spite of my being so stupid! Such was the case of Zaccheus (Lk 19:1). This is how God gives us many warnings so we will look at the way we live and realize that with all our irresponsibility and selfishness, we are on the way to being lost. There is really only one punishment from God and that is to be lost him forever.

Then, why is there so much about God's punishment in the Old Testament? Precisely because the Bible was addressing people whose religion was not well formed; they did not know about an afterlife and it was necessary to speak of God's punishments in this life for these people to believe in his justice. And God may have multiplied signs of disapproval of sinners in order to strengthen good people.

o The word untie was used by the Jews to express that someone's sin or penalty was forgiven. It also meant freeing an animal from its yoke. Jesus is the one who frees the human person and who invites us to follow his example.

We should not be surprised at the indignation of the chief of the synagogue. Since he had never been able to help his sick sister, he must have felt discredited by Jesus' move. Would it not be the same with us? But it never occurred to Jesus to ask the authorities for permission to save people.

■ See commentary on Mt 13:31.

At the conclusion of his Galilean ministry, Jesus invites optimism: although the results are few, something has been sown and the Kingdom of God is growing.

o See commentary on Mt 7:13.

Is it true that few people will be saved? Jesus considered this a useless question. What should have been asked instead was whether to Jerusalem. ²³Someone asked him, "Lord, is it true that few people will be saved?"

And Jesus answered, ²⁴"Do your best to enter by the narrow door, for many, I say to you, will try to enter and will not be able. ²⁵When once the master of the house has got up and locked the door, you will stand outside; then you will knock at the door calling: 'Lord, open to us.'

²⁶Then you will say: We ate and drank with you and you taught in our streets! ²⁷But he will reply: 'I don't know where you come from. Away from me all you wicked people.'

²⁸You will weep and grind your teeth when you see Abraham and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves left outside. ²⁹Yet others will sit at table in the kingdom of God, people coming from east and west, from north and south. ³⁰And it will be true that, 'Those who were last are now first, while the first have become last.'

³¹At that time some Pharisees came to Jesus and gave him this warning, "Leave this place and go on your way, for Herod wants to kill you." ³²Jesus said to them, "Go and tell that fox my answer: 'I drive out demons and heal today and tomorrow, and on the third day I finish my course!' ³³Nevertheless, I must go on my way today and tomorrow and for a little longer, for it would not be fitting for a prophet to be killed outside Jerusalem.

Alas for you, Jerusalem

■ ³⁴O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, you slay the prophets and stone your apostles! How often have I tried to bring together your children as a bird gathers her young under her wings, and you would not! ³⁵From now on your Temple will be left empty for you and you will no longer see me until you say: Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord."

14 ¹One sabbath Jesus had gone to eat a meal in the house of a leading Pharisee, and he was carefully watched. ²In front of him was a man with swollen arms and legs; ³so Jesus asked the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees, "Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath or not?" ⁴But no one answered. Jesus then took the man, healed him and sent him away. ⁵And he addressed them, "If your lamb or your ox falls into a well on a sabbath day, who among you doesn't hurry to pull him out?" ⁶And they could not answer.

The first places

+ ⁷Jesus then told a parable to the guests, for he had noticed how they tried to take the places of honour. And

29. 14, 15; 22, 16; Is 25, 6	30. Mt 19, 30; 20, 16; Mk 10, 31	33. 22, 53; Jn 7, 30; 11, 47

Israel had listened to the call from God and if she was following the narrow road which would save her.

People will come from the east and from the west (v. 29) People from all nations will be converted and come into the church while the Jewish people – for the most part – will remain outside.

■ See commentary on Mt 23:37.

Jesus had not come to "save souls" as many people imagine in our days. Rather, he was opening up new ways for the national community as well as for people. If the Jews had listened to him, the social and political tensions which led to the revolt of the year 66 A.D. and the destruction of Jerusalem in the year 70 A.D., would not have taken place.

+ Here Jesus develops a biblical proverb inviting us to be modest in social gatherings (Prov 25:6-7). In doing this he teaches us a new way of life which is fitting for God's children. Whatever the area of human activity may be, we should let others seek the first place while we stepping on other people as they do so. We know that what matters is not what is seen: God he said, ⁸"When you are invited to a wedding party, do not choose the best seat. It may happen that someone more important than you has been invited, ⁹and your host, who invited both of you, will come and say to you: 'Please give him your place.' What shame is yours when you go to the lowest seat!

¹⁰Whenever you are called, go rather to the lowest seat, so that your host may come and say to you: 'Friend, you must come up higher.' And this will be a great honour for you in the presence of all the other guests. ¹¹For everyone who makes himself great will be humbled, and everyone who humbles himself will be made great."

o ¹²Jesus addressed also the man who had invited him and said, "When you give a lunch or a dinner, don't invite your friends, or your brothers and relatives and wealthy neighbours. For, surely, they will also invite you in return and you will be repaid. ¹³When you give a feast, invite instead the poor, the crippled, the lame and the blind. ¹⁴Fortunate are you then, because they can't repay you; and you will be repaid at the Resurrection of the upright."

A man once gave a feast
(Mt 22:1)

◆ ¹⁵Upon hearing these words, one of those at the table said to Jesus, "Happy are those who eat at the banquet in the kingdom of God!"

¹⁶Jesus replied, "A man once gave a feast and invited many guests. ¹⁷When it was time for the feast he sent his servant to tell those he had invited to come, for everything was ready. ¹⁸But all alike began to make excuses. The first said: 'Please excuse me. I must go and see the piece of land I have just bought.' ¹⁹Another said: 'I am sorry, but I am on my way to try out the five yoke of oxen I have just bought.' ²⁰Still another said, 'How can I come when I have just married?'

²¹The servant returned alone and reported this to his master. Upon hearing the account, the master of the has called us to work for the community and for him and he knows how to exalt the humble and place them where it best suits him.

Moreover, when we go from the earthly church to the Kingdom of heaven, there will be changes in who occupies the first places and we will not necessarily come before those among us who do not go to Mass or those whom we usually criticize. Someone who was pope, or bishop or a prominent "Catholic" may count less than the little old lady who was selling newspapers.

o Everyone of us seeks to be near those who are above us since we think we benefit more from being connected with those who are superior than with those who are inferior. We even think it is a part of good education to teach children to stay away from their companions with "bad manners" – or, to be honest, from those companions who will not help them find a better position in society.

Jesus warning points to one of the main causes of injustice. We all share in the guilt when we decide with whom it is more beneficial to be associated; and so everyone tries to climb higher, always leaving the weakest in the most isolated and helpless position.

It would be a strange sight to see public officials pay more attention to the poorly dressed, or to see the poorest areas supplied with water and power before the residential districts, or to see doctors go to the rural areas to practice.

EXCUSES

◆ In many parts of the Old Testament there was talk of a 'banquet' that God would prepare for good people, for his servants, upon coming to establish his Kingdom. Jesus also developed this theme many times because the banquet represents the communion of saints. The parable here is very similar to the one which Matthew relates in 22:1.

Happy are those who sit at the table in the Kingdom of God. says the man speaking to Jesus. Perhaps the man did not suspect that in order to participate in the eternal feast, it was necessary to respond then to the call from God inviting us to gather in his community, the church, and to build a more fraternal world. The one who turns away from his brothers and sisters today will not eat with others at the banquet.

house flew into a rage and ordered his servant: 'Go out quickly into the streets and alleys of the town and bring in the poor, the crippled, the blind and the lame.'

²² The servant reported after a while: 'Sir, your orders have been carried out, but there is still room.'

²³ The master said: 'Go out to the highways and country lanes and force people to come to make sure my house is full. ²⁴ I tell you, none of those invited will get a taste of my food.'

The cost of following Jesus

(Mt 10:37)

■ ²⁵ One day, when large crowds were walking along with Jesus, he turned and said to them, ²⁶ "If you come to me, without giving up your love for your father and mother, your spouse and children, your brothers and sisters, and indeed yourself, you cannot be my disciple. ²⁷ Whoever does not follow me carrying his own cross cannot be my disciple.

²⁸ Do you build a house without first sitting down to count the cost to see whether you have enough to complete it? ²⁹ Otherwise, if you have laid the foundation and are not able to finish it, everyone will make fun of you: ³⁰ He began to build and was not able to finish.

³⁴ However good the salt may be, if it has lost its taste, you cannot make it salty again. ³⁵ It is fit for neither soil nor manure. Let them throw it away. Listen then, if you have ears!"

21. 10, 21; 14, 13 24. 13, 28 26. 18, 29 27. 9, 23; Mt 10, 28; Jn 12, 26 33. Mt 5, 13; Mk 9, 50

We are given the reasons why those invited did not respond to the call of the Lord when he summoned them to build a responsible world along with him. I have bought a field, ... I just got married ... These are all good reasons. Yet, the financial interests of the family must neither prevent our community involvement, nor prevent us from participating in the Christian assembly. Many times, those who enjoy greater cultural formation, allow themselves to be paralyzed by the needs of a "happy home," with well educated children, and they will do nothing. The best Christians, by the mere fact of participating in the life of the church and by being committed, reach a broader culture and they are connected with people of all classes. This is all good. Yet, if we are not very demanding with ourselves, we will lose interest in the Kingdom of God.

Bring the poor ... compel them to come to my church: force them also to fulfill the role fitting to them in society. God relies on the poor and the marginalized to maintain the aspirations toward peace and justice in the world, to awaken the consciences of those "good" people who are too comfortable.

■ Jesus thinks about people who, after becoming enthusiastic about him and giving up their personal ambitions to dedicate themselves to the work of the Gospel, would turn back to seek a more "normal" and more secure life, according to average people. Jesus needs disciples who commit themselves once and for all and he believes that people can really risk their lives for him.

Why this comparison with the king going to war? because the person who frees himself to serve the work of the Gospel, is in fact a king to whom God will give greater rewards than anyone else could give (see Mk 10:30). But he must also know that the fight is against the "owner" of this world, the devil, who will stop him with a thousand unexpected tests and traps. Had he not totally surrendered, the disciple would surely fail and he would be worse off than if he had not even begun.

So long as you don't give up ... Jesus asked some people to give up their loved ones and their family problems. He shows everyone that they will never be free to respond to God's calls if they refuse to think in an entirely new way about family bonds, the use of time and the value, before God, of our family life.

Without turning your back on your Father and your children ... This is found in Mt 10:37. Luke adds: your wife.

The lost sheep

(Mt 18:12)

15 ¹Meanwhile tax collectors and sinners were seeking the company of Jesus, all of them eager to hear what he had to say. ²But the Pharisees and the scribes frowned at this, muttering, "This man welcomes sinners and eats with them." ³So Jesus told them this parable,

⁸What woman, if she has ten pieces of silver and loses one, will not light a lamp and sweep the house in a thorough search till she finds the lost piece? ⁹And finding it, will she not call her friends and neighbours and say: 'Rejoice with me for I have found the silver piece I lost.' ¹⁰I tell you, there is rejoicing in the same manner among the angels of God over one repentant sinner.'

The prodigal son

○ ¹¹Jesus continued, "There was a man with two sons. ¹²The younger said to his father: 'Give me my share of the estate.' So the father divided his property between his two sons.

¹³Some days later, the younger son gathered all his belongings and packed up for a distant land where he squandered his wealth in licentious living. ¹⁴Having spent everything, he was hard pressed when a severe famine broke out in that land. ¹⁵So he hired himself out to a well-to-do citizen of that place and he was sent to work on a pig farm. ¹⁶So famished was he that he longed to fill his stomach even with pig's food, but no one offered him anything.

¹⁷Finally coming to his senses, he

THE BLACK SHEEP

◆ Why are the Pharisees complaining? Not out of love for religion but because they feel left out: if Jesus is going with sinners and treating them in the same way, what have they gained with all their observances? But Jesus did not come to give prizes, but to save. The person who loves tries to save his neighbour instead of condemning him.

Happy the one sheep Jesus went after, leaving the ninety-nine! Poor righteous ones who do not need God's forgiveness!

In large cities, today, the church seems to be left with only one sheep. How come it does not get out, namely, let go of its income, its privileges or its devotions of a commercial style, to go out looking for the ninety-nine who got lost? To leave the comfortable circle of believers who have no problems, to look beyond our renewed rituals and to be ready to be criticized just as Jesus was criticized, is the challenge today.

Who lights the lamp, sweeps the house and searches except God himself? But, out of respect for God, the Jews of Jesus' time preferred not to name him, and they used expressions such as the angels or heaven.

ORIGINAL SIN

THE PRODIGAL FATHER

○ There are three characters in this parable: the father, representing God; the older son, the Pharisee. But who is the younger son? Is he the sinner, or perhaps, man?

Man wants freedom and he thinks, many times, that God takes it away from him. He begins by leaving his father, whose love he does not understand and whose presence has become a burden to him. After having wasted this heritage whose value he does not appreciate, he loses his honor and becomes the slave of other men and of shameful actions (pigs were unclean animals to the Jews).

But the son returns. Having become aware of his slavery, he convinces himself that God has a better destiny in mind for him, and he begins on the road back to his home. Upon returning, he discovers that the Father is very different from the idea that he had formed of him: the father is said: 'How many of my father's hired men have food to spare, and here I am starving to death! ¹⁸ I will go back to my father and say to him: Father, I have sinned against God and before you. ¹⁹ I no longer deserve to be called your son. Treat me then as one of your hired men.' With that thought in mind he set off for his father's house.

²⁰ He was still a long way off when his father caught sight of him. His father was so deeply moved with compassion that he ran out to meet him, threw his arms around his neck and kissed him. ²¹ The son said: 'Father, I have sinned against God and before you. I no longer deserve to be called your son . . .'

²² But the father turned to his servants: 'Quick! Bring out the finest robe and put it on him. Put a ring on his finger and sandals on his feet. ²³ Take the fattened calf and kill it. We will celebrate and have a feast. ²⁴ for this son of mine was dead and has come back to life. He was lost and is found.' And the celebration began.

²⁵ Meanwhile, the elder son who had been out working in the fields was now on his way home. As he neared the house he heard the sound of music and dancing. ²⁶ He called one of the servants and asked what it was all about. ²⁷ The servant answered: 'Your brother has come home safe and sound, and your father is so happy about it that he has ordered this celebration and killed the fattened calf.'

²⁸ The elder son became angry and refused to go in. His father came out and pleaded with him. ²⁹ The indignant son said: 'Look, I have slaved for you for all these years. Never have I disobeyed your orders. Yet you have never given me even a young goat to celebrate with my friends. ³⁰ Then when this son of yours returns after squandering your property with loose women, you kill the fattened calf for him.'

³¹ The father said: 'My son, you are always with me, and everything I have is yours. ³² But this brother of yours was dead, and has come back to life. He was lost and is found. And for that we had to celebrate and rejoice.'

The crafty steward

+16 ¹At another time Jesus told his disciples, "There was a rich man whose steward was reported waiting for him and runs to meet him; he restores his dignity erasing the memory of the lost heritage. And there is the celebration of the feast to which Jesus referred so many times.

At last we understand that God is Father. He did not put us on earth to collect merits and rewards but to discover that we are his children. However, we are, in fact, born sinners. We are born sinners: from the start of our lives we are led by our feelings and the bad examples of the society in which we have been raised. There is still more: as long as God does not take the initiative and reveal himself to us, we cannot think of freedom other than in terms of becoming independent from him.

God is not surprised by our wickedness since in creating us free, he accepted the risk that we might fall. He does not go along with our distinctions between righteous and sinners, which presupposes that some deserve reward and others punishment. On the contrary, God is with all of us in our experiences of good and of evil.

until he can call us his children, thanks to his only Son, Jesus. Note this marvellous sentence: I have sinned against God and before you. God, who is Truth and Holiness, is offended by sin. But he is also the Father who cares for the son: the son sins before him who brings holiness out of error.

Such is our God and Father, the one who brings good out of evil, who creates us day after day, without our being aware of it while we go on our way: the one who seeks sinners whom he can fill with his treasures.

But, the older son, the man who obeys though with a closed heart, understands none of this. He has served with the hope of being rewarded, or at least, the hope of being seen as superior to others: and so he is unable to welcome sinners or to participate in the feast of Christ, because, in fact, he does not know how to love.

+ Jesus is not concerned about condemning the improper actions of the administrator, but to him for fraudulent service.² He summoned the steward and asked him: 'What is this I hear about you? I want you to render an account of your service for it is about to be terminated.'

³The steward thought to himself: 'What am I to do now? My master will surely dismiss me. I am not strong enough to do hard work, and I am ashamed to beg. ⁴I know what I will do. I must make sure that when I lose this job, there will be some people to welcome me into their house.'

⁵So he called his master's debtors one by one. He asked the first who came: 'How much do you owe my master?' ⁶The reply was: 'A hundred jars of oil.' The steward said: 'Here is your bill. Sit down quickly and write there fifty.' ⁷To the second he put the same question: 'How much do you owe?' The answer was: 'A thousand bushels of wheat.' Then he said: 'Take your bill and write eight hundred.'

⁸The master commended the dishonest steward for his astuteness. For the people of this world are more astute in dealing with their own kind than are the people of light.⁹ And so I tell you: use filthy money to make friends for yourselves, so that when it fails, these people may welcome you into the eternal homes.

¹⁰He who can be trusted in little things can also be trusted in great ones; he who is dishonest in slight matters will also be dishonest in greater ones.¹¹ So if you have not been trustworthy in handling the questionable money, who could entrust you with true wealth? ¹²And if you have not been trustworthy with things merely exterior to you, who will give you the wealth which is your own?

◆ ¹³No servant can serve two masters. Either he does not like the one and is fond of the other, or he regards one highly and the other with contempt. You cannot give yourself both to God and to Money."

¹⁴The Pharisees, who loved money, heard all this and sneered at Jesus.¹⁵ He said to them, "You do your best to be considered righteous men by people. But God knows the heart and what is exalted among men is loathed by God.

rather he points out his cleverness in terms of assuring his future: this man was able to discover in time that friends last longer than money. In the same way, in promoting a new way of living, the sons of light must strip money of its halo as Supreme Good. It seems that money put in a safe place is the best way to assure our existence and our future. On the contrary, Jesus tells us to use it and to exchange it without hesitation for something much more valuable.

We are not owners but administrators of our wealth and we must administer it for the good of all. Money is not a bad thing as long as we use it as a means to facilitate exchanges. Jesus, however, calls it unjust (we use the word filthy) because money is not a true good (it is not money that makes us just before God); and because it is impossible to accumulate money without failing in trust in the Father and without hurting our neighbours.

Money is something that people acquire and lose, it does not make anyone greater. Therefore, money is not part of the goods which are our own (12).

THE RICH

◆ The Pharisees were laughing at him. More than the other evangelists, Luke notes the incompatibility between true religion and love for money. The Pharisees could justify their love for money by quoting some sayings from the Bible. In fact, in the beginning, the Jews saw wealth as a blessing from God. Not knowing anything about a beyond, it seemed just to them that God should reward his faithful with good health and money: that is why they had such an exceptional remembrance of King Solomon in spite of the fact that at the end of his life he showed total indifference to religion. Then, with the passing of time, they came to see that money was more of a danger and that, often, it was the privilege of those without faith (Ps 49, Job).

Nevertheless, as soon as someone has money he is convinced that he possesses truth, and thus the Pharisees felt authorized to judge and decide on things of God. After them, there has been no lack of Christians who, belonging to influential circles, planned to extend the King-

■ ¹⁶ The time of the Law and the Prophets has ended with John. Since then the kingdom of God is spreading as good news and this is the time for everyone to conquer it.

¹⁷ It is easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for a single stroke of Scripture not to be fulfilled.

¹⁸ The man who divorces his wife and marries another commits adultery; and the man who marries a woman divorced by her husband also commits adultery.

The rich man and Lazarus

o ¹⁹ Once there was a rich man who dressed in purple and fine linen and feasted every day. ²⁰ At his gate lay Lazarus, a poor man covered with sores, ²¹ who longed to eat just the scraps falling from the rich man's table. Dogs used to come and lick his sores. ²² Finally the poor man died and angels carried him to take his place with Abraham. The rich man followed shortly and was buried. ²³ From hell where he was in torment, he looked up and saw Abraham afar off] and with him Lazarus at rest.

²⁴ He called out: 'Father Abraham, have pity on me and send Lazarus with the tip of his finger dipped in water to cool my tongue, for I suffer so much in this fire.'

²⁵ Abraham replied: 'My son, remember that in your lifetime you were well-off while the lot of Lazarus was misfortune. Now he is in comfort and you are in agony. ²⁶ But that is not all. Between your place and ours a great chasm has been fixed, so that no one can cross over from here to you, and from your side to us.'

²⁷ The rich man implored once more: 'Then I beg you, father Abraham, to send Lazarus to my father's

Such people favor a moral order which conceals their privileges but they stifle the gospel values of justice, humility and poverty. They manage to put strong pressure on the church, but in the long run, they bring on themselves and on the church, rejection by the poor and by sincere people.

Why have so many people of humble origins felt inferior to the rich in the church? They got used to seeing them heading church organizations and accustomed to receiving the word of God from them, in spite of Jesus' warnings.

THE LAW

■ We are about to read three of Jesus' sayings whose only connection is their reference to the Law. The Law meant the laws that God had given to the Jews. Besides, the Law and the Prophets was a way to refer to the entire Scripture. Jesus uses this expression here to point to Old Testament times, to all that prepared for his own coming.

Not a single comma of the Law will pass: that means that everything in it had its significance despite the fact that Jesus states that the decisive point has come with him, what was needed to prepare for his coming will no longer be observed in the same way as before (see Mt 5:17-20).

For the Jews who observed the Law and in particular for those who had followed John the Baptist, another step was needed for them to believe in Jesus and with this, to conquer the Kingdom of God (Lk 7:24). In spite of appearances, it is much easier to follow religious practices, to observe laws and to fast, than it is to believe and to risk the unknown, by following the crucified Jesus.

o This parable deals with the worldwide gap between the rich and the inhumanly poor. There is a deadly law of money which makes the rich live separately: housing, transportation, recreation, medical care. The wall the rich man willingly built in this life, becomes, after his death, an abyss which no one will be able to bridge. The one who accepted this separation will find himself on the other side forever.

A poor man named Lazarus: Jesus names the poor man, but not the rich one, thus reversing the order of the present society which treats "Mr X" as a person but not the ordinary worker. We also see that, on dying, Lazarus finds many friends: the angels, Abraham, the father of all believers. The rich man, on the other hand, finds neither friends nor lawyers to relieve his situation: hell is isolation.

Some people would like to know what was the rich man's sin for which he was condemned to hell. Was it because he denied some crumbs from his table to Lazarus? But the Gospel does not say this. Instead it shows that the rich man did not even see Lazarus lying at his door: Remember that you received your riches during your life.

house ²⁸ where my five brothers live. Let him warn them so that they may not end up in this place of torment.' ²⁹Abraham replied: 'They have Moses and the prophets. Let them listen to them.' ³⁰But the rich man said: 'No, father Abraham. But if someone from the dead goes to them, they will repent.'

³¹Abraham said: 'If they will not listen to Moses and the prophets, they will not be convinced even if someone rises from the grave.'

17 ¹Jesus said to his disciples, "Scandals will necessarily come and make people fall; but woe to the one who has brought it about. ²It would be better for him to be thrown into the sea with a millstone around his neck. Truly this would be better for him than to cause one of these little ones to stumble and fall.

³Be careful. If your brother offends you, rebuke him and if he is sorry, forgive him. ⁴And if he offends you seven times in a day but says to you seven times: 'I'm sorry,' forgive him."

⁵The apostles said to the Lord, "Increase our faith." And the Lord said, ⁶"If you have faith at least as big as a mustard seed, you may say to this tree: 'Be uprooted and plant yourself in the sea', and it will obey you.

⁷If you have a servant coming in from the fields after ploughing or keeping sheep, do you say to him: 'Come at once and sit down at table'? ⁸No, you tell him: 'Prepare my dinner. Put on your apron and wait on me while I eat and drink; you can eat and drink afterward'. ⁹Do you thank this servant for doing what you commanded? ¹⁰So you also. When you have done all that you have been told to do, you must say: 'We are no more than servants; we have only done our duty.'

The ten lepers

+ ¹¹On the way to Jerusalem, Jesus was passing along the border between Samaria and Galilee and, ¹²as he entered a village, ten lepers came to meet him. ¹³Keeping their distance, they called to him, "Jesus, Master, have pity on us!" ¹⁴Then Jesus said to them, "Go and show yourselves to the priests." Now, as they went their way,

1. Mt 18, 7 4. Mt 18, 15 6. Mk 4, 31; Mk 11, 23 14. Lev 13, 45

In several countries, the privileged minorities have not only taken over the table to which everyone was entitled: power, the laws and the culture, but they have also organized the country's economy in a way that suits them. They have even destroyed the national industries and job opportunities. Their country's economic dependence enables them to continuously feast, while condemning millions of Lazaruses to unemployment, and consequently, to being progressively marginalized until they die of hunger and destitution.

Modern-day Lazarus is kept at a distance from the residential areas by police, dogs and barbed wires. He would like to get his fill of the crumbs which are left over from the feast, but there are few crumbs 'falling' back to the homeland, after everything is wasted on imported products or deposited in foreign banks. Lazarus lives among rubble and rubbish: he becomes a prostitute, or a pickpocket, until a premature death enables him to find someone who loves him: at the side of Abraham and the angels. And at last, he will find a home where others will not be able to strip him. watch him, and beat him in the name of their own Security.

Meanwhile, the rich man works hard, not so much to enjoy life as to convince himself that he is right: even the church should justify him. And it is this perversion of his mind that takes him to hell after having inspired in him hatred or contempt for all those who proclaim the demands of justice taught by Moses and the prophets. that is to say, by the Bible.

The Gospel, in its desire to save the rich as well as the poor, asks us to work with a view to removing the abyss which separates them.

+ The ten lepers were cured but only one of them was told: Your faith has saved you. He was the one who responded straight from the heart. While the others were concerned about fulfilling the legal requirements, he only thought about giving thanks to God right where the grace of God had found him: such is the faith which saves and transforms us.

Among the many people asking God for heal-they found they were cured.¹⁵ One of them, as soon as he saw he was cleansed, turned back praising God in a loud voice and, ¹⁶ throwing himself on his face before Jesus, he gave him thanks. This man was a Samaritan.

¹⁷ Then Jesus said, "Were not all ten healed? Where are the other nine?"

¹⁸ Was no one found to return and give praise to God but this alien?" ¹⁹ And Jesus said to him, "Rise and go your way; your faith has saved you."

The coming of the kingdom of God (Mt 24:17)

◆ ²⁰ The Pharisees asked Jesus when the kingdom of God was to come. He answered, "The kingdom of God is not like something you can observe ²¹ and say of it: 'Look, here it is! There it is!' See the kingdom of God is among you."

²⁶ As it was in the days of Noah, so will it be on the day the Son of Man will come. ²⁷ Then people ate and drank; they took husbands and wives. But on the day Noah entered the ark, the flood came and destroyed them all. ²⁸ Just as it was in the days of Lot; people ate and drank; they bought and sold, planted and built. ²⁹ But on the day Lot left Sodom, God made fire and sulfur rain down from heaven which destroyed them all. ³⁰ So will it be on the day the Son of Man is revealed.

³¹ On that day, if you are on the rooftop, don't go down into the house to get your belongings, and if you happen to be in the fields, do not turn back. ³² Remember Lot's wife. ³³ Whoever tries to save his life will lose himself, but whoever gives his life will be born again.

³⁴ I tell you, though two men are sharing the same bed, it may be that one will be taken and the other left. ³⁵ Though two women are grinding corn together, one may be taken and the other left."

³⁷ Then they asked Jesus, "Where will this take place, Lord?" And he answered, "Where the body is, there too will the vultures gather."

ing and favours, how many will really come to love God?

◆ When will the kingdom of God come? It does not come as a revolution or the change of the seasons each year: it is at work in people who have received the Good News. Those who believe already enjoy the Kingdom.

Then come the words of Jesus concerning the end of Jerusalem and his second coming (Mk 13:14). We should speak about the end of the world in every time of anxiety. Jesus gives us two comparisons: the lightning which is seen everywhere and the vultures which gather without fail wherever there is a corpse. In the same way, everyone, without fail, will be aware of Christ's return.

Yet, his return will catch off guard those who are not expecting it (just as in the days of Noah). Judgement will separate the elect from the condemned – nothing separated them in daily life – : from two people working side by side, one will be taken, the other left behind.

In Matthew 24:17 the reference to the man outside of his house is connected with the end of Jerusalem, and here it means it will be necessary to escape quickly. In the present text this has another meaning: when the end of the world comes it will be too late to worry about saving one's life or possessions.

Where will this take place? (v. 37): foolish question as in Lk 17:20, because the Lord will not come to take his people to a geographic location. On that day, the good will be taken into the presence of God as infallibly as the vultures gather around the corpse.

Pray and never lose heart

18 ¹Jesus told them a parable to show them that they should pray continually and not lose heart. ²He said, "In a certain town there was a judge who neither feared God nor people. ³In the same town was a widow who kept coming to him, saying: 'Give me my rights against my opponent'. ⁴For a time he refused, but finally he thought: 'Even though I neither fear God nor care about people, ⁵this widow bothers me so much I will see that she gets justice; then she will stop coming and wearing me out.'"

⁶And Jesus explained, "Listen to what the evil judge says: ⁷will God not give justice for his chosen ones who cry to him day and night while he delays in answering them? ⁸I tell you, he will speedily give them justice. Yet, when the Son of Man comes, will he find faith on earth?"

The Pharisee and the tax collector

■ ⁹Jesus told another parable to some persons fully convinced of their own righteousness, who looked down on others, ¹⁰"Two men went up to the Temple to pray; one was a Pharisee and the other a tax collector. ¹¹The Pharisee stood by himself and said: 'I thank you, God, that I am not like other people, grasping, crooked, adulterous, or even like this tax collector. ¹²I fast twice a week and give the tenth of all my income to the Temple.'

¹³In the meantime the tax collector, standing far off, would not even lift his eyes to heaven, but beat his breast saying: 'O God, be merciful to me, a sinner.'

¹⁴I tell you, when this man went down to his house, he was reconciled with God, but not the other. For whoever makes himself out to be great will be humbled, and whoever humbles himself will be made great."

¹⁵They even brought babies to Jesus to have him touch them; but then the disciples rebuked these people. ¹⁶So Jesus called the children to him and said, "Let the children come to me and don't stop them, for the kingdom of God belongs to such as these. ¹⁷Truly, I tell you, whoever does not receive the kingdom of God like a child will not enter it."

○ If there is a just God, why does he not do justice? (Ps 44:23; Hb 1:12; Rv 6:9). Jesus answers: Do you desire and ask with enough faith for the justice of God? He will undoubtedly do justice, but you will have to wait.

A judge who does not regard people: many people seeing what is unjust and absurd in life, view God this way. But, if we pray with perseverance, we will gradually discover that all of this is not as absurd as it seems and we will come to recognize the face of the God who loves us in what happens.

If they cry to him day and night. Jesus, who so insists on our responsibility to the world, is the one who also urges us to call on God day and night. Why are people so readily divided (or why do we divide them) into pray-ers and doers?

Will I find faith on earth? Jesus confirms an opinion already found among the Jews of his days. In the last days before Judgement, the power of evil will be so great that in many love will grow cold (Mt 24:12).

In fact, with the first coming of Jesus, the Old Testament ended in seeming failure, since few believed in him and most became influenced by the confusion, the false saviours and the violence which precipitated the fall of the nation, forty years after the death of Jesus.

■ The Pharisees were very determined to fulfill God's law and they fasted often and did many works of mercy. Unfortunately, they took the credit for such a model life: they thought they no longer needed God's mercy because their good deeds forced him to reward them.

The publican, on the other hand, admits to his sinfulness before God and men and he waits for forgiveness. He is in the truth, and God's grace is with him when he returns home (the text says: he was made righteous, that is to say that God had reconciled him to himself). But the Pharisee

Jesus and the rich ruler

(Mk 10:17; Mt 19:16)

¹⁸A ruler asked Jesus, "Good master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" ¹⁹Jesus said to him, "Why do you call me good? No one is good but God alone. ²⁰You know the commandments: Do not commit adultery, do not kill, do not steal, do not accuse falsely, honour your father and your mother." ²¹And the man said, "I have kept all these commandments from my youth."

²²Then Jesus answered, "There is still one thing you lack. Sell all you have and give the money to the poor, and you will have riches in God. And then come and follow me."

²³When he heard these words, the man became sad for he was very rich.

²⁴Jesus noticing this said, "How hard it is for people who have riches to enter the kingdom of God! ²⁵It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." ²⁶The bystanders said, "Who then can be saved?" And ²⁷Jesus replied, "What is impossible with men is possible with God."

²⁸Then Peter said, "As for us, we left everything we had and followed you." ²⁹Jesus replied, "Truly, I tell you, whoever has left house or wife, or brothers or parents or children for the sake of the kingdom of God, ³⁰will receive much more in the present time; and in the world to come he will have eternal life."

³¹Jesus then took the Twelve aside and told them, "Now, we are going up to Jerusalem and everything the Prophets have written about the Son of Man will be fulfilled. ³²He will be delivered up to the foreign power. People will mock him, insult him and spit on him. ³³After they have scourged him, they will kill him, but he will be raised on the third day."

³⁴The apostles could make nothing of this; the meaning of these words remained a mystery to them and they did not understand what he said.

The blind man of Jericho

(Mk 10:46; Mt 20:23)

³⁵When Jesus drew near to Jericho, a blind man was sitting by the road, begging. ³⁶As he heard the crowd passing by, he inquired what it was, and ³⁷they told him that Jesus of Nazareth was going by. Then he cried!

leaves just as he had come, locked up in his own self-sufficiency and closed to the grace of God.

Jesus spoke for the benefit of some who were convinced they were righteous (v. 9). The Bible calls righteous those who are pleasing to God because they do his will. Thus, in Mt 1:19 and Lk 1:6 Joseph and Zechariah are called just: they are good people. In many places in Scripture a great deal of importance is placed on externals: the just one is the one who fulfills the law; elsewhere the Bible singles out the inner faithfulness of the righteous one, who, like Abraham is a friend of God (15:6).

Jesus, for his part, states that no one can attribute righteousness or genuine sanctity to self or to one's merits because God's children receive everything from the Father (Jn 5:19).

We must confess that, a few generations back, Christian morality was often preached according to the Pharisees' approach. What seemed important was for people to behave decently externally, and they were allowed to believe that they would deserve salvation if they did good works. We did not insist much on the fact that salvation comes from the grace of God: who calls whom he wants and gives them true holiness.

"Good people" often prayed for the conversion of "sinners," forgetting that they needed God's forgiveness too, and that, perhaps, sinners received God's grace in the course of their very sins. The way of condemning a single mother, an adulterous woman: our paternalistic way of speaking of repentant sheep, while forgetting that in the church, we are all equal, are other forms of Pharisaism. When now, "active" and committed militants look down on Christians who, according to them, are satisfied with "eating hosts," and do not do all that they themselves do, or when others think they are the good ones because they have "opted for the poor," we have not left Pharisaism yet.

¹⁴But his compatriots who disliked him sent a delegation after him with this message: 'We do not want this man to be our king.'

¹⁵He returned, however, appointed as king. At once he sent for the servants to whom he had given the money, to find out what profit each had made. ¹⁶The first came in and reported: 'Sir, your ten pounds earned ten more.'

¹⁷The master replied: 'Well done, my good servant. Since you have proved yourself capable in a small matter, I can trust you to take charge of ten cities.' ¹⁸The second reported: 'Sir, your investment earned five more pounds'. ¹⁹The master replied: 'All right, take charge of five cities.'

²⁰The third came in and said: 'Sir, here is your money which I hid for safekeeping. ²¹I was afraid of you for you are an exacting man; you take up what you did not lay down and reap what you did not sow.'

²²The master replied: 'You worthless servant, I will judge you by your own words. So you knew I was an exacting man, taking up what I did not lay down and reaping what I did not sow! ²³Why, then, did you not put my money on loan so that when I got back I could have collected it with interest?'

²⁴Then the master said to those standing by: 'Take from him what I have given, and give it to the one with ten pounds.' ²⁵They objected: 'But, sir, he already has ten!'

²⁶I tell you: everyone who has will be given more; but from him who has not, even what he has will be taken away. ²⁷As for my enemies who did not want me to be king, bring them in and execute them right here in my presence."

Jesus enters Jerusalem

(Mk 11:1; Mt 21:1; Jn 12:12; Mt 24:2)

²⁸So Jesus spoke, and he went on ahead of them, going to Jerusalem.

²⁹When he drew near to Bethphage and Bethany, close to the mountain called Olivet, he sent two of the disciples with these instructions, ³⁰"Go to the village opposite and as you enter it you will find a colt tied up that no one has yet ridden on: untie it and bring it here. ³¹And if anyone says to you: 'Why are you untying this colt?'" You shall give this answer: 'The Master needs it.'

³²So the two disciples went and found things just as Jesus had said.

³³As they were untying the colt, the owners said to them, "Why are you untying the colt?" ³⁴And they answered, "The Master needs it." ³⁵So they brought it to Jesus and throwing their cloaks on the colt, they put Jesus on it. ³⁶And as he went down, people spread their cloaks on the road.

³⁷When Jesus came near Jerusalem, at the place where the road sloped down from the Mount of Olives, the whole multitude of his disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the miracles must make grow. They should not wait in idleness for his return since his enemies will take advantage of his absence to struggle against his influence. Jesus' servants will participate in his triumph to the degree that they have worked.

This page is closely connected with the parable of the talents (Mk 25:15). Two differences are pointed out in what follows.

For one thing, in the introduction and in the conclusion, Jesus refers to his country's political life. The country depended on the Roman Empire and its kings had to be acceptable to the Roman government which protected them.

On the other hand, the parable insists on God's justice: everyone receives according to his merit. Heavenly happiness is not something which can be distributed equally. Everyone will know God and will share his riches to the degree that one has been able to love throughout life. Every step we take by way of obedience, sacrifice and humility, develops our capacity to receive God and to be transformed by him.

they had seen,³⁸ and they cried out, "Blessed is he who comes, as king in the name of the Lord. Peace in heaven and Glory in the highest heavens."

³⁹Some Pharisees in the crowd said to him, "Master, rebuke your disciples." ⁴⁰But Jesus answered, "I tell you, if they were to keep silent, the stones would cry out."

⁴¹When Jesus had come in sight of the city, he wept over it ⁴²and said, "If only today you knew the ways of peace! But now your eyes are held from seeing." ⁴³Yet days will come upon you when your enemies will surround you with barricades and shut you in and press on you from every side. ⁴⁴And they will dash you to the ground and your children with you, and leave not a stone within you, for you did not recognize the time and the visitation of your God."

⁴⁵Then Jesus entered the Temple area and began to drive out the merchants. ⁴⁶And he said to them, "God says in the Scriptures: My house shall be a house of prayer; but you have turned it into a den of robbers."

⁴⁷Jesus was teaching every day in the Temple. The chief priests and teachers of the Law wanted to kill him and the elders of the Jews as well, ⁴⁸but they were unable to do anything, for all the people were listening to him and hanging on his words.

20 ¹One day when Jesus was teaching the people in the Temple and proclaiming the good news, the chief priests and the teachers of the Law came with the elders of the Jews, ²and said to him, "Tell us, what right have you to act like this? Who gives you authority to do the things you do?"

³Jesus said to them, "I also will ask you a question; tell me, ⁴Was John's ministry and baptism from God, or was it merely something human?" ⁵And they argued among themselves.

"If we answer that the baptism of John was from God, he will say: 'Why then did you not believe him?' ⁶But if we answer that it was merely something human, all the people will stone us, for they all regard John as a prophet." ⁷So they answered Jesus, "We don't know." ⁸and Jesus said to them, "Neither will I tell you what right I have for acting like this."

The murderous tenants

⁹Jesus went on to tell the people this parable, "A man planted a vineyard and let it out to tenants before going abroad for a long time.

¹⁰In due time he sent a servant to the tenants to get some fruit from the vineyard. But the tenants beat him and sent him back empty-handed." ¹¹Again the man sent another servant; they beat him as well and treated him shamefully and finally sent him away empty-handed. ¹²The owner then sent a third, but this one was wounded and thrown out.

¹³The owner then thought: 'What shall I do? I will send my beloved son; surely they will respect him.' ¹⁴The tenants, however, as soon as they had seen him, said to one another: 'This is the one who will inherit the vineyard; let us kill him and the property will be ours.' ¹⁵So they threw him out of the vineyard and killed him. ¹⁶Now, what will the owner of the vineyard do to them? He will come and destroy those tenants and give the vineyard to others."

On hearing this, some of the rulers said, "May it not be so!" ¹⁷Then Jesus looked directly at them and said, ¹⁹ The teachers of the Law and the chief priests would have liked to arrest him that very moment, for they realized that Jesus meant this parable for them, but they were afraid of the crowd. ²⁰ So they left, looking for another opportunity.

Paying taxes to Caesar

(Mk 12:13; Mt 22:15)

They sent spies who pretended to be righteous men, in order to trap him in his words and deliver him to the authority and power of the Roman governor. ²¹ They asked him, "Master, we know that you teach what is right and your answers do not vary according to the people listening to you, for you truly teach the way of God. Tell us: ²² Are we allowed to pay taxes to Caesar or not?"

²³ But Jesus saw through their cunning and said, ²⁴ "Show me a silver coin. Whose head is this and whose name?" They answered, "Caesar's". ²⁵ And Jesus said to them "Return to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God what belongs to God."

²⁶ So they were unable to trap him in what he said in public: they were surprised at his answer and kept silent.

Resurrection of the dead

(Mk 12:18)

■ ²⁷ Then some Sadducees arrived. These people claim that there is no resurrection ²⁸ and they asked Jesus, this question, "Master, in the Scripture Moses told us: 'If anyone dies leaving a wife but no children, his brother must take the wife, and the child to be born will be regarded as the child of the dead man.' ²⁹ Now, there were seven brothers; the first married a wife, but he died without children; ³⁰ and the second ³¹ and the third took the wife; in fact all seven died leaving no children. ³² Last of all the woman died. ³³ On the day of the resurrection, to which of them will the woman be wife? For the seven had her as wife."

³⁴ And Jesus replied, "Men and women marry because they are children of this world, ³⁵ but for those who are considered worthy of the world to come and of resurrection from the dead, there is no more marriage. ³⁶ Know that they are like angels and cannot die anymore. They are now sons of God, for he raised them.

³⁷ Yes, the dead will be raised, and even Moses showed it to be true in the passage about the burning bush, where he calls the Lord the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. ³⁸ For he is God of the living and not of the dead, and all live for him."

³⁹ Some teachers of the Law then agreed with Jesus, "Master, you have

Luke has his own expressions in speaking of the resurrection in verses 34-36. It was because in those countries of Greek culture (Luke wrote for them) many people believed in the immortality of the soul as something natural to man. Luke clarified for them that the other life is not something natural; it is a gift of God for those who are considered worthy to enter it.

them. According to a Hebrew expression, the text says: they are sons of God because they are sons of the resurrection. This resurrection is not like coming back to the life we know, it is the work of the Holy Spirit who transforms and sanctifies those he resurrects. Therefore they resurrected are sons of God in a much more authentic way than those of this world: delivered from sin, they are reborn of God.

All live for him. They started to become alive

¹⁹ Stand firm and you will save yourselves.

²⁰ But, when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then you must know that the time has come when she will be reduced to a wasteland.

²² For these will be the days of her punishment and all that was announced in the Scripture will be fulfilled. ²³ How hard will it be for pregnant women and for mothers with babies at the breast! For a great calamity will come upon the land, and divine justice upon this people. ²⁴ They will be put to death by the sword or taken as slaves into all the nations; and Jerusalem will be trampled upon by the nations until the time of the nations is fulfilled.

The coming of the Son of Man

²⁵ Then there will be signs in sun and moon and stars, and on the earth anguish of perplexed nations on hearing the roaring of the sea and its waves. ²⁶ People will faint with fear at the mere thought of what is to come upon the world, for the forces of the universe will be shaken. ²⁷ And they will see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.

The signs of the times

²⁸ Now, when you see the first events, stand and lift up your heads, for your deliverance is drawing near."

²⁹ And Jesus added this comparison, "Look at the fig tree and all the trees."

³⁰ As soon as their leaves sprout, you know that summer is already near."

³¹ In the same way, as soon as you see these things happening, you know that the kingdom of God is near.

³² Truly, I tell you, this generation will not pass away, until all this has happened: ³³ heaven and earth will pass away, but my words will not pass away.

o ³⁴ Be on your guard; let not your hearts be weighed down with a life of pleasure, drunkenness and worldly cares, lest that day catch you suddenly as a trap. ³⁵ For it will come upon all the inhabitants of the whole earth."

³⁶ But watch at all times and pray that you may be able to stand before the Son of Man."

land (v. 23). Luke announces the destruction of the Jewish nation more clearly than Matthew and Mark.

Until the times of the nations are fulfilled (v. 24). Luke divides history into two ages. One corresponds to the Old Testament: that was the time when Sacred History was almost the same as the history of Israel. Then, after Jesus, came the times of the nations. The destruction of the Jewish nation and the dispersal of its people inaugurated a new era which would be mostly the history of the evangelization and formation of the nations by the church. We could call that period the times of the New Testament which will end with the great crisis concluding human history.

o Be on guard. After speaking about the imminent end of Jerusalem (v. 28-32) Luke speaks of that day which will conclude human history with the coming of Christ, the Judge (v. 34-36).

Be on guard. This invitation is not only addressed to those who will know that day, but it is for everyone, throughout the history of the church.

Watch and pray: from the interior attitude of the Christian, always on guard, we move to all church practice: vigils and prayers which continue while the world is asleep (see Eph 6:18).

That you may be able to stand: Prayer and vigils serve to ask for God's assistance in the great tests preceding the coming of Christ: to avoid errors and deceit (2 Thes 2:9); to remain holy and blameless before God (1 Thes 3:13).

The conspiracy against Jesus

(Mk 14:1; Mt 26:1)

22 ¹The feast of Unleavened Bread which is called the Passover, was now drawing near, ²and the chief priests and the teachers of the Law were looking for a way to kill Jesus, because they were afraid of the people. ³Then Satan entered into Judas, called Iscariot, one of the Twelve, ⁴and he went off to talk with the chief priests and the officers of the guard about how to deliver Jesus to them. ⁵They were delighted and agreed to give him money; ⁶so, he accepted and from that time he was waiting for an opportunity to deliver him without the people knowing.

◆ ⁷Then came the feast of the Unleavened Bread in which the Passover lamb had to be sacrificed. ⁸So Jesus sent Peter and John saying, "Go and get everything ready for us to eat the Passover meal." ⁹They asked him,

"Where do you want us to prepare it?"

¹⁰And he said, "When you enter the city, a man will come to you carrying a jar of water. Follow him to the house he enters and ¹¹say to the owner: 'The master asks: where is the room where I may take the Passover meal with my disciples?'" ¹²He will show you a large, furnished room upstairs, and there you will prepare for us."

¹³Peter and John went off and having found everything just as Jesus had told them, they prepared the Passover meal.

The supper of the Lord

(Mk 14:2; Mt 26:17)

■ ¹⁴When the hour came, Jesus took his place at table and the apostles with him. ¹⁵And he said to them, "I was eager to eat this passover with you before I suffer; ¹⁶for, I tell you, I shall not eat it again until it is fulfilled in the kingdom of God."

¹⁷Then they passed him a cup and

The Our Father expresses the same concern of those who are expecting the coming of the Kingdom: do not put us to the test and deliver us from evil.

In fact, vigils and prayers do not serve only to prevent possible falls. If the believer and the church are more awake, they cooperate more in the development of the divine plan and they hasten the coming of the Lord.

◆ Where do you want us to prepare it? This was the first preoccupation of pilgrims to Jerusalem: finding a house where they could eat the sacrificed lamb.

A man will come to you. Usually, the water jar was carried by women, and so it was easy to identify a man with a water jar. Jesus knew that Judas was betraying him and he did not want to indicate the place of the supper ahead of time: he could have been apprehended there. So, he trusted a prophetic intuition: the Father had designated the place for the last supper. It was, in fact, the home of a rich man, a disciple of Jesus in Jerusalem. This may have been the house where the apostles gathered after Jesus' death and where the church started.

■ See commentary on Mk 14:12.

Jesus took his place at table, or rather as the Gospel says "he reclined," as was the custom in banquets among the well-to-do: guests would recline on sofas around the table.

It is very difficult to know whether this last supper of Jesus started with the meal of the passover lamb and concluded with the eucharist, or whether Jesus only celebrated the eucharist, without having shared the passover meal. In any case, the Gospel wants to teach us that the eucharist will be for the church what the passover meal was for the people of Israel.

They passed him a cup. The person presiding at the passover meal would take four cups which he would bless and which the participants would pass around.

I will not drink of the grape of the vine. Jesus recalled that for the Jews, the passover meal was already an anticipated figure of the banquet of the Kingdom of God. On that night, this was taking place for Jesus in a very special way.

This is my body. Is the consecrated bread the symbol of the body of Christ, or is it the body of Christ in fact? There have been great controversies between Catholics and Protestants about this. Catholics understand that the bread is really the body of Christ: Protestants maintain that the bread does not contain the physical presence of the body of Christ and they look upon it as a mere symbol. Both have tried to come to a mutual understanding.

The faith of the church states that the consecrated bread is symbol and reality at the same when he had given thanks he said, "Take this and share it among yourselves: ¹⁸for I tell you that from now on I will not drink of the grape of the vine until the kingdom of God comes." ¹⁹Jesus also took bread and, after giving thanks, he broke it and gave it to them saying, "This is my body, (which is given for you. Do this in remembrance of me." ²⁰And he did the same with the cup after eating, "This cup is the new covenant, sealed in my blood which is poured out for you.)

²¹Yet the hand of the traitor is with me on the table. ²²Know that the Son of Man is going off the way he had to go. But alas for that man who delivers him up!" ²³So they began to ask one another which of them could do such a thing.

Last conversation with Jesus (Mk 10:42; Jn 13:1)

+ ²⁴But they also began to argue among themselves which of them should be considered the most important. ²⁵And Jesus said, "The kings of the pagan nations rule over them as lords, and the most hardhearted rulers claim to be called 'Gracious Lord'. ²⁶But not so with you; let the greatest among you become as the youngest, and the leader as the servant. ²⁷For, who is the greatest, he who sits at the table, or he who serves? He who is seated. Yet I am among you as the one who serves.

²⁸But you have been with me and stood by me through my troubles; ²⁹because of this, just as the kingship has been given to me by my father, so I give it to you. ³⁰You will eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and you will sit on thrones and govern the twelve tribes of Israel.

³¹Simon, Simon, Satan has demanded to sift you like grain, ³²but I have prayed for you that your faith may not fail. And when you have recovered you shall strengthen your brothers." ³³Then Peter said, "Lord, with you I am ready to go even to prison and death." ³⁴But Jesus replied, time. The presence of the body of Christ is not symbolic but real, though not a material presence, as if we could say: "Jesus is here on the table." The body of Christ is present, but through the sacramental sign of bread and wine. In communion we receive the body of the 'risen' Christ (it is another reason to think that it is not a material presence, but rather of another type, no less real, but different). His presence to the believer in communion is a mysterious and intimate reality. The main objective of the eucharist is to renew and strengthen the communion (fellowship) between Jesus and those who share in the table of the Lord.

20. Jer 31, 31; Ex 24, 8	21. Jn 13, 21	22. 17, 1; Acts 2, 23	24. 9, 46	27. 12, 37; Jn 13, 4

My blood poured out for you. Jesus gives us the meaning of his death: he will be the Servant of Yahweh promised by Isaiah (53:12), who takes upon himself the sins of a multitude. That is why in Matthew and Mark Jesus says: My blood poured out for a multitude. This multitude is made up primarily of Christians; that is why we read here poured out for you, the same as in 1 Cor 11:24.

The new covenant: see commentary on Mk 14:12.

Do this in remembrance of me. With these words Jesus institutes the eucharist as the church will celebrate it. In remembrance of me: not to remember a dead man. At the Passover the Jews remembered the intervention of God who had delivered them from Egypt; in the eucharist, we remember the intervention of God who saved us through the sacrifice of his Son.

The parenthesis of v. 20-21 includes words which are not in many ancient manuscripts and perhaps do not belong to Luke's gospel.

+ After the narrative of the Last Supper (Mk 14:12), Luke brings out some memories of the conversation during which Jesus took leave of his apostles. In reality, Jesus was alone: the contact between him and his disciples had been broken. It seemed that they had not learned anything in so many months and at the end of the Last Supper, which was the first Eucharist, they only expressed their all-too-human concerns.

The apostles were vying for the first place in the Kingdom: what concept, then, did they still have of the Kingdom? During the supper Jesus had acted as the servant of the house (Jn 13:1).

Jesus does not get discouraged when he sees that the apostles are not in touch with his

³⁵ Jesus also said to them, "When I sent you without purse or bag or sandals, were you short of anything?" They answered, "No." ³⁶ And Jesus said to them, "But now, let him who has a purse take it and a bag as well. And if anyone is without a sword, let him sell his cloak to buy one." ³⁷ For Scripture says: He was numbered among criminals. These words had to be fulfilled in me, and with this the reading is coming to an end."

³⁸ Then they said, "Look, Lord, here are two swords," but he answered, "That is enough."

Gethsemane

(Mk 14:32)

◆ ³⁹ After this Jesus left to go as usual to the Mount of Olives and the disciples followed him. ⁴⁰ When he came to the place, he told them, "Pray that you may not be put to the test."

⁴¹ Then he went a little further, about a stone's throw, and kneeling down he prayed, ⁴² "Father, if it is your will, remove this cup from me; yet not my will but yours be done." ⁴³ And an angel from heaven appeared to give him strength.

⁴⁴ As he was in agony, he prayed even more earnestly and great drops of blood formed like sweat and fell on the ground. ⁴⁵ When he rose from prayer, he went to his disciples but found them worn out by their grief and asleep. ⁴⁶ And he said to them, "Why do you sleep? Get up and pray, so that you may not be put to the test."

⁴⁷ Jesus was still speaking when a group of people appeared and the man named Judas, one of the Twelve, was leading them. He drew near to Jesus to kiss him, ⁴⁸ and Jesus said to him, "Did you need this kiss to betray the Son of Man?"

35. 10, 4 36. 12, 51 37. Is 53, 12; Acts 8, 32 39. 21, 37 40. 11, 4 43. 1 K 19, 4; Mr 4, 11; Jn 12, 29 thoughts and desires while time is coming to an end for him. He has surrendered his life and his work to the Father: if he has seemingly failed, he knows that after his death his work will rise to new life along with him and so he confirms his promises to his apostles.

You will sit ... How hard it is for us to understand Jesus' faithfulness with his own people. All that is his, he shares with those who have committed themselves to his work. The twelve tribes of Israel means the entire people of God. With this, Jesus designates all of us who come from many nations to accept the faith of the apostles.

Peter believes that since he is the head, he will be stronger than the others. Jesus, on the other hand, sees Peter's future mission, and in spite of his fall, he wants to give him a special grace so that he will be able to strengthen the rest. Such is Jesus' way of doing things: he saves what was lost, and having seen the incurable weakness of man in Peter, he uses him to give the church a stability to which no other human society can aspire. Indeed, the continuity of the church through the centuries is, in part, due to the popes, Peter's successors.

At the end, Jesus uses some images to indicate that the crisis announced so many times is at hand: the apostles do not really understand and they look for swords.

◆ It appears that Jesus celebrated the Passover in a house at the southwest of the old town of Jerusalem. He went down the stepped street to what had been the stream of Tyropeon, went up the Ophel area, the old city of David, to go down to the Kidron torrent, almost always without water. From there he must have taken a path to go up to the Mount of Olives. It was called that because its western slopes were covered with olive trees. Jesus went to a garden called Gethsemane, or "olive press." This land may have belonged to one of the disciples of Jesus, since he had been there many times (Jn 18:2).

Some of the ancient manuscripts of the Gospel do not have these verses 43 and 44: probably they were taken out because many people were scandalized by this "weakness" of Christ.

He was in agony. Jesus faces a despairing vision of the world's sin imposing itself upon him in the same measure in which the presence of his Holy Father invades him. Should we want to understand something of what took place in those moments, we must learn about the testimonies of the great saints who, in their way, also experienced this extremely difficult test. We are very wrong when we think we understand what Jesus felt before his death on the basis of the psychology of the average man who, before all else, fears for his life. Yet, in the history of the church, we find some people who, through the ⁴⁹As those with Jesus saw what would happen, they said to him, "Master, shall we use the sword?"⁵⁰And one of them struck the High Priest's servant and cut off his right ear. ⁵¹But Jesus stopped him, "No more of this." He touched the man's ear and cured him.

⁵²Then Jesus spoke to those coming against him, the chief priests, officers of the Temple and elders and he said to them, "Did you really set out against a robber? Do you need swords and clubs to arrest me?"⁵³Day after day I was among you teaching in the Temple and you could have arrested me. But this is the hour for the power of darkness; this is your hour."

The trial of Jesus, Peter's denial (Mk 14:53; Mt 26:57)

■ ⁵⁴Then they seized him and took him away, bringing him to the High Priest's house. But Peter followed at a distance.

⁵⁵A fire was kindled in the middle of the courtyard where people gathered, and Peter sat among them. ⁵⁶A maid-servant noticed him. Gazing at him intently in the light of the fire, she exclaimed, "This man also was with him!" ⁵⁷But he denied it, saying, "Woman, I do not know him."

⁵⁸A little later someone who saw him said, "You are also one of them!" Peter replied, "Man, I am not!"⁵⁹After about an hour another asserted, "Surely this man was with him, for he is a Galilean."

⁶⁰Again Peter denied, "My friend, I don't know what you are talking about." He had not finished saying this when a cock crowed. ⁶¹The Lord turned around and looked at Peter and he remembered the word that the Lord had spoken, "Before the cock crows today you will have denied me three times." ⁶²Peter went outside, weeping bitterly.

⁶³Meanwhile the guards were mocking and beating Jesus. ⁶⁴They blindfolded him, slapped him and then asked, "Who hit you? Tell us."

grace of God, came to some form of feeling, suffering, understanding and loving totally different from our experience. Through them, we come a bit closer to what the agony of Jesus was like.

An angel from heaven. At times, the Bible speaks of an angel to mean that God intervened in a mysterious way, by encouraging, teaching or punishing... This angel reminds us of the one who came to encourage Elijah (1 Kg 19:4). We must understand that, at that moment, God gave Jesus supernatural help without which his human strength would have failed him.

This symptom is well-known to doctors and it betrays both intense anxiety and suffering. The scientific study of the Shroud of Turin corroborates this Lukan detail.

The hour and the form of Jesus' arrest were suited to evildoers driven by the Power of darkness. There are times when all hope and justice have apparently disappeared from the earth.

■ WHY DID THEY KILL HIM ?

Regarding the two trials of Jesus, one religious, the second political, see commentary on Mk 14:53.

Jesus' trial and condemnation to death were not very different from what happens to many Christian militants and martyrs. The mere fact of preferring relationships with the poor, of educating simple people so they can be free and responsible, does not constitute a crime in any country, and yet, throughout the centuries, it has been sufficient to bring persecutions on a person. We have already mentioned that Jesus preached in extremely difficult circumstances, since his nation was under the law of the Roman occupants and any liberating message smacked of subversion.

Undoubtedly, people had plenty of reasons to hate Jesus. However, the Gospel records that the accusations focused on the key point of his teaching. They condemned Jesus because he claimed to be divine: the Christ, the Son of God, the one who will sit at the right hand of God.

The chief priests of the time belonged to wealthy families who fought for the position because they could use the temple money. Annas and his sons (and his son-in-law Caiphas) are known for having acted with utter shamelessness, silencing protests with the sticks of their guards who formed an illegal militia. Here, they appear with the leaders of the Jews, or the Elders, who belong to the richest families.

prophet." ⁶⁵And they hurled many other insulting words at him.

⁶⁶At daybreak, the council of the elders of the people, among which were the chief priests and the scribes, assembled again. Then they had Jesus brought before them, and they began questioning him: ⁶⁷"Tell us, are you the Christ?" Jesus replied, "You will not believe if I tell you. ⁶⁸and neither will you answer if I ask you. ⁶⁹Yet from now on the Son of Man will have his seat at the right hand of the Mighty God."

⁷⁰In chorus they asked, "So you are the Son of God?" And Jesus said to them, "You are right, I am."

⁷¹Then they said, "What need have we of witnesses? We have heard it from his own lips."

Jesus before Pilate

(Mt 27:1; Mk 15:1; Jn 18:28)

+23 ¹The whole council rose and brought Jesus to Pilate.

²They gave their accusation: "We found this man subverting our nation, opposing payment of taxes to Caesar, and claiming to be Christ the king."

³Pilate asked Jesus, "Are you the King of the Jews?" Jesus replied, "You said so." ⁴Turning to the chief priests and the crowd, Pilate said, "I find no basis for a case against this man." ⁵But they insisted, "All the country of the Jews is being stirred up with his teaching. He began in Galilee and now he has come all the way here."

⁶When Pilate heard this, he asked if the man was a Galilean. ⁷Finding the accused to come under Herod's jurisdiction, Pilate sent Jesus over to Herod who happened to be in Jerusalem at that time.

⁸Herod was really delighted to have Jesus before him now, for he had wanted for a long time to see him because of the reports he had heard about him, and he was hoping to see Jesus work some miracle. ⁹He piled up question after question, but got no reply from Jesus.

¹³Pilate then called together the chief priests and the elders before all the people, ¹⁴and said to them, "You have brought this man before me and accused him of subversion. In your presence I have examined him and found no basis for your charges. ¹⁵And neither has Herod, for he sent him back to me. It is quite clear that this man has done nothing that deserves a death sentence. ¹⁶I will therefore have him scourged and then release him."

o ¹⁸Howling as one man, they protested: "No! Away with this man! Release Barabbas to us, instead."

68. Jn 10, 24-25 69. Ps 110, 1; Acts 2, 36 2. Acts 17, 7 4. Acts 3, 13; 13, 28 8. 9, 9; Acts 4, 27

+ Pilate does not want to condemn Jesus partly because he hates Jewish priests, and so he sends him to Herod. By putting a white robe on Jesus, Herod treats him as a madman pretending to be a king.

They became friends from that day on, because, in spite of the fact that they were so different, they realized that they belonged to the same class of people with power to play with the life of a man of the people.

o Barabbas may have been one of those terrorists harassing the Roman oppressors. The chief priests who wanted to have peace with the Romans hated these people. Yet, the chief priests were the ones who persuaded the people to ask for the release of Barabbas. Even though they hated those priests, the people listened to them. With that, Pilate's plan - he wanted to release Jesus - failed.

¹⁹ This man had been thrown into prison for an uprising with murder in the city, but, on the Passover Pilate had to release a prisoner.

²⁰ As Pilate wanted to release Jesus, he appealed to the crowd once more, ²¹ but they shouted back, "To the cross with him! To the cross!" ²² A third time Pilate said to them, "Why, what evil has he done? Since no crime deserving death has been proved, I shall release him after having him scourged."

²³ But they went on crying out and demanding that Jesus be crucified, and their shouts were growing louder.

²⁴ So Pilate decided to pass the sentence they demanded. ²⁵ He released the man they asked for, the one who was in prison for rebellion and murder, and he delivered Jesus in accordance with their wishes.

The way of Calvary

(Mt 27:32; Mk 15:16)

²⁶ When they led Jesus away, they seized Simon of Cyrene, who was coming in from the fields, and laid the cross on him, to carry it behind Jesus.

◆ ²⁷ A large crowd of people followed him; among them were women beating their breast and wailing for him, ²⁸ but Jesus turned to them and said, "Women of Jerusalem, do not weep for me, weep rather for yourselves and for your children. ²⁹ For the days are coming when people will say: 'Happy are the women without child! Happy are those who have not given birth or nursed a child! ³⁰ And they will say to the mountains: Fall on us! and to the hills: Cover us! ³¹ For if this is the lot of the green wood, what will happen with the dry?"

³² Along with Jesus, two others who were criminals were led out to be executed. ³³ There at the place called The Skull, he was crucified together with the criminals – one on his right and another on his left. ³⁴ Jesus said, "Father, forgive them for they do not know what they do." And the guards cast lots to divide his clothes among themselves.

³⁵ The people stood by watching. As for the rulers, they made fun of him, saying to one another, "Let the man who saved others save himself now, for he is the Messiah, the chosen one of God!"

³⁶ The soldiers also made fun of him and when they drew near to offer him bitter wine, ³⁷ they said, "So you are the king of the Jews? Free yourself!" ³⁸ For above him was an inscription which read, "This is the King of the Jews."

○ ³⁹ One of the criminals hanging with Jesus insulted him, "So you are the Messiah? Save yourself and us as well!" ⁴⁰ But the other rebuked him, saying, "Have you no fear of God? You receive the same sentence as he did. ⁴¹ We deserve the punishment; this is payment for what we have done. But this man has done no evil."

◆ What will happen with dry wood? Jesus had taught that the sacrifice which is accepted, is fruitful: but at that point he mourns the unnecessary sufferings of a people who have let the opportunity pass them by and who will be destroyed through their own fault.

These words are also meant for all those who make the blood of Christ useless for themselves.

A large crowd followed him, especially women ... Luke is the only evangelist recording this compassionate attitude. Contrary to Matthew who insists on the guilt of the Jewish people, Luke wants to point out that Jesus' condemnation moved many people. Jesus' words recall what he already said about the destruction of the Jewish nation (Mk 13 and 11:26).

○ The leaders of the Jews have put Jesus where he belongs since he decided to take our sins upon himself. The two men look at the one who has come to share their destiny.

Turning to Jesus, ⁴² he said, "Remember me when you come into your kingdom." ⁴³ Jesus replied, "Truly, you will be with me today in paradise."

⁴⁴ It was now about noon. ⁴⁵ The sun was hidden and darkness came over the whole land until mid-afternoon; and at that time the curtain of the Sanctuary was torn in two. ⁴⁶ Then Jesus gave a loud cry, "Father, I commit my spirit into your hands." And after he said that, he gave up his spirit.

⁴⁷ The captain saw what had happened, and acknowledged the hand of God. He said, "Surely this was an upright man." ⁴⁸ And all the people who had gathered to watch the spectacle, as soon as they saw what happened went home beating their breasts. ⁴⁹ Only the acquaintances of Jesus stood at a distance, and especially the women who had followed him from Galilee; and they witnessed all this.

⁵⁰ Now a member of the Jewish supreme council, a good and righteous man named Joseph ⁵¹ from the Judean town of Arimathea, did not agree with the decision and action of his fellow members, for he lived uprightly in the hope of seeing the kingdom of God. ⁵² He went to Pilate and asked for Jesus' body. ⁵³ He then took it down, wrapped it in a linen cloth and laid it in a yet unused tomb cut out of a rock.

⁵⁴ It was Preparation Day and the sabbath was approaching. ⁵⁵ So the women who had come with Jesus from Galilee followed Joseph to see the tomb and how his body was being placed. ⁵⁶ And returning home, they prepared perfumes and ointments.

The Lord has risen

46. Ps 31, 6

'You will be in Paradise. What is paradise? We lack adequate words to express what lies beyond. In Jesus' time, the Jews used to compare the Place of the Dead to a huge country divided up into regions separated by insurmountable barriers. Hell was one of the regions: it was reserved for the wicked, from there no one could come out. Another region was Paradise where the good people would be with the first ancestors of the holy people, awaiting the moment of resurrection.

You will be with me, says Jesus, that is with the Saviour who, for a day and a half, was in the peace and the joy of God, before the resurrection. This statement puts us at ease as to our own destiny at death, although we cannot know what will become of us before the Resurrection. We will not be anesthetized nor will we cease to exist, as some claim, but rather, we will possess everything, being with Jesus who came to share death and his brothers' rest (see Phil 1:23 and Rv 14:13).

■ The Lord Jesus: With this expression, not found in the rest of the Gospel but very much in use in the early church, Luke shows us that the Risen Jesus has entered a kind of existence which is different from that of his mortal life. Let us remember the following:

1) None of the Gospels describe the Resurrection of Jesus: it was an event which could not be seen.

2) The apostles' preaching about the risen Jesus is based on two facts: the empty tomb and the appearances (see commentary on Mt 28:1).

3) Before the Gospels were written, Paul's first letter to the Corinthians, in the year 57, gave a list of Jesus' appearances (1 Cor 15:3).

4) Although the four Gospels agree as to what is essential, there are, nevertheless, differences as to the order of the appearances and the place where they occurred. Luke does not mention appearances in Galilee. Matthew gives the impression that all that was important took place in Galilee and that the Ascension took place there also. Paul speaks first of an appearance to Peter and he does not mention the appearance to Mary Magdalen. An in-depth study of the texts sheds some light on these discrepancies: they did not want to reveal everything, and at times, they preferred to modify details of the place or the chronology to fit the demands of their book and for the purpose of teaching.

³they entered and were puzzled to find that the body of the Lord Jesus was not there.

⁴Two men in dazzling clothes appeared beside them. ⁵In fright the women bowed to the ground. But the men said, "Why look for the living among the dead? ⁶(You won't find him here. He is risen.) ⁷Remember what he told you in Galilee, that the Son of Man had to be given into the hands of sinful men, be crucified, and rise on the third day." ⁸And they recalled Jesus' words.

⁹Returning from the tomb, they informed the Eleven and their companions. ¹⁰Among the women who brought the news were Mary Magdalene, Joanna, and Mary the mother of James. ¹¹But however much they insisted, those who heard did not believe the seemingly nonsensical story. ¹²(Then Peter got up and ran to the tomb. All he saw there on bending down were the linen cloths. He went home wondering.)

On the road to Emmaus

(Mk 16:12)

o ¹³That same day, two of them were going to Emmaus, a village seven miles from Jerusalem, ¹⁴and they talked about what had happened. ¹⁵While they were talking and wondering, Jesus came up and walked with them, ¹⁶but their eyes were held and they did not recognize him.

¹⁷He asked, "What is this you are talking about?" The two stood still, looking sad. ¹⁸Then one named Cleophas answered, "Why, it seems you are the only one in Jerusalem who doesn't know what has happened! There these past few days." ¹⁹And he asked, "What is it?"

They replied, "It is about Jesus of Nazareth. He was a prophet, you know, mighty in word and deed before God and the people. ²⁰But the chief priests and our rulers sentenced him to death. They handed him over and he was crucified. ²¹Yet we had hoped that he would redeem Israel.

It is now the third day since all this took place. ²²What amazes us greatly is the strange tale some of our women pass around. They went to the tomb early this morning, ²³but didn't find his body. When they came back to us, they had a story about seeing a vision of angels who told them that Jesus was alive. ²⁴Some friends of our group went to the tomb and found everything just as the women said, but him they did not see."

9. 8, 2; Jn 20, 3

5) As for Jesus' Ascension, it was not a "trip" to heaven; he was already "in heaven," in the sense that he shared the glory of God from the moment of his Resurrection. The Ascension is simply the last of his appearances (see commentary on Heb 1:9).

o These two disciples were merely coming home to return to their work after their hopes had been crushed. But we have become used to calling them the pilgrims of Emmaus.

The Jewish people, the people of Israel were pilgrim people because they never had the possibility of lingering on the way. The departure from Egypt, the conquest of the Land, the fights against invaders, the development of religious culture were so many stages along the way. Each time they thought that in reaching their goal, their problems would be solved, and each time they had to realize that the road was taking them further.

Cleophas (v. 18): the husband of Mary, mother of James and Joses (see Jn 19:25 and Mk 15:40).

Cleophas and his companion were pilgrims since they followed Jesus, thinking that he would redeem Israel. But, in the end, there was only the death of Jesus. This is the moment when Jesus becomes present and teaches them that one does not enter the Kingdom without passing through death.

They recognized him (v. 16). Perhaps Jesus looked different as we see in John 20:14. This is what Mark says in 16:12. But Luke also wants us to understand that the same people, whose eyes could not recognize Jesus, will see him when they come to believe.

Starting with Moses ... and going through ²⁵He said to them, "How dull you are, how slow of understanding! You fail to believe the message of the prophets. ²⁶Is it not written that the Christ should suffer all this and then enter his glory?" ²⁷Then starting with Moses and going through the prophets, he explained to them everything in Scripture concerning himself.

²⁸As they drew near the village they were heading for, Jesus made as if to go farther. ²⁹But they prevailed upon him, "Stay with us, for night comes quickly. The day is now almost over." So he went in to stay with them. ³⁰When they were at table, he took the bread, said a blessing, broke it and gave each a piece.

³¹Their eyes opened, they recognized him; but he vanished out of their sight. ³²Then they said to each other, "Were not our hearts filled with ardent yearning when he was talking to us on the road and explaining the Scriptures?"

³³They immediately got up and returned to Jerusalem. There they found the Eleven and their companions gathered together. ³⁴They were greeted by these words from them, "Yes, it is true, the Lord is risen! He has appeared to Simon!" ³⁵Then the two told what had happened on the road and how Jesus made himself known when he broke bread with them.

Jesus appears to the apostles

(Jn 20:19)

+ ³⁶As they went on talking about this, he himself stood in their midst. (And he said to them, "Peace to you".) ³⁷In their panic and fright they thought they were seeing a ghost, ³⁸but he said to them, "Why are you upset and why do such ideas cross your mind? ³⁹Look at my hands and feet and see that it is I myself. Touch me and see for yourselves that a ghost has no flesh and bones as I have." ⁴⁰(As he said this, he showed his hands and feet.)

⁴¹In their joy they didn't dare believe and were still astonished. So he said to them, "Have you anything to eat?" ⁴²and they gave him a piece of broiled fish. ⁴³He took it and ate it before them.

Last instructions

◆ ⁴⁴Then Jesus said to them, "Remember the words I spoke to you when I was still with you: Everything the prophets (v. 27). Remember that "Moses and the prophets" is a way of designating Scripture. Jesus invites them to pass from Israel's faith or hope in a happy future for the whole nation, to faith in his very person, accepting the mystery of his rejection and of his Passion. The things of Scripture that relate to himself (v. 27). Jesus not only found all the texts which announced his Passion and Resurrection such as Is 50; Is 52:13; Zec 12:11; Ps 22; Ps 69; but also those texts showing that God's plan censors human history.

Something similar happens now to believers when so often we complain and show our impatience. Yet Jesus did not leave us alone. He has not risen in order to sit in heaven; but he is ahead of humanity on pilgrimage and he draws us toward that final day when he will come to meet us.

But at the same time he walks with us and when our hopes are dashed, that is the moment when we discover the meaning of the Resurrection.

Thus, the church does for us what Jesus did for the two disciples. First, it gives us the 'interpretation of Scripture': what matters in our efforts to understand the Bible is not to know many passages by heart, but to discover the thread connecting various events and to understand God's plan concerning people. In his first biblical lesson, Jesus taught them that the Christ had to suffer.

Then, the church also celebrates the Eucharist. Notice how Luke says: he took bread, said a blessing, broke it and gave it; these same four words were used among believers to speak of the Eucharist. We can come close to Jesus in conversation and meditating on his word; we find him present in our fraternal meetings, but he written about me in the Law of Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms had to be fulfilled." ⁴⁵Then he opened their minds to understand the Scriptures.

And he went on, ⁴⁶"You see what was written: the Messiah had to suffer and on the third day rise from the dead. ⁴⁷Then repentance and forgiveness in his name would be proclaimed to all the nations, beginning from Jerusalem. ⁴⁸Now you shall be witnesses to these things ⁴⁹and this is why I will send you what my Father promised. So remain in the city until you are invested with power from above."

⁵⁰Jesus led them almost as far as Bethany; then he lifted up his hands and blessed them. ⁵¹And as he blessed them, he withdrew (and was taken to heaven. They worshipped him). ⁵²They returned to Jerusalem full of joy and ⁵³were continually in the Temple praising God.

49. Acts 1, 8; Acts 1, 4 51. Acts 1, 9 makes himself known in a different way when we share the bread which is his body.

+ Jesus had been reborn to glorious life from the day of his Resurrection. He was already "in the Father's glory," but he wanted to be with his disciples on various occasions in order to convince them that his new condition was not a lesser life, or something ghostly, but rather a superlife.

◆ Jesus uses these encounters to clarify the meaning of his short and bright mission for his apostles. He saves us from sin which means nothing less than reordering history and raising people.

Everything written about me had to be fulfilled. What the prophets had announced about a saviour who would be rejected by his people and take the sin of his people upon himself, had to be fulfilled. What sin? Everyone's sins, of course, but also the violence of the whole Jewish society at the time of Jesus. This was the sin that he took to the cross.

As a matter of fact, this way of death and resurrection was not reserved only for Jesus, but also for his people. In that precise period, Israel, subject to the Roman Empire, had to accept the death of its earthly ambitions: autonomy, national pride, the religious superiority of the Jews over other people ... in order to rise as the people of God scattered among nations and to become the agent of salvation. But Israel did not follow this way and Jesus was hoping that his church would fulfill that role.

Conversion and forgiveness in his name. Christian conversion is not just any change of life. It means a change in the person at the deepest level upon discovering the extravagant love of God. This is where our renewal begins. But it is not merely a matter of giving up our lies, drunkenness and thefts. Our conversion does not evolve as long as we do not realize all the forces, barriers, customs, the laws which make us irresponsible and violent and thus make us accomplices in this situation, out of selfishness and especially out of cowardice. Therefore the preaching to the nations also means the education of the nations and even of international society. This is something which takes longer than ten or a hundred years.

You shall be witnesses to all this. Jesus calls his apostles to be the official witnesses of his Gospel and the ones who will judge authentic faith.

Stay in the city. The apostles are not to plant missionary work. It is advisable that they dedicate themselves to strengthening brotherly fellowship and the fervour of the community of the disciples as they wait for the time chosen by the Father to give them the power coming from above.

I will send you what my Father promised. Jesus could not affirm his divine authority and the unity of the three divine persons more powerfully.

He withdrew: this was the last of Jesus' appearances to the group of disciples.

And so concludes Luke's first book. His second book, The Acts of the Apostles, follows the Gospels and it begins precisely where this Gospel ends.

INTRODUCTION

The first three Gospels presented the works and words of Jesus which were most appropriate for the foundation of the Church's basic catechesis. John's Gospel, on the other hand, has a more definite goal: "This has been written that you may believe that Jesus is the Son of God..." (In 20:31).

All in the Church professed faith in Jesus, Son of God, how did they understand these words? Jesus' resurrection had manifested the divine aspect of his person; one could ask since when was Jesus the Son of God and to what extent did he participate in the divine existence?

John's Gospel clearly affirmed for the first time, Jesus' existence in God himself from all eternity. This clarity regarding Jesus' origin also made clearer the vastness of his work. Jesus, being the eternal Son of God made man, did not come solely to teach us to be better or more religious, but to transform creation and to make of us true sons and daughters of God.

This Gospel records only seven miracles of Jesus (seven is a symbolic number). But it sees in these miracles the announcement of the work that the Son of God will realize throughout history. When Jesus is shown discussing something with the unbelieving Jews, it is not difficult to see that John makes reference to certain weaknesses of faith in the early Christians. In the long discourse that the evangelist puts in the mouth of the Lord, he reveals his own understanding of Jesus' words as this developed with the passage of time.

This Gospel emphasis on Jesus' divinity could diminish interest in his concrete life among people. From the beginning, some Christians used John's Gospel to justify a false concept of Jesus and his redemption, as forgetting that he really died on the cross. Possibly, John's first letter written to present the Gospel, refers to these persons.

It is certain that the evangelist composed, rearranged and completed these writings over a long period of time. When he died at a ripe age in about 95 (C.E.), his disciples published this work. This laborious process explains why there are repetitions and in many places apparent disorder, in what is nevertheless a carefully planned composition.

life which for man was also light.

⁵Light that shines in the dark:
light that darkness could not overcome.

his name was John.

⁷He came to bear witness, as a witness to introduce the Light so that all might believe through him.

⁸He was not the Light
but a witness to introduce the Light.

⁹For the Light was coming into the world, the true Light that enlightens every man.

and through him the world was made,
the very world that did not know him.

o The Gospel does not speak solely of God, nor of God's covenant with peoples; rather, it first points to an exceptional relationship of the Father with his only Son: Jesus is the Son who has come from God. Immediately, some doubts occur to us:

1) There is no middle ground between Creator and creature. Is the Son then God with the Father; or is he the first and most eminent of all creatures?

2) In God there can be nothing that is not God. Is the Son just as eternal and just as much God as the Father is?

3) If God is only One, how can we understand that the Father and the Son are in Him?

In this Prologue or Introduction to the Gospel, John wants to clarify the mystery.

In the beginning. Gen. 1:1 spoke to us of the beginnings of time and the universe. Everything came from God in the beginning; but for God, time does not pass. God was and is and will always be in the beginning. If we want to understand why God created the world, we should know that for God, this beginning does not pass away. God was like the irrepressible and eternal force of Love. Therefore, God manifested his immense generosity and generated his Son, of Himself and in Himself.

The Word was with God. God is the Father inasmuch as he engenders his Son. In Him he projects and contemplates his own riches: how could one recognize his own face without a mirror in which to look at himself? The Son (or Word) reflects the Father, the Son in no way inferior to the Father.

John speaks to us of the Word of God. This term can be translated: the Word, or the Thought, or still better: the Expression of God: and this is his Son.

The Son is the splendor (Heb 1:1) and the image (Col 1:15) of the Father. The Son is not part of the Father, nor is the Son another God, since he has nothing of his own, but all that the Father has is his (Jn 16:15). For this reason he is also God together with the Father.

All things were made through him. God creates the universe through and for the Word, discovering in him the innumerable creatures, worlds and spirits – including all those who, together with him, will be made sons of God (Eph 1:3-5). Everyone of us is God's thought made real; each of us has been fashioned and ¹²but all who have received him he empowers to become children of God for they believe in his Name.

¹³This birth is without seed or carnal desire or will of man:
they are born of God.

¹⁴And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us;
and we have seen his Glory, the Glory of the only Son coming from the Father:
fullness of loving-kindness and faithfulness.

¹⁵John bore witness to him openly, saying:
This is the one who comes after me but he is already ahead of me for he was before me.

¹⁶From his fullness we have all received, favour upon favour.

¹⁷For God had given us the Law through Moses, but Loving-kindness and Faithfulness came through Jesus Christ.

¹⁸No one has ever seen God, but the only Son made him known:
the one who is in and with the Father.

blessed by God "in" the perfect model of all – the Word.

Whatever has come to be, finds life in him. It is of the nature of life to grow, by its inner forces, until it reaches maturity. This growth seems natural to us in a son (in whichever son). Such a growth is fitting to the Son: not to the Father. There are two aspects in the Son: on the one hand, like the Father he is God and does not suffer pain or diminishment. But on the other hand, the Son is in an attitude of offering. He surrenders himself, so that the Father may exalt and glorify him anew.

For this reason, the Son of God came into our world not only to save us, but also to dispossess himself of his glory and become as nothing until his Father would glorify him (Phil 2:5-11). Likewise, all of creation which was made through him, is governed by the same law of life, death and resurrection.

A man came, sent by God. In the two stanzas 6-8 and 15, John, the author of the Gospel, speaks to us of John the Baptist, Jesus' precursor.

Before Jesus was born, the Word of God was the light that guided humankind. He is the wisdom of God (Prov 8:22-24 and Wis 7:22-30) that enlightens every man, even those far from the faith. This light never failed, even among those who did not know God; he was in the consciousness of the righteous of all races and times.

But in Jesus, the light came to humankind in a new way. He came unto his own, to his own house, that is, to the people of Israel.

The Word was made flesh. John uses the word flesh to underline the utter humility of God, who, despite being spirit, became a creature with a mortal body. John says: was made, and not: "took the appearance" of man, because the Son of God was truly made man.

He dwelt among us. John says precisely: "He pitched his tent among us." With that, he alludes to the sacred tent that served as the Hebrews' sanctuary in the desert: in that tent, God was present beside them (Ex 33:7-11). In reality, Jesus, the Son of God made man, is the true Temple of God among people (Jn 2:21), a temple as humble and apparently fragile as the tent in the desert was: nevertheless, in him is the fullness of God. The apostles saw his glory at certain moments of his mortal life (Jn 2:11 and

FIRST PART: JESUS REVEALS HIMSELF THROUGH SIGNS

John the Baptist presents Jesus, the Lamb of God

+ ¹⁹ This was the testimony of John when the Jews sent priests and Levites to ask him, "Who are you?" ²⁰ John recognized the truth and did not deny it. He said, "I am not the Messiah."

²¹ And they asked him, "Then, who are you? Elijah?" He answered, "I am not." They said, "Are you the Prophet?" And he answered, "No."

²² Then they said to him, "Tell us who you are, so that we can give some answer to those who sent us. How do you see yourself?" ²³ And John said, quoting the prophet Isaiah, "I am the voice crying out in the wilderness: Make straight the way of the Lord."

²⁴ These persons had been sent by the Pharisees; ²⁵ so they put a further question to John: "Then, why are you baptizing if you are not the Messiah or Elijah, or the Prophet?" ²⁶ John answered, "I baptize you with water but among you stands one whom you do not know; ²⁷ although he comes after me, I am not worthy to untie the strap of his sandal."

²⁸ This happened in Bethany beyond the Jordan, where John was baptizing.

²⁹ The next day John saw Jesus coming towards him and said, "There is the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world. ³⁰ It is he of whom I said: A man comes after me who is already ahead of me, for he was before me. ³¹ I myself did not know him but I came baptizing to prepare for him, so that he might be revealed in Israel."

³² And John also gave this testimony, "I saw the Spirit coming down on Lk 9:32). They saw his glory in his Passion and Resurrection.

How does the Word come to save us? John does not speak only of Jesus rescuing us from the abyss of sin; he prefers to speak of Jesus allowing us to attain a situation which was totally unexpected and beyond our reach: he made them children of God. We are made children of God by the very Son of the Father, provided that we believe in his Name, that is in his divine personality.

In him was the fullness of Love and Faithfulness. Love (or Grace) and Faithfulness are God's two main qualities (Ex 34:6-7). These words are repeated like a refrain throughout Psalm 89. John, then, means that he has recognized the fullness of Jesus' divinity (Col 2:9).

God has given us the Law. While recounting the sins of Israel, the biblical story foretold the time in which there would be no need for a Law engraved in stones or written in books (Jer 31:31). Some day, God would change the sinners' hearts (Ez 36:26) so that relationships of mutual Love and Faithfulness between him and humankind would begin (Hos 2:21-22). John affirms that the promised time of Love and Faithfulness (of perfect religion) arrived through Jesus Christ.

+ THE LAMB

The authorities asked among themselves: "Who is this who on his own initiative has begun to preach?" At that time, various Jewish groups "baptized", or bathed, as a means of purification and to hasten the coming of the Messiah.

Regarding John the Baptist's preaching and baptism, see Lk 3:10.

The Messiah is the name the Jews gave to the expected Saviour. They also expected their Prophet, but it was not clear whether or not the Prophet would be someone other than the Messiah. It was believed that the prophet Elijah would reappear before Jesus' arrival (Mk 9:11).

There is the Lamb. In the language of the Jews, the word "Lamb" can mean both servant and lamb. Jesus is the Servant of God announced by the prophets, who was to sacrifice himself for his brothers and sisters. He is also the true Lamb that replaces the Paschal Lamb (Mk 14:18).

A man comes after me. In history, Jesus appears after John, but being the Word of God, he existed before all creatures. He also goes ahead of all, that is to say, all – including John the Baptist – are guided by his light.

him like a dove from heaven and resting on him.³³ I myself did not know him but God who sent me to baptize told me: 'You will see the Spirit coming down and resting on the one who baptizes with the Holy Spirit.'³⁴ Yes, I have seen! and I declare that this is the Chosen One of God."

Jesus meets the first disciples

■³⁵ On the following day John was standing there again with two of his disciples.³⁶ As Jesus walked by, John looked at him and said, "There is the Lamb of God."³⁷ On hearing this, the two disciples followed Jesus.³⁸ He turned and saw them following, and he said to them, "What are you looking for?" They answered, "Rabbi (which means Master), where are you staying?"³⁹ Jesus said, "Come and see." So they went and saw where he stayed and spent the rest of that day with him. It was about four o'clock in the afternoon.

⁴⁰ Andrew, the brother of Simon

Peter, was one of the two who heard what John had said and followed Jesus.⁴¹ Early the next morning he found his brother Simon and said to him, "We have found the Messiah" (which means the Christ),⁴² and he brought Simon to Jesus. Jesus looked at him and said, "You are Simon, son of John, but you shall be called Cephas" (which means Rock).

⁴³ The next day, Jesus decided to set off for Galilee. He found Philip and said to him, "Follow me."⁴⁴ Philip was from Bethsaida, the town of Andrew and Peter.⁴⁵ Philip found Nathanael and said to him, "We have found the one that Moses wrote about in the Law, and the prophets as well: he is Jesus, son of Joseph, from Nazareth."

⁴⁶ Nathanael replied, "Can anything good come from Nazareth?" Philip said to him, "Come and see."

⁴⁷ When Jesus saw Nathanael coming, he said of him, "Here comes an Israelite, a true one; there is nothing false in him."⁴⁸ Nathanael asked him,

■ DISCOVERING JESUS

This Gospel is the work of John the Evangelist who should not be confused with John the Baptist. John the Evangelist was one of the first two disciples to follow Jesus (v. 39).

John, concerned about helping us understand the profound meaning of Jesus' actions, dwells on details that we would not immediately pay attention to. For example, the Bible begins with the poem describing Creation as happening in seven days, and because of the Creation account, the evangelist describes the beginning of Jesus' public ministry as happening within a week (seven being a symbolic number) (vv. 29; 35; 43).

On the first day John the Baptist affirmed: there is one among you whom you do not know. We see how, during the week, John the Baptist was the first to discover Jesus. Then later, John, Andrew and Simon also discovered him. The last day of the first week will be at the wedding in Cana, where Jesus will let them discover his glory.

What are you looking for? John did not forget these first words Jesus spoke to them. We want to know who Jesus is, but he asks us what our inner dispositions are: because we will gain nothing through finding him unless we are disposed to submit ourselves to him.

These two disciples began to live with Jesus. With time, they would discover that he is the Teacher, the Messiah, the Son of God. So, too, with us. We progress in this knowledge of Jesus Christ as we go on our journey through life.

John the Baptist was without jealousy; he had encouraged his disciples to follow Jesus, and later, these first two brought the others. Likewise, we come to Jesus because of another person who spoke to us of him, or involved us in an apostolic task.

These two disciples recognized Jesus. It would be more exact to say that Jesus recognized those whom the Father had entrusted to him. Thus he recognized Nathanael when he was under the fig tree. Among the Jews, this expression referred to a teacher of the Law engaged in teaching religion, since ordinarily they taught under the shade of a tree. Thus, too, Jesus recognized Simon whom the Father chose to be the first Rock of the Church (Mt 16:13).

You will see the heavens opened. See Gen 28:12.

"How do you know me?" And Jesus said to him, "Before Philip called you, you were under the fig tree and I saw you."

⁴⁹ Nathanael answered, "Master, you are the Son of God! You are the King of Israel!" ⁵⁰ But Jesus replied, "You believe because I said: 'I saw you under the fig tree.' But you will see greater things than that."

⁵¹ Truly, I say to you, you will see the heavens opened and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man."

The wedding at Cana

2 ¹ Three days later there was a wedding at Cana in Galilee and the mother of Jesus was there. ² Jesus was also invited to the wedding with his disciples. ³ When all the wine provided for the celebration had been served and they had run out of wine, the mother of Jesus said to him, "They have no wine." ⁴ Jesus replied, "Woman, your thoughts are not mine! My hour has not yet come."

⁵ However his mother said to the servants, "Do whatever he tells you."

⁶ Nearby were six stone water jars meant for the ritual washing as practised by the Jews; each jar could hold twenty or thirty gallons. ⁷ Jesus said to the servants, "Fill the jars with water." And they filled them to the brim. ⁸ Then Jesus said, "Now draw some out and take it to the steward." So they did.

⁹ The steward tasted the water that had become wine, without knowing from where it had come; for only the servants who had drawn the water knew. So, he immediately called the bridegroom ¹⁰ to tell him, "Everyone serves the best wine first and when people have drunk enough, he serves

◆ THE SIGNS OF JESUS

The Week of Discovery ends with the wedding at Cana. Indeed, Jesus was at the wedding and he brought his disciples to join in the singing and dancing and drinking. His presence and participation sanctified not only marriage but also festive celebrations and togetherness.

The disciples began to know Jesus, but someone else already understood and believed in him: Mary, his mother. How did it ever occur to her to ask him for a miracle? And did she know that Jesus would perform miracles? Mary did not ask for the conversion of sinners, or for bread for the hungry; rather, what she wanted was a miracle or something like it to free the groom from embarrassment.

Jesus answered her with a phrase which, directed to a stranger, would be a reproach, but said in a different tone to his mother, demonstrates a familiarity and a mutual understanding that goes beyond words. Apparently, Jesus had no thought of beginning his mission in that manner or at that moment, but his spirit recognized the Spirit speaking through his mother, and he granted this first miraculous sign.

It is worth noting that John relates only seven miracles of Jesus, and sometimes he calls them works, sometimes signs. They are works of the Son of God in which he manifests his power. They are signs, that is to say, visible things adapted to us by which he enables us to understand his true work – that of bringing to life and renewing the world.

This is why John mentions some details of this event which were the figures of spiritual realities. Jesus participated in a wedding, and what was he trying to do, but to prepare for other weddings – of God with humanity? Jesus speaks of his hour that had not yet come, but in reality, his true hour will be that of his Passion and Resurrection.

John adds that Jesus made use of the water which the Jews set aside to purify themselves. The Jews were obsessed with avoiding "defilement", so their religion multiplied the rites of purification. But Jesus, by changing the blessed water into wine, signified that true religion should not be confused with the fear of sin: what is important is to receive from Jesus the Spirit which, like a heady wine, will make us break from established norms and the narrowness of our own knowledge or learning.

The water changed into wine: Jesus comes into our house to sanctify our daily life – its routine and its chores.

It was thus Jesus manifested his glory to those who were beginning to discover him. Mary had brought grace to John the Baptist (Lk 1:39); again she intervenes to hasten the beginnings of the Gospel. No more will she speak in the Gospel, and her last words are: Do whatever he tells you.

that which is ordinary. You instead have kept the best wine until the end."

¹¹This miraculous sign was the first, and Jesus performed it at Cana in Galilee. In this way he let his Glory appear and his disciples believed in him.

o ¹²After this, Jesus went down to Capernaum with his mother, his brothers and his disciples; and they stayed there for a few days.

Jesus clears the temple

+ ¹³As the Passover of the Jews was at hand, Jesus went up to Jerusalem. ¹⁴In the Temple court he found merchants selling oxen, sheep and doves, and money-changers seated at their tables. ¹⁵Making a whip of cords, he drove them all out of the Temple court, together with the oxen and sheep. He knocked over the tables of the money-changers, scattering the coins. ¹⁶and ordered the people selling doves, "Take all this away and stop turning my Father's house into a marketplace!"

¹⁷ His disciples recalled the words of Scripture: Zeal for your House devours me as a fire.

¹⁸The Jews then questioned Jesus, "Where are the miraculous signs which give you the right to do this?"

¹⁹And Jesus said, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up."

²⁰The Jews then replied, "The building of this temple has already taken forty-six years, and you will raise it up in three days?"

²¹Actually, Jesus was referring to the temple of his body. ²²Only when he had risen from the dead did his disciples remember these words; then they believed both the Scripture and the words Jesus had spoken.

²³Jesus stayed in Jerusalem during the Passover Festival and many believed in his Name when they saw the miraculous signs he performed. ²⁴But Jesus did not trust himself to them, because he knew all of them. ²⁵He didn't need any evidence about anyone for he himself knew what there is in man.

In those first days after John's baptism, Jesus was still sharing with the group of his relatives and townmates whom the gospel calls "his brothers": see commentary on Mk 3:31.

o With the wedding at Cana, the first section of the Gospel we called the Week of Discovery ends. Another section begins in which Jesus defines himself in relation to the Jewish world and their hopes. John presents four scenes:

- Jesus in the Temple: The priests are materialistic, and Jesus judges them severely.
- Jesus and Nicodemus: Nicodemus expresses the concerns of the learned and believing Jewish society.
- the Samaritan Woman: This is the dialogue of Jesus with the townspeople who are believers in their own way.
- Jesus heals the son of an official: Jesus points out that the majority of those who come to him, seek him because of his miracles.

+ Jesus has not yet begun his preaching. He goes to the Temple of Jerusalem which is like the heart of the Jewish nation and the symbol of their religion (Mk 11:12). But the Temple is also the place where corruption and lust for power have taken hold. In the Temple the people have to avail of the priests' services to offer their sacrifices. The priests' authority and power are derived from the Temple. The Temple is the place where the community's offerings and gifts are brought; and there the chief priests dispose of this treasure. Besides this, they also receive the taxes that the seller and money changers pay.

Zeal for your house devours me as a fire, and the insults of those who insult you have fallen on me: This is taken from Psalm 69. Actually, the hatred of the chief priests for Jesus will bring him to his death.

The apostles could not understand these words: for at that time nothing was more sacred to them than the Temple and the Scriptures. But later, they would know that the most ordinary word of Jesus has as much weight as the whole Scriptures. They would also understand that Jesus is the true Temple. Until then, people con-

Jesus and Nicodemus

3 Among the Pharisees there was a ruler of the Jews named Nicodemus.² He came to Jesus at night and said, "Rabbi, we know that you have come from God to teach us, for no one can perform miraculous signs like yours unless God is with him."

³ Jesus replied, "Truly, I say to you, no one can see the kingdom of God unless he is born again from above."

⁴ Nicodemus said, "How can there be rebirth for a grown man? Who could go back to his mother's womb and be born again?" ⁵ Jesus replied, "Truly, I say to you: Unless one is born again of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

⁶ What is born of the flesh is flesh, and what is born of the Spirit is spirit.⁷ Because of this, don't be surprised when I say: 'You must be born again from above.'

⁸ The wind blows where it pleases and you hear its sound, but you don't know where it comes from or where it is going. It is like that with everyone who is born of the Spirit."

⁹ Nicodemus asked again, "How can this be?" ¹⁰ And Jesus answered, "You are a teacher in Israel, and yet you don't know these things!

◆ ¹¹ Truly, I say to you, we speak of what we know and we tell about the things we have seen, but you don't accept our testimony. ¹² If you don't believe when I tell you earthly things, structed temples and looked for places where they could meet God and obtain his favours. Now, God has made himself present in Jesus: it is he who delivers God's riches to us.

■ A NEW BIRTH

Nicodemus was a religious person, concerned about knowing God and his ways, and he went to Jesus as to a teacher of religion. However, what he needed was not so much to receive instruction as to bring about a change within himself. That, too, is what we need. We must recognize our powerlessness – by ourselves, unaided – to pass through the barriers which block us from an authentic life. Like Nicodemus, despite all our accumulated experience and knowledge (or because of them) we are old people.

Jesus says we have to be born again and born from above. Nobody gives birth to himself, and, just as we received our life in the flesh from others, so too, we receive the life of the Son of God from the Spirit.

All say they live: something moves in them, thoughts come to them, and they make decisions . . . Yet, this might be nothing more than the life of the flesh, or life of an unawakened person.

The other life, that of the Spirit, is more mysterious because it takes place in the innermost depths of our being. We see the external appearance; we notice a person's face and behaviour, but we do not see God's working in him. However, the awakened believer who is habitually led by the Spirit gradually discovers changes in what motivates his actions and his ambitions. He feels at ease with God and without fear. He experiences that it is not so much he himself who orients his life, as another who lives in him. Yet, he would not, in fact, be able to say exactly what happens within him.

Hence, Jesus compares the action of the Spirit with the passing of the wind which we feel, although we do not see or hold it. Let us also take note that in Jesus' language the word "breath" means "spirit" as much as "wind".

We have to be reborn of water and of the Spirit: this points to baptism. Let us not think that, merely by receiving the waters of baptism, one is fully established in the life of the Spirit; rather, let us realize that, normally, one is baptized in order to begin in the life of the Spirit: the words of the Gospel refer to adults converted to the Christian faith. The case of infant baptism is different. Baptism works within them. Yet, they should receive instructions about faith to lead them to personal conversion.

Like many in Israel, Nicodemus was a religious person and a believer. Then, why did he come by night? Possibly, he did not want to risk his position and reputation, or mix with the common people around Jesus. This would not be the attitude of those who have been born again: these have been liberated from many things that paralyze others. Such persons meet Jesus with great desire and joy in a Church of the poor.

◆ JESUS REVEALS THE PLAN OF GOD

John's Gospel is different from the other what then, when I tell you heavenly things? ¹³ Yet no one has ever gone up to heaven except the one who came from heaven, the Son of Man.

¹⁴ As Moses lifted up the serpent in the desert, so must the Son of Man be lifted up, ¹⁵ so that whoever believes in him may have eternal life.

¹⁶ Yes, God so loved the world that he gave his only Son that whoever believes in him may not be lost, but may have eternal life. ¹⁷ God did not send the Son into the world to condemn the world; instead, through him the world is to be saved. ¹⁸ Whoever believes in him will not be condemned. He who does not believe is already condemned, because he has not believed in the Name of the only Son of God.

¹⁹ This is how the Judgement is made: Light has come into the world and people loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil.

²⁰ For whoever does wrong hates the light and doesn't come to the light for fear that his deeds will be shown as evil. ²¹ But whoever lives according to the truth comes into the light so that it can be clearly seen that his works have been done in God."

John the Baptist's last testimony

o ²² After this, Jesus went into the territory of Judea with his disciples. He stayed there with them and baptized. ²³ John was also baptizing in Aenon near Salim where water was plentiful; people came to him and three. Often, after relating some words of Jesus, John adds an explanation of the faith, which he supports with declarations that Jesus had made on other occasions. That is what happens here.

How can this be? Nicodemus asked. To enter into the life of the Spirit, we need to know God's plan for us. Yet, no one can speak properly of such things except the Son of God. He has seen heavenly things, that is, the intimate life of God; he also speaks of earthly things, that is of the Kingdom that God brings to us. Many of Jesus' listeners will not accept what he says about the Reign of God: much less, will they pay attention to what he reveals about the mystery of God. Jesus reveals to us that which by ourselves we are unable to know. Thus, a Christian is not one who merely "believes in God"; we are Christians because we believe the testimony of Jesus (11) regarding God and his plan of salvation.

In this plan, there was something very difficult to accept: that the Son of Man would have to die on the cross and resurrect (be lifted on high means as much one as the other). Jesus reminds them of the serpent in the desert. This episode in the Bible (Numbers 21) pre-figured what would happen to Jesus. Of course, the Jews had not grasped the meaning of this message: in fact, they passed over all the predictions of the sufferings of their saviour without understanding them.

They had to change their ideas about something else, also. The Jews had been praying for God to come and expected him to condemn the world and to punish the bad. He, on the other hand, sent his own Son to the cross to save the world.

Other verses of the New Testament say that we should not love the world; this seems to contradict what we have just read: God so loved the world. The reason for this contradiction is that the word world has several meanings.

First, the world means all of creation, which is good since it is God's work. But the center of this divine work is man, who has come under the influence of Satan (8:34 & 44). Everything that the sinful man creates – riches, culture, social life – is influenced, disfigured and used for evil. Hence, God sent His Son to save the world.

And yet, even though Christ's resurrection initiated his invincible power over history, a strong current of evil continues, dragging along all who refuse to acknowledge the truth. This bad current is sometimes called the world. However, it would be more appropriate to say: the people who submit themselves to the Master of the world. The Scripture points to them in saying: Don't love the world, or You are not of the world.

o The Gospel admits that many disciples of John the Baptist did not recognize Jesus. They had been drawn by their teacher's example: he was intense and outspoken, hard on himself in food, drink and clothing. Somehow they had the hope, maybe because of John the Baptist's manner, that God's true justice would come and bring about a direct punishment of the wicked. Like militant followers of whatever good cause, John's disciples had this weakness: they were too focused on their own leaders and ways to consider anything else. To become Christ's dis-were baptized.²⁴ (This happened before John was put in prison.)

²⁵ Now John's disciples had been questioned by a Jew about spiritual cleansing,²⁶ so they came to him and said, "Rabbi, the one who was with you across the Jordan, and about whom you spoke favourably, is now baptizing and all are going to him."

²⁷ John answered, "No one can take on anything if it has not been given him from heaven.²⁸ You yourselves are my witnesses that I said: 'I am not the Christ but I have been sent before him.'²⁹ Only the bridegroom has the bride; but the friend of the bridegroom stands by and listens, and rejoices to hear the bridegroom's voice. My joy is now full.³⁰ It is necessary that he increase but that I decrease.

³¹ He who comes from above is above all; he who comes from the earth belongs to the earth and his words, too, are earthly. The One who comes from heaven³² speaks of the things he has seen and heard; he bears witness to this but no one accepts his testimony.³³ Yet whoever receives his testimony, acknowledges the truthfulness of God;³⁴ for God sent him and he speaks God's words and God gives him the Spirit without measure.

³⁵ The Father loves the Son and has entrusted everything into his hands.³⁶ Whoever believes in the Son lives with eternal life, but he who will not believe in the Son will never know life and always faces the justice of God."

Jesus and the Samaritan woman

+ 4 ¹ The Pharisees heard that Jesus was attracting and baptizing more disciples than John,² although Jesus himself did not baptize; but only his disciples.³ When Jesus became aware of what was being said, he left Judea and returned to Galilee.⁴ He had to cross Samaria.

⁵ He came to a Samaritan town called Sychar, near the land that Jacob had given to his son Joseph.⁶ Jacob's well is there. Tired from his journey, Jesus sat down by the well; it was about noon.⁷ Now a Samaritan woman came to draw water and Jesus said to her, "Give me a drink."⁸ His ciples, they would have to give up their own prophets.

It is necessary that he increase but that I decrease, says the greatest of the prophets. Only Jesus comes from On High, and can fully satisfy the human heart. In him nothing of the good is lost, since he embodies all.

Always faces the justice of God (36). Those who do not recognize the Son of God remain in the situation humanity was in when expelled from Paradise. They cannot solve the contradictions in their life or in the world in which they live; and they cannot but mistrust God. To them is hidden the merciful Face who could give them peace.

+ RIVERS OF LIVING WATER

The Jews hated the Samaritans. Besides this, talking with any woman in a public place was looked upon with disapproval in Jewish culture at that time. Jesus, overcoming racial and social prejudices, began to talk with a Samaritan woman. In the person of this woman, he met the common people of Palestine. The woman was from a different province and belonged to a rival cult, but both shared the same promises of God and both were waiting for a Saviour.

The first concern of the woman was to quench her thirst. The ancestors of the Jewish people walked with their flocks from one water source to another. The most famous Jews (like Jacob) had dug wells, and around these wells the desert began to live. This fact was like a parable: people are looking everywhere for something to quench their thirst; but, they are condemned to find nothing but stagnant waters. Those who make tanks to preserve water find that these become cracked (see Gen 26). Jesus brings the living water, which is God's gift to us, his children: the gift of the Holy Spirit (7:37).

When there is water in the desert, although it does not surface, it is noticeable because of the more verdant vegetation. The same happens with us when we truly live: our actions better, our decisions more free, our thoughts more directed towards the essential. But the living water from disciples had just gone into town to buy some food.

⁹The Samaritan woman said to him, "How is it that you, a Jew, ask me, a Samaritan and a woman, for a drink?" (For Jews, in fact, have no dealings with Samaritans.) ¹⁰Jesus replied, "If you only knew the Gift of God! If you knew who it is that asks you for a drink, you yourself would have asked me and I would have given you living water."

¹¹The woman answered, "Sir, you have no bucket and this well is deep; where is your living water? ¹²Are you greater than our ancestor Jacob, who gave us this well after he drank from it himself, together with his sons and his cattle?"

¹³Jesus said to her, "Whoever drinks of this water will be thirsty again; ¹⁴but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give will never be thirsty; for the water that I shall give will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life."

¹⁵The woman said to him, "Give me this water, that I may never be thirsty and never have to come here to draw water." ¹⁶Jesus said, "Go, call your husband and come back here."

¹⁷The woman answered, "I have no husband." And Jesus replied, "You are right to say: 'I have no husband'; ¹⁸for you have had five husbands and the one you have now is not your husband. What you said is true."

¹⁹The woman then said to him, "I see you are a prophet; tell me this: ²⁰Our fathers used to come to this mountain to worship God; but you Jews, do you not claim that Jerusalem is the only place to worship God?"

²¹Jesus said to her, "Believe me, woman, the hour is coming when you shall worship the Father, but that will not be on this mountain or in Jerusalem. ²²You Samaritans worship without knowledge, while we Jews worship with knowledge, for salvation comes from the Jews. ²³But the hour is coming and is even now here, when the true worshippers will worship the Father in spirit and truth; which all these fruits flow is not seen: this is eternal life, against which death can do nothing.

The second concern of the woman was to know: Where is truth to be found? Jesus tells her: You have had five husbands . . . This symbolizes the common destiny of the townspeople who have served many masters of "husbands" and in the end, do not have anyone whom they recognize as their Lord. And to begin with, what is the true religion?

The Samaritans had their Bible, somewhat different from that of the Jews and, in the town itself, a few kilometers from the Well of Sichar, was their Temple, which rivalled that of Jerusalem. Jesus maintains that the Jewish religion is the true one: Salvation comes from the Jews. In this he does not share the position of those who say: "It matters little what Church we belong to, since it is the same for all." Nevertheless, although one has the good fortune of following the true religion, he has to reach to the spiritual knowledge of God (23). The Spirit, whom we receive, helps us worship God according to the truth. The Father seeks such worshippers who enter into intimate personal contact with Him.

Spirit and truth (24). God does not need our prayers, but looks for simplicity, beauty and nobility in our spirit. The Spirit of God cannot be communicated except to those who seek the truth and live according to truth in a world of deception.

In the final analysis, the Samaritan woman's account is a parable of our own lives. Each one of us is the Samaritan woman. What happened at the well of Jacob describes our own encounter with Jesus: the ways by which Jesus led the woman to recognize and love him are the ways by which Jesus, step-by-step, accomplishes our own conversion. In the end, the woman became Jesus' disciple, and through this very experience, she also became Jesus' apostle: "Many in that town believed in Jesus because of the woman" (v. 39). This Jesus experience is the source of the apostolate. To evangelize is to share this experience with others.

Four more months . . . (35) like the harvest, the people who follow Jesus are also maturing. People who reap the harvest are paid for their work: Jesus and his own are aware that they do not work in vain. Others have worked: Jesus refers to those who came before him, and, especially to John the Baptist.

for that is the kind of worship the Father wants. ²⁴God is spirit and those who worship God must worship in spirit and truth."

²⁵The woman said to him, "I know that the Messiah, that is the Christ, is coming; when he comes, he will tell us everything." ²⁶And Jesus said, "I who am talking to you, I am he."

²⁷At this point the disciples returned and were surprised that Jesus was speaking with a woman; however, no one said, "What do you want?" or: "Why are you talking with her?" ²⁸So the woman left her water jar and ran to the town. There she said to the people, ²⁹"Come and see a man who told me everything I did! Could he not be the Christ?" ³⁰So they left the town and went to meet him.

³¹In the meantime the disciples urged Jesus, "Master, eat." ³²But he said to them, "I have food to eat that you don't know about." ³³And the disciples wondered, "Has anyone brought him food?" ³⁴Jesus said to them, "My food is to do the will of the One who sent me and to carry out his work."

³⁵You say that in four more months it will be the harvest; now, I say to you, raise your eyes and see the fields white and ready for harvesting. ³⁶People who reap the harvest are paid for their work, and the fruit is gathered for eternal life, so that sower and reaper may rejoice together.

³⁷See the saying holds true: 'One sows and another reaps.' ³⁸I sent you to reap where you didn't work or suffer; others have worked and you are now sharing in their labours."

³⁹In that town many Samaritans believed in him when they heard the woman who declared, "He told me everything I did." ⁴⁰So, when they came to him, they asked him to stay with them and Jesus stayed there two days. ⁴¹After that many more believed because of his own words ⁴²and they said to the woman, "We no longer believe because of what you told us; for we have heard for ourselves and we know that this is the Saviour of the world."

⁴³When the two days were over, Jesus left for Galilee. ⁴⁴Jesus himself said that no prophet is recognized in his own country. ⁴⁵Yet the Galileans welcomed him when he arrived, because of all the things he had done in Jerusalem during the Festival and which they had seen. For they, too, had gone to the feast.

Jesus cures the son of an official

■ ⁴⁶Jesus went back to Cana of Galilee where he had changed the water into wine. At Capernaum there was an official whose son was ill, ⁴⁷and when he heard that Jesus had come from Judea to Galilee, he went and asked him to come and heal his son, for he was at the point of death.

⁴⁸Jesus said, "Unless you see signs and wonders, you will not believe!" ⁴⁹The official said, "Sir, come down

Unless you see signs and wonders, you will not believe. Jesus' reproach is directed, not to the official who will later show such great faith, but to the Jews and to us. While Jesus works miracles which confirm his mission, he also stresses that we should recognize him with only seeing and hearing him. Do lovers demand miracles in order to trust one another? Do those who follow some leaders demand absolute proofs? If we are children of truth, we ought to recognize it when it is presented to us.

Jesus' second miracle in Cana concludes this second part of the Gospel in which Jesus defines himself in relation to Jewish society and its hopes.

before my child dies." ⁵⁰ And Jesus replied, "Go, your son is living."

The man had faith in the word that Jesus spoke to him and went his way.

⁵¹ He was already going down the hilly road when his servants met him with this news, "Your son has recovered!" ⁵² So he asked them at what hour the child had begun to recover and they said to him, "The fever left him yesterday in the afternoon about one o'clock." ⁵³ And the father realized that it was the time when Jesus told him, "Your son is living." And he became a believer, he and all his family.

⁵⁴ Jesus performed this second miraculous sign when he returned from Judea to Galilee.

The paralytic at the pool of Bethzatha

5 ¹ After this there was a feast of the Jews and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. ² Now, by the Sheep Gate in Jerusalem, there is a pool (called Bethzatha in Hebrew) surrounded by five galleries. ³ In these galleries lay a multitude of sick people – blind, lame and paralyzed – ⁴ waiting for the water to move. For at times an angel of the Lord would have a swim into the pool and stir up the water; and the first person to enter after this movement of the water would be healed of whatever disease he had.

⁵ There was a man who had been sick for thirty-eight years. ⁶ Jesus saw him and since he knew how long this man had been lying there, he said to him, "Do you want to be healed?" ⁷ And the sick man answered, "Sir, I have no one to put me into the pool when the water is disturbed; so while I am still on the way, another steps down before me."

⁸ Jesus then said to him, "Rise, take up your mat and walk." ⁹ And at once the man was healed, and he took up his mat and walked.

Now that day happened to be the sabbath. ¹⁰ So the Jews said to the man who had just been healed, "It is the sabbath and the Law doesn't allow you to carry your mat." ¹¹ He answered them, "The one who healed me said to

Now begins a new section: Jesus proclaims the work for which he has come into this world. His Father has sent him to judge and to give life. But we must first believe in the Messenger of God. This is treated in Chapters 5 and 6.

◆ Why did Jesus go to the Pool of Bethzatha? It has been proved that the said pool was a pagan place dedicated to Aesculapius, the god of health. Rumors were flying that from time to time the sick were healed there. The pious Jews, scandalized that healings should occur in a pagan place, maintained that people were healed not by Aesculapius but by an angel of the Lord. Unscrupulous Jews went there to seek a cure even from pagan idols. Jesus, too, went there, but in search of the sinner he wished to save.

Note the sick man's first response. In this miraculous place, many hoped for a cure but few were healed. By himself alone – I have no one – man cannot be saved. He needs a Saviour. He needs Jesus.

Jesus disappears after the miracle. Some people might have said that he was at ease in a pagan temple, or think he healed the sick in the name of their gods. Jesus will make himself known in the Temple of the true God, his Father.

The Jews attacked Jesus because he "worked" on the sabbath day. Let us examine Jesus' reply more closely: My Father goes on working. It is well that people observe a day of rest to pay homage to God; yet, God himself does not rest, nor is he absent from the world: he gives life to people. Being God-the-Son, Jesus should imitate God the Father instead of resting like people do. His enemies, on hearing him, were not mistaken about his claims: they wanted to kill him because he made himself equal with God (v. 18).

Don't sin again... Jesus reminds the sick man of his lack of faith that led him to the pagan sanctuary where he waited in vain for 38 years, just as in former times the Israelites had remained secluded 38 years in the oasis of Kadesh in the desert, without being able to enter the Promised Land. John noted this coincidence. He also understood that the cure in the pool represented baptism. Jesus' remark to the healed person is addressed to those who have been converted and baptized: Don't sin again.

me: Take up your mat and walk."¹² They asked him, "Who is the one who said to you: Take up your mat and walk?"¹³ But the sick man had no idea who it was who had cured him, for Jesus had slipped away among the crowd that filled the place.

¹⁴ Afterwards Jesus found him in the Temple court and told him, "Now you are well; don't sin again lest something worse happen to you."¹⁵ And the man went back and told the Jews that it was Jesus who had healed him. ¹⁶ So the Jews persecuted Jesus because he performed healings like this on the sabbath.

¹⁷ Jesus replied, "My Father goes on working and so do I." ¹⁸ And the Jews wished all the harder to kill him, for Jesus not only broke the sabbath observance, but also made himself equal with God, calling him his own Father.

The work of the Son is to revive the dead

o ¹⁹ Jesus said to them, "Truly, I assure you, the Son cannot do anything by himself, but only what he sees the Father does. And whatever he does, the Son also does. ²⁰ The Father loves the Son and shows him everything he does; and he will show him even greater things than these, so that you will be amazed.

²¹ As the Father raises the dead and gives them life, so the Son gives life to whom he wills. ²² In the same way the Father judges no one, for he has entrusted to the Son all judgement, ²³ and he wants all to honour the Son as they honour the Father. Whoever ignores the Son, ignores as well the Father who sent him.

²⁴ Truly, I say to you, he who hears my word and believes him who sent me, has eternal life; and there is no

After this account the Christian faith is presented again (see commentary on John 3:11).

It should be mentioned that in these "discourses" John the Evangelist likes to repeat key words of the discourses seven times. Here, for example, we find the word sabbath, Jesus, and Moses seven times each; and the Father 14 times. So we must understand that John wants to oppose the Jewish religion instituted by Moses whose major precept was the rest on the Sabbath, and that of the new times which Jesus came to inaugurate wherein he enables us to know the Father.

o THE SON AND THE FATHER. THE RESURRECTION

Jesus' opponents were surprised to see how he violated the law of the sacred rest: this, however, was only the first intervention of Jesus (7:21). Jesus intends to do much more than just reform the religion: he has come to renew the whole of creation.

The books of the Old Testament spoke of God as only one. But now Jesus shows us a new face of God: He is Father and he has sent his Son to complete his work. In all that he does, God endeavors to give us life, and the greatest of his works is the Resurrection.

"To resurrect" does not mean "to return to life" but to begin a new and transformed life. The dead will rise again, of course, but we can also speak of the resurrection in the lives of those who become believers. A word of Jesus accepted in faith gives us life and later takes root in us and transforms us. Together, the Father and Son raise us to new life. God's love, which engenders life, reaches us through the voice of Christ (v. 25).

Jesus, then is not a man like us. Though human, he is also divine and reveals to us another face of God. Jesus wants to erase from our minds any image of God as a jealous or paternalistic God. The Gospel shows the Father giving all his authority to a man, to Christ. This resonates with modern psychology which teaches that a person is not fully adult until he liberates himself from parental authority. Our contemporary world rightly rejects a paternalistic God.

On numerous occasions, Jesus called himself the Son of Man (See the explanation in Mk 8:27). But here John says a son of man (v. 27): and that is a Jewish idiom which means a human being. By being human, Jesus saves humanity from within.

When Jesus claims to be the Son, he repeats these two affirmations in various ways:

- everything that my Father does, I do: all that the Father has, I have.
 - and: I cannot do anything by myself.
- In this way, Jesus is a model for the children judgement for him because he has passed from death to life.

²⁵ Truly, the hour is coming and has indeed come, when the dead will hear the voice of the Son of God and, on hearing it, will live. ²⁶ For the Father has life in himself and he has given to the Son also to have life in himself. ²⁷ And he has empowered him as well to carry out Judgement, for he is a son of man.

²⁸ Do not be surprised at this: the hour is coming when all those lying in tombs will hear my voice ²⁹ and come out; those who have done good shall rise to live, and those who have done evil will rise to be condemned.

+ ³⁰ I can do nothing of myself, and I need to hear Another One to judge; and my judgement is just, because I seek not my own will, but the will of him who sent me.

³¹ If I bore witness to myself, my testimony would be worthless. ³² But Another One is bearing witness to me and I know that his testimony of me is true. ³³ John also bore witness to the truth when you sent messengers to him, ³⁴ but I do not seek such human testimony; I recall this for you, so that you may be saved.

³⁵ John was a burning and shining lamp and, for a while, you were willing to enjoy his light. ³⁶ But I have greater evidence than that of John – the works which the Father entrusted to me to carry out. The very works I do prove that the Father has sent me. ³⁷ Thus he who bears witness to me is the Father who sent me. You have never heard his voice and have never seen his likeness; ³⁸ then, as long as you do not believe his messenger, his word is not in you.

³⁹ You search in the Scriptures and you think that in them you will find life; yet it is to me that Scripture refers. ⁴⁰ But you refuse to come to me, of God. We also should commune with the Father so that he may teach us his works: there is no Christian life without prayer, that is, without a personal relationship with God.

+ THE TESTIMONY

To gain a direction in life, we need some understanding of the world and humankind. This understanding may come through reason and science, but more often we are influenced and guided by the testimony of others – by their words, attitudes and personal qualities.

It is thus that those in love discover one another, friends accept each other, a career is decided upon, a religious or political commitment is made. It is also thus that the Word of God is discovered. Therefore, Jesus speaks of the testimonies that accredit him:

- his works, that is, his miracles.
- John the Baptist's testimony in pointing him out as the Saviour.
- the words of the Bible that refer to him.

Some people say that since the Bible is the word of God they do not need anything more than that to guide them. But as God spoke through events and through prophets, he continues speaking to us through actual events and through spokespersons of the Spirit in the Church. Jesus rebuked those who believed they possessed the truth just by having the Bible, but did not believe in him whom God had sent them (38).

God instructs us in his way when we listen to what others teach us: in daily life and within the Church we meet certain persons living according to the Spirit whereas others only pretend to be religious and upright persons.

But, how do we distinguish between what is true and what is false? How do we recognize those who speak of God's ways from personal experience? Jesus says that those who love the truth recognize those who speak the truth. Everyone values the testimony of an equal. To recognize the messengers of God, we must be the people who do not look for praise from one another, and thus are not enslaved by false values. Whoever seeks the truth and mercy, will recognize a communication of the Glory of God in the words and actions of God's more humble servants.

It pleases God when we recognize his witnesses. He desires everyone to honour the Son just as his Father does. By believing in his Son, we show ourselves worthy of his trust and thus we become God's children, being open to his life.

that you may live. ⁴¹I am not seeking the praise of men; ⁴²but I have known that love of God is not within you. ⁴³Even though I have come in my Father's name, you do not accept me; but if another comes in his own name, you will accept him. ⁴⁴As long as you seek praise from one another instead of seeking the Glory coming from the only God, how can you believe?

⁴⁵Do not think that I shall accuse you to the Father. Moses himself in whom you placed your hope, accuses you. ⁴⁶If you believed Moses, you would believe me, for he wrote of me. ⁴⁷But if you do not believe what he wrote, how will you believe what I say?

[o7] ¹⁹Moses gave you the Law, didn't he? But none of you keep the Law. Why, then, do you want to kill me?"

²⁰The people replied, "You have a demon; who wants to kill you?"

²¹Jesus said to them, "I performed a single deed, and you are all astounded by it. ²²But remember the circumcision ordered by Moses – actually it was not Moses but the ancestors who began this practice. You circumcise a man even on the sabbath, ²³and you would break the Law if you refused to do so because of the sabbath. How is it, then, that you are indignant with me because I healed the whole person on the sabbath? ²⁴Do not judge by appearances, but according to what is right."

The multiplication of the loaves
(Mk 6:34; Mt 14:13; Lk 9:10)

[#6] ¹After this Jesus went to the other side of the Sea of Galilee, near Tiberias, ²and large crowds followed him because of the miraculous signs they saw when he healed the sick. ³So he went up into the hills and sat down there with his disciples. ⁴Now the Passover, the feast of the Jews, was at hand.

⁵Then lifting up his eyes, Jesus saw the crowds that were coming to him and said to Philip, "Where shall we buy bread so that these people may eat?" ⁶He said this to test Philip, for he himself knew what he was to do. ⁷Philip answered him, "Two hundred silver coins would not buy enough bread for each of them to have a piece."

⁸Then one of the disciples spoke to Jesus. Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, said, ⁹"There is a boy here who has five barley loaves and two fish; but what good are these for so many?"

¹⁰Jesus said, "Make the people sit down." There was plenty of grass there so the people, about five thousand men, sat down to rest. ¹¹Jesus then took the loaves, gave thanks and distributed them to those who were seated. He did the same with the fish and gave them as much as they wanted. ¹²And when they had eaten enough, he told his disciples, "Gather up the pieces left over, that nothing may be lost."

¹³So they gathered them up and filled twelve baskets with bread, that is with pieces of the five barley loaves left by those who had eaten.

¹⁴When the people saw this sign that Jesus had just given, they said, "This is really the Prophet, he who is to come into the world." ¹⁵Jesus realized that they would come and take him by force to make him king; so he fled to the hills by himself.

¹⁶When evening came, the disciples went down to the shore. ¹⁷After a while they got into a boat to make for Capernaum on the other side of the sea for it was now dark and Jesus had not yet come to them. ¹⁸But the sea was getting rough because a strong wind was blowing.

¹⁹They had rowed about three or four miles, when they saw Jesus walking on the sea, and he was drawing near to the boat. They were frightened, ²⁰but he said to them, "It is I; do not be afraid."

²¹They wanted to take him into the boat, but immediately the boat was at the shore to which they were going.

◆ ²²Next day the people who had stayed on the other side realized that only one boat had been there and that Jesus had not entered it with his disciples; rather, the disciples had gone away alone. ²³Bigger boats from Tiberias came near the place where all these people had eaten the bread. ²⁴So, when they saw that neither Jesus nor his disciples were there, they got into the boats and went to Capernaum looking for Jesus.

²⁵When they found him on the other side of the lake, they asked him, "Master, when did you come here?"

²⁶Jesus answered, "Truly, I say to you, you look for me, not because of the signs you have seen, but because you ate bread and were satisfied. ²⁷Work then, not for perishable food, but for the lasting food which gives eternal life. This is the food that the Son of Man gives to you, for the Father's seal has been put on him."

◆ In the following pages John expands Jesus pronouncements in the synagogue of Capernaum. Surely Jesus himself did not develop so fully at that time the doctrine on the Eucharist (vv. 48-58). However, there is no doubt that Jesus expressed himself in a manner which scandalized his hearers. And, what did he say but precisely to affirm that we must go to him for he is the true bread from whom we receive eternal life?

Man strives for his food, and his first pre-occupation is to assure himself for the future, because if he does not eat, he will cease to live. Man does not have life in himself and has to constantly take from another what is necessary to maintain his life. But, in spite of everything, some day, life escapes him, because he has not encountered the lasting food (27).

In fact, man needs much more than bread: beyond eating and drinking, he seeks something that permits him no longer to experience hunger or thirst. We will find this on the day of the Resurrection, in the assembly of all the Saints, in Heaven, where there will be total and perfect peace and unity. That is precisely what the Work of the Son of Man is.

The discourse begins with a question from the Jews: Which are the works that God wants us to do? Jesus replies: The Work that God wants is that you believe. The Father does not demand "works" that is, the observance of a religious law, but rather, faith. In the previous chapter, Jesus declared that his work is to raise people up. Here he indicates our work: to believe in the Messenger of the Father.

The key word of the discourse is bread. That is why John repeats it seven times in each section of this chapter. And the expression who has come down from heaven appears seven times in the chapter.

o Here begins the first part of the discourse: Jesus becomes our bread when we believe in him.

In the past, when the Israelites wandered in the desert and lacked everything, God gave them a provisional meal, the manna. They had to give thanks to him for his gifts. But, if God is only our benefactor and we go to him seeking favours, we will end up concerned only about what God gives us; we will hardly thank him, and later, we will ask and complain again.

believe you. What sign do you perform? ³¹Our fathers ate manna in the desert; as Scripture says: They were given bread from heaven to eat."

³²Jesus then said to them, "Truly, I say to you, it was not Moses who gave you the bread from heaven. My Father gives you the true bread from heaven. ³³The bread God gives is the One who comes from heaven and gives life to the world." ³⁴And they said to him, "Give us this bread always."

³⁵Jesus said to them, "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall never be hungry, and he who believes in me shall never be thirsty. ³⁶Nevertheless, as I said, you refuse to believe, even when you have seen. ³⁷Yet, all that the Father gives me will come to me, and whoever comes to me, I shall not turn away. ³⁸For I have come from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of the One who sent me.

³⁹And the will of him who sent me is that I lose nothing of what he has given me, but instead that I raise it up on the last day. ⁴⁰This is the will of the Father, that whoever sees the Son and believes in him shall live with eternal life; and I will raise him up on the last day."

⁴¹The Jews murmured because Jesus had said, "I am the bread which comes from heaven." ⁴²And they said, "This man is the son of Joseph, isn't he? We know his father and mother. How can he say that he has come from heaven?"

⁴³Jesus answered them, "Do not murmur among yourselves. ⁴⁴No one can come to me unless he is drawn by the Father who sent me; and I will raise him up on the last day. ⁴⁵It has been written in the Prophets: They shall all be taught by God. So whoever listens and learns from the Father comes to me.

⁴⁶For no one has seen the Father except the One who comes from God; he has seen the Father. ⁴⁷Truly, I say to you, he who believes has eternal life.

	46. Jn 1, 18; 7, 29

This was what happened with the Israelites who, after receiving the manna, rebelled against God and died in the desert. Material things, although they may come from heaven, do not make us better nor do they give us true life.

For this reason, God now proposes something new. The bread that comes down from heaven, is not something, but someone, and that is Christ. That true bread communicates eternal life to us, but to receive it, it is necessary to take a step, that is, to believe in Christ and to make a personal commitment to him.

All that the Father gives me will come to me (v. 37). Not all those who take pride in belonging to the true religion come to Christ, but only those whom the Father knows. Though the church embraces many peoples of all descriptions, only those to whom the Father has given this grace will find their way to the controversial and humble Christ. While acknowledging the value of the sacraments and good works, we should not forget what Jesus taught: none of our own efforts can substitute for the grace of being chosen by the Father who calls us to know his Son in truth.

This man is the son of Joseph (v. 42). Jesus' listeners were Jews who believed in God and in the Scriptures. To believe in the prophets who were honoured after their death was easy; but to recognize God's contemporary and controversial messengers, especially when the messenger of God was a simple carpenter was another thing. This is equally true today, for we must overcome doubts and listen to God's messengers who point out the mission of the Church in today's world. There are many who believe in the Bible or in Christ but refuse to listen to the Church, especially when it speaks through Christians and religious belonging to the world of the poor and of workers.

Do not murmur (v. 43). The Bible uses the verb "to murmur" in Exodus: the Israelites distrusted God and constantly criticized Moses' decisions (Ex 15:24; 16:2; 17:3).

+ THE COMMUNION - THE SACRAMENTS

The second part of the discourse: Jesus becomes our bread when we eat his body in the sacrament of the Eucharist.

The body of Christ, bread of life

+ ⁴⁸ I am the bread of life. ⁴⁹ Though your ancestors ate the manna in the desert, they died. ⁵⁰ But here you have the bread which comes from heaven so that you may eat of it and not die.

⁵¹ I am the living bread which has come from heaven; whoever eats of this bread will live forever. The bread I shall give is my flesh and I will give it for the life of the world."

⁵² The Jews were arguing among themselves, "How can this man give us flesh to eat?" ⁵³ So Jesus replied, "Truly, I say to you, if you do not eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, you have no life in you. ⁵⁴ He who eats my flesh and drinks my blood lives with eternal life and I will raise him up on the last day.

⁵⁵ My flesh is really food and my blood is drink. ⁵⁶ He who eats my flesh and drinks my blood, lives in me and

I in him. ⁵⁷ Just as the Father, who is life, sent me and I have life from the Father, so he who eats me will have life from me. ⁵⁸ This is the bread which came from Heaven; unlike that of your ancestors, who ate and later died. He who eats this bread will live forever."

⁵⁹ Thus did Jesus speak in Capernaum when he taught them in the synagogue.

Will you also go away?

■ ⁶⁰ After hearing this, many of Jesus' followers said, "This sort of teaching is very hard! Who can accept it?"

⁶¹ Jesus was aware that his disciples were murmuring about this and so he said to them, "Does this offend you? ⁶² Then, how will you react when you see the Son of Man ascending to where he was before? ⁶³ It is the spirit

50. Num 14, 29 56. 15, 4 60. Lk 4, 22 61. 6, 41 63. 3, 11; 2 Cor 3, 6; Gal 6, 8; 1 Cor 15, 45

How can he give us flesh to eat? (v. 52). Thus spoke the Israelites who distrusted God in the desert (Num 11: 4 & 18). But John plays with the same words and gives them a different meaning here: why would a messenger from heaven give flesh to the world, when what we need is something spiritual? Jesus answers in verse 63: this flesh to eat may sound like food for bodily sustenance, but it is really the sharing of the life of the risen Christ transformed by the Spirit. For that reason it gives life (6:63).

Through materials means, the believer participates in a heavenly reality and enters into communion with the risen Christ. The Church defines sacrament as something material that symbolizes and brings about a spiritual reality. When we faithfully participate in a sacrament, we encounter the living Christ in person renewing our lives. In the Supper of the Lord, that is in the Mass, we really receive the body and blood of Christ in what appears to be only bread and wine. The risen Christ becomes for us the food of eternal life.

Jesus acts as living bread in us. When we eat ordinary bread our body digests and assimilates it, but when we eat living bread (the body of Christ), this bread actively changes us. Christ transforms us: gives his life to us and unites us with his life: Whoever eats me, will have life in me.

The Gospel makes clear that Jesus' promise was not understood, and was rejected. Let us remember that at that time, the Jews were used to having "religious banquets" and they would eat the meat that had been offered as sacrifice in the Temple.

Why should we eat the body of Christ? We do this because we are body and blood, not angels, and as humans everything we receive or give must be transmitted through the body.

But regarding this means of Jesus' life being transmitted to us, we are not easily convinced. We often wonder at Jesus' words: he who eats my flesh has life, he who does not... We need to study the parables on the Kingdom of God more closely. The gift of God, whether it be his word or the Body of Christ, is a seed so small that it may be lost or may not bear fruit. It is fruitful only in those who believe and persevere.

The sacraments we receive help us mature in the life of God: they affect the very core of our being. Sometimes we feel discouraged about the many defects and prejudices we still have despite our reception of the sacraments. We do not understand that transformation is something deep and often not immediately evident.

■ This language is very hard. How could Jesus' listeners believe that he, the "son of Joseph", had come from God? And today how can we believe that we need the Eucharist? Jesus tells us why he came: The Son of God came down to us so that later he would ascend to where he was before. He came from God to that gives life; the flesh cannot help. The words that I have spoken to you are spirit and they are life. ⁶⁴Yet among you there are some who do not believe."

From the beginning, Jesus knew who would betray him. ⁶⁵So he added, "As I have told you, no one can come to me unless it is given to him by the Father."

⁶⁶After this many disciples withdrew and no longer followed him. ⁶⁷Jesus asked the Twelve, "Will you also go away?" ⁶⁸Peter answered him, "Lord, to whom shall we go? You have the words of eternal life. ⁶⁹We have come to believe and now we know that you are the Holy One of God."

⁷⁰Jesus said to them, "I chose you, the Twelve, did I not? Yet one of you is a devil." ⁷¹Jesus spoke of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon. He, one of the Twelve, was to betray him.

Jesus goes up to Jerusalem

◆ ⁷After this Jesus went around Galilee; he would not go about in Judea because the Jews wanted to kill him. ²Now the Jewish feast of the Tents was at hand. ³So the brothers of Jesus said to him, "Don't stay here; go instead to Judea and let your disciples see the works you are doing. ⁴Anyone who wants to be known doesn't work secretly. Since you are able to do these things, show yourself to the world."

⁵His brothers spoke like this because they didn't believe in him. ⁶Jesus said to them, "My time has not yet come, but your time is always here."

⁷The world cannot hate you; but it hates me because I bear witness and I show that its deeds are evil. ⁸Go up to the feast! I am not going to this feast, because my time has not yet come."

⁹Jesus spoke like this and remained in Galilee. ¹⁰But after his brothers had gone to the festival, he communicate to us the very life of God and to bring us to the bosom of God (Jn 14:12).

The truth is that by Christ's resurrection, our world has started its renewal. For when the Son of Man entered the Glory of his Father, he carried on his shoulders the whole of creation which he wanted to renew and consecrate. Clothed in our humanity the Son of God has ascended to where he was before: the first of our race has achieved full union with God.

Although, to all appearances life goes on as before, we should believe that the renewed world has been made present. The Spirit is at work within gigantic disturbances which continually agitate and shake the whole of humanity. Invincibly, Christ is consecrating this world. He enables humanity to arrive at maturity by means of innumerable crises and deaths that prepare for a resurrection.

Jesus' listeners could not understand (6:61) the mystery of the Son of God and his humiliations. Jesus wanted to dispossess himself of his divine glory by becoming man and dying like a slave (see Jn 1:14 and Phil 2:6), so that later the Father would enable him to ascend where he came from. It is likewise a test of our faith to believe that God continually works among us in our world. In spite of the unresponsiveness of people, God still loves us; the Church is so unworthy, yet God uses it to fulfill his plan; history is so conflictive and destructive, yet it is preparing us for the fullness of the Kingdom.

The flesh cannot help (63). Jesus spoke of giving us his flesh, but this should not be understood as a continuation of the Jewish religion in which the meat of sacrificed animals was eaten. In Hebrew culture, flesh and blood denote "the world below" where humankind move and where one has no access to communication with God. The Eucharist is different. This is the body or flesh of the risen Christ transformed by the Spirit which acts in us spiritually and brings us into communion with God.

Lord, to whom shall we go? Many of Jesus' followers left, but in the name of those who remained Peter pledged his fidelity (cf also Mt 16:13).

◆ Jesus moves people to question his identity. It is better to question than to belong to a group which does not question because they think they already know. The brothers of Jesus were like that.

Show yourself to the world (3 & 4). These brothers of Jesus were the families and townspeople of Nazareth (see Mk 3:31). These people were to enter the Church after Jesus' resurrection and then they would believe themselves important merely because of their former association with Jesus; but at that time they were still also went up, not publicly but in secret. ¹¹The Jews were looking for him at the festival and asked, "Where is he?" ¹²There was a lot of talk about him among the people. Some said, "He is a good man," but others replied, "No, he is misleading the people." ¹³Yet for fear of the Jews no one spoke openly about him.

¹⁴When the festival was half over, Jesus went to the Temple and began to teach. ¹⁵The Jews marvelled and said, "How is it that he speaks with so much learning when he has had no teacher?"

¹⁶And Jesus answered them, "My teaching is not mine, but it comes from the One who sent me. ¹⁷Anyone who does the will of God shall know whether my teaching is from God or if I speak on my own authority.

¹⁸He who speaks on his own authority wishes to gain honour for himself. But he who wants to give glory to him who sent him is truthful and there is no reason to doubt him."

v. 19-24 have been placed after chapter 5. See footnote there.

o ²⁵Some of the people of Jerusalem said, "Is this not the man they want to kill?" ²⁶And here he is speaking freely, and they don't say a word to him? Can it be that the rulers know that this is really the Christ? ²⁷Yet, we know where this man comes from; but when the Christ appears, no one will know where he comes from."

²⁸So Jesus announced in a loud voice in the Temple court where he was teaching, "You say that you know me and know where I come from! I have not come of myself; I was sent by the One who is true, and you don't know him. ²⁹I know him for I come from him and he sent me."

³⁰They would have arrested him, but no one laid hands on him because his time had not yet come. ³¹Many very far from understanding his mission. They wanted Jesus to be known for his miracles; but Jesus chose, rather, to reveal himself to those who could enter into the mystery of death which leads to glory.

My time has not yet come. ... Let us note here two types of persons: one type live according to their plans, and the other type allow themselves to be guided by the Spirit. The former have no time; because they have no experience of the calling of God, they act impetuously, and when they feel like it. But those who are guided by the Spirit wait for signs indicating that this is God's time. Whatever is undertaken in God's time will bring glory to God.

THE JEWS

Like Jesus, John was a Jew. He was surrounded by Jews converted to the Christian faith. However, he consistently calls his unbelieving compatriots Jews. He does exactly what some do when they say "Catholics" or "Christians" to denote persons who make a show of being Catholic, but show little concern for interiorizing the Gospel.

John calls Jews those who feel secure about having the true religion but have hard hearts, closed to all that is noble and true. They confuse faith with fanaticism. They are incapable of listening to and dialoguing with those who do not share their viewpoints, and they consider nothing as evil if they think it serves the interests of their group.

Those Jews adhered to an established social order and to a certain manner of understanding life and religion that was common in their time. It was social and religious formalities that were important to them; they were interested in God only in the measure to which they had made him the defender of these things (Mt 6:23, 29).

o SALVATION · SEEKING THE TRUTH

Who is Jesus? It is very important for us to know who Jesus is and from whence he comes because, unlike the founders of other religions, he offers us the unheard of gift of sharing in God's very life. But if Jesus does not come from God, of what value is this promise?

We need to discover for ourselves who Jesus is, because it is thus we will be saved.

As a person he attracts us, but his words shock us. When Jesus proclaims that the world is already saved, that we have already risen and are sons and daughters of God, we think that he uses figures of speech since the reality appears to be so different. But in time, with more experience and suffering, we modify our viewpoint and discover that the world and people are just as he describes them. We then acknowledge people in the crowd, however, believed in him and said, "When the Christ comes, will he give more signs than this man does?"

³²The Pharisees heard all these rumors among the people; so the Pharisees and chief priests sent officers of the temple to arrest him. ³³Jesus then said, "I shall be with you a little longer; after that I shall go to him who sent me. ³⁴You will look for me and you will not find me. Where I am you cannot come."

³⁵The Jews said to one another, "Where does this man intend to go that we shall not find him? Will he go abroad to the Jews dispersed among the Greek nations and teach the Greeks also? ³⁶What does he mean when he says: 'You will look for me and not find me', and: 'Where I am going you cannot come'?"

The promise of living water

+ ³⁷On the last and greatest day of the festival, Jesus stood up and proclaimed, "If anyone is thirsty, let him come to me; ³⁸and let him who believes in me drink, for the Scripture says: Out of him shall flow rivers of living water."

³⁹Jesus was referring to the Spirit which those who believe in him were to receive; the Spirit had not yet been given because Jesus had not yet entered into his Glory.

Dispute on the origin of Christ

⁴⁰Many who had been listening to these words began to say, "This is the Prophet." ⁴¹Others said, "This is the Christ." But some wondered, "Would the Christ come from Galilee? ⁴²Doesn't Scripture say that the Christ him as Saviour; but also in a different way, we are saved because we have acquired the capacity to see things as God does. Hence, when we wish to help others arrive at faith, it is better at times to refrain from discussions about religion. They are those who must first dig into themselves to discover the wellspring of life. One cannot advance in the knowledge of Christ without advancing in knowledge of oneself.

We know where he comes from (v. 27). So, these Jews thought they knew who God was and what his plans were; but in reality, they interpreted everything according to their own views and remained closed to the Truth. Standing before them, Jesus claimed to be the Envoy of God. On speaking like this he was not looking for a title to become credible, but wanted to emphasize his total dependence on the Father and his intimate knowledge of him.

You will look for me and not find me (v. 34). This is the same warning God gave through earlier prophets (Jer 13:16). Once again, Jesus applies to himself scriptural words and prerogatives reserved for God.

+ THE COMMUNICATION OF THE SPIRIT

Spirit had not yet been given. In Wisdom 1:7, however, we read, "the Spirit of God fills the universe." Actually God never ceased communicating himself. His Spirit slips into man's spirit whom he awakens, animates and impels. At all times he has been active in the artists, thinkers and heroes, and he was also present in the spirit of people of upright heart.

But the Spirit is not poured out like water. The Spirit of God becomes one with the spirit of the one who receives him. As long as we do not know God in truth, the Spirit comes "over" us, as happened with the liberators of Israel who did not necessarily become better for having been the instrument of God (Jdg 11:27). Only after Jesus had entered into his Glory, could he give his Spirit to those who should unite with him.

Spirit had not been given. Many manuscripts read: There was no Spirit. This sounds strange to believers who consider the spirit to be a divine Person. Of course, the Spirit is as much person and as much God, as the Father and the Son are but the Spirit's manner of being God and person, and One is not the same. The Spirit is "communication of God dispensed" to all creatures through all times. He is somehow able to divide himself, dwelling in each creature with different gifts; then he brings them back to unity in God. Because of this, Scripture says sometimes: "the Spirit," at other times: "spirit" (1k 1:15; Acts 6:3), or even: "the spirits" (Rev 1:4; 3:1).

Out of him shall flow rivers of living water. Compare 4:10. Bread and water: the Body of Christ and the gift of the Holy Spirit. In 7:38 we read: Out of him shall flow rivers of living water.

is a descendant of David and from Bethlehem."⁴³ So the crowd was divided over him. ⁴⁴Some wanted to arrest him, but no one laid hands on him.

⁴⁵The officers of the Temple went back to the chief priests who asked them, "Why didn't you bring him?"

⁴⁶The officers answered, "No one ever spoke like this man." ⁴⁷The Pharisees then said, "So you, too, have been led astray! ⁴⁸Have any of the rulers or any of the Pharisees believed in him? ⁴⁹Only these cursed people, who have no knowledge of the Law!"

⁵⁰Yet one of them, Nicodemus, who had gone to Jesus earlier, spoke out, ⁵¹"Does our law condemn a man without first hearing him and knowing the facts?" ⁵²They replied, "Do you, too, come from Galilee? Look it up and see for yourself that no prophet is to come from Galilee."

⁵³And they all went home.

The adulteress

8 ¹As for Jesus, he went to the Mount of Olives.

²At daybreak Jesus appeared in the Temple again. All the people came to him, and he sat down and began to teach them.

³Then the teachers of the Law and the Pharisees brought in a woman who had been caught in the act of adultery. They made her stand in front of everyone. ⁴"Master," they said, "this woman has been caught in the act of adultery. ⁵Now the Law of Moses orders that such women be stoned to death; but you, what do you say?" ⁶They said this to test Jesus, so they could have some charge against him.

Jesus bent down and started writing on the ground with his finger. ⁷And as they continued to ask him, he straightened up and said to them, "Let the man among you who has no sin be the first to throw a stone at her." ⁸And he bent down again, writing on the ground.

⁹As a result of these words, they went away, one by one, starting with the oldest, and Jesus was left alone with the woman standing before him.

¹⁰Then Jesus straightened up and said to her, "Woman, where are they? Has no one condemned you?" "She replied, "No one." And Jesus said, "Neither do I condemn you; go away and don't sin again."

■ The selection 8:1-11 is not found in the most ancient manuscripts of John's gospel. However, the style and vocabulary of this paragraph are very characteristic of John. Many think that this selection is from other sources. But it could also be from the gospel edited by John: it could have been later suppressed in many copies because the acceptance Jesus showed toward the adulterous woman could have been wrongly interpreted.

If Jesus showed such respect to the sinner and refused to condemn her as humans would, was it because he did not consider her fault grave? No, it was because God uses different means than people do to bring the sinner to repentance and to purify them through suffering.

There is a big difference between telling a person his ideas or deeds are wrong or sinful, and condemning him. We usually condemn the person; we don't make room for change and mercy. In this gospel episode, Jesus is both demanding and merciful towards the woman.

It seems that certain pages in John's gospel have been shifted. We already remarked that the selection 7:19-24 is really a continuation of chapter 5.

Also, the discourse 8:12-29 seems to be a continuation of the miracle story related in Chapter 9. After healing the blind man and proving the spiritual blindness of the Pharisees, Jesus declares: I am the light. Jesus' pronouncement: hence I have just told you that you will die in your sins (8:24), reminds us of the saying in 9:41.

I Am – The light of the world

◆ ¹²Jesus spoke to them again, "I am the Light of the world; he who follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have light and life." ¹³The Pharisees replied, "Now you are speaking on your own behalf, your testimony is worthless."

¹⁴Then Jesus said, "Even though I bear witness to myself, my testimony is true, for I know where I have come from and where I am going. But you do not know where I came from or where I am going."

¹⁵You judge by human standards; as for me, I don't judge anyone. ¹⁶But if I had to judge, my judgement would be valid for I am not alone: the Father who sent me is with me. ¹⁷In your Law it is written that the testimony of two men is valid; ¹⁸so I am bearing witness to myself, and the Father who sent me bears witness to me."

¹⁹They asked him, "Where is your Father?" Jesus answered, "You don't know me or my Father; if you knew me, you would know my Father as well."

²⁰Jesus said these things when he was teaching in the Temple area, in the place where they received their offerings. Yet no one arrested him, because his hour had not yet come.

²¹Again Jesus said to them, "I am going away, and though you look for me, you will die in your sin. Where I am going you cannot come." ²²The Jews wondered, "Why does he say that we can't come where he is going? Will he kill himself?"

²³But Jesus said, "You are from below and I am from above; you are of this world and I am not of this world."

²⁴That is why I told you that you will die in your sins. And you shall die in your sins unless you believe that I am He."

²⁵They asked him, "Who are you?"; and Jesus said, "Just what I have told you from the beginning. ²⁶I have much to say about you and much

◆ THE LIGHT

Jesus is the light for all people of all times. God guided the Hebrews in the desert by means of a luminous cloud. He guides us through his Son: whoever follows Jesus will not walk in darkness.

Light means many good things: the welcome light of dawn after a night of darkness; the electric lights which illumine our homes while darkness reigns outside; the street lights which shine for everyone, poor and rich alike; the light that triumphs over the dark forces of evil and ignorance. Christ is all that, and more for whoever follows him. He is the light by which we live with wholeness and integrity, and through whom we learn to attribute to material things and human activities their proper values.

By the light of Christ a person triumphs over all inner darkness. We are conscious of only a small part of our inner self; while at each moment we obey impulses not under our control which come from our nature. Good intentions animate us, and we have a clean heart (so we think), but we do not realize that actually we often obey the call "of flesh and blood," as the Bible puts it. But if we live in the light, the light will gradually illumine our innermost being.

Part of the human condition aggravated by sin is the absence of light for seeking and discerning what is good. This "spiritual blindness" has to do with our moral judgements. We all have blind spots in our perception of things. Therefore, in serious matters, it is not wise to just follow our first impulse, because we can be mistaken and do wrong not so much out of bad intention, as out of blindness. We need to be continuously enlightened through prayer, listening to the word of God, studying the teaching of the Church, and accepting the good advice of our brothers and sisters. By these means Jesus enlightens our conscience.

I AM

In this discourse Jesus gives witness to his own divinity. He makes us understand that in him there is a mysterious secret regarding his origin. On this page we read the expression I am seven times. John wishes us to understand that this is the key word of the discourse. I AM. It was thus God designated himself, speaking to Moses. We know that the Jews called God, Yahweh, that is, He who is, He who brings everything into existence. But Jesus declares: "I am", thus claim-to condemn; but the One who sent me is truthful and everything I learned from him, I proclaim to the world."

²⁷ They didn't understand that Jesus was speaking to them about the Father. ²⁸ So Jesus said, "When you have lifted up the Son of Man, then you will know that I am He and that I do nothing of myself, but I speak just as the Father taught me. ²⁹ He who sent me is with me and has not left me alone; indeed, I always do what pleases him."

The children of truth

o ³⁰ As Jesus spoke like this, many believed in him. ³¹ Jesus went on to say to the Jews who believed in him: "You will be my true disciples if you keep my word. ³² Then you will know the truth and the truth will make you free." ³³ They answered him, "We are the descendants of Abraham and have never been slaves of anyone. What do you mean by saying: You will be free?"

³⁴ Jesus answered them, "Truly, I say to you, whoever commits sin is a slave. ³⁵ But the slave doesn't stay in the house forever; the son stays forever. ³⁶ So, if the Son makes you free, you will be really free.

³⁷ I know that you are the descendants of Abraham; yet you want to kill me because my word finds no place in you. ³⁸ So, while I speak of what I have seen in the Father's presence, you do what you have learned from your father."

³⁹ They answered him, "Our father is Abraham." Then Jesus said, "If you were Abraham's children, you would do as Abraham did. ⁴⁰ You want to kill me because I am the one who tells you the truth – the truth that I have learned from God. That is not what Abraham did; ⁴¹ but you are doing the works of your father."

ing for himself the Name that should not be given to any creature, no matter how important or prominent the person might be. There are Christians (e.g. the Witnesses of Jehovah) who would make Christ less than he is. They argue that since God is only one, how can the fullness of divine life be shared among three persons. While they call Christ the Son of God, they deny that he is God born of God. But Jesus IS as much as the Father, and must not be confused with the Father, hence he says: The Father sent me, and also: The testimony of two persons is worthy (in the Jewish Law code).

You will die in your sin (21 & 24). Sin is not just doing something bad. Sin is, also, to enclose ourselves in our own petty problems and rely only on human wisdom, without opening ourselves to the horizons of God. The Bible divides people into two groups; those from above, who seek God's ways, and those from below, who seek limited human goals. Sin is to refuse to allow oneself to be born again from above, as Jesus told Nicodemus (3:3). These Jews did not believe in Jesus because his way of life and his message reflected a world of transcendent values – beyond this world – which did not attract them. Jesus would have wasted his time with them; the wisdom of God would be better revealed in his death on the cross (28).

o THE TRUTH - FREEDOM - SIN

Jesus spoke to the Jews who believed in him. Those Jews believed in Jesus according to their own view of him, very much like the Jews whom Paul would combat in Gal 3-4 did. From Jesus' discussions with those who claimed to have the true religion, we can surmise how Jesus would confront many who boast of being Christian or "Catholics", were he to pass among us today.

Jesus would not reproach us so much for our sins, as for our continuing to live in sin. Sins are evil deeds that at times may be excusable; often we repent of them as soon as we have committed them. To be in sin, on the other hand, is to live in falsehood; it is to persist stubbornly in a certain pride, an attachment to our own judgments. This attitude prevents us from entering into the ways of God, even though to all appearances we live an upright life and proclaim our faith.

Jesus is not a banner for any social group, whether known as Catholic, or by some other name, with which we go to fight other groups. He has come as a king of the kingdom of truth. Those who seek the truth are his, whatever their ideas may be. Rather, those who live in truth are his.

For those Jews, the world is divided into two groups: the sons of Abraham, that is them-

The Jews said to him, "We are not illegitimate children; we have one Father, God." ⁴² Jesus replied, "If God were your Father you would love me, for I came forth from God, and I am here. And I didn't come by my own decision, but it was he himself who sent me." ⁴³ Why do you not understand my teaching? It is because you cannot bear my message.

⁴⁴ The father you spring from is the devil and you will carry out the evil wishes of your father, who has been a murderer from the beginning. He didn't uphold the truth for, in him, there is no truth; and now, when he speaks for himself, he lies. He is a liar and the father of lies.

⁴⁵ Now I tell the truth and you don't believe me. ⁴⁶ Which of you could find something false in me? Then, if I am telling the truth, why do you not believe me? ⁴⁷ He who is of God hears the words of God; you don't hear because you are not of God."

⁴⁸ The Jews retorted, "So we are right in saying that you are a Samaritan and are possessed by a demon."

⁴⁹ Jesus said, "I am not possessed, and you try to shame me when I give honour to my Father. ⁵⁰ I don't care about my own glory; there is One who cares for me and he will be the judge.

⁵¹ Truly, I say to you, if anyone keeps my word, he will never experience death." ⁵² The Jews replied, "Now we know that you have a demon. Abraham died and the prophets as well, but you say: 'Whoever keeps my word will never experience death.' Who do you claim to be?" ⁵³ Do you claim to be greater than our father Abraham, who died? And the prophets also died."

⁵⁴ Then Jesus said, "If I would praise myself, it would count for nothing. But he who gives glory to me is the Father, the very One you claim as your God, ⁵⁵ although you don't know him. I know him and if I were to say that I don't know him, I would be a liar like you. But, I know him and I keep his word.

⁵⁶ As for Abraham, your ancestor, he looked forward to the day when I would come; and he rejoiced when he saw it."

⁵⁷ The Jews then said to him, "You are not yet fifty years old and you have seen Abraham?" ⁵⁸ And Jesus selves, and the rest. They boasted of their ancestry and forgot that in God's eyes, each one is what he is.

Jesus comes to them as witness to the truth; and his presence alone obliges all to examine themselves. The truth Jesus speaks of is not a doctrine which his followers should impose by force. Propagandists with arguments and biblical quotations are not needed, but witnesses who speak of their experience. Jesus says: The truth will make you free, and: the Son will make you free (v. 32 & 36). Our truth consists in living in accordance with our vocation as children of God.

The believer who knows he is loved by God and consequently endeavors to be authentic, is already in the truth, even if he keeps several prejudices prevalent in his environment, or unconsciously is guided by some lies or illusions in his way of living.

Jesus also speaks of freedom. Truth and freedom go together. Many individuals and peoples have not spared themselves in efforts to break their chains. But once liberated they quickly fall into other forms of subjugation, because the root of all slavery lies within everyone.

By doing evil, one becomes an accomplice of the Devil, and even without wanting to do so, falls into a trap. He will then be unable to resist the illusions and harmful influences by which the Father of Lies brings the world under his power (v 44).

As long as we continue to be unconcerned about our true condition and are either agitated or idle, we are no more than slaves, even though we may excel in wealth, knowledge or status. We thus add to the population of the world of below, which is unstable. Generations of slaves will follow like the waves of the sea: slaves are people who are for a time in the house (v. 34). But Christ enables us to enter yet another world, the world above in which the sons stay forever (v. 35). From the time we become children of God, everything we do bears fruit for eternity.

said "Truly, I say to you, before Abraham was, I am." ⁵⁹ They then picked up stones to throw at him, but Jesus hid himself and left the Temple.

Jesus heals the man born blind

9 ¹ As Jesus walked along, he saw a man who had been blind from birth. ² His disciples asked him, "Master, if he was born blind because of sin, was it his sin or his parents?"

³ Jesus answered, "Neither this man nor his parents sinned; he was born blind so that God's power might be shown in him. ⁴ While it is day we must do the work of the One who sent me: for the night will come when no one can work. ⁵ As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world."

beggar who used to sit here?" ⁹ Some said, "It's he." Others said, "No, but he looks like him." But the man himself said, "I am the one." ¹⁰ Then they asked, "How is it that your eyes were opened?" ¹¹ And he answered, "The man called Jesus made a mud paste, put it on my eyes and said to me: 'Go to Siloam and wash.' So I went, and washed, and I could see." ¹² They asked, "Where is he?" and the man answered, "I don't know."

¹³ Now it was a sabbath day when Jesus made mud paste and opened the eyes of this blind man. ¹⁴ The people brought the man to the Pharisees ¹⁵ who asked him again, "How did you recover your sight?" And he said once more, "He put paste on my eyes, and I washed and now I see." ¹⁶ Some of the Pharisees said, "This man is not from God, for he works on the sabbath"; but others wondered, "How can a sinner perform such miraculous signs?" So they were divided ¹⁷ and they questioned the blind man again, "What do you think of this man who opened your eyes?" And he answered, "He is a prophet."

¹⁸ After all this, the Jews refused to

+ TO BELIEVE IS TO SEE

Jesus is the light: the blind man sees the light of day. Jesus is the light, but people are divided about him. Some are open to the light, that is, to faith; others remain blind, that is to say, they keep their own ideas and "their own" belief and refuse to believe in the messenger of God.

One way of deepening our understanding of this chapter would be to observe the Jewish people's reactions to the miracle. Some open themselves to the light, that is, to the faith; while others prefer to follow their own lights. This Gospel story shows us the blind man who immediately understands the significance of the cure, the fearful and pragmatic father, and the Pharisees who do nothing but judge and are unaware that they condemn themselves as they judge.

The Gospel opens up to us another way of interpreting the miracle: the man who begins to see is the believer (cf especially v. 4 and 39-41).

Master, was it his sin or his parents? Jesus refuses to consider every disgrace as God's punishment. The healing of the blind man was performed on the sabbath. So people wonder if God will side with the law forbidding work on that day, or with the man who performed such a good work. The Pharisees defend the Law, as is to be expected from people more capable of teaching and judging than of helping the distressed.

You don't know where the man comes from? Who live in such a way that they are able to receive the truth? It is quite understandable that the Pharisees cast out the blind man, because faith in Christ necessarily separates the believer from those who don't recognize the way God is working.

The blind man sees: he also discovers Christ and begins to believe; knowing Christ, he will acquire a taste of life and things different from the world's standards.

Many people think that faith is an illusion. They think faith is a cover-up of reality and that what is real is limited to only material things, believe that the man had been blind and had recovered his sight; so they called his parents¹⁹ and asked them, "Is this your son? You say that he was born blind, how is it that he now sees?"²⁰ The parents answered, "He really is our son and he was born blind;²¹ but how it is that he now sees, we don't know, neither do we know who opened his eyes. Ask him, he is old enough. Let him speak for himself."

²²The parents said this because they feared the Jews who had already agreed that whoever confessed Jesus to be the Christ was to be put out of the Jewish community.²³ Because of this his parents said, "He is old enough, ask him."

²⁴So a second time the Pharisees called the man who had been blind, and they said to him, "Tell us the truth; we know that this man is a sinner."²⁵ He replied, "I don't know whether he is a sinner or not; I only know that I was blind and now I see."²⁶ They said to him, "What did he do to you? How did he open your eyes?"²⁷ He replied, "I have told you already and you would not listen. Why do you want to hear it again? Do you also want to become his disciples?"

²⁸Then they started to insult him. "Become his disciple yourself! We are disciples of Moses."²⁹ We know that God has spoken to Moses, but as for this man we don't know where he comes from."

³⁰The man replied, "It is amazing that you don't know where the man comes from, and yet he opened my eyes!"

³¹We know that God doesn't listen to sinners, but if anyone honours God and does his will, God listens to him.

³²Never, since the world began, has it been heard that anyone opened the eyes of a person who was born blind.³³ If this man were not from God, he could do nothing."

³⁴They answered him, "You were born a sinner and now you teach us!" And they drove him away.

³⁵Jesus heard that they had driven him away. He found him and said, "Do you believe in the Son of Man?"

³⁶He answered, "Who is he, that I may believe in him?"³⁷ Jesus said, "You have seen him and he is speaking to you."³⁸ I came into this world to carry out a judgement: Those who do not see shall see, and those who see shall become blind."⁴⁰ Some Pharisees stood by and asked him, "So we are blind?"⁴¹ And Jesus answered, "If you were blind, you would not be guilty. Now that you say: 'We see'; this is the proof of your sin."

that which is seen, touched, counted or measured.

Truth is different. The believer sees the same things that others see and know; but besides that, he captures something that escapes those who lack faith. A special sense is needed to see beyond the material world.

Christian faith cannot be identified with the belief in a God higher than us. Faith is an ability to know by the light of Christ everything that is true, either in the goals, or the means people use. The faithful one sees whatever other people see, but he perceives also something that is out of their reach. Often we hear invitations like this: "We, invite all, without exception, of any opinions or belief." Of course, in many things, we are in solidarity with those who do not believe. But we should not think that to believe or not to believe is a matter of minor importance in the struggles of life.

With the coming of Christ, a sentence, or judgement is carried out (9:39). This means that humanity begins to be divided because all must take a position in respect to Him. Jesus judges people, or rather, we are those who judge our selves when we accept or reject him.

The healing of the man born blind is a parable, as well, of the process of liberation from

The good shepherd

10 ¹ Truly, I say to you, he who does not enter the sheepfold by the gate, but climbs in some other way, is a thief and a robber. ² But the shepherd of the sheep enters by the gate. ³ The keeper opens the gate to him and the sheep hear his voice; he calls each of his sheep by name and leads them out. ⁴ When he has brought out all his own, he goes before them and the sheep follow him for they know his voice. ⁵ A stranger they will not follow, rather they will run away from him because they don't recognize a stranger's voice."

⁶ Jesus used this comparison, but they did not understand what he was saying to them.

⁷ So Jesus said, "Truly, I say to you, I am the shepherd of the sheep. ⁸ All who came were thieves and robbers, and the sheep did not hear them. ⁹ I am the gate. Whoever enters through me will be saved; he will go in and out freely and find food.

¹⁰ The thief comes to steal and kill and destroy, but I have come that they may have life, life in all its fullness.

¹¹ I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd gives his life for the sheep. ¹² Not so the hired man or any other person who is not the shepherd and to whom the sheep do not belong. He abandons the sheep as soon as he sees the wolf coming; then the wolf snatches and scatters the sheep. ¹³ He is only a hired man and he cares nothing for the sheep.

¹⁴ I am the good shepherd. I know my own and my own know me, ¹⁵ as the Father knows me and I know the Father. Because of this I give my life for the sheep.

¹⁶ I have other sheep that are not of this fold. These I have to lead as well, and they shall listen to my voice. Then there will be one flock since there is one Shepherd.

¹⁷ The Father loves me because I lay down my life so as to take it up again. ¹⁸ No one takes it from me, but I lay it down freely. It is mine to lay down and to take up again: this mission I received from my Father."

¹⁹ Because of these words, the Jews were divided again. ²⁰ Many of them said, "He has a demon and is out of his mind. Why listen to him?" ²¹ But others said, "A possessed man doesn't speak in this way. Can a demon open the eyes of the blind?"

spiritual blindness. The man's healing leads to a higher form of illumination: his next encounter with Christ in faith. We usually come to a deeper faith and recognition of Christ through suffering, humiliation and painful searching.

■ COUNTRY WITHOUT FRONTIERS

Thanks to the parable of Jesus, we can imagine one of those sheepfolds in which the flocks of various shepherds are gathered together for the night under the vigilance of one caretaker. At dawn, each calls his sheep and leads them out.

The Bible foretold the day in which God would come to gather together the dispersed sheep of his people so that they would live in their land. Jesus is the Shepherd and he has come to accomplish what was announced, but he will not do it in the expected way. The Jews thought that the Shepherd would revive their former prosperity: they should be a privileged nation among other nations.

But, Jesus says clearly that his people are not to be thought of as identical to the Jewish nation. Those who believe, and only they, are his. He will take from among the Jews those who are his; likewise, he will take sheep from other folds too (v. 16), that is, from among nations other than the Jewish nation. Therefore, he will lead them all and will guide this flock – which is not a nation with land boundaries – to where he knows. The only flock that is, the only Church, moves freely through history, not confined to any one nation or era of civilization.

Jesus claims to be the Son of God

²² The time came for the feast of the Dedication. It was winter ²³ and Jesus walked back and forth in the portico of Solomon. ²⁴ The Jews then gathered around him and said to him, "How long will you keep us in doubt? If you are the Messiah, tell us plainly." ²⁵ Jesus answered, "I have already told you but you do not believe. ²⁶ The works I do in my Father's name proclaim who I am, but you don't believe because, as I said, you are not my sheep.

²⁷ My sheep hear my voice and I know them, they follow me ²⁸ and I give them eternal life. They shall never perish and no one will ever steal them from me. ²⁹ What the Father has given me is stronger than everything and no one can snatch it from the Father's hand. ³⁰ I and the Father are one."

³¹ The Jews then picked up stones to throw at him; ³² so Jesus said, "I have openly done many good works among you which the Father gave me to do. For which of these do you stone me?"

³³ The Jews answered, "We are not stoning you for doing a good work but for insulting God; you are only a man and you make yourself God."

³⁴ Then Jesus replied, "Is this not written in your Law: I said: you are gods? ³⁵ So those who received this word of God were called gods and the Scripture is always true. ³⁶ Then what should be said of the one anointed and sent into the world by the Father? Am I insulting God when I say: 'I am the Son of God'?"

³⁷ If I am not doing the works of my Father, do not believe me. ³⁸ But if I do them, even though you don't put faith in me, believe me because of the works I do, and know that the Father is in me and I in the Father."

³⁹ Again they tried to arrest him, but Jesus escaped from their hands. ⁴⁰ He went away again to the other side of the Jordan, to the place where John had baptized, and there he stayed.

⁴¹ Many people came to him and said, "John showed no miraculous signs, but he spoke of this man and everything he said was true." ⁴² And many became believers in that place.

The resurrection of Lazarus

The shepherds of the Jewish people thought they could achieve unity by promoting national pride, by maintaining the privileges of the "higher" castes, and by discrimination against non-Jews. But Jesus unites his people solely by attracting them to himself, by letting people experience who he is. All who are attracted by him, who recognize his voice, and believe his word are his.

People often cluster around great figures, whether they be leaders or saints. But when a people have neither frontiers, arms, language, nor laws to defend them against external and internal dissension, the presence of a Shepherd or leader is even more essential. Faith in Christ unites us far better than does fidelity to traditions of the past or solidarity with coreligionists. Christ's people is not a mass; it is not Humanity with a capital H. It is composed of persons who have begun with Jesus an adventure of mutual trust and love. I know them and they will hear my voice (v. 14 & 16).

When the Bible speaks of the Shepherd, it usually refers to God himself, the only king of Israel, but sometimes it means the King-Messiah sent by God. Jesus spoke of only one shepherd. Though distinct from the Father, he is one with him (30).

In the Bible angels are sometimes called sons of God, and Jesus remarks that the rulers are called gods. Because of this, Jesus did not like to be proclaimed Son of God. He speaks forcefully in saying: the Father is in me, and I in the Father: equal to equal (38). But at the same time that he stresses his divine power (v. 15, 18, 29, 38), he also affirms his total depend-Martha. ²(It was the same Mary who anointed the Lord with perfume and wiped his feet with her hair.) Their brother Lazarus was sick.

³So the sisters sent this message to Jesus, "Lord, the one you love is sick." ⁴On hearing this Jesus said, "This illness will not end in death; rather it is for God's glory and the Son of God will be glorified through it."

⁵It is a fact that Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus; ⁶yet, after he heard of the illness of Lazarus, he stayed two days longer in the place where he was. ⁷Only then did he say to his disciples, "Let us go into Judea again." ⁸They replied, "Master, recently the Jews wanted to stone you. Are you going there again?"

⁹Jesus said to them, "Shall I not walk during the twelve hours of the day? Whoever walks in the daytime shall not stumble, for he sees with the light of the world. ¹⁰But if anyone walks by night, he will stumble for there is no light in him."

¹¹After that Jesus said to them, "Our friend Lazarus has fallen asleep, but I am going to wake him." ¹²The disciples replied, "Lord, a sick man who sleeps will recover." ¹³But, Jesus had referred to Lazarus' death, and they thought that he had meant the repose of sleep. ¹⁴So Jesus said plainly, "Lazarus is dead ¹⁵and for your sake I am glad I was not there, for now you may believe." ¹⁶Then Thomas called the Twin said to his fellow disciples, "Let us also go that we may die with him."

¹⁷When Jesus came, he found that Lazarus had been in the tomb for four days. ¹⁸As Bethany is near Jerusalem, about two miles away, ¹⁹many Jews had come to Martha and Mary to offer consolation at their brother's death.

²⁰When Martha heard that Jesus was coming, she went to meet him while Mary remained sitting in the house. ²¹And she said to Jesus, "Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died. ²²But I know that whatever you ask from God, God will give you." ²³Jesus said, "Your brother will rise again."

²⁴Martha replied, "I know that he ence on the Father. In this we recognize God the Son.

◆This is the seventh and last miracle of Jesus recorded in John's gospel. Very intentionally, the first words are meant to present the sick man: Lazarus personifies the person wounded by sin, who is in process of dying unless Christ calls him to life.

Lazarus came back to life! Let us not be astounded that Lazarus had the good fortune to live for a few more years and the misfortune of having to die again. The purpose of this miracle was to announce the true resurrection which does not just prolong life but transforms our entire being. The resurrection is spiritual. It begins when faith moves a person to give up wrong ways of living and become open to receive God's life.

The Jews believed in the resurrection of the dead on the last day, as Martha mentioned (24). But they thought a divine force would come to shake the universe and open the tomb so the dead could come out. In reality, the resurrection of the dead comes about through someone, the Son of God, who has in himself all the power needed to raise people to life and to transform creation. One who lives in submission to Christ, has already passed from death to life (5:24) and because of this, will never die (11:26).

It is on account of this that Jesus is called Lord seven times. Although all the persons concerned did in fact call Jesus, "the Master", John intentionally puts on their lips the word Lord. He wishes to teach us that this miracle of raising Lazarus to life anticipates the glorious resurrection of Jesus, the Lord.

The Jews wanted to kill Jesus (8), but it was legally difficult for them to take Jesus prisoner. They could do this only in the province of Jerusalem, where their religious communities and political organization were strong. As long as Jesus remained on the other side of the Jordan, he was secure. The resurrection of Lazarus hastened the time of Jesus' death and glorification.

The twelve hours (9). Jesus will complete the 12 hours of his journey, that is, of his mission, without fear of the risks involved. Those who, will rise in the resurrection of the dead, at the last day." ²⁵But Jesus said to her, "I am the resurrection; whoever believes in me, though he die, shall live. ²⁶Whoever is alive by believing in me will never die. Do you believe this?"

²⁷Martha then answered, "Yes, Lord I have come to believe that you are the Christ, the Son of God, he who is coming into the world."

²⁸After that Martha went and called her sister Mary, quietly, saying, "The Master is here and is calling for you." ²⁹As soon as Mary heard this, she rose and went to him. ³⁰Jesus had not yet come into the village, but was still in the place where Martha had met him.

³¹The Jews who were with her in the house consoling her, also came. When they saw her get up and go out, they followed her, thinking that she was going to the tomb to weep.

³²As for Mary, when she came to the place where Jesus was and saw him, she fell at his feet and said, ³³"Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died." When Jesus saw her weeping and the Jews also who had come with her, he was moved in the depths of his spirit and troubled. ³⁴Then he asked, "Where have you laid him?" They answered, "Lord, come and see." ³⁵And Jesus wept.

³⁶The Jews said, "See how he loved him!" ³⁷But some of them said, "If he could open the eyes of the blind man, could he not have kept this man from dying?"

³⁸Jesus was deeply moved again and drew near to the tomb. It was a cave with a stone laid across it. ³⁹Jesus ordered, "Take the stone away." Martha said to him, "Lord, by now he will smell, for this is the fourth day." ⁴⁰Jesus replied, "Have I not told you that if you believe, you will see the Glory of God?" ⁴¹So they removed the stone.

Jesus lifted up his eyes and said, "Father, I thank you for you have heard me. ⁴²I knew that you hear me always; but my prayer was for the sake of these people, that they may believe that you sent me." ⁴³When Jesus had said this, he cried out in a loud voice, "Lazarus, come out!"

⁴⁴The dead man came out, his hands and feet bound with linen strips and his face wrapped in a cloth. So like him, walk by day, that is, in accordance with the divine plan, will not stumble; Christ will be for them the light of the world.

I believe that you are the Christ (27). What more extraordinary profession of faith is there than Martha's! It is like Peter's (Mt 16:16) and in a short while, it will be Mary who will tell about the resurrection to the same apostles. Truly the Gospel is not male chauvinist, nor does it enthrone ecclesiastical hierarchy.

Father, I thank you... (v.41). This act of thanksgiving is the only one we read in John, aside from the long prayer in Chapter 17 which is full of praise for the Father. We read another such prayer in Luke 10:21. These recorded acts of thanksgiving may seem very few considering that thanksgiving is an essential attitude in a Christian, but Jesus expressed his act of thanksgiving in all he did. In his mortal existence, he dispossessed himself of his own will and power so that the Father could use him for his greater glory (Jn 12: 27-28).

Untie him (v. 44). For burial the Jews bound their dead with linen. But this word "to untie" means something more. It was the expression used by the primitive Church in referring to forgiveness of sins. Like Lazarus, one who receives pardon returns to life.

• THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

Caiaphas' words were realized but not in the sense he intended. Jesus was going to die to gather into one the scattered children of God (v. 52).

The worldwide effect of Christ's resurrection is "to gather into one the scattered children of God" (v. 52); or as Jesus himself put it "when I'm lifted up from earth I shall draw all to me" (Jn 12:32). That is to say, cross and resurrection are the source of communion and fraternity.

Jesus said to them, "Untie him and let him go."

The plot to kill Jesus

o ⁴⁵ Many of the Jews who had come with Mary believed in Jesus when they saw what he did; ⁴⁶ but some went to the Pharisees and told them what Jesus had done. ⁴⁷ So the chief priests and the Pharisees called the Sanhedrin Council.

They said, "What are we to do? For this man keeps on giving miraculous signs. ⁴⁸ If we let him go on like this, all the people will believe in him and, as a result of this, the Romans will come and sweep away our Holy Place and our nation."

⁴⁹ Then one of them, Caiaphas, who was High Priest that year, spoke up, "You know nothing at all nor do you see clearly what you need. ⁵⁰ It is better to have one man die for the people than to let the whole nation be destroyed."

⁵¹ In saying this Caiaphas did not speak for himself, but being High Priest that year, he foretold as a prophet that Jesus would die for the nation. ⁵² and not for the nation only, but also to gather into one the scattered children of God. ⁵³ So, from that day on, they were determined to kill him.

⁵⁴ Because of this, Jesus no longer moved about freely among the Jews. He withdrew instead to the country near the wilderness and stayed with his disciples in a town called Ephraim ⁵⁵ The Passover of the Jews was at hand and people from everywhere were coming to Jerusalem to purify themselves before the Passover.

⁵⁶ They looked for Jesus and as they stood in the Temple, they talked with one another, "What do you think? Will he come to the festival?"

⁵⁷ Meanwhile the chief priests and the elders had given orders that anyone who knew where he was should let them know so that they could arrest him.

The supper at Bethany

(Mt 26:6; Mk 14:1)

+12 ¹ Six days before the Passover, Jesus came to Bethany where he had raised Lazarus, the dead man, to life. ² Now they gave a dinner for him and while Martha waited on them, Lazarus sat at the table with Jesus.

³ Then Mary took a pound of

The Church reunites believers of all races and cultures: we call it "Catholic;" that is, universal. However, this Church is but a beginning and a sign of that which will be attained at the end of time when the whole of humanity will be reunited in Christ.

In our world, the oppression of rural and urban masses is perpetuated by preventing people from grouping together to discuss and understand their situation. This unconfessed violence opposes unity. Some current ideologies promote a struggle for liberation which attempts to unite people by targetting adversaries and continually deciding on whom to expel. But there, too, the seed of violence (for both murder and exclusion are violence) gives birth to the most oppressive societies.

Christians should be the first to notice we are living in an exceptional century in which for the first time, all peoples share the same history and must accept a common destiny, either willingly or by force. This awareness enables them to see and to indicate the goals of human effort and they should not forget this in wasting all their energy in projects of aid for the poor.

+ Matthew and Mark also relate the incident at a supper when Mary showed her passionate love for Jesus. She loved him with all her strength, and her love, far from blinding her made her sense and respect the mysterious personality of Jesus.

Not all the apostles understood her gesture because they still had much to learn about loving Christ.

We often speak like Judas, of giving to the poor. Yet the Lord's command is not to give but to love. To love the poor is to reveal to them their call from God, and to help them grow as persons by overcoming their weaknesses and divisions and by fulfilling the mission God en-costly perfume made from genuine nard and anointed the feet of Jesus, wiping them with her hair. And the whole house was filled with the fragrance of the perfume.

⁴Judas, son of Simon Iscariot – the disciple who was to betray Jesus – remarked, ⁵"This perfume could have been sold for three hundred silver coins and turned over to the poor."

⁶Judas, indeed, had no concern for the poor; he was a thief and as he held the common purse, he used to help himself to the funds.

⁷But Jesus spoke up, "Leave her alone. Was she not keeping it for the day of my burial?" ⁸(The poor you always have with you, but you will not always have me.)"

⁹Many Jews heard that Jesus was there and they came, not only because of Jesus, but also to see Lazarus whom he had raised from the dead.

¹⁰So the chief priests thought about killing Lazarus as well, ¹¹for many of the Jews were drifting away because of him and believing in Jesus.

The Messiah enters Jerusalem

(Mt 21:5; Mk 11:1)

¹²The next day many people who had come for the festival heard that Jesus was to enter Jerusalem. ¹³So they took branches of palm trees and went out to meet him. And they cried out, "Hosanna! Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord! Blessed is the King of Israel!"

¹⁴Jesus found a donkey and sat upon it, as Scripture says: ¹⁵*Do not fear, city of Zion, see your king is coming sitting on the colt of a donkey.*

¹⁶The disciples were not aware of this at first, but, after Jesus was glorified, they remembered and realized that this had been written of him and that they themselves had taken part in this.

trusted to them. The poor will be the ones to live the Gospel and witness to it in the world. If we are not among them we need conversion and true poverty to discover with them the Kingdom. How can we really love the poor unless we have passionate love for Jesus? When we do not, we prefer to speak of giving to the poor, whatever be the biblical reading on which we are commenting.

Six days before the Passover. Mark and Matthew give the impression that this supper happened two days before the Passover, not six (Mt 26:2). The evangelists also disagree regarding the date of the Passover. While John declares that Jesus died on the eve of the Passover (Jn 19:14), the other three say that the Last Supper took place on the same day that the Jews celebrated the Passover. According to a very ancient tradition which various Oriental churches still maintain, Jesus could have celebrated the Last Supper, not on Thursday but on Tuesday. Thus, his trial would have lasted two days: Wednesday and Thursday. (That seems much more probable than having all the sessions of the double trial of Jesus in the one morning of Friday). And, of course, he would die on Friday, as all the texts affirm.

A possible explanation for these disagreements could be the following: The Passover is celebrated in accordance with the new moon which is not a fixed date, nor is it determined according to the same criteria by everyone. Hence, in certain years some religious groups celebrated it three days before the others. Jesus could have celebrated the Passover on the eve of Wednesday, while the majority of the people celebrated on the eve of Saturday.

■ Several foreigners (called Greeks because of their language) had been converted to the faith of the Jews. Though they did not observe the Jewish laws, they were accepted in the Temple of Jerusalem where they were reserved a yard separate from that of the Jews. The question from those Greeks offers Jesus the opportunity to announce that his kingdom will be extended through the whole earth when he will have been raised on the cross.

Unless the grain dies. Jesus will die and the universal Church will be born. Jesus allows his

Unless the grain dies

■ ²⁰ There were some Greeks who had come up to Jerusalem to worship during the feast. ²¹ They approached Philip, who was from Bethsaida in Galilee, and asked him, "Sir, we wish to see Jesus." ²² Philip went to Andrew and the two of them told Jesus.

²³ Then Jesus said, "The hour has come for the Son of Man to be glorified. ²⁴ Truly, I say to you, unless the grain of wheat falls to the earth and dies, it remains alone; but if it dies, it produces much fruit.

²⁵ Whoever loves his life destroys it, and whoever despises his life in this world keeps it for everlasting life.

²⁶ Whoever wants to serve me, let him follow me and wherever I am, there shall my servant be also. If anyone serves me, the Father will honour him.

Name!" Then a voice came from heaven, "I have glorified it and I will glorify it again."

²⁹ People standing there heard something and said it was thunder; but, others said, "An angel was speaking to him." ³⁰ Then Jesus declared, "This voice did not come for my sake but for yours; ³¹ now sentence is being passed on this world; now the ruler of this world is to be cast down. ³² And when I am lifted up from the earth, I shall draw all to myself." ³³ With these words Jesus referred to the kind of death he was to die.

³⁴ The crowd answered him, "We have been told by the Law that the Messiah stands forever. How can you say that the Son of Man shall be lifted up? What kind of Son of Man is this?"

³⁵ Jesus said to them, "The light will be with you a little longer. Walk while you have the light, lest the darkness overtake you. He who walks in the dark does not know where he goes. ³⁶ While you have the light, believe in the light and become sons of light."

After Jesus spoke, he withdrew and kept himself hidden.

lifeless body to be laid in the earth; on rising from the tomb, his same body, now glorified, will also embrace the believers united to him. The life that is now his, will be communicated to all the children of God.

Unless the grain dies. This is the law for all life that wants to be fruitful (Mk 8:34). The first believers were saying already: "The blood of the martyrs is a seed."

◆ John's gospel records on the same page both Jesus' Transfiguration (Mk 9:1) and his agony in Gethsemani (Mk 14:26).

Then a voice came (v. 28). While Jesus was in the midst of the noisy crowd something was heard: a message from heaven or simply noise? This event, insignificant perhaps for a historian, was like the fleeting presence of reality breaking through the illusory scene in which most people are caught up. The fact that the people misunderstood his message and that later they would deliver him up to their rulers, has become of minor importance to Jesus. He looks beyond all that. Jesus knows that he cannot save the nation from historical failure, but he understands that his death will change the course of world events: he will conquer where the destiny of humankind is to be played out.

From the beginnings of our history, the ruler of this world, the Spirit of Evil, has obscured in humankind the capacity to recognize God. But God has directed the whole of creation towards a progressive growth in maturity until the birth of the New Man. Because of sin this birth comes about in a world characterized by suffering, indifference and slavery.

The unbelief of the Jews

o ³⁷ Even though Jesus had done so many miraculous signs among them, they didn't believe in him. ³⁸ Indeed the words of the prophet Isaiah had to be fulfilled, for he said: Lord, who has believed what we proclaimed? To whom have the ways of God the Saviour been made known?

³⁹ Why could they not believe? Isaiah also said: "He let their eyes become blind and their hearts hard, so that they could neither see nor understand. They refuse to turn to me, lest I heal them." ⁴¹ Isaiah said this when he saw His Glory, and his words refer to Him.

⁴² Many of them, however, believed in Jesus, even among the rulers, but they did not acknowledge him because of the Pharisees, lest they be put out of the Jewish community.

⁴⁴ Yet Jesus had said, and ever cried out, "He who believes in me believes not in me but in him who sent me." ⁴⁵ And he who sees me, sees him who sent me. ⁴⁶ I have come into the world as light, so that whoever believes in me may not remain in darkness.

⁴⁷ If anyone hears my words and does not keep them, I am not the one to condemn him; for, I have come not to condemn the world but to save the world. ⁴⁸ He who rejects me, and does not receive my word, already has a judge: the very word I have spoken will condemn him on the last day.

⁴⁹ For I have not spoken on my own authority; the Father who sent me has instructed me in what to say and how to speak. ⁵⁰ I know that his commandment is eternal life, and I give my message as the Father instructed me.'

The only way to salvation is to return to obedience, not "to God," but to the Father. And Christ had to open the way through his sacrifice: he has come to this hour to face all this (27).

We easily forget that the purpose of our life is to glorify God. We do not glorify God principally by constructing temples or by singing: "Glory to God!" but by personally accepting to make ourselves pleasing and living sacrifices to God. A bishop and martyr of the primitive Church, St. Irenaeus wrote: "God is glorified when man is fully alive: but for man to be fully alive is to see God."

A sacrifice is a surrender of something for the sake of something or someone else. Our sacrifice is to allow God to be our life, to make us like him and to prepare us to reflect his own Glory. This indeed requires sacrifice because God makes us pass through a death to attain this life. Through obedience to God's will, we are another and everlasting state. God is glorified when his children attain glory, that is to say, attain his own perfection and transformation through fire and the Holy Spirit.

o AN IRREPARABLE CHOICE

Jesus' life of preaching is coming to an end.

John later finds it difficult to understand how God's chosen people could remain so blind regarding their Messiah. John tries to search out the meaning of this refusal by using two texts from the prophets:

The first is a long poem dedicated to the Servant of Yahweh, a voluntary victim for the sake of his brethren (Is 53:1). It shows us the people do not willingly accept a humiliated Saviour.

The second text shows how the rejection of Christ could have been foreseen. Indeed, the ancient prophets were also ignored while they were living, thus fulfilling a mysterious plan of God.

John stresses the sin of the majority who were not committed to Christ, although within themselves they secretly respected him. Somehow the Jewish people suspected that Jesus came from God, but to believe in what he claimed was asked was another thing.

For us, too, to believe in the Gospel means to accept the Church Jesus founded. But not everyone realizes this. His word comes to us in the midst of many concerns; and usually we don't feel urged to believe it. When we disobey or neglect his word, we often think it is not grave. But actually, it is God and the word of Truth that

SECOND PART: JESUS COMPLETES HIS WORK

+13 'It was before the feast of the Passover. Jesus realized that his hour had come to pass from this world to the Father, and, as he had loved those who were his own in the world, he would love them with perfect love.

Jesus washes his disciples' feet

■ ² They were at supper; the devil had already put into the mind of Judas son of Simon Iscariot, to betray him ³ but Jesus knew that the Father had entrusted all things to him and, as he had come from God, he was going to God. ⁴ So he got up from table, removed his garment and taking a towel wrapped it around his waist. ⁵ Then he poured water into a basin and began to wash the disciples' feet and to wipe them with the towel he was wearing.

⁶ When he came to Simon Peter, Simon said to him, "Why, Lord, you want to wash my feet!" ⁷ Jesus said, "What I am doing you cannot understand now, but afterwards you will understand it." ⁸ Peter replied, "You shall never wash my feet." Jesus answered him, "If I do not wash you, you can have no part with me." ⁹ Then Simon Peter said, "Lord, wash not only my feet, but also my hands and my head!"

¹⁰ Jesus replied, "Whoever has taken a bath does not need to wash (except the feet), for he is clean all over. You are clean, though not all of you." ¹¹ Jesus knew who was to betray him; because of this he said, "Not all of you are clean."

¹² When Jesus had finished washing their feet, he put on his garment again, went back to the table and said to them, "Do you understand what I have done to you?" ¹³ You call me Master and Lord, and you are right, for so we reject. This is our unique opportunity; we can find no support in the Bible for the belief that we shall have successive lives and that we can, in the next life, make up for our failures in the present. The whole of eternity is decided today.

+ Here begins the second half of John's Gospel.

In the first half, through signs and discourses Jesus announced the work he was going to accomplish in the world and the glory that would be given him after he would be "raised on high." Now Jesus' hour has come, in which he will realize all that was announced.

The second half begins with the farewell discourses of Jesus at the Last Supper.

Just as in the previous chapters, each of Jesus' discourses begins with a miracle. The farewell discourses narrated in Chapters 14-17, have, as point of departure, the extraordinary act of the "washing of the feet." This gesture contains two teachings:

- the need to purify ourselves before participating in the Supper of the Lord.
- how the commitment of love is to be put into practice.

■ THE PENITENTIAL RITE

John does not allude to the Eucharist when he relates the Last Supper (Mk 14:12), but he develops the "washing of the feet".

He began to wash their feet. The poor among the Jews walked barefoot while the rest wore sandals. A traditional gesture of welcome among the Jews was to order a servant to wash the feet of the traveler (see Gen. 18:4). The apostles did not have servants, but that night, Jesus wanted to be their servant.

Jesus did not intend merely to make the apostles bodily clean and comfortable. His washing of their feet was a sacred act which symbolized purifying them in the same manner as baptism. The apostles were already in the grace of God: the word of Jesus which they received with faith had purified them (15:3). However, they needed more preparation before sharing the bread of life at the table of their Lord. All religions observe some preparatory or purification rites before offering sacred things to their members. For example, Jews observed purification rites before participating in the Passover meal.

Jesus was no less demanding: he himself

I am. ¹⁴If I, then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, you also must wash one another's feet. ¹⁵I have just given you an example that as I have done, you also may do.

¹⁶Truly, I say to you, the servant is not greater than his master, nor is the messenger greater than he who sent him. ¹⁷Understand this, and blessed are you if you put it into practice.

¹⁸I am not speaking of you all, because I know the ones I have chosen and the Scripture has to be fulfilled that says, The one who shared my table has risen against me. ¹⁹I tell you this now before it happens, so that, when it does happen, you may know that I am He.

²⁰Truly, I say to you, whoever welcomes the one I send, welcomes me, and whoever welcomes me, welcomes the One who sent me."

²¹After saying this, Jesus was distressed in spirit and said plainly, "Truly, one of you will betray me."

²²The disciples then looked at one another, wondering who he meant.

²³One of the disciples, the one Jesus loved, was reclining near Jesus; ²⁴so Simon Peter signaled him to ask Jesus whom he meant.

²⁵And the disciple who was reclining near Jesus asked him, "Lord, who is it?" ²⁶Jesus answered, "I shall dip a piece of bread in the dish, and he to whom I give it, is the one."

So Jesus dipped the bread and gave it to Judas Iscariot the son of Simon. ²⁷And as Judas took the piece of bread, Satan entered into him. And Jesus said to him, "What you are going to do, do quickly."

²⁸None of the others reclining at table understood why Jesus said this to Judas. ²⁹As he had the common purse, they may have thought that Jesus was telling him, "Buy what we need for the feast", or, "Give something to the poor." ³⁰Judas left as soon as he had eaten the bread. It was night.

³¹When Judas had gone out, Jesus said, "Now is the Son of Man glorified and God is glorified in him. ³²So God will glorify him, and he will glorify him very soon.

◆³³My children, I am with you for only a little while; you will look for me, but, as I already told the Jews, so now I tell you: where I am going you cannot come. ³⁴Now I give you a new commandment: love one another.

washed the feet of his apostles. He did not ask them to confess their sins; all he wanted was that they would humbly allow him, their Lord, to wash their feet.

This act reminds us at once of the sacraments of Baptism and Penance. There bonds of humility and mercy are forged both for the one who purifies and for those purified. Henceforth, the apostles will do what their Lord did before them, since he will send them in his name to forgive sins. But they are not to act as hierarchical officials or judges conceding pardon to sinners. They are to take the first step in humility and mercy, to likewise purify those who approach the Supper of the Lord.

The word Lord appears seven times in this chapter. With this in mind we understand that by washing the feet of his apostles Jesus performed a significant act which shows us, in a most surprising way, who our Lord and God is, and how he acts.

◆ CHRISTIAN LOVE

I give you a new commandment. That is to say, a commandment appropriate for the advent of a new era. The Old Testament spoke of interior fidelity to God and love of neighbour, but this message remained hidden among the complexities of the Law. Besides, there are many ways of loving: even a fanatically religious person can claim to be loving God. In the New Testament Jesus says the love of God is the highest law. The example given by the Lord during his earthly life reminds us of the way to love.

Love which is like God's, aims at liberating our neighbour and enabling him to fully develop his

Just as I have loved you, you also must love one another. ³⁵ By this everyone will know that you are my disciples, if you have love for one another."

³⁶ Simon Peter said to him, "Lord, where are you going?" Jesus answered, "Where I am going you cannot follow me now, but afterwards you will." ³⁷ Peter said, "Why can't I follow you now? I am ready to give my life for you." ³⁸ Jesus answer, "To give your life for me! Truly, I tell you, the cock will not crow before you have denied me three times."

I'm going to the Father

o 14 ¹ Do not be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in me. ² In my Father's house there are many rooms and I go to prepare a place for you: did I not tell you this? ³ And as I go now to prepare a place for you, I shall come again and take you to me, that where I am, you also may be.

going." ⁵ Thomas said to him, "Lord, we don't know where you are going; how can we know the way?" ⁶ Jesus said, "I am the way, (the truth and the life;) no one comes to the Father but through me. ⁷ If you know me, you will know the Father also; indeed you know him and you have seen him."

⁸ Philip asked him, "Lord, show us the Father and that is enough." ⁹ Jesus said to him, "What! I have been with you so long and you still do not know me, Philip? Whoever sees me sees the Father; how can you say: 'Show us the Father?' ¹⁰ Do you not believe that I am in the Father and the Father in me?"

All that I say to you, I do not say of myself. The Father who dwells in me is doing his work. ¹¹ Believe me when I say that I am in the Father and the Father in me; at least believe it on the evidence of these works that I do.

¹² Truly, I say to you, he who believes in me will do the same works that I do; he will even do greater than these, for I am going where the Father

God-given gifts. Love according to the Lord helps the neighbour become what God wishes him to be, by passing through death to resurrection.

Moreover, while we go deeper into the mystery of divine love revealed to us through Jesus, our love becomes merged with the eternal love of God which, in the end, shall act alone through us. True love comes from God and makes us return to unity within God.

Time and again, Jesus points out the unique importance of Christian love. Later, his Apostles (e.g., 1 Jn. 4:7 ff.), and the Church would sum up his teaching on love. Love of God is shown through love of our neighbour, love of our neighbour depends on love of God. And what is it really to love God? The great saints and mystics of the Church tell us that love of God is not "to feel God", to feel devotion or affection for God. Christian love lies not in sentiment or feelings (though on some occasions we might feel affection or devotion, which is helpful), but to love God is to be determined to do what God wishes at each moment of our lives. And what God wishes of us regarding our neighbour is that we render loving service and forgiveness.

o THE SPIRITUAL LIFE

After the washing of the feet, John continues with Jesus' three farewell discourses to his apostles. Those who had lived intimately with him for several months, would soon need to discover another way of living with the risen and present, though invisible, Christ. "I was with you" says Jesus; henceforth, "I will be in you." The first of these discourses is found in Chapter 14.

Jesus' ascension to the Father, was not just an individual achievement, but opened for all of us a way to our House, not situated high above us, but in God. There are many mansions, that means that there is also a place for us: not just one mansion for everybody, but a place for each one, because Heaven is not like a performance which is the same for everyone in the audience. God's radiance will draw from each one the resonance only he can bring forth. Each one will be in his own mansion, being in communion with all.

Now, knowing what is the goal, we should walk towards this definitive communion. "I am the way," says Christ. He became man precisely so that we might see the Father in him. He fol-is. ¹³ And everything you ask in my name, I will do, so that the Father may be glorified in the Son. ¹⁴ And everything you ask in calling upon my Name, I will do.

¹⁵ If you love me, you will keep my commandments; ¹⁶ and I will ask the Father and he will give you another Helper to be with you forever, ¹⁷ that Spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive because it neither sees him nor knows him. But you know him for he is with you and will be in you.

¹⁸ I will not leave you orphans, I am coming to you. ¹⁹ A little while and the world will see me no more, but you will see me because I live and you will also live. ²⁰ On that day you will know that I am in my Father and you in me, and I in you.

²¹ Whoever keeps my commandments is the one who loves me. If he loves me, he will also be loved by my Father; I too shall love him and show myself clearly to him."

²² Judas – not the Iscariot – asked Jesus, "Lord, how can it be that you will show yourself clearly to us and not to the world?" ²³ Jesus answered him, "If anyone loves me, he will keep my word and my Father will love him; and we will come to him and make our home with him. ²⁴ But if anyone does not love me, he will not keep my words. And these words that you hear are not mine but the Father's who sent me.

²⁵ I told you all this while I was still with you. ²⁶ From now on the Helper, the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send in my name, will teach you all things and remind you of all that I have told you.

²⁷ Peace be with you; I give you my peace. Not as the world gives peace do I give it to you. Do not be troubled;

lowed his way, so disconcerting for us, so that, meditating on his actions, we would progress towards the truth. Although in the beginning, we may not understand his thought well, with time, we will discover the Lord and understand that his way is ours. Passing through the cross and death, we will achieve our own truth and arrive at life.

I am in the Father, and the Father in me, and you in me. (v. 11 and 20). Christ makes us enter into the divine family. Thus, we no longer speak of approaching God as if he were far from us. We no longer feel as if God were a single person in front of us. We enter "into" the mysterious life of the divine Persons who share everything and who are the one and only God. Material things cannot penetrate each other; but in the world of the spirit such is possible. Christ is in the Father and the Father in him. They establish their dwelling within us.

In the introduction to the Gospel, John explained that all of God's actions in the world should be understood in the light of the intimate relationship between the Father and the Son. Now, he adds that the presence of God in us is due to another person, the Holy Spirit. Neither the Father alone whom no one has seen, nor the Son who made himself known, can enter into communion with men. However, they can do so by means of the Spirit, whom we should call:

God who is communicated. Hence, we call spiritual life everything that refers to our relationship with God.

Spiritual life includes three attitudes:

- to keep the words of Jesus: meditate on them, put them into practice and let them take root in our soul.
- then, instructed by the Spirit regarding what we should ask in Christ's name, let us ask, with all confidence, for those things which he himself desires.
- finally, let us do the same things he did. He did not multiply good works but completed that which his Father asked him to do, even when his obedience would seem to us a vain sacrifice.

I will give you another Helper (14:16). Jesus refers to the Holy Spirit whom he calls the Paraclete. This Greek word has several meanings. Here, we use Helper. The Spirit helps the believers and inspires their prayer so that it may be heard.

I will give you another Helper (or Interpreter). The Spirit enables us to understand and interpret Jesus' words throughout all time.

Lord, why do you speak of showing yourself only to us? (v. 22). Judas believed that Jesus meant he would summon them for secret meetings. That was not so: Jesus meant he would make himself known to them through interior do not be afraid. ²⁸ You heard me say: 'I am going away, but I am coming to you'. If you loved me, you would be glad that I go to the Father, for the Father is greater than I.

²⁹ I have told you this now before it takes place, so that when it does happen you may believe, ³⁰ for I will no longer speak to you. Now the ruler of this world is at hand, although there is nothing in me that he can claim.

³¹ But see, the world must know that I love the Father and that I do what the Father has taught me to do. Come now, let us go.

The vine and the branches

+ 15 ¹ I am the true vine and my Father is the vinegrower. ² If any of my branches doesn't bear fruit, he breaks it off; and he prunes every branch that does bear fruit, that it may bear even more fruit.

³ You are already made clean by the word I have spoken to you; ⁴ live in me as I live in you. The branch cannot bear fruit by itself but has to remain part of the vine; so neither can you if you don't remain in me.

⁵ I am the vine and you are the branches. As long as you remain in me and I in you, you bear much fruit; but apart from me you can do nothing. ⁶ Whoever does not remain in me is like a branch that is thrown away and withers; and the withered branches are thrown into the fire and burned.

⁷ If you remain in me and my words in you, you may ask whatever you want and it will be given to you. ⁸ My Father is glorified when you become my disciples, that is, when you bear much fruit.

⁹ As the Father has loved me, so I have loved you; remain in my love. ¹⁰ You will remain in my love if you keep my commandments, just as I have kept my Father's commandments and remain in his love.

¹¹ I have told you all this, that my own joy may be in you and your joy may be complete. ¹² This is my com-teaching and by letting them experience peace.

The Father is greater than I (14:28). This does not contradict what John teaches throughout the whole Gospel about Jesus' divinity.

This is to be read together with 5:18; 10:30; 16:15, if we want to know something of the mystery of Christ, "true God" as spoken of in Tim 9:5; Tit 2:13; 1 Jn 5:20.

As early as the fourth century, Saint Hilary, the great bishop and defender of the faith, wrote: "The Father is greater because of being the one who gives. But as he gives the Son all that he himself is, the Son is not yet inferior to the Father."

Moreover, it is characteristic of the Son to deny himself so that he may give glory to the Father, until the Father gives him back "the Glory he had before" as said in 17:5 and 6:62. Because of this the apostles who have seen him as man among humans in the time of his humiliation should now rejoice.

The Spirit which the Father will send you (14:26). Compare with 15:26. The Holy Spirit proceeds as much from the Father as from the Son, being with them only one God.

+ In this second farewell discourse, Jesus invites us to remain steadfast, in the midst of the world. The discourse is divided into four parts:

- the parable of the vine: I have sent you to produce fruits.
- the world will hate you.
- the work of the Holy Spirit.
- In a little while you will see me again.

Firstly, the parable of the vine. Jesus uses an image from the Bible, but he changes the original meaning, as he did before when speaking of the Good Shepherd (Jn 10:1). The vine represents the people of Israel. Planted from selected stock, cared for by the Lord, it should have produced fruits of justice (Mk 12:1). But, this stage of history in which the kingdom of God was identified with the Jewish people ended with the coming of Jesus.

Now, the true Vine has taken root. Christ is the trunk from which the branches sprout, that is to say, all of us who live by Him. But he is also the entire plant, trunk and branches together: the Christians are really the body of Christ.

The vine was the people of Israel, and what mandment: love one another as I have loved you. ¹³ There is no greater love than this, to give one's life for his friends; ¹⁴ and you are my friends if you do what I command you.

¹⁵ I shall not call you servants any more, because a servant does not know what his master is about. Instead I call you friends since I have made known to you everything I learned from my Father.

¹⁶ You did not choose me; it was I who chose you and sent you to go and bear much fruit, fruit that will last. For everything you ask the Father in my name, he will give you.

¹⁷ So I tell you to love one another.

The hostile world

■ ¹⁸ If the world hates you, remember that the world hated me before you. ¹⁹ This would not be so if you belonged to the world, because the world loves its own. But you are not of the world since I have chosen you from the world; because of this the world hates you.

²⁰ Remember what I told you: the servant is not greater than his master: if they persecuted me, they will persecute you, too. Have they kept my teaching? Will they then keep yours? ²¹ All this they will do to you for the sake of my name because they do not know the One who sent me.

²² If I had not come to tell them they would have no sin, but now they have no excuse for their sin. ²³ Those who hate me hate my Father.

²⁴ If I had not done among them what no one else has ever done, they would have no sin. But after they have seen, they hate me and my Father. ²⁵ and the words written in their law become true: They hated me without cause.

The Spirit will come

◆ ²⁶ I will send you from the Father the Spirit of truth who comes from the Father. When this Helper comes, he will testify about me. ²⁷ And you, too, will be my witnesses for you have been with me from the beginning.

12. 13, 34; 1 Jn 1, 4 14. 1 Jn 3, 11 15. Ex 33, 11; Lk 12, 4 16. 6, 70; 13, 18 17. Rom 6, 20 mattered to them was the collective conduct of the community as one body. What mattered were not the individuals but Israel. Now, Jesus does not say: The Christian community is the vine, but: I am the vine. So each of us has to consider how he is joined with Jesus through faith, prayer, and keeping his word. Each one has to bear fruit. Jesus does not specify what these fruits should be: whether service, understanding or action for social justice or a life silently offered to God. Rather, he insists that these fruits should come from the Spirit and bear his proper seal. The success of the Church is not measured by its achievements, but by the progress of those who interiorize Christ's mystery and share in his cross and resurrection.

After making it clear that we depend totally on him, Jesus repeats his commandment of love. There is an order in the building of the Christian life.

If from the start we say: We should love our neighbour because this is the only commandment, we will achieve nothing; because each one understands love in his own way, while not having as yet interiorized the thinking of Christ. Christ asks us to first share his thinking: that is what the expression keep my commandments mean. Thus we become his friends, knowing him as a person who loves us and acts in us. Later, we will produce the authentic fruit of love, whose source is Christ.

■ In spite of Jesus having returned to his Father to initiate a more effective and universal presence among humankind, Satan continues to act with power he has usurped. The hatred of those who belong to Satan is directed against the believers and the Church. Such persons are called in John's Gospel: the world.

Believers are destined to be hated by the world. It often happens that when a person begins to live in a more Christian and responsible way, he meets with opposition and hatred from his own family. No one knows what has aroused the hatred but the devil does, he who moves everything to discourage us.

Even in the Church, we find many who are of the world and claim to be serving God (16:2), when they persecute the true followers of Christ. "Woe to you when everyone speaks well of you!" Jesus said this referring to those Christians who 16 ¹I tell you all this to keep you from stumbling and falling away ²when you are put out of the Jewish communities. The hour is coming when anyone who kills you will claim to be serving God; ³they will do this because they have not known the Father or me. ⁴Now I tell you all these things so that when the time comes you may remember that I told you.

I did not tell you this in the beginning because I was with you. ⁵But now I am going to the One who sent me and none of you asks me where I am going, ⁶for you are overcome with grief because of what I said.

⁷Indeed believe me: It is better for you that I go away, because as long as I do not leave, the Helper will not come to you; but I am going away and then I will send him to you.

⁸When he comes, he will uncover the lie of the world and show clearly what its sin has been, what the way of righteousness is, and how the Judgment has come.

⁹What has its sin been? They did not believe in me. ¹⁰What is the way of righteousness? The One you see no more has gone directly to the Father. ¹¹How has the Judgment come? The Ruler of this world has himself been condemned.

¹²I still have many things to tell you, but you cannot bear them now. ¹³When he, the Spirit of truth comes, he will guide you into the whole truth.

He will not give his own message but will speak only of what he hears, and he will tell you of the things to come. ¹⁴He will take what is mine and make it known to you; in doing this, he will glorify me. ¹⁵All that the Father has is mine; because of this I have just told you, that the Spirit will take what is mine and make it known to you."

25. Ps 35, 19; 69, 4	26. 14, 26; Mt 10, 19; Acts 5, 32	2. 9, 22; Acts 26, 9	4. Mk 13, 23 know how to win the praises of the rich and powerful and at the same time to gain positions of power within the Church. These are unable to recognize the Spirit of God who acts among the humble, and at times, persecute them with malice. Indeed they know neither Christ nor his Father.

When our hope does not come from God, trials discourage us; but when our hope comes from God, we are strengthened and remain steadfast. In the parable of the vine, Jesus said: "My father prunes every branch that bears fruit so that it will bear more fruit."

◆ THE FATHER, THE SON AND THE HOLY SPIRIT

In making us children of his Father, Jesus enables us to discover the intimate mystery of God. In God, there is communion among the three persons: the Father, the Son and their common Spirit.

We speak of their common Spirit, because Jesus said both: The Father will give them another Helper (24:16), and: The Helper which I will send you (15:26). Now, he says: He will take what is mine and tell it to you: everything that the Father has is also mine (16:15).

"The Spirit" is not a poetic figure: it is Someone. This has already been commented on (Jn 7:37; Jn 14:1).

Starting from the day of Pentecost, the Spirit began to act in the Church, thus showing that he was the Spirit of Christ. The unbelieving Jews thought that God was with them, but in reality his Spirit did not act among them. So it was clear that they had sinned (v. 9) for not believing in Christ.

What is the way of righteousness (v. 8). The righteous One is Christ and the righteous persons are those who believe in him without seeing him (v. 10).

The Acts of the Apostles records how the Spirit worked in the first disciples of Jesus. Before granting miraculous powers, the Spirit gave them joy, peace and mutual love, as well as inner certainty that Jesus had risen and was among them.

The Spirit guides missionaries; he gives them the power to perform miracles; he gives to believers the knowledge of God, new capacities for working, healing, serving and shaking up a sinful world. Throughout history, the Spirit will raise up people of faith, martyrs, prophets, and through them will transform the world. In this way, the Saviour, seemingly defeated, will be justified; and it will be evident that the loser is Satan, who already has been condemned (v. 11). The evil spirit, great director of the worldly show, is o ¹⁶ A little while and you will see me no more; and then a little while, and you will see me."

The promise of a new presence

¹⁷ Some of the disciples wondered, "What does he mean by: 'A little while and you will not see me, and then a little while and you will see me'? And why did he say: 'I go to the Father'?" ¹⁸ And they said to one another, "What does he mean by 'a little while'? We don't understand."

¹⁹ Jesus realized that they wanted to question him; so he said to them, "You are puzzled because I told you that in a little while you will see me no more, and then a little while later you will see me."

²⁰ Truly, I say to you, you will weep and mourn while the world rejoices. You will be sorrowful, but your sorrow will turn to joy.

²¹ A woman in childbirth is in distress because her time is at hand. But after the child is born, she no longer remembers her suffering because of such joy: a man is born into the world.

²² So you feel sorrowful now, but I will see you again; and your hearts will rejoice in such a way that no one will take your joy from you. ²³ In that day you will not ask me anything. Truly, I say to you, whatever you ask the Father in my Name, he will give you. ²⁴ So far you have not asked in my Name; so ask and receive that your joy may be full.

²⁵ I taught you all this in veiled language, but the time is coming when I shall no longer speak in veiled language, but will tell you plainly of the Father.

²⁶ In that day you will ask in my Name and it will not be for me to ask the Father for you, ²⁷ for the Father himself loves you because you have loved me and you believe that I came from the Father. ²⁸ As I came from the Father and have come into the world, so I am leaving the world and going to the Father."

²⁹ The disciples said to him, "Now you are speaking plainly and not in veiled language!" ³⁰ Now we see that you know all things, even before we question you. Because of this we believe that you came from God."

³¹ Jesus answered them, "You say, displaced and his influence limited. A new force, which is the Spirit, enters history and guides us towards the total truth.

o JESUS IN OUR MIDST

Jesus is in our midst, but to be aware of his presence requires faith. He himself said: "You will see me because you live and I also live." It is not important that we feel his presence but what matters is to persevere in his ways. In order to attain mature faith, it is necessary that we be deprived of the consolation of his presence for more or less prolonged periods: a little while and you will not see me.

For his disciples this was verified for the first time at the moment of his death; later they saw him risen from the dead. This will be verified for us at the end of time, when we discover the glorious Christ whom we have awaited in faith. No one should feel overconfident during those moments when Christ allows his presence to be felt, for example, after a conversion. When everything seems easy we should not look down on those to whom the Lord does not seem to grant the same favours we might receive. In a little while, perhaps, the Lord will leave us in darkness.

After Jesus had risen from the dead, a real companionship would be established between him and his disciples: he would speak to them clearly of the Father; they would ask in his name.

I will tell you plainly . . . The ingenuous response of the apostles in v. 29 underlines in contrast what Jesus expressed in v. 25. Jesus did not mean that he would return in visible form to teach, not in parables but more clearly; Jesus referred rather to the spiritual knowledge of himself and his words that the disciples were to receive from the Spirit.

You will ask in my Name (v. 26). Through a spiritual knowledge of Jesus, the believers will know what they should ask of him and he will give it to them. In the same manner, they will know the things which God does not want to give, and because of that, they will neither desire nor ask for them.

that you believe! ³² The hour is coming, indeed it has come, when you will be scattered each one to his home, and you will leave me alone. Yet I am not alone, for the Father is with me.

³³ I have told you all this, so that in me you may have peace, even though you have trouble in the world. Courage! I have overcome the world."

Prayer of Jesus for the new holy people

+ 17 ¹After saying this, Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, "Father, the hour has come; give glory to your Son, that the Son may give glory to you, ² through the power you gave him over all mortals, to bring eternal life to all you have entrusted to him. ³For this is eternal life: to know you, the only true God, and the One you sent, Jesus Christ.

⁴ I have glorified you on earth and finished the work that you gave me to do. ⁵ Now, Father, give me in your presence the same Glory I had with you before the world began.

⁶ I have made your name known to the people you gave me from the world. They were yours and you gave them to me, and they kept your word. ⁷ And now they know that all you have given me comes indeed from you. ⁸ I have given them the teaching I received from you, and they received it and know in truth that I came from you; and they believe that you have sent me.

⁹ I pray for them; I do not pray for the world but for those who belong to you and whom you have given to me – ¹⁰ indeed all I have is yours and all you have is mine – and now they are my glory. ¹¹ I am no longer in the world, but they are in the world whereas I am going to you. Holy Father, keep them in your Name, the Name that you have given me, so that they may be one, just as we are one.

¹² When I was with them, I kept them safe in your Name, and not one was lost except the one who was already lost, and in this the Scripture was fulfilled. ¹³ But now I am coming to you and I leave my message in the world that my joy may be complete in them.

¹⁴ I have given them your message

+ ONE AND HOLY

Priestly Prayer is the name many give to that prayer in which Christ, before he died, offered to sacrifice his own life, as both priest and victim (v. 19). The word to consecrate applied to two things: the priest was consecrated, that is, was made worthy to offer the sacrifice, and also consecrated (made holy) the victim on sacrificing it.

Jesus put to an end the form of worship of the Old Testament which the Jews rendered to God for centuries. That people were holy, that is to say, their mission among all the nations was to serve the Holy God, whom they knew by a special privilege.

Jesus prays for his own so that they may become the new holy people, that is consecrated to God, this time, according to the truth (v. 17). He will pour over them the Spirit of Truth, who has been promised to Israel, and who will instruct us interiorly.

Keep in your Name (v. 11). In other words: keep in the radiance of your own sanctity, with which you embrace your Son. At that moment Christ prayed for his Church, to whom he entrusted his own mission. The principal duty of the Church is to know God. (The word to know is repeated seven times, which clearly shows that it expresses the essence of the discourse). Whatever the situation of the Church might be, its proper and indispensable mission will be to keep and proclaim the true knowledge of God and the commandment of his Son.

Jesus also wants each of his own to know God. This knowledge comes to us when we interiorize the word of God, persevere in prayer and join community celebrations. In this, we will have the help of the Holy Spirit, from whom come the gifts of knowledge and wisdom (Col 1:9). From knowledge will spring good works and love; this is the beginning of eternal life (v. 3) in which we will see God as he is (1 Jn 2:3).

and the world has hated them because they are not of the world; just as I am not of the world. ¹⁵ I do not ask you to remove them from the world but to keep them from the evil one. ¹⁶ They shall not be of the world, for I am not of the world.

¹⁷ Consecrate them in the truth – your word is truth – ¹⁸ for I have sent them into the world as you sent me into the world. ¹⁹ For their sake, I go to the sacrifice by which I am consecrated, so that they too may be consecrated in truth.

²⁰ I pray not only for these but also for those who through their word will believe in me. ²¹ May they all be one as you Father are in me and I am in you. May they be one in us; so the world may believe that you have sent me.

²² I have given them the Glory you have given me, that they may be one as we are one: ²³ I in them and you in me. Thus they shall reach perfection in unity and the world shall know that you have sent me and I have loved them just as you loved me.

²⁴ Father, since you have given them to me, I want them to be with me where I am and see the Glory you gave me, for you loved me before the foundation of the world.

²⁵ Righteous Father, the world has not known you but I know you, and these have known that you have sent me. ²⁶ As I revealed your Name to them, so will I continue to reveal it, so that the love with which you loved me may be in them and I also may be in them."

The arrest of Jesus

Christ prayed that his Church might be one, that is to say, that it might be the sign of unity in a divided world. It is not enough that Christ is preached; it is also necessary for the world to see in its midst the Church, one and united.

Catholic Church, means, universal. In the Church no one is a stranger. One Church, through one same spirit, and through the visible unity of its members.

The history of the Church seems to run counter to the prayer of Christ. Jesus desired unity; the evangelists relate how he named Peter as visible head of the apostolic group and the entire Church. However, to maintain unity among people of different temperaments and various cultures requires much love and understanding.

From the beginning some began to reject the faith as taught by the apostles, and several groups or sects appeared.

For historical reasons, the countries of the Roman world were divided into two main empires: one of the Orient, with the patterns of Greek culture and that of the Occident (Europe), where the medieval culture developed after the invasions of the barbaric peoples and contact between the Christians of these two parts became very difficult. Because they lived the same faith with different traditions and religious practices they began to consider themselves as having different religions. That was how the Oriental churches, that is, the Orthodox, separated from the Roman Church.

Much later, the negligence of the hierarchy in not ending the abuses and disorders, was the occasion which brought the Protestants or Evangelicals to found new churches which they called reformed churches. This separation, however, had deeper political, social and economic roots. It was part of a cultural crisis which obliged Christians to revise their views regarding the Bible, philosophy and politics. According to whatever stand one took concerning these issues, a person joined the Protestants or stayed with the Catholic Church. In our times, these past difficulties are seen more clearly. Many Catholics, Orthodox and Protestants are attempting to unite as believers.

At the same time, however, new problems are observed within each Church. Today Christians disagree and are split, not only in their political options, but in their understanding of Christ and their views on how his message is best delivered in our time.

Ecumenism, that is, efforts to reconcile in truth and bring the Churches together, therefore, demands that we overcome the new dissensions threatening the internal unity of the Church. All of us have to work so that the unity of all Christians may be realized as Christ desires, and by the means he wants.

Valley, a garden was there which Jesus and his disciples entered.

² Now Judas, who betrayed him, knew the place since Jesus had often met there with his disciples. ³ He led soldiers of the Roman battalion and guards from the chief priests and Pharisees, who went there with lanterns, torches and weapons.

⁴ Jesus knew all that was going to happen to him; he stepped forward and asked, "Who are you looking for?" ⁵ They answered, "Jesus the Nazarene." Jesus said, "I am he." Judas, who betrayed him, stood there with them.

⁶ When Jesus said, "I am he", they moved back and fell to the ground. ⁷ He then asked a second time, "Who are you looking for?" and they answered, "Jesus the Nazarene." ⁸ Jesus replied, "I told you that I am he. If you are looking for me, let these others go." ⁹ Thus what Jesus had said came true: "I have not lost one of those you gave me."

¹⁰ Simon Peter had a sword; he drew it and struck Malchus, the High Priest's servant, cutting off his right ear. ¹¹ But Jesus said to Peter, "Put your sword into its sheath; shall I not drink the cup which the Father has given me?"

¹² So the guards and the soldiers, with their commander, seized Jesus and bound him; ¹³ and they took him first to Annas. Annas was the father-in-law of Caiaphas, who was the High Priest that year; ¹⁴ and it was Caiaphas who had told the Jews: "It is better that one man should die for the people."

¹⁵ Simon Peter with another disciple followed Jesus. Because this disciple was known to the High Priest, they let him enter the courtyard of the High Priest along with Jesus, ¹⁶ but Peter had to stay outside at the door. The other disciple, who was known to the High Priest went out and spoke to the maidservant at the gate and brought Peter in. ¹⁷ Then, this servant on duty at the door said to Peter, "So you also are one of his disciples?" But he answered, "I am not."

¹⁸ Now the servants and the guards had made a charcoal fire and were standing and warming themselves because it was cold, and Peter also was with them warming himself.

¹⁹ The High Priest questioned Jesus about his disciples and his teaching. ²⁰ Jesus answered him, "I have spoken openly to the world; I have always taught in places where the Jews meet together, either at the assemblies in synagogues or in the Temple. I did not teach secretly." ²¹ Why then do you ask me? Ask those who heard me, they know what I said."

²² At this reply one of the guards standing by gave Jesus a blow on the face, saying, "Is that the way to answer the High Priest?" ²³ Jesus said to him, "If I have spoken wrongly, point it out; but if I have spoken rightly, why do you strike me?"

²⁴ Then Annas sent him, bound, to Caiaphas, the High Priest.

²⁵ Now Simon Peter stood there warming himself. They said to him, "Surely you also are one of his disciples." He denied it and answered, "I am not." ²⁶ But one of the High Priest's servants, a kinsman of the one whose ear Peter had cut off, asked, "Did I not see you with him in the garden?" ²⁷ Again Peter denied it, and at once the cock crew.

Jesus before Pilate

■ ²⁸ Then they led Jesus from the house of Caiaphas to the court of the Roman governor. It was now morning. The Jews didn't enter lest they be made unclean (by coming into the house of a pagan) and be unable to eat the Passover meal.²⁹ So Pilate went out and asked, "What charge do you bring against this man?"

They answered,³⁰ "If he were not a criminal, we would not be handing him over to you."³¹ Pilate said, "Take him yourselves and judge him according to your own law." But they replied, "We ourselves are not allowed to put anyone to death."

³²It was clear from this what kind of death Jesus was to die, according to what Jesus himself had foretold.

³³Pilate then entered the court again, called Jesus and asked him, "Are you the King of the Jews?"

³⁴Jesus replied, "Are you saying this of your own accord, or did others say it to you?"

³⁵Pilate answered, "Am I a Jew? Your own nation and the chief priest have handed you over to me. What have you done?" ³⁶Jesus answered "My kingship does not come from this world. If I were king like those of this world, my guards would have fought to save me from being handed over to the Jews. But my kingship is not from here."

³⁷Pilate asked him, "So you are king?" And Jesus answered, "Just as you say, I am a king. For this I was born and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth. Everyone who is on the side of truth hears my voice."³⁸ Pilate said, "What is truth?"

■ CHRIST THE KING

My Kingship does not come from this world. It is important to remember what was said regarding Lk 8:9. In the Gospel the same word means: The Kingdom, that is, the country that the king governs; the reign, that is the government of the king; the Kingship, that is, the dignity and power of the king.

In Jesus' response to Pilate the meaning to be given to the word is not kingdom, but rather kingship which is the power of the king.

In any case, it would be an error to understand Jesus' words as follows: "My Kingdom is in another world, therefore, the social and political problems of this world do not concern me," and think that Jesus came to give spiritual salvation, individually, to believing souls.

Likewise, it would be an error to understand the word: You would not have any power over me unless it had been given you from above as affirming that the authorities receive their power directly from God and that no one should take steps to replace them with others less corrupt, or less unjust, or more capable. See commentary on Rom 13:1.

Jesus with hands bound, behaves like a king before the governor, Pilate, who is captive of his office and of his own ambitions. Jesus is not a king like those of this world, because he does not exert the kind of power that people are used to obeying. Jesus, king of the Jews, has not come to revive the independent Jewish kingdom, but to establish the Kingdom of Truth, which God promised them for centuries.

Yet truth does not win with arms, but thanks to the testimony of those who live according to the truth. Witnesses of the truth are often persecuted, but they themselves do not persecute others.

My kingship does not come from this world. Jesus is unlike other authorities who have gained their positions through force, or have won in an election. He has been sent and anointed by the Father.

Pilate on the other hand, had been appointed by the Emperor of Rome and owed his career as much to his own ambition as to several protectors. How could such a man have power over the Son of God and have him crucified for fear of the people, if it were not to fulfill a decree from on High? Indeed, not even a sparrow falls to the ground without the Father allowing it.

God would not permit human creatures to destroy the destiny of his Son. He cares for each one of us in such a way that even the injustice that is committed against us serves his plans for our good. And because our fate depends at the same time on the Father and on human authorities, we should believe that he takes advantage of their decisions to carry out his own purposes even when their power is of this world, that is to say, of a very questionable legitimacy.

Pilate condemned Jesus unwillingly. Having oppressed and shamelessly exploited the Jews he feared the denunciations that they might make to Caesar against him. The condemnation of Jesus, however, meant for him nothing more than the death of one more Jew: he did not bear the whole guilt, since that type of justice was the result of the Roman colonial system.

Caiaaphas, instead, the anointed High Priest

Pilate then went out to the Jews again and said, "I find no crime in this man."³⁹ Now, according to a custom, I must release a prisoner of yours at the Passover. With your agreement I will release for you the King of the Jews."⁴⁰ But, they insisted and cried out, "Not this man, but Barabbas!" Now Barabbas was a robber.

19¹ Then Pilate had Jesus taken away and scourged.² The soldiers also twisted thorns into a crown and put it on his head. They threw a cloak of royal purple around his shoulders³ and began coming up to him and saluting him, "Hail, king of the Jews", and they struck him on the face.

⁴ Pilate went outside yet another time and said to the Jews, "Look, I am bringing him out and I want you to know that I find no crime in him."⁵ Jesus then came out wearing the crown of thorns and the purple cloak and Pilate pointed to him saying, "Here is the man!"

⁶ On seeing him the chief priests and the guards cried out, "Crucify him! Crucify him!" Pilate replied, "Take him yourselves and have him crucified, for I find no case against him."⁷ The Jews then said, "We have a Law, and according to the Law this man must die because he made himself Son of God."

⁸ When Pilate heard this he was more afraid.⁹ And coming back into the court he asked Jesus, "Where are you from?" But Jesus gave him no answer.¹⁰ Then Pilate said to him,

"You will not speak to me? Do you not know that I have power to release you just as I have power to crucify you?"¹¹ Jesus replied, "You would have no power over me unless it had been given you from above; therefore the one who handed me over to you is even more guilty."

¹² Because of this Pilate tried to release him, but the Jews cried out, "If you release this man, you are not a friend of Caesar. Anyone who makes himself king is defying Caesar."

¹³ When Pilate heard this, he had Jesus brought outside to the place called the Stone Floor – in Hebrew Gabbatha – and there he seated him in the judge's seat.¹⁴ It was the Preparation Day for the Passover, about noon. So Pilate said to the Jews, "Here is your king."¹⁵ But they cried out, "Away! Take him away! Crucify him!" Pilate replied, "Shall I crucify your king?" And the chief priests answered, "We have no king but Caesar."

¹⁶ Then Pilate handed Jesus over to them to be crucified, and they took charge of him.

Jesus is crucified

¹⁷ Bearing his own cross, Jesus went out of the city to what is called the Place of the Skull, in Hebrew: Golgotha.¹⁸ There he was crucified and with him two others, one on either side, and Jesus was in the middle.

¹⁹ Pilate had a notice written and fastened to the cross that read: Jesus the Nazorean, King of the Jews.

of God, could not condemn Jesus without slandering knowingly his deeds and his word. So he was more guilty (11).

We have no other king but Caesar (v. 15). Thus shouted the crowd impelled by the leaders, although they hated the Romans and their emperor. In fact, several years later the Jews would have no other king but Caesar, and this king would destroy them.

Pilate wanted to save the life of his prisoner when he presented him in his disfigured condition. But instead he wounded the pride of the Jewish people: a Christ the King humiliated – this they could not accept.

²⁰ Many Jewish people saw this title because the place where Jesus was crucified was very close to the city. It was, moreover, written in Hebrew, Latin and Greek. ²¹ The chief priests said to Pilate, "Do not write: 'The king of the Jews'; but: This man claimed to be king of the Jews." ²² Pilate answered them, "What I have written, I have written."

²³ When the soldiers crucified Jesus, they took his clothes and divided them into four parts, one part for each of them. But as for the tunic it was woven in one piece from top to bottom, ²⁴ so they said, "Let us not tear it, but cast lots to decide who will get it." This fulfilled the words of Scripture: They divided my clothing among themselves; they cast lots for my garment. And this was what the soldiers did.

◆ THE MOTHER OF THE BELIEVERS

At the moment of man's fall, Eve was with Adam. Now, at the moment of restoration, that is of the second creation, another woman is with the Son of Man, the second Adam. Mary has neither spouse nor son who can receive her, and for the Jews, a woman who remains alone would be considered cursed. Jesus entrusts Mary to John, and also, John to Mary. John testifies having heard both phrases. Notice that he writes: Jesus said to the Mother, and not, to his mother. This is a new symbolic gesture of Jesus. Mary will be the Mother of believers.

Through this last deed of Jesus, the Church discovered something about the mystery of the Christian life. The believer is a member of a spiritual family. As a child needs a father and a mother to grow normally, so too, does the believer need Mary and the heavenly Father. This is an unchanging doctrine of the Church, which in no way attempts to make the creature equal with the Creator. The believer who has taken Mary in his home, like John, will never be a fanatic or a man of quibbling faith, or have the features hardened and at times, be embittered like orphans who were deprived of a mother's love. There is a form of humility, joy and interior peace, of simple wholesome devotion proper to those who, living in the Catholic Church, have known how to open their doors to Mary without throwing out Christ.

Jesus' last words

◆ ²⁵ Near the cross of Jesus stood his mother, his mother's sister Mary, who was the wife of Cleophas, and Mary of Magdala. ²⁶ When Jesus saw the Mother, and the disciple, he said to the Mother, "Woman, this is your son." ²⁷ Then he said to the disciple "There is your mother." And from that moment the disciple took her to his own home.

○ ²⁸ After that Jesus knew that all was now finished and he said, I am thirsty as it was written in Scripture ²⁹ A jar full of bitter wine stood there so, putting a sponge soaked in the wine on a hyssop stalk, they raised it to his lips. ³⁰ Jesus took the wine and said, "It is accomplished." Then he bowed his head and gave up the spirit.

○ I am thirsty. Jesus is tortured by thirst. But he also thirsts that the Kingdom of his Father may be realized in the world. He thirsts for selfless love from those who may share his deepest thoughts and are willing to follow him until Calvary.

It is accomplished. Jesus drank the cup of sorrow and humiliation to the last drop. The Father had placed it in his hands as the means for becoming the Saviour we need. The Work of the Son of God made flesh, which should be nothing less than a new creation of the world, is accomplished. The earthly existence of the Son of God comes to an end, and from the seed planted in the earth will come forth the New Man.

The preparatory times of the Jewish religion in which the Law occupied first place and the fear due to unforgiven sins was never lost, are accomplished. A stage of history has ended, in which the rest of humanity had been dragged by its fears, and acceptance of its deadly fate which was a form of its slavery to the Evil Spirit.

Now begins a new era in history, the era of the New Covenant of God with humanity. The Spirit will be communicated to the Church. John says Jesus commended his spirit, a word which also indicated that he was giving his Spirit to us.

+ THE SACRED HEART

In Jesus' death as in his life, there are many details that enable us to understand his sacrifice

Jews did not want the bodies to remain on the cross during the sabbath, as this sabbath was a very solemn day. So they asked Pilate to have the legs of the condemned men broken, so they might take away the bodies.

³² The soldiers came and broke the legs of the first man and of the other who had been crucified with Jesus. ³³ When they came to Jesus, they saw that he was already dead; so they did not break his legs. ³⁴ One of the soldiers, however, pierced his side with a lance and immediately there came out blood and water.

³⁵ This is the testimony given by one who saw it; his testimony is true and Another knows that he speaks the truth. This man gives his witness so that you may believe as well. ³⁶ All this happened to fulfill the words of Scripture. Not one of his bones shall be broken. ³⁷ Another text says: They shall look on him whom they have pierced.

³⁸ After this, Joseph of Arimathea approached Pilate, for he was a disciple of Jesus, although secretly, for fear of the Jews. And he asked Pilate to let him remove the body of Jesus. And Pilate agreed. So, he came and took away his body.

³⁹ Nicodemus, the man who earlier had come to Jesus by night, also came and brought a jar of myrrh mixed with aloes, about a hundred pounds. ⁴⁰ They took the body of Jesus and wrapped it in linen cloths with the spices, following the burial custom of the Jews.

⁴¹ There was a garden in the place where Jesus had been crucified, and, in the garden, a new tomb in which no one had ever been laid. ⁴² As the tomb was very near, they buried Jesus there because they had no time left before the Jewish Preparation Day.

The Lord is risen

20 ¹ Now, on the first day after the sabbath, Mary of Magdala came to the tomb early in the morning, while it was still dark and she saw that the stone blocking the better, if we see them in the light of the Old Testament.

In the piercing of Jesus' heart the words of the prophet Zecharias: They shall look on him whom they pierced (Zec 12:10), were literally verified. John also records a prescription of the Law regarding the Passover Lamb: Not one of his bones shall be broken (Ex 12:46). This happened at the death of Jesus, the true victim who took the place of the Passover Lamb.

Blood and water came out. The Jews believed that only through the blood of their victims could they obtain God's pardon. Speaking poetically, first John, then later the Church, said that from the open breast of Christ came forth the sacrament of Baptism and the Eucharist, water and blood. From the cross, forgiveness and new life have sprung forth for us.

The open heart of Jesus invites us to discover the powerful, hidden and mysterious love that inspired his life. The disciples of Jesus who had lived with him, would find that their remembrance and emotions would be diluted and disappear with time; but they would discover, on the other hand, that there had been no word, or deed or even silence of Jesus which had not been an expression of his love for God. From his open heart on the cross originates our devotion to the Heart of Jesus. Let us not get distracted by intellectual ideas in an attempt to explain or interpret faith; rather, let us contemplate God's love and allow it to transform us, making us like unto him.

Joseph of Arimathea went to Pilate: because the disciples had no means of approaching the Roman governor. Joseph and Nicodemus were disciples in "secret." Because Jesus identified himself with the common people, it was difficult for those in better social positions to integrate themselves in his group. Here we have an example of the inevitable consequences of a preferential option for the poor.

There was a garden. The place for the executions was an abandoned quarry near the walls of Jerusalem. Tombs were dug along the sides while the bottom was filled and passed as gardens. A rock projected, about four meters high, from the middle of the area. This rock was called Calvary and it was on it that the crosses were raised.

■ On the second day after the burial, it ap-tomb had been moved away.² So she ran to Peter and the other disciple whom Jesus loved. And she said to them, "They have taken the Lord out of the tomb and we don't know where they have laid him."

³Peter then set out with the other disciple to go to the tomb. ⁴They ran together but the other disciple outran Peter and reached the tomb first. ⁵He bent down and saw the linen cloths lying flat, but he did not enter.

⁶Then Simon Peter came following him and entered the tomb; he too, saw the linen cloths lying flat. ⁷The napkin, which had been put around his head was not lying flat like the other linen cloths but it stayed rolled up in its place. ⁸Then the other disciple who had reached the tomb first also went in; he saw and believed. ⁹For as yet they did not know that the Scriptures foretold his rising from the dead.

¹⁰After that the disciples went home again.

◆ ¹¹Mary stood weeping outside the tomb and as she wept, she bent down to look inside; ¹²and she saw two angels in white sitting where the body of Jesus had been, one at the head, and the other at the feet. ¹³They said, "Woman, why are you weeping?" She answered, "Because they have taken my Lord and I don't know where they have put him."

¹⁴As she said this, she turned around and saw Jesus standing there, but she did not recognize him. ¹⁵Jesus said to her, "Woman, why are you weeping? Who are you looking for?" She thought it was the gardener and answered him, "If you have taken him peared that Christ was alive and had gone from the tomb. The resurrection took place on the first day of the week, which henceforth would be called the Day of the Lord that is, Sunday.

In Luke's gospel, after Jesus' resurrection he helps his disciples revive their faith and hope. Here, instead we see the believers silently contemplating the risen Lord. Christ appears to Mary who does not recognize him. When he stands in the midst of his disciples, he has to show his wounds to prove that it is he himself, he who had died. Jesus is among them, but his appearance is that of a stranger, and his spiritually transformed body, radiates the victory over sin and death.

Then Peter arrived. Several texts record that Peter was both a witness to the empty tomb and of Jesus risen from the dead (Lk 24:12 and 24:44; 1 Co 15:5). Our faith is supported primarily by the testimony of the apostles, and especially by the testimony of the head of the apostles.

He saw the linen cloths lying flat. The linens designate the sheet, about 4 meters long, spread under the body from the feet to the head and then, above the body from the head to the feet; they also refer to the bands that tied the two ends of the sheet. The dead person's face was wrapped with a separate cloth, the napkin which was tied under the chin and over the head.

The sheet and the bands were lying where the body had been but were flat for, the body inside them had dematerialized, leaving an extraordinary impression on the sheet, which is still seen today in the venerated relic in Turin. The napkin, which was rolled in the other direction staved as it was.

Jesus had not returned to life with his earthly body. This had dematerialized, so when we speak of the risen body of Jesus, we refer to something we have never experienced on earth. Those who have had dreams and visions of Jesus have only seen images of him, but they have not seen him, except for only a few of the most eminent saints.

◆ Do not hold on to me, I have not yet ascended to my Father (v. 17). Before his death, Jesus did not disapprove of the passionate feelings and actions of Mary. But now this familiar gesture to take possession of her loved Master is no longer appropriate.

He is now the Risen One and though he lets himself be seen by his disciples for a few days, he is in the Glory of the Father. His disciples must relinquish the physical presence of Jesus with which they felt so much at ease. From now on the followers or the brothers and lovers of Jesus will embrace him in a secret and marvellous way when they are given gifts of prayer and faith. It is then that the contemplative spirit, who is represented by Mary, may enjoy by himself the whole of Christ (see Song 3:4)

I have not yet ascended to my Father. Jesus is revealing the great desire which filled his life. He came from God and must return to the away, tell me where you have put him, and I will go and remove him."

¹⁶Jesus said to her, "Mary". She turned and said to him, "Rabboni" – which means, Master. ¹⁷Jesus said to her, "Do not hold on to me; you see I have not yet ascended to the Father. But go to my brothers and say to them: I am ascending to my Father, who is your Father, to my God, who is your God."

¹⁸So Mary of Magdala went and said to the disciples, "I have seen the Lord, and this is what he said to me."

o ¹⁹On the evening of that day, the first day after the sabbath, the doors were locked where the disciples were, because of their fear of the Jews, but Jesus came and stood among them. He said to them, "Peace be with you;" ²⁰then he showed them his hands and his side. The disciples kept looking at the Lord and were full of joy.

²¹Again Jesus said to them, "Peace be with you. As the Father has sent me, so I am sending you." ²²After saying this he breathed on them and said to them, "Receive the Holy Spirit; ²³for those whose sins you forgive, they are forgiven; for those whose sins you retain, they are retained."

²⁴Thomas, the Twin, one of the Twelve, was not with them when Jesus came. ²⁵The other disciples told him, "We have seen the Lord." But he replied, "Until I have seen in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger in the mark of the nails and my hand in his side, I will not believe."

²⁶Eight days later, the disciples were in the house again and Thomas was with them. Despite the locked doors Jesus came in. He stood among them and said, "Peace be with you."

Father. This is "the greatest love in the world". All the love that Jesus has for us is but a manifestation of that other love, because God the Father is the fountain and the goal of all love. See the commentary on Mt 19:16 in this regard.

It is not by chance that the word Lord is again repeated seven times, the last time by Thomas: "You are my Lord and my God". This expresses the faith of the Church.

The risen Jesus' apparitions to his disciples, besides fostering their hope and making them qualified witnesses of his resurrection were necessary for their spiritual formation. The disciples had to learn to recognize Jesus no longer through their senses but through faith. They had to learn to follow and love Jesus no longer physically present but present through the Spirit pouring faith and love into their hearts. Likewise, we have to learn to recognize and follow Jesus in the dim light of faith, in desolation as well as in consolation, thus we will be among those whom Jesus blesses: Happy are those who believe without seeing me (v. 29).

o Just as in the first creation God infused life into man, so, too, Jesus' breath communicates life to the new spiritual creation. Christ who died to take away the sin of the world, now leaves to his own, the power to forgive.

Thus the hope of the Biblical people has been realized. God led them in such a way that they felt the universal presence of sin and so they offered animals in the Temple uninterruptedly to appease God. But that river of blood failed to destroy sin, and the priests themselves offered sacrifices for their own sins before praying to God for the others. Ceremonies and rites had no power to purify the heart or to give the Holy Spirit.

But now, in the person of Jesus risen from the dead, a new world has begun. Although humanity may continue to sin, already the first of its sons, the "eldest brother of them all" is sharing fully the holy life of God.

Those who strive for the spiritual life, suffer above all, because they are keenly aware of the universal presence of sin. Their deep sorrow is in not yet having attained total liberation from sin. Hence for them, the forgiveness of sin is recognized as the greatest gift given to the Church.

The capacity to forgive is the only power able to release the great tensions within humankind. Although it does not easily conquer hearts, it is an invaluable secret and the Church should consider it as its own particular treasure.

One who does not know how to forgive does not know how to love. On making us aware of sin and purifying us from it, the Church helps us demonstrate a more authentic love for the neighbour.

²⁷ Then he said to Thomas, "Put your finger here and see my hands; stretch out your hand and put it into my side. Doubt no longer but believe."

²⁸ Thomas then said, "You are my Lord and my God". ²⁹ Jesus replied, "You believe because you see me, don't you? Happy are those who believe although they do not see."

Conclusion

³⁰ There were many other signs that Jesus gave in the presence of his disciples but they are not recorded in this book. ³¹ These are recorded so that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; believe and you will have life through his Name.

Appendix: the appearance of Jesus by the lake

+ 21 ¹ After this Jesus revealed himself to the disciples by the Lake of Tiberias. He appeared to them in this way. ² Simon Peter, Thomas who was called the Twin, Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, the sons of Zebedee and two other disciples were together; ³ and Simon Peter said to them, "I am going to fish." They replied, "We will come with you" and they went out and got into the boat. But they caught nothing that night.

⁴ When day had already broken, Jesus was standing on the shore, but the disciples did not know that it was Jesus. ⁵ Jesus called them, "Children, have you anything to eat?" They answered, "Nothing." ⁶ Then he said to them, "Throw the net on the right side of the boat and you will find some." When they had lowered the net, they were not able to pull it in because of the great number of fish.

⁷ Then the disciple Jesus loved said to Peter, "It is the Lord!" At these words, "It is the Lord", Simon Peter put on his clothes, for he was stripped for work, and jumped into the water.

⁸ The other disciples came in the boat dragging the net full of fish; they were not far from land, about a hundred meters.

⁹ When they landed, they saw a charcoal fire there with fish on it, and some bread. ¹⁰ Jesus said to them,

1. Lk 5, 1

9. Mt 4, 11; Lk 24, 41

+ Jesus appears this time near Lake Tiberias. This delightful story is filled with divine presence as Christ stands on the lonely lake shore in the light of dawn. The apostles see a stranger, but John, the prophet, recognizes Christ.

The apostles pulled in a net full of 153 big fish. This number had a symbolic value; it expressed plenitude and universality. Such will be the apostolic work: all nations of the earth will be brought to Christ. The triple questioning of Peter by Jesus may be compared to the triple denial during Jesus' passion. Peter, too, being the shepherd of the shepherds, is a forgiven sinner. Jesus entrusts the whole Church to him: the same as in Mt 16:13. Do you love me? This is the first condition to be fulfilled by a shepherd in the Church.

This dialogue between Jesus and Peter expresses what being a Christian is all about. Jesus asks us every day if we love him in a special and exclusive way: Do you love me more than these? We answer "Yes", despite our miseries, as Peter did; Jesus then, invites us to follow him anew, out of love (v. 22), and to share with him the responsibility of pasturing the people of God. There is no better way of following Jesus than by giving up our lives for his mission.

Jesus orders Peter to care for the Church and with this, orders us to obey. We obey freely and conscientiously not because the shepherds are always capable and infallible, but rather because they perform a necessary function of authority. We believe that historically, they are the successors of the apostles and for that reason, have received their mission from God.

The Gospel ends with a prediction of the different fates that will be Peter's and John's. Peter died a martyr's death in Rome in the year 66 or 67; John was still living in the year 90. He was the last of the witnesses of Christ and many thought he would not die until the Lord should come again; hence, the Gospel insists that Jesus had not made such a promise.

The last paragraph was placed there by those associated with John at the time of his death.

"Bring some of the fish you have just caught." "So Simon Peter climbed into the boat and pulled the net to shore. It was full of big fish – one hundred and fifty-three – but in spite of this, the net was not torn.

¹²Jesus said to them, "Come and have breakfast," and not one of the disciples dared ask him, "Who are you?" for they knew it was the Lord. ¹³Jesus then came and took the bread and gave it to them, and he did the same with the fish.

¹⁵After they had finished breakfast, Jesus said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of John, do you love me more than these?" He answered, "Yes, Lord, you know that I love you." And Jesus said, "Feed my lambs."

¹⁶A second time Jesus said to him, "Simon, son of John, do you love me?" And Peter answered, "Yes, Lord, you know that I love you." Jesus said to him, "Look after my sheep." ¹⁷And a third time he said to him, "Simon, son of John, do you love me?"

Peter was saddened because Jesus asked him a third time, "Do you love me?" and he said, "Lord, you know everything; you know that I love you."

Jesus then said, "Feed my sheep. ¹⁸Truly, I say to you, when you were young you put on your belt and walked where you liked. But when you grow old, you will stretch out your hands and another will put a belt around you and lead you where you do not wish to go." ¹⁹Jesus spoke like this to show the kind of death by which Peter was to glorify God. And he added, "Follow me."

²⁰Peter looked back and saw that the disciple Jesus loved, was following as well, the one who had reclined close to Jesus at the supper and had asked him, "Lord, who is to betray you?" ²¹On seeing him Peter asked Jesus, "Lord, what about him?" ²²Jesus answered, "If I want him to remain until I come, does that concern you? Follow me."

²³Because of this the rumor spread among the brothers that this disciple would not die. Yet Jesus had not said to Peter, "He will not die", but "suppose I want him to remain until I come."

²⁴It is this disciple who testifies about the things he has recorded here and we know that his testimony is true. ²⁵But Jesus did many other things; if all were written down, I think that the world itself would not hold the books recording them.

Jesus taken up to heaven

But first he had instructed through the Holy Spirit the apostles he had chosen. ³After his passion, he presented himself to them, giving many signs that he was alive; over a period of forty days he appeared to them and taught them concerning the Kingdom of God. ⁴Once while he was staying with them, he told them, "Do not leave Jerusalem but wait for the fulfillment of the Father's promise about which I have spoken to you: ⁵John baptized with water, but you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit within a few days."

INTRODUCTION

The Gospel tells us clearly that while Jesus proclaimed the coming of God's kingdom in his small country, he was even more concerned about forming those "apostles," that is, those sent by him, to spread the message throughout the world since they were to be the foundation of his Church.

What took place from the time of the apostles until our days? We would need many books to relate the lives of our fellow-believers in the course of the twenty centuries covering the existence of Christ's church. What is important in this history is not the mediocrity of most Christians: this is the human condition. What really interests us is knowing what were the experiences and deeds of the true believers, apostles and martyrs. The first book dealing with them is the Acts of the Apostles, written by Luke, the evangelist. Here, Luke tells us about the first stages of the Church in the years following the resurrection of Christ.

We are also interested in the book of Acts for another reason: in recent years, we have witnessed the collapse of many structures which had made the Church into an imposing institution, and we suspect that this enormous body will only recover its vital energy through the flourishing and the increase of authentic Christian communities: The book of Acts teaches us precisely how the early communities emerged: through the labor of the apostles and the working of the Holy Spirit.

Luke did not witness the beginnings since he was a pagan and was living outside Palestine in Antioch. But, after his conversion, he accompanied Paul in his missions, from the year 50 on. And so somehow there are two parts in Acts. In the first part, chapters 1-15, Luke gathered all that he could find out concerning the first twenty years of the Church. In the second part; chapters 15-28, Luke left us mainly the story of the activities of his master, Paul. The book was concluded in the year 62.

⁷ And he answered, "It is not for you to know the time or the moment which the Father has fixed by his own authority. ⁸ But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes upon you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, throughout Judea and Samaria, even to the ends of the earth."

⁹ As soon as Jesus said this, he was taken up before their eyes and a cloud hid him from their sight. ¹⁰ While they were still looking up to heaven, two men dressed in white stood beside them ¹¹ and said, "Men of Galilee, why do you stand here looking up at the sky? This Jesus who has been taken from you into heaven, will return in the same way as you have seen him go there."

The disciples await the Holy Spirit

+ ¹² Then they returned to Jerusalem from the Mount called Olives, which is a fifteen-minute walk away. ¹³ On entering the city they went to the room upstairs where they were staying. Present there were Peter, John, James and Andrew; Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James, son of Alphaeus; Simon the Zealot and Judas son of James. ¹⁴ All of these together gave themselves to constant prayer. With them were some women and also Mary, the mother of Jesus, and his brothers.

Matthias elected

■ ¹⁵ It was during this time that Peter stood up in the midst of the community – about one hundred and twenty in all – ¹⁶ and he said,

"Brothers, it was necessary that the Scriptures referring to Judas be fulfilled. The Holy Spirit had spoken through David about the one who would lead the crowd coming to arrest Jesus. ¹⁷ He was one of our num-o Luke, the author of the Acts, dedicates his book to Theophilus, to whom he already dedicated his Gospel (Lk 1:1).

He who is acting and speaking in this first page is the Risen Christ. Jesus has passed through the gates of death and is already sharing the Glory of the Father, but for some days he wants to manifest himself to his disciples and give them his last instructions.

Jesus has fulfilled his mission among men. The time of the Spirit has come. Jesus will send him to the believers so they may carry on the evangelization of the world. The first task of the apostles will be to establish the Church. The death of Jesus had prevented him from founding this Church and, in dying, he had given this great project into the hands of his Father.

Jesus is no longer visibly among us and this is to our advantage, for we must assume our responsibilities. But the Christian community will discover, at first with surprise and then with joy, that the Spirit of God, Spirit of Jesus, is acting in their midst.

Is it now that you will restore the kingdom of Israel? The apostles still identify the reign of God with the liberation of the holy nation, Israel. In fact, God's purpose is much wider. The Gospel is to change human history, individuals, cultures, the whole of human reality. Only the Father knows the times and the goals of this history about which people today are more and more concerned.

Jesus was taken up. It was in this way that Jesus willed to leave them, according to the culture of that time, when people thought Heaven was above the earth. But we know Heaven is neither above nor below. Jesus is in this spiritual centre – Jesus is the spiritual centre from where God directs human history.

+ The apostles cannot begin such a difficult mission before they have received the Holy Spirit. They have done everything that depended on them for this and cannot but put themselves into the hands of God and wait perseveringly in prayer for the time he has fixed.

Note the presence of Mary and also of these "brothers" of Jesus who had hardly believed in him but now take advantage of being his relatives and fellow citizens of Nazareth.

Mary, mother of Jesus, played a decisive role during those days when the apostles tried to reflect together on all they had seen and learned from Jesus, in order to clarify the message they had to give to the world. Mary, the only witness of the Annunciation and of the private life of Jesus, helped them perceive the mystery of his divine personality.

ber and had been called to share our common ministry.

¹⁸ (We know that he bought a field with the reward of his sin; yet he threw himself headlong to his death, his body burst open and all his bowels spilled out. ¹⁹ This event became known to all the people living in Jerusalem and they named that field Akeldama in their own language, which means Field of Blood).

²⁰ In the book of Psalms it is written: Let his house become deserted and may no one live in it. But it is also written: May another take his office.

²¹ Therefore we must choose someone from among those who were with us during all the time that the Lord Jesus moved about with us, ²² beginning with John's baptism until the day when Jesus was taken away from us. One of these has to become with us a witness to his resurrection."

²³ Then they proposed two: Joseph called Barsabbas, also known as Justus, and Matthias. ²⁴ They prayed: "You know, Lord, what is in the hearts of all. Show us, therefore, which of the two you have chosen ²⁵ to replace Judas in this apostolic ministry which he deserted to go to the place he deserved."

²⁶ Then they drew lots between the two and the choice fell on Matthias, who was added to the eleven apostles.

The coming of the Holy Spirit

◆ 2 ¹ When the day of Pentecost came, they were all together in one place, ² And suddenly out of the sky came a sound like a strong rushing wind and it filled the whole house where they were sitting. There appeared ³ tongues as if of fire which parted and came to rest upon each one

■ Nine days passed from the Ascension of Jesus to Pentecost. From this came the practice of extending a prayer for nine days, which is called a novena. The most important novena is the one in preparation for Pentecost, when we ask for the Holy Spirit.

The community has a leader who is Peter, and gathers around the team of the twelve who have been chosen and formed by Jesus.

Note what is required of the one chosen to take the place of Judas, that is to say, to be an apostle. He must first be a witness of Jesus' resurrection, so that he may be among men a witness of the mystery of death and life that God is working out in us. In the first community the apostles are the official witnesses of Jesus. From then on, it will not be enough for any believer to "believe in Christ in his own way"; everyone is required to have the faith of the apostles and of their successors.

Note also how a decision is made with the authority of Peter, with the responsibility of the entire community and with this casting of lots that is a way of making room for the working of the Spirit. This will remain as an example for the Church of all times. The successors of the apostles and the leaders of the communities cannot impose their authority from above without the agreement of the Church, but the community cannot choose her leaders without the agreement of the apostles.

◆ Pentecost: this means "the fiftieth day after the Passover, one of the most important Jewish feasts. Because of this numerous Jews living in foreign countries had at that time come to Jerusalem as pilgrims.

That same day the baptism of fire announced by John (Lk 3:16) takes place. God sends the Spirit of his Son and with this the Church is born. For the Church is not a human institution, or the work of a group of believers; it comes from God's initiative and God wills that individuals of every nation witness this achievement.

The rushing wind is a sign, because spirit means both breath and wind in the Hebrew culture. Inspired by the Spirit, Peter speaks up. He now knows the truth and believes, and this is why he can boldly proclaim it (1 Jn 15:26 and 16:3).

The achievement of Pentecost was as unique as was the Resurrection. Nevertheless it remains as the pattern of other interventions of God in history. On one hand the Spirit constantly brings about our apostolic renewals, religious awakenings, dynamic communities that become the new blood of the Church which is constantly growing old and is constantly being renewed.

The Spirit comes to give life to the Church. It also comes to confirm or affirm the believers. The baptism of fire that the apostles receive is of them. ⁴All were filled with Holy Spirit and began to speak other languages, as the Spirit enabled them to speak.

⁵Staying in Jerusalem were religious Jews from every nation under heaven. ⁶When they heard this sound, a crowd gathered, all excited because each heard them speaking in his own language. ⁷Beside themselves with amazement and wonder, they said, "Are not all these who are speaking Galileans?" ⁸How is it that each of us hears them in his own native language? ⁹Here are Parthians, Medes and Elamites and residents of Mesopotamia, Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia, ¹⁰Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya belonging to Cyrene, and visitors from Rome, ¹¹both Jews and foreigners who accept Jewish beliefs, Cretians and Arabians; and all of us hear them proclaiming in our own language what God, the Saviour, does.

¹²They were amazed and greatly confused, and they kept asking one another, "What does this mean?"

¹³But others laughed and said, "These people are drunk."

Peter addresses the crowd

o ¹⁴Then Peter stood up, with the Eleven and, with a loud voice, addressed them, "Fellow Jews and all foreigners now staying in Jerusalem, listen to what I have to say. ¹⁵These people are not drunk as you suppose, for it is only nine o'clock in the morning. ¹⁶Indeed what the prophet Joel spoke about has happened:

4. 10, 46; 19, 6; 1 Cor 12

6. Gen 11, 1

13. 1 Cor 14, 23

normally conferred on us through Confirmation (see commentary on 8:9).

Each one heard them speaking in his own language. This wonder contrasts with what happened in ancient times in the story of the Tower of Babel, when men, rebellious against God, ceased to understand each other's language. We understand that the Gospel gathers together the human family always divided into factions, sects or parties who do not speak the same language because each one follows his own dreams, or fears, or interests.

In the opportunity provided by Pentecost we have for the first time the gift of tongues. Peter, of course, preached in the language of the Jews and most of the audience understood him. But the Christians around Peter were given the gift of tongues and praised God in other languages. The Jews – pilgrims coming from so many nations – were able to recognize these languages and so they were amazed at hearing the "Galilean" believers. We know that the gift of tongues is one of the manifestations of the Spirit. With it one is compelled to praise God with words he himself does not understand. And he experiences a deep joy on seeing that God takes control of him and enters his innerself to make him his instrument (see 1 Cor 12 & 14).

o This is the first proclamation of Jesus' Resurrection. Peter interprets the signs that have just been given (wind, storm, tongues...). All this reveals something extraordinary that cannot be seen: Jesus has been raised and is now giving the Spirit.

I will pour out my Spirit on every mortal (17). Before Jesus' coming, the Spirit was given only to the prophets. But now he comes to the entire people of Christ, as foretold by Joel (3:1).

The sun will be darkened (20). The gift of Spirit announces the coming of a "Judgment," that is to say, an exceptional crisis in which only the believers will be saved (such crises may occur throughout history).

God had accredited Jesus of Nazareth (22). Peter clears the name of Jesus, condemned to death a few weeks before. Many people considered him as a prophet, but a defeated prophet, and Peter proclaims that God has granted him the most incredible thing that people could hope for: he has raised Jesus, fulfilling for him all the promises of Sacred History (v. 25-31): these promises will now extend to all believers.

This Jesus whom you crucified (36). This is a very bold accusation. Peter denounces the sin of the people who abandoned Jesus, the crime of the leaders who murdered him with the appearance of justice. Peter could be accused of meddling with politics, because the teaching of Jesus indicated a way of non-violent action that bothered all the violent, the self-interested and the vindictive, in fact, many of the politically involved.

What shall we do? ... Repent. In those days, to repent and to be converted meant to share the life of the infant Church which showed to the nation the way of salvation taught by Jesus. The Church did not appear as a new religion opposed to Judaism, but as a centre of more authentic life.

¹⁷In the last days, God says, I will pour out my Spirit on every mortal. Your sons and daughters will speak through the Holy Spirit; your young men will see visions and your old men will have dreams.

¹⁸In those days I will pour out my Spirit even on my servants, both men and women, and they will speak through him.

¹⁹ I will perform miracles in the sky above and wonders on the earth below. ²⁰ The sun will be darkened and the moon will turn red as blood, before the great and glorious Day of the Lord comes.

²² Fellow Israelites, listen to what I shall tell you about Jesus of Nazareth. God accredited him and through him did powerful deeds and wonders and signs in your midst. ²³ You delivered him to sinners to be crucified and killed, and in this way the purpose of God from all times was fulfilled. ²⁴ But God raised him to life and released him from the pain of death, because it was impossible for him to be held in the power of death. ²⁵ David spoke of him when he said: I saw the Lord before me at all times; he is by my side, that I may not be shaken. ²⁶ Therefore my heart was glad and my tongue rejoiced; my body too will live in hope. ²⁷ Because you will not forsake me in the abode of the dead nor allow your Holy One to experience corruption. ²⁸ You have made known to me the paths of life, and your presence will fill me with joy.

²⁹ Brothers, there is no doubt at all that the patriarch David died and was buried; his tomb is with us to this day. ³⁰ But he knew that God had sworn to him that one of his descendants would sit upon his throne and, ³¹ as he was a prophet, he foresaw and spoke of the resurrection of the Messiah. So he said that he would not be left in the region of the dead, nor would his body experience corruption.

³² This Messiah is Jesus and we are all witnesses that God raised him to life. ³³ He has been exalted at God's right side and the Father has entrusted the Holy Spirit to him; this Spirit he has just poured upon us as you now see and hear.

³⁴David did not ascend into

Save yourselves from this crooked generation (4). This means that this entire generation was missing the unique opportunity they were given. For God asked them to take the most decisive step in Sacred History; even the Roman oppression could be overcome by a people able to put the Gospel into practice. And at the same time Jesus made them discover the love of God the Father for which the whole Bible had prepared them.

Some three thousand were added to their number. They already knew of Jesus, but were not committed to him. They were converted by the common action of the Holy Spirit and the apostles. A church in which signs of the action of the Spirit would not be seen could not say that Jesus lived in her midst.

+ Those who have been baptized feel strongly united by the new faith and long for a communal life. As they gather in private houses, the communities are not too big and so they can know each other and share everything.

Luke tells us what they do and we must note the order of priorities:

- first the teaching of the apostles
- then comes christian fellowship, with more attention to the weak (chapter 4).
- only then may the breaking of bread, that is the Eucharist, be celebrated.
- finally common prayers of thanksgiving to prolong the Eucharist.

In several communities today life is lacking because the first point, which is the basis for all the rest is not established.

The Spirit of Jesus comes to us through the Word and the Eucharist: these are the sources of the Church's dynamism. But by the word, we do not mean the study of the Bible merely to know the Bible. The Bible helps us realize how God continues to speak to us through the actual heaven, but he himself said: *The Lord said to my Lord: sit at my right side³⁵ until I make your enemies a stool for your feet.*³⁶ Let Israel then know for sure that God has made Lord and Christ this Jesus whom you crucified."

³⁷ When they heard this, they were deeply troubled. And they asked Peter and the other apostles, "What shall we do, brothers?"

³⁸ Peter answered: "Each of you must repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, so that your sins may be forgiven. Then you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.³⁹ For the promise of God was made to you and your children, and to all the other nations whom the Lord our God has called."

⁴⁰ With many other words Peter gave the message and appealed to them saying, "Save yourselves from this crooked generation." ⁴¹ So those who accepted his word were baptized; some three thousand were added to their number that day.

The first community

+ ⁴² They were faithful to the teaching of the apostles, the common life of sharing, the breaking of bread and the prayers.

⁴³ A holy fear came upon all the people for many wonders and miraculous signs were done by the apostles. ⁴⁴ Now all the believers lived together and shared all their belongings. ⁴⁵ They would sell their property and all they had, and distribute the proceeds to others according to their need. ⁴⁶ Each day they met together in the Temple area; they broke bread in their homes they shared their food with great joy and simplicity of heart; ⁴⁷ they praised God and won the people's favour. And every day the Lord added to their number those who were being saved.

Peter and John cure a lame man

3 ¹ Once when Peter and John were going up to the Temple at three in the afternoon, the hour for prayer, ² a man crippled from birth was being carried in. Every day they would bring him and put him at the temple gate called 'Beautiful'; there he begged from those who entered the Temple.

³ When he saw Peter and John on their way into the Temple, he asked achievements, either of our life, or of the community or of the world.

The expression breaking of the bread could mean whatever Jewish meal that began with a blessing. But very early the Christians kept this word to refer to the Eucharist which they celebrated remembering the last supper of the Lord (Acts 20:27; 1 Cor 10:16).

Joy and simplicity of heart gave witness to the change in their lives and the authenticity of their fraternal sharing. They were deeply reconciled persons.

It was not the naive joy that is easily found in Christian groups who have no thought for the problems of the world. Neither they nor their enemies could ignore that Jesus had met the problems of national reconciliation. They were enjoying the favour of the people who considered them to be concerned and responsible persons.

■ Sometimes we believe that Jesus cured all the sick: this is an error, since he had not healed this cripple who was in the Temple every day.

This new sign brings about another proclamation.

Why are you amazed at this? The miracle was done in the Name of Jesus, that is, in the Power over every creature that Jesus had received from the Father at the time of his resurrection. Jesus had been in our midst as the servant of the Lord (Is 42:1; 52:13), but, speaking of his Name was a way of stating his divinity (Mk 16:16; Phil 2:9).

I know that you acted out of ignorance. Yet, Peter demands that they admit their guilt. All of us must confess a similar guilt in the injustices and the crimes of our times.

He sends him to bless (v 26). This blessing comes to those who accept reconciliation with God when they see the love he revealed to us in for alms. ⁴They both looked straight at him and Peter said, "Look at us." ⁵So he looked at them, expecting to receive something from them. ⁶But Peter said, "I have neither silver nor gold, but what I have I give you: In the name of Jesus Christ the Nazarean, walk!"

⁷Then he took the beggar by his right hand and helped him up. At once his feet and ankles became firm, ⁸and jumping up he stood on his feet and began to walk. And he went with them into the Temple walking and leaping and praising God.

⁹All the people saw him walking and praising God; ¹⁰they recognized him as the one who used to sit begging at the Beautiful Gate of the Temple, and they were all astonished and amazed at what had happened to him.

¹¹While he clung to Peter and John, all the people, struck with astonishment, came running to them in Solomon's Porch, as it was called. ¹²When Peter saw the people, he said to them,

"Fellow Israelites, why are you amazed at this? Why do you stare at us as if it was by some power or holiness of our own that we made this man walk? ¹³The God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob, the God of our ancestors has glorified his servant Jesus whom you handed over to death and denied before Pilate, when even Pilate had decided to release him. ¹⁴You rejected the Holy and Just One, and you insisted that a murderer be granted freedom. ¹⁵You killed the Lord of life, but God raised him from the dead and we are witnesses to this. ¹⁶It is his Name, and faith in his Name that has healed this man whom you see and recognize. The faith which comes through Jesus has given him wholeness in the presence of all of you.

¹⁷Yet I know, brothers, that you acted out of ignorance, as did your leaders. ¹⁸God has fulfilled in this way what he had foretold through all the prophets, that his Messiah would suffer.

¹⁹Repent, then, and turn to God so that your sins may be wiped out ²⁰and the time of refreshment may come by the mercy of God, when he sends the Messiah appointed for you, Jesus. ²¹For he must remain in heaven until the time of the universal restoration which God spoke of long ago through his holy prophets.

²²Moses foretold this when he said: The Lord God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among your own people; you shall listen to him in all that he says to you. ²³*Whoever does not listen to that prophet is to be cut off from among his people.*

²⁴In fact, all the prophets who have spoken, from Samuel onward, have announced the events of these days. ²⁵You are the children of the prophets and heirs of the covenant which God gave to your ancestors when he said to Abraham: All the nations will be blessed through your descendant. ²⁶If

Jesus. But the blessing is not for us alone, but rather, through us – the people of God – it reaches all the families of the earth.

He must remain in heaven (v 21). The coming of Jesus inaugurated the "last days" in which, on one hand, the Gospel reconciles men with God, but it also changes men's consciousness and speeds up the course of history, which in the end, forces men to solve their problems together. Mankind is on its way to the coming of Christ and the restoration of the world, namely the Resurrection.

Peter and John are arrested

◆¹ While Peter and John were still speaking to the people, the priests, the captain of the temple guard and the Sadducees came up to them. ² They were greatly disturbed because the apostles were teaching the people and proclaiming that resurrection from the dead had been proved in the case of Jesus. ³ Since it was already evening, they arrested them and put them in custody until the following day. ⁴ But despite this, many of those who heard the Message believed and their number increased to about five thousand.

⁵ The next day, the Jewish leaders, elders and teachers of the Law assembled in Jerusalem. ⁶ Annas, the High Priest, Caiaphas, John, Alexander, and all who were of the high priestly class were there. ⁷ They brought Peter and John before them and began to question them, "How did you do this? Where does this power come from?"

⁸ Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, spoke up, "Leaders of the people! Elders! ⁹ It is a fact that we are being examined today for a good deed done to a cripple. How was he healed? ¹⁰ You and all the people of Israel must know that this man stands before you cured through the Name of Jesus Christ the Nazarean. You had him crucified, but God raised him from the dead. ¹¹ Jesus is the stone rejected by you the builders which has become the cornerstone.¹² There is no salvation in anyone else, for there is no other Name given to humankind all over the world by which we may be saved."

¹³ They were astonished at the boldness of Peter and John, considering that they were uneducated and untrained men. They recognized, also, that they had been with Jesus,¹⁴ but, as the man who had been cured stood beside them, they could make no reply.

¹⁵ So they ordered them to leave the council room while they consulted with one another. ¹⁶ They asked, "What shall we do with these men? Everyone who lives in Jerusalem knows that a miraculous sign has been given through them, and we cannot deny it. ¹⁷ But lest this be spread further among the people, let us warn them not to tell or to teach anyone about the one whose name they call upon." ¹⁸ So they called them back and charged them not to speak or teach at all in the name of Jesus.

¹⁹ But Peter and John answered them, "Judge for yourselves whether it is right in God's eyes for us to obey you rather than God. ²⁰ We cannot stop speaking about what we have seen and heard." ²¹ Then the council threatened them once more and let them go. They could find no way of punishing them because of the people who glorified God for what had happened ²² for the man who had been miraculously healed was over forty years old.

cause they are learned and they have authority. It is impossible for them to back down before ordinary men who refute their statements. Meanwhile Peter points out how strange it is to be arrested for having healed a sick man (v. 8).

These leaders were Sadducees and they did not believe in the resurrection of the dead: Acts 23:6.

The prayer of the community

o ²³ As soon as Peter and John were set free, they went to their friends and reported what the chief priests and elders had said to them.

²⁴ When they heard it, they raised their voices as one and called upon God, "Sovereign Lord, maker of heaven and earth, of the sea and everything in them, ²⁵ you have put these words in the mouth of David, our father and your servant, through the Holy Spirit: Why did the pagan nations rage and the people conspire in folly? ²⁶ The kings of the earth were aligned and the princes gathered together against the Lord and against his Messiah.

²⁷ For indeed in this very city Herod with Pontius Pilate, and the pagans together with the people of Israel conspired against your holy servant Jesus, whom you anointed. ²⁸ Thus, indeed, they brought about whatever your powerful will had decided from all time to happen. ²⁹ But now, Lord, see their threats against us and enable your servants to speak your word with all boldness. ³⁰ Stretch out your hand to heal and to work signs and wonders through the Name of Jesus your holy servant."

³¹ When they had prayed, the place where they were gathered together shook, and they were all filled with Holy Spirit and began to speak the word of God boldly.

An attempt to share everything

+ ³² The whole community of believers were one in heart and mind. No one claimed any of their possessions as his own; but rather they shared all things in common. ³³ With great power the apostles bore witness to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and they were living in a time of grace.

³⁴ There was no needy person among them, for those who had acquired land or houses, sold them and brought the proceeds of the sale.

³⁵ And they laid it at the feet of the apostles who distributed it according to each one's need. ³⁶ This is what a certain Joseph did. He was a Levite from Cyprus, whom the apostles called Barnabas, meaning: 'The encouraging one.' ³⁷ He sold a field which he owned and handed the money to the apostles.

mined to be involved. Oftentimes, because we only rely on our own strength instead of counting on the Spirit of Christ, we remain silent before our co-workers or our leaders.

What we have seen and heard (20). It is John speaking: see 1 Jn 1:1.

o We can meditate on the way this church gathering develops: an event (the arrest) is shared by all; for them this confrontation with the authorities is something new. They connect what happened with the Word of God. In this case they refer to Psalm 2; then they begin common prayer: they ask for courage to continue to do God's works.

+ Once again, Luke here highlights the virtues of the first community and their effort to have everything in common.

Jesus had not asked for this; yet they were doing it, inspired by the desire of every true believer to suppress all boundaries between brothers, especially those created by money. However, placing everything in common requires not only a spirit of detachment, but also a sense of responsibility and organization. The believers in Jerusalem lived at a time when work and foresight were not very important, and they soon spent what they had, without being concerned about working, and eventually they became the "poor of Jerusalem." Paul was to organize collections in other churches in order to assist them (Gal 2:10; Rom 15:25; 2 Cor 8).

■ As children many of us were taught about, the wonders God had done in the past, as if God had only acted in those days. The Jews of that time thought exactly the same way. The Bible spoke of Moses' time when those who rebelled against God's prophet were killed by divine intervention (Nm 12:1; 16:1; 17:16). But, God is at work in the Christian community and the ordinary believers of Jerusalem are suddenly discovering that Peter, the fisherman, is not inferior to Moses. See Acts 13:11; 1 Cor 11:30.

The fraud of Ananias and Sapphira

5 ¹ Another man named Ananias, in agreement with his wife Sapphira, likewise sold a piece of land, ² but he put aside some of the proceeds for himself, and the rest he turned over to the apostles.

³ Then Peter said to him, "Ananias, how is it that you let Satan fill your heart and why do you intend to deceive the Holy Spirit after having set aside some of the proceeds of your land for yourself? ⁴ Who obliged you to sell it? And after it was sold, could you not have kept all the money? How could you think of such a thing? You have deceived not men but God."

⁵ Upon hearing these words, Ananias fell down and died. Great fear came upon all who heard of it; ⁶ the young men stood up, wrapped his body and carried it out for burial.

⁷ About three hours later Ananias's wife came but she was not aware of what had happened. ⁸ Peter challenged her, "Tell me whether you sold that piece of land for this price?" She said, "Yes, that was the price." ⁹ Peter replied, "How could you two agree to put the Holy spirit to the test? Those who buried your husband are at the door and they will carry you out as well."

¹⁰ With that, she fell dead at his feet. The young men came in, found her dead and carried her out for burial beside her husband. ¹¹ And great fear came upon the whole church and upon all who heard of it.

◆ ¹² Many miraculous signs and wonders were done among the people through the hands of the apostles. The believers used to meet of one accord in Solomon's Porch. ¹³ None of the others dared to join them, but the people held them in high esteem. ¹⁴ So an ever increasing number of believers, both men and women, were added to the Lord. ¹⁵ The people carried the sick into the streets and laid them on cots and on mats, so that when Peter passed by, at least his shadow might fall on some of them. ¹⁶ The people gathered from the towns around Jerusalem, bringing their sick and those who were troubled by unclean spirits, and all of them were healed.

2. Jos 7, 1 3. Lk 22, 3 11. 9, 31; 11, 26

The couple's sin does not consist in having kept part of their goods. Nobody was forcing them to sell and to give the money to the community. But they wanted to deceive the apostles and give the impression they were donating everything, when in fact they were not.

We must be very careful when we speak of God's punishment. For a Christian, the only punishment is to be forever separated from God. Death itself does not mean that God wants to punish us. Yet, the deaths of Ananias and Sapphira serve as a warning and a sign for the others.

Here the word church appears. Its exact meaning is "the assembly gathered by God," and before Jesus, the Jews used it to mean the new people that God was going to form in the messianic age. The believers continue to be proud of being Jewish, of being the people of God; nevertheless, little by little, the Holy Spirit separates them from the old Israel. They are already aware that they are the new people gathered by God. The Church still means only the Christian community of Jerusalem. As other communities arise – other churches – "the Church" begins to refer to the entire people of God.

12. Jn 10, 23 15. 19, 11 16. Lk 16, 19

◆ Many believers were added to the Lord (v 14). All the Jews had faith since they believed in God who spoke through the prophets. But it is one thing to believe in the prophets of the past after the religious authorities had acknowledged them and placed their warnings in all the books of the Bible. It is quite a different thing to recognize the prophets of our generation when the authorities and the majority of the people do not accept them. Believing in Jesus as the prophet that God had sent them and whom they had rejected, demanded a much higher degree of faith. And to accept him as Lord was the essence of Christian faith, a faith which mysteriously unites us to the living Jesus.

+ Could this confrontation of the apostles with the rulers of the people be similar to what

The apostles arrested again

+ ¹⁷The High Priest and all his supporters, that is the party of the Sadducees, became very jealous of the apostles; ¹⁸so they arrested them and had them thrown into the public jail. ¹⁹But an angel of the Lord opened the door of the prison during the night and said to them, ²⁰"Go and stand in the Temple court and give the people the message of life." ²¹Accordingly they entered the Temple at dawn and resumed their teaching.

When the High Priest and his supporters arrived, they called together the Sanhedrin, the full Council of the elders of Israel. They sent word to the jail to have the prisoners brought in. ²²But when the Temple guards arrived at the jail, they did not find them inside, so they returned with the news, ²³"We found the prison securely locked and the prison guards at their post outside the gate, but when we opened the gate, we found no one inside."

²⁴Upon hearing these words, the captain of the Temple guard and the high priests were baffled, wondering where all of this would end. ²⁵Just then someone arrived with the report, "Look, those men whom you put in prison are standing in the Temple, teaching the people." ²⁶Then the captain went off with the guards and brought them back, but without any show of force, for fear of being stoned by the people.

²⁷So they brought them in and the Council and the High Priest began to question them, ²⁸"We gave you strict orders not to preach such a Saviour; but you have filled Jerusalem with your teaching and you intend charging us with the killing of this man."

²⁹To this Peter and the apostles replied, "Better for us to obey God rather than men!

³⁰The God of our ancestors raised Jesus whom you killed by hanging him on a wooden post. ³¹God set him at his right hand as Leader and Saviour, to grant repentance and forgiveness of sins to Israel. ³²We are witnesses to all these things, as well as the Holy Spirit whom God has given to those who obey him."

o ³³When the Council heard this, they became very angry and wanted to kill them. ³⁴But one of them, a happens today in many countries when the Church denounces the violations of human rights?

There are many Christians who say: it is not the same since the apostles in their time were persecuted for proclaiming Jesus; whereas now, only Christians involved in politics are punished. This, however, is not evident.

In Jesus' days, the Jewish people were both dominated and divided. Jesus spoke as a totally free man, teaching a way of freedom which, today, we would call non-violent action. And the authorities did away with him to defend the security of their nation (Jn 12:48) and their own politics. For the disciples of Jesus, to convert meant to acknowledge their complicity with those who put Jesus to death and to take the path indicated by him. Since they were living among oppressors and resentful people, this was a very dangerous road (Lk 21:12-16).

In fact, when the priests judge Peter and John, they only demand that they break away from this man (Jesus) whom they had legally killed. To them, Christian preaching was as political as the Church is today for many people when it speaks about justice.

Proclaiming Jesus means preaching universal reconciliation (Eph 2:14) which is achieved at all levels of human life, including economy and politics. The Church would not be following Christ, nor would it proclaim Jesus as the only Saviour (5:31) if it refused to be concerned because of those who condemn entire nations to die slowly through lack of food, education and health. This accusation, however, would not be Christian preaching if it did not convince us to believe in the saving plan of God.

o Gamaliel, mentioned in 5:34, was one of the most famous teachers of the Law. The people following him were, in the Jewish religion, the most concerned about sincerity of faith and a religion of the heart. He was Paul's teacher (see Acts 22:3).

Pharisee named Gamaliel, a teacher of the Law highly respected by the people, stood up in the Sanhedrin. He ordered the men to be taken outside for a few minutes³⁵ and then he spoke to the assembly.

"Fellow Israelites, consider well what you intend to do to these men.

³⁶For some time ago Theudas came forward, claiming to be somebody, and about four hundred men joined him. But he was killed and all his followers were dispersed or disappeared. ³⁷After him, Judas the Galilean appeared at the time of the census and persuaded many people to follow him. But he too perished and his whole following was scattered.

³⁸So, in this present case, I advise you to have nothing to do with these men. Leave them alone. If their project or activity is from men, it will destroy itself. ³⁹If, on the other hand, it is from God, you will not be able to destroy it and you may indeed find yourselves fighting against God."

The Council let themselves be persuaded. ⁴⁰They called in the apostles and had them whipped, and ordered them not to speak again of Jesus Saviour. Then they set them free.

⁴¹The apostles went out from the Council rejoicing that they were considered worthy to suffer disgrace for the sake of the Name. ⁴²Day after day, both in the Temple and in people's homes, they continued to teach and to proclaim that Jesus was the Messiah.

The choosing of the seven

◆ 6 ¹In those days, as the number of the disciples grew, the so-called Hellenists complained against the so-called Hebrews, because their widows were being neglected in the daily distribution. ²So the Twelve summoned the whole body of disciples together and said, "It is not right that we should neglect the word of God to serve at tables. ³So, brothers, choose from among yourselves seven respected men full of Spirit and wisdom, that we may appoint them to this task. ⁴As for us, we shall give ourselves to prayer and to the ministry of the Word.

⁵The whole community agreed and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and Holy Spirit; Philip. Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenus and Nicolaus of Antioch who was a proselyte. ⁶They presented these men

39. Lk 20, 4 41. 21, 13; 1 Pet 4, 13 1. 9, 29 3. Ex 18, 17 4. 2, 42; 20, 24; 21, 19

If their project is from God (v 39). Jesus had said something similar (Mt 15:13). This, however, does not seem so obvious to us: do we not see many lasting false doctrines? Perhaps, those which last for centuries may owe their duration to the fact that, despite the errors and the great evils they bring, they have some genuine teaching necessary for some groups of people, or some nations, teaching which the church of Jesus has not known how to communicate to them, or has been unable to do so to this day.

◆ We must not think that Jesus had indicated to his apostles the way to organize the church in detail. But a conflict took place between two social groups: the Jews, called Hebrews who had not left their land and the Hellenist Jews who had been raised in Greek countries. It seemed that these Hellenists followed the Essene party who did not accept the legitimacy of the High Priests and who refrained from participating in the Temple rituals. The clash of ideas between "Hebrews" and "Hellenists" causes reciprocal mistrust and it is felt necessary to give some autonomy to the Hellenists. Since the apostles identify more readily with the Hebrews, the others will have their own people responsible for certain functions.

The community chooses seven men and the apostles give them a share in their authority, because any mission has its roots in Christ through the apostles.

The candidates who are presented must be full of faith and Holy Spirit, because the material services of the Church are to be closely related with the community and spiritual life. It is a pity when the material goods of the church are entrusted to men able to manage money, but devoid of the spirit of the Gospel. Through them, the Church is plagued with a money-grabbing spirit and the concerns of a business institution.

to the apostles who first prayed over them and then laid hands upon them.

⁷The Word of God continued to spread, and the number of the disciples in Jerusalem increased greatly and even many priests accepted the faith.

The story of Stephen

+ ⁸Stephen full of grace and power, did great wonders and miraculous signs among the people. ⁹Some persons then came forward, who belonged to the so-called Synagogue of Freedmen from Cyrene, Alexandria, Cilicia and Asia. ¹⁰They argued with Stephen but they could not match the wisdom and the spirit with which he spoke. ¹¹As they were unable to face the truth, they bribed some men to say, "We heard him speak against Moses and against God."

¹²So they stirred up the people, the elders and the teachers of the Law; they took him by surprise, seized him and brought him before the Council. ¹³Then they produced false witnesses who said, "This man never stops speaking against our Holy Place and the Law. ¹⁴We even heard him say that Jesus the Nazarean will destroy our Holy Place and change the customs which Moses handed down to us." ¹⁵And all who sat in the Council fixed their eyes on him, and his face appeared to them like the face of an angel.

7 ¹So the High Priest asked him: "Is it true?" He answered, "Brothers and fathers, listen to me.

² The glorious God appeared to our father Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia, before he went to live in Haran. And he said to him: ³'Leave your land and your relatives and go to the land which I will show you.' ⁴So he left the land of the Chaldeans and settled in Haran. After the death of his father, God made him move to this land in which you now dwell. ⁵And there he did not give him anything that was his own, not even the smallest portion of land to put his foot on, but promised to give it to him in possession and to his descendants, though he had no child. ⁶So God spoke: 'Your descendants shall live in a strange land, they shall be enslaved and maltreated for four hundred years. ⁷So I shall call the nation which they serve as slaves to render an account for it. They will come out and worship me in this place.'

⁸He made with him the covenant of circumcision. And so, on the birth of his son Isaac, Abraham circumcised him on the eighth day. Isaac did the same to Jacob, and Jacob to the twelve patriarchs.

⁹The patriarchs envied Joseph so they sold him into Egypt. But God was with him. ¹⁰He rescued him from all his afflictions, granted him wisdom and made him please Pharaoh king of Egypt who appointed him governor of Egypt and the whole of his household. ¹¹Then there was famine in all the land of Egypt and Canaan; it was a great misery and our fathers did not have anything to eat. ¹²Upon knowing that there was wheat in Egypt, Jacob sent our fathers there the first time. ¹³On the second visit, Joseph made himself known to his brothers, and Pharaoh came to know the family of Joseph. ¹⁴Joseph commanded that his father Jacob be brought to him with the whole of his family of seventy-five persons. ¹⁵Jacob then went down to Egypt where he and our fathers died. ¹⁶They were brought to Shechem and laid in the tomb that Abraham had bought for a sum of silver from the sons of Hamor at Shechem.

¹⁷As the time of promise drew near, which God had made to Abraham, the people increased and multiplied in Egypt ¹⁸until another king who did not know Joseph came to Egypt. ¹⁹Dealing cunningly with our race, he forced our fathers to abandon their newborn infants to die. ²⁰At that time Moses was born and God looked kindly on him. For three months he was nursed in the home of his father; ²¹and when they abandoned him,

And so the face of the Church is distorted.

Were these seven men the first deacons? Luke only says that they served, and "deacon" means to be a servant.

+ Philip will be mentioned in Acts 8:5 and 21:8. Stephen is the only one remembered here.

Being a Hellenist (see previous paragraph)

Pharaoh's daughter took him and raised him up as her own son. ²² Moses was educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. He was mighty in words and deeds. ²³ And when he was forty years old, he wanted to visit his brothers, the Israelites. ²⁴ When he saw one of them being wronged, he defended the oppressed man and killed the Egyptian. ²⁵ He thought his brothers would understand that God was sending him to them as a liberator, but they did not understand. ²⁶ On the following day, he came to them as they were fighting and tried to reconcile them, saying: 'You are brothers, why do you hurt each other?' ²⁷ At that moment, the one who was injuring his companion rebuffed him saying: 'Who appointed you as our leader and judge?' ²⁸ Do you want to kill me as you killed the Egyptian yesterday?' ²⁹ When Moses heard this, he fled and went to live as a stranger in the land of Midian where he had two sons.

³⁰ After forty years an angel appeared to him in the desert of Mount Sinai in the flame of a burning bush. ³¹ Moses was astonished at the vision. And as he approached to look at it, he heard the voice of the Lord: ³² 'I am the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.' Moses was filled with fear and did not dare look at it. ³³ But the Lord said to him: 'Take off your sandals for the place where you stand is holy ground. ³⁴ I have seen the affliction of my people in Egypt and heard them weeping, and I have come down to free them. And now, come, I am sending you to Egypt.'

³⁵ This Moses whom they refused saying: 'Who appointed you leader and judge?', God sent as leader and liberator with the assistance of the angel who appeared to him in the bush. ³⁶ He led them out, performing signs and wonders in Egypt, at the Red Sea and in the desert for forty years. ³⁷ This Moses is the one who said to the Israelites: 'God will give you a prophet like me from among your brothers.' ³⁸ This is the one who in the Assembly in the desert became the mediator between the angel who spoke to him on Mount Sinai and our fathers; and he received the words of life that he might communicate them to us.

³⁹ But him our fathers refused to obey, they rejected him and turned their hearts to Egypt, saying to Aaron: ⁴⁰ 'Give us gods to lead us since we do not know what has happened to that Moses who brought us out of Egypt.' ⁴¹ So in those days, they fashioned a calf, offered sacrifices to their idol and rejoiced in the work of their hands. So ⁴² God departed from them and let them worship the stars of heaven, as it is written in the Book of the Prophets: 'People of Israel, did you offer burnt offerings and sacrifices for forty years in the desert?' ⁴³ You rather carried the tent of Moloch and the star of the god Rehan, images you made to worship, for this I will banish you farther than Babylon.'

⁴⁴ Our fathers had the Tent of Meeting in the desert, for God had directed Moses to build it according to the pattern he had seen. ⁴⁵ Our fathers received it and brought it under the command of Joshua into the lands of the pagans that they conquered and whom God expelled before them. They kept it until the days of David ⁴⁶ who found favor with God and asked him to let him build a house for the God of Jacob. ⁴⁷ However, it was Solomon who built that temple.

⁴⁸ In reality, the Most High does not dwell in houses made by the hands of men as the Prophet says: ⁴⁹ Heavens are my throne and earth is my footstool. What house will you build for me, says the Lord, how could you give me a dwelling place? ⁵⁰ Was it not I who made all these things?

⁵¹ But you are a stubborn people, you hardened your hearts and closed your ears. You have always resisted the Holy Spirit just as your fathers did. ⁵² Was there a prophet whom your fathers did not persecute? They killed those who announced the coming of the Just One whom you have now betrayed and murdered, ⁵³ you who received the Law through the angels but did not fulfil it."

Stephen did not share the blind faith of the Jewish people in their Temple and its rituals. He understood that the Church had to become free from the moulds of the past and to move away from the Jews if they refused to believe.

Stephen's long discourse recalls how God's people persecuted the prophets before persecuting Jesus. It also shows that the Jewish religion properly understood tended not to give so much importance to worship and to the Jerusalem Temple.

Stephen dies as Christ did. He becomes the first martyr (martyr means witness). He is a witness to Christ because he proclaims him. Yet, he is even more so because he does as Christ did, he forgives his murderers.

⁵⁴When they heard this reproach, they were enraged and they gnashed their teeth against Stephen. ⁵⁵But he, full of the Holy Spirit, fixed his eyes to heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus at God's right hand, ⁵⁶so he declared: "I see the heavens open and the Son of Man at the right hand of God."

⁵⁷But they shouted and covered their ears with their hands and rushed together upon him. ⁵⁸They brought him out of the city and stoned him, and the witnesses laid down their cloaks at the feet of a young man named Saul. ⁵⁹As they were stoning him, Stephen prayed saying: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." ⁶⁰Then he knelt down and said in a loud voice: "Lord, do not hold this sin against them." And when he had said this, he died.

◆ 8 ¹Paul was there, giving approval to his murder. This was the beginning of a great persecution against the Church in Jerusalem. All, except the apostles, were scattered among the villages of Judea and Samaria. ²Devout men buried Stephen and mourned deeply for him. ³Saul meanwhile was trying to destroy the church; he entered house after house and dragged off men and women and had them put in jail.

Philip proclaims the word in Samaria o ⁴At the same time those who were scattered went about preaching the word. ⁵Philip went down to a town of Samaria and began proclaiming the Christ. ⁶All the people paid attention to what Philip said and they came to hear and see the miraculous signs which he did. ⁷For in cases of possession, the unclean spirits came out shrieking loudly. Many people who were paralysed or crippled, were healed. ⁸So there was great joy in that town.

Simon the magician

+ ⁹A certain man named Simon had come to this town, practising magic. He held the Samaritans spellbound; and passed himself off as a very

◆ The Resurrection is going to manifest itself in him too. Instead of Stephen who has died, the Church will have a new apostle in Saul, mentioned here, who, after his conversion will come to be "St Paul." And so God heard the prayer of Stephen for his murderers.

The illegal execution of Stephen unleashes the persecution against the Christian Hellenists. The apostles and the people of the Hebrew group were not disturbed because they were considered loyal to the Jewish religion and traditions.

Concerning Saul's attitude, see what he himself will say later in Gal 1:13.

o The persecuted Christians proclaim their faith and they start Christian communities in Samaria.

Evangelization brings happiness: God revealed himself, and through his Spirit he heals bodies and hearts. God becomes present. What a marvelous and moving thing! Joy, rather than fear and sectarianism, will always surround authentic Christians.

+ Who is the most important person in this passage? Simon? No: it is the Holy Spirit.

Philip is one of the seven. He baptizes but he cannot communicate the gifts of the Spirit.

Baptism and the laying on of hands are the two stages of Christian initiation and they refer to two different aspects of life in the church: Baptism is the renewal of the individual through faith. On the other hand, the laying on of hands expresses the transmission of the Spirit in an uninterrupted way beginning with the first men who received it at Pentecost.

This laying on of hands (which has become "confirmation" in today's Church) means the gift of dynamism and enlightenment of Christians. It should be kept – as it was in the beginning – for mature people, able to take an active part in the Church and who have already experienced the life of faith.

Simon, a magician, quack or hypnotist, gave Peter the opportunity to condemn a false understanding of spiritual gifts. Simon thought the apostles were more powerful magicians than he important person. ¹⁰All the people, from the last to the greatest, put their trust in him, saying, "This is the Power of God, the Great One." ¹¹And they followed him because he had held them under the spell of his magic for a long time. ¹²But when they came to believe Philip who announced to them the Kingdom of God and Jesus Christ as Saviour, both men and women were baptized.

¹³Simon himself believed and was baptized, and would not depart from Philip. He was astonished when he saw the miraculous signs and wonders that happened.

¹⁴Now, when the apostles in Jerusalem heard that the Samaritans had accepted the Word of God, they sent Peter and John to them. ¹⁵They went down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit, ¹⁶for he had not as yet come down upon any of them since they had only been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. ¹⁷So Peter and John laid their hands on them and they received the Holy Spirit.

¹⁸When Simon saw that the Spirit was given through the laying of the apostles' hands, he offered them money ¹⁹saying, "Give me also this power, so that anyone upon whom I lay my hands may receive the Holy Spirit."

²⁰Peter replied, "May you and your money perish for thinking that the Gift of God could be bought with money! ²¹You cannot share in this since you do not understand the things of God. ²²Repent, therefore, of this wickedness of yours and pray to the Lord that you may be forgiven such a wrong way of thinking; ²³I see you are poisoned with bitterness and in the grip of sin." ²⁴Simon answered, "Pray to the Lord for me yourselves, so that none of these things you spoke of will happen to me."

²⁵Peter and John gave their testimony and spoke the word of the Lord. And they went back to Jerusalem, bringing the Good News to many Samaritan villages along the way.

Philip baptizes the Ethiopian

■ ²⁶An angel of the Lord said to Philip, "Go southwards towards the road that goes down from Jerusalem to Gaza, the desert road." ²⁷So he set was and he wanted to buy the power of working certain miracles. Peter's refusal reminds us that the Spirit acts freely to do the works that best serve the glory of God and the extension of his reign. In any case, these things cannot be bought.

The manifestations of the Spirit are not always like the ones mentioned in Acts (see Acts 19:6 and 1 Cor 12). This is because God adapts his gifts to the needs of the church.

Communities of simple and poor people are those that receive more gifts of healing for the sick: because they lack normal resources, God becomes present. Prayer groups receive the gift of tongues, which is one of the gifts that strengthens piety. The gift of prophecy manifests itself in various ways according to the context. Where faith leans heavily on the certainty of divine justice and the fear of God, we see predictions and revelations of the secrets of the heart. On the contrary, among those with a more rational and intellectual formation, the prophet is often characterized by the gift of speaking with assurance and the ability to give a definitive interpretation in which the community or the individuals recognize the voice of God.

The Spirit continues to be at work in many believers who, perhaps, neither speak in tongues nor work healings, but they act under the inspiration of the Spirit and they produce the 'fruits of the Spirit' (Gal 5:22-24), and are thus authentic witnesses of Jesus.

Baptized in the Name of the Lord Jesus (v 16). See the note on 19:5 on that subject.

■ Note how the Holy Spirit leads Philip towards a man who was neither a Jew nor a Samaritan, the first man of another race to receive the Gospel.

The Ethiopian who is baptized is simply a man who 'fears the Lord.' This is the way they referred to people of other races who had been attracted to the religion of the Jews and to faith in one God. Without following all the Jewish customs, they read the Bible and liked to take part out and it happened that an Ethiopian was passing along that way. He was an official in charge of the treasury of the queen of the Ethiopians; he had come on pilgrimage to Jerusalem²⁸ and was now on the way home. He was sitting in his carriage and reading the prophet Isaiah.

²⁹ The Spirit said to Philip, "Go and catch up with that carriage." ³⁰ So Philip ran up and he heard the man reading the prophet Isaiah; and he asked, "Do you really understand what you are reading?" The Ethiopian replied, ³¹ "How can I unless someone explains it to me?" He then invited Philip to get in and sit beside him. ³² This was the passage of Scripture he was reading:

He was led like a sheep to be slaughtered; like a lamb that is dumb before the shearer, he did not open his mouth. ³³ He was humbled and deprived of his rights. Who can speak of his descendants? For he was uprooted from the earth.

³⁴The official asked Philip, "Tell me, please, does the prophet speak of himself or of someone else?"

³⁵Then Philip began to tell him the Good News of Jesus using this text of Scripture as his starting point. ³⁶As they travelled down the road they came to a place where there was some water. Then the Ethiopian official said, "Look, here is water; what is to keep me from being baptized?"³⁷ And Philip answered, "You may be baptized if you believe with all your heart." And the man replied, "I believe; that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

³⁸ Then he ordered the carriage to stop; both Philip and the Ethiopian went down into the water and Philip baptized him. ³⁹ When they came out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord took Philip away. The Ethiopian saw him no more, but he continued on his way full of joy.

⁴⁰ Philip found himself at Azotus, and he went about announcing the Good News in all the towns until he reached Caesarea.

Saul meets Jesus

9 ¹Meanwhile Saul only thought of violence and death for the disciples of the Lord. ²He went to the High Priest and asked him for letters to the Synagogue of Damascus that would authorize him to arrest and bring to Jerusalem anyone he might find, man or woman, belonging to the Way.

in the Jewish ceremonies.

The conversation with Philip begins on the basis of a text from Isaiah 53:7. This poem, called Servant of the Lord, speaks of a just man unjustly condemned who, through his sufferings, atones for the sins of all mankind. In this text the apostles saw one of the passages which best announced Christ: see commentary on Mk 14:24 and 1 Pt 2:24-25. Isaiah's poem concludes with a veiled reference to the resurrection of the "Servant of the Lord." It is marvelous to see how Philip can give a testimony of the Resurrection of Jesus with such conviction that the Ethiopian believes in him.

◆ This is a decisive event in the beginning of the Church. Christ comes in person to win over the most fierce persecutor of the Christians.

The conversion of Saul, who will become

Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, is also found in Acts 22 and 26.

It would be wrong to present Paul as an evildoer who finally finds the right path. As shown in Acts 22:3-4; Gal 1, 14 and Phil 3:4-11, Paul from his youth, had felt the need to dedicate himself to the service of God. This is why he had gone to Jerusalem to study the Law, that is religion, with the best teachers of his days? His interest in the things of God had made him forget to look for a wife: he had not married. This young man, dependable and responsible, the Jews had entrusted the difficult task of eliminating the new and suspicious doctrine of the Christians from their communities. Paul is in charge of the repression of Christ's followers and he does this in a very harsh way for the good of his religion.

Why do you persecute me? Who is this Lord

³As he travelled along and was approaching Damascus, a light from the sky suddenly flashed around him. ⁴He fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to him, "Saul, Saul! Why do you persecute me?" ⁵And he asked, "Who are you, Lord?" The voice replied, "I am Jesus whom you are persecuting. ⁶Now get up and go into the city; there you will be told what you are to do."

⁷The men who were travelling with him stood there speechless: they had heard the voice, but could see no one. ⁸Saul got up from the ground and opening his eyes, he could not see. ⁹He was blind and he did not eat or drink for three days.

¹⁰There was a disciple in Damascus named Ananias, to whom the Lord called in a vision, "Ananias!" He answered, "Here I am, Lord!" ¹¹Then the Lord said to him, "Go at once to Straight Street and ask, at the house of Judas, for a man of Tarsus named Saul. You will find him praying, ¹²for he has just seen in a vision that a man named Ananias has come in and placed his hands upon him, to restore his sight."

¹³Ananias answered, "Lord, I have heard from many sources about this man and all the harm he has done to your saints in Jerusalem, ¹⁴and now he is here with authority from the High Priest to arrest all who call upon your name." ¹⁵But the Lord said to him, "Go! this man is my chosen instrument to bring my name to the pagan nations and their kings, and the people of Israel as well. ¹⁶I myself will show him how much he will have to suffer for my name."

¹⁷So Ananias left. When he entered the house he laid his hands upon Saul and said, "Saul, my brother, the Lord Jesus who appeared to you on your way here, has sent me to you so that you may receive your sight and be filled with Holy Spirit." ¹⁸Immediately something like scales fell from his eyes and he could see. He got up and was baptized; ¹⁹then he took food and was strengthened.

⁶For several days Saul stayed with the disciples at Damascus ²⁰and he soon began to proclaim in the Synagogue that Jesus was the Son of God. ²¹All who heard were astonished and who calls me a persecutor when my only ambition is to serve God? Until that time Paul felt good, like the Pharisee of the parable (Lk 18:9), and he thanked God for having made him a responsible, dependable and active believer. But now, faced with the light of Christ, he discovers that his merits and services are of no use to God; his faith is mainly human fanaticism; his assurance as a believer is disguised pride. Paul sees himself as a sinner, violent and rebellious; but at the same time, he understands that God has welcomed him, chosen him and forgiven him: this man will be my chosen instrument (15).

Paul is no longer the Pharisee of the parable, rather he has put himself in the place of the publican. 'My God, have mercy on me, a sinner!' This is the characteristic conversion of a militant Christian.

Thus, however active we may be, we will be unable to present ourselves as witnesses to Christ, if we do not admit to being forgiven sinners. This is why there is such a Christian concern for universal reconciliation.

From then on, Saul (who will take the name Paul) is going to be a chosen instrument of Christ to spread the Church to other countries. Until then, the Church which was led by and made up of Jews, had not gone beyond the Jewish people. Paul was a Jew too, but he had been educated outside his country. He enjoyed the culture of the Greeks as much as that of his own race. Because of that and because of his exceptional personality, he was to be the apostle to the Greeks.

The Church must constantly renew itself and it is renewed through the conversion of adults. Christian communities, even when they want to be open to people who are not involved with them (for example, workers, or at times, young people), are usually unable to be really open. Thus, the Lord calls some people from those different walks of life who, once they have received the faith of the Church, will be able to evangelize those of their own milieu and to preserve their said, "Is this not the one who cast out in Jerusalem all those calling upon his Name? Did he not come here to bring them bound before the chief priests?"

²²But Saul grew more and more powerful, and he confounded all the Jews living in Damascus when he proved that Jesus was the Messiah.

²⁶When Saul arrived back in Jerusalem, he tried to join the disciples there, but they were afraid of him because they could not believe that he was a disciple. ²⁷But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles, and he explained to them how Saul had seen the Lord on his way and how the Lord had spoken to him, and he explained also how Saul had preached boldly in the name of Jesus.

²⁸Then Saul began to live with them. He moved freely about Jerusalem and preached openly in the name of the Lord. ²⁹He also spoke to the Hellenists and argued with them, but they wanted to kill him. ³⁰When the brothers learned of this, they took him down to Caesarea and sent him off to Tarsus.

³¹Meanwhile, the Church had peace and was built up throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria. The believers walked with eyes turned to the Lord and were filled with comfort from the Holy Spirit.

Peter visits the churches

+ ³²As Peter travelled around, he went to visit the saints who lived in Lydda. ³³There he found a man named Aeneas who was paralyzed, and had been bedridden for eight years. ³⁴Peter said to him, "Aeneas, Jesus Christ heals you; get up and make your bed!" And the man got up at once. ³⁵All the people living in Lydda and Sharon saw him and believed in the Lord.

³⁶There was a disciple in Joppa named Tabitha, which means Dorcas or Gazelle. She was always doing good works and helping the poor. ³⁷At that time she fell sick and died. After having washed her body, they laid her in the upstairs room.

freedom with regard to traditional groups.

In crucial times in history, Christ called new men which his Church needed: Francis of Assisi, and closer to us, John XXIII.

"The Way": this is what Christianity was called; the word expressed the fact that it is not only a matter of religious teachings, but rather a new way of life enlightened by hope.

• For three years Paul preaches his faith and relates his own experience in the province of Damascus, also called Arabia (see Gal 1:16 and 2 Cor 11:32).

Paul is already following his own way. But he does not separate himself from the church as his journey to Jerusalem shows, since he goes there to meet the apostles. Yet, he preserves his independence as he waits for the promptings of the Spirit.

+ Peter appears in his role of "inspector" of the churches (the word bishop means inspector).

It is said here that he visits the saints. In the years prior to Christ, the word "saints," namely consecrated to God, was especially used to designate the new people of God beginning with the coming of the Messiah (see Daniel 7:27). Christians are the new people of God since they are the Church (see 5:11), they are also the saints.

The raising of Tabitha resembles what Jesus had done. It is an echo of the Resurrection of Christ, as the raising of Lazarus (Jn 11) or the widow's son had been (Lk 8:11).

God wished to grant these signs to strengthen the faith in Jesus' resurrection. Besides the people who had been the witnesses of His Resurrection, it was necessary that in various places, the communities could see for themselves that God "resurrects the dead" (see Heb. 11:19). Similar resurrections were seen in the Church even in this century.

■ This is a new intervention of the Holy Spirit so that the Church would come out of the Jewish ³⁸As Lydda is near Joppa, the disciples, on hearing that Peter was there, sent two men to him with the request, "Please come to us without delay."

³⁹So Peter went with them. On his arrival they took him upstairs to the room. All the widows crowded around him in tears, showing him the clothes which Dorcas had made while she was with them. ⁴⁰Peter made them all leave the room and then he knelt down and prayed. Turning to the dead body he said, "Tabitha, stand up." She opened her eyes, looked at Peter and sat up. ⁴¹Peter gave her his hand and helped her up. Then he called in the saints and widows and presented her to them alive. ⁴²This became known throughout all of Joppa and many people believed in the Lord because of it. ⁴³As for Peter, he remained for some time in Joppa at the house of Simon, a tanner of leather.

The baptism of Cornelius

10 ¹There was in Caesarea a man called Cornelius, captain of what was called the Italian Battalion. ²He was a religious and God-fearing man together with his whole household. He gave generously to the people and constantly prayed to God.

³One afternoon, at about three he had a vision in which he clearly saw an angel of God coming towards him and calling him, "Cornelius!" ⁴He stared at the vision in terror and said, "What is it, sir?" And the angel answered, "Your prayers and your alms have ascended as a remembrance of you before God. ⁵Now send some men to Joppa and summon a certain Simon also known as Peter; ⁶he is the guest of Simon, a tanner, who lives beside the sea."

⁷As soon as the angel who spoke to him departed, Cornelius called two of his servants and a devout soldier from among those attached to his service, ⁸and after having explained everything to them, he sent them to Joppa.

⁹The next day, while they were on their journey and approaching the city, Peter went up to the roof at about noon to pray. ¹⁰He became hungry and wished to eat, but, while they were preparing food, he fell into a trance. ¹¹The heavens were opened to him and he saw an object that looked like a large sheet coming down and environment and the Gospel would come to other people. Cornelius (like the Ethiopian of 8.27) is a God-fearing man, that is to say, a foreigner who believes in the one God of the Jews, without being a member of the Jewish community.

The heavens were open to him. He may have seen a tent coming down – an image of God's dwelling place in the world – which contained creatures considered unclean.

The Jewish religion included a whole series of prohibitions for believers. It distinguished between clean animals, namely these which could be eaten and unclean ones which could not. The same regulations applied to people; Jews could not mix with non-Jews. Thus, Peter's vision in which he is invited to eat unclean animals, means that he must not hesitate to go and stay in the house of Cornelius, the Roman.

We do not know if Peter would have hesitated to baptise a non-Jew (and uncircumcised) as Cornelius was. The manifestation of the Holy Spirit forced his hand.

At last a man of another race is baptised! In many places today as well, the Church is threatened to be reduced to a closed social group, and perhaps, antiquated. Popes and bishops invite us to go forward and to dialogue with all people. Yet, it would seem that only the intervention of an angel could convince us to go to other people.

He sent his people (v 36). Peter presents Jesus. His life was that of an authentic prophet, who comes to continue the work of previous prophets, spokesmen of God's word. But, in Jesus, God was offering the good news of peace, that is, God was reconciling men with himself, once and for all. We are easily reminded of one of Paul's central points: see Rom 5.1-11; 2 Cor 5.11-21 and Eph 2.14-16.

Judge of the living and the dead (v 42). This expression refers to religious concepts of the time, making a distinction between the judg-lowered to the ground by its four corners.¹² In it were all kinds of four-legged animals of the earth, reptiles and birds.

¹³ Then a voice said to him, "Get up, Peter, kill and eat!"¹⁴ But Peter replied, "Certainly not, Lord! I have never eaten any common or unclean creature."¹⁵ And again a second time the voice spoke, "What God has made clean, you must not call common."

²¹ So Peter went and said to the men, "I am the one you are looking for. What brings you here?" They answered, ²² "He who sent us is Captain Cornelius. He is an upright and God-fearing man, well respected by all the Jewish people. For he has been instructed by a holy angel to summon you to his house, so that he could listen to what you have to say."²³ So Peter invited them in and put them up for the night.

The next day he went off with them and some of the brothers from

Joppa accompanied him.²⁴ The following day, he arrived in Caesarea where Cornelius was expecting them and had called together his relatives and close friends.²⁵ As Peter was about to enter, Cornelius went to him and fell on his knees and bowed low.²⁶ But Peter lifted him up saying, "Stand up, for I too am a man."

²⁷ After talking with him, Peter entered and found many people assembled there.²⁸ Then he said to them, "You know that it is forbidden for Jews to associate with anyone of another nation or to enter his house. But God has made it clear to me that no one should call any person common or consider him unclean;²⁹ because of this I came at once when I was sent for. Now, I should like to know why you sent for me."

³⁰ Cornelius then answered, "Just three days ago at this time, about three in the afternoon, I was praying in my house when a man in shining clothes stood before me³¹ and said to me: 'Cornelius, God has heard your prayer and your alms have been remembered by him.'³² Send, therefore, someone to Joppa and ask for Simon, also known as Peter, who is guest at the house of Simon the tanner by the sea.'³³ So I sent for you at once and you have been kind enough to come. Now we are all here in God's presence, waiting to hear all that the Lord has commanded you to say."

³⁴ Peter then spoke to them, "Truly I realize that God does not show partiality,³⁵ but in all nations he lis-

One receives forgiveness through his Name. Through his Name, that is to say, through his own power and effectiveness. This confirms Jesus' divine authority.

◆ The reaction of the Jerusalem Christians shows us what a revolution the baptism of Cornelius meant.

Through this first warning to Peter, we discover the continuous pressure which the "old Christians" are going to put on their priests and bishops throughout history.

These Jerusalem believers are not acting in tens to everyone who fears God and does good, whatever his nation may be. ³⁶And this is the message he has sent to the children of Israel, the good news of peace he has proclaimed through Jesus Christ, who is the Lord of all. ³⁷No doubt you have heard of the event that occurred throughout the whole country of the Jews, beginning from Galilee, after the baptism John preached. ³⁸You know how God anointed Jesus the Nazarean with Holy Spirit and power. He went about doing good works and healing all who were under the devil's power, because God was with him: ³⁹we are witnesses of all that he did throughout the countryside of the Jews and in Jerusalem itself.

⁴⁰Finally they put him to death by hanging him on a wooden cross. But God raised him to life on the third day and let him be seen, ⁴¹not by all the people, but by the witnesses that were chosen beforehand by God, — by us who ate and drank with him after his resurrection from death. ⁴²And he commanded us to preach to the people and to bear witness that he is the one appointed by God to judge the living and the dead. ⁴³All the prophets say of him, that everyone who believes in him has forgiveness of sins through his Name."

⁴⁴Peter was still speaking when the Holy Spirit came upon all who listened to the Word. ⁴⁵And the believers of Jewish origin who had come with Peter were amazed, "Why! God gives and pours the Holy Spirit on foreigners also!" ⁴⁶For indeed this happened: they heard them speaking in tongues and praising God.

⁴⁷Then Peter declared, "Can we refuse to baptize with water people who have already received the Holy Spirit?" ⁴⁸So he had them baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. After that they asked him to remain with them for some days.

Peter justifies his conduct

◆11 ¹News came to the apostles and the brothers in Judea that pagans had received the Word of God. ²So, when Peter went up to Jerusalem, the Jewish believers began to argue with him, ³"You went to the home of uncircumcised people and ate with them!"

⁴And Peter began to give them the facts as they had happened, ⁵"I was at prayer in the city of Joppa when, in a trance, I saw a vision. Something like a large sheet came down from the sky and drew near to me, landing on the ground by its four corners. ⁶As I stared at it, I saw four-legged creatures of the earth, wild beasts and reptiles, and birds of the sky. ⁷Then I heard a voice saying to me: 'Get up, Peter, kill and eat!' ⁸I replied, 'Certainly not, Lord! No common or unclean creature has ever entered my mouth.' ⁹A second time the voice from the heavens spoke: ¹⁰This happened three times, and then it was all drawn up into the sky. ¹¹At that moment three men, who had been sent to me from Caesarea, arrived at the house where we were staying. ¹²The Spirit instructed me to go with them without hesitation; so these six brothers came along with me and we entered into the man's house. ¹³He told bad faith and they accept Peter's explanations. Yet, the leaders of the Church will need courage to prefer the stirrings of the Holy Spirit to conservative prejudices. Often, Christian militants themselves regret the narrow self-centeredness of their companions, the closed minds of the group rejecting one individual or another, prejudices which are hard to root out.

us how he had seen an angel standing in his house and telling him: Send someone to Joppa and fetch Simon, also known as Peter. ¹⁴He will bring you a message by which you and all your household will be saved."

¹⁵I had begun to address them when suddenly the Holy Spirit came upon them, just as it had come upon us at the beginning. ¹⁶Then I remembered what the Lord had said: 'John baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit.' ¹⁷If, then, God had given them the same gift that he had given us when we believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I to resist God?"

¹⁸When they heard this they set their minds at rest and praised God saying, "Then God has granted life-giving repentance to the pagan nations as well."

The foundation of the Church at Antioch

o ¹⁹Those who had been scattered because of the persecution over Stephen travelled as far as Phoenicia, Cyprus and Antioch, telling the message but only to the Jews. ²⁰But there were some natives of Cyprus and Cyrene among them who, on coming into Antioch, spoke also to the Greeks, giving them the good news of the Lord Jesus. ²¹The hand of the Lord was with them so that a great number believed and turned to the Lord.

²²News of this reached the ears of the Church in Jerusalem, so they sent Barnabas to Antioch. ²³When he arrived and saw the manifest signs of God's favour, he rejoiced and urged them all to remain firmly faithful to the Lord; ²⁴for he himself was a good man filled with Holy Spirit and faith. Thus large crowds came to know the Lord.

²⁵Barnabas went off to Tarsus to look for Saul ²⁶and when he found him, he brought him to Antioch. For a whole year they had meetings with the Church and instructed many people. It was in Antioch that the disciples were first called Christians.

o Antioch, located 500 kilometers north of Jerusalem, was the main city of the Roman province of Syria, a Greek-speaking pagan country, with an important Jewish community. We do not know who first brought the Christian faith to the pagans, or how it was done. For the first time, there was a Church in which Jews believing in Christ and converts of pagan origin were mingling: the future of the Church was there.

The Jerusalem community behaves as having authority over the new churches; the case of Antioch touches everybody since, for the Palestinian Jews, accepting pagans was quite a novelty. Did not the law of Moses forbid living with "uncircumcised" people?

■ There is a mention of prophets. Among the gifts which the Holy Spirit granted to converts: the gift of "prophecy" was one of the most outstanding. On various occasions, the "prophet" would receive from God an insight into future events in the community, or concerning one of its members. They would also give homilies "iri had James, the brother of John, killed with the sword,³ and when he saw how it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to arrest Peter also.

This happened during the festival of the Unleavened Bread.⁴ Herod had him seized and thrown into prison, with four squads, each of four soldiers, to guard him. He wanted to bring him to trial before the people after the Passover feast,⁵ but while Peter was kept in prison, the whole Church prayed earnestly for him.

⁶On the very night before Herod was to bring him to trial, Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound by a double chain, while guards kept watch at the gate of the prison.

⁷Suddenly an angel of the Lord stood there and a light shone in the prison cell. The angel tapped Peter on the side and woke him saying, "Get up quickly!" At once the chains fell from Peter's wrists. The angel said, "Put on your belt and your sandals." Peter did so, ⁸and the angel added, "Now, put on your cloak and follow me."

⁹Peter followed him out; yet he did not realize that what was happening with the angel was real; he thought he was seeing a vision.¹⁰ They passed the first guard and then the second and they came to the iron door leading out to the city, which opened of itself for them. They went out and made their way down a narrow alley, when suddenly the angel left him.

¹¹Then Peter recovered his senses and said, "Now I know that the Lord has sent his angel and has rescued me from Herod's clutches and from all that the Jews had in store for me."

¹²Peter then found his bearings and came to the house of Mary, the mother of John also known as Mark, where many were gathered together and were praying.¹³ When he knocked at the outside door, a maid named Rhoda came to answer it.¹⁴ On recognizing the voice of Peter she was so overcome with joy that, instead of opening the door, she ran in to announce that Peter was at the door.¹⁵ They said to her, "You are crazy!" And as she insisted, they said, "It must be his angel."

¹⁶Meanwhile, Peter continued knocking and, when they finally opened the door, they were amazed to see him.¹⁷ He motioned to them with his hand to be quiet and told them how the Lord had brought him out of prison. And he said to them, "Report this to James and to the brothers." Then he left and went to another place.

¹⁸At daybreak there was a great commotion among the soldiers over what had become of Peter.¹⁹ Herod began a search for him and not finding him, had the guards questioned and executed. After that, he came down from Judea to Caesarea and stayed there.

the Spirit" and everyone would recognize the hand of God in the conviction and the wisdom with which they spoke, discovering a word relevant to the present in a biblical passage.

The first gesture of fraternal assistance among Christians of different countries is underlined. In this paragraph the elders or "presbyters" (it is the same word) are mentioned. The leaders of the Christian community were so called, following the Jewish custom.

+ This second persecution reaches the entire

Christian community of Jerusalem (see in 8:1). James (the greater) was one of the pillars of the Church together with Peter and John (Gal 2:9).

Peter's second release (see the first in 5:19) stresses the powerful intercession of the Church on behalf of its leader and the will of Christ to preserve his church from the reach of the power of evil (see Mt 16:18).

Report this to James. This James is the "brother of the Lord": he was already accepted as responsible for the Church in Jerusalem.

Herod's death

²⁰ At that time Herod was angry with the people of Tyre and Sidon. By general agreement they appeared before him and, after having won over Blastus, the king's treasurer, they asked for peace, for their country was supplied with food from the territory of Herod. ²¹ On the appointed day Herod, clothed in royal robes, sat on his throne and addressed them. ²² So the assembled crowd shouted back, "A god is speaking, not a man!"

²³ The angel of the Lord immediately struck Herod for he did not return the honour to God, and he died eaten by worms.

²⁴ Meanwhile the word of God was increasing and spreading. ²⁵ Barnabas and Saul carried out their mission and then came back from Jerusalem, taking with them John also called Mark.

Paul sent by the Church

13 ¹ There were at Antioch – in the Church which was there – prophets and teachers: Barnabas, Symeon known as Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen who had been brought up with Herod, and Saul. ² On one occasion while they were celebrating the Lord and fasting, the Holy Spirit said to them, "Set Barnabas and Saul apart and send them to do the work for which I have called them." ³ So, after fasting and praying, they laid their hands on them and sent them off.

Paul's first mission

◆ ⁴ These then, sent by the Holy Spirit, went down to the port of Seleucia and from there sailed to Cyprus. ⁵ Upon their arrival in Salamis they proclaimed the word of God in the Jewish synagogue; John was with them as an assistant.

⁶ They travelled over the whole island as far as Paphos where they met a certain magician named Bar-Jesus, a Jewish false prophet ⁷ who lived with the governor Sergius Paulus, an intelligent man. He had summoned Barnabas and Saul and wanted to hear the Word of God. ⁸ But they were opposed by the Elymas (that is, the magician) who tried to turn the governor from the faith.

⁹ Then Saul, also known as Paul, full of Holy Spirit, looked intently at him ¹⁰ and said, "You son of the devil,

■ This is the beginning of Paul's missions; for the time being he is sent as Barnabas' assistant.

It is very difficult to know how the Church organized itself in the beginning. It did not have the same kind of hierarchy with the three orders that we have now: bishops, presbyters (or priests) and deacons: this started only at the end of the first century. In most cases, the communities elected the presbyters or elders, from the most trusted men, and because they were appointed and accepted by the neighboring communities, they were empowered to baptise, celebrate the Eucharist and anoint the sick. This institution of the presbyters (see 14:23 and 11:30) simply copied the form of administration of the Jewish communities by their elders.

However, wherever there were prophets accepted as such (this was the case in Antioch), they enjoyed greater authority, somewhat like the apostles (1 Cor 12:28 and Eph 2:20).

Paul and Barnabas are not considered as apostles yet, but they are prophets. As for the teachers: they are those who have the ability to teach doctrine and morality based on Scripture, to their brothers.

Luke gives the details of the beginning of this mission. It emerges from the initiative of the Holy Spirit, but it responds to the life of fervor of the community of Antioch. Note also that the community accepts to have two of its five leaders leave, and that Saul and Barnabas are ready to face the risks of this adventure.

The laying on of hands invokes the grace of God for these two missionaries.

◆ This first mission begins in a very traditional way. Jews could travel throughout the Roman empire: in any important city they would find Jewish brothers, involved in trade and always gathered in communities, in "synagogues." From Antioch, Barnabas and Saul travel by sea to the island of Cyprus, Barnabas' homeland.

full of all kinds of deceit and enemy of all that is right! Will you never stop perverting the straight paths of the Lord? ¹¹Now the Lord's hand is upon you; you will become blind and for a time you will not see the light of day." At once a misty darkness came upon him, and he groped about for someone to lead him by the hand.

¹²The governor saw what had happened; he believed, and was deeply impressed by the teaching about the Lord.

Paul in the capital of Pisidia

¹³From Paphos, Paul and his companions set sail and came to Perga in Pamphylia. There John left them and returned to Jerusalem ¹⁴while they went on from Perga and came to Antioch in Pisidia. On the sabbath day they entered the synagogue and sat down. ¹⁵After the reading of the Law and the Prophets, the leading men of the synagogue sent this message to them, "Brothers, if you have any word of encouragement for the assembly, please speak up."

¹⁶So Paul arose, motioned to them for silence and began, "Fellow Israelites and also all you who fear God, listen. ¹⁷The God of our people Israel, chose our ancestors and after he had made them increase during their stay in Egypt, he led them out by powerful deeds. ¹⁸For forty years he fed them in the desert and, ¹⁹after he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan, he gave them their land as an inheritance. ²⁰All this took four hundred and fifty years. ²¹After that, he gave them Judges until Samuel the prophet. Then they asked for a king and God gave them Saul, son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, and he was king for forty years. ²²After that time, God removed him and raised up David as king, to whom he bore witness saying: I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after my own heart, who will do all I want him to do.

²³It is from the descendants of David that God has now raised up the promised saviour of Israel, Jesus. ²⁴Before he appeared, John proclaimed a baptism of repentance for all the people of Israel. ²⁵As John was ending his career, he said: 'I am not what you think I am, for after me another one is coming whose sandal I am not worthy to untie.'

²⁶Brothers, children and descen-

Saul's prophetic talents are manifested in his meeting with Sergius Paulus who, upon converting, had gladly granted Saul the use of his own surname. From then on, he will use the name Paul in an effort to be more like the Romans and the Greeks to whom he would proclaim Christ.

Paul and his companions. Once the mission has begun, Paul becomes the obvious leader. They did not stay in Cyprus; they left there groups of believers who had been hastily instructed.

When they arrive on the continent, at the inhospitable area of Perga, John Mark leaves them. Paul's daring plans may have scared him. They go through the mountain range of modern Turkey and reach the heart of the province of Pisidia - Antioch (which must not be confused with the other Antioch).

Luke gives all the details of the events at Antioch in Pisidia, because they were typical of the situations Paul was going to face in various parts of the Roman empire.

Paul speaks at the Sabbath gathering in the "synagogue" (house of prayer of the Jews). The worship involves psalms and biblical readings (obviously, from the Old Testament). Then, one or several of the leaders make comments. Since Paul is a visitor, out of deference, they ask him to speak.

Paul's discourse, in which he relates Israel's history, may seem boring to us, like Peter's (chapter 2) and Stephen's (chapter 7). This was the Jewish way of preaching and presenting an argument. They would present the history of their people, stressing a series of facts which would give them a clue to understand the whole. Similarly, Paul and the apostles revealed the authentic meaning of sacred history: they showed that God's promises to Israel were dants of Abraham and you also who fear God, we have been sent to give you this message of salvation.²⁷ It is a fact that the inhabitants of Jerusalem and their leaders did not recognize it. And although the warnings of the prophets were read every sabbath, they did not understand them. But they fulfilled them by condemning Jesus.²⁸ Even though they found no charge against him that deserved death, they asked Pilate to have him executed.²⁹ And after they had carried out all that had been written concerning him, they took him down from the cross and laid him in a tomb.

³⁰ But God raised him from the dead,³¹ and for many days thereafter he showed himself to those who had come up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem. They have now become his witnesses before the people.³² We ourselves announce to you this Good News: All that God promised our ancestors,³³ he has fulfilled for us by raising Jesus, according to what is written in the second psalm: *You are my Son, today I have begotten you.*³⁴ On raising him from the dead so that he would never know the decay of death, God fulfilled his promise: I will give you the holy blessings, the sure ones, that I kept for David.

³⁵ Moreover, in another place it is said: *You will not allow your holy one to undergo corruption.*³⁶ Now David underwent corruption, for he died and was laid beside his ancestors after having served God's purpose in his own time.³⁷ But the one God raised up – Jesus – did not undergo corruption.³⁸ Through him, fellow Israelites, you have forgiveness of sins and of everything from which you could not be cleansed and freed by the law of Moses: this is our good news.³⁹ Whoever believes in him is freed of all this.

⁴⁰ Now watch out lest what was said by the prophet happens to you: Take care, you cynics; be amazed and disappear! For I am about to do something in your days which you would never believe even if you had been told.

⁴² As Paul and Barnabas withdrew, they were invited to speak again on the same subject the following sabbath.⁴³ After that, when the assembly broke up, many Jews and devout God-fearing people followed them and to these they spoke, urging them to hold fast to the grace of God.

⁴⁴ The following sabbath almost the entire city gathered to listen to Paul who spoke a fairly long time fulfilled in Christ's resurrection.

We must always look for the continuity between what God did in past times and what happens now, and relate the events of life with the events of the Gospel. Christian life does not consist in rituals, but above all in orienting our lives and our actions in such a way that sacred history continues through us.

The audience reacts in various ways. Those who are listening are not only Jews, but there are also those "who fear the Lord," or "proselytes" whom we have already met in the Ethiopian (8:30) and Cornelius: these are considered to be second class believers by the Jews.

From the first words, Paul greets them the same way as the Jews. Then, in his preaching, he does not emphasize the observance of the Law, which only the Jews could fulfil and which made them feel superior to others: instead, Paul declares that the Law is surpassed (v 38). Paul stresses rather the promises of God addressed to all people. Those who "fear God" are delighted by a Gospel which makes them God's children, just as are the Jews.

They all invite Paul to speak on the same theme the following Saturday. At that time Paul makes an important decision: Instead of restricting himself to the Jews during the week, he prefers to go to those who "fear God," people whom he wins over because he is not racist at all. These people, in turn, bring more people to the gathering on the following Sabbath: there, pagans who had never been involved with the Jews mix with them.

Then a crisis occurs. The assembly divides about the Lord.⁴⁵ But the presence of such a crowd made the Jews jealous. So they began to oppose with insults whatever Paul said.

⁴⁶Then Paul and Barnabas spoke out firmly, saying, "It was necessary that God's word be first proclaimed to you, but since you now reject it and condemn yourselves to lose eternal life, we turn to non-Jewish people.⁴⁷For thus we were commanded by the Lord: I have set you as a light to the pagan nations, so that you may bring my salvation to the ends of the earth."

⁴⁸Those who were not Jews rejoiced when they heard this and gave praise for the message, and all those destined for everlasting life believed in it.⁴⁹Thus the Word spread throughout the whole region.

⁵⁰Some of the Jews, however, incited God-fearing women of the upper class and the leading men of the city as well, and stirred up an intense persecution against Paul and Barnabas. Finally they had them expelled from their region.⁵¹The apostles shook the dust from their feet in protest against this people and went to Iconium,⁵² leaving the disciples filled with joy and Holy Spirit.

Iconium evangelized

+ 14 ¹In Iconium Paul and Barnabas likewise went into the Jewish synagogue and preached in such a manner that a great number of Jews and Greeks became believers.²But the Jews who would not believe stirred up the pagan people and poisoned their minds against the brothers.³In spite of this Paul and Barnabas spent a considerable time there. They spoke fearlessly of the Lord, who confirmed the message of the grace of God with the miraculous signs and wonders he gave them power to do.

⁴There, too, all the town was stirred by the Teaching. They were divided, some siding with the Jews and some with the apostles.⁵A move was made by pagans and Jews, together with their leaders, to harm the apostles and to stone them.⁶But Paul and Barnabas learned of this and fled to the Lycaonian towns of Lystra and Derbe and to the surrounding countryside,⁷where they continued preaching the Good News.

Lystra and Derbe

■ Paul and Barnabas spent a fairly long time at Lystra.⁸There was a

45. 17, 5; 18, 6; 28, 17 47. 1s 49, 6 48. 10, 20 51. Lk 10, 11 3. Mk 16, 20; 1 Thes 1, 5 into two factions. The Jews who are the most close-minded and proud are afraid when they see themselves surrounded by those "unclean" pagans: they oppose Paul and they even try to throw him out any way they can. Rich and pious women intervene. From that moment, a Christian community, separate from the Jews, is formed.

Who does not realize that in today's Church, there are still "proselytes," namely, men of good will, who are waiting for the preaching of a gospel really open to everyone and who do not find a place in our assemblies?

Those destined for everlasting life became believers (48). This expression does not condemn those who did not believe. It simply teaches us that no one becomes a believer, except through the grace of God, who has destined us to this life with God, in truth and already now, a life which flows into eternal life (Jn 17:3).

+ What happened in Antioch in Pisidia happens here as well: Paul and Barnabas speak fearlessly. This is one of the characteristics of the genuine apostle, moved by the Holy Spirit. This assurance has a powerful influence on the conversion of the audience, but it is not a natural gift of men. Paul will indicate that God gives it to preachers who place their trust in God, especially when they feel the weakest and the least prepared. (See 1 Thes 2:2 and 2 Cor 12:10).

Paul's hearers were religious people who were following their own customs and ways of honoring their gods. They had priests, rites and sacrifices. But Paul invites them to experience something different, which is faith, and this faith is a gift of God.

■ The sick man believes in Paul's preaching; he believes that the risen Jesus is truly alive and that he can heal him. At Paul's word he stands crippled man in Lystra who had never been able to stand or walk. ⁹One day, as he was listening to the preaching, Paul looked intently at him and saw that he had the faith to be saved. ¹⁰So he spoke to him in a loud voice, "In the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, I command you to stand up on your feet!" and the man stood up and began to walk around.

"When the people saw what Paul had done, they cried out in the language of Lycaonia, 'The gods have come to us in human likeness!'"

¹²They named Barnabas Zeus, and Paul they called Hermes, since he was the chief speaker. ¹³Even the priests of the Temple of Zeus, which stood outside the town, brought oxen and garlands to the gate to offer sacrifice to them.

¹⁴When Barnabas and Paul heard this, they tore their garments to show their indignation, and rushed into the crowd, shouting. ¹⁵"Friends, why are you doing this? We are human beings like you and we are now telling you to turn away from these useless things to the living God who made the heavens, the earth, the sea and all that is in them. ¹⁶In past generations he allowed each nation to go its own way, ¹⁷though he never stopped making himself known; for he is continually doing good, giving you rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, providing you with food and filling your hearts with gladness."

¹⁸Even these words could hardly keep the crowd from offering sacrifice to them.

¹⁹They were there teaching some time. But some Jews arrived from Antioch and Iconium to argue with Paul and Barnabas. They persuaded the people to reject them, saying that all this was untrue. Finally they stoned Paul and dragged him out of the town, leaving him for dead. ²⁰But when his disciples gathered around him, he stood up and returned to the town. And the next day he left for Derbe with Barnabas.

Return to Antioch

o ²¹ After proclaiming the gospel in that town and making many disciples, they returned to Lystra and Iconium and on to Antioch. ²² They were strengthening the disciples and encouraging them to remain firmly up. This cure externally reveals what took place inwardly: the man stood up, ready to do what the Gospel requires; he is ready to change his life, having being freed from the human traditions which were obstacles in his way.

The others are amazed at the miracle: but they did not, in fact, understand it. They want to express their happiness and their gratitude in an unusual way: by offering sacrifices to God or to the gods. They neither heard God's call nor did they respond by changing their lives.

- Derbe marks the end of the mission. Paul and Barnabas go back the same way they came. They visit all the communities established on the continent. Then, they will sail for Antioch without returning to the island of Cyprus.

In those days the Church did not have parishes, clergy, institutions, or books. The apostle had to organize the Church in such a way that it could continue. There will be a book, the Jewish bible, namely, the Old Testament. But, the prophets inspired by God, will draw new teachings from this book, by discovering a sign of Christ in the past. From time to time the communities will be visited by apostles or prophets coming from other churches.

There will be gatherings around the celebration of the Lord's Supper (see 1 Cor 11); besides the Eucharist, everyone will share with others their own spiritual gifts (see 1 Cor chapters 12-14). Just as the Jewish communities had leaders called "elders" or presbyters, Christians also lay their hands on leaders, "presbyters," who will lead and preside over the Eucharist. (See commentary on 13:1).

And so we understand that a mission does not reach its goal if it does not succeed in forming adult communities, with their own leaders and with the active participation of their members.

- + We see the first internal conflict in the faithful, for they said, "We must go through many trials to enter the Kingdom of God." ²³In each church they appointed elders and, after praying and fasting, they commended them to the Lord in whom they had placed their faith.

²⁴Then they travelled through Pisidia, and came to Pamphylia.

²⁵They preached the Word in Perga and went down to Attalia. ²⁶From there they sailed back to Antioch, where they had first been commended to God's favour for the task they had now completed.

²⁷On their arrival they gathered the Church together and told them all that God had done through them and how he had opened the door of faith to the Non-Jews. ²⁸They spent a fairly long time there with the disciples.

The council at Jerusalem

+15 ¹Some persons who had come from Judea to Antioch were teaching the brothers in this way, "Unless you keep the law of Moses, you cannot be saved."

²Because of this there was trouble, and Paul had fierce arguments with them. For Paul told the people to remain as they were when they became believers. Finally those who had come from Jerusalem suggested that Paul and Barnabas and some others go up to Jerusalem to see the apostles and elders about this question.

³They were sent on their way by the Church. As they passed through Phoenicia and Samaria they reported how the Non-Jews had turned to God and there was great joy among all the brothers and sisters.

⁴On their arrival in Jerusalem, they were welcomed by the Church, the apostles and the elders, to whom they told all that God had done through them. ⁵Some believers, however, who belonged to the party of the Pharisees stood up and said that non-Jewish men must be circumcised and instructed to keep the law of Moses. ⁶So the apostles and elders met together to consider this matter.

⁷As the discussions became heated, Peter stood up and said to them, "Brothers, you know what God did among us in the early days, so that non-Jews could hear from me the Good News and believe. ⁸God, who can read hearts, put himself on their side by giving the Holy Spirit to them just as he did to us. ⁹He made no dis-

Church. Paul himself relates it in Gal 1:1-10

It was an important discussion. It was a matter of knowing if a pagan was saved only by believing in Jesus and being baptised, or if he first had to observe the religious laws and customs of the Jews for whom circumcision was fundamental.

In fact, these commandments and rituals were only a provisional form of religion, a stage which had been preparing for Christ. Thus, when Paul and Barnabas were preaching to the pagans, they did not mention the Jewish rites. But, some believers of Jewish origin thought it was necessary to preserve everything because it came from God.

Paul goes to Jerusalem accompanied by some believers of pagan origin, with Titus, in particular, who was one of his assistants. In the discussion, the argument which most impressed the conservative Jews was to find out that they were in the presence of real believers acting under the power of the Holy Spirit despite the fact they had not been circumcised (what a shame!) and that they were not concerned with the law of Moses or Jewish worship.

The solving of the conflict clarifies the communal aspect of the Church. The "elders," in charge of the mother-Church in Jerusalem meet with the apostles who are the supreme authority in the Church. Simon Peter addresses them, referring to the experience he had in the case of Cornelius (chapter 11) and he opens the way of total freedom with regard to the Jewish religion.

This way of freedom must also prevail in our days. Every day there are more adults and young people who have a culture foreign to the one which gave the language of the Church, to the form of their Sunday gatherings, to the answers given to people's concerns. Will we impose moulds with which the world of workers and inction between us and them, and cleansed their hearts through faith.

¹⁰So, why do you want to put God to the test? Why do you lay on the disciples a burden that neither our ancestors nor we ourselves were able to carry? ¹¹We believe, indeed, that we are saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus, just as they are."

¹²The whole assembly kept silent as they listened to Paul and Barnabas tell of all the miraculous signs and wonders that God had done through them among the non-Jews.

■ ¹³After they had finished, James spoke up, "Listen to me, brothers. ¹⁴Symeon has just explained how God first showed his care by taking a people for himself from non-Jewish nations. ¹⁵And the words of the prophets agree with this, for Scripture says, ¹⁶After this I will return and rebuild the booth of David which has fallen; I will rebuild its ruins and set it up again. ¹⁷Then the rest of humanity will look for the Lord, and all the nations will be consecrated to my Name. So, says the Lord, who does today ¹⁸what he decided from the beginning.

¹⁹Because of this, I think that we should not make difficulties for those non-Jews who are turning to God.

²⁰Let us just tell them not to eat food that is unclean from having been offered to idols; to keep themselves from prohibited marriages; and not to eat the flesh of animals that have been strangled, or any blood. ²¹For from the earliest times Moses has been taught in every place, and every sabbath his laws are recalled."

The council's letters

²²Then the apostles and elders together with the whole Church decided to choose men from among them to send to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas. These were Judas, known as Barsabbas, and Silas, both leading men among the brothers. ²³They took with them the following letter:

Greetings from the apostles and elders, your brothers, to the brothers of non-Jewish birth in Antioch, Syria and Cilicia. ²⁴We have heard that some persons from among us have worried you with their discussions and troubled your peace of mind. They were not appointed by us. ²⁵But now, it has seemed right to us in an assembly, to choose representatives and to send them to you, along with our beloved Barnabas and Paul, ²⁶who have dedicated their lives to the service of our Lord Jesus Christ. ²⁷We young people do not identify? Peter provides the answer.

■ Here, Luke seems to combine two different meetings into a single account, and this is rather confusing. First, there was the meeting we just read about. There the question of principles was resolved: the Greek converts did not have to observe the Old Testament laws which were considered to be provisional and only for Jewish people. After Peter's intervention, the decree we read about in 15:29 is adopted: the Greeks are only required not to eat meat offered to idols (see 1 Cor 8-10) and to treat others according to the Gospel (Rom 12).

But after that, there were difficulties in the churches of Syria-Palestine, whose bishop was James. For these churches, he decreed what we read here in 15:20-21 and also 21:25: that is to say, that both Jews and Greeks will sacrifice some of their rights. Greeks will abstain from eating meat with blood, out of respect for their Jewish brothers who despised such practices (Rom 14). But James did not say it in the Jerusalem assembly, nor was it decreed then as it seems when reading 20-21, contradicting the decree adopted on this occasion.

Let us underline the following expressions in the story: The apostles, the elders and the entire community ...we with the Holy Spirit: the decision of the community in union with their apostles carries the guarantee of the Holy Spirit.

send you then Judas and Silas who themselves will give you these instructions by word of mouth.

²⁸We, with the Holy Spirit, have decided not to put any other burden on you except what is necessary: ²⁹not to eat meat that has been offered to idols, and not to do to anyone what you would not want another to do to you. Keep these rules and be guided by the Holy Spirit. Farewell."

³⁰After saying goodbye, the messengers went to Antioch, where they assembled the community and handed them the letter. ³¹When they read the news, all were delighted with the encouragement it gave them. ³²Judas and Silas, who were themselves prophets, spoke at length to encourage and strengthen them. ³³After they had spent some time there, the messengers were sent off in peace by the brothers; Silas, however, preferred to stay with them and only Judas went off. ³⁵So Paul and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching with many others the word of God.

Paul's second mission

◆ ³⁶After some days Paul said to Barnabas, "Let us return and visit the brothers in every town where we proclaimed the word of the Lord, to see how they are getting on." ³⁷Barnabas wanted to take with them John also called Mark, ³⁸but Paul did not think it right to take him since he had not stayed with them to the end of their mission in Pamphylia, but had turned back and left them. ³⁹Such a sharp disagreement resulted that the two finally separated. Barnabas took Mark along with him and sailed for Cyprus. ⁴⁰Paul, on his part, chose Silas and left, commended by the brothers and sisters to the grace of the Lord.

⁴¹He travelled throughout Syria and Cilicia, strengthening the churches there.

Paul recruits Timothy

+ 16 ¹Paul travelled on to Derbe and then to Lystra. A disciple named Timothy lived there, whose mother was a believer of Jewish origin and whose father was a Greek. ²As the brothers at Lystra and Iconium spoke well of him, Paul wanted Timothy to accompany him. ³So he took him and, because of the Jews of that place who all knew that his father was a Greek, he circumcised him.

⁴As they travelled from town to [37, 12, 12 40, 14, 26 1. Phil 2, 19; 1 Cor 4, 17; 1 Thes 3, 11 2. 2 Tim 3, 11 3. 1 Cor 9, 20]

Concerning the same theme of sharing among Christians, see Rom 14.

◆ This is the year 50. It has been thirteen years since Paul encountered Christ on the road to Damascus and now another stage of his life is starting. He acts as the leader in charge. The apostles and the church in Jerusalem had officially recognized the mission that Christ had given him on the day of his conversion: he will be the apostle to the pagan nations which form the Roman world (Gal 2:7-9; Eph 3:8-9).

The sudden breakup of Paul and his friend Barnabas should not surprise us: faith does not destroy one's personality. But, time and thanksgiving tend to lessen conflicts. Some years later, Paul who is imprisoned, will be helped by Mark (Phlm 24), and much later, imprisoned again, Paul will ask Mark to come and help him (2 Tim 4:11).

+ For Paul, it is not enough to have established Elders in every community, but he also wants to have assistants who are to visit and strengthen the existing communities and form new ones, as Paul himself does. Timothy becomes the first of these. The apostle takes into account the good testimony which believers give of him and when it is a matter of looking for leaders for the Church, he will always demand that they have a good reputation (see Tim 3:7 and Titus 1:6).

A detail shows us how Paul was able to give in. He does not want pagans to be circumcised: this ritual has no value for a Christian. Yet, since Timothy is Jewish, Paul circumcises him according to the Jewish rite so that he would not have any problems with believers of Jewish origins and so that they would be better able to minister among them.

It is important to realize that Luke gives only town, they delivered the decisions of the apostles and elders in Jerusalem, for the people to obey. ⁵ Meanwhile, the churches grew stronger in faith and increased in number every day.

⁶ They travelled through Phrygia and Galatia, because they had been prevented by the Holy Spirit from preaching the message in the province of Asia. ⁷ When they came to Mysia, they tried to go on to Bithynia, but the Spirit of Jesus did not allow them to do this. ⁸ So, passing by Mysia, they went down to Troas.

Paul goes to Macedonia

■ ⁹ There one night Paul had a vision. A Macedonian stood before him and begged him, "Come over to Macedonia and help us!" ¹⁰ When he awoke, he told us this vision and we understood that the Lord was calling us to give the Good News to the Macedonian people.

¹¹ So we put out to sea from Troas and sailed straight across to Samothrace Island, and the next day to Neapolis. ¹² From there we went inland to Philippi, the leading city of the district of Macedonia, and a Roman colony. We spent some days in that city.

¹³ On the sabbath we went outside the city gate to the bank of the river where we thought the Jews would gather to pray. We sat down and began speaking to the women who were gathering there. ¹⁴ One of them was a God-fearing woman named Lydia from Thyatira City, a dealer in purple cloth.

As she listened, the Lord opened her heart to respond to what Paul was saying. ¹⁵ After she had been baptized together with her household, she invited us to her house, "If you think I am faithful to the Lord, come and stay at my house." And she persuaded us to accept.

Paul and Silas in prison

◆ ¹⁶ As we were on our way to the place of prayer one day, we were met by a slave girl who had a divining spirit and gained much profit for her masters by her fortune telling.

¹⁷ She followed Paul and the rest of us shouting, "These people are servants of the Most High God. They will make known to you a way of salvation." ¹⁸ The girl did this for several days until Paul was annoyed. Then he turned around and said to the spirit, "In the name of Jesus Christ, I command you, come out of her!" Then the spirit left her.

¹⁹ When her masters realized that all the profits they expected had gone, they seized Paul and Silas and dragged them into the market place before the local authorities. ²⁰ And when they had turned them over to the

a few details concerning a journey which must have lasted about two years. Paul's letters enable us to see something of the persevering work to which he dedicated himself in the recently founded communities in order to form believers and their leaders.

On two occasions the Holy Spirit prevents Paul from carrying out his plan to develop the Church in the Roman province of Asia. The Spirit shows him he must go beyond, to Macedonia which was the first province of Europe. Thus, God's will that the Gospel be taken, as soon as possible to Rome, the center of the empire, is confirmed. Paul who is so dynamic and enterprising follows the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

■ Suddenly the text mentions we, that is to say, that Luke is beginning to relate his own involvement. We must conclude that in Troas, Paul and Silas meet Luke, a doctor from Antioch who was waiting for them. He may have arrived by boat while the two missionaries were traveling inland.

◆ It seems that everything contributed to make the Philippi incident an example of Christian freedom.

Paul frees a girl who was a fortune-teller. If officials, they said, ²¹ "These men are Jews and they are disturbing our city. They have come here to introduce customs which are not lawful for us Romans to adopt or practice."

²² So they set the crowd against them and the officials tore the clothes off Paul and Silas and ordered them to be flogged. ²³ And when they had inflicted many blows on them, they threw them into prison, charging the jailer to guard them safely. ²⁴ Upon receiving these instructions, he threw them into the inner cell and fastened their feet between heavy blocks of wood.

A miraculous deliverance

²⁵ About midnight, Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God, and the other prisoners were listening. ²⁶ Suddenly a severe earthquake shook the place, rocking the prison to its foundations. Immediately all the doors flew open and the chains of all the prisoners fell off. ²⁷ The jailer woke up to see the prison gates wide open. Thinking that the prisoners had escaped, he drew his sword to kill himself, ²⁸ but Paul shouted to him, "Do not harm yourself! We are all still here."

²⁹ The jailer asked for a light, then rushed in, and fell at the feet of Paul and Silas. ³⁰ After he had secured the other prisoners, he led them out and asked, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" ³¹ They answered, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and you and your household will be saved."

³² Then they spoke the word of God to him and to all his household.

³³ Even at that hour of the night, the jailer took care of them and washed their wounds; and he and his whole household were baptized at once.

³⁴ He led them to his house, spread a meal before them and joyfully celebrated with his whole household his new found faith in God.

³⁵ The next morning the officials sent police officers with the order, "Let those men go." ³⁶ So the jailer said to Paul and Silas, "The officials have sent an order for you and Silas to be released. You may leave and go in peace."

³⁷ But Paul said to him, "They flogged us publicly, without trial, men who are Roman citizens; and now they want to smuggle us out secretly? Oh no! Let them come into the prison and lead us out."

³⁸ The police officers reported this to the officials, who were afraid when they heard that Paul and Silas were Roman citizens. ³⁹ So they went to the prison with many of their friends and invited them to leave, "We did not know that you were upright men." And when Paul and Silas were leaving, they added, "When you are out, this "gift" is not fraud, according to the Bible, it comes from being in contact with hidden forces ruling this world (Col 2:15; 1 Cor 2:8), keeping us away from God, because we cannot trust in God and also seek such answers.

Before this healing, the girl's masters could only say that these men introduce customs which we cannot accept. The Jews had already used similar arguments and others will do the same by denouncing the true believers "in the name of the sacred traditions of our culture" and without seriously looking at the facts.

In Roman jails there was a central room and in the center of the pavement a grill closed the opening through which the most dangerous prisoners were thrown into an underground cell. They throw Paul and Silas there. They are perfectly free in spite of their chains. Though they have been beaten and are wounded, they feel like praising God. In the silence of the night, the jailers and the other prisoners listen to them.

God is also listening. This example of Christian freedom draws the witness of the Holy Spirit: the gates open, revealing the presence of God who grants the men freedom.

Note also Paul who knows how to defend his rights (v 37).

please do not bring trouble on us for having spoken sharply to you."

⁴⁰Once outside the prison, Paul and Silas went to Lydia's house where they met and encouraged the brothers and then departed.

Difficulties in Thessalonica

17 ¹Paul and Silas took the road through Amphipolis and Apollonia and came to Thessalonica, where there was a Jewish synagogue.

²As Paul used to do, he went to the synagogue and on three sabbaths he held discussions with them about the Scriptures. ³He explained and proved to them that the Messiah had to suffer and rise from the dead, and he said, "Such a Messiah is this Jesus whom I am proclaiming to you."

⁴Some of them were convinced and joined Paul and Silas. So too did a great number of Greeks sympathetic to Judaism and many prominent women.

⁵This only made the Jews jealous, so they gathered some of the good-for-nothing street loafers and formed a mob to start a riot in the town. They came to the house of Jason, in an attempt to bring Paul and Silas before the people's assembly. ⁶Not finding them there, they dragged off Jason and some of the brothers to the city authorities shouting, "These men who have turned the world upside down have come here also" ⁷and Jason has given them hospitality. They all disregard the decrees of the Emperor and claim that there is another king, Jesus."

⁸In this way they upset the crowd and the city officials who heard them. ⁹The officials released Jason and the others on bail.

¹⁰As soon as night fell, the brothers sent Paul and Silas off to Berea. On their arrival they went to the Jewish synagogue. ¹¹Its members were more open-minded than those in Thessalonica and welcomed the message with great enthusiasm. Each day they examined the Scriptures to see if these things were so. ¹²Many of them came to believe, as did numerous influential Greek women, and many men as well.

¹³But when the Jews of Thessalonica came to know that the word of God had been proclaimed by Paul in Berea also, they hurried there to cause a commotion and stir up the crowds.

¹⁴At once, the brothers sent Paul away to the coast; but both Silas and Timothy stayed in Berea. ¹⁵Paul was taken as far as Athens by his escort, who then returned to Berea with instructions for Silas and Timothy to come to him as soon as possible.

Paul in Athens

+ ¹⁶While Paul was waiting for them in Athens, he felt very uneasy at the sight of a city full of idols. ¹⁷He

o From this journey we must consider the case of Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia. Almost all the Jews violently oppose Paul. The Christian community will begin with men of Greek descent who "fear the Lord" whom Paul first met in the synagogues and with other pagan Greeks. Persecution prevents Paul from staying more than two months. How could a church formed under such conditions and beginning with pagans with little training survive? Yet, it persevered: see the Letters to the Thessalonians.

+ Athens was the most famous city in the Greek world. Even after the loss of political control, Athens remained as the cultural center of the Roman world. Paul goes there, as he always aims for large cities or ports, where news travels from one place to another and spreads through sea travel.

He is offered the opportunity to speak in the presence of Athens' philosophers and leaders: he accepts immediately. He tries to give a learned twist to his message before held discussions in the synagogue with the Jews and the God-fearing men, as well as daily debates in the public square with ordinary passers-by.

¹⁸Epicureans and Stoic philosophers debated with him, some of them asking, "What is this babbler trying to say?" Others commented, "He sounds like a promoter of foreign gods," because he was heard to speak of Jesus and 'the Resurrection.'¹⁹ So they took Paul and led him off to the Areopagus hall, and said, "We would like to know what this new teaching is that you are talking about."²⁰ Some of the things we hear you say sound strange to us, and we would like to know what they mean."

²¹Indeed, all Athenian citizens, as well as the foreigners who lived there, have as their favourite occupation talking about or listening to what is new.

²²Then Paul stood up in the Areopagus hall and said, "Athenian citizens, I note that in every way you are very religious."²³ As I walked around looking at your shrines, I even discovered an altar inscribed: To an un- known God. Now, what you worship as unknown, I intend to make known to you.

²⁴God, who made the world and all that is in it, does not dwell in sanctuaries made by human hands, being as he is Lord of heaven and earth.²⁵ Nor does his worship depend on anything made by human hands, as if he were in need. Rather it is he who gives life and breath and everything else to everyone.²⁶ From one stock he created the whole human race, to live throughout all the earth and he fixed the time and the boundaries of each nation.²⁷ He wanted them to seek God by themselves, even if it were only by groping for him, and eventually to find him.

Yet he is not far from any one of us.²⁸ For: in him we live and move and have our being, as some of your poets have said: for we too are his offspring.

²⁹If we are indeed God's offspring, we ought not to think of divinity as something like a statue of gold or silver or stone, a product of human art and imagination.

³⁰But now God prefers to overlook this time of ignorance and he calls on these intellectuals: it turns out to be a disaster. Note these learned people's cool welcome of the Gospel. They are more curious about hearing something new than about real involvement.

Paul had in mind, first, to speak about the people who seek God, then, to present God who, in Jesus, comes to seek men, giving them time to convert before judgment. But they did not let him finish his speech.

Let us note that Paul praises these pagan people and their intellectuals.

He wanted them to seek God by themselves. Paul does not condemn the philosophers who do not have faith. In spite of their errors, we must see in them, the efforts and the groping of men to reach the Truth, and the Truth is God. God reveals himself in nature and through all kinds of blessings which life brings us. God arouses in us the concern to unite all people, since we all share the same nature.

Today we must still regard the pagan and non-Christian religions with respect. These religions express the faith of the people seeking God and the Holy Spirit is at work in them. The Gospel does not destroy but it raises the culture, religions and wisdom prior to it, to a higher level. In the same way, we cannot evangelize the urban masses and the workers without respecting the movements which keep alive the hope of justice for all and the end of the colonial situation prevailing in many countries.

Later, however, Paul points out that God prefers to overlook that time. Christ has come: starting with him, who is the head (Col 1: 18), the dispersed children of God are going to be gathered in one body (Jn 11:52; Eph 1:10), and since he is the definitive truth, all must believe in the Gospel. God judges the world through Christ, that is to say, that men are saved or condemned depending on whether they accept or reject this God who appeared poor and humble.

all people to change their ways. ³¹ He has already set a day on which he will judge the world with justice through a man he has appointed. And, so that all may believe it, he has just given a sign by raising this man from the dead."

³⁴ But a few did join him, and believed. Among them were Dionysius, a member of the Areopagus court, a woman named Damaris, and some others.

Paul in Corinth

18 ¹ After this, Paul left Athens and went to Corinth. ² There he found a Jew named Aquila, a native of Pontus, who had recently come from Italy with his wife Priscilla, following a decree of the Emperor Claudius which ordered all Jews to leave Rome. ³ Paul went to visit them and then stayed and worked with them because they shared the same trade of tentmaking. Every sabbath ⁴ he held a discussion in the synagogue, trying to convince both Jews and Greeks.

⁵ When Silas and Timothy came down from Macedonia, Paul was able to give himself wholly to preaching and proving to the Jews that Jesus was the Messiah. ⁶ One day when they opposed him and insulted him, he shook the dust from his clothes in protest, saying, "You yourselves will account for your deeds! I am not to blame if from now on I go to the Non-Jews."

⁷ So Paul left there and went to the house of a God-fearing man named Titus Justus who lived next door to the synagogue. ⁸ A leading man of the synagogue, Crispus, along with his whole household, believed in the Lord. On hearing Paul, many more Corinthians believed and were baptized.

⁹ One night, in a vision, the Lord said to Paul, "Do not be afraid, but continue speaking and do not be silent ¹⁰ for I will have a harvest of many people in this city. Since I am with you, no one will harm you." ¹¹ So Paul stayed a year and a half in that place, teaching the word of God among them.

¹² When Gallio was governor of Achaia, the Jews rose in a body against Paul and brought him before the court. And they accused him, ¹³ "This man tries to persuade us to worship God in ways that are against the Law."

¹⁴ Paul was about to speak in his own defense when Gallio said to the ■ Corinth, the main port of Greece, with 600,000 inhabitants, of whom 400,000 are slaves, capital of the province of Achaia, is a religious, commercial and cultural center. It has countless temples with thousands of prostitutes serving in them. The city is famous for its luxury and its corruption. Paul goes there and remains eighteen months – until the end of the year 52. This date is exact: history tells us that Gallio was governor of Achaia during the year 52.

There appears a couple – Aquila and Priscilla. They may have been Christians already, but the emperor's decree had expelled all the Jewish Christians from Rome.

Aquila and Priscilla simply placed themselves at Paul's service to help him. They will assist him on other occasions with the natural availability of people who do not feel tied to any city or country.

Note what Christ says in the vision. Obstacles do not discourage the apostle. He knows that, ordinarily, the devil increases the obstacles when we step into his territory, for fear of losing his dominion. But, in this center of corruption, grace will be more powerful.

◆ In this short paragraph Luke combined the end of the second journey and the beginning of the third.

⁴ Paul then explained, "John himself spoke of another one who was to come, and that one is Jesus." ⁵ Upon hearing this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus and the Holy Spirit came down upon them ⁶ and they began to speak in tongues and to prophesy. ⁷ There were about twelve of them in all.

⁸ Paul went into the synagogue and for three months he preached and discussed there boldly, trying to convince them about the Kingdom of God. ⁹ Some of them, instead of believing, grew obstinate and criticized the way publicly. So Paul departed from them and took the disciples away. He taught daily in the school of a certain Tyrannus, from eleven to four in the afternoon. ¹⁰ He did this for two years, so that all those who lived in the province of Asia, both Jews and Non-Jews, heard the word of the Lord.

¹³ Some Jews who travelled around driving out evil spirits, also tried to use the name of the Lord Jesus over those possessed by evil spirits, saying, "I command you by this Jesus whom Paul preaches." ¹⁴ Among them were the sons of a Jewish priest named Sceva. ¹⁵ But one day, when they entered a house and dared to do this, the evil spirit said to them, "Jesus I recognize and Paul I know; but who are you?" ¹⁶ Then the man with the evil spirit sprang at them and overpowered first one and then another. And he handled them so violently that they fled from that house naked and mauled. ¹⁷ This became known to all the Jews and Greeks living in Ephesus; all of them were very impressed and the name of the Lord Jesus came to be held in great honour.

¹⁸ Many of those who had become believers came forward and openly acknowledged their former practices. ¹⁹ Many who had practised magic arts collected their books and burned them in front of everyone. When the value of these was assessed, it came to fifty thousand silver coins.

²⁰ Powerfully, in this way, the word of the Lord spread widely and grew strong.

Note the twelve men. John the Baptist's disciples. They are believers and they are upright men: yet, they lack what is most important: they had not received the Holy Spirit. He came down on them (v 6). See Acts 8:14. It is good to have experienced the gifts of the Spirit at a turning point of our life. It is still better if in our Christian commitments we allow ourselves to be guided by this divine "instinct" instead of always relying on our own ability.

They were baptised in the Name of the Lord Jesus. Must we presume that in the early days, baptism was "in the Name of Jesus" and not "in the Name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit?" This is not certain. In the Name means: by the power of, and perhaps the baptism "in the Name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit" was also called "baptism in the Name of Jesus" to distinguish it from the "baptism of John" and from the many baptisms of the Jewish and pagan religions.

But, perhaps, in the first generation, people were baptized in the Name of Jesus and later, the Church modified the formula to distinguish itself from groups believing in Jesus, but without acknowledging him to be the Son of God born of the Father. In any case, there is no room for the controversies of these local churches thinking they have reinvented the Gospel, when they condemn the formula used for twenty centuries which names the three divine persons. It is the Church of the apostles which gave the first formula and it is also the Church which, some years sign of the failure of the twentieth century Church is this: she has lost touch with people in the crowded urban areas, becoming a church of the middle class. Many Catholics try to help the needy and catechize their children; the best evangelists vindicate the rights of the poor. In several countries the bishops' conferences have loosened their links with the rich and work among urban poor people. But in most places the Church does not evangelize them by identifying and adult workers and forming their leaders to build from their own living communities. The people see the Church distant from their life and their experience of life and God. They do not find God's word translated to them in the statements of the hierarchy. As the huge crowds were left without pastors, millions of them created their own churches.

Have you noticed that you put on the dead one? The risen Christ would be one with you.

The silversmiths' riot

■ ²¹When all these events were completed, Paul led by the Holy Spirit decided to travel through Macedonia and Achaia again and then go on to Jerusalem. And he said, "After I have been there, I must make for Rome."
²²So he sent two of his assistants, Timothy and Erastus, to Macedonia, ahead of him, while he himself stayed on for a time in Asia.

²³About that time the city was deeply troubled because of the Way.
²⁴It all began because of a certain silversmith named Demetrius, who made silver models of the temple of the goddess Artemis and whose business brought a great deal of profit to the workers.
²⁵He called them together with others who did similar work and said, "Friends, you know that our prosperity depends on this work.
²⁶But, as you can see and hear for yourselves, this Paul has led astray a great number of people, not only here in Ephesus, but also throughout most of the province of Asia. And he has convinced them that gods made by human hands are no gods at all.
²⁷The danger grows, that not only our trade will be discredited, but even that the temple of the great goddess Artemis will count for nothing. She whom Asia and all the world worships may soon be stripped of her renown."

²⁸On hearing this they became enraged and began shouting, "Great is Artemis of the Ephesians!"

²⁹The uproar spread throughout the whole city. The mob rushed to the theatre, dragging with them Gaius and Aristarchus, two Macedonians who were Paul's travelling companions.
³⁰Paul wished to face this crowd, but the disciples would not let him.
³¹Some of the counsellors of the Asian province also, who were friends of Paul, sent him a message begging him not to show himself in the theatre.

³²Meanwhile the whole assembly was in an uproar. Some shouted one thing, and some shouted another and most of them did not know why they were there.
³³Some of the crowd wanted a certain Alexander to speak, whom the Jews put forward. Alexander intended to prove their innocence before the crowd, ³⁴but, when they recognized that he was a Jew, they began to chant all together, "Great is Artemis of the Ephesians!"

³⁵Finally, the town clerk was able to calm the mob. He said, "Citizens of Ephesus, who among you does not know that Ephesus is keeper of the temple of the great Artemis, and of her image which fell from the sky?
³⁶Since these things are undeniable, you must calm yourselves and do nothing rash.
³⁷These men whom you brought here are not temple-robbers nor have they spoken ill of our goddess.
³⁸If Demetrius and his fellow later, gave the second formula which we read about in Mt 28:19.

+ Many are the signs that Jesus had promised for those who would believe (Mk 16:15-18). Similar things happen today when the Church becomes missionary again.

We are impressed by the cures. Perhaps, the in-depth conversion of those who confess their magic practices and burn their precious books, is more important. Apparently, they did not do it at the time of their baptism, but later, when they were more convinced about their faith.

21. 2 Cor 1, 15 23. 9, 2 27. 16, 19 34. 16, 20, 18, 17

■ The success of the Gospel was so great that it made idolatry stagger. It appeared, however, alongside many other religions. The Roman world was full of religious restlessness and, from Asia in particular, came many doctrines, cults and teachings which claimed to free people from death. But the Gospel was different from all of them since, while those doctrines were teaching theories, the apostles were proclaiming a fact: a Jew named Jesus has risen and we have seen him risen.

There is a chaotic disturbance. The group of idol-makers defend their interests. The Jews craftsmen want to bring charges against anyone, the courts are open and there are officials. Let them bring charges against each other. ³⁹If there is anything further that needs to be investigated, let it be done in the lawful assembly. ⁴⁰For as it is today, we are in danger of being charged with rioting, since there is no valid excuse we can give for this wild demonstration."

Paul returns to Macedonia

◆20 ¹After the uproar died down, Paul called his disciples together to encourage them. Then he said goodbye and set out on his journey to Macedonia. ²He travelled throughout those regions and spent himself in speaking and encouraging them, and then came to Greece.

³When he had been there for three months, he wanted to set sail for Syria, but as the Jews were plotting against him, he decided to return by way of Macedonia. ⁴When he was about to leave for the Asian province, some companions went with him, Sopater, son of Pyrrhus, from Berea, Aristarchus and Secundus from Thessalonica, Gaius from Derbe, Timothy, Tychicus and Trophimus from Asia. ⁵So they went ahead and waited for us in Troas, ⁶while we set sail from Philippi as soon as the festival of Unleavened Bread was over. Five days later we joined them in Troas where we spent a week.

The Eucharist at Troas

o ⁷On the first day of the week we were together for the breaking of the bread, and Paul, who intended to leave the following day, spoke at length. The conversation lasted until midnight, ⁸with many lamps burning in the upstairs room where we were gathered. A young man named Eutychus was sitting on the window ledge, ⁹and as Paul kept on talking, Eutychus grew more and more sleepy, until he finally went sound asleep and fell from the third floor to the ground. There they found him dead.

¹⁰Paul went down, bent over him and took him in his arms. "Do not be alarmed," he said, "there is life in him." ¹¹Then he went back upstairs, broke the bread and ate. After that he kept on talking with them for a long time until daybreak and then he left. ¹²As for the young man, they lifted him up alive and were greatly comforted.

¹³We went on ahead to the ship and sailed for Assos, where we were to pick up Paul. This was the arrangement since Paul intended to travel by foot. ¹⁴In fact, we met him at Assos

1. 16, 40 2. 2 Cor 2, 12 3. 2, 42; 1 Cor 11, 17; 16, 2 4. 10. 9, 36; 1 K 17, 21; Mk 5, 45 who lived quietly among the pagan population, are worried lest they be confused with the Christians and they try to excuse themselves.

◆ Paul spent two and a half years in Ephesus and various details in his letters suggest that Luke's story is quite incomplete as most of Paul's activity is not mentioned. Paul went through a lot of suffering. He may even have been imprisoned. During those months, he wrote the Letter to the Galatians and the first Letter to the Corinthians.

Paul goes to Macedonia (where Thessalonica is located) and to Greece (where he spends some time in Corinth). There, in Corinth, as he perseveres with his project of going to Rome, he writes to the Romans.

o It is not by accident that Luke says that they gathered on the first day of the week, since Christians had separated from the Jews, replacing the sacred Sabbath by the next day, the first day of the week, when Jesus had risen. That was a way of proclaiming this belief.

Naturally they meet in a home and this is the beginning of the Christian gathering which shares instruction and reflection, and concludes with thanksgiving (or Eucharist) and communion with the body of the Lord.

In this gathering, they can all express themselves. What is the content of Paul's long discourse?

– He reads and quotes the Scriptures announcing Jesus; and taking him aboard, we went on to Mitylene.¹⁵ We sailed from there and arrived off Chios the next day. A day later we came to Samos and the following day we reached Miletus.

¹⁶Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus, so as not to lose time in Asia, for he was eager to reach Jerusalem by the day of Pentecost, if at all possible.

Paul's farewell to the Ephesian elders

+ ¹⁷From Miletus Paul sent word to Ephesus, summoning the elders of the Church.¹⁸ When they came to him, he addressed them, "You know how I lived among you from the first day I set foot in the province of Asia,¹⁹ how I served the Lord in humility through the sorrows and trials that the Jews caused me.²⁰ You know that I never held back from doing anything that could be useful for you; I spoke publicly and in your homes²¹ and I urged Jews and Non-Jews alike that they turn to God and believe in our Lord Jesus.

²²But now I am to go to Jerusalem, impelled by the Spirit, without knowing what will happen to me there.²³ Yet in every city the Holy Spirit warns me that imprisonment and troubles await me.²⁴ Indeed, I put no value on my life if only I can finish my race and complete the service to which I have been assigned by the Lord Jesus, to announce God's loving-kindness.

²⁵I now feel sure that none of you among whom I have gone about proclaiming the Kingdom of God will ever see me again.²⁶ Therefore I declare to you this day that my conscience is clear with regard to all of you.²⁷ For I have spared no effort in fully declaring to you God's will.

²⁸Keep watch over yourselves and over the whole flock the Holy Spirit has given into your care. Shepherd the Church of the Lord which he has won at the price of his own blood.²⁹ I know that after I leave, ruthless wolves will come among you and not spare the flock.³⁰ And from among yourselves, men will arise corrupting the truth and inducing the disciples to follow them.

- he expresses his faith and his commitment to Christ;
- he relates the many happenings in his mission through the Spirit of Christ was at work.

This part of the gathering seems to go on and on until some become drowsy. But it had to conclude with the breaking of the bread, the Eucharist.

Through this, the participants witness God's power over death (see 10:36).

+ Paul goes back to Palestine. He already senses, or knows through a revelation from the Holy Spirit that a new part of his life will soon begin: years of imprisonment and trials. So, in saying good-bye, he wants to give some last advice to the leaders of all the communities he established in Asia.

The pastors of the Church must not only watch over the welfare of their parishioners. God had entrusted his Church to them and it was their role to prepare it for the trials that would come, and enable the people to keep the faith of the apostles and remain united until the coming of Christ.

In Paul's discourse we find:

- a personal concern: Had he communicated to the leaders all they would need to fulfil their responsibility? This must be every apostle's concern: to prepare leaders to be really responsible for their communities without constantly needing to be pushed.
- an invitation to follow his example. Although the role of the elders is not exactly that of an apostle, they must, nevertheless, be disinterested: the pastor must not live at the expense of the community if he does not perform a real service, and is not generously committed. They must be watchful. It would be too late to worry about the community once errors had appeared and divisions had occurred. They do not own the Church: they are its servants: the Church belongs to the Lord who has won it with the price of his own blood.

³¹Be on the watch therefore, remembering that for three years, night and day, I did not cease to warn everyone even with tears. ³²Now I commend you to God and to his grace-filled word, which is able to make you grow and reach the inheritance that you shall share with all the saints.

³³I have not looked for anyone's silver, gold or clothing. ³⁴You yourselves know that these hands of mine have provided for both my needs and the needs of those who were with me. ³⁵In every way I have shown you that by so working hard one must help the weak, remembering the words that the Lord Jesus himself said, 'Happiness lies more in giving than in receiving'."

³⁶After this discourse, Paul knelt down with them and prayed. ³⁷Then they all began to weep, and threw their arms around him and kissed him. ³⁸They were deeply distressed because he had said that they would never see him again. And they went with him even to the ship.

On to Jerusalem

21 ¹When we had finally taken leave of them, we put out to sea and sailed straight to Cos, and the next day to Rhodes, and from there to Patara. ²There we found a ship that made for Phoenicia; we went aboard and set sail. ³We caught sight of Cyprus but passed it by on our left as we continued on towards Syria. We landed at Tyre, where the ship had to unload cargo. ⁴There we found the disciples and stayed a week. Warned by the Spirit, they told Paul not to go to Jerusalem.

◆ ⁵But, when it was time, we departed and continued on our journey. All of them, wives and children included, came out of the city with us and, on the beach, we knelt down and prayed. ⁶After that we said goodbye to one another; we boarded the ship and they returned home.

⁷We continued our journey, sailing from Tyre to Ptolemais, where we greeted the brothers and sisters and spent a day with them. ⁸On the following day we left and came to Caesarea. There we entered the house of Philip, the evangelist and we stayed with him. He was one of the Seven, ⁹and had four unmarried daughters who were gifted with prophecy.

¹⁰We were there some days when a prophet named Agabus came down from Judea. Coming to us, he took

31. 2 Tim 4, 2; Gal 4, 17 32. Eph 3, 6; Col 3, 24

– a warning about the self-sacrificing destiny of those who serve Christ.

The text also mentions the "bishops" (that word means inspectors). We do not know if they are the elders themselves, or only some of them, those with greater responsibility.

◆ These countless manifestations of the spirit of prophecy which are found throughout Acts, may surprise us.

Today several Christian groups think that this prophetic current has started again, but there are some who say that, on the contrary, such manifestations are pure illusion or hysteria.

It is true that many visions are no more than hallucinations of men weakened by lack of food and sleep. On the other hand, many people have such a vivid imagination that they believe they are seeing when they are only dreaming.

33. 1 S 12, 3 34. 18, 3 6. 20, 36 10. 11, 28

Besides, when a group meets in an atmosphere of exaltation and excitability, there are many strange manifestations which have nothing to do with the Spirit of Jesus. The doctors who assist the victims of such games know this well.

The strange conditions in which people dance, stamp their feet, speak as if they were unconscious (and sometimes the whole assembly together) can be observed in many primitive non-Christian religions, especially in Africa. Therefore, when this happens in a Christian church, we should ask ourselves if this comes from the good spirit, or the evil or stupid spirit. This has nothing to do with the prophetic spirit.

The Bible warns us about prophets who "prophesy without having been sent," or who have the dreams they wish to have (Jer 29:8). The Gospel offers us a way to distinguish the true prophets from the false ones "by their fruits you

Paul's belt and bound his own feet and hands with it, saying, ¹¹"Thus speaks the Holy Spirit: This is how the Jews in Jerusalem will bind the owner of this belt and hand him over to the foreign power."

¹²When we heard this, we and the brothers of Caesarea begged Paul not to go up to Jerusalem. ¹³Then he answered, "Why are you weeping and breaking my heart? For I am ready not only to be imprisoned but also to die in Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." ¹⁴When he would not be persuaded, we gave up and said, "The Lord's will be done."

¹⁵After this we got ready and went up to Jerusalem. ¹⁶With us were some of the disciples of Caesarea who brought us to the house of a Cypriot where we were to stay. He was called Mnason and was one of the early disciples.

Paul is received by the Church of Jerusalem

+ ¹⁷When we arrived in Jerusalem the brothers welcomed us warmly. ¹⁸The next day Paul went with us to James' house where all the elders had gathered. ¹⁹After greeting them, Paul began telling them in detail everything God had done among the Non-Jews through his ministry.

²⁰After hearing this, they all praised God, but they said, "You see, brother, how many thousands of Jews of Judea have come to believe, and all of them are zealous for the Law." ²¹Yet they have heard that you teach the Jews who live in pagan nations to depart from Moses, telling them not to have their sons circumcised and to renounce Jewish customs. ²²We shall gather the assembly for in any case they will hear that you have arrived. ²³Then do as we tell you.

There are four men among us who have made a vow. ²⁴Take them and purify yourself along with them and pay the sacrifice for them to shave their heads. In that way everyone will know that there is nothing true in what they have been told about you, but that you keep the Law.

²⁵As for the Non-Jews who have become believers, we sent them a letter to tell them that they are only obliged not to eat meat offered to idols, or blood, or flesh of strangled animals; and also to avoid prohibited sexual union."

²⁶So the next day Paul took the men; he purified himself with them

12. Lk 18, 32 13. 20, 24; Lk 21, 12 19. 15, 3 20. 11, 2; Gal 5, 1 21. Rom 2, 15; Gal 3, 22 will know them." See also 1 Cor 12:1-3.

And yet, we must not doubt the activity of the Spirit of prophecy in the Church. It is more active where there is a deep life of faith and when the Church is faced with more difficult circumstances. See commentary on 8:18.

The more spectacular a "spiritual" manifestation is, the more suspicious it is. The Spirit reveals what is most precious interiorly, without words, or visions, in the center of the soul, which only God reaches. The devil, on the contrary, is very clever in suggesting sensational words and spectacular visions.

He who renounces self and surrenders to Christ sees the Spirit increasingly at work in his life. He becomes used to discerning silent inspiration within. Through experience, he verifies that even when reason would suggest a different way of acting, this inner inspiration is the right one. He is used to not trusting his own plans and remains attentive to the promptings of the Spirit. And, above all, he is convinced that the gift of prophecy is nothing compared with the Spirit of love (1 Cor. chapter 13).

The story of the journey enables us to appreciate the mutual affection among Christian people. Welcoming travelers who had come from other communities into one's home was an extremely important obligation that Paul emphasizes in several letters. When apostles or prophets came, the delight was greater, because their passage was always marked by manifestations of the Spirit, with the communal meditation on the Word, and with the news they received from the universal Church.

+ The Christians of Jewish origin praise Paul when he gets to Jerusalem, but at the same time, and entered the Temple to give notice of what day the sacrifice would be offered for each of them to end his time of purification.

Paul is arrested in the Temple

o ²⁷ When the seven days were almost over, some Jews from Asia, who saw Paul in the Temple, began to stir up the whole crowd. They seized him ²⁸ shouting, "Fellow Israelites, help! This is the man who is spreading his teaching everywhere against our people, our law and this Sanctuary. And now he has even brought Non-Jews into the Temple area, defiling this Holy Place." ²⁹ They said this because earlier they had seen Trophimus, an Ephesian, with Paul in the city and they thought that Paul had taken him into the Temple.

³⁰ Then turmoil spread through the whole city. People came running from all sides, they seized Paul and dragged him outside the Temple. At once the gates were shut.

³¹ They would have killed him, had not a report reached the commander of the Roman troops that all of Jerusalem was rioting. ³² At once the commander took some officers and soldiers and rushed down to the crowd.

On seeing him with the soldiers, the crowd stopped beating Paul. ³³ The commander went over to Paul, arrested him and ordered him to be bound with two chains; then he inquired who he was and what he had done. ³⁴ But some in the crowd shouted one thing and others another. As the commander was unable to find out the facts because of the uproar, he ordered Paul to be brought to headquarters. ³⁵ When Paul reached the steps, he actually had to be carried up by the soldiers because of the violence of the mob, ³⁶ for a multitude of people followed shouting, "Kill him!"

³⁷ Just as he was about to be taken inside, Paul said to the commander, "May I say something to you?" He replied, "So you speak Greek! ³⁸ Are you not the Egyptian, then, who caused a riot some time ago and let a band of four thousand terrorists out into the desert?" Paul answered, ³⁹ "I am a Jew, a citizen of Tarsus, a well-known city in Cilicia. I beg you, let me address these people."

they humiliate him. There is a rumor among them that Paul, besides not imposing the Judaic Law on the Christian converts from paganism, also suggests that the Jews abandon the Law. To prove these accusations false, they advise him to become involved in a typically Jewish and very costly ceremony.

Those who insist are the elders working with James "the brother of the Lord": all are Jews from Palestine who, in spite of their faith, are still attached to the customs of the Old Testament.

They point out the importance of the Jerusalem community: thousands of Jews in order to make their demands respected. They may still have been more numerous than the Christians from the pagan world: this was the burden of the past. Paul accepts for the sake of peace, but that will be his downfall.

o There are several similarities between Paul's arrest and Stephen's a few years before (see 6:9). The Jews from Asia draw up several accusations: the most serious one being that Paul brought an "uncircumcised" man into the Temple; this profanation was punishable by death. This man preaches against our people, against our law, and our sanctuary. There were similar accusations against Christ and Stephen.

This is a false accusation. Nevertheless, the Jews are not totally wrong: through his teachings, Paul forms Christians who replace the Temple worship by faith in Christ; they replace the Law by a life of obedience to the Spirit and Jewish nationalism by universal Christian brotherhood. The Jews' indignation resembles that of some Christian groups who fear that the Church's renewal may engender contempt for their devotions and their churches, and may harm the political solidarity of Catholics.

The Roman troops occupying Jerusalem and keeping order, were stationed in a fortress adjacent to the Temple and overlooking it. Thanks to this the soldiers were able to intervene before Paul met the same fate as met Stephen.

The commander agreed. ⁴⁰ So Paul standing on the steps, motioned to the people with his hand and, when they were silent, he began to speak to them in Hebrew.

Paul addresses the Jews

22 ¹ "Brothers and fathers, listen to what I have to say to you in my defense." ² When they heard him speaking to them in Hebrew, they became even more quiet. So he went on.

+ ³ "I am a Jew, born in Tarsus in Cilicia, but brought up here in this city where I was educated in the school of Gamaliel, according to the strict observance of our Law. And I was dedicated to God's service as are all of you today. ⁴ As for this way, I persecuted it to the point of death and arrested its followers, both men and women, throwing them into prison.

⁵ The High Priest and the whole Council of elders can bear witness to this: for they gave me letters for the Jewish brothers in Damascus and I set out to arrest the Christians I would find there and bring them back to Jerusalem for punishment. ⁶ But, as I was travelling along, nearing Damascus, at about noon a great light from the sky suddenly flashed about me. ⁷ I fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to me: 'Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me?' ⁸ I answered: 'Who are you, Lord?' And he said to me: 'I am Jesus the Nazarean whom you are persecuting.' ⁹ The men who were with me saw the light and were afraid, but they did not hear the voice of the one who was speaking to me. ¹⁰ I asked: 'What shall I do, Lord?' And the Lord replied: 'Get up and go to Damascus; there you will be told all that you are destined to do.' ¹¹ Yet the brightness of that light had blinded me and I was led by the hand into Damascus by my companions.

¹² There a certain Ananias came to me. He was a devout observer of the Law and well spoken of by all the Jews who were living there. ¹³ As he stood by me, he said: 'Brother Saul, recover your sight.' At that moment I could see and I looked at him. ¹⁴ He then said, 'The God of our fathers has chosen you to know his will, to see the Just One and to hear the sound of his voice. ¹⁵ From now on you shall be his witness before all the pagan peoples and tell them all that you have seen and heard. ¹⁶ And now, why delay? Get up and be baptized and have your sins washed away by calling upon his Name.'

¹⁷ On my return to Jerusalem I was praying in the Temple, when I fell into a trance ¹⁸ and saw him. He spoke to me: 'Get ready to leave Jerusalem

+ To understand the chapters dealing with Paul's trial, we have to remember that justice in the Roman empire was very well organized. The supreme tribunal was in Rome: this was the Tribunal of Caesar, and Roman citizens fearing a mistrial in their province, can appeal to the Tribunal of Caesar. There were governors (or procurators) who administered justice in each province. In the Jewish territory, the Romans who occupied the country kept the important cases for themselves, but they left the rest to the Jewish tribunals, especially religious affairs. Paul was to go through various tribunals, beginning with the Sanhedrin, or religious court of the Jews and all the way to the tribunal of Caesar.

Thus, through Paul, the words of Jesus entrusting to his apostles the mission of proclaiming him before Jewish and pagan authorities, will be fulfilled.

Paul tries to make the resurrection of Christ the theme of his declaration. There was a trial to condemn Jesus. Now, Paul tries to have the governors pay attention to the cause of the risen Jesus, and he succeeds.

In every age, such will be the zeal of the witnesses of Christ when they are accused: to demonstrate that they are not acting out of interest, nor for any human motive, but because they are the servants of Christ.

without delay, because they will not accept your testimony about me.' ¹⁹ I answered: 'Lord, they know well that I imprisoned those who believed in you and had them beaten in every synagogue, ²⁰ and while the blood of your witness Stephen was being poured out, I stood by and approved it and even guarded the cloaks of his murderers.' ²¹ At that point he said to me: 'Go, for I am sending you far away to the pagan nations.'

²²Up to this point the crowd listened to Paul, but on hearing the last words, they began to shout, "Kill him! He does not deserve to live!" ²³They were screaming and waving their cloaks and throwing dust up into the air. ²⁴So the commander ordered Paul to be brought inside the headquarters and questioned after flogging, to find out why they made such an outcry against him.

²⁵ But when the soldiers had strapped him down, Paul said to the officer standing there, "Is it legal to flog a Roman citizen without a trial?"

²⁶On hearing this the officer went to the commander and said, "What are you doing? That man is a Roman citizen." ²⁷So the commander came and asked him, "Tell me, are you a Roman citizen?" "Yes," answered Paul. ²⁸The commander then said, "It cost me a large sum of money to become a Roman citizen." Paul answered, "I am one by birth."

²⁹Then those who were about to question him backed away and the commander himself was alarmed when he realized that he had put a Roman citizen in chains.

Paul appears before the Sanhedrin

³⁰The next day the commander wanted to know for certain the charges the Jews were making against Paul. So he released him from prison and called together the High Priest and the whole Council; and they brought Paul down and made him stand before them.

23 ¹Paul looked directly at the Council and said, "Brothers, to this day I have lived my life with a clear conscience before God." ²At that the High Priest Ananias ordered his attendants to strike him on the mouth. ³Then Paul said, "God is about to strike you, you whitewashed wall! You sit there to judge me according to the Law, and you break the Law by ordering me to be struck!" ⁴At this the attendants protested, "How dare you insult God's High Priest?" ⁵Paul answered, "Brothers, I did not know that he was the High Priest. For the Scripture says: You shall not curse the ruler of your people."

⁶ Paul knew that part of the Council were Sadducees and others Pharisees, so he spoke out in the Council. "Brothers, I am a Pharisee, son of a Pharisee. It is for the hope in the resurrection of the dead that I am on trial here."

⁷ At these words, an argument broke out between the Pharisees and the Sadducees and the whole assembly was divided. ⁸ For the Sadducees claim that there is neither resurrection, nor angels nor spirits, while the Pharisees acknowledge all these things.

Then the shouting grew louder, and some teachers of the Law of the Pharisee party protested, "We do not find evil in this man. Maybe a spirit or an angel has spoken to him?"

¹⁰With this the argument became so violent that the commander feared that Paul would be torn to pieces by them. He therefore ordered the soldiers to go down and rescue him from their midst and take him back to headquarters.

¹¹ That night the Lord stood by Paul and said, "Courage! as you have borne witness to me here in Jerusalem, so must you do in Rome."

The plot to kill Paul

¹³ There were more than forty of them who joined in this conspiracy.

¹⁴ They went to the high priests and the elders and said, "We have bound ourselves by oath not to taste food until we have killed Paul." ¹⁵ Now then, it is up to you and the Council together to convince the Roman commander to bring him down to you on the pretext that you want to investigate his case more thoroughly. We for our part, are prepared to kill him before he gets there."

¹⁶ But Paul's nephew heard about the planned ambush, so he went to the headquarters and informed Paul.

¹⁷ Paul sent for one of the officers and said, "Take this young man to the commander for he has something to report to him." ¹⁸ So the officer took him and brought him to the commander, saying, "The prisoner Paul called me and asked me to bring this boy to you because he has something to tell you."

¹⁹ The commander took him by the hand and drawing him aside asked him privately, "What is it that you have to report to me?" ²⁰ The boy replied, "The Jews have agreed among themselves to ask you tomorrow to have Paul brought down to the Council as if to inquire more thoroughly about him." ²¹ But do not be persuaded by them, for there are more than forty of them ready to ambush him, having bound themselves by an oath not to eat or drink until they have killed him. They are prepared, and are awaiting your decision." ²² The commander let the boy go with the advice, "Do not tell anyone that you gave me this information."

Paul transferred to Caesarea

²³ Then the commander summoned two of his officers and said to them, "Get ready to leave for Caesarea by nine o'clock tonight, with two hundred infantrymen, seventy horsemen and two hundred spearmen." ²⁴ Provide horses also for Paul to ride, so that he may be brought safely to Felix the governor."

²⁵ He then wrote the governor a letter to this effect.

²⁶ "Claudius Lysias greets the Most Excellent Governor Felix and communicates to him the following: ²⁷ The Jews had arrested this man and were about to kill him when I intervened with my troops and took him out of their hands, since I knew he was a Roman citizen. ²⁸ As I wanted to know what charge they had against him, I presented him before the Sanhedrin and ²⁹ I discovered that the accusation related to matters of their Law, but there was nothing which deserved death or imprisonment. ³⁰ When I was informed that the Jews had prepared a plot against this man, I decided to send him to you and told his accusers to present their complaints before you. Farewell."

³¹ The soldiers acted in accordance with these instructions. They took Paul and brought him to Antipatris by night. ³² On the following day, they returned to the fortress but the horsemen continued journeying with him. ³³Upon entering Caesarea they handed the letter to the governor and presented Paul to him. ³⁴When Felix had read the letter, he asked Paul from where he was, and when he knew that Paul was from Cilicia, ³⁵he said to him: "I shall hear your accusers when they come." And he ordered that he be kept in custody in the palace of Herod.

The case before Felix

24 ¹After five days Ananias the High Priest came down to Caesarea with some of the elders and a lawyer named Tertullus. And they presented their case against Paul before the governor. ²Paul was called in and Tertullus accused him in this way:

³"Most Excellent Felix, thanks to you – your labours and your wise reforms – our people now enjoy great peace. We accept all this in every way and in every place, and we are totally grateful to you. ⁴So as not to take more of your time, I beg you to listen briefly to us with your usual kindness. ⁵We have found that this man is a pest, he creates division among the Jews throughout the world and is a leader of the Nazarene sect. ⁶He even tried to profane the Temple, so we arrested him. We would have judged him according to our Law, ⁷but Lysias the commandant intervened in a very violent way and took him from us. ⁸Then he declared that his accusers must present themselves before you. By examining him yourself, you will learn from him about all that we accuse him of."

⁹The Jews confirmed this, firmly maintaining that all this was so.

¹⁰Then the governor motioned to Paul who said:

"As I know that you have administered this nation for many years, make my defense with much confidence. ¹¹You yourself can ascertain that not more than twelve days ago I went up to Jerusalem to worship ¹²and that they did not find me disputing with anyone or inciting the people, either in the Temple or in the synagogues or in the city. ¹³So they cannot prove the things of which they now accuse me.

¹⁴But, this I admit before you, that I serve the God of our fathers according to the Way which they call a sect. I believe everything written in the Law and in the Prophets, ¹⁵and I have the same hope in God that they have that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both the good and the sinners. ¹⁶So I strive always to have a clear conscience before God and before men.

¹⁷After many years, I came to bring help to those of my nation and to offer sacrifices. ¹⁸On that occasion they found me in the Temple; I had been purified according to the Law and there was no crowd or commotion. Yet all began with some Jews from Asia ¹⁹who ought to be here before you to accuse me, if they have anything against me. ²⁰Let these men say what crime they found in me when I stood before the Sanhedrin ²¹unless it was for having declared in a loud voice when I was before them "Today I am being judged on account of the resurrection of the dead."

²²Felix who was well-informed about the Way, postponed the case and said to them. "When the commandant, Lysias, comes down, I will examine the case thoroughly." ²³So he ordered the captain to keep Paul under guard, giving him certain liberty and without preventing his friends from attending to him.

²⁴After some days, Felix came with his wife Drusilla who was a Jew. He sent for Paul and let him speak about faith in Christ. ²⁵But when Paul spoke about justice, self control and the future judgment, Felix was frightened and he said to him: "You may leave now; I shall send for you some other time." ²⁶Felix was hoping that Paul would give him money, so he sent for him often and conversed with him.

²⁷Two years passed, and Felix was succeeded by Porcius Festus; and as Felix wanted to remain on good terms with the Jews, he left Paul in prison.

The trial before Festus

25 ¹Three days after Festus arrived in the province, he went up from Caesarea to Jerusalem. ²There the chief priests and the elders accused Paul again. ³In a very hypocritical way, they asked as a favour from Festus that Paul be brought to Jerusalem; but they were planning to kill him on the way. ⁴Festus answered that Paul was under custody in Caesarea and, as he himself had to go there shortly, he added, ⁵"Let those men of higher authority among you go down with me to Caesarea, and if this man has done anything wrong, let them accuse him."

⁶Festus did not stay in Jerusalem for more than eight or ten days, and then he went to Caesarea. The next day, he took his seat on the tribunal and sent for Paul. ⁷When Paul arrived, the Jews who came from Jerusalem stood around him and presented many serious charges which they could not prove. ⁸Paul defended himself from all these saying, "I have not committed any offense against the Law of the Jews, or against the Temple or against Caesar."

⁹Then Festus who wanted to please the Jews asked Paul: "Do you wish to go up to Jerusalem, that you may be tried before me?" ¹⁰Paul answered, "I am on trial before Caesar's tribunal; here I have to be tried. I have done no wrong to the Jews; you yourself know this very well. ¹¹If I have committed any crime which deserves death, I accept death. But if I have not done anything of which they accuse me, no one can give me up to them. I appeal to Caesar."

¹²So Festus, after conferring with his council, answered, "You appeal to Caesar. To Caesar you shall go."

¹³Some days later King Agrippa and his sister Bernice arrived in Caesarea to greet Festus. As they were to stay there several days, Festus told the king about Paul's case and said to him,

¹⁸When the accusers had the floor, they did not accuse him of any of the crimes that I was led to think he had committed; ¹⁹instead they quarrelled with him about religion and about a certain Jesus who has died but whom Paul asserts to be alive. ²⁰I did not know what to do about this case, so I asked Paul if he wanted to go to Jerusalem to be tried there. ²¹But Paul appealed to be judged by the emperor.

So I ordered that he be kept in custody until I send him to Caesar."²² Agrippa said to Festus: "I would like to hear that man." Festus answered him: "Tomorrow you shall."

²³On the following day, Agrippa and Bernice arrived with great ceremony and entered the audience hall with the commanders and the elders of the city. Festus ordered that Paul be brought in and said:

²⁴"King Agrippa and all here present, here you see this man about whom the whole community of the Jews came to see me, in Jerusalem as well as here, protesting loudly that he must not live. ²⁵I, for my part, am convinced that he has not done anything that deserves death. But after he appealed to be judged by the emperor, I decided to send him on. ²⁶Well, if I have no definite information, what can I write to Caesar about him? Therefore I present him before all of you, and especially before you, King Agrippa, that you may examine him and that I may know what to write. ²⁷For it seems absurd to me to send a prisoner without indicating the charges against him."

Paul's speech before King Agrippa

■ 26 ¹Agrippa said to Paul: "You may speak in your own defence." So Paul stretched out his hand and began in this way:

²"King Agrippa, you have just referred to the accusations of the Jews. I consider myself fortunate in being able to defend myself against all this before you today, ³for you are an expert in the customs of the Jews and their disputes. Therefore I beg you to listen to me patiently.

⁴All the Jews know how I have lived from my youth, how I have lived among my own people and in Jerusalem. ⁵They have always known me and they can tell you, if they wish, that I have lived as a Pharisee in the most rigorous sect of our religion. ⁶If I am now tried here, it is because of the hope I have in the promise made by God to our fathers, ⁷the promise to which our twelve tribes hope to attain with the fervent worship they render to God night and day. For this hope, C king, the Jews accuse me! ⁸But why refuse to believe that God raises the dead?

⁹I myself in the beginning thought that I had to use all possible means to counteract the Name of Jesus of Nazareth. ¹⁰This I did in Jerusalem and with the authorization of the chief priests; I put in prison many who believed; and I cast my vote when they were condemned to death.

¹¹I went round the synagogues and multiplied punishments against them to force them to renounce their faith; such was my rage against them, that I pursued them even to foreign cities.

¹²With this purpose in mind, I went to Damascus with full authority, and commissioned by the chief priests:

■ Paul presents an historical event: the Jewish people have been hoping and are still hoping for salvation. The divisions and corruption of their leaders do not prevent the people from serving God nor from longing for his intervention.

Then comes the story of his conversion in which Paul develops his dialogue with Christ more than in chapters 9 and 22.

I taught them that they should repent: such was the teaching of the prophets. That the Messiah had to be raised: this was the very core of Christian faith. Felix, the governor, totally ignorant of religious questions, was already saying it in 25:19, after hearing Paul.

Paul is not so preoccupied about defending himself as he is about convincing others: for him Agrippa and Festus are people like everyone else and they need Christ. Festus is amazed by Paul's biblical background and his enthusiasm. Agrippa, moved, says nothing. However, they do not understand nor do they respond to the call; after the diversion, they are again caught up in this world, the life and pleasures of the great

On the way, ¹³O King, at midday, I saw a light from heaven, more brilliant than the sun, that dazzled me and those who accompanied me. ¹⁴We all fell to the ground and I heard a voice saying to me in Hebrew: 'Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me? In vain do you kick against the goad.'

¹⁵I answered: 'Who are you, Lord?' And the Lord said: 'I am Jesus whom you persecute. ¹⁶Now rise up and stand. I have revealed myself to you to make you servant and witness to what I have just shown you and to what I will show you later on. ¹⁷I will free you from all evil that may come from your own people or from the pagans to whom I am sending you. ¹⁸For you shall open their eyes that they may turn from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God; and through faith in me, may obtain forgiveness of their sins and the inheritance of holy people.'

¹⁹Since that time, King Agrippa, I did not stray from this heavenly vision: on the contrary, ²⁰I began preaching first to those in Damascus, then to those in Jerusalem and throughout Judea, and then to the pagan nations that they should repent and turn to God, showing the fruits of true conversion. ²¹I was carrying out this mission when the Jews arrested me in the Temple and tried to kill me. But with the help of God, I still stand here today to give my testimony both to the great and the small.

²²I do not teach anything other than what Moses and the Prophets announced beforehand: ²³the Messiah had to die, and after being the first to be raised from the dead, he will proclaim the light to his people as well as to all nations."

²⁴As Paul came to this point of his defense, Festus said in a loud voice: "Paul, you are mad; your great learning has deranged your mind!" ²⁵But Paul answered: "I am not mad, Most Excellent Festus, but everything I have said is reliable and true. ²⁶The king is acquainted with all these things, so to him I speak with such confidence. I am convinced that he knows everything about this case, for these things did not happen in a dark corner. ²⁷King Agrippa, do you believe the Prophets? I know that you do."

²⁸Agrippa said to him: "A little more and you would believe that you have already made me a Christian!"

²⁹Paul answered him: "Whether little or more, I would that not only you but all who hear me this day may come to be as I am – except for these chains.

³⁰At that moment, the king rose and, with him, the governor, Bernice and all the attendants. ³¹When they went out they talked among themselves and said: "This man has done nothing to deserve death or imprisonment." ³²And Agrippa said to Festus: "Had he not appealed to Caesar, he could have been set free."

Departure for Rome

27 ¹When it was decided that we should sail for Italy, they handed over Paul and the other prisoners into the care of an officer of the Augustan battalion, named Julius.

◆ They take Paul to Rome with a group of people who have been accused and condemned. With the captain of the boat, there is the authority of the centurion, a Roman official and his soldiers: they know that if a prisoner escapes, his guardian will be executed (see 12:19 and 27:42). The story shows that Paul is quite an expert in these journeys. In 2 Cor 11:25 he says he was shipwrecked three times.

Above all, Paul has Christ's strength: when the storm strikes, the apostle remains strong.

⁷ We sailed slowly for several days, and arrived with great difficulty at Cnidus. As the wind did not allow us to enter that port, we sailed for the shelter of Crete with the Cape of Salmone within sight. ⁸ We turned with difficulty and arrived at a place called Good Ports, near the city of Lasea.

⁹ Time passed and we had celebrated the feast of the Fast, when the crossing began to be dangerous. ¹⁰ Then Paul said to them: "Friends, I believe that it would not be very wise to proceed with our crossing for we could lose not only the cargo and the ship but also our lives." ¹¹ But the Roman officer relied more on the ship's captain and the owner of the ship than on the words of Paul. ¹² And as the port was not suitable for wintering, the majority agreed to set out from there in the hope of reaching the harbour of Crete called Phoenix, overlooking Africa and Choros, where they could spend the winter.

Storm and shipwreck

¹³ Then the south wind began to blow and they thought that they had gained their purpose; they weighed anchor and sailed along the island of Crete. ¹⁴ But a little later, a strong wind called "the northeaster" swept down on them, from across the island. ¹⁵ The ship was dragged along and could not face the wind, so that we remained adrift.

¹⁶ As we were crossing under the lee of the small island of Cauda, we managed – but with effort – to secure the lifeboat. ¹⁷ After lifting it aboard, they used cables to undergird the hull, and since we feared running aground on the sands of Syrtis, they lowered the sea anchor. So we continued to be dragged along.

²¹ As we had not eaten for days, Paul stood up among them and said: "Friends, if you had followed my advice when I told you not to set sail from Crete, we would not be in such a danger now, and we could have avoided this loss. ²² But now I invite you to regain courage for no one among you shall die; only the ship shall be destroyed. ²³ Last night there appeared to me an angel of God to whom I belong and whom I serve: ²⁴ and he said to me: 'Paul, do not be afraid, you must present yourself before Caesar's tribunal, and God has guaranteed you the life of all those who sail with you.'

²⁵ Have courage, therefore, my friends, for I trust in God that it will be just as he told me. ²⁶ But we have to run aground on some island."

²⁷ Near midnight on the fourteenth night, as we were drifting in the Adriatic Sea, the sailors suspected that land was near. ²⁸They measured the depth of the water and it was thirty-seven metres. After a while, they measured it again and it was twenty-seven metres. ²⁹They feared that we might hit some rocks, so they cast out four anchors from the stern and waited anxiously for morning. ³⁰Then the sailors tried to escape from the ship under the pretext of extending the cables of the anchors from the bow, so they lowered the lifeboat into the sea. ³¹But Paul said to the captain and to the soldiers: "If they leave the ship, you cannot be saved. ³²So the soldiers cut the mooring cables of the boat and let it fall.

³³As they waited for dawn, Paul urged everyone: "For fourteen days we have not eaten anything because of anxious waiting. ³⁴I ask you to eat now if you want to live, for no one will be lost – not even a hair of your heads." ³⁵Having said this, he took bread, gave thanks to God in everybody's presence, broke it and began to eat. ³⁶All were encouraged and they too ate. ³⁷They were two hundred and seventy-six persons in all. ³⁸When they had eaten enough, they threw the wheat into the sea to lighten the boat.

³⁹When morning came, they did not recognize the land but noticed a bay with a beach, so they decided to run the ship aground if possible. ⁴⁰They cast off the anchors and left them in the sea; at the same time, they loosened the ropes of the rudders, hoisted the foresail to the wind and, headed for the beach. ⁴¹But they struck a sandbank and the ship ran aground. The bow stuck and was immovable, while the stern was broken up by the violent waves.

⁴²The soldiers then planned to kill the prisoners for fear that some of them might escape by swimming.

⁴³But the captain, who wished to save Paul, did not allow them to do this. He ordered those who knew how to swim, to be the first to jump into the water and head for the shore, ⁴⁴and the rest to hold on to planks or pieces of the ship. So all of us reached land safe and sound.

On Malta

+ 28 ¹After being saved, we learned that the island was called Malta. ²The natives were very cordial. They lit a big bonfire and took good care of us all, since it was raining and cold.

³Paul gathered a bundle of dried twigs and as he threw them into the fire, a viper suddenly came out because of the heat and entwined itself around his hand. ⁴When the natives saw the viper hanging from his hand, they said to one another: "Surely this man is a murderer: he has barely escaped from the raging sea, yet divine justice will not allow him to live."

⁵But Paul shook off the viper into the fire and did not suffer any harm. They waited to see him swell and die; ⁶but after observing him for a while they saw that nothing happened to him, so they changed their minds and began to say that he was a god.

⁷Near this place was an estate owned by the head of the island named Publius. For three days this man welcomed us hospitably. ⁸It so happened that his father was in bed with fever and dysentery. Paul went to see him; he prayed and laid his hands on him and healed him. ⁹ Because of this, the rest of the sick people on the island went to see him and were cured. ¹⁰ So they showered us with kindness, and on our departure they provided us with everything we needed.

From Malta to Rome

■ ¹¹ After three months, we boarded a ship which had spent the winter at the island. It belonged to an Alexandrian company and carried the figure-head of Castor and Pollux as insignia. ¹² We sailed for Syracuse, staying there for three days, ¹³ and after circling the coast, we arrived at Rhegium. On the following day, a south wind began to blow, and at the end of two days, we arrived at Puteoli ¹⁴ where we found some brothers who invited us to stay with them for a week. And that was how we came to Rome.

¹⁵ There the brothers and sisters had been informed of our arrival and came out to meet us as far as the Appian Forum and the Three Taverns. When Paul saw them, he gave thanks to God and took courage. ¹⁶ Upon our arrival in Rome, the captain turned the prisoners over to the military governor but permitted Paul to lodge in a private house with the soldier who guarded him.

Paul meets the Jews in Rome

◆ ¹⁷ After three days, Paul called together the leaders of the Jews. When they had gathered, he said to them: "Brothers, though I have not done anything against our people or against the traditions of our fathers, I was arrested in Jerusalem and handed over to the Romans. ¹⁸ They examined me and wanted to set me free for they saw nothing in my case that deserved death. ¹⁹ But the Jews objected, so I was forced to appeal to Caesar without the least intention of bringing any case against my own people. ²⁰ Therefore, I have asked to see you and speak with you, since it is because of the hope of Israel that I bear these chains."

²¹ They answered: "We have not received any letter about you from Judea, and none of the brothers who have come from there have brought any message or said anything against you. ²² But we wish to hear from you what you think, although we know already that this sect meets with opposition everywhere."

²³ They set a day for him and came in great numbers to his lodging. So Paul explained everything he wanted to tell them regarding the Kingdom of God, and tried to convince them concerning Jesus, taking the Law of Moses and the Prophets as his starting point. This continued from morning till night. ²⁴ Some were convinced by

■ When they get to Rome, Paul is treated fairly well. Instead of being put in jail, he is allowed to stay in the city, handcuffed (with his right arm tied to the left arm of the guard).

◆ In Rome, Paul is especially concerned about settling his situation with regard to the Jews; he does not want the accusations brought against him and the following trial to make him seem like a traitor to his nation.

The meeting with the Jews in Rome repeats what we read concerning the first preaching of Paul (see 13:46-47). It serves as a summary of the book: the Gospel must first be proclaimed to the Jews, but if they reject it, that will not prevent God's word from being proclaimed to other people. Paul stayed in this semi-captivity for two years. Such was the time fixed by the law for preventive detentions.

What happened after that? Luke does not say, and he leaves us with a vision of a Gospel that is triumphant in spite of all the obstacles.

his words, others were not.²⁵ Finally the Jews left, still arguing strongly among themselves; and Paul sent them away with this statement: "What the Holy Spirit said has come true, when he spoke to your fathers through the Prophet Isaiah:

²⁶Go to this people and say to them: However much you hear, you will not understand; you will see and see again but not perceive.

²⁷The heart of this people has grown hard; they have covered their ears and closed their eyes, lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, lest their spirit understand, and I should heal them.

²⁸Know that God's salvation is going to be proclaimed to the pagans: they will listen."

³⁰Paul stayed for two whole years in a house he himself rented, where he received without restraint all those who came to see him. ³¹He proclaimed the Kingdom of God with full certainty and taught the truth about Jesus.

INTRODUCTION TO ROMANS

Jesus announced the Gospel to the Jewish nation in answer to their deepest concerns. The preaching of the kingdom of God was not limited to "the salvation of individual souls". Jesus was coming as the Saviour of the Jewish people. He did not ignore their collective aspirations but directed them rather towards a more universal mission.

Now, it was necessary that the Gospel should be "good news" also for the Greeks of the Roman empire who heard the preaching of the apostles. But they lived within strong social structures that no one was serious about changing and they remained, therefore, alien to Jewish aspirations for liberation. They longed, however, for some transformation and renewal of the human person. For until then they lived in a world fully convinced that man cannot escape from his blind destiny. They thought it is impossible to overcome universal corruption and death, and no one had explained to them the reason for the conflicts we carry within us. Because of this the believers needed to understand that Christ brought them life.

In this letter to the community in Rome, capital of the Empire, Paul presents the complete plan of salvation as an answer to the concerns of the Greeks, while not forgetting those of the Jews, many of whom were in the community.

Paul says that the salvation is a liberation of the human person and that we are saved when we discover the love of God through the death and Resurrection of Jesus.

The internal struggle of men and the divisions among them are only manifestations of that deep and universal evil that Paul calls "Sin". Man would like to be free from his sickness, but lacks the key to the understanding of himself – that he is made to share the life of God and until he attains it, he will continue to suffer the effects of an unconscious or even conscious rebellion against God.

Indeed in every nation many people strive to live upright lives. Besides, among the Jews many followed a path of justice traced out for them by the Bible. But, as Paul says, while man tries to become "holy" by his own deeds and practices and believes in his own merits, he closes the door to the only power that can make him free, which is the merciful love of God.

How can we enter this world of God's love? God offers his hand and teaches us to love. Jesus comes to save us and we crucify him, and it is then that God knows his ineffable love and forgiveness.

LETTER TO THE

ROMANS

1 ¹ From Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ called to be an apostle and set apart on behalf of the Good News.

² This Good News, promised beforehand through his prophets in the Holy Scriptures, ³ is about his Son, born in the flesh a descendant of David,

⁴ and recognized as the Son of God through the working of his Power in the Holy Spirit upon rising from the dead.

⁵ Through him, Jesus Christ, our Lord, I was chosen

⁶ and sent to all the pagan nations to lead them into the obedience of faith for the sake of his Name.

⁷ All of you, God's loved ones in Rome, are also among these elected of Christ, called to be holy.

May God, our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, give you grace and peace.

He who looks at Christ and believes in this sign of divine love attains to true freedom, and Paul stresses the unexpected consequence of this faith: God makes us his sons by pouring his Spirit into us. The believer becomes free of his chains and his weaknesses because he has learned how to love.

Paul does not present any program of social renovation but, in the last pages of the letter, he shows how a community obtains union and brotherhood through mutual understanding, each one trying to take the first step.

Paul longs to visit them

⁸First of all, I give thanks to my God, through Jesus Christ, for all of you, because your faith is spoken of all over the world. ⁹And God, whom I serve by announcing the Good News of his Son, is my witness that I remember you in my prayers at all times. ¹⁰I pray constantly that, if it is his will, he make it possible for me to visit you. ¹¹I long to see you and share some spiritual blessings with you to strengthen you. ¹²In that way, we will encourage each other by sharing our common faith.

¹³You must know, brothers, that many times I have made plans to go to you, but till now I have been prevented. ¹⁴My purpose is to harvest some fruits among you, as I have done among the other nations. Whether Greeks or foreigners, cultured or ignorant, I feel under obligation to all. ¹⁵Hence my eagerness to make the Gospel progress also among you Romans.

+ ¹⁶For I am not ashamed at all of this Good News; it is God's power saving those who believe, first the Jews, and then the Greeks. ¹⁷This Good News shows us how God makes people upright through faith for the life of faith, as the Scripture says: The upright one by faith shall live.

God's "wrath" against humankind

■ ¹⁸It is easy to recognize that God is ready to condemn the wickedness and any kind of injustice of those who

• Paul, chosen to proclaim the Good News. Paul speaks of the Gospel three times in this paragraph. At that time the word Gospel, which signifies Good News, conveyed the meaning of victory. Paul presents himself as the public announcer of the liberating message given to all humankind.

What is Paul's Gospel? He develops it briefly in the following lines. The Son of God has come down to earth and after sharing the common condition of brotherhood, he has through his Resurrection, taken possession of the Glory due to him.

Recognized as the Son of God (4). The words of Paul can also be translated with constituted or acknowledged as the son of God. This does not mean that Jesus was not the Son of God before his resurrection, but that he was then Son of God in a humble and mortal condition. In his Resurrection, the Spirit of God which is the sharing of his Power has permeated his human nature so that everyone now may recognize who he really is: the Son of God.

Paul usually reserves the term "God" to mean God the Father, fountain of the divine being, from whom all divine initiatives originate. The Father communicates his life to the Son. The Son, for his part, reflects this life back to the Father in such a way that they mutually generate the Holy Spirit. The whole vocation of a Christian is rooted in this life of God, and that is why Paul constantly mentions the names of the three divine Persons.

Through him I was chosen by grace as an apostle. The twelve apostles were selected by Jesus and confirmed in their mission by the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. Here Paul reminds us that he himself was made an apostle by Jesus who met him on the road to Damascus.

We will encourage each other by sharing our common faith. The apostle, as well as the believer, needs to share anxieties, hopes and a common faith. The Church is a fellowship and in order to develop our Christian life, we must multiply meetings in which we can be in fellowship with one another.

+ I am not ashamed... (16). He who is proclaimed Saviour by Paul is a crucified Jew, an unknown carpenter. How often they laughed at Paul when he spoke about this dead man who had risen from the tomb to be the Judge of humankind!

It is the power of God... (16). The miracles which accompany the preaching of the Gospel are only signs of God's powerful action in transforming men and history in every place where the Gospel is preached and inspires those who hear it.

Upright... righteous... righteousness (17). A single word in the Bible means both justice and righteousness. God is just and God's justice is his intervention to destroy what is evil and to save the faithful. But Paul points out especially the internal effects of the divine action. God transforms man making him like himself. So it is better for us to speak of righteousness or even of holiness. That is why in this letter we some-have silenced the truth by their ways. ¹⁹For everything that could have been known about God was clear to them: God himself made it plain. ²⁰For, though we cannot see him, we can at least discover him through his works; for he created the world and through his works we understand him to be eternal and all powerful, and to be God.

²¹So they have no excuse for they knew God and did not glorify him as befits him, nor did they give thanks to him. On the contrary, they lost themselves in their reasonings and darkness filled their minds.

²²Believing themselves wise, they turned foolish: ²³they exchanged the Glory of the immortal God for the likes of mortal men, birds, animals and reptiles. ²⁴Because of this God gave them up to their inner cravings; they did shameful things and dishonoured their bodies.

²⁵They exchanged God's truth for a lie; they honoured and worshipped created things instead of the Creator, to whom be praise for ever, Amen! ²⁶Because of that, God gave them up to shameful passions: their women exchanged natural sexual relations for unnatural ones. ²⁷Similarly, the men, giving up the natural sexual relations with women, were lustful of each other, men with men, bringing upon themselves the punishment they deserve for their wickedness. ²⁸And since they did not think that God was times have holiness, or righteousness and holiness (or holy and upright) instead of only righteousness, or justice.

Many among the Jews thought that people become righteous by their own efforts. Paul retorts that the righteousness God wants is something much greater and beyond what human efforts can achieve. We are upright and friends of God when he allows us to approach him after making us holy by his grace.

The apostles preached the Gospel to two classes of persons:

- the Jews, prepared by God to receive the Saviour.
- the Greeks (or people who spoke the Greek language). In fact the Jews considered Greek all those who were subjects of the Roman Empire. These people did not know the Word of God, nor did they have any hope in him.

Paul shows that all people need the Gospel. Because the world lives in sin, and all of us, in a greater or lesser degree, are responsible for existing evil, we must believe in the Gospel if we want to be saved.

■ In these paragraphs Paul speaks of the pagan world of the Greeks. It represents the great majority of humankind that has not received the word of God. In reality, God has not been absent from their conscience, and through centuries of civilization and religious research, they have tried to know God and the truth. But Paul shows the failure of such human endeavour; ignorance and immorality are much more prevalent in the countries where God has not spoken as he did for the Jews.

They knew God and did not glorify him as they should... We have to compare this text with another famous one, found in chapter 13 of Wisdom, and with the speech of Paul in Acts 17: 27-29. In these verses the Bible shows clearly that it is possible for everyone to know God. Anyone who looks at the world and reflects on life, easily finds signs of the presence of God. But when one lives in sin, truth is silenced.

People have always worshipped a God, but they have never known him truly and without error, and their errors in regard to God cause their errors regarding the human person and civilization. This is why, in announcing the Gospel, we free people, who are truly in need of the Gospel even though they may feel satisfied with themselves.

God gave them to shameful passions. Here Paul stresses the vice of homosexuality. In the Greek world homosexuality was accepted and even praised by the greatest philosophers. Paul says: this acceptance is not the sign of a more open and free spirit, but rather of an ignorance of God.

Likewise at the present time we should not be surprised that in affluent countries homosexuality is accepted by some "Christians." This is the result of the idolatry proper to the consumer society. There it is openly considered as an ideal that those with money and health should be able to satisfy their every desire and live life to the full. These people eventually put creatures in place of God. Though they speak of God, they ignore his Glory and darkness fills their minds. They frolic and claim to be happy, but their appearance is that of carnal people, heading to death.

There are close though hidden links between worth knowing, he gave them up to their senseless minds so that they committed all kinds of obscenities.

²⁹ And so they are full of injustices, perversity, greed, evil; they are full of jealousy, murder, strife, deceit, bad will and gossip. ³⁰ They commit calumny, offend God, are haughty; they are proud, liars, skillful in doing evil. They are rebellious towards their parents, ³¹ are senseless, disloyal, cold-hearted and merciless. ³² They know of God's judgement which declares worthy of death anyone living in this way; yet not only do they do all these things, but they even applaud anyone who does the same.

The Jews also must fear judgment

♦2 ¹ Therefore, you have no excuse, whoever you are, when you judge others. For in judging your neighbour, you condemn yourself, for you practise what you are judging. ² We know that the condemnation of God will reach those who commit these things, ³ and do you think you will escape from the judgment of God in condemning others when you are doing what you condemn?

⁴ Are you taking advantage of God and his infinite goodness, patience and understanding, and do you not recognize that his goodness is in order to lead you to conversion? ⁵ However, if your heart hardens and you refuse to change, then you are storing for yourself a great punishment for the day of judgment, when God will appear as just judge.

⁶ He will give each one his due, according to his actions. ⁷ He will give everlasting life to him who is seeking glory, honour and immortality and perseveres in doing good. ⁸ But anger and vengeance will be the lot of those who did not serve truth but injustice. ⁹ There will be suffering and anguish for everyone committing evil, first the Jew, then the Greek. ¹⁰ But God will give glory, honour and peace to whoever does good, first the Jew then the Greek, ¹¹ because one is not different from the other before God.

Everyone is judged by his conscience

¹² Those who, without knowing the Law, committed sin, will perish without the Law, and whoever committed sin knowing the Law, will be judged by that Law. ¹³ What makes us righteous before God is not to hear the Law, but to obey it. ¹⁴ When the non-Jews, who do not have law, practise homosexuality and idolatry (we speak of practising homosexuality, not of being inclined to it).

♦ You have no excuse, whoever you are... Paul addresses the Jews who wait for God's judgment on the world, and are convinced that they will not be condemned since they have the true religion. To know the teaching of God was, no doubt, an advantage: but Paul reminds them that what is really important is not to know but to do good.

God will give everlasting life... (10). Paul has just condemned the injustice and wrong doing of the pagan world. Now he recognizes that many who have not received a religious education do indeed live justly. In the next paragraph Paul affirms that:

- God will judge, taking into account our knowledge of good and evil; he will deal less severely with the ignorant, more strictly with those who have been instructed in the faith.
- God also has sons and daughters among those who do not believe; only on the day of judgment will it be known who belong to the Kingdom.

Paul opposes letter to spirit (27-29). The former refers to a religion of practices, the fulfilment of what is required, without conversion of the heart. The spirit means a religion in which the spirit of God makes us capable of serving with love. Two groups of words contrast with each other in the letters of Paul: "flesh, old cove-naturally what the Law commands, they are giving themselves a law,¹⁵ showing that the commandments of the Law are engraved in their minds. Their conscience, speaking within themselves also shows it, when they condemn or approve their actions.¹⁶ The same is to happen on the day when God, according to my gospel, judges the secret actions of men in the person of Jesus Christ.

¹⁷ You, however, calling yourself a Jew, have the Law as foundation and feel proud of your God.¹⁸ You know the will of God and the Law teaches you to distinguish what is better,¹⁹ and so you believe you are the guide for the blind, light in darkness,²⁰ teacher of those who do not know, instructor of children, because you possess in the Law the knowledge and the truth...²¹ Well, then, you who teach others, why don't you teach yourself? If you say that one must not steal, why do you steal? ²² You say one must not commit adultery, yet you commit it! You say you hate the idols, but you steal in their temples! ²³ You feel proud of the Law, yet you do not obey it, and you dishonour your God. ²⁴ In fact, as the Scriptures say, the other nations despise the name of God because of you.

²⁵ Circumcision is of value to you if you obey the Law; but if you do not obey, it is as if you were not circumcised.²⁶ On the contrary, if uncircumcised men obey the commandments of the Law, do you not think that, in spite of being pagans, they make themselves like the circumcised? ²⁷ The one who obeys the Law without being marked in his body with the circumcision, will judge you who have been marked with circumcision and who have the Law which you do not obey. ²⁸ Because a true Jew is not one who is circumcised only externally, nor is real circumcision that which is marked on the body. ²⁹ A Jew must be so interiorly; the heart's circumcision belongs to spirit and not to a written law; he who lives in this way will be praised not by people, but by God.

What advantage is it to be a Jew?

3 ¹ Then, what is the advantage of being a Jew? And what is the use of circumcision? ² Much, from any point of view. In the first place, it was to the Jews that God entrusted his word.

³ Well now, if some of them were not faithful, will God be unfaithful? Of course not. ⁴ Rather, it will be proved that God is truthful, every man a liar, as the Scripture says: it will nant, commandments, Law, letter... " and "Spirit, spirit, new covenant, promise..."

o We have just demonstrated that all are under the power of sin (9). This is the central sentence of the paragraph. The Jews must, like others, rely on faith and be converted. But that is what they have difficulty in understanding, since they have always been believers. They think they are good, and are true believers, because they have been instructed in the faith. They trust in being saved merely for being marked in their body by circumcision.

What is the advantage of being a Jew?...

(1). This question was asked of Paul by the Jews when he underlined the value of faith. They were like many Catholics today who, seeing how the Church demands of us a personal renewal, say, "What for, if I have already been baptized?"

Baptism is great, indeed. It makes us part of the people of God, but at the same time it confers on us certain responsibilities such as being and acting as disciples of Christ. Baptism is not a life insurance that allows us to live comfortably.

The Law makes sin known (20). The Jewish law, or the law of Moses, is that body of religious liturgical, moral and social laws governing the people of Israel (see 7:4). In the letters of Paul, the Law sometimes designates the Bible and at be proved that your words are true and you will be winner if they want to judge you.

⁵ Our wickedness shows God to be just. Then, can we say that God is unjust when he gets angry and punishes us? (Some people might speak like this.)

⁶ – Not at all, because, otherwise, how could God judge the world?

⁷ – But if my lie makes the truth of God more evident, thus increasing his glory, is it still a sin?

⁹ Do we have, then, any advantage? Of course not! For we have just demonstrated that all, Jews and non-Jews are under the power of sin, ¹⁰ as the Scripture says: Nobody is good, not even one, no one understands, ¹¹ no one looks for God. ¹² All have gone astray and have become base. There is no one doing what is good, not even one. ¹³ Their throats are open tombs, their words deceit. ¹⁴ Their lips hide poison of vipers, from their mouth come bitter curses.

¹⁵ They run to where they can shed blood ¹⁶ leaving behind ruin and misery. ¹⁷ They do not know the way of peace, ¹⁸ they have no respect for God.

¹⁹ Now we know that whatever the Scripture says, it is said for the people of the Law, that is for the Jews. Let them, therefore, be silent and recognize that the whole world is guilty before God. ²⁰ Still more: no mortal will be worthy before God if we do not move from the fulfillment of the Law. For the Law limits itself to make sin be known.

Faith, the way to salvation

+ ²¹ Yet, now it is manifested to us what the Law and the Prophets announced: God makes us just and holy without the need of a law. ²² God makes us holy by means of faith in Jesus Christ, and this is applied to all who believe, without distinction of persons. ²³ Because all sinned and all fall short of the Glory of God; ²⁴ and all are graciously forgiven and made holy through the redemption effected in Christ Jesus. ²⁵ For God had given other times the Jewish religion. Many Jews thought that they deserved a reward for practising the Law, but Paul says: true holiness is neither the result of our works nor the reward due to them.

+ Paul has developed two points: the world lives in sin; the practice of the Law is not enough to obtain salvation. He then presents the Good News: God has come to save us through Christ.

All lack the glory of God. God is not satisfied with the actual state of man, even if the latter feels quite satisfied with his mediocre condition. He calls us to share his Glory, that is everything in God that makes him great, happy and everlasting. God has created us to bring us into communion with him, and as he is out of reach, he reaches out his hand and makes us just (21). We have already said in 1:17 that when Paul speaks of the justice of God he means God's way of making us holy. God makes us just and holy.

Now, confronting all those who think they are worthy before God because of their own efforts, because they fulfil all the commandments, Paul says: true holiness has to be given to us. For there is no other righteousness or holiness than sharing the perfection and love that are in God himself.

Paul finds it very hard to explain the mystery of salvation with the religious words available at the time, all of which refer to a violent God. He has just spoken of the justice of God, but he has pointed out that this "justice" is before anything else, a merciful intervention that makes us holy. He spoke of God's anger, but the result of this anger is the coming of the Saviour. He tells us now that God made Christ the victim we needed for the atonement of our sins; but we must not think that God, in anger, demands the suffering of an innocent victim. God is the one who provides the victim, and the coming of Jesus expresses the immensity of the Father's love. In a few words, Paul gives to these terms a totally different and new meaning. The divine way of him to be the victim who, by his blood, obtains our forgiveness; and this is a matter of faith.

²⁶ So God teaches us how he leads us to righteousness. In the past he overlooked sins; those were the times of the patience of God; but now God reveals his holiness; He is just and holy, and whoever believes in Christ Jesus he makes just and holy.

²⁷ Then what becomes of our pride? It is excluded. How? Not through the Law and its observances, but through another law which is faith. ²⁸ For we hold that people are in God's grace by faith and not by observing the Law. ²⁹ Otherwise, God would be the God of the Jews; but is he not God of all men? ³⁰ Of course he is, for there is only one God and he will save by faith the circumcised Jews as well as the uncircumcised nations. ³¹ Do we, then, deny the value of the Law because of what we say of faith? Of course not; rather we place the Law in its proper place.

Abraham, father of the just 4 ¹ What shall we say, then, of Abraham, our father in the flesh? What has he found? ² If Abraham became just and a friend of God because of his actions, he could be proud. But he cannot be this before God. ³ Because the Scripture says: Abraham believed God who, because of this, held him to be a just man.

⁴ Now, when somebody performs a work, his salary is not given to him as a favour, but as a debt that is paid. ⁵ On the contrary, he who has no acts to show but believes in Him who makes sinners just and holy, his faith is taken into account and he is held as just and holy. ⁶ David congratulates in this way those who become holy by the favour of God, and not by their actions: 'Blessed are those whose sins are forgiven and whose offences are forgotten; blessed the man whose sin God does not take into account!'

⁹ Is this blessing only for the circumcised or is it also for the uncircumcised? We have just said that, because of his faith, Abraham was made a just and holy man, ¹⁰ but when did this happen? After Abraham was circumcised, or before? Not after, but before. ¹¹ He received the rite of circumcision as a sign of the holiness given him through faith when he was still uncircumcised, that he might be the father of all those uncircumcised who come to faith and are made just and holy. ¹² And he appears to be the father of the Jews, provided that with restoring justice is not in condemning, but in saving: by love God conquers evil in such a way that those who never knew love will be saved.

Many of the Jews converted to Christ thought it useful to continue practising the religious prescriptions of the Bible, such as circumcision, observance of the sabbath, cleansings, etc. (Col 2:16), and wanted other believers of the pagan world to observe them as well. Paul rejects that, because the Law had two dimensions. On one hand, it was the divine teaching for human life, such as how to know God, not to kill, etc... and on the other, it was the Law of the Jewish people, with all its own values, rites and customs, unlike that of any other nation. So, since God is God of all nations, he will not oblige them to give up their own culture and to live as do the Jews.

■ Paul proposes to the Jewish believers the example of their ancestor Abraham. He asks: How did Abraham become the friend of God and why is he taken as the model of believers? Was it because he believed in God's promises, or because he had received the rite of circumcision? It is like asking a Christian today: What is important, to believe in Christ, or to be baptised?

The answer is clear; we become the friends of God by believing in his promises. The rite of baptism ratifies with a divine seal the gift of God and our commitment to him.

Therefore, baptism and the other sacrabeing circumcised, they also imitate the faith Abraham showed before being circumcised.

¹³ If God promised Abraham, or rather his descendant, that the world would belong to him, this was not because of his obeying the Law, but because he was just and a friend of God through faith. ¹⁴ If now the promise is kept for those who rely on the Law, then faith has lost its place. And the promise will never be fulfilled, ¹⁵ for it is proper of the Law to bring punishment: law and sin go together.

¹⁶ For that reason, faith is the way and all is given by grace; and the promises of Abraham are fulfilled for all his descendants, not only for his children according to the Law, but also for all the others who have believed.

Abraham is the father of all of us, ¹⁷ as it is written: I will make you father of many nations. He is our father in the eyes of Him who gives life to the dead, and calls the non-existent as if already existing, for this is the God in whom he believed.

¹⁸ Abraham believed and hoped against all expectation, so becoming father of many nations, as he had been told: See how many will be your descendants. ¹⁹ He did not doubt although his body could no longer give life – he was about a hundred years old – and in spite of his wife, Sarah, being unable to have children. ²⁰ He did not doubt nor did he distrust the promise of God, ²¹ but on the contrary he was convinced that He who had given the promise had power to fulfill it; and by strengthening his faith, he gave glory to God.

²² It was because of this faith that God held him to be a just and holy man. ²³ Because of this faith: these words of Scripture are not only for him, ²⁴ but for us, too, because we believed in Him who raised Jesus, our Lord, from among the dead, ²⁵ he who was delivered for our sins and raised to life for our sanctification.

Now we are in peace with God

◻ ⁵ ¹ Having been made just by faith, we are in peace with God, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. ² Through him we obtain this favour: in which we remain and we even rejoice in the expectation of sharing the Glory of God.

ments are the "signs" of faith and have no value without faith. Baptism is the beginning of our living for God in the Christian community. Communion has no meaning unless we live in unity and share the fullness of the life of the Church.

Worthy of notice is the fact that Christian people are now less concerned with rites and devotions that were so important to past generations. In the meantime renewal movements give more stress to essentials: our faith and surrender to Christ.

He did not doubt although his body could no longer give life. Abraham had a faith similar to the Christian who believes in the resurrection of Christ. We also are asked to believe in a God who gives life and for whom nothing is impossible.

And the promise will never be fulfilled (15). Paul shows the great danger of asking God to look at our good deeds and merits. If we ask him to reward us as humans do, he may show us our sins, so numerous that we cannot count them, and we shall then be empty-handed and lost.

◆ In this magnificent paragraph Paul defines the salvation of Christ. Many Christians today find it hard to reconcile the Old Testament with the New. Some prefer to stay with the Liberator of the Old Testament and the Gospel interests them only in so far as it denounces injustice. On the contrary, others consider the Old Testament as out of date, something which is not for today. For them love takes the place of justice, and the salvation of souls is their substitute for commitment to overcoming social evils.

Here Paul talks of "reconciliation" (10-11). The liberating work of God throughout history is not forgotten, but with the sacrifice of Jesus, it is clear that rebellion and violence are the es-

³ Not only that, we feel secure even in trials, knowing that trial produces patience, ⁴ from patience comes merit and that merit is the source of hope, ⁵ which does not deceive, because the love of God has already been poured into our hearts by the Holy Spirit given to us.

⁶ Consider, moreover the time that Christ died for us: when we were still sinners and weakened by sin. ⁷ Few would accept to die for an upright person; although, for a very good person, perhaps someone would give his life. ⁸ But God showed his love for us in this: while we were still sinners, Christ died for us. ⁹ Having become just and holy in his blood, with much more reason now shall we live, through him, without fearing punishment. ¹⁰ From enemies we have got peace with God through the death of his Son; with much more reason now we may be saved through his life. ¹¹ Not only that; we feel secure in God because of Christ Jesus, our Lord, through whom we have been reconciled.

Adam and Jesus Christ

¹² Now, sin entered the world by means of one man and, through sin, death, and later on death spread to all humankind, because all sinned.

¹³ There was no Law yet, but sin was in the world. As there was no law, they could not speak of disobedience, ¹⁴ but death reigned equally among them, from Adam to Moses, although their sin was not disobedience as in Adam's case (This was not the true Adam, but foretold the other who was to come).

¹⁵ Well then, the effects of God's sence of sin in the world. It is necessary to work for a genuine liberation, through obedience and non-violence as a start. The life and passion of Jesus contain the secrets of both of these. The salvation of humankind, that is, its reconciliation at all levels, comes from this sacrifice. And so, in the next paragraph Paul presents Christ as the other and true Adam (5:14), that is, the man by whom divided and mortal humankind is being built up.

We know that our conversion and that of many people does not bring an instant solution to human problems, but we also know that all other remedies would be useless unless the world receives the message and example of a reconciliation in which truth and forgiveness go hand in hand.

By faith we are at peace with God (1). What do we believe in? We believe in the personal love of God for us, seen in Jesus given up and risen for us.

We are at peace with God. Our past debts have been settled. Before we had deep guilt, because we were unable to love one another and change our lives. But now the believer knows that he is loved and forgiven.

Christ died for us while we were still sinners (6). We are accustomed to hear about Christ dying for our sins, and often enough we are not touched, for his sacrifice seems to be far away and quite unreal. But when by the grace of God we understand it, love suddenly pours from our hearts. Return love for love: this is the beginning of true conversion.

We obtain this favor in which we remain (2).

We call state of grace this gift or grace mentioned by Paul. It is not necessary to feel it in order to have it. God works in us a marvelous transformation, and most of the time, without our feeling it or noticing anything. Many people are mistaken when they look for a church or a group where they can feel themselves "born again". This is not the way of the true friends of God: they do not need to see or to feel, but rather to believe in what God is working in them. Especially when undergoing trials, we realize that grace sustains us.

We rejoice in the expectation of our sharing the Glory of God (2). Faith looks to the future and becomes hope. Hope is not a kind of opium that helps us deaden our present miseries; on the contrary, it is the strength that permits us to endure and win.

Hope does not deceive. In contrast to the people of the Old Testament, who remained always in what was temporary or provisional, waiting for a definitive truth and justice, the Christian already experiences what he will one day fully enjoy. Something of that flavour or bouquet of the divinity has been poured into our hearts (5) and that is the peace that God grants us when his Spirit comes to us.

• Paul has just described the interior renewal gift surpass those of sin. We know that multitudes die because of the fault of one man, but how much more abundant is the grace of God and the gift he granted to the multitudes, through this unique man Jesus Christ. ¹⁶ The grace of God more than compensated for sin. The disobedience that brought condemnation was of one sinner, whereas the grace of God brings forgiveness to a world of sinners. ¹⁷ If death reigned because of the disobedience of one man only, how much more will be reign and life for those who receive the grace of God through the one man, Jesus Christ.

¹⁸ Just as the sin of one man brought sentence of death to all men, so, too, one man bore the punishment, and brought pardon and life to all men; ¹⁹ and as the disobedience of one only made many sinners, so the obedience of one man allowed a multitude to be just and holy.

²⁰ The Law itself, introduced later on, caused sin to increase; but where sin increased, grace abounded all the more, ²¹ and, as sin caused death to reign, so grace will reign in its own time and, after making us just and friends of God, will bring us to eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Through baptism we died with Christ

[+6] ¹ Then, what shall we do? Shall we keep on sinning so that grace may increase more abundantly?

² Of course not. If we have died to sin, how can we go on living in it?

³ You know that those of us plunged by baptism into Christ Jesus, were plunged with him to share his death. ⁴ By baptism we were buried with Christ to share his death and, as Christ was raised from among the dead by the Glory of the Father, so we must walk in a new life. ⁵ We have of the believer. Now he widens this horizon and says that salvation has reached all humankind.

For Paul, as for the Jews of his time, Adam meant both the first man created by God and the whole of humankind. Never did Paul think, as some did after him, that the sin of the first father had been punished in his descendants although they were not guilty. Indeed, from the beginning of humankind to the present generation, only one Adam comes to life, distrustful, a rebel and violent in the person of all of us. Without forgetting that the first sin brought wider consequences, ulterior rebellions without end have made human existence heavier each day and alien to the plan of God.

In these paragraphs Sin is referred to the totality of powers that keep humankind a slave and inclined to evil. None of us could consider himself innocent of the sins of others. And Sin begins with our difficulty in recognizing truth and judging according to truth. By this we know that we are not sons of God by birth.

So when Paul speaks of Adam and Sin he does not mean an individual person, but refers to the universal condition. He does it principally because it is easier to compare one person with another. We know Christ and what he came to change; so we understand better what humankind is lacking when Christ is absent: there is Adam, one and multiple, with Sin reigning over a world of slaves.

Through sin death... (12). In Genesis, God threatened man with death if he sinned; and in fact sin brought man death. Not only the death produced by human conflict, not only the physical death coming to everyone, but death in a wider sense. Dead are those who daily suffocate their good intentions and are paralyzed by selfishness; dead are those who are guided by their instincts and do not rise above material interests; to believe, hope and love.

This foretold the other Adam who was to come... (14). To the picture of human destiny presented in Genesis (ch. 2 and 3), Paul opposes another image, that of the crucified Christ. To the scene of sin near the forbidden tree, Paul opposes that of redemption fulfilled on the "tree" of the cross. In the first scene there are three characters: Man (Adam), Sin (the serpent), Death. In the second, there are four: Man (Christ), Sin, Death and Justice (or new and holy life).

The grace of God more than compensated for sin (16). The damage caused by sin from the very beginning increases each day; at times we feel crushed and powerless by the evil forces present everywhere. Paul, however, sees the greatness of the gift of God: while humankind increases and sin enters into all areas of society, been buried with him to share in his death, in a symbolic form; and so we will also share in his resurrection.

■ ⁶ We know that our old Adam was crucified with Christ; the part of our being that had been enslaved by sin has to die, so that we may no longer serve sin – ⁷ on dying it becomes free of sin. ⁸ If we have died with Christ, we believe we will also live with him. ⁹ We know that Christ, once risen from among the dead, will not die again and, in the future, death will have no power over him: death has no more dominion over him. ¹⁰ The death of Christ was to die to sin once for all; his life now is to live for God.

¹¹ So you, too, must consider yourselves dead to sin and alive to God in Christ Jesus. ¹² Do not allow sin any control over your mortal being; do not submit yourselves to its evil inclinations, ¹³ and do not give over to sin your members as instruments to do evil. On the contrary, offer yourselves as persons returned from death to life, and let the members of your body be as holy weapons at the service of God. ¹⁴ Sin will not control you again, for you are not under sin, but under grace.

¹⁵ I ask again: are we to sin because we are not under the Law, but under grace? Certainly not. ¹⁶ If you have given yourselves up to someone as his slaves, you are to obey the master who commands you; aren't you? Now that master may be either sin, or obedience that leads you to holiness. ¹⁷ Let us give thanks to God for, after having sin as your master, you have been given to another, that is, to the doctrine of faith, to which God calls more people to free them from the slavery of evil.

There is something more. In this paragraph, somewhat complicated, Paul hints that the redemption of Christ does much more than correct the errors of humankind. God is not satisfied with helping us and making us better, but after beginning the lifting up of men, invites them to reign in life, that is to share his own Glory.

How much more will there be glory and life for those who receive grace (17). Christ embraces all of us, gathers us in his sacrifice and becomes the new head of humankind. Perhaps Paul is thinking only of the salvation of those who have listened to the Gospel, believed in Christ and entered the Church. But note how he stresses the fact that Christ saves a world of sinners. Christ is the new Adam and the head not only of believers, but of humankind as well. Man continues today to be drawn by the flood of evil originated by Adam. But humankind is also saved as a whole, as long as people try to lift up their brothers. He who does not fulfil this task loses salvation, for Sin will be in one way or another the disregard for our neighbour.

The Law caused Sin to increase (20). The law given to the Jews was occasion for a greater number of sins because they knew their duties but did not practise them. Laws are not enough to make man obey God. When only laws are given and without love, the child or the adult rebel against them, instead of obeying them.

+ We have died to sin (2). As a consequence of sin, humankind is in a state of death. To change this state and find life, we have to be united with Christ in his passion, that is, to die and rise with him. This is baptism. In the early Church, they baptized for the most part adults who had already received the Gospel and wanted to enter the community of the "holy people of God". Baptism required a conversion. And so, when Paul says "baptism", he means the complete way of conversion, including catechism, initiation into Christian life... Otherwise baptism would be only a rite.

We were plunged with him to share his death (3). Baptism means entering into Christ to share the benefits of his sacrifice. It also means the acceptance of a complete change of life, that of Christ in his death and resurrection.

■ You must consider yourselves dead to sin. It is obvious that baptism, even if received with faith, does not make us perfect at once. Shall we then imitate the Jews who gave so much attention to their commandments? Shall we be paralyzed by fear of so many temptations and daily faults? Paul proposes another way: We have to believe, above all, that sin has no power over us. Besides, we have constantly to look to Christ, knowing that we belong to him, and that he is the one who transforms us. This apparently unconcerned union with him will be more effective than remaining restless. This is the way that the "little" St. Therese fosters in those who feel you listen willingly.¹⁸ And being free from sin, you have become slaves of holiness –¹⁹ you see that I try to explain this in human terms.

There was a time when you let your members be slaves of impurity and disorder, walking in the way of sin; convert them now into servants of justice and holiness, to the point of becoming holy.

²⁰ When you were slaves of sin, you did not feel under obligation to holiness, but, ²¹ what were the fruits of those actions of which you are now ashamed? The result of all of that was death. ²² Now, however, you have been freed from sin and serve God. You are bearing fruit and growing in holiness, and the result will be life everlasting. ²³ So on one side is Sin: its reward, death; on the other side is God: he gives us, by grace, life everlasting in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

The Christian is not bound by the Jewish religion

◆ 7 ¹ You, my brothers, understand Law. Have you forgotten that everyone is subject to the Law while he is alive?² The married woman, for example, is bound by law to her husband while he is alive; but, if he dies, she is free from her obligations as a wife. ³ If she lives with another while her husband is alive, she will be an adulteress; but once the husband dies, she is free and could become the wife of another man without being an adulteress.

⁴ It was the same with you, brothers, who have died in the person of Christ. You died to the Law, that you may belong to another, who has risen from among the dead, so that we may produce fruit for God. ⁵ When we lived according to the flesh, the sinful passions awakened by the Law were at work in our bodies to produce the fruit of death, ⁶ but we have died to what was holding us; we are freed from it and now we serve with the spirit of renewal instead of the old way of the commandments.

⁷ Then, shall we say that the Law is part of sin? Of course not. However, I would not have known sin if it had not been through the Law. I would not be aware of greed if the Law did not tell me: Do not covet:

18. Gal 5, 13; Jn 8, 36	19. 12, 1	22. Jn 15, 8	23. Gal 5, 8; James 1, 15	2. 1 Cor 7, 39 weak and incapable of accomplishing much.

Do not allow sin any control over your mortal being. The faithful, although conscious of belonging totally to Christ, commit sins every day. Their sins, however, do not deprive them of what is most important, trust in the Father, which allows them to stand up after each fall (1 John 2:1). They know that they are and always will be sinners whom God forgives, as long as they try to amend and be better. We achieve freedom day by day by voluntarily submitting to the requirements of a better life.

In Paul's time there were cases of slaves being exchanged by owners. Besides, a free man with debts could sell himself to his debtor in payment of his debts. The comparison used by Paul teaches us to be meekly at the disposal of the Spirit, as slaves who are not owners of their own persons. Let us look for what the Spirit advises before making any decision.

The Christian's life must appear quite a slavery to whoever looks at it externally. Yet the Christian feels and knows himself to be free. The best example could be that of a mother totally dedicated to her sick child: she is totally free, because she has no other law than her love.

◆ The last chapter presented Christ who frees us from sin and death and becomes our only master. Then Christians of Jewish origin could ask: What about the Law of the Old Covenant? Is it no longer of value? Was it not given by God himself?

You have died to the Law (4). The Law was something temporary, provisional. The time of the Law has ended with the death of Christ.

Though the Law was for the Jews the highest authority, baptized Jews are no longer obliged to obey it. Of course, many commandments deal with justice and mercy, and Christians must not disregard them, but in spite of that, Christians should no longer follow a "religion of commandments", but have absolute faith in Christ, the only saviour.

We died to what was holding us (6). The Law!

⁸ Sin challenged the commandment by stirring in me all kinds of greed; whereas, without a law, sin lies dead.

⁹ I lived, when there was no Law; but, when the commandment came, sin came back ¹⁰ and I died. It happened that the law of life had brought me death. ¹¹ Sin took advantage of the commandment to deceive me, and brought me death through the commandment.

¹² So then, the Law is holy, as the commandment is holy, just and good. ¹³ But, being good, would it give me death? Of course not. Sin was what caused death, taking advantage of something good; so, the commandment let all the sinful working of sin be seen.

The Law without Christ makes man divided o ¹⁴ We know that the Law is spiritual, but I am made of human weakness, sold as a slave to sin. ¹⁵ I cannot explain what is happening to me, because I do not do what I want, but on the contrary, the very things I hate.

¹⁶ Well then, if I do the evil I do not want to do, I agree that the Law is good; ¹⁷ but, in this case, I am not the one striving toward evil, but it is sin, living in me. ¹⁸ I know that nothing good lives in me, I mean, in my flesh. I can want to do what is right, but I cannot do it. ¹⁹ In fact I do not do the good I want, but the evil I hate. ²⁰ Therefore, if I do what I do not want to do, I am not the one striving towards evil, but sin which is in me.

²¹ I discover, then, this reality: in wishing to do something good, the evil within me asserts itself first. ²² My inmost self agrees and rejoices with the law of God. ²³ but I notice in my body another law challenging the law of the spirit, and delivering me as a slave to the law of the sin written in my members. ²⁴ Alas, for me! Who will free me from this condition linked to death? ²⁵ Let us give thanks to God through Jesus Christ, our Lord!

So my spirit acts as a servant of the law of God while my mortal being serves the law of sin.

of Moses, the great gift of God to Israel was part of a temporary situation in which man was not fully free. We must understand that no Law, or Church's decree, or religious constitution, can rule over our conscience. Still less any civil law.

The Christian feels free before civil and religious authorities: he obeys because he sees in the laws an indication of God's will but he holds the right to criticize them according to the criteria of his faith. Though religious laws teach us a way, none of them may prevail over the clear demands of a well-informed conscience.

In the same way we cannot unconditionally become disciples of any human wisdom, such as ideologies of liberation, oriental sciences... Everything human is worthy, but Christ, Wisdom of God, judges everything.

See the same theme in 2 Cor 5:14: if he died for all, then all have died.

I lived when there was no Law (9). It would be erroneous to think that Paul is speaking about his own past. He is rather playing a role and speaks on behalf of Man (see commentary 5:12-14). The other actors of the drama are Sin, the Law and Death.

For the Jews the conclusion is clear: the Law with its commandments had no power to renew the human person.

o Paul describes the situation of the person who knows the commandments but not the love of God. He is not a liberated person, but a divided one. Two opposing forces struggle within him: on one side the Law that tells him what to do, and on the other another law in his flesh, that is in his nature. He is not really free.

There is something well disposed within man: the spirit, and something that resists the demands of duty: the flesh (see Mk 14:38). The flesh does not mean the body; this word designates what in us is weak in face of duty and God's call to holiness. In his letter to the Galatians, when Paul speaks of the "works of flesh," he points out not only drunkenness or sexual immorality, but also desires and feelings such as envy and ambition. Flesh means everything subject to temptation. And so the fight against the flesh is not a rejection of the body.

Our liberty is impotent when faced with sin, that is, it can do nothing against the forces of evil

We have received the Spirit

+8 ¹ There is no longer grievous contradiction for those living in Jesus Christ. ² For, in Jesus Christ, the Law of the Spirit of life has set me free from the law of sin and death. ³ The Law was without effect because flesh was not responding. Then God, planning to destroy sin, sent his own Son, in the likeness of the sinful human condition, to conquer and condemn the sin in this human condition. ⁴ Since then, the perfection intended by the Law would be fulfilled in those not walking in the way of the flesh, but in the way of the Spirit.

Life through the Spirit

■ ⁵ Those walking according to the flesh tend towards what belongs to the flesh; those led by the spirit, to what is spirit. ⁶ Flesh tends towards death, while spirit aims at life and peace. ⁷ What the flesh plans is against God: it does not agree, it cannot even agree with the law of God. ⁸ So, those walking according to the flesh cannot please God.

⁹ Yet you are not under the control of the flesh, but of the spirit, because the Spirit of God is within you. If you did not have the Spirit of Christ, you would not belong to Christ. ¹⁰ On the other hand, if Christ is with you, even if the body dies, as a consequence of sin, the spirit keeps on living for it is in the grace of God. ¹¹ And if the Spirit of Him who raised Christ from among the dead is within you, He who raised Christ from among the dead will also give life to your mortal bodies. Yes, he will do it through his Spirit who dwells within you.

dragging down all mankind. Dullness of spirit in our fellow workers, family problems, the general spread of pornography, selfishness and consumerism: the flesh within us becomes an accomplice of all these evils.

In this chapter Paul continues to play the role of the man who still does not know Christ and remains divided and enslaved. The next chapter will deal with the opposition between the spirit and the flesh for those who believe in Christ. For them there is a solution to their conflicts: they live in peace. And so Paul ends crying out: who will free me...? Thanks be to God.

+ There is no longer grievous contradiction. The sinner was divided between his conscience and his bad habits, and without hope of escaping from it. For those who have believed in Christ, however, that situation has ended.

God sent his own son (5). We know that almsgiving can never take the place of the salary that a man earns through his own work; no matter how much we help suffering or abandoned people, they will not become responsible until they themselves face their problems. The same is true regarding the salvation of man. It is not God who takes pity on sinners and says: "How sad! So irresponsible!... But I will dress them up in white and forget their sins, so they may look holy and be sealed at my side." God does not want to disguise reality, but to create humankind anew. So one of the human race must personally defeat Sin (that is the power of death that keeps mankind paralyzed and divided).

He sent him in the likeness (3). In the likeness: Jesus carries on his shoulders the sins of others, but he did not commit any sin (Heb 2:14 and 4:15). Since the sacrifice of Christ, the power of his Spirit has made believers also capable of being victorious over the forces of death.

Through love and forgiveness God created a new world without rancor or desire of revenge or hidden remorse of conscience. We are at peace with him; we are at peace with each other.

■ All walking in the Spirit of God are children of God (14). All the benefits received through faith, all graces that God gives us are various aspects of one single grace: God has adopted us as his sons and daughters and gives us his Spirit. The Spirit of God is what unites him with his Son. And that is why the Spirit acts in everything that God created through his Son. He abides in a special manner in those adopted children of God.

The human life of Christ prepared the way for the communication of the Spirit to those who were to be adopted, in order later on to be made divine, that is transformed in God. First comes Christ, then Spirit. This is why Paul reminded us first of the saving work of Christ (ch. 5 & 6); now he tells us about Spirit.

Those led by the Spirit (4). Shall we write "by the Spirit", or "by the spirit"? In biblical understanding, spirit means something which is ours and God's at the same time. Man is flesh and blood; he has heart, soul and mind; but the ¹² Then, brothers, let us leave the flesh and no longer live according to it. ¹³ If not, we will die. Rather, walking in the Spirit, let us put to death the body's deeds so that we may live. ¹⁴ It is those walking in the Spirit of God who are children of God.

¹⁵ You did not receive a spirit of slavery to fall into fear, but the Spirit that makes you adopted children and every time we cry, "Abba! Father!", ¹⁶ the Spirit assures our spirit that we are children of God. ¹⁷ If we are children, we are heirs, too. Ours will be the inheritance of God and we will share it with Christ; for if we now suffer with him, we will also share the Glory with him.

The universe, too, waits for its redemption

◆ ¹⁸ I consider that the suffering of our present life cannot be compared with the Glory that will be revealed and given to us. ¹⁹ All creation is eagerly expecting the transformation of the children of God. ²⁰ For the created world was subjected to frustration; this did not come from itself, but from the One who assured it, however, a hope; ²¹ for the created world will be freed from this fate of death and share the freedom and the Glory of the children of God.

²² We know that the whole creation groans and suffers the pangs of birth. ²³ Not creation alone, but even ourselves, although the Spirit was given to us as a foretaste of what we are to receive, we groan in our innermost being, eagerly awaiting the day when God will adopt us and take to himself our bodies as well.

²⁴ To hope is the way we are saved. But if we saw what we hope for, there would no longer be hope: how can you hope for what is already seen? ²⁵ So we hope for what we do not see and we will receive it through patient hope.

spirit is something that God sends into man. So, in this paragraph, sometimes it seem more appropriate to say "the spirit", meaning our spirit visited by God, and at other times: "the Spirit", that is the third divine Person, through whom God gives himself to us.

You did not receive a spirit of slaves. The Spirit changes our manner of being and behaving before God. Now we know him as a Father. From this knowledge comes this adhesion, joyful and without fear to whatever he demands of us. We can say: "Our Father", as Christ taught us.

Those led by the Spirit go to what comes from the Spirit. And then they begin to freely desire a new way of living in imitation of Christ. The desires of the Spirit animate our life. We experience them as an interior calling, a security and a joy.

In following the desires of the Spirit we really feel free: this life, however, is demanding. Each day we have to go a little further in putting to death the works of the flesh (14), that is everything that paralyzes us and makes us cling to this world. Put to death: we call it mortification.

The Spirit assures our spirit that we are children of God (16). Whoever lives in the spirit lives in the light. While we remain firm in the teaching of Christ and share in the life of the Church, the Spirit gives us internal knowledge and joy in the things of God. The Spirit guides us and inspires us each day how to please God.

◆ The description of "living in the Spirit" continues. The believer who looks around notices that not only his brethren, but the whole world is being transformed.

The glory that will be given to us. Though the Spirit dwells in our innermost being, we expect the transformation of our whole being. Now, though we have the peace of Christ, temptations and sufferings prevent us from enjoying glory and being fully free. With the transformation of our whole being (Paul calls it the body: 23) we shall reach the glorious freedom of the children of God.

It is impossible to consider Man apart from this world in which he lives. Are there elsewhere in the Universe other intellectual beings? The Bible says nothing about it. It only says that all created life is drawn by the same mystery of death and resurrection that marks our destiny and that we have known through Christ.

All creation is eagerly expecting (19). When God created man, he ordered him to rule over creation. So sinful man ruled over the world, but ο ²⁶ The Spirit comes to help us in our weakness, for we do not know how to ask; but the Spirit himself intercedes for us with groans that cannot be expressed. ²⁷ And He who sees inner secrets, knows the desires of the spirit praying for the holy ones, for he prays according to the will of God.

Who shall separate us from the love of God?

+ ²⁸ We know that in everything God works for the good of those who love him, whom he has called according to his plan. ²⁹ Those whom he knows beforehand, he also predestines to be like his Son, similar to him, so that he may be the First-born among many brothers. ³⁰ And so, those whom God chose, he called them, and when he calls them he makes them just and holy, and after making them holy, gives them his Glory.

³¹ What shall we say after this? If God is with us, who shall be against us? ³² God who did not spare his own Son, but gave him up for us all, how will he not with him, give us all things? ³³ Who shall accuse those chosen by God if he is making them just? ³⁴ Who will dare to condemn them? Will it be Christ, he who died, and still more rose and is seated at the right of God interceding for us?

³⁵ Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Will it be trials, or anguish, persecution or hunger, lack of clothing, or dangers or sword? ³⁶ As the Scripture says: For your sake we are being killed all day long; they treat us like sheep to be slaughtered.

³⁷ No, in all of this we are more than conquerors, thanks to him who has loved us. ³⁸ I am certain that neither death nor life, neither angels nor spiritual powers, neither the present ³⁹ nor the future, nor cosmic powers, were they from heaven, or from the deep world below, nor any creature whatsoever will separate us from the love of God, which we have in Jesus Christ, our Lord.

his sin infected whatever he touched. The Bible itself notes that the progress of society quite often brings with it slavery and exploitation. The discoveries of science have been used to destroy millions of lives in world wars. Paul tells us now that the world, infected by sin, will be transformed and "spiritualized" when we attain resurrection.

The whole creation groans and suffers the pangs of birth (22). We don't see a peaceful progress in this world. What we see, rather, are contradictions, tensions and violence. For this earth is not the permanent abode of the children of God. On the contrary, it is a place of suffering, struggle and dark faith that prepares us for what we await from God: "The day when God will adopt us and take our mortal bodies to himself."

ο We don't know how to pray. We often think that we pray only when we are saying something and asking for things. Paul shows that words are not important, but rather the deep desire of the Spirit of God within us is.

The Spirit intercedes for us. It is good to present our problems and worries to God using words that the Spirit inspires. And still better when the Spirit invites us to remain in silent prayer, when God communicates his peace to us.

+ In the last pages Paul has described God's action on us through his Spirit. But in fact, the providence of the Father covers all the events of our lives. Nothing happens in the world, in our family, in our lives merely by chance or because it was so destined.

Those whom he knows beforehand... How: Paul stresses this personal attention the Father gives to each of us!

Those whom God chose (30). From the beginning of the world God has known us in Christ: How different from human parents who do not know their children before birth! He has known and loved us from the very time he created us.

He calls them. Whatever be the way we come to know Christ, it is a personal call of God who gives us the opportunity to believe.

He makes them holy. That is, whatever is good in us and pleasing to him, he has given us:

Those whom he knew beforehand (20). On reading this verse some have thought that we are not really free, and that those elected by God are

Why have the Jews not believed?

9 ¹ I will tell you with all sincerity in Christ and my conscience assures me in the Holy Spirit that I am not lying: ² I have great sadness and constant anguish for the Jews. ³ I would even desire that myself suffer the curse of being cut off from Christ, instead of them who are my brethren and kinsmen by race. ⁴ They are Israelites whom God received as his sons, and on them rests his Glory. Theirs are the covenants, the Law, the worship and the promises of God. ⁵ They are descendants of the Patriarchs and from their race Christ was born, he who is, above all, God blessed for ever and ever: Amen!

⁶ We cannot say that the word of God has not been fulfilled. For not all Israelites are Israel. ⁷ And not because they are of the race of Abraham, are they all his children, for it was said to him: The children of Isaac will be called your descendants. ⁸ This means that the children of God are not identified with the race of Abraham, but only with the children born to him because of the promise of God. ⁹ To such promise this text is referring: I shall return about this time and Sarah will have a son. ¹⁰ Also when Rebekah, the wife of our father Isaac, became pregnant, ¹¹ and before the twins were born, when they hadn't yet done right or wrong, God said: The elder will serve the younger. So the plan of God kept on depending on his free choice, ¹² not on the merits of anybody, but on his own calling, ¹³ as the Scriptures say: I chose Jacob and rejected Esau.

God is not unjust

◆ ¹⁴ Shall we say that God is unjust? Of course not. ¹⁵ However God said to Moses: I shall forgive whom I forgive and have pity on whom I have pity. ¹⁶ So what is important is not that the man worry or hurry, but that God have compassion. ¹⁷ And he says in saved automatically. In fact, we don't read that some are elected for salvation, others not. Paul only says that they are elected to know Christ, which is not the same as salvation.

The kingdom of God goes much farther than the Church. The great majority of humankind do not know Christ and the Gospel. Yet God knows how to lead and save them. for the sacrifice of Christ saves all humankind. Paul is addressing believers and reminds them that to believe in Christ is a great personal grace: let them not be discouraged.

See also commentary on 9:14.

Who shall be against us? Paul is thinking of the evil surrounding us that frequently drags us down. He is thinking of the day of Judgment, when the accuser, the Spirit of Evil, could face us with the faults we have committed. He thinks of our troubled conscience that often brings us remorse. None of these will be stronger than the love and forgiveness of Christ. The believer should not be alarmed at his repeated faults, or doubt the love of God, but try to live according to the truth.

■ Paul, being a Jew, shares the worries of the few Jews who have believed in Christ. Why did the chosen people not recognize its Saviour? If they were a chosen nation, why were so few selected?

It is the same worry of Catholic families when their children do not go to church or when teenagers declare they have lost their faith. It is the same uneasiness we feel in the course of a mission: those who habitually go to church are perhaps the hardest to lead to conversion and the ones that most obstruct the evangelization of outsiders.

This happens because faith cannot be transmitted from fathers to children like an inheritance. Faith is and always will be a grace from God.

◆ Paul repeats what he said in 8:28: to know Christ is a grace that God gives to whomsoever he wishes. But if he does not grant this grace, he will surely grant some other grace so that man may be saved even without the knowledge of Christ.

The argument based on the story of Jacob and Esau means just that: Jacob is preferred to Esau for a determined mission (12). Let us notice, also, that in verse 13, quoting the prophet Malachi 1:3, Jacob and Esau do not represent Scripture to Pharaoh: *I made you Pharaoh to show my power in you, and for the whole world to know my name.*¹⁸ And so God takes pity on whom he wishes, and hardens the heart of whomsoever he wishes.

¹⁹ Will anyone dare say, "Why, then, does God complain, if no one can resist his will?"²⁰ But you, my friend, who are you to call God to account? Should, perhaps, the clay pot say to its maker: why did you make me like this?²¹ Is it not up to the potter to make from the same clay a vessel for beauty or a vessel for menial use?

²² If God, in order to show his wrath and the extent of his power, endured with so much patience vessels that deserved his wrath, fit to be broken, ²³ he now wants to show the riches of his Glory with other vessels whom he mercifully prepared for glory.²⁴ And he called us, not only from among the Jews, but from among the pagans, too, ²⁵ as he said through the prophet Hosea: *I will call 'my people' those that were not my people, and 'my beloved' the one who was not beloved.*²⁶ And in the same place where they were told: 'You are not my people', they will be called sons of the living God.

²⁷ With regard to Israel, Isaiah proclaims: *Even if the sons of Israel are as numerous as the sand of the sea, only a few will be saved.*²⁸ This is a matter that the Lord will settle in Israel without fail or delay.²⁹ Isaiah also announced: If the Almighty Lord had not left us some descendants, we would have become like Sodom and similar to Gomorrah.

³⁰ What are we saying, then? That the pagans, who were not aiming at peace with God and holiness found it (I speak of being holy by faith);³¹ while Israel, hoping for holiness from the Law, lost the purpose of the Law.³² Why? Because they relied on the observance of the Law, not on two persons, of whom, one would be rejected, but the two peoples of Israel and Edom, named after them. Likewise in 9:17: God hardens the heart of Pharaoh.

For the Hebrews the heart is the symbol of the mind. This then means: God lets Pharaoh be dull of mind, or stubborn, in order to bring him to defeat. This does not mean anything more than that or that God would lead someone to sin or send him to hell.

PREDESTINATION

Many make use of these sentences of Paul and other passages from the Bible to assert we are not really free and if God has created us to be condemned to hell, there is nothing we can do. How can we wholeheartedly love a God who behaves like this?

If God calls us to a personal relation of love and faithfulness with him (Os 2,21), it is precisely because we are free and responsible (Sir 15:14). If God destined someone for hell, how could he call him and demand that he live a holy life? It would be the most cruel of jokes.

Speaking of predestination, we say:

- God, who is not controlled by time, has no before or after. He sees and determines at the same time the beginning and the end for each of us. No life fails because of the negligence of God or of his bad faith (Rom 8:28; James 1:13). No one can prevent his saving plans: Rom 8:15.

- Our salvation is a gift of God. No one can believe and please God unless he has been called: Rom 11:5; Phil 2:13. No one is to be proud of his merits or demand a reward: Eph 2:9; Phil 3:9.
- God is the one who works everything in us, as long as we open ourselves to his action. Only those who refuse to be receptive are responsible for their condemnation. The Church therefore speaks of "predestination" to express this saving work; but she has never spoken of predestination with regard to hell. Compare Matthew 25:34: the kingdom prepared for you, with 25:41: the fire reserved for the Devil.

We must not confuse two different ideas of predestination:

For Paul, predestination refers to the loving plan of God from the very beginning. It was then that God decided how to lavish on each of us the riches of his love through his Son. See commentary of Eph 1:5.

the Lord without having believed in him? And how could they believe in him without having first heard about him? And how will they hear about him if no one preaches about him? ¹⁵ And how will they preach about him if no one sends them? As Scripture says: How beautiful to see those coming to bring good news. ¹⁶ Although not everyone obeyed the good news, as Isaiah said: Lord, who has believed in our preaching? ¹⁷ So, faith comes from preaching, and preaching takes root in the word of Christ.

¹⁸ I ask: Have the Jews not heard? but of course they have. Because the voice of those preaching resounded all over the earth and their voice was heard to the end of the world. ¹⁹ Then I must ask: Did not Israel understand? Moses was the first to say: I will make you jealous of a nation that is not a nation, I will excite your anger against a crazy nation. ²⁰ Isaiah dares to add more: I was found by those not looking for me, I have shown myself to those not asking for me. ²¹ While referring to Israel, the same Isaiah says: I hold out my hands the whole day long to a disobedient and rebellious people.

A remnant of Israel has been saved

11 ¹ And so I ask: Has God rejected his people? Of course not. I myself am an Israelite, a descendant of Abraham, from the tribe of Benjamin. ² No, God has not rejected the people he elected. Don't you know what Scripture says of Elijah when he was accusing Israel before God? ³ He said: "Lord, they have killed your prophets, destroyed your altars, and I remain alone; and now they want to kill me." ⁴ What was the answer of God? "I kept for myself seven thousand who did not worship Baal." ⁵ In the same way now there is a remnant in Israel, those who were chosen by grace. ⁶ If it was by grace, it did not result because of the observance of the Law. Otherwise grace would not be grace.

⁷ What then? What Israel was looking for, it did not find, but those did whom God elected. The others hardened their hearts, ⁸ as Scripture says: God made them dull of heart and mind; to this day their eyes cannot see nor their ears hear. ⁹ David says: May they be caught and trapped at their banquets; may they fall, may they be punished. ¹⁰ May their eyes be closed so that they cannot see and their backs bent forever.

Do not despise those who stumbled

¹¹ Again I ask: Did they stumble so as to fall? of course not. Their stumbling let salvation come to the pagan nations and this, in turn, will spur the jealousy of Israel. ¹² If the fault of Israel made the world rich, if its partial failure made the pagan nations rich, what will happen when Israel reaches fulfilment?

¹³ Now I will speak to you who are not Jews: I am spending myself as an apostle to the pagan nations, ¹⁴ but I hope my ministry will be successful enough to awaken the jealousy of those of my race, and finally to save some of them. ¹⁵ If the world made peace with God when they kept themselves apart, what will it be when they are welcomed? Nothing less than a passing from death to life.

¹⁶ When the first fruits are consecrated to God, the whole is consecrated. If the roots are holy, so will be the branches. ¹⁷ Some branches have been cut from the olive tree, while you, as a wild olive tree, have been grafted in their stead, and you are benefiting from their roots and sap. ¹⁸ Now therefore, do not pride yourself and despise the branches, because you do not support the roots, the roots support you. ¹⁹ You may say, "They cut the branches to graft me." ²⁰ Well. But they were cut because they did not believe, while you stand by faith. Then do not pride yourself too much, rather beware: ²¹ if God did not spare the natural branches, even less will he spare you.

²² Admire at the same time both the goodness and severity of God: He was severe with the fallen and he is generous with you, as long as you remain faithful. Otherwise you will be cut off. ²³ Maybe if they do not keep on rejecting the faith they will be grafted in, for God is able to graft them in again. ²⁴ If you were taken from the wild olive tree to which you belonged and, inspite of being of a different species, you were grafted into the good olive tree, how much more may they, of the same species, be grafted into their own tree.

Israel will be saved

+ ²⁵ I want you, brothers, to understand the mysterious decree of God, lest you feel superior to them: a part of Israel will remain hardened until the majority of pagans have entered. ²⁶ Then the whole of Israel shall be saved, as Scripture says: From Zion will come the Liberator who will purify the sons of Jacob from all their sins. ²⁷ And this is the covenant I will make with them: I will take them away from their sins.

²⁸ Regarding the Gospel, the Jews act as enemies, but it is for your benefit. Regarding the election, they are still beloved because of their fathers. ²⁹ Because the call of God and his gifts cannot be nullified.

THE DESTINY OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE

+ Both paragraphs 11:11 and 11:25-32 deal with the destiny of the Jewish people. It is a fact that the great majority did not receive Christ. Later on, as Jesus had foretold, they were scattered all over the world, becoming a people without a land, united only by their Law, traditions and above all, by that certitude of being the people of God chosen among all other peoples of the world.

In later times, the Jews have been persecuted or exterminated in many nations and in Christian countries by people motivated by religious fanaticism. Sometimes they were forced to convert and adopt the Christian faith. The less fanatical among Christians considered that Israel bore the punishment for the crime committed by their forefathers when they condemned Jesus; and they saw in the tragedy of Israel, and then in its survival, a sign of God's Providence. The Jews could no longer be considered the people of God and their religion was a religion of the past.

But now, with a more lucid mind and spirit, we recognize that the Jews have never stopped being the people of God. By a wonderful design of God the Jews have been giving to us, Christians, many examples of how we should behave. While Christians confused often enough nationalism and religion, adopting frequently causes alien to the spirit of the Gospel, the Jewish people, without weapons and country, kept united by their faith, in spite of persecutions. While Christians settled into the present, seeing in their religion a moral teaching, completely forgetting they had to prepare for the second coming of Christ, the Jews on the other hand were anxious for a world without frontiers, denouncing the idols that oppose social justice: false nationalism, worshipping of military values, cult of the civil and religious authorities.

We discover day by day that the Jewish religion is not a dead religion, because the Bible is for the Jews a fountain of life. It seems as if God placed Jews and Christians in competition, as Paul gives us to understand. The Jews no longer hope for a Saviour and consider everything said in the Bible about the Messiah as referring to the chosen people as a whole, who are to save the world. And they continue hoping for a better world promised by God, but which is never fully realised. The Christians, however, hope for a better world, knowing that the kingdom of God has already arrived and that in Christ we possess everything.

Paul states clearly that at the end of the world Israel will be reconciled with Christ and that Jews

Jews the mercy of God was for you who did not obey God.³¹ They, in turn, being now in rebellion so that you may receive God's mercy, will receive mercy in due time.³² For God submitted all to disobedience, in order to show his mercy to all.

³³ How deep are the riches, the wisdom and knowledge of God! His decisions cannot be explained, nor his ways understood! ³⁴*Who has ever known God's thoughts? Who has ever been his adviser?* ³⁵*Who has given him something first, so that God had to repay him?* ³⁶For everything comes from him, has been made by him and has to return to him. To him be the glory for ever! Amen.

Christian life: Be concerned for others

12 ¹ I beg you, therefore, my brothers, by the mercy of God, to give yourselves as a living and holy sacrifice pleasing to God: that is our spiritual worship. ² Do not be conformed to the world where you live, but rather be transformed through the renewal of your mind. You must discern the will of God, what is good, what pleases, what is perfect.

³ The grace that God has given me allows me to tell all of you not to think too highly of yourselves, but wisely, that you may become wise. And let each one appreciate the measure of faith and talents given to him by God.

o ⁴ Take as example our body. It is one, even if formed by many members, but not all of them with the same function. ⁵ The same with us; being many, we are one body in Christ, depending on one another. ⁶ Let each one of us, therefore, serve according to our different gifts. He who, by God's gift, is a prophet, let him speak whatever faith inspires him. ⁷ Let the deacon fulfill his office; let the teacher teach, ⁸ and he who encourages, convince.

You must, likewise, give with an open hand, preside with dedication, and be cheerful in your works of charity.

Phil 2, 3	5. 1 Cor 12, 12; 10, 17; Eph 5, 30 and Christians will recognize that their two separate histories are really only one.

■ Give yourselves as a sacrifice pleasing God. The Christian is asked, above all, to give himself to the fulfilling of God's plans. His worship and duties to God do not consist principally in what he does on Sundays (no matter how important it may be) but in his daily conduct.

Do not be conformed to the world where you live. We see ourselves surrounded by so many customs, advertisements, fashions, songs, governmental plans,... that rob and deprive us of our personality. They take away from us what is ours and what makes us human persons: our liberty. In each country and environment people become used to doing what everyone else does, and no one dares to rebel against evil as long as he is not personally bothered. But although a Christian be neither aggressive nor a pessimist, he cannot agree with the world as it is.

Transform ourselves (2). God demands not only good deeds, but still more a complete transformation of our person. First of all we must acquire new criteria and a new understanding of our existence. With baptism, that makes us new creatures, there also begins a renovation of the mind enlightened by God. See this in Eph 4:3.

So you will know the will of God. A blind obedience to the commandments of God and Church is not the way. What is needed is a constant effort to learn, to meditate and to understand the will of God in everything that happens to us.

Take for example our body. See 1 Cor 12: We are only one body and no one can avoid his responsibilities. Paul stresses how each of us has a particular function in the Church. Those parish where a multitude attends mass every Sunday merely as assistants, without having a community life are very imperfect churches.

o From the way he speaks about Christian community, Paul lets us know that in his time it was not organized as in our churches of today. If the early Church not everything depended upon priests educated apart from the common people and sent to the Christian communities from

Christian life: Love

◆⁹ Let love be sincere. Hate what is evil and hold to whatever is good.

¹⁰ Regarding brotherly love, have love for one another.

Regarding respect, judge others as more worthy.

¹¹ Regarding your duties, do not be lazy.

Be fervent in the Spirit and serve God.

¹² Have hope and be cheerful.

Be patient in trials and pray constantly.

¹³ Share with other christians in need.

With those passing by, be ready to receive them.

¹⁴ Bless those who persecute you; bless and do not wish evil on anyone.

¹⁵ Rejoice with those who are joyful, and weep with those who weep.

¹⁶ Live in peace with one another. Do not seek honors, but accept humble duties. ¹⁷ Do not hold yourselves as wise. Do not return evil for evil, but try to earn the appreciation of others.

¹⁸ Do your best to live in peace with everybody. ¹⁹ Beloved, do not avenge yourselves, but let God be the one who punishes, as Scripture says: Vengeance is mine, I will repay, says the Lord. ²⁰ And it adds: If your enemy is hungry, feed him; if he is thirsty, give him to drink; by doing this you will heap burning coals upon his head.

²¹ Do not let evil defeat you, but conquer evil with goodness.

Submission to authority

13 ¹ Let everyone be subject to the authorities governing us. For there is no authority that does not come from God, and the existing ones have been established by God. ² He who, therefore, resists authority goes against the order established by God, and those who resist deserve to be condemned.

³ In fact, who fears authority? Not those who do good, but those who do evil. Do you want to be without fear outside. As we said in Acts 12:35, the community elected a Council of Elders or presbyters, approved by the Apostles. The most respected among them were the "Prophets." The Body of Presbyters, who had authority over the Church, were those who celebrated the Eucharist.

Everyone's gifts were taken into account by the organization which considered also as gift, the ability to serve in the Church. See Eph 4:11 and commentaries on 1 Tim 4:14.

But throughout history the Church has had to change its organization and constantly adjust itself to the development of social structures and cultural development.

Give with an open hand. Paul passes from the good discharge of duties to the ministry of love for others.

◆Verses 9-13 present a program of Christian life. Unlike the commandments concerning external acts, Paul stresses internal attitudes and dispositions.

Do not return evil for evil. A demanding commandment of forgiveness so often formulated by Jesus. It is a false wisdom that which advises us to return evil for evil, mean behaviour for mean behaviour, a tooth for a tooth... It is also false wisdom (16) to strive to be noticed by adopting customs of a higher social class, or to dream of a life without material problems, to have more consideration for moneyed people, for the powerful or for good speakers.

○ Some governments which have imposed their own unlimited authority through violence and lies, bribe churches and pastors to interpret this paragraph in their favour. Other people are scandalized by what Paul says: How could such a government be at the service of God and enjoy his authority? Does not the Scripture say in other places that the Devil is the one who gives power to his worshippers? (Luke 4:5-7; Rev 13:1-19; John 12:31 & 14:30)

Let us remember that Paul and his readers lived in a world where almost no one questioned the legitimacy of Roman authority. And as there is neither a common good and peace, nor nation without authority and obedience, Paul of a person in authority? Do good and he will praise you.⁴ He is the steward of God for your good. But if you do not behave, fear him for he does not carry arms in vain; he is at the service of God who judges and punishes wrongdoers.

⁵ It is necessary to obey, not through fear but as a matter of conscience. ⁶ For that same reason you pay the taxes, and the collectors are God's officials. ⁷ Give each one his due; to whomever you owe contributions, make a contribution; to whom taxes are due, pay taxes; to whom respect is due, give respect; to whom honour is due, give honour.

states that obedience to the constituted authority is ordered by God. In saying: he who resists the authority, Paul means persons who resist in order to serve their own interest or that of their group. They are bad citizens for they create divisions and harm everyone: 1 Peter 2:13; Tit 3:1.

Paul did not know the modern problems of rebellion against an oppressive power and no one can address his words to those who resist because of their conscience. In any case, the Christian subjects his conscience only to Christ. When the authorities demand something that is against truth and justice, he resists with the means his conscience reveals to him, ready to suffer punishment provided by human laws, and even to give his life. The great majority of the martyrs the Church honors today were condemned in their time as subversive persons and enemies of social order.

He is the steward of God for your good (4). We have to ask, then, if authority promotes goodness. When the laws favour only a minority, or allow corruption, or are oppressive to the Children of the light

+ ¹¹ You know what hour it is. This is the time to awake, for our salvation is now nearer than when we first believed; ¹² the night is almost over and day is at hand. Let us discard, therefore, everything that belongs to darkness, and let us take up the arms of light. ¹³ As we live in the full light of day, let us behave with decency; no banquets with drunkenness, no prostitution or vices, no fighting or jealousy. ¹⁴ Put on, rather, the Lord Jesus Christ, and do not be led by the will of the flesh nor follow its desires

The weak and the strong

14 ¹ Welcome those weak in faith and do not criticize their scruples. ² Some think they can eat any food, while others, less liberated, eat only vegetables. ³ If you eat, do not despise those who abstain; if you abstain, do not criticize those who eat, for God has welcomed them. ⁴ Who are you to pass judgment on the servant of another? Whether he stands or falls, the one concerned is his master:

poor, they are not at the service of God: let us remember Is 5:8; 7; 10:1-3; Am 5:7-12.

Besides, the believer does not approve the fact that certain persons organize their own political or economic party in a way that makes them in fact Masters and Lords, capable of eliminating anyone who opposes their absolute monopoly of power.

Jesus, for his part, refused to take part in politics (Mc 12:3). But he did not speak against those who want to do so. He was free enough to denounce authority and to break the most sacred laws when they became oppressive.

During the past century the Church has reminded us very often that no authority can deprive a human being of his rights, and that everybody should be careful to elect authorities who serve the common good. In these matters let us hear the doctrine of the Church: Gaudium and Spes 73-76.

+ You know what hour it is (11). During the first thirty years of the Church all expected that the coming of Jesus would be soon. Later on

But he will not fall, for his master is able to keep him standing.

⁵ For some, there are good and bad days; for others, all days are equal. Let everyone act according to his own conscience. ⁶ He who distinguishes among days, does that for the Lord, and he who eats, eats for the Lord and in eating he gives thanks to the Lord. And he who does not eat, does it for the Lord and gives him thanks as well.

⁷ In fact, none of us lives for himself, nor dies for himself. ⁸ If we live, we live for the Lord, and if we die, we die for the Lord. Either in life or in death, we belong to the Lord; ⁹ Christ experienced death and life to be Lord both of the living and of the dead. ¹⁰ Then you, why do you criticize your brother? And you, why do you despise him? For we will all appear at the tribunal of God. ¹¹ It is written: I swear by myself, word of the Lord, every knee will bend before me, and every tongue shall confess truth before God. ¹² So each of us will account for himself before God.

¹³ Therefore, let us not continue criticizing one another; let us try, rather, never to put in the way of our brother anything that would make him stumble or fall. ¹⁴ I know, I am sure of this in the Lord Jesus, that nothing is unclean of itself, — it is only unclean for those who consider it unclean. ¹⁵ But if you hurt your brother because of a certain food, you are no longer walking according to love. ¹⁶ Let not your eating cause the loss of the one for whom Christ died. Let not what is true in you be spoken ill of.

¹⁷ The kingdom of God is not a matter of food or drink; it lies in justice, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, ¹⁸ and if you serve Christ in this way, you will please God and be praised by people. ¹⁹ Let us look, then, for what strengthens peace and makes us better.

²⁰ Do not destroy the work of God because of food. All foods are clean, but you are wrong to make another fall because of what you eat. ²¹ And it may be better not to eat meat, or drink wine, or anything else that causes your brother to stumble.

²² Keep your own belief before God, and happy are you if you never act against your own belief. ²³ Instead, whoever eats something in spite of his doubts, is doing wrong, because he does not act according to his belief, when they realized that history could last much longer, the waiting of the believer was directed to the day when, upon his death he would meet Christ individually. In the present century we came to realize that history is going towards an end and that we not only have to be ready for the last hour, but that we must also work for the evangelization of the world. The Gospel is the power that, directly or indirectly, brings all human history to maturity: by living holy and responsible lives we hasten the coming of the kingdom of God (2 Pet 3:12).

■ Welcome those weak in faith. The Christians of Rome, of many different cultures, were still influenced by their former religious customs. For years many had been taught that to eat this or that food was evil, that to work on this or that day was not good. Habits take a long time to change. Paul reminds us of Christ's teaching (Mk

7:19): there are no forbidden foods or drinks.

Paul rejects, however, the disputes about all these things. Do not criticize their scruples. Whoever has overcome common prejudices must respect the conscience of others. Each must sacrifice his own comfort for the well-being of others when this is required. We find similar difficulties when Christians of different environments, races or political groups have to live together. It is an opportunity for them to show respect for one another.

Whatever we do against our conscience is sin (23). We must form our conscience; no one can remain in doubt, with prejudices or truths that are not well-founded. In any case, we must follow our own conscience. It is, therefore, a grave responsibility to acquire good criteria through lectures, conversations, reading the Bible, and above all, by taking advantage of the and whatever we do against our conscience is sin.

15 ¹ We, the strong and liberated, should bear the weakness of those who are not strong, instead of pleasing ourselves. ² Let each of us bring joy to our neighbour, helping him to grow up in goodness; ³ Christ himself did not look for his own contentment, as Scripture says: The insults of those insulting you fell upon me. ⁴ And we know that whatever was written in the past was written for our instruction, for the comfort given us by the Scripture helps our perseverance and maintains hope. ⁵ May God, the source of all perseverance and comfort, give to all of you to live in peace in Christ Jesus, ⁶ that you may be able to praise in one voice God, Father of Christ Jesus, our Lord.

⁷ Welcome, then, one another, as Christ welcomed you for the glory of God. ⁸ Look: Christ put himself at the service of the circumcised Jews to fulfill the promises made by God to their fathers; here you see God's faithfulness. ⁹ The pagans instead give thanks to God for his mercy, as Scripture says: Because of that, I will sing and praise your name among the pagans. ¹⁰ And in another place: Rejoice, pagan nations, with God's people. ¹¹ And again: praise the Lord, all people and let all nations speak of his magnificence. ¹² Isaiah says: A descendant of Jesse will come who will rule the pagan nations and they will hope in him.

¹³ May God, the source of hope fill you with joy and peace in the faith so that your hope may increase greatly by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Paul feels responsible for the Christians of Rome

◆ ¹⁴ As for me, brothers and sisters, I am convinced that you have goodwill, knowledge and capacity to advise each other; ¹⁵ nevertheless I have written boldly in some parts of this letter to remind you of what you already know. ¹⁶ I do this according to the mission given to me when I was sent to the pagan nations. I dedicated myself to the service of the Good News of God as a priest of Christ Jesus, in order to present the non-Jews to God as an agreeable offering consecrated by the Holy Spirit.

¹⁷ This service of God is for me a cause of pride in Christ Jesus. ¹⁸ Of course I would not dare to speak of other things but what Christ himself has done through me, my words and my works, ¹⁹ with miracles and signs by the power of the Holy Spirit, — so that the non-Jews may obey the faith. In this way I have extended the Good light the Church provides us in so many ways.

◆ Here we see how gentle Paul was. He has the authority of an apostle of Christ and is able to solve the problems of the Church of Rome. Yet, although he has something to teach them, he takes great care not to create divisions or rivalries and he shows respect for the founders or leaders of the Roman community.

As a priest of Christ (16) This term must not be interpreted as meaning what we understand by the Church's priests. The first Christians did not use the word priest to designate their ministers, in order not to confuse them with the Jewish or pagan ministers who offered victim to God. Here, however, Paul compares himself to them. He does not present burnt offerings to God, but instead, he presents the pagans and reconciles them to God. This is the new spiritual worship (12:1) that the apostles offer to God.

Today there is a danger of giving too much attention to magnificent liturgical celebrations forgetting the difficult and often misinterpreted work of reconciling persons who are both liberated and aware of their human worth. Only those who dedicate themselves to this evangelization can rightly celebrate the Eucharist.

²⁰ I have been very careful, however, and I am proud of this, not to preach in places where Christ is already known, and not to build upon foundations laid by others. ²¹ Let it be as Scripture says: Those not told about him will see, and those who have not heard will understand.

o ²² This work has prevented me from going to you. ²³ But now there is no more place for me in these regions, and as I have wanted for so long to go and see you, ²⁴ I hope to visit you when I go to Spain. Then you could help me go to that nation, once I have abundantly enjoyed your company.

o The trip to Spain would mean going further than Rome, center of the known world. This gives us an idea of how zealous Paul was in creating new communities in all parts of the world, without waiting for the newly founded ones to attain perfection. After his example, any mature Christian community of the Church should be concerned about becoming missionary, reaching out beyond their neighbourhood and parish. Even sending people to other places and countries where Christ is still unknown, regardless of their own stage of growth and the number of their priests or other ministries.

I go to Jerusalem to help that community.

³⁰ I beg of you, brothers, by Christ Jesus our Lord and by the love of the Spirit, to join me in the fight, praying to God for me; ³¹ pray that I may avoid the snares of the enemies of faith in Judea, and that the community of Jerusalem may welcome the help I bring. ³² And so I will go to you with joy and, God willing, be refreshed in your company. ³³ The God of peace be with you. Amen.

16 ¹ I recommend to you our sister Phoebe, deaconess of the church of Caesarea. ² Please receive her in the name of the Lord, as it should be among brothers and sisters in the faith, and help her in whatever is necessary, because she helped many, among them, myself.

³ Greetings to Prisca and Aquilas, my helpers in Christ Jesus. ⁴ To save my life, they risked theirs; I am very grateful to them, as are all the churches of the pagan nations. ⁵ Greetings also to the church that

INTRODUCTION

Some persons praise the first Christians as if they had been models of all virtues. In fact there were no more miracles then than now.

In Corinth, a very active and corrupt city, there existed a dynamic, though not well ordered Church, formed of Jews and Greeks converted by Paul. Many of them were in danger of returning to the vices of their former lives, once the enthusiasm of the first Christian years and had passed. Those responsible in the Church, were apparently not capable of dealing with many problems: internal divisions and doubts about faith. They therefore called upon Paul who wrote the present letter because he could not interrupt his work in Ephesus.

We notice the authority with which Paul, from afar, leads the Church in the name of Christ; also his manner of teaching: before answering any question, he reasserts the foundations of the faith.

The Corinthians, in the midst of a pagan world, were concerned about matters that are again relevant in our times:

- about celibacy and marriage
- about living together with those who do not share the Christian faith,
- about the conducting of the assemblies, for both the celebration of the Eucharist and the use of "spiritual gifts."
- about the resurrection of the dead.

Divisions among the faithful

+ ¹⁰ I beg of you, brothers, in the name of Christ Jesus, to agree among yourselves and do away with divisions; please be perfectly united, with one mind and one judgment.

¹¹ For I heard from people of Cloe's house about your rivalries. ¹² That is what I understand, because some say, "I am for Paul," and others: "I am for Apollo," or "I am for Peter," or "I am for Christ." ¹³ Is Christ divided or have I Paul been crucified for you? Have you been baptized in the name of Paul?

¹⁴ I thank God that I did not baptize any of you, except Crispus and Gaius, ¹⁵ so that no one can say that he was baptized in my name. ¹⁶ Yes, I also baptized the Stephanas family. Apart from these, I do not recall having baptized anyone else.

o From Paul called to be an apostle.... to God's church in Corinth... with those who everywhere call upon the name of our Lord Jesus. With these three expressions Paul defends his authority. He reminds the Corinthians, so easily entrenched in their rivalries, that they are part of a greater reality, the Universal Church of God.

Called to become holy. You have to become holy, but you are already. Holy, in the biblical sense, is the person or thing that belongs to God. The baptized have been consecrated to God and form part of the people who belong to God, the assembly of the holy ones, that is the Church. Indeed, these "holy ones" have to improve much more to be really holy, as we shall see in the letter.

In Christ. A single Greek preposition used by Paul is to be translated into English as in, or through or with according to the case. "In Christ" has many meanings:

- We are sons of God, made after the image of the only Son of God, and God loves us in Christ.

- God the Father saves us through Christ.

- The Father calls us to share with Christ his inheritance,

- We have become part of the body of Christ, we live in Christ and have received his Spirit.

- As the word "Christian" did not exist in that time, Paul often says "in Christ" to mean: Christian. So, to get married in Christ (ch. 7) means to be married as a Christian.

The folly of the cross

■ ¹⁷ For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to proclaim his Gospel And not with beautiful words! That would be like getting rid of the cross of Christ. ¹⁸ The language of the cross remains nonsense for those who are lost. Yet, for us who are saved, it is the power of God, ¹⁹ as Scripture says: will destroy the wisdom of the wise and I will demolish the reasoning of the learned. ²⁰ Masters of human wisdom, men of letters, philosophers there is no place for you! And the wisdom of this world? God let it fail ²¹ At first God spoke the language of wisdom, and the world did not know God in his wisdom. Then God thought of saving the world through the foolishness that we preach.

²² The Jews ask for miracles and the Greeks for a higher knowledge

In his advice to the Corinthians, Paul shows us how to act when reviewing the activities of our parish, of our apostolic group. Instead of being discouraged by the problems we face, and accusing one another when something fails, the first thing to do is to remember what we already have in common.

We see, in this text and all through this epistle conflicts, divisions and sins (4:8; 5:1; 6; 11:17 etc.). Quite often, as we experience in today's Church evil and conflicts, we tend to idealize the early Church. "Those Christians were devout and full of fervor," we say, "but the Church in the course of history lost her mystique, and now we are in decay." In fact the New Testament shows us communities which were as we are, confronting the same challenges and weaknesses. Each generation of Christians has to learn how to follow Jesus and how to be Church.

- + The first sin of the Church is the divisor among the believers. In the Church of Corinth each one uses the name of an apostle to back his aggressive behaviour or to form a group apart.

Agree among yourselves and do away with your divisions (10): be a united family. This admonition is understood when the Church is a community sharing the same concerns. But it is a little different when the church gathers together a great number of people of different backgrounds who are perhaps opposed in daily life. In this case the Christian community must be united, not by ignoring reality and never talki ²³ while we preach a crucified Messiah. For the Jews, what a great scandal! and for the Greeks, what nonsense! ²⁴ But he is Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God for those called by God among both Jews and Greeks.

²⁵ In reality, the "foolishness" of God is greater than the wisdom of men, and the "weakness" of God is stronger than men.

²⁶ Brothers and sisters, look and see whom God has called. Few among you can be said to be cultured or wealthy, and few belong to noble families. ²⁷ Yet God has chosen what the world considers foolish, to shame the wise; he has chosen what the world considers weak to shame the strong. ²⁸ God has chosen common and unimportant people, making use of what is nothing to nullify the things that are, ²⁹ so that no mortal may boast before God. ³⁰ But, by God's grace you are in Christ Jesus, who has become our wisdom, from God, and who makes us just and holy and free.

³¹ Scripture says: Let him who boasts boast of the Lord.

2 ¹ When I came to reveal to you the mystery of God's plan I did not count on eloquence or an intellectual approach. ² I was determined not to know anything among you but Christ Jesus, and him crucified. ³ I came weak, fearful and trembling; ⁴ my words and preaching were not brilliant, or clever to win listeners. ⁵ It was, rather, a demonstration of Spirit and power, so that you may believe, not by human wisdom, but by the power of God.

The Spirit teaches us wisdom

■ ⁶ In fact, we do speak of wisdom to the mature in the faith, although it is not a wisdom of this world or of its rulers, who, by the way, come to

30. Col 2, 3 31. Jer 9, 23; 2 Cor 10, 17; Gal 6, 24

6. Heb 5, 12; Col 2, 15

ing of inequalities, but by recognizing individual and collective faults in daily life. The Church can never be a reunion of passive or "heavenly" people.

Christ did not send me to baptize (17). When the church encloses itself in its own problems, Paul reminds them of their mission: Is our first concern to preach the Gospel, or to appear as leaders and ministers of the community?

■ This would be like getting rid of the cross of Christ (17). Don't look for titles, but bear the cross of Christ. The cross must be present in the message we preach and in the way we preach it. The means we choose to proclaim the Good News must be in accordance with the announcement of a Saviour poor and crucified.

We need faith to teach a life of poverty and renunciation that Christ presents to us. To the Jews waiting for a glorious saviour, Paul presented a crucified man who had been unable to free his nation. And they were scandalized. Today the active non-violence of the Church is a scandal for all those who think this way is ineffective and too slow for the problems surrounding us.

Likewise it is hard to work in evangelization with poor means, to be criticized by those living in peace with the world and to hope that God will give his grace where we act in weakness, without advertisement or human prestige.

See whom God has called (26). The Church of Corinth is formed of ordinary people: this is their strength. Everybody has his place and his mission in the Church. But ordinary people and poor communities, often persecuted and calumniated, have a primary role in the evangelization of the world. God wants them to evangelize the rich and at times, even the hierarchy.

○ I came weak, I was fearful and trembling. Paul gives us an example. One has to take risks if he wants to announce Christ. Several people want not to act before they are fully prepared. They learn all their life and broken down before having begun. When we feel confident and well prepared, we cannot be sure that God will take advantage of our words or give anyone inner conversion and make him one of his chosen.

It was a demonstration of Spirit and power (5). The power of Spirit, the power of prayer, the power of suffering. The Spirit is poured out after Jesus has suffered and died. But with him, we can expect everything. Healings and miracles are worthless (and the devil takes advantage of them) unless they affirm faith in Jesus crucified, acting through the humble and present in the poor.

■ Paul never intended to be considered a wise or eminent speaker by his audience. Yet he speaks of wisdom to the mature in the faith nothing. ⁷We teach the mystery and secret plan of divine wisdom, which God destined from the beginning to bring us to Glory.

⁸No ruler of this world ever knew this; otherwise they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory. ⁹But as Scripture says: Eye has not seen, ear has not heard, nor has it dawned on the mind what God has prepared for those who love him. ¹⁰God has revealed it to us, through his Spirit, because the Spirit probes everything, even the depth of God.

¹¹Who but his own spirit knows the secrets of a person? Similarly, no one but the Spirit of God knows the secrets of God. ¹²We have not received the spirit from the world, but the Spirit who comes from God and, through him, we understand what God in his goodness has given us.

¹³So we speak of this, not in terms of human wisdom, but with words taught by the Spirit of God, and we express spiritual matters in a spiritual language. ¹⁴He who remains on the human level does not understand the things of the Spirit. They are foolishness for him and he does not understand because they require a spiritual experience. ¹⁵On the other hand, the spiritual person judges everything but no one judges him. ¹⁶*Who has known the mind of God that he may teach him?* But we have the mind of Christ.

Many are the workers, the building is one

+ 3 ¹I could not, brothers, speak to you as spiritual persons but as men of flesh, for you are still infants in Christ. ²I gave you milk and no solid food, for you were not ready for it and up to now you cannot receive it ³for you are still men of flesh. As long as there is jealousy and strife, what can I say but that you are at the level of the flesh and behave like ordinary people.

⁴While one says: "I am from Paul," and the other: "I am from Apollos," what are you but people still at a human level?

⁵For, what is Apollos? What is Paul? They are servants and through (6). The text says in more precise terms: "to the perfect ones." At this time, several religions were calling "perfect" the believer who had received some secret information not given to all the members of the sect. Also in the Church some considered themselves as belonging to a higher class of believers because of some gifts of the Spirit they had received, especially if they were able to speak endlessly on matters of faith.

But Paul faces them with his own gifts as prophet and apostle. He can teach them those essential truths that don't need many words, but that should be expressed by him who has a deeper experience of the living God.

The Spirit of God knows the secrets of God (11). What is this secret of God? What he gives us (12). To know God means to know the ways of God and his plan of salvation. But ordinarily it is difficult to express what God has given us to know and experience, that is if our experience is really spiritual. We can only transmit spiritual wisdom to those who have reached spiritual maturity. Because of this, Paul tells the Christians of Corinth that most of them are not able to criticize him.

He who remains on the human level (Paul says precisely: "the carnal man") does not reach the truth of Christ. However the spiritual person, not necessarily the intellectual person, knows by gift of God the things of God.

The spiritual person judges everything and no one judges him. He who sees has no way of convincing the blind person that there are colors. He sees them, however, and knows that if the blind person does not see them, it is not because the thing is doubtful, but because the blind person has neither eyes nor criteria for that. It is the same with the spiritual person and the carnal one.

+ I laid the foundation as a good architect (10). Paul is a founder of churches and others come after him, apostles, prophets or teachers, to preach and encourage the people. Paul is not jealous, but it could be that some of them seek their own prestige, forgetting that the Church belongs only to God. It could also be that the believers compare one apostle with another, them you believed, as it was given by the Lord for each of them. ⁶I planted, Apollos watered the plant, but God made it grow. ⁷So neither he who plants nor he who waters is anything, but God who makes the plant grow.

⁸He who plants and he who waters work to the same end, and the Lord will pay each according to his work. ⁹We are fellow-workers with God, but you are God's field and building.

¹⁰I as a good architect, according to the capacity given to me, I laid the foundation, and another is to build upon it. Let each one be careful of how he works upon it. ¹¹No one could lay a foundation other than the one which is already laid, which is Jesus Christ. ¹²Then if someone builds with gold upon this foundation, another with silver and precious stones, or with wood, bamboo or straw, ¹³the work of each one will be shown for what it is. The day of Judgment will make it public, and fire will be the test for everyone. ¹⁴If your work withstands the fire, you will be rewarded;

¹⁵but if your work becomes ashes, you will pay for it. You will be saved, but it will be as if passing through fire.

■ ¹⁶Do you not know that you are God's temple, and that God's Spirit is within you? ¹⁷If anyone destroys this temple of God, God will destroy him. God's temple is holy, and you are this temple.

Do not divide the Church

◆ ¹⁸Let no one deceive himself. If anyone of you considers himself a wise man, let him become a fool, so that he may become wise. ¹⁹For the wisdom of this world is foolishness in God's eyes. To this, Scripture says: God catches the wise in his own wisdom. ²⁰It also says: The Lord knows the reasoning of the wise, that it is useless.

²¹Because of this, let no one become an admirer of any man, for everything belongs to you, ²²Paul, Apollos, Cephas – life, death, the present and the future. Everything is yours, ²³and you belong to Christ, and Christ is of God.

10. Eph 2, 20; 1 Per 2, 5	13. Is 1, 25; Mal 3, 2; Mt 3, 12	17. 6, 19; 2 Cor 6, 16
18. 1, 20; 4, 10	19. Job 5, 13	20. Ps 94, 11
		21. 1, 12
		23. Rom 8, 28

and do this readily inasmuch as they are ignorant of what apostolic work really is.

Fire will be the test for everyone (13). Paul uses the languages and images of his time. The day of God's judgment seemed to be imminent and everyone thought that God would purify and cleanse the world by fire. So Paul concludes that whatever we did not do according to the will of God and with the means he wanted will be destroyed by fire (remember what happened with many apostolic projects which produced no durable fruit). As for those who did not work with the one purpose of serving God, they will not be condemned to hell, of course, but they will suffer personally and will have to pay. This text supports the belief in Purgatory, that is, in a purification process at the time of death or after death for all persons not given entirely to the Spirit of Christ. See commentary on Mt 5:21.

■ Do you not know that you are God's temple (16). Christ is the new Temple that takes the place of the temple of the Jews (Jn 2:19 & Mk 15:38). The Temple of God is Christ because in him abides all the divine Mystery. The Temple of God is likewise the Church because in her the Holy Spirit is working. The Temple of God is also each home and each believer (see 6:19) because the Spirit lives in each one of them.

◆ Everything is yours and you belong to Christ. A fundamental affirmation which is the basis of Christian liberty. We are followers of no human person, great as he may be among the authorities of the Church. God made us for himself and no one can impose his own way of understanding the will of God.

On the other hand, remember what non-believing philosophers have said: Man created God out of his own misery. Whatever man was lacking in order to feel great and happy, he attributed to a superior being, who had everything, and in worshipping him, he felt identified with him and forgot his own misery. This theory is not completely false: in fact people make idols for themselves, be they singers, athletes or politicians; and they feel happy when their idols have and do everything they themselves cannot do or have. They die for causes not their own and they

4 ¹Let everyone then see us as the servants of Christ and the stewards of the secret works of God. ²Being stewards, faithfulness shall be demanded of us; ³but I do not mind if you or any human court judges me. I do not even judge myself; ⁴my conscience indeed accuses me of nothing, but that is not enough for me to be without reproach: the Lord is the one who judges me.

⁵Therefore, do not judge before the time, until the coming of the Lord. He will bring to light whatever was hidden in darkness and will disclose the secret intention of men's hearts. Then each one will receive from God the praise he deserves.

⁶Brothers, you forced me to apply these truths to Apollos and to myself. Learn by this example not to believe yourselves superior by siding with one against the other. ⁷How, then, are you different from the others? What have you that you have not received? And if you received it, why are you proud, as if you did not receive it?

Comforted Christians and harassed apostles

+ The Corinthians now feel rich in their faith, their knowledge and Christian experience. They do not need Paul anymore. Many of them now consider Paul as a poor Jewish itinerant preacher, below their level, Greeks of an ancient culture.

The Apostle knows that his own culture and strong personality would have given him a bright ⁹It seems to me that God has placed us, the apostles, in the last place, as if condemned to death, and as spectacles for the whole world, for the angels as well as for men.

¹⁰We are fools for Christ, while you show forth the wisdom of Christ. We are weak, you are strong. You are honoured, while we are despised.

¹¹Until now we hunger and thirst, we are poorly clothed and badly treated, while moving from place to place.

¹²We labour, working with our hands. People insult us and we bless them, they persecute us and we endure everything; ¹³they speak evil against us and we try to make peace. We have become like the scum of the earth, like the garbage of humankind until now.

¹⁴I do not write this to shame you, but to warn you as very dear sons.

¹⁵Because even though you may have ten thousand guardians in the Christian life, you have only one father; and it was I who gave you life in Christ through the Gospel. ¹⁶Therefore I advise you to follow my example.

¹⁷With this purpose I send to you Timothy, my dear son and trustworthy in the service of the Lord. He will remind you of my way of Christian life, as I teach it in all churches everywhere.

future. He sees at the same time the narrow mindedness of his adversaries but allows them to make fun of him. They think he is a fool, and in a way he is. However, even if taken for a fool he brought them to Christ.

■ Paul knows that such a sinner cannot be brought to repentance unless he experiences the bitterness of his treachery. So the community must ask that he suffer in his health and his belongings (see in Job 1:12 and 2:6 the meaning of delivered to Satan). This ex-communication is not merely a human gesture. What the Church binds on earth is bound in Heaven (Mt 18:18). God is committed to send trials which not visit you and became very arrogant. ¹⁹But I will visit you soon, the Lord willing, and I will see, not what those people say, but what they can do. ²⁰Because the kingdom of God is not a matter of words, but of power. ²¹What do you prefer, for me to go with a stick or with love and gentleness?

Expel the immoral brother!

5 ¹You have become news with a case of immorality, and such a case that is not even found among pagans. Yes, one of you has taken as wife his own step-mother. ²And you feel proud! Should you not be in mourning instead and expel the sinner. ³For my part, although I am physically absent, my spirit is with you and, as if present, I have already passed sentence on the man who committed such a sin. ⁴Let us meet together, you and my spirit, and in the name of our Lord Jesus and with his power, ⁵you shall deliver him to Satan, so that he loses everything and his life, but his spirit be saved in the day of Judgment.

⁶This is not the time to praise yourselves. Do you not know that a little yeast makes the whole mass of dough rise? ⁷Throw out, then, the old yeast and be a new dough. If Christ became our Passover, you should be unleavened bread. ⁸Let us celebrate, therefore, the Passover, no more old yeast, which is sin and perversity; let us have unleavened bread, that is purity and sincerity.

⁹In my last letter I instructed you not to associate with immoral people. ¹⁰I did not mean, of course, those who do not belong to the Church and who are immoral, exploiters, embezzlers or worshippers of idols. Otherwise you would have to leave this world. ¹¹What I really meant was to avoid and not to mingle with those who, calling themselves brothers, become immoral, exploiters or idolaters, gossips, drunkards or embezzlers. In which case you should not even eat with them.

¹²Why should I judge outsiders? But you, are you not to judge those who are inside? ¹³Let God judge those outside, but as for you, drive out the wicked person from among you.

Do not bring your brothers to court

6 ¹When you have a complaint against a brother, how dare you bring him before pagan judges instead of bringing his case may be at the same time a warning to the Church and a way of repentance for the sinner.

You should be unleavened bread (7). Jesus had compared the kingdom of Heaven to yeast that leavens the whole mass. Here Paul uses the same comparison to show how evil spreads to all. The believers have been spiritually raised with Christ. As the Jews used unleavened bread to celebrate the Passover, in the same way the Christians have to be, in a figurative sense unleavened bread, that is, they must lead a sinless life before God, and so worthily celebrate their Passover, which is the Resurrection of Christ.

I did not mean those who do not belong to the Church (10). The believer is not afraid to live among sinners. It is his mission to give light to those who are in darkness and to imitate Christ who ate with sinners. But he avoids sharing with those believers who continue to sin and are unrepentant.

Why should I judge outsiders? (12). Jesus taught us the way to follow, but we cannot demand of unbelievers that they understand and accept our morals regarding reconciliation, sex, abortion, as long as their conscience is unable to recognize the criteria of the Gospel. The authorities of the Church are not commissioned to condemn them, but to be witnesses of the light.

o Paul asks the believers to appoint one of the community to solve cases among them in a personal way, as the Gospel indicates (Mt 18:15). This has to be done in those Christian communities that have become genuine communities before the brethren of the Church? ²Do you not know that you shall one day judge the world? And if you are to judge the world, are you incapable of judging such simple problems?

³Do you not know that we will even judge the angels? And could you not decide on problems of this world?

⁴But no. For problems of the present life you go after men for whom the Church has no esteem. ⁵Shame on you! Is there not even one wise man among you who could be the arbiter among brothers?

⁶But no. A brother brings a suit against a brother, and he files that suit before unbelievers. ⁷It is already shameful that you have suits against each other. Would it not be better to suffer wrong and to receive some damage? ⁸But no. You wrong and damage others, and those are your brothers and sisters. ⁹Do you not know that the wicked will not inherit the Kingdom of God?

Do not deceive yourselves; those who have unlawful sexual relations, or worship idols, or who are adulterers, homosexuals of any kind, ¹⁰or thieves, exploiters, drunkards, gossips or embezzlers will not inherit the kingdom of Heaven. ¹¹Some of you were like that, but you have been cleansed and consecrated to God and are in friendship with God in the Name of Christ Jesus and the Spirit of our God.

Sexual immorality

◆ ¹²Everything is lawful for me, but not everything is to my profit. Everything is lawful for me, but I will not become a slave of anything.

¹³Food is for the stomach, and the stomach for food, but God will destroy them both. Yet, the body is not for sexual licentiousness, but for the Lord; and the Lord is for the body. ¹⁴And God who raised the Lord, will also raise us with his power.

¹⁵Do you not know that your bodies are part of Christ? And you would make that part of his body become a part of a prostitute? Never! ¹⁶But you well know that when you join yourselves to a prostitute, you become one with her. For Scripture says: The two will become one flesh. ¹⁷On the other ◆ Everything is lawful to me, not everything is to my benefit. Men without conscience used to quote the first part of this sentence to justify their immoral behaviour.

Food is for the stomach... the body is for the Lord. Paul contrasts what is purely biological in our body with what makes up our whole person. To eat and drink are requirements of the stomach (modern language: body). But in sexual union the body is given (modern language: person). This is why the believer who belongs to Christ cannot give himself to a prostitute.

Paul's answer to the Corinthians is the only answer to our concern with regard to sexual morality in a society which allows everything except killing and stealing. There is but one principle for the instruction of youth with regard to premarital sex and homosexuality – our body has been consecrated to Christ and is one with his own body.

○ In this chapter Paul begins to answer some of the questions put to him by the Corinthians in writing. The first are about marriage and chastity.

Christian life had encouraged everywhere the esteem for chastity. But that esteem could be inspired as well by other non-christian motives. Many doctrines in the Greek world considered evil and unclean whatever came from the body; and so, for some Christians, perfection meant living like angels, condemning among other things, marriage.

Paul does not teach everything on marriage, but only clarifies the relation between chastity and marriage. Spouses belong to Christ with all their being, consecrated by baptism. Therefore they cannot become slaves to the demands of their bodies. Love rather than sex guides them.

* Beware of having relations outside marriage (2). Many modern believers are shocked to see that Paul doesn't mention the positive aspect of sex, at the service of love, but only speaks of possible sins. But we must bear in mind that we are separated from Paul by twenty centuries. The understanding of the value of marriage and still more, of conjugal love, is a fruit of Christianity. Only in the twelfth century in Christian countries the conscience of love appears. This has unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband who believes. Otherwise, your children also would be apart from God; but as it is, they are consecrated to God.

¹⁵ Now, if the unbelieving husband or wife wants to separate, let them do so. In this case, the christian husband or wife is not bound, for the Lord has called us to peace. ¹⁶ Besides, are you sure, wife, that you could save your husband, and you, husband, that you could save your wife?

■ ¹⁷ Except for this, let each one continue living as he was when God called him. This is what I order in all churches. ¹⁸ Let the circumcised Jew not remove the marks of the circumcision when he is called by God, and let the non-Jew not be circumcised when he is called. ¹⁹ For it is of no importance to be circumcised or not, but only to keep the commandments of God.

²⁰ Let each one therefore, remain in the state in which he was when he was called by God. ²¹ If you are a slave, do not worry but, if you can gain your freedom, take the opportunity.

18. 1 Mac 1, 15; Rom 2, 25; Gal 5, 6	22. Eph 6, 6; Phlm 16	23. 6, 20	28. 7, 16; separation and divorce were legal and constantly practised.

Your children are also consecrated to God (14). Would it not be an error to think that the children of Christian parents are completely separated from God as long as they are not baptized? For grace has touched them already by the love, care and prayers of their parents. We must not use false arguments when we wish to convince Christians parents that they should have their children baptized.

■ Let each one continue living... (17). It seems as if Paul wants us to live in mediocrity without personal ambitions or desires of betterment. It is not so. He rather places personal freedom above anything else. For a believer the maximum good is to possess Christ.

But if you can gain your freedom, take the opportunity. Conditions of work and social life sometimes impede the following of the will of God and being truly free. But the faithful cannot ²² The slave called to believe in the Lord is a freedman of the Lord. And he who has been called while free, becomes slave of Christ. ²³ You have been bought by God at a very great price; do not become slaves of men.

²⁴ So then, brothers and sisters, in whatever state each was when called by the Lord, let him continue living before God.

Marriage and virginity

◆ ²⁵ With regard to those who remain virgins, I have no special commandment from the Lord, but I give some advice, hoping that I am worthy of trust by the mercy of the Lord.

²⁶ I think this is good in these hard times in which we live. It is good for a man to remain as he is. ²⁷ If you are married, do not try to divorce your wife; if you are not married, do not marry. ²⁸ He who marries, does not sin, nor does the young girl sin who marries. Yet they will experience trouble in ordinary life, and I would like to spare you.

²⁹ I say this, brothers and sisters: time is getting shorter, and those who are married must live as if not mar-have as sole objective in life the improvement of their social condition, because in each social situation there are hidden dangers of slavery. We know of people who become slaves of men in order to obtain a better salary or a higher position. And we easily confuse better condition with better paid work.

We translate: If you can gain your freedom, take the opportunity. But it could also be translated as: Even if you could gain your freedom, take advantage of the present situation, that is: instead of being concerned so much for the advantages of becoming a free man, live fully your life today.

◆ Paul remarks that marriage can be the cause of internal division for those who serve Christ. Many committed Christians well know that they cannot dedicate themselves as fully to the service of their brethren as they would wish, either because a partner does not understand or because they have to attend to family matters.

ried; ³⁰ those who weep as if not weeping; those who are happy as if they were not happy; those buying something as if they had not bought it, and those enjoying the present life as if they were not enjoying it. ³¹ For the order of this world is vanishing.

³² I would like you to be free from anxieties. He who is not married, is concerned about the things of the Lord and how to please the Lord. ³³ Instead, he who is married, is taken up with the things of the world and how to please his wife, and he is divided in his interests.

³⁴ Likewise, the unmarried woman and the virgin are concerned with the service of the Lord, to be holy in body and spirit. The married woman, instead, worries about the things of the world and how to please her husband.

³⁵ I say this for your own good. I do not wish to lay traps for you but to lead you to a beautiful life, and to be entirely united with the Lord.

o ³⁶ If anyone is not sure whether he is behaving correctly with his fiancée because of the ardor of his passion, and considers it is better to get married, let him do so: he commits no sin. ³⁷ But if another, of firmer heart, thinks that he can control his passion and decides not to marry so that his fiancée may remain a virgin, he does better. ³⁸ So then, he who marries does well, and he who does not marry does better.

³⁹ The wife is bound as long as her husband lives. If he dies, she is free to be married to whomsoever she wishes, provided that she does it in the Christian way. ⁴⁰ However, she will be happier if, following my advice, she does not marry, and I believe that I have the Spirit of God.

Can we share in pagan customs?

8 ¹ Regarding meat from the offerings to idols, I think that all of us have knowledge but knowledge puffs up, while love builds. ² If anyone thinks that he has knowledge, he does not yet know as he should know, ³ but whoever loves God, God has known him.

⁴ Can we, then, eat meat from offerings to the idols? We know that an idol is without existence and that there is no God but one. ⁵ People speak

Paul then defends the way of chastity "because of the kingdom of God" indicated by Jesus (Mt 19 12). In Corinth, the city of vice where thousands of prostitutes lived around the temples, as was the custom in pagan religions, the new Christian community was discovering the way of virginity. Paul does not give orders here, only advice, encouraging this way of life for those who have received the grace to follow it. And the fact that each baptized person is consecrated to Christ is for Paul sufficient reason to speak in favor of virginity.

For the order of this world is vanishing (31). No commitment or agreement, not even those of marriage, keep us tied to the world.

o If anyone is not sure (36). This can also be interpreted as: "if anyone feels he cannot behave correctly with his young virgin." In this case Paul would be referring to a trial of religious life, which in fact took place in the primitive church. Some Christians shared their house with a girl who could have been their girl-friend, both consecrating their virginity to the Lord. Paul, in this case, would invite them not to persevere in this commitment if they did not feel capable of keeping their virginity.

It is still possible to translate this as follows: "if someone (some father) thinks it would not be right to prevent his young daughter who lives with him from marrying." In that case the paragraph would refer to the father who, following the customs of the time, gave his daughter in marriage, but could also decide that she should remain a virgin.

■ We live in a pluralist society, where many do not share our faith and we wonder sometimes if we should take part in their feasts or activities that are not in harmony with our faith. For example, how to deal with relatives or neighbours of another religion? What a married woman may do when her husband does not share her scruples? May a person belong to a group or party indeed of other gods, in heaven and on earth and, in this sense, there are many gods and lords. ⁶ Yet for us, there is but one God, the Father, from whom everything comes, and to whom we go. And there is one Lord, Christ Jesus, through whom everything exists and through him we exist.

⁷ Not everyone, however, has that knowledge. For some persons who until recently took the idols seriously, that food remains linked to the idol and eating of it stains their conscience which is unformed.

⁸ It is not food that makes us agreeable to God. If we eat, we gain nothing, and if we do not eat, we do not lose anything. ⁹ We are free, of course, but let not your freedom cause others, who are less prepared, to fall. ¹⁰ What if this person with an unformed conscience sees you, a person of knowledge, sitting at the table in the temple of idols? Will not his weak conscience, because of your example, move him to eat also? ¹¹ Then with your knowledge you would have caused your weak brother or sister to perish, the one for whom Christ died? ¹² When you hurt the weak conscience of your brothers and offend them, you sin against Christ himself. ¹³ Therefore, if any food will bring my brother into sin, I shall never eat this food lest I bring my brother or sister fall.

Renouncing one's own rights: the example of Paul

9 ¹ As for me, am I not free? I am an apostle and I have seen Jesus, the Lord, and you are my work in the Lord. ² Although I may not be an apostle for others, at least I am one for you. You are in the Lord an evidence of my apostleship ³ and my defense against those who question my authority.

⁴ Now, have we not the right to be fed? ⁵ Have we not the right of bringing along with us a sister as do the other apostles and the brothers of the Lord, and Cefas? ⁶ Am I the only one, with Barnabas, bound to work?

What soldier goes to war at his own expense? ⁷ What farmer does not eat from the vineyard he planted? Who tends a flock and does not drink from its milk? ⁸ Are these rights only accepted human practice? No. The Law says the same. In the law of Moses it is written: Do not muzzle the ox which threshes grain. ⁹ Should this mean that God is concerned with oxen, ¹⁰ or rather with us? There is no when many of its members are opposed to the Church? This is the problem that Paul deals with when answering about meat sacrificed to idols. The discussion begun here continues in paragraph 10:23-11:1.

There were many sacrifices of animals in the pagan temples. After the sacrifices, in a room of the temple they used to celebrate at a banquet where the meat of the victims was served. Christians were often invited by their pagan friends to these banquets. On other occasions, meat from these sacrifices was offered to them in the homes of their pagan friends. Even in the public market, most of the meat was from the animals offered to idols.

Paul doesn't want the Christians to become a group of fanatics keeping themselves apart from society. Although it is true that offering sacrifice to idols is a sin, not for that reason is the meat unclean. False gods do not exist and have no power. Besides Jesus had said that it is not what enters into man that makes him unclean, but what comes out of his heart (Mk 7:15).

Knowledge puffs up while love builds (1). Well formed Christians could perfectly well eat of that meat, knowing it was not sinful. However it was their duty to respect the opinion of others and so avoid scandalizing those unable to understand their reasons.

In verses 7:10 and 11:12, Paul speaks of those of weak or unformed conscience, meaning the believers who have not yet had sufficient religious instruction or who have been badly instructed. They think that something is sinful when in reality it is not; or they are weak and follow others when their conscience reproaches them for doing so.

What if this person sees you sitting at the doubt that this was written for us. No man plows without expecting a reward for his plowing and no one threshes without hoping for a share of the crop. ¹¹ Then, if we have sown spiritual riches among you, would it be too much for us to reap some material reward? ¹² If others have had this right among you, surely we have it all the more.

Yet we made no use of this right and we prefer to endure everything rather than put an obstacle to the gospel of Christ. ¹³ Do you not know that those working in the sacred service eat from what is offered for the temple? and those serving at the altar receive their part from the altar. ¹⁴ The Lord ordered likewise, that those announcing the Gospel live from the Gospel. ¹⁵ Yet, I have not made use of my rights and now I do not write to claim them. I would rather die! For of this, I am proud, and no one will deprive me of this.

¹⁶ Look, I have no merit in announcing the Gospel, for I am bound to do it. Woe to me if I do not preach the Gospel! ¹⁷ If I preached voluntarily, I could expect my reward, but I am bound to do it and I am only fulfilling my office. ¹⁸ How can I, then, deserve a reward? In announcing the Gospel, I will do it freely without making use of the rights given to me by the Gospel.

¹⁹ So, finally, feeling free with everybody, I become everybody's slave in order to gain a greater number. ²⁰ To save the Jews I became a Jew with the Jews, and because they are under the Law, I myself came under the Law, being free from it. ²¹ With the pagans, not subject to the Law, I became one of them, although by being under the law of Christ, I also have a law with respect to God. Yet I wanted to gain those strangers to the Law. ²² I shared, also, the scruples of people without a liberated conscience, in order to gain those people who are still weak. ²³ So I made myself all things to all people, in order to save, by all possible means, some of them. I do it for the Gospel, and with the hope of sharing its reward.

Faith demands sacrifice

■ ²⁴ Have you not learnt anything from the stadium? Many run, but only one gets the prize. Run, therefore, in order to win it, ²⁵ as athletes who impose upon themselves a rigorous discipline. Yet for them the wreath is of table of the idols (10). There is something graver here. In chapter 10: 14-22 Paul will state that a Christian cannot partake of such a banquet in the temple itself. Now, he does not state it clearly, but cautiously, showing that this could be a cause of scandal for others.

+ Have we not the right to be fed? In asking the Corinthians to forget their right of eating sacrificed meat, Paul gives himself as an example and tells them how he also renounces his right of being maintained by the churches. The churches gave food and drink to the apostles who visited them, and took care of the Christian women attending them (5) as in the case of Jesus (Lc 8:2). However, to give a proof of detachment, Paul did not accept this favour and lived by the work of his hands (Acts 18:3).

I made myself all things to all people (23). Paul gives a guideline to apostles of all times. Apostolic movements require their members to know very well their environment and the problems of their companions. And so committed Christians must share the life style and human aspirations of their companions in everything that is not sinful. Becoming like Paul, "A Greek among the Greeks", not in appearance but in reality, they will be able not only to attract new members for their group or for the church (as the Jews did), but to implant the faith in the whole human person with his own culture.

■ Paul is now ready to tell the Corinthians that they may not share the cult of idols. To justify his position (for the Corinthians it was very strict), Paul presents two arguments:

- No racing contest is won without self-sacrifices.
- The Bible has many examples of how God punished those who practised a cult of idols.

laurels which wither, while for us, it does not wither.

²⁶ So, then, I run knowing where I go. I box but not aimlessly in the air.

²⁷ I punish my body and control it, lest after preaching to others, I myself should be rejected.

10 ¹ Let me remind you, brothers and sisters about our forefathers. All of them were under the cloud and all crossed the sea. ² They were in a way baptized in the cloud and in the sea to be the people of Moses, ³ and all of them ate from the same spiritual manna ⁴ and all of them drank from the same spiritual drink. For you know that they drank from a spiritual rock following them, and the rock was Christ. ⁵ However, most of them did not please God, and they died in the desert.

⁶ All of this happened as an example for us, so that we may not fall into evil desires, as they did.

⁷ Do not follow idols, as some of them did and Scripture says: The people sat down to eat and drink and stood up for orgy. ⁸ Let us not fall into sexual immorality, as some of them did and in one day twenty-three thousand of them fell dead. ⁹ And let us not tempt the Lord as some of them did, ¹⁰ and were cut down by the destroying angel.

¹¹ All these things happened as a warning for us, when the last times come upon us. ¹² Therefore, let he who thinks that he stands beware, lest he fall. ¹³ No trial greater than human endurance has overcome you. God is faithful and will not let you be tempted above your strength. He will give you, together with the temptation, the means to resist.

¹⁴ Therefore, dear friends, shun the cult of idols.

¹⁵ I address you as intelligent persons; judge what I say. ¹⁶ The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a communion with the blood of Christ? And the bread that we break, is it not a communion with the body of Christ?

¹⁷ The bread is one, and so we, though many, form one body, sharing the one bread.

¹⁸ Consider the Israelites. For them, to eat of the victim is to come into communion with its altar.

¹⁹ I do not say that the meat is really consecrated to the idol, or that the idol is a being. ²⁰ However, when the pagans offer a sacrifice, the sacrifice goes to the demons, not to God. I do not want you to come into fellowship with demons. ²¹ You cannot drink at the same time from the cup of the Lord and from the cup of demons. You cannot share in the table of the Lord and in the table of the demons. ²² Do we want, perhaps, to provoke the jealousy of the Lord? Could we be stronger than he?

Athletes impose upon themselves a rigorous discipline (25). Like them, we must renounce many things that are not evil. We need discipline to be really free, whether in the use of alcohol or tobacco, and not idly waste time in front of the television or reading magazines. While the world lures us to be spectators and consumers, we must be agents of salvation, the salt of the earth. The second paragraph recalls the example of Israel (see Ex 32 and Num 21).

The rock was Christ (1). The Jewish legends said that the rock mentioned in Ex 17:5 followed the Israelites in their journey. Paul does not affirm that legend as true. He only recalls it as an image of Christ, present in his church.

◆ The bread that we break is a communion with the body of Christ (16). Paul will return to speak of the Eucharist in 11:18. This mysterious meeting with the Risen Christ, besides being a personal encounter with Christ, makes of all of us one body. We form one body. This does not only mean that we feel united, but that the Risen

¹³ Judge for yourselves: is it proper for a woman to pray without a veil?

¹⁶ If some of you want to argue, let it be known that it is not our custom nor the custom in the churches of God.

The Lord's supper

■ ¹⁷ To continue with my advice, I cannot praise you, for your gatherings are not for the better but for the worse.

¹⁸ First, as I have heard, when you gather together, there are divisions among you and I partly believe it. ¹⁹ There may have to be different groups among you, so that it plainly appears who are approved among you.

²⁰ Your gatherings are no longer the Supper of the Lord, ²¹ for each one eats his own food and, while one is hungry, the other is getting drunk.

²² Do you not have houses in which to eat and drink? Or perhaps you despise the Church of God and desire to humiliate those who have nothing? What shall I say? Shall I praise you? For this I cannot praise you.

²³ This is the tradition of the Lord that I received and that in my turn I have handed on to you; the Lord Jesus, on the night that he was delivered, took bread and, ²⁴ after giving thanks, broke it, saying, "This is my body which is broken for you; do this in memory of me." ²⁵ In the same manner, taking the cup after the supper, he said, "This is the new Covenant in my blood. Whenever you drink from it, do it in memory of me."

²⁶ So, then, whenever you eat of this bread and drink from this cup, you are proclaiming the death of the Lord until he comes. ²⁷ Therefore, if anyone eats of the bread and drinks from the cup of the Lord unworthily, he sins against the body and blood of the Lord.

²⁸ Let each one, then, examine equality proclaimed by Jesus and tries to turn back (11-12).

By the way Paul ends the discussion, we see that he himself was aware of the weakness of his arguments. Was he assured that the angels in charge of the order in the world would be shocked on seeing women's liberation (10)?

■ Without making any transition Paul passes to the most important act of the Christian assembly, the Eucharist. These lines are the oldest testimony relating to the Supper of the Lord, and were written in the year 55 A.D. some years ahead of the gospels.

The community gathered around the same table. After the supper, solemnized by the singing of the psalms, the leader of the community said a prayer of thanksgiving, remembering the last supper of Jesus, and repeated his words to consecrate the body and blood of Christ. Then everyone received communion from the same bread and the same cup.

In 10:16 Paul recalled two aspects of the Lord's Supper:

– It is the communion of the body and blood of the Lord.

– It affirms a union of love among all: we form one body.

Here Paul denounces the Corinthians for their sin with regard to these two points.

Each one eats his own food. In order not to share with a brother who is poorer and brought less, or to avoid the company of someone who belongs to another group.

Another is getting drunk and therefore not in condition to receive the body of Christ.

In not recognizing the body (29). This term points out at the same time:

– he who does not distinguish consecrated bread from ordinary bread and does not receive it with due respect, as the body of Christ.

– he who ignores his brothers in the celebration of the Eucharist. He does not recognize the body of Christ as formed by all the assembled Christians.

The Eucharist is the center and the heart of the life of the Church, which is, before else, a fellowship. The Church is not only an instrument for spreading the Good News, but is also the place here on earth where people can already experience the union between themselves and with Christ.

himself before eating of the bread and drinking from the cup. ²⁹ Otherwise, he eats and drinks his own condemnation in not recognizing the Body.

³⁰ This is the reason why so many among you are sick and weak and several have died. ³¹ If we examined and corrected ourselves, the Lord would not have to act against us. ³² The Lord's strokes are to correct us, so that we may not be condemned with this world.

³³ So, then, brothers, when you gather for a meal, wait for one another ³⁴ and, if someone is hungry, let him eat in his own house. In this way you will not gather for your common condemnation. The other instructions I shall give when I go there.

Spiritual gifts and harmony

12 ¹ With respect to the spiritual gifts, I will remind you of the following. ² When you were still pagans, you went to your dumb idols as people possessed. ³ I tell you that no man inspired by the Spirit of God may say, "A curse on Jesus" as no one can say "Jesus is the Lord," except by the Holy Spirit.

⁴ There is diversity of gifts, but the Spirit is the same. ⁵ There is diversity of ministries, but the Lord is the same. ⁶ There is diversity of works, but the same God works in all.

⁷ The Spirit reveals in each one his presence with a gift which is also a service. ⁸ To one is given to speak with wisdom, through the Spirit. Another teaches according to the same Spirit. ⁹ To another is given faith, in which the Spirit acts; to another the gift of healing, and it is the same Spirit. ¹⁰ Another works miracles, another is a prophet, another recognizes what comes from the good or evil spirit; another speaks in tongues, and still another interprets what has been said in tongues. ¹¹ And all of this is the work of the one and only Spirit, who gives to each one as he so desires.

You are proclaiming the death of the Lord till he come (26). All the Eucharists celebrated around the world each day and every minute of the day, remind us that the death of Christ fills up the time until his coming.

History cannot cease, nor civilization be stagnant as happened in past centuries. Not only does technical progress force us to advance, but also the requirements of justice. Those resulting from the death of the innocent (and here God is the innocent) destroy in time all established order. This death does not allow the world to rest or have peace. The Church reminds us of the death of Christ, not as preserving the past, but drawing from this unique event new energies for both reconciling and condemning.

That is why there are so many sick (30). The Lord uses many signs to admonish us. Sometimes through personal illness; more usually, through the weakness and spiritual anaemia of the Church. Respecting the exigencies of a worthy celebration of the Eucharist would be sufficient to renew the Church.

◆ In the Church of Corinth the Holy Spirit reveals his presence by giving many believers spiritual gifts. All marvel when some of them, touched by the Spirit, begin praising God with words understood by no one. And they feel still more the presence of God when a prophet reveals to another what is on his conscience or gives to someone a special message from God.

Paul intervenes in two ways. First to establish order. Pagans went wild in the frenzied celebration of their feasts, while the Spirit makes everyone more responsible. When a frenzied individual cried out what was senseless or scandalous, it was a proof that he was not inspired.

Paul reminds us that the gifts of the Spirit (sometimes called charismas), have several aspects. There are gifts, especially evident in miracles. But there are also ministries (5), that is services, as is evident in the leading of a community. These should also be called works, because in them man must not praise himself, but all must be seen as the work of God.

If we only said that these services come from Christ, people might think that most important in the Church is the authority of those who govern in the name of Christ and at times are considered his "vicars". But these gifts and ministries are also related to the Holy Spirit. The Spirit blows where he pleases and multiplies among believers of simple heart gifts and initiatives that renew the church. The mission of the ministers

Comparison with the body

ο ¹²As the body is one, having many members, and all the members, while being many, form one body, so it is with Christ. ¹³All of us, whether Jews or Greeks, slaves or free men, have been baptized in one Spirit to form one body and all of us have been given to drink from the one Spirit.

¹⁴The body is not one member, but many. ¹⁵Even though the foot says, "I do not belong to the body for I am not a hand," it continues to be part of the body. ¹⁶Even though the ear says, "I do not belong to the body for I am not an eye," it continues to be part of the body. ¹⁷If all the body were eye, how would we hear? And if all the body were ear, how would we smell?

¹⁸God has arranged all the members, placing each part of the body as he pleased. ¹⁹If all were the same part where would the body be? ²⁰But there are many members and one body. ²¹The eye cannot tell the hand, "I do not need you," nor the head tell the feet, "I do not need you."

²²Still more, the parts of our body that we most need are those that seem to be the weakest; ²³the parts that we consider lower are treated with much care ²⁴and we cover them with more modesty because they are less presentable, whereas the others do not need such attention. ²⁵God himself arranged the body in this way, giving more honour to those parts that need it, so that the body may not be divided, but rather each member may care for the others. ²⁶When one suffers, all of them suffer, and when it receives honour, all rejoice together.

²⁷Now, you are the body of Christ

12. Rom 12, 4

27. Rom 12, 5; Eph 5, 30

(bishops, priests or lay ministers) is not principally to govern and command the Church, but to recognize the true work of the Spirit in the community.

He shares them as he pleases (11). The Spirit gives the Church what it needs at the right place and the right time. These paragraphs speak of the concerns of the Church of that time, very different from ours today. The Spirit is leading the Church now towards the building of a world of justice and peace and many believers have received spiritual gifts which, without being apparent in miracles, inspire their exemplary and fruitful lives. Whereas, in those early times, the newly converted Christians discovered that God was among them. Through gifts of prophecy, wisdom, teaching, the Church unfolded day by day the innumerable consequences of the death and resurrection of Christ.

The same Spirit... the same Lord... the same God. God is the fountain of the various gifts granted to the Church and is also the model of how diversity may be coupled with unity.

ο A detailed comparison with the body helps us to understand what the Church is, showing at the same time how we must compliment and respect each other.

We cannot have a true community unless each of us shares in its life, placing his talents at the service of others. Even the most humble, poor and uneducated Christian may have riches of a moral or artistic order, with which he is able to serve his brothers and sisters. As soon as one is really committed to a Christian life, the spirit awakens in him new and sometimes unsuspected capabilities. If we pay attention to the riches of our brothers and sisters, and awaken in them the consciousness of their dignity and responsibility, we shall see a new resurgence in the Church, fruit of the Spirit. It would take too long to recall the harm done to the Church in some places because of the passivity of the Christian people in a clericalized church.

At the end of the paragraph Paul lists the various gifts according to their importance. First, not what appears more miraculous, but what is most constructive for the Church. That is why the apostles occupy the first place. These are, not only the twelve chosen by Jesus, but also those who like them and accepted by them, are founding new communities and governing those already existing. Then, in second place, come the prophets, who not only announce words of God, but strengthen the community with the gifts of faith and wisdom which inspire their preaching.

In the last place are those who receive the gift of speaking in tongues, although in Corinth it was as if they had already reached Heaven.

+ I will show you a much better way (12:31). As the Corinthians marvelled at the spectacular and wonderful things worked by the Spirit, Paul tells them that the only important thing is the ability to love.

'Love or charity? At the beginning both words meant the same thing. But later on, the word "charity" came to mean the help given in the form of alms, although the giving of alms alone and each of you individually is a member of it.²⁸ So God has appointed us in the Church. First apostles, second prophets, third teachers. Then come miracles, then the gift of healing, material help, administration in the Church and the gift of tongues.

²⁹Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Can all perform miracles,³⁰ or cure the sick, or speak in tongues, or explain what was said in tongues?³¹ Set your hearts on the most precious gifts. But I will show you a much better way.

No gift higher than love

+13 ¹If I could speak all the tongues of men and of angels, but were given no love, I would only be sounding brass or clanging cymbals. ²If I had prophecy, knowing secret things with all kinds of knowledge, and faith great enough to remove mountains, but had no love, I would be nothing. ³If I gave everything I had to the poor, and even gave up my own body, but only to receive praise and not through love, it would be of no value to me.

⁴Love is patient, kind, without envy. It is not boastful or arrogant. It is not ill-mannered nor does it seek its own interest. ⁵Love withstands anger and forgets offenses. ⁶It does not take delight in wrong, but rejoices with the truth. ⁷Love excuses everything, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.

⁸Love will never end. Prophecies may cease, tongues be silent and knowledge disappear. ⁹For knowledge grasps the truth imperfectly and prophecy as well. ¹⁰And when what is perfect comes, everything imperfect will pass away. ¹¹When I was a child I thought and reasoned like a child, but when I grew up, I gave up childish ways. ¹²Likewise, at present, we see dimly as in a faulty mirror, but then we shall see face to face. Now, we know in part, but then I will know Him as He knows me. ¹³Now we have faith, hope and love, these three, but the greatest of these is love.

Gifts of prophecy and tongues

+14 ¹Strive, then, for love and set your hearts on spiritual is not real love. On the other hand, for many people, true love is only that of a man and a woman. So it is indifferent whether we say charity or love, but we have rather to clarify what love really is. Paul does just that in the present text.

If I could speak... if I had... To love is more important than performing miracles, more important than doing great things for others and dying for a cause, all of which can be done without love.

Love will never end. Love is the only thing that we shall take with us on passing to a better life. Only on love in our life shall we be judged.

When I was a child (11). This comparison tells us that our life of faith is only a preparation and prelude to what we shall be in Heaven. Heaven is to see God face to face. Then, everything we have now will vanish and only love will remain. In the measure that we are able to love God and our neighbour in the present life, in that measure shall we share, after resurrection, the Glory of God, face to face.

Faith, hope, love (13). Paul quite often joins these three "virtues," that is the three movements of the Christian soul. In no other place does he state this more clearly than here. There is no authentic love without faith and hope.

The greatest of the three is love. Sometimes this sentence is used to misrepresent what is essential to Christian life. For many say, "I do good to my neighbour, what else does God ask of me? But it would not be difficult to prove that such a love is very limited, selfish and impure. This "love" is unable to transfigure our life making us the transparency of Christ. Love will be everything when it reaches its perfection, that is, when we see God: I will know him as he knows me. As long as we do not see God, love is immature; this is the time when love must grow through the faith and knowledge of God's word; also through hope and perseverance as we follow Jesus poor, free and in the midst of trials.

■ It seems that the assemblies in Corinth were very disorderly. People did not wait for their turn gifts, especially that you may prophesy.² He who speaks in tongues does not speak to people, but to God, for no one understands him; the spirit makes him say things that are not understandable.³ The prophet, instead, addresses all people to give them strength, encouragement and consolation.⁴ He who speaks in tongues strengthens himself, but the prophet builds the Church.

⁵ Would that all of you spoke in tongues! But, better still if you were all prophets. The prophet has the advantage over the one speaking in tongues unless someone explains what was spoken, so that everyone may profit.⁶ Look, brothers, if I go to you and I speak in tongues, of what use will it be to you if I do not bring you some revelation, knowledge, prophecy or teaching?

⁷ When someone plays the flute, or harp, or any musical instrument, if there are not tones and notes, who will recognize the tune?⁸ And if the bugle call is not clear, who will get ready for battle?⁹ The same with you. If your words are not understood, who will know what is said? You will be talking to the moon.¹⁰ There are many languages in the world, and each of them has meaning¹¹ but, if someone talks to me in a language that I do not understand, I become a foreigner to the speaker, and the speaker to me.

¹² As you set your heart on spiritual gifts, be eager to build the Church and you will receive abundantly.¹³ Because of this, he who speaks in tongues should ask God for the ability to explain what he says.

¹⁴ When I am praying in tongues, my spirit prays, but my mind remains idle.¹⁵ What shall I do, then? I will pray with the spirit and I will pray with my mind. I will sing with the spirit and I will sing with the mind.¹⁶ If you praise God only with your spirit, how will the ordinary person add the "Amen" to your thanksgiving? Since he has not understood what you said.¹⁷ Your thanksgiving was indeed beautiful, but it was useless for others.

¹⁸ I give thanks to God because I speak in tongues more than all of you¹⁹ but, when I am in the assembly, I prefer to say five words from my mind, which may teach others, than ten thousand words in tongues.

²⁰ Brothers and sisters, do not remain as children in your thinking. Be like infants in doing evil, but mature in your thinking.²¹ God says in the Law: I will speak to this people through men talking other tongues and through lips of foreigners, but to speak, but spoke at the same time, especially the women. Paul invites them to be silent. Those with spectacular gifts felt more important and did not respect the most elementary order. Some who pretended to be inspired spoke and acted very strangely and at times shamefully.

4. Acts 15, 32 5. Num 11, 29 15. Eph 5, 19

Paul establishes an order of priority, giving preference to those gifts that most help to strengthen the Church. He compares the Church to a building. We build it when we help others to grow, to be better and more united. And what makes a person better is charity, and not the performance of extraordinary gifts and charismas, as miracles, languages and such like. This is why Paul has just emphasized charity as the paramount gift. This is why extraordinary performances do not mean holiness; God can use anybody, even sinners and non-Catholics, to perform for other's benefit. The truth of a religion does not rely on the fact its preachers can heal the sick or do similar things, therefore filling stadiums and impressing large audiences. It relies on its fidelity to the teaching of the Apostles, as found in the Church.

The spirits of the prophets are submitted to the prophets (32). What comes from the Spirit always blends with what comes from man. Those who think they are inspired must be careful not to lessen what comes from the Spirit with their own beliefs and desires. No inspiration allows us to disregard our brethren or rightful authority.

There are several reasons for thinking that vv. 34-35 were not written by Paul but were added later on by someone else.

16. 2 Cor 1, 20 20. Eph 4, 14 21. Is 28, 11

even so my people will not listen to me. ²² So, speaking in tongues is a signal for those who refuse to believe, not for those who believe, while prophecy is a signal for those who believe, not for those who refuse to believe.

²³ Imagine that the whole Church is gathered together and all speak in tongues when unbelievers and uninformed people enter. What will they think? That you are crazy. ²⁴ Instead, suppose that each of you speaks as a prophet; as soon as an unbeliever or an uninformed person enters, all of you call him to account and disclose his most secret thinking. ²⁵ Then, falling on his face, he will have to worship God and declare that God is among you.

²⁶ What then shall we conclude, brothers? When you gather, each of you can take part with a song, or a teaching, a revelation or by speaking in tongues, or interpreting what has been said in tongues. But let all this build the Church.

²⁷ Are you going to speak in tongues? Let two or three, at most, speak, each in turn, and let one interpret what was said. ²⁸ If there is no interpreter, hold your tongues and speak to God.

²⁹ As for the prophets, let two or three speak, with the others commenting on what has been said. ³⁰ If a revelation comes to one of those sitting by, let the first be silent. ³¹ Even all of you could prophesy, one by one, for the instruction and encouragement of all. ³² The spirits speaking through prophets are submitted to prophets, ³³ because God is not a God of confusion, but of peace.

³⁴ (Let women be silent in the assemblies, as in all the churches of the saints. They are not allowed to speak. Let them be submissive as the Law commands. ³⁵ If there is anything they desire to know, let them consult their husbands at home. For it is shameful for a woman to speak in Church.)

³⁶ Did the word of God, perhaps, come from you? or did it come only to you? ³⁷ If someone among you thinks that he is a prophet or a spiritual man, he should acknowledge that what I am writing to you is the Lord's command. ³⁸ If he does not recognize that, God will not recognize him.

³⁹ So, then, brothers, set your hearts on the gift of prophecy, and do not forbid speaking in tongues. ⁴⁰ However, everything should be done in a fitting and orderly way.

Resurrection is a fact

15 ¹ Let me remind you, brothers and sisters, of the Good News that I preached to you and which you received and on which you stand firm. ² By that Gospel you are saved, provided that you hold to it as I preached it. Otherwise, you will have believed in vain.

³ In the first place, I have passed on to you what I myself received: that Christ died for our sins, as Scripture says; ⁴ that he was buried; that he was ◆ Let me remind you of the Good News. I remind you of the unique event that brings happiness to humankind: a man has risen from among the dead and he will raise us. This is the heart of the Christian message.

I have passed on to you in the first place (3). It is not a story, or a novel, but a fact. And the apostles are witnesses of this. Paul recalls several apparitions of Jesus; what impresses us most is perhaps that of the five hundred who saw Jesus on one occasion (this letter was written twenty five years after that event).

How some of you say that there is no resurrection (11). Many in Corinth thought that after death the immortal soul goes on living alone, forgetting its past and everything material. Others thought that everything ends with death: see 1 Thes 5:13.

raised on the third day, according to the Scriptures; ⁵ that he appeared to Cephas and then to the Twelve. ⁶ Afterwards he appeared to more than five hundred brothers together; most of them are still alive, although some have already gone to rest. ⁷ Then he appeared to James and after that to all the apostles. ⁸ And last of all, he appeared to me also, the one born abnormally. ⁹ For I am the last of the apostles, and I do not even deserve to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God. ¹⁰ Nevertheless I am, by the grace of God, what I am, and his goodness towards me has not been without fruit. Far from it, I have toiled more than them all, although not I, rather the grace of God in me.

¹¹ Now, whether it was I or they, this we preach and this you believed.

¹² Well, then, if Christ is preached as risen from the dead, how can some of you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? ¹³ If there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ has not been raised. ¹⁴ And if Christ has not been raised, our preaching is empty and our belief comes to nothing. ¹⁵ And we become false witnesses of God, who have declared that God has raised Christ; yet he did not raise him inasmuch as the dead are not raised. ¹⁶ If the dead are not raised, neither has Christ been raised. ¹⁷ And if Christ has not been raised, your faith gives you nothing, and you are still in sin. ¹⁸ Also those who fall asleep in Christ have not been saved. ¹⁹ If it is only for this life that we hope in Christ, we are the most unfortunate of all men.

Christ gave us the way

o ²⁰ But no, Christ has been raised from the dead. He is the first, and the first fruits of those who have fallen asleep. ²¹ A man brought death; a man also brings resurrection of the dead. ²² All die for being Adam's, and in Christ all will receive life. ²³ However, each one in his own time: first Christ, then Christ's people, when he visits them.

²⁴ Then the end will come, when Christ delivers the Kingdom to God the Father, after having destroyed every rule, authority and power. ²⁵ For he must reign and put all enemies under his feet. ²⁶ The last enemy to be destroyed will be death, ²⁷ as Scripture say: God has subjected everything under his feet.

When we say that everything is put under his feet, we exclude, of course, the Father who subjects everything to him. ²⁸ When the Father has subjected everything to him, the Son, then, will o All die for being from Adam (22). See commentary on Rom 5:12 about Adam and Christ. Because of sin, death, as we know it, goes against the vocation of man, son of God. If sin did not exist, perhaps there would still be death, but not as we have now, painful and cruel, and not freely accepted.

Christ, the first of those who have fallen asleep (20). Paul, like the first Christians, prefers to say asleep rather than "dead," because in using this word he better expresses the hope of resurrection.

The last enemy to be destroyed will be death (26). The victory of humankind goes much further than universal peace and justice.

God will be all in all, and man will enter with Christ into his Glory, that is, he will be transformed, becoming God with God without losing his own, human personality. This surpasses whatever could be dreamed or hoped for.

Why are they baptized for the dead? (29). Perhaps some of them were concerned for the fate of their parents who died without knowing the Gospel, and were baptized in their name. Paul does not give his opinion about this practice. He only takes the opportunity it gives him to argue in favor of the resurrection.

+ Some of you will ask: How will the dead rise? (35). We cannot imagine it. Where will they be? Why should we have a body if we are going place himself under Him who subjects everything. From then on, God will be all in all.

²⁹ Otherwise, what are these people doing who are baptized on behalf of the dead? If the dead cannot be raised, why do they want to be baptized for the dead?

³⁰ As for us, why do we risk constantly our life? For death is my daily companion. ³¹ I say that, brothers and sisters, before you who are my pride in Christ Jesus our Lord. ³² Was it for nothing more than human interest, that I fought in Ephesus like a lion tamer? If the dead are not raised, let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we shall die!

³³ Do not be deceived; bad theories corrupt good morals. Wake up, and do not sin, ³⁴ because some of you are outstandingly ignorant about God; I say this to your shame.

The body after the Resurrection

+ ³⁵ Some of you will ask: How will the dead be raised? With what kind of body will they come?

³⁶ You fools! What you sow cannot sprout unless it dies. ³⁷ And what you sow is not the body of the future plant but a bare grain of wheat or any other seed, ³⁸ and God will give the appropriate body, as he gives to each seed its own body. ³⁹ Now look: not all flesh is the same; one is the flesh of men; another the flesh of animals, and still others the flesh of birds and of fish. ⁴⁰ There are, likewise, heavenly bodies and earthly bodies but the earthly bodies do not shine as do the heavenly ones. ⁴¹ The brightness of the sun differs from the brightness of the moon and the stars, and the stars differ from one another in brightness.

⁴² It is the same with the resurrection of the dead. The body is sown in decomposition; it will be raised never more to die. ⁴³ It is sown in humiliation, and it will be raised for Glory. They buried it in weakness, but the resurrection shall be with power. When buried, it is a natural body, but it will be raised a spiritual body. ⁴⁴ For there shall be a spiritual body as there is at present a living body.

⁴⁵ Scripture says: Adam, the first man, was created a living being, but the last Adam has become spirit that gives life. ⁴⁶ The spirit does not appear first, but the natural life, and afterwards comes the spirit. ⁴⁷ The first man comes from the earth and is earthly, while the second one comes from heaven. ⁴⁸ As it was with the earthly man, so is it with the earthly people. As it is with Christ, so with the heavenly. ⁴⁹ Just as we are bearing the image of the earthly man, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly man.

to live "like angels" (Mk 12:25)?

What you sow is not the body of the future plant (37). Jesus had spoken of the grain that is sown (Jn 12:24). With this example he destroyed those primitive ideas that some people still have nowadays: that angels will come to gather the dust of the dead, that corpses will come out of their tombs. In reality, our present body is the grain and the risen body, the spike or ear, will not be the recombination of the actual body that is put in the earth.

A spiritual body (44). Resurrection comes from inside, like a transfiguration. Each one will have the body he has deserved, the body that better expresses what he has come to be before God. And because we do hope for such a transformation of our person, let us try from now on to raise our lifestyle.

The other life will be in a certain way a continuation of our present life, as an ear of wheat comes from a grain of wheat. Risen man will be the same person with all his personality, marked by his past actions, by everything that made him mature – not without reason did the risen Christ will to show his glorious body with the wounds of his Passion. And because the human person was not created alone, but has been related and united in life to other persons, we shall be spe-

The day of Resurrection

⁵⁰ This I say, brothers: Flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom of God; nothing of us that is to decay can reach imperishable life. ⁵¹ So I want to teach you this mystery: Although not all of us will die, all of us have to be transformed, ⁵² in an instant, at the sound of the trumpet. You have heard of the last trumpet. Then in a twinkling of an eye, the dead will be raised imperishable, while we shall be transformed. ⁵³ For it is necessary that our mortal and perishable being put on the life that knows neither death nor decay.

⁵⁴ When our perishable being puts on imperishable life, when our mortal being puts on immortality, the word of Scripture will be fulfilled: Death has been swallowed up by victory. ⁵⁵ Death, where is your victory? Death, where is your sting?

⁵⁶ Sin is the sting of death to kill, and the Law made sin more powerful. ⁵⁷ But give thanks to God who gives us the victory through Christ Jesus, our Lord.

⁵⁸ So then, my dear brothers and sisters, be steadfast and do not be moved. Improve constantly in the work of the Lord, knowing that with him your labour is not without fruit.

Commendations and greetings

■ 16 ¹ With regard to the collection in favor of the saints, follow the rules that I gave to the churches of Galatia. ² Every Sunday, let each of you put aside what he is able to spare, so that no collection need be made when I come. ³ Once I am with you, you will choose the persons whom I may accredit with letters to take your gifts to Jerusalem. ⁴ And if it seems better for me to go, they will go with me.

⁵ I will visit you after passing through Macedonia, for I want to go through Macedonia only. ⁶ I would like to stay with you for a while, and perhaps I will spend the winter so that you may help me on my way whenever I go. ⁷ I do not want to see you now just in passing, for I really hope to stay with you, if the Lord permits. ⁸ But I will stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, ⁹ because I have great op-cially united with those whom we loved on this earth and who helped us to grow.

Not all flesh is the same flesh (39). Paul explains that one same word can express many different things that have some likeness. For example, the word "light" is used to designate the very different ways in which the sun, the moon and stars, each shine with its own special color. During Paul's time the word "body" was used for many things, even to designate the sun and the stars, called "heavenly bodies." So, when it is said that the dead are raised with their own body, this doesn't mean with the same shape (with arms and legs and hair...) or the same life, although it will be the same person.

Not all of us will die (51) Paul thinks that Christ is to return soon. On this supposition, he says that those who are alive when Christ returns will not have to "travel" with him to Heaven (that would be a materialist image), but to be transformed. Resurrection is not simply to live again as happened with Lazarus.

Earthly man... heavenly man... (45-49). Each of us has now a double inheritance: for while we are part of humankind by our nature (this is meant by Adam, the earthly man); we are also members of the immense community of the "born again" that is invisibly woven around Christ.

Sunday, the first day of the Jewish week. See in Acts 2:7. During the time of Paul the Christians had changed the Saturday (or Sabbath) of Moses and of the Jews for the Sunday, the day of the resurrection of Christ.

It can be seen that the Christians of Corinth were forming a real and true Church, because in spite of all their defects, it was a community where all were active members, ready to solve together the problems of their lives "in Christ."

my letter, but only what you can read and understand. ¹⁴I trust that what you now only partly realize, you will come to understand fully, and so be proud of us, as we shall also be proud of you on the Day of the Lord Jesus.

¹⁵With this assurance, I wanted to go and visit you first, and this should have been a double blessing for you.

¹⁶And from there I thought of going to Macedonia, and then from Macedonia, of coming back to you, that you might send me on my way to Judea.

¹⁷Have I planned this without thinking at all? Or do I change my decisions on the spur of the moment, so that I am between No and Yes?

¹⁸God knows that our dealing with you is not Yes and No, ¹⁹just as the Son of God, Christ Jesus, whom we – Silvanus, Timothy and I – preach to you, was not Yes and No; with him it was simply Yes. ²⁰In him all the promises of God have come to be a Yes, and we also say in his name; Amen!, giving thanks to God. ²¹God himself strengthens us, and you, to aim at Christ; he has anointed and marked us ²²with his own seal in a first outpouring of the Spirit.

Paul refers to a scandal

■ ²³God knows, and I swear to you by my own life, that if I did not return to Corinth, it was because I wanted to spare you. ²⁴I do not wish to lord it over your faith, but to contribute to your happiness; for regarding faith, you already stand firm.

2 ¹So I gave up a visit that would again be a distressing one. ²If I make you sad, who will make me happy if not you whom I have grieved? ³Remember what I wrote you: "May it be that when I come I do not feel sad because of you, who should rather make me happy." I trust in everyone and I am sure that my joy will be the joy of you all.

⁴So afflicted and worried was I when I wrote to you, that I even shed tears. I did not intend to cause you pain, but rather to let you know of the immense love that I have for you.

⁵If anyone has caused me pain, he has hurt not me but in some measure, all of you – and I do not wish to exaggerate. ⁶The punishment that he received from the majority is enough for him. ⁷Now you should rather for-

In him all the promises of God have come to be a Yes (v. 20). God fulfilled his promises when he sent his Son among us. But Christ also did only what his Father wanted. Thus, Christ is a 'yes' consenting to the Father's plan. From there, Paul draws the consequences for Christians. In baptism we say the first yes to Christ. At every Eucharist we repeat again the same yes. The "amen" that we say in prayers mean yes, it is true. The opposite of all this is sin which is the same as saying 'no' to Christ.

+ In a first outpouring (22). Paul actually says: he gave us the first payment of the Spirit. (See com. on Eph 1:14).

■ Here Paul refers to the letters preceding this one and which we mentioned in the introduction. We referred to this previous letter which is perhaps preserved in chapters 10-13 of this "Second letter." I do not wish to lord it over your faith (1:24): see 10:5-6. May it be that, when I come, I do not feel sad (2:3): see 12:21.

It is the fragrance of life and leads them to life. Just as Christ brought division among people, so the Gospel divides them. It is not so much the message which they argue about but the "odor", or, the way of being Christian. Some cling to their own interests and are not ready to take risks: they focus on the demands of Christian life which seems to them like death and a useless sacrifice. Others, on the other hand, become envious of the mysterious power shining through the believer in the midst of his own trials: because they understand that life is there.

Who is worthy of such a mission? In seeing this, the apostle feels inadequate for his mission. He would like everyone to recognize Christ and the radiance of his love through him, but, he is a long way from that! On the contrary, the false apostle does not even think about that but only wishes to be approved and to make money out of the word of God by hiding its demands: such apostles are famous and they are not persecuted by anyone.

give and comfort him, lest excessive sorrow discourage him.⁸ So I beg you to treat him with love.

⁹ This is why I wrote to you, to test you and to know if you would obey in everything.¹⁰ The one you forgive, I also forgive. And what I forgave, if indeed I had anything to forgive, I forgave for your sake in the presence of Christ,¹¹ lest Satan take advantage of us; for we know his designs.

We are the fragrance of Christ

¹² So I came to Troas to preach the Gospel of Christ, and the Lord opened doors to me.¹³ However I could not be at peace because I did not find my brother Titus there, so I took leave of them and went to Macedonia.

¹⁴ Thanks be to God, who always leads us in the triumphant following of Christ and, through us, spreads the knowledge of him everywhere, like an aroma.¹⁵ We are Christ's fragrance rising up to God, and perceived by those who are saved as well as by those who are lost.¹⁶ To the latter, it smells of death and leads them to death. To others it is the fragrance of life and leads to life.

¹⁷ But who is worthy of such a mission? Unlike so many who make money out of the word of God, we speak with sincerity, and announce Christ as sent by God, and in his presence.

The great dignity of Christ's ministers

♦ ¹Am I again commending myself? Or do I need to present to you letters of recommendation as some have done; or should I ask you for those letters? ²You are the letter. We bear it in our heart, yet all can read and understand it.³ Yes, who could deny that you are Christ's letter written by us—a letter written not with ink but with the Spirit of the living God, carved not in slabs of stones, but in hearts of flesh.

⁴ This is our confidence before God, thanks be to Christ!⁵ We do not dare consider that our work is due to any merit of ours; we know that our ability comes from God.⁶ He has enabled us to be ministers of a new covenant no longer depending on a written law but on the Spirit. The written law kills, but the Spirit gives life.

♦ The preachers who oppose Paul showed letters of recommendation given by some community or some apostle. Paul, on the contrary, relies on a personal authority which does not owe anything to anyone. Christ himself made him an apostle as he said in several places.

The pagans of that time surrounded their priests with honour and esteem, and so did the Jews. Throughout the Bible the honour of teaching the Law of God is highlighted and more so the unique role of Moses who received it from God on Sinai. Yet, an apostle of Christ is much greater than these.

How much more glorious will be the ministry that brings holiness. As Paul showed in Rom 7:1-13, teaching only the Law as the Jewish priests did, was not a great help to men since men, because they are sinners, do not obey it and deserve their punishment. On the contrary, Paul brings believers into live communion with Christ and his Spirit so that, from then on, they can also share in risen life. The priests and ministers of the Church fulfill a major role if their words and actions are helpful in raising men.

In verses 7-13 Paul refers to the tradition found in the book of Exodus (Ex 34:29-35). These highlighted Moses' glory, but Paul mentions them to prove that Christ's apostles are superior. There is a reference to Moses who returned from his encounter with God with his face radiant; but Paul remarks that it did not last. Moses had to cover his face with a veil because his face was so radiant, but Paul notes that when a veil must be used, God does not yet fully reveal himself. He points out, in passing, to the blindness of the Jews who do not recognize Christ as their promised saviour.

⁷ The ministry of the Law carved on stones brought death; it was nevertheless surrounded by glory and we know that the Israelites could not fix their eyes on the face of Moses, such was his radiance, though fleeting. ⁸ How much more glorious will the ministry of the Spirit be! ⁹ If there was greatness in a ministry which used to condemn, how much more will there be in the ministry that brings holiness? ¹⁰ The ministry of the Law was held as glorious – an imperfect glory; yet it will no longer be so when a glory far more superior appears. ¹¹ The ministry of the Law surrounded by glory, passed away; but ours endures with a lasting glory.

The veil of Moses

¹² As men who have such a great ambition, we are quite confident – ¹³ unlike Moses who covered his face with a veil. Otherwise the Israelites would have seen the fading of his passing radiance.

¹⁴ They became blind, however; until this day, the same veil prevents them from understanding the Old Covenant and they do not realize that for those in Christ it is nullified. ¹⁵ Up to this very day, however often they read Moses, the veil remains over their understanding ¹⁶ but, for whoever turns to the Lord, the veil shall be removed. ¹⁷ The Lord is spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.

¹⁸ So, with unveiled faces, we all must reflect as in a mirror the Glory of the Lord, while we are transformed into his likeness and experience more and more his Glory by the action of the Lord who is spirit.

We carry this treasure in vessels of clay

4 ¹ This is why we do not feel discouraged as we fulfil this ministry mercifully given to us. ² We refuse to stay with half-truths through fear; we do not behave with cunning or falsify the message of God but, manifesting the truth, we deserve the respect of everyone before God.

³ In fact if the Gospel we proclaim remains obscure, it is obscure only for those who go to their own destruction. ⁴ The god of this world has blinded the minds of these unbelievers lest they Christians, on the other hand, openly contemplate the Glory of the Lord. A Christian is light of Christ: in earlier times, the baptized were called "the enlightened." Christ said: you do not light a lamp to hide it, but instead you put it in a candlestick.

We are quite confident (12). What a daring statement! Moses was the founder of the Jewish people and the supreme authority of the Bible.

The Lord is spirit. This is said twice in verses 17 and 18. Paul is not confusing the Lord Christ with the Holy Spirit but he is making a play on the words spirit and Spirit. The first religion, that of the Jews, consisted in observing a written law. The second, that of Christ, is spirit, that is, a power which leads us to love, a certain way of being free: this new spirit is found in Christ. Jesus the Lord is not a dead man whose voice reaches us through the centuries. As risen, his Spirit is active in us and is gradually transforming us (see Rom 2:29).

o It is worthwhile underlining some features of the portrait of an apostle as Paul sketches it:

- We do not lose heart.
- We do not proceed with trickery nor do we falsify God's message.
- We are no more than your servants.
- Let men discover in us the glory of God which shines in Christ's face.
- We carry the death of Jesus so that his life may be revealed in us.
- We believe and that is why we speak.

We carry this treasure in vessels of clay (v. 7). Usually, God carries out his plans by using inadequate instruments. Graham Greene became famous for his book, "The Power and the Glory" in which we see a priest achieving heroic things despite his many personal faults.

see the radiance of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is God's image.⁵ It is not ourselves we preach, but Christ Jesus as Lord; and for Jesus' sake we became your servants.⁶ God who said, Let the light shine out of darkness, has also made the light shine in our hearts to radiate and to make known the Glory of God, as it shines in the face of Christ.

⁷We carry, however, this treasure in vessels of clay, so that this all-surpassing power may not be seen as ours but as God's.⁸ Trials of every sort come to us, but we are not discouraged.⁹ We are left without answer, but do not despair; persecuted but not abandoned, knocked down but not crushed.¹⁰ We carry everywhere in our person the death of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus may also be manifested in us.¹¹ For we, the living, are given up continually to death for the sake of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus may appear in our mortal existence.¹² And as death is at work in us, life comes to you.

¹³We have received the same spirit

We are given up to death (v. 11). The apostle's death is necessary so that his work may live. When a good job has been done in one sector of the church, there has to come the hour of persecution, or of obedience to leaders whose authority we cannot reject, in spite of the fact that they may be unjust or mistaken. Nothing is raised without having died first.

+ Our outer being... our inner man (16). With these two terms, Paul repeats what he already expressed in Rom 8:10-11. There he opposed the flesh and the spirit, here the outer being and the inner man to describe the situation of the Christian who already experiences a resurrection of the whole person who is on the way to the other resurrection, that of the dead, even though he must pass through death.

We die because death is part of us from the start of our lives for we belong to sinful humanity. A death which is seen especially in our bodies (the flesh or the outer being). But the inner man (or the spirit) continues on the way to a constant resurrection, becoming more open to divine action.

of faith referred to in Scripture than says: I believed and so I spoke. We also believe and so we speak.¹⁴ We know that He who raised the Lord Jesus will also raise us with Jesus and bring us, with you, into his presence.¹⁵ Finally, grace will come more abundantly upon you and great will be the thanksgiving for the glory of God.

We long for our heavenly dwelling

+ ¹⁶Therefore we are not discouraged. On the contrary, while our outer being wastes away, the inner man is renewed from day to day.¹⁷ The slight affliction which quickly passes away prepares us for an eternal wealth of glory so great and beyond all comparison.¹⁸ So we no longer pay attention to the things that are seen, but to those that are unseen, for the things that we see last for a moment, but that which cannot be seen is eternal.

5 ¹We know that when our earthly dwelling, or rather our tent, is destroyed, we may count on a building from God, a heavenly dwell-

One day, after illnesses, old age and the separation from all those who died before us, we, too, shall have to die and leave the part of ourselves which is most external and which cannot enter into risen life.

Why is not our heavenly home placed over the other? We would like to wear the new clothing over the other, namely, to rise without having first to die: death is not normal for a child of God.

In previous letters Paul felt confident that he would be alive to see the coming of Christ and the Resurrection (1 Thes. 4:15). However, with time passing, he begins to doubt: perhaps Christ will come after he and his listeners have had to die. Even when we really long for the heavenly dwelling or the glorious body that God reserves for us, we are still quite attached to the earthly tent which is the actual body, however cumbersome and temporary it may be.

Compare 5:8 with Phil. 1:23 and Rv 14:13!

We feel confident (6). The fact that we are Christians does not necessarily remove the fear of death. This fear, however, momentarily lessens our growing confidence that we have en-ing not built by human hands, that lasts for ever.² Therefore we long and groan: Why may we not put on this heavenly dwelling over that which we have?³ (Indeed, are we sure that we shall still be wearing our earthly dwelling and not be unclothed?)

⁴ As long as we are in the field-tent, we indeed moan our unbearable fate for we do not want this clothing to be removed from us; we would rather put the other over it, that the mortal body may be absorbed by true life.⁵ This is God's purpose for us, and he has given us the Spirit as a pledge of what we are to receive.

⁶ So we feel confident always. We know that while living in the body, we wander away from the Lord,⁷ living by faith, without seeing;⁸ but we dare to think that we would rather be away from the body to go and live with the Lord.⁹ So, whether we have to keep this house or lose it, we only wish to please the Lord.¹⁰ For we all have to be brought to light before the tribunal of Christ for each one to receive what he deserves for his good or evil deeds in the present life.

We proclaim the message of reconciliation

■ ¹¹ So we know the fear of the Lord and we try to convince people while we live openly before God. And I trust that you know in your conscience what we truly are.¹² We do not try to win your esteem again; we want to give you a reason to feel proud of us, that you may respond to those who heed appearances and not the reality.¹³ Now, if I have spoken foolishly, let God alone hear; if what I have said makes sense, take it for yourselves.

¹⁴ Indeed the love of Christ holds us and we realize that if he died for all, all have died.¹⁵ He died for all so that those who live may live no longer for themselves, but for him who died and rose again for them.¹⁶ And so from now on, we do not regard anyone from a human point of view; and, even if before we knew Christ personally, we should now regard him in another way.

¹⁷ For that same reason, he who is in Christ is a new creature. For him the old things have passed away; a new world has come.¹⁸ All this is the tered life. The Spirit reveals to us the presence of God in us and we understand that no law of death has any power over this presence. Who will separate us from this revelation of the love of God? (Rom 8:35-39).

■ There are many ways of understanding faith: for each one of us, one or other aspect of Christian life makes more of an impact on us. What Paul sees in Christ is the great messenger and artisan of reconciliation.

His first conviction is that, with the death of Christ, a new age has begun for divided humanity. If he died for all, all have died, namely the whole history and wisdom of people before him have been surpassed and now God works among us in other ways.

We do not regard anyone from the human point of view (v 16). Christian faith is not only a new way of looking at God; it also includes a plan for a new society and a new life together: it is the will to dedicate ourselves with all possible means to reconcile people. Nowadays, many Christians are involved in politics with others who do not share their faith, but is that sufficient? They must be able to confront the project of the party with the Christian project concerning man and reconciliation.

He who is in Christ is a new creature. (v 17). First, because the barriers dividing and classifying men no longer exist for him: see Gal 3:28 and Eph 2:14-16. Then, because he is no longer guided by human desires, but by the Spirit of God: Gal. 5:13-21.

In Christ God reconciled the world with himself (v 19). Many people like to say: Jesus is love. This is true, but let us not forget that this love is his response to the love of the Father who wishes to reconcile us: we must do away with the idea of an angry God whom Jesus tries to appease (Rom 3:25).

Entrusting to us the message of reconcil-work of God who in Christ reconciled us to himself, and who entrusted to us the ministry of reconciliation. ¹⁹ Because in Christ God reconciled the world with himself, no longer taking into account the sins of men, and entrusting to us the message of reconciliation.

²⁰ So we present ourselves as ambassadors in the name of Christ, as if God himself makes an appeal to you through us. Let God reconcile you; this we ask you in the name of Christ. ²¹ He had no sin, but God made him bear our sin, so that in him we might share the holiness of God.

6 ¹ Being God's helpers we beg you: let it not be in vain that you received this grace of God. ² Scripture says: At the favourable time I listen to you, on the day of salvation I help you. This is the favourable time, this is the day of salvation.

The trials of an apostle

◆ ³ We are concerned not to give anyone an occasion to stumble or criticize our mission. ⁴ Instead we prove we are true ministers of God in every way by our endurance in so many trials, in hardship, affliction, ⁵ floggings, imprisonment, riots, fatigue, sleepless nights and days of hunger.

⁶ People can notice in our upright life, knowledge, patience and kindness, action of the Holy Spirit, ⁷ sincere love, words of truth and power of God. So we fight with the weapons of justice, to attack as well as to defend.

⁸ Sometimes we are honoured, at other times insulted; we receive criticism as well as praise. We are regarded as liars although we speak the truth; ⁹ as unknown though we are well known; as dead and yet we live. Punishments come upon us but we have not, as yet, been put to death. ¹⁰ We appear to be afflicted, but we remain happy; we seem to be poor, but we enrich many; apparently we have nothing, but we possess everything!

¹¹ Corinthians! I have spoken to you frankly and I have uncovered my inner thought. ¹² My heart is wide open to you, but you feel uneasy because of your closed heart: ¹³ repay us with the same measure – I speak to you as to my children – open wide your hearts also.

Have nothing to do with evil atmosphere (v 19). The Christian's mission is not primarily to sing God's praises, nor to live in peace, but to be actively involved in the task of universal reconciliation, which presupposes denouncing injustice and sin as much as trying to overcome them collectively, with a spirit of courage, love and sacrifice. The Church today has a lot to say in that regard to make us understand this mission which is ours, in this century and in the conflicts and tensions which tear our countries apart.

We present ourselves as ambassadors of Christ. This is not only true of the apostles and Paul. It is also meant for us when we go to visit the sick or the needy; when, overcoming suspicion, we approach our brother to create an atmosphere of confidence, so that, shortly, we may arrive at fraternal fellowship among men who have the same problems but who, in spite of that, often remained locked in their selfishness.

Christ who did not know sin... (v 21). Paul recalls the mystery of the cross: reconciliation is not achieved without voluntary victims taking upon themselves men's hatred and sins.

If we knew Christ personally before (v 16) Paul says more exactly: if we knew him in the flesh, namely, as he was humanly speaking. Here, Paul is referring to some adversaries who believe they are superior to him because the knew Jesus or were his relatives. And he tells them: we should now regard him in another fear! What a longing to see me, to make amends and do me justice!

You have fully proved that you were innocent in this matter. ¹² In reality, I wrote to you not on account of the offender or of the offended, but that you may be conscious of the concern you have for me before God. ¹³ I was encouraged by this.

In addition to this consolation of mine, I rejoice especially to see Titus very pleased with the way you all reassured him. ¹⁴ I had no cause to regret my praise of you to him. You know that I am always sincere with you; likewise my praise of you to Titus has been justified. ¹⁵ He now feels much more affection for you as he remembers the obedience of all and the respect and humility with which you received him. ¹⁶ Really I rejoice for I can be truly proud of you.

The collection for those in Jerusalem

■ 8 ¹ Now I want you to know about a gift of divine grace among the Churches of Macedonia. ² While they were so afflicted and persecuted, their joy overflowed and their extreme poverty turned into a wealth of generosity. ³ According to their means – even beyond their means – they wanted to share in helping the saints.

⁴ They asked us for this favour spontaneously and with much insistence ⁵ and, far beyond anything we expected, they put themselves at the disposal of the Lord and of us by the will of God. ⁶ Accordingly, I urged Titus to complete among you this work of grace since he began it with you. ⁷ You excel in everything: in the gifts of faith, speech and knowledge; you feel concern for every cause and, besides, you are first in my heart. Excel also in this generous service.

⁸ This is not a command; I make known to you the determination of others to show you the sincerity of their fraternal concern. ⁹ You know well the generosity of Christ Jesus, our Lord. Although he was rich, he made himself poor to make you rich through his poverty.

■ In the year 48 there was a famine in Judea and in Jerusalem (Acts 11:28) due to the poor harvest of the previous year, a sabbatical year (during which the Jews did not sow so that the earth could rest). To remedy this situation of shortage, economic aid for the Christians of Jerusalem was organized. Later, when the "first council" met in Jerusalem in the years 49-50, Paul promised to keep the Jerusalem brothers in mind during his missions among the pagans (Gal 2:10). Here, Paul exhorts the Churches in Corinth and in the province to take up this collection which they had agreed upon.

Paul does not use the word collection in these chapters. Instead he speaks of the liberality and the greatness of generous giving; of the blessed work of grace. It is more a gift for the one who gives than for the one who receives.

Paul takes great care that the collection, involving large amounts, should be duly taken up: It must be taken and controlled by men who have the confidence of the community.

¹⁶ Blessed be God who inspires Titus with such care for you! ¹⁷ He not only listened to my appeal but he wanted to go and see you on his own initiative. ¹⁸ I am sending with him the brother who has gained the esteem of the churches in the work of the Gospel; ¹⁹ moreover they appointed him to travel with us in this blessed work we are carrying on for the glory of the Lord but also because of our personal enthusiasm.

²⁰ We decided on this so that no one could suspect us with regard to this generous fund that we are administering. ²¹ Let us see to it that all may appear clean not only before God but also before men. ²² We also send with them another brother who on several occasions has shown us his zeal and, now, is more enthusiastic because of his confidence in you.

²³ You, then, have Titus, our companion and minister to serve you and, with him, you have our brothers, representatives of the churches and a glory to Christ. ²⁴ Show them how you love, and prove, before the churches, all the good things I said to them about you.

More about the collection

9 ¹ It is not necessary for me to write to you about assistance to the saints. ² I know your readiness and I praised you before the Macedonians. I said, "In Achaia they are ready for the collection since last year." And your enthusiasm carried most of them along. ³ So I send you these brothers of ours. May all my praise of you not fall flat in this case! May you be ready, as I said, ⁴ if some Macedonians come with me; let them not find you unprepared. What a shame for me – and perhaps for you – after so much confidence!

⁵ So I thought it necessary to ask our brothers to go ahead of us and see you to organize this blessed work you have promised. It shall appear as generosity and not as an imposed task.

⁶ Remember: he who sows meagrely will reap meagrely, and there shall be generous harvests for him who sows generously. ⁷ Let each one give what he decided upon personally, and not reluctantly as if obliged. God loves a cheerful giver. ⁸ And God is able to fill you with every good thing, so that you have enough of everything at all times, and may give abundantly for any good work.

⁹ Scripture says: He distributed, he gave to the poor, his good works last for ever. ¹⁰ God who provides the sower with seed will also provide him with the bread he eats. He will multiply the seed for you and also increase the fruits of your good works. ¹¹ Become rich in every way, and give abundantly. What you give will become, through us, a thanksgiving to God.

¹² For this sacred relief, after providing the saints with what they need, will result in much thanksgiving to God. ¹³ This will be a test for them; they will give thanks because you obey the requirements of Christ's Gospel and share generously with them and with all. ¹⁴ They shall pray to God for you and feel affection for you because the grace of God overflows in you.

¹⁵ Yes, thanks be to God for his indescribable gift!

◆ Here again Paul speaks of the collection as if he had not done so in the previous chapter. Some think that at the same time Paul was writing to the Corinthians to invite them to give (chap. 8), he wrote another message for the churches of Achaia, which was the prov-

Paul's defense and admonition

10 ¹It is I, Paul, who by the humility and kindness of Christ appeal to you. The Paul "who is timid among you and bold when far away from you!"

²Do not force me to act boldly when I come, as I am determined and will dare to act against some people who think that human motives lead me. ³Although I live in this world, I do not fight in a human way.

⁴Our weapons are not human weapons but, thanks be to God, they are powerful to destroy strongholds. We destroy arguments and haughty thoughts ⁵ which oppose the knowledge of God. We compel all understanding to obey Christ, ⁶and I am prepared to punish any disobedience when you should show perfect obedience.

⁷See things as they really are. If anyone is convinced that he belongs to Christ, let him consider that just as he is Christ's, so am I. ⁸Although I may seem too confident in the authority that the Lord gave me for building you up and not for pulling you down, I will not be put to shame for saying this. ⁹Do not think that I can only frighten you with letters. ¹⁰"His letters are severe and strong," some say, "but as he is, he has no presence and he is a poor speaker." ¹¹To such people I say, "Be careful: what my letters say from afar, is what I will do when I come."

¹²How could I venture to equate or compare myself with people who proclaim their own merits? Fools! they measure themselves with their own measure and compare themselves with themselves. ¹³As for me, I will not boast beyond measure, for I will not go past the limits that the God of true measure has set for me: He gave the measuring stick when he made me set foot in your place.

¹⁴It is not the same when someone goes out of his field to where he has not set foot before. But I am he who first reached you with the Gospel of Christ. ¹⁵I am not making myself important where others have worked. On the contrary, we hope that as your faith increases, so too our area of ministry among you will be enlarged: without going beyond our limit. ¹⁶So we shall bring the Gospel to places beyond yours without entering into the field of others, or boasting and making ourselves important where the work is already done. ¹⁷*He who boasts, let him boast in the Lord.* ¹⁸It is not the one who commends himself who is approved, but he whom the Lord commends.

ince of Corinth: this message may have been placed here later, at the end of the letter, because the theme is the same (chap. 9).

In 8:18 Paul may be referring to Luke: was his Gospel already written in the years 55-56?

o These chapters 10-13, where violence does not agree with the reconciliation previously expressed, may come from the letter Paul had sent before following the incident in which various members of the Corinthian community rebelled against him.

Those who do not accept Paul's authority say: His letters are strong, but as he is, he has no presence and he is a poor speaker (10:10). This is the only reference to Paul's physical appearance that we have in the New Testament.

However, his enemies' claim that Paul's personality was weak has no foundation when we think that this man disturbed one city after another.

Do not force me to act boldly (10:2). Paul claims his right and authority as an apostle. If the Corinthians are not convinced that he was sent directly by Christ, they should at least admit that it is from him they received their faith and the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Paul speaks of his power and his weapons: in a threatening way. Surely the "power which destroys strongholds" is the Word of God. The Word of God gave birth to the Christian communities and gives them the power to stay!

11 ¹May you bear with me in some little foolishness! But surely you will. ²I confess that I share the jealousy of God for you, for I have promised you in marriage to Christ, the only spouse, to present you to him as a pure virgin. ³And that is my fear: the serpent that seduced Eve with cunning could also corrupt your minds and divert you from the sincerity which leads to Christ. ⁴Someone now comes and preaches another Jesus different from the one we preach, or you are offered a different spirit from the one you have received, with a different Gospel from the one you have accepted – and you agree!

⁵I do not see how I am inferior to those super apostles. ⁶Does my speaking leave much to be desired? Perhaps, but not my knowledge, as I have abundantly shown to you in every way.

Paul commends the apostle Paul

+ ⁷Perhaps my sin was that I have humbled myself in order to raise you, or that I gave you the Gospel free of charge. ⁸I called upon the services of other churches and served you with the support I received from them.

⁹When I was with you, although I was in need, I did not become a burden to anyone. The brothers from Macedonia gave me what I needed. I have taken care not to be a burden to you in anything and I will continue to do so. ¹⁰By the truth of Christ within me, I will let no one in the land of Achaia stop this boasting of mine.

¹¹Why? Because I do not love you? God knows that I do! ¹²And I will continue to do so to silence any people anxious to compete with me and appear as equal to me. ¹³In reality, they are false apostles, deceivers disguised as apostles of Christ. ¹⁴It is not surprising: if Satan disguises himself as an angel of light, ¹⁵his servants can easily disguise themselves as ministers of salvation, until they receive what their deeds deserve.

¹⁶I say again: Do not take me for a fool, but if you do take me as such, bear with me that I may sing my own praises a little. ¹⁷I will not speak in the language of Christ, but in that of a fool, bringing my own merits to prominence. ¹⁸As some people boast of human advantages, I will do the same. ¹⁹Fortunately you bear rather well with fools, you who are so wise!

united and alive in the face of opposition. The Gospel is "God's power," and when it is boldly proclaimed, the forces which oppose it collapse.

In this case, however, it is also a question of Paul's spiritual power. Naturally, we think of Paul's conviction, the power of his word, the awareness of his mission, all of which made an impact on the Corinthians. It is also in the nature of apostles and prophets to threaten at times, on behalf of God who intervenes in an obvious way to show they are right. Recall the case with Ananias and Saphira before Peter (Acts 5).

In comparing himself with his enemies and rivals, Paul underlines his authority as an apostle:

- Called by Christ.
- Founder of the community.
- Accredited in terms of all he suffered for Christ.

– Accredited in terms of his spiritual gifts, some of which were manifested among the Corinthians themselves.

– Although he does not mention it, Paul is in communion with the other apostles and with Peter (see Gal. 2:9).

As to the first point, in all his letters Paul says that one does not become an apostle merely through personal choice: one must have been sent by the Church. Today, with the multiplicity of sects and conflicting churches it is quite fitting to ask who gave a mission to their apostles.

+ Paul thinks he must remind them that he did not ask the community to support him. And yet, Christ had said: "The laborer is worth his pay." Paul had followed this saying of Christ on some occasions; at other times he had worked manually not to be a burden to the communities. In Corinth he had worked as a tent maker. About this see Lk 10:6; 1 Cor 9:14 and 1 Tim 5:17.

²⁰ You tolerate being enslaved, and exploited, robbed, treated with contempt and slapped in the face. ²¹ What a shame that I acted so weakly with you!

But if others are so bold, I shall also dare, although I may speak like a fool. ²² Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they descendants of Abraham? So am I. ²³ Are they ministers of Christ? (I begin to talk like a mad-man) I am better than they.

Better than they with my numerous labors. Better than they with the time spent in prison. The beatings I received are beyond comparison. How many times have I found myself in danger of death! ²⁴ Five times the Jews condemned me to thirty-nine lashes. ²⁵ Three times I was beaten with a rod, once I was stoned. Three times I was shipwrecked, and once I spent a night and a day adrift on the high seas.

²⁶ I have been continually in hazards of travelling because of rivers, because of bandits, because of my fellow Jews, or because of the pagans; in danger in the city, in the open country, at sea; in danger from false brothers. ²⁷ I have worked and often laboured without sleep, I have been hungry and thirsty and starving, cold and without shelter.

²⁸ Besides these and other things, there was my daily concern for all the churches. ²⁹ Whoever wavers, do I not waver with him? Whoever stumbles, am I not on hot bricks?

³⁰ If it is necessary to boast, let me proclaim the occasions on which I was found weak. ³¹ The God and Father of Jesus the Lord, – may he be blessed for ever! – knows that I speak the truth. ³² At Damascus, the governor under King Aretas placed the city under guard in order to arrest me, ³³ and I had to be let down in a basket through a window in the wall. In that way I slipped through his hands.

Extraordinary graces

12 ¹ It is useless to boast; but if I have to, I will go on to some visions and revelations of the Lord.

² I know a certain Christian: fourteen years ago he was taken up to the third heaven. ³ Whether in the body or out the body, I do not know, God knows. But I know that this man whether in the body or out of the body – I do not know, God knows – ⁴ was taken up to Paradise where he heard

APOSTOLATE AND CONTEMPLATION

■ In the following text Paul recalls the favours he received from God. These reveal a way of knowing God and being led and transformed by him which is different from what most Christians experience, but that does not make it exceptional.

At times, God immediately takes over the spirit of his elect, as was Paul's case. At other times, God's interventions guide a person along a path of growth which, in fact, will lead to the same end, even to ecstasy when the individual no longer belongs to himself. This is the path of contemplation.

Oftentimes, we understand contemplation as a time dedicated to meditating on the things of God and discovering his presence in our lives. In this sense we oppose contemplation and action, and we say that the two must go together. But the word contemplation also refers – and more accurately – to a new, more direct relationship of our spirit with God.

In this contemplation, it is not we who discover God and love him, but rather it is God who imposes his presence, giving us evidence of the truth and of diverse truths, and elicits from us a return of love. Thus, contemplation is the most effective process of transformation of the person because God takes over our own freedom: see Jer 1:5.

This contemplation is a gift from God which no one can demand. Many people have, at some point, known the first signs of contemplation, but few have been called to enter (or are able to enter) into a way of life and of thought which would enable them to receive more. Let us point out some common stages on this path. First, we have the prayers – called passive – in which the words that cannot be told: things which man cannot express.

⁵ Of that man I can indeed boast, but of myself I will not boast except of my weaknesses. ⁶ If I wanted to boast, that would not be foolishness, for I would speak the truth. ⁷ However, I better give up lest somebody think more of me than he actually sees in me or hears of me. Lest I become proud after so many and extraordinary revelations, I was given a thorn in my flesh, a true messenger of Satan, to slap me in the face. ⁸ Three times I prayed to the Lord that it leave me ⁹ but he answered, "My grace is enough for you; my great strength is revealed in weakness."

Gladly, then, will I boast of my weakness that the strength of Christ may be mine. ¹⁰ So I rejoice when I suffer infirmities, humiliations, want, persecutions: all for Christ! For when I am weak, then I am strong.

¹¹ I have acted as a fool but you forced me. You should have been the ones commending me? Yet I do not feel outdone by those super-apostles, ¹² even though I am nothing. All the signs of a true apostle are found in me: patience in all trials, signs, miracles and wonders.

¹³ Now, in what way were you not treated like the rest of the churches? Only in this: I was not a burden to you – forgive me for this offense!

This is my third visit to you

◆¹⁴ For the third time I plan to visit you, and I will not be a burden to you for I am not interested in what you have but only in you. Children should not have to collect money for their parents, but the parents for their children. ¹⁵ As for me, I am ready to spend whatever I have and even my whole self for all of you. If I love you so much, am I to be loved less?

¹⁶ Well, I was not a burden to you, but was it not a trick to deceive you? Tell me: ¹⁷ Did I take money from you through any of my messengers? ¹⁸ I asked Titus to go to you and I sent another brother with him. But did Titus take money from you? Have we not both acted in the same spirit?

¹⁹ Perhaps you think that we are again apologizing; but no: we speak in Christ and before God, and I do this for you, dear friends, to build you up. ²⁰ I fear that if I go and see you, I might not find you as I would wish, and you in turn, might not find me to your liking. I might see rivalries, envy, grudges, disputes, slanders, gossip, conceit, disorder. ²¹ Let it not be that in coming again to you, God humble me because of you and I have to grieve over many of those who live in sin, on seeing that they have not yet given up an impure way of living, wicked conduct and the vices they formerly practised.

person feels invaded by the delightful sense of the divine presence. Then comes the spiritual union in which God begins to communicate himself without any thought, or felt love, but from spirit to spirit. Then, the ecstasy preparing the person for a total and ongoing union with God.

This divinization of the person by way of God's jealous love goes beyond all we can imagine and it demands very painful purifications which God himself achieves in those he most loves. In fact, it was granted in different degrees to the great apostles.

There is a constant call for self-awareness: examine yourselves, acknowledge. When difficulties arise in the Church, it is not enough to resort to arguments. We must also seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Conflicts are not things involving only two persons and which can be solved between the two: they must be faced in the presence of Christ. Paul calls for reflection in common on the Word of God, for reflection alone in the presence of God. Both Paul and his opponents must trust one another and be convinced that others are also capable of sincerely seeking the will of God.

Note the "trinitarian" blessing in 13:14

13 ¹ This will be my third visit to you. Any charge must be decided upon by the declaration of two or three witnesses. ² I have said this and I say it again, just as I did on my second visit. Being still far away, I say to you who lived in sin as well as to the rest: when I return to you, I will not have pity. ³ You want to know if Christ is speaking through me? So you will. He is not used to dealing weakly with you, but he acts, rather, with power. ⁴ If he was crucified in his weakness, now he lives by the strength of God; and so we are weak with him, but God will reveal his power to us in making us live with Christ.

⁵ Examine yourselves: you are acting according to faith? Test yourselves. Can you assert that Christ Jesus is in you? ⁶ If not you have failed the test. I hope you recognize that we ourselves have not failed it.

⁷ We pray God that you may do no wrong, not that we wish to be acknowledged but ⁸ we want you to do right, even if in this we appear to have failed. ⁹ We rejoice if we are weak while you are strong, for all we hope is that you become perfect. ¹⁰ This is why I am writing now, so that when I come I may not have to act strictly and make use of the authority the Lord has given me for building up and not for destroying.

¹¹ Finally, brothers and sisters, be happy, strive to be perfect, have courage, be of one mind and live in peace. And the God of love and peace will be with you. ¹² Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the saints greet you.

¹³ The grace of Christ Jesus the Lord, the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all.

INTRODUCTION TO GALATIANS

We all pretend to be free. But what does it mean to be free? Free men are those who, placed before any decision, do not consult their own interest, but are guided instead by a more profound inspiration from the Spirit of God who constantly invites us to be better. Every Christian should be "inspired" in that sense. Yet, two things threaten the "freedom that Christ gave us":

- On one hand, we let the enthusiasm we had when we encountered Christ and felt capable of anything for him, grow cold. And we begin to mould our lives according to practices which cannot replace the and authentic love.

- It may also happen that we become impressed by examples from different times or different contexts. And we imitate models of Christian life which do not coincide with what God expects of us, and so we do not come to Christ with all that we are and with all our values.

All of this is evident in the Letter to the Galatians. These pagans converted by Paul, later listened to Jews who thought they were disciples of Christ, but they had not understood the Gospel. The Jews were saying to them: "Faith in Christ, what a nice thing! But what is more

LETTER TO THE GALATIANS

1 ¹Paul, an apostle sent not by men nor by human mediation

but by Christ Jesus and by God, the Father, who raised him from the dead, to the Churches in Galatia.

²I and all the brothers who are with me

³pray that you may receive grace and peace from God our Father and from Christ Jesus our Lord.

⁴He gave himself for our sins to rescue us from this evil world, in fulfilment of the will of God the Father.

⁵Glory to him for ever and ever.
Amen.

There is no other gospel

o ⁶I am surprised at how quickly you have abandoned God who called you according to the grace of Christ, and have gone to another gospel.
⁷Indeed, there is no other gospel, but some people who are sowing confusion among you want to change the Gospel of Christ.

⁸But even if we or an angel from heaven should preach to you the gospel in a way other than we have preached, may he be cursed! ⁹As I have said and now say again: if anyone preaches the Gospel in a way other than you received it, may he be

Acts 15, 24

4. 1 Jn 5, 19; Acts 2, 40

7. 2 Cor 11, 4;

o Most of the Galatians converted to the Christian faith were of pagan origin and they had never practised the Jewish religion. However, they were in contact with other churches.
From these came those Jews, insufficiently converted and unable to confront Paul, and who started to preach after Paul had left. Some of the believers listened to them and welcomed their conservatism about Jewish rites.

Those disturbing Jews did not deny the miracles, nor Jesus' parables, nor his resurrection.

But they did not understand that Jesus had come to save all men equally; that the Jewish religion was no longer effective, and that the privilege of those who had been "the" people of God was over. Thus, their preaching was not the Good News for all men: it was another gospel.

The gospel in a way other than you received it. The Gospel must be passed on just as the apostles understood it and as the Church preserves it. This is why Paul demonstrates that he did not begin to preach on his own initiative, but important to God is for people to observe all the religious laws and customs. And, besides, knowing that Jesus belonged to the Jewish race, you should adopt the way of living, thinking and praying of the Jews."

Paul wrote this very severe letter: "If you know Jesus crucified and you are guided by his Spirit, what else do you need?"

Who were the Galatians? This unclear term may refer to the communities of Pisidia and Galatia. Acts 13:22-14:25 and 16:1-6 deal with their evangelization.

cursed! ¹⁰For are we to please men or obey God? Do you think that I try to please men? If I were still trying to please men, I would not be a servant of Christ.

Paul teaches what he received from God

+ ¹¹I want you to know, brothers that the Gospel we preached to you is not a human message, ¹²nor did I receive it or learn of it from man, but through a revelation from Christ Jesus. ¹³You have heard of my previous way of life, when I belonged to the Jewish community; I furiously persecuted the Church of God and tried to destroy it. ¹⁴For I was more devoted to the Jewish religion than many fellow Jews of my age, and I defended the traditions of my fathers more fanatically.

¹⁵But you know that God called me out of his great love, he who had chosen me from my mother's womb, and was pleased ¹⁶to reveal in me his Son, that I might make him known among the pagan nations. I did not seek human advice ¹⁷nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me. I immediately went to Arabia, and from there I returned again to Damascus. ¹⁸Later, after three years, I went up to Jerusalem to meet Peter, and I stayed with him for fifteen days. ¹⁹But I did not see any other apostle except James, the Lord's brother. ²⁰I say all this before God, he knows that this is true.

²¹After that I went to Syria and Cilicia. ²²The churches of Christ in Judea did not know me personally; ²³they had only heard of me: "He who once persecuted us is now preaching the faith he tried to destroy." ²⁴And they praised God because of me.

Paul with the apostles

■ 2 ¹After fourteen years, I again went up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and Titus came with us. ²Following a revelation, I went to lay before them the Gospel I was preaching to the pagans – and I had also a private meeting with the leaders – lest I should be working or have worked rather he was sent and his preaching is in agreement with the doctrine accepted by the Church: what we now call Tradition.

+ Paul's enemies criticize his authority: he is not an apostle like the ones Jesus selected. What Paul says here corresponds to what is mentioned in Acts 9. He revealed his Son in me (16). Paul did not only see Christ, but he discovered him intimately present within him. In the very moment he was called, he also understood the essence of faith in a definitive way.

The case of Paul, called directly by Christ, is special. Yet, we see that Paul did not impose himself in the Church. Christ sent him to Ananias to ask for baptism. After that, he joined Peter, the acknowledged head of the Church, and James, the leader of the Jerusalem church. This "union" or "communion" is indispensable in order to act in the name of the Church. But it is not the kind of obedience found in the army or between boss and subordinates. Paul says: They acknowledged the graces God gave me (2:9): that is to say, they admitted that the Holy Spirit was at work in Paul. The leaders of the Church do not make decisions on their own, but they try to respond to the Holy Spirit who speaks through events.

■ This meeting in Jerusalem is related in Acts 15 and its commentary is found there.

When they became Christians, the Jews by race and religion, continued to observe the Law of Moses in which the great commandments (to know God, not to murder...), the rituals of worship, and national customs are combined. When people of different races began to be converted to Christ, Paul demanded that they should not be forced to follow the Mosaic Law. Naturally, they had to respect their neighbor and they were not to steal, but this emerges from the Gospel without having to impose the Mosaic Law.

Otherwise, you would have lost the truth of the Gospel (v 5). Because the Gospel frees men from all that limits their horizon, and their only obligation is to serve and imitate the Son of God.

It does not matter to me what they were before (v 6). Peter, James and John had no titles, or money or culture. They may even have in a wrong way.³ But they did not impose circumcision, not even on Titus who is Greek and who was with me.⁴ There were some intruders and false brothers who had gained access like spies to see how we live the freedom Christ has given us. They would have us enslaved by the Law,⁵ but we refused to yield even for a moment; otherwise you would have lost the truth of the Gospel.

⁶ The others, the more respectable leaders – it does not matter what they were before: God pays no attention to the status of a person – gave me no new instructions.⁷ They recognized that I have been entrusted to preach the Good News to the pagan nations, just as Peter has been entrusted to preach it to the Jews.⁸ In the same way that God made Peter the apostle of the Jews, he made me the apostle of the pagans.

⁹ James, Peter and John acknowledged the graces God gave me. Those men who are regarded as the pillars of the Church stretched out their hand to me and Barnabas as a sign of fellowship; we would go to the pagans and they to the Jews.¹⁰ The only thing they asked of us was to keep in mind the poverty of the brethren in Jerusalem; I have taken care to do this.

The conflict with Peter

◆ ¹¹ When later Cephas came to Antioch, I confronted him since he deserved to be blamed.¹² Before some of James' kinsmen arrived, he used to eat with non-Jewish people. But when they arrived, he withdrew and did not mingle anymore with them, for fear of these circumcised people.¹³ The rest of the Jews followed him in this pretence, and even Barnabas was led astray.¹⁴ When I saw that they were not acting uprightly in line with the truth of the Gospel, I said to Cephas publicly: If you who are Jewish agreed to live like the non-Jews, setting aside the Jewish customs, why do you now compel the non-Jews to live like Jews?

ο ¹⁵ We are Jews by birth; we are not pagan sinners.¹⁶ Yet we know that man is not made just and holy by the observance of the Law but by faith in

4. Acts 15, 24; Rom 16, 15	6. Dt 10, 17	7. Rom 1, 5; 15, 15	9. Mk 5, 37; 9, 2

been despised by more learned believers. Paul did not pay attention to that: he looks upon them only as the leaders of the Church.

◆ In the church, Paul believes himself authorized to reprimand the supreme leader, the first pope. Jesus promised Peter that his faith would not fail but he did not say that he would never make a mistake.

Jews did not eat with pagan non-Jews since, for them, it would have been something "impure," a blemish. But, when they had converted and entered the Church, if they had maintained this attitude toward their Christian brothers from another race, they would have kept an inadmissible division between men renewed by Christ.

Peter (or Cephas: see Jn 1:42) knows that now all people are equal and he accepts, for himself, not to take the Law into account. Yet, he is afraid of what his friends and his compatriots will think. He does not realize that, in order to please them, he is endangering the evangelization of those who are not Jewish. These people, in being seen as impure in the Church, are no longer at home and then, they will have to adopt the whole Law of the Jews to be pure, stay away from their background and from their people. If they do not comply, they will be second class citizens in the Church.

We can easily see that this continues to be a problem in our days. At times Church leaders are people of a certain level. That does not mean that the faithful have to imitate their ways since the Church embraces all backgrounds.

The Church must do away with all class differences within it and fight against all discrimination so prevalent in our societies. We can easily observe that people belonging to rural or working classes are despised or marginalized when they cannot follow the ways and customs of well-to-do people. Because of this, many of them are ashamed of what they are: they have not come to authentic freedom.

ο Here Paul says that Jesus saves the Jews as well as other people and he insists on the importance of faith. This is exactly the same out-

Christ Jesus. So we have believed in Christ Jesus that we may receive holiness from faith in Christ Jesus, and not from the practices of the Law, because the observance of the Law does not make any mortal a friend of God.

¹⁷ We expected to receive holiness through Christ; if there were sin in this, Christ would be working for sin. Not so! ¹⁸ But if we first remove the observances and then restore them, we admit we did wrong.

¹⁹ As for me, following the Law, I finally died to the Law, that I may live for God. ²⁰ I am crucified with Christ, and it is no longer I who live but Christ lives in me. I now live my mortal life through faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me. ²¹ If holiness could be reached through practice of the Law, Christ would have died for nothing.

We are saved by faith

3 ¹ How foolish you are, Galatians! Who has bewitched you even after Jesus Christ has been presented to you as crucified? ² I shall ask you only this: Did you receive the Spirit by the practice of the Law, or by believing what you heard? ³ How can you be such fools: you begin with the Spirit and end up with the flesh!

⁴ So you have experienced all this in vain! Would that it were not so!

⁵ When God gives you the Spirit and works miracles among you, does he do this because of your observance of the Law or because you believed in his message? ⁶ Remember Abraham: he believed God who, because of this, held him to be a just man. ⁷ Understand then that those who follow the way of faith are sons of Abraham.

¹¹ It is plainly written that no one becomes righteous, in God's way, by the Law: by faith the righteous shall live. ¹² Yet the Law gives no place to faith, for according to it: he who fulfils the commandments shall have life through them.

¹³ Now Christ rescued us from the curse of the Law by becoming cursed himself for our sake, as it is written:

16. Rom 3, 22; Acts 15, 11; Ps 143, 2	19. Rom 7, 1; 8, 11	20. Phil 1, 21; Col 3, 3; Jn 13, 1;

		13. Dt 21, 25; Acts 5, 30 line which Paul will develop four years later in chapters 2-8 of his letter to the Romans. See the commentary there.

If we first remove the observances... (v 18). Paul had taught them to be free from the pagan religion with its prejudices and its customs which they observed out of fear of the gods and of fate. And he was telling them that it was not a sin not to observe the Old Testament practices. But now they were going back to them again in order to feel more secure before a punishing God. It was not much fun to be circumcised and yet, they were doing it out of fear, just in case.

+ Once we have known Christ crucified, how and why could we abandon him? Paul did not know of more powerful arguments than to present the crucified Jesus in order to convert pagans.

You begin with the Spirit and end up with the flesh (v 3). This phrase has a double meaning. First the Galatians experienced the working of the Holy Spirit and his miracles and now they want to receive the circumcision in the flesh. In another sense they started with the truth of God which was in Jesus: that is "the spirit." Now, they go back to Jewish observances which, though they come from God, are adapted to men of flesh, that is, unlearned and sinners.

Those who disturbed the Galatians said: you belong to Christ, but Christ is a descendant of Abraham and a Jew. Then, follow Abraham and do as the Jews do: and so, along with Christ, you there is a curse on everyone who is hanged on a tree.¹⁴ So the blessing granted to Abraham reached the pagan nations – it was in Christ, and we received the promised Spirit through faith.

The Law and the fulfilment of the promise

■ ¹⁵ Brethren, listen to this comparison. When anyone has made his will in the prescribed form, no one can annul it or add anything to it.¹⁶ Well now, what God promised Abraham was for his descendant. Scripture does not say: for the descendants, as if they were many. It means only one: this will be your descendant, and this is Christ.¹⁷ Now I say this: the testament which God made in the prescribed form cannot be annulled by the Law which came four hundred and thirty years later; nor can it make void God's promise.¹⁸ But if the inheritance were now the reward for keeping the Law, it would no longer be a promise. However, Abraham received this promise as a gift from God.

¹⁹ Why then the Law? It came because of sin. But notice that it was something added; that it was only valid until the descendant to whom the promise was addressed should come; and that it was put into effect by the angels with Moses as their mediator – ²⁰ there would not be a mediator if there were but one party, and God is only one.

²¹ Does the Law then compete with the promises of God? Not at all. Only if we had been given a Law capable of giving life, could holiness have come from the Law.²² But the written Law actually closed out every viewpoint other than that of sin. So the fulfilment of the promise is to be the fruit of faith for whoever believes in Christ Jesus.

We are sons and daughters of God

◆ ²³ Before the time of faith had come, the Law confined us and kept us until the time of faith should come.²⁴ The Law then was like the servant who brings the child to his master. It led to Christ, that we might become holy through faith.²⁵ With the coming of faith, that servant no longer commands us.

²⁶ By faith in Christ Jesus, all of you are sons of God.²⁷ All of you, through baptism in Christ, have put will be children of Abraham. Paul reports that one is not a son of Abraham, or a son of God by race: this is a point which he develops more in Romans 4.

Let us not think that such prejudices have disappeared. There are some who think they are Catholics because they have been baptized at birth: they forget that without faith, baptism is meaningless.

Holiness (3.8) or reconciliation with God. This is the meaning of the word righteousness as used by Paul.

■ We know that, in the Bible, Testament and Covenant mean the same: the Old Testament is the first covenant of God with men. Here Paul compares God with someone making a testament.

First God made a solemn covenant with Abraham. He did not demand anything of him, but he made a promise to him. All that God expected to save them was that Abraham's children would trust him. After such an important initiative from God, the Law which the Lord gave to Moses later, did not really change the situation. Therefore, Paul says, most of the Jews are wrong when they are so concerned about observing the Law and so little concerned about opening their hearts

◆ In Paul's days, the children of rich families were under the care of a servant called "pedagog," that is: the one who guides the child. He would take the child to school but would not teach him. Here, Paul says: the Law was the servant, while the teacher is Christ. Conclusion: if Christ already taught, what is the use of going back to the Jewish observances?

With this we can understand v. 19: with Moses as their mediator. Paul does not consider on Christ.²⁸ There is no longer any difference between Jew and Greek, or between slave and freedman, or between man and woman; but all of you are one in Christ Jesus.²⁹ And because you belong to Christ, you are of Abraham's race and you are to inherit God's promise.

4 ¹ But listen to me: In a house, the son is already the owner of everything, but as long as he is a child, he has no more power than a slave.² He is subject to those who care for him and who are entrusted with his affairs until the time set by his father comes.³ In the same way we as children were first subjected to the created forces that govern the world.⁴ But when the fulness of time came, God sent his Son. He came born of woman and subject to the Law,⁵ in order to redeem the subjects of the Law and to make us adopted sons and daughters of God.⁶ And because you are sons God has sent into your hearts the Spirit of his Son which cries out: Abba! that is: Father!

⁷ You yourself are no longer a slave but a son, and yours is the inheritance by God's grace.

⁸ When you did not know God, you served those who are not gods.⁹ But now that you have known God – or rather he has known you – how can you turn back to weak and poor created things? Do you want to be enslaved again? ¹⁰ Since you again observe days and months and seasons and years! ¹¹ I fear I may have wasted my time with you.

I still suffer for you

¹² I ask you, brethren: do as I do, just as I became like you. You have not offended me in anything. ¹³ Remember that I was sick when I first announced the Gospel to you. ¹⁴ Although I was a trial to you, you did not despise or reject me, but received me as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus.

the Law something divine and eternal, dictated by God himself. He thinks that God let the angels in charge of diverse historical forces conclude with one another this temporary arrangement so that the law should fit a particular time and circumstances; then Moses had to reconcile their diverse demands. The same thought is expressed in 4:3. In short, the Old Testament already contains the divine truth, but it comes down to us through mediators who adapt it to their ways and obscure it.

As long as the son is a child (v 1). God made man to be free, holy, strong, in the image of Christ. But man is not born as an adult; he must be a child first. Similarly humankind has to go through infancy. There was a primitive society, a naive science, a simple culture, a provisional religion. Men remained "among slaves" and were subject to created forces that govern the world (Paul says: the powers and principles): the invisible forces good and evil as well as the principles and prejudices of primitive men. Now, through Christ, man must come to total truth. First, Christ liberated man from religious superstitions and from the errors of the pagans which prevented him from knowing the Father and from becoming his son.

From then on, man escapes those spiritual forces (or angels) which, for Paul, are almost confused with human institutions and cultures; and he receives the truth from God.

He came born of a woman and subject to the Law (4:4). Christ saves men because he is a man. Christ came first as the saviour of the Jewish people, and to save them, he became one of them. He received his whole background from the Law, namely, from the people and the religion of the Old Testament: this Law was highly positive. But time had passed and it was no longer possible to receive the fulness of the divine truth without being redeemed from the yoke of the Law.

We must see in this a fundamental disposition of the plan of salvation: God saves us by becoming one of us. The same is now true of the Church which saves people, rather than giving to them or "being interested in them." And the Church cannot bring them a permanent and transforming salvation if it does not share in their very condition.

This is the reason why the Lord wants the Third World churches to bear the cross of the people of their continents: their marginalization, their sufferings and humiliations, in order

¹⁵ Where is the joy of that time? For I can testify that you would have even plucked out your eyes to give them to me. ¹⁶ But now, have I become your enemy for telling you the truth?

¹⁷ Those who show consideration to you are not sincere; they want you to show interest in them, so that they may separate you from me. ¹⁸ Would that you were surrounded with sincere care at all times, and not only from me when I am with you!

¹⁹ My sons! I still suffer the pains of childbirth until Christ is formed in you. ²⁰ How I would like to be with you now and speak to you personally, for I do not know what to say for the best.

The comparison of Sarah and Hagar

o ²¹ Tell me, you who desire to be under the Law again, do you know the Law? ²² It says that Abraham had two sons, one by a slave woman, the other by the free woman, his wife. ²³ The son of the slave woman was born like any other human being; but the son of the free woman was born in fulfillment of God's promise.

²⁶ But the Jerusalem above, who is our mother, is free. ²⁷ And Scripture says of her: Rejoice, barren woman without children, break forth in shouts of joy, you who do not know the pains of childbirth, for many shall be the children of the forsaken mother, more than of the married woman.

²⁸ Brethren, you are children of the promise, like Isaac. ²⁹ But as at that time the child born according to the flesh persecuted Isaac, who was born according to the spirit, so it is now.

to give them authentic salvation. When they are only middle-class churches following occidental or Roman patterns. Third World people cannot be saved.

You want to be enslaved again? (v 9). People grow tired of freedom. Some prefer to work without concern at the service of a boss and have no responsibilities in their cooperative. Many do not value a priest who invites them to make a conscientious decision for what is best. They prefer to be told: this is fine or this is sinful. Paul had told the Galatians: "You belong to Christ; let his Spirit guide you." But, to decide for oneself demands personal effort; it forces us to reflect and take responsibilities. Therefore, many Christians preferred to walk along well marked paths: they preferred to celebrate certain days, fulfil certain obligations and then be left alone with their little faith and weak love.

o In the history of Abraham, the ancestor, Paul discovers the image of the conflict which puts him in opposition to the "Judaizers," that is to say, to those Christians who still hope to be saved by observing the practices of the Jewish religion.

At the start of Sacred History is Abraham's faith and the promise God made to him. It should be noted that this promise was not to be inherited in the same way as family goods, which had to be distributed among all the children including Israel born like any other. (Paul says: born according to the flesh) On the contrary, what God promised was only destined to the son of promise, Isaac: the one who was born through a miraculous and free intervention of God. Thus, from the very beginning of the Bible, we see that we do not come to faith and to God's inheritance because we have a right to them, but through grace.

By clinging to their religious observances, the Jews were forgetting that they were above all, the people of the promise. Chosen by God in preference over other people, their mission was to announce that there are promises of God for all nations. They were wrong in thinking: since we are chosen by God, let everyone do what we do and observe our practices. Instead they should have shared their hopes with others; they should have taught others to believe in God's promise and not to put their trust in particular religious practices.

Hagar, the slave woman who gave birth to Ishmael, the ancestor of Arabs, is the image of ³⁰ And what does the Scriptures say? Cast out the slave woman and her son, for the son of the slave cannot share with the son of the free woman.

³¹ Brethren, we are not children of the slave woman, but of the free woman.

+ 5 ¹ Christ freed us to make us really free. So remain firm and do not submit again to the yoke of slavery. ² I, Paul, say this to you: if you receive circumcision, Christ can no longer help you. ³ Once more I remind whoever receives circumcision that he is bound to keep the whole Law. ⁴ All you who pretend to become righteous through the observance of the Law, you have separated from Christ and you have fallen away from grace.

⁵ As for us, the Spirit imparts to us this hope that we shall be holy through faith. ⁶ In Christ Jesus it is indifferent whether we be circumcised or not; what really matters is to have faith working through love.

⁷ You had begun your race well, whom then hindered you on the way?

Why did you stop obeying the truth?

⁸ This was not in obedience to God who calls you. ⁹ Even a little leaven affects the whole mass of dough.

¹⁰ Although I am personally convinced that you will not go astray, he who confuses you, whoever he may be, shall receive punishment.

¹¹ I myself, brethren, could I not preach circumcision? Then I would no longer be persecuted. But that would mean that I removed the scandal of the cross. ¹² Would that those who confuse you might go as far as mutilating themselves!

True freedom

■ ¹³ You, brothers and sisters, were called to enjoy freedom; I am not speaking of that freedom which covers up the desires of the flesh, but of that which makes you slaves of one another through love. ¹⁴ For the whole Law is summed up in this sentence: You shall love your neighbour as yourself. ¹⁵ But if you bite and tear each other to pieces, be careful lest you all perish.

30. 1 Thes 2, 14; Gen 21, 10	1. Jn 8, 36	3. Rom 2, 25; James 2, 10	6. 1 Cor 7, 19; James 2, 14;

			14. Mk 12, 31

those who received the Law on Mount Sinai, in Arabia: they did not achieve true freedom and they hold the earthly Jerusalem as their capital.

On the contrary, Sarah, the free woman, with her son Isaac born according to the divine promise, represents God's new covenant with those who believe in his promises. These are the free people, the Christians who wait for the heavenly Jerusalem.

Ishmael persecuted Isaac, and Abraham sent him away. This means: the inadequately converted Jews are disturbing the Galatians; the Church, then, has to send them away.

+ Paul and his opponents believe in the same Christ. Apparently they agree on almost everything. However, there is one point about which they disagree and which ruins everything: Paul does not maintain the obligation of being circumcised.

This is because, for Paul, there is no authentic preaching without openly advocating shocking positions. Since the Gospel is a message of liberation, the apostles must adopt an attitude which shatters the usual way of living and thinking.

Such is the necessary scandal in all Christian behavior, which will never be as scandalous as was Jesus' death on a cross (see 1 Cor 1:17). To save men means, somehow, making them disloyal cover who they are before God, and then bringing them to confront the forces which kept them subject and alienated. This is why Paul was so aggressive in terms of Jewish practices. Following Paul, we could ask in our days: Who are those who give in to prejudices and alienating powers, and who are the persecuted? (5:11-6:12). Oftentimes, the Gospel is lived more authentically in Christian groups, politically aware and active than in groups limiting themselves to liturgical practices.

■ Once again, the Galatians had locked themselves in barren religious preoccupations since they only wanted to avoid God's reproaches, and that is self-centeredness. Christian life, however, is not like that. When we possess the Spirit of Christ, we are not concerned about sinning, but about loving. What matters to ¹⁶Therefore I say to you: walk according to the Spirit and do not carry out the desires of the flesh! ¹⁷For the desires of the flesh war against the spirit, and the desires of the spirit are opposed to the flesh. Both are in conflict with each other, so that you cannot do everything you would like. ¹⁸But let the Spirit lead you, and do not be subject to the Law.

¹⁹You can easily recognize what comes from the flesh: immorality, impurity and shamelessness, ²⁰idol worship and magic, hatred, jealousy and violence, anger, ambition, division, factions, discord ²¹and envy, drunkenness, orgies and the like. I again say to you what I have already said: those who do these things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

²²But the fruit of the Spirit is charity, joy and peace, patience, understanding of others, kindness and fidelity, ²³gentleness and self-control. For such things there is no Law or punishment. ²⁴Yet those who belong to Christ have crucified the flesh with its vices and desires.

²⁵If we live by the Spirit, let us be led by the Spirit. ²⁶Let us not be conceited; let there be no rivalries or envy of one another.

Various counsels

6 ¹Brethren, in the event of someone falling into a sin, you who are spiritual shall set him aright with the spirit of kindness. Take care for you too may be tempted. ²Carry each other's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. ³If anyone thinks he is something, when in fact he is nothing, he deceives himself. ⁴Let each one examine his own conduct and he shall not boast before others, but will be zealous for his own progress. ⁵Everyone will answer for his own deeds.

⁶He who receives the teaching of the Word ought to share the good things he has with the one who instructs him. ⁷Do not be fooled. God cannot be deceived. You reap what you sow. ⁸The person who sows for the benefit of his own flesh shall reap corruption and death from the flesh. He who sows in the spirit shall reap

God is that we let go of our little problems and let his Spirit give us life. This is what Paul says here.

The believer who is truly free is the one who considers himself the "slave" of Christ. This is the way to "have faith" in daily life: to solve everything by thinking that we belong to Christ and that we are at the service of our brothers. From this attitude we derive joy and peace.

Paul gives a list of the things of the flesh and another of the fruits of the Spirit. Let us remember that flesh and spirit do not mean the same as body and soul. See the commentary on Rom 7, 16.

Note the communal aspect of this morality: we must be in solidarity with our brothers.

◆ At the moment of saying good-bye, once again, Paul speaks about the crisis in the community and we understand that it is not just a crisis concerning observance. There are people there who want to stand out. We immediately recognize some of the problems of our communities.

Those who want to impose circumcision upon them. These are members of the community itself. They are anxious to make an impression by gathering a group of Christians seemingly more serious and more religious because they are circumcised. As a matter of fact, this rite will enable them to be welcomed in Jewish homes – a good way to obtain connections and money. This will also distinguish them from the "common" Christians whose company is not very interesting.

Thus we see that the apparent search for perfection covers up their desire to feel they are in a better place and better considered in society. They do not observe the Law, but they feel proud of these external practices which unite them.

The world has been crucified to me. Paul has chosen a different way. He goes on his way, without a home, persecuted by some, despised by others, feared by those who cannot stand his example of complete abnegation, nor his gathering with so many people whom they consider inferior. This is to follow Christ to the cross.

eternal life from the Spirit.⁹ Let us do good without being discouraged; in due time we shall reap the reward of our constancy.¹⁰ So while there is time, let us do good to all and especially to our brethren in the faith.

I am crucified with Christ

◆ ¹¹ See these large letters I use when I write to you, with my own hand.

Who obliges you to be circumcised?¹² Those who are most anxious to make an impression, instead of risking persecution for the cross of Christ.¹³ Circumcised people indeed! they themselves do not observe the Law, but they feel proud if you bear this sign in your body!

¹⁴ For me, I do not wish to take pride in anything except in the cross of Christ Jesus our Lord. Through him the world has been crucified to me and I to the world.

¹⁵ There is no distinction between the circumcised people and the non-Jews, for a new creation has begun.¹⁶ Let those who live according to this rule receive peace and mercy together with the Israel of God! ¹⁷ Let no one trouble me any longer. For my part, I bear on my body the marks of Jesus.

¹⁸ Brethren, may the grace of Christ Jesus our Lord be with your spirit. Amen.

INTRODUCTION

Our present days are characterized by men's ever more concerted attempts at getting together and, at the same time, by the division of the world in large groups competing with one another. There is a confrontation precisely because, being unable to escape from the necessity to move toward unity, they still have different concepts regarding the final goal. Where does the world come from? Where is humanity going?

When imprisoned in Rome, the Western capital, Paul had the opportunity to listen to and evaluate doctrines coming from every part of the world. And he began answering questions in the letter to the Colossians.

But in the present letter to the Ephesians, which written after the one to the Colossians, Paul writes again, and more intensely, on the plan of God. The world has been created for us so that the New Man might emerge, to be a single family in Christ. All of human race will meet one another – each one in his own place – in the divine person able to embrace them all in boundless love.

The letter to the Ephesians takes up again many parts of the letter to the Colossians, but it seems to have been written in different circumstances.

Letter to the ephesians

Unlike Romans, Corinthians... Ephesians does not answer the concerns of a concrete community which knows the apostle and is known by him. It is rather a document sent to the churches for the believers to reflect on their own Christian identity. These people, many of whom have not known Jesus nor his apostles personally, must understand the central place of the Universal Church in the plan of God.

Was this letter written by Paul or by one of his assistants? Many persons think that Ephesians answers concerns proper of the first years after the death of the apostles (like the letters to Timothy and Titus). So it would be posterior to Paul's death. However, when we see the poor literary quality of the Christian writings in the first century and their insecure theology, we hardly believe that such a magnificent synthesis of Christian faith could have been made without Paul. In many parts Ephesians completes and counterbalances the genial views exposed in Romans.

¹ Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, to the saints in Ephesus.

To you who believe in Christ:

² receive grace and peace from God our Father and from Jesus the Lord.

o ³ Blessed be God, the Father of Christ Jesus our Lord, who in Christ has blessed us from heaven with every spiritual blessing.

⁴ God chose us in him before the creation of the world to be holy and without sin in his presence.

⁵ From eternity he destined us in love to be his adopted sons through Christ Jesus, thus fulfilling his free and generous will.

This was his purpose: ⁶ that his loving kindness which he granted us in his Beloved might finally receive all glory and praise.

o This first page of the letter to the Ephesians is the best global expression of the Christian mystery in the Bible. It also serves to balance Paul's great presentation in his letter to the Romans which could appear to center God's work in the tragedy of sinful man.

Blessed be God! Usually, Paul starts his letters with praises and thanksgiving. Here, however, the prayer is unusually lengthened: Paul gives thanks and at the same time he proclaims God's mysterious plan which he understood through a revelation (3:3).

His mysterious design (9). Actually Paul says: this mystery; but this word means God's design as to his creation. This design is rooted in God, or more precisely in the mystery of the three divine Persons. We know that from God the Father proceed the Son and the Spirit, and from him they receive his very divinity, the three being one only God. But, besides this communication and effusion of life within God, from eternity God the Father, or better expressed, the Divine Council wanted to communicate its riches outside itself, to created beings: this is the mysterious design to which Paul is referring and which encompasses all of human history, profane as well as sacred. According to this plan, adoptive sons of God (5), capable of receiving his Spirit and of returning it to God, must be born and multiply in the universe, children who, in the end, will be gathered into one body (10).

God chose us in Christ (4). Note this expression in Christ on which we commented in 1Cor 1:4. Our election by God is twofold.

First, we understand that God creates us as sparks or images of his Son who is his authentic image and brilliance (Heb 1:1). Every creature comes from God through this Son in whom God contemplates his own richness and on whom all his love is lavished. In him, God the Father has known us from the beginning.

God creates us free and he knows that our frail freedom will not easily find the way to the filial answer which would be fitting. This is why he places the cross of Christ in the center of his creative design. All of history will be guided by

⁷ For in Christ we obtain freedom, sealed by his blood, and have the forgiveness of sins.

In this appears the greatness of his grace,
⁸ which he lavished on us.

⁹ In all wisdom and understanding,
God has made known to us his mysterious design, in accordance with his loving kindness in Christ.

¹⁰ This mystery was to come to effect in the fullness of time:
by uniting everything in Christ,
in heaven and on earth.

¹¹ God has set us apart in Christ, we who were waiting for the Messiah.

¹² He who disposes all things as he wills chose us to be his people for the praise of his glory.

¹³ You, on hearing the word of truth - the Gospel that saves you - have believed in him.

divine Wisdom according to a mystery of death and resurrection whose only goal is to lead us to perfection through our mistakes and our weaknesses. With the coming of Christ, who is the Wisdom of God, in his own death and resurrection, we have the manifestation of the love of the Father who called us (5).

In Christ, we obtain freedom, sealed by his blood (7). It does not mean that Christ shed his blood to make amends to his Father offended by sin, as if God were resentful as we are and as if he were hurt in his dignity. Paul is referring to a biblical law: the emancipation of slaves used to be signed in blood (Ex 21, 6).

Similarly, to free a person not living in truth, we have to show a genuine love, often in costly ways. To redeem us, the three divine Persons will manifest the vastness of divine love (6 and 8), each in a different way. First, the Son of God will surrender his life to the Father, sacrificing himself for his brothers. And then, the Spirit of holiness will be given.

Sealed with the Spirit (13). The Jews were branded, "sealed" in the flesh by the circumcision ritual which showed they belonged to God. Christians, on the other hand, had received the Holy Spirit who acted in them: from him come faith, hope and love, the many forms of service, the gift of knowledge, the miracles and the healings. These gifts are the most obvious proof that they have become children of God. These gifts are only a foretaste of all the marvels that God has in store for us.

Paul distinguishes something like two insights: God's plan in eternity (1-10) and its realization in time (11-14). The last two stanzas correspond to two stages in Sacred history:

- God has set us apart (11). Paul speaks for himself and in the name of the Jewish people chosen to be the people of God.
- You now... (13). Here Paul means the pagan people like the Ephesians whom he is addressing. And so, the fullness of time had come, that is to say the time of the Gospel proclaimed to all men so that they could receive the gifts of the Spirit.

This page clarifies some essential points of faith.

From eternity he destined us (5). Here the word predestination fits. Many - especially Protestants - have understood this term very differently from the way Paul uses it. While Paul presents a plan of the Father, eager to manifest the infinite love which he already shares with the Son and the Spirit, in all his creatures, such people only think about a stern and cold God who decides gratuitously (or even whimsically) that some will be saved and others will not. For them, many people have been destined to hell and they cannot avoid this fate; while others are chosen for heaven and they will be saved.

Paul, however, does not have such an arbitrary decision in mind: instead he shows how God bestows a special love on those whom he calls to belong to Christ, a love different from the love he has for the rest of his creatures. The Bible has little to say about God's love for non-believers, but we must understand it in the light of the one he bestowed on us, choosing us to know Christ in his Church.

And, as promised, you were sealed with the Holy Spirit, ¹⁴ the first pledge of what we shall receive.

So God has liberated the people he made his own,
 for the praise of his glory.

God has put all things under the feet of Christ

+ ¹⁵ I have been told of your faith and your affection towards all the believers. ¹⁶ so I always give thanks to God, remembering you in my prayers. ¹⁷ May the God of Christ Jesus our Lord, the Father of Glory, reveal himself to you and give you a spirit of wisdom, that you may know him. ¹⁸ May he enlighten your inner vision, that you may appreciate the things we hope for since we were called by God. May you know the great and glorious inheritance God sets apart for his saints; ¹⁹ may you understand with what extraordinary power he acts in favour of us who believe.

²⁰ He revealed his almighty power in Christ when he raised him from the dead and had him sit at his right hand in heaven, ²¹ far above all rule, power, authority, dominion, or any other supernatural force that could be named, not only in this world but in the world to come as well.

²² So has God put all things under the feet of Christ and set him above all things, as head of the Church ²³ which is his body. He who fills all in all unfolds his fullness in the Church.

13. 1 Thes 2, 13; 2 Cor 1, 22; Acts 2, 33	14. Rom 5, 5	16. Col 1, 9	17. Jn 17, 3; 1 Jn 5, 20
20. Col 2, 12; 3, 1; 1 Pet 3, 22	21. Phil 2, 9	22. 1 Cor 15, 24; Col 1, 8; Ps 8, 6

While Luther feels crushed by the justice of the Creator and tortures himself, doubting his own salvation, Paul invites us to see in the sacrifice of Jesus, not a love protecting some sinners from God's justice, but rather the clear manifestation of the love of a Father who created us, and who also called us.

If we cannot really understand how the perfect knowledge of God is reconciled with our own freedom, it is unfitting to entertain the doubts and anxiety of those who believe they are subject to fate or "the will of God" from which no one can escape. We are under the weight of a love and blessings (3) only awaiting our response. Predestination is nothing other than this mysterious plan of the grace of God, poured over all creation, similar to and according to the shared life of the three divine Persons: one God alone and a unique love (see commentary on Rom 9).

God chose us in Christ (4). This statement contradicts an error of those thinking that, at the beginning, God created man without giving thought to his possible fall, and only as a result of sin. God would have sent Christ to save the lost sinner.

It is not so: from the beginning Christ was in God's plan. From the beginning, there was a plan for creation, the coming of Christ and the gift of the Spirit. Therefore, the order of creation, the laws of life and the course of history are mysteriously connected with the order existing in God himself.

Christ... the Beloved (6). The preoccupation to "save ourselves" cannot be the basis of our faith. This would be a self-centered attitude like that of people who practise their religion in order to be healthy. In fact, Christ is not simply the instrument of our redemption, as if he came only to pay for our sins. The Son did not come merely to save us from sin, but primarily, to reveal the glory of the Father. And this is precisely why he went to his death. He gives back to the Father all that he receives from him; why would he come in the incarnation if it was not to be reduced to nothing, to surrender into the hands of the Father until the Father gives everything back to him?

+ I have been told of your faith and your affection. Paul delights in the faith of the Ephesians but, above all, he prays they may have hope which must be the source of their dynamism. He describes the stages of hope this way: to know the Father; to appreciate the inheritance set apart for his saints; to understand the power of God to bring us to realize these hopes.

Now, twenty centuries after Paul wrote, we discover how fruitful is this hope which does not make us forget our world, but which urges us to transform it. Paul lived in a world which looked upon hope as an illness. Every plan to transform men was considered illusory. In those days, the fear of death and the belief in blind fate paralyzed all efforts. On the contrary, believers experienced the power of the risen Christ in their lives,

By grace you have been saved!

2 ¹ You were dead through the faults and sins ² in which you once lived. You conformed to this world and followed the Sovereign Ruler who reigns between heaven and earth and who goes on working in those who resist the faith. ³ All of us belonged to them at one time and we followed human greed; we obeyed the urges of our human nature and consented to its desires. By nature, we were worthy of punishment like the rest of humankind.

⁴ But God who is rich in mercy revealed his immense love and ⁵ gave us life with Christ after being dead through our sins. By grace you have been saved! ⁶ And he raised us to life with Christ, giving us a place with him in heaven.

⁷ In showing us such kindness in Christ Jesus, God willed to reveal and unfold in the coming ages the extraordinary riches of his grace. ⁸ By the grace of God you have been saved through faith. This has not come from you: it is God's gift. ⁹ This was not the result of your works, so you are not to feel proud. ¹⁰ What we are is God's work. He has created us in Christ Jesus for the good works he has prepared that we should devote ourselves to them.

Christ is our Peace

◆ ¹¹ Since you were born of pagan nations, remember this: the Jews who are called the Circumcised by being physically marked in their flesh, called you Uncircumcised. ¹² At that time you were without a Messiah; you did not belong to the community of Israel; the covenants of God and his and so they responded. In Christian countries, there arose the conviction that in struggling for justice, overcoming sectarianism, developing culture, we already bring the world closer to "the fulness of Christ".

Far above all power (v 21). In Paul's days, Jews and Christians believed that angels and demons were supernatural powers responsible for ruling the world. They called them: Rulers, Powers, Authorities, Dominion, and Paul was saying to them: all these Powers are inferior to Christ. In our days, we express ourselves differently. Nevertheless, we see the universe subject to the laws of nature, to the forces of matter and of life. It is also subject to obscure forces: collective prejudices, vices and fanaticism. These ruled the world, preventing the emergence of man, until the coming of Christ: see Gal 3:23.

God has put all things under the feet of Christ (v 22). This means the same as the words of our Creed: "Jesus is seated at the right hand of God". It means that in rising, Christ, the God-Man became the First in the universe.

All things under his feet except mankind as Paul adds: He made him head of the Church. Christ acts differently in two areas: in the world, where he is the invisible center in charge; in the Church, of which he is the head, where he can show the riches of his Spirit.

■ The path of men without Christ leads to death.

By nature, we were worthy of punishment like the rest (v 3): this is the starting point of our lives, what we call original sin. On his own, man cannot reach God, nor deserve his favours. On the contrary, we are all rebels, people who neither follow their conscience nor God's calls, internally divided and at odds with one another. Thus, the death of our bodies which is the end of our lives, expresses our true situation: without Christ's love we are dead.

He raised us up with Christ (v 6). Actually an authentic conversion is experienced as a resurrection. Paul is saying more: while many believe that their lives are subject to blind fate, we, on the other hand, must believe beyond doubts in the fulfilment of God's merciful plan which goes beyond time and which has already raised us up with Christ. We are seated with him in heaven, that is to say, assured of victory.

◆ Before Christ, men were divided and they did not know our common Father. Since they were not mature enough for a quick unification in the true faith, God took that into account when he began to prepare Christ's coming. He chose a people and to avoid their being contaminated by the errors of the pagans, he separated them through a law which forbade their living together with other people. The Jews had to wash their hands when they touched something touched by a pagan. In the Temple, far from the Sanctuary, there was a patio open to the pagans and another one, near the Sanctuary reserved promises were not for you; you had no hope and were without God in this world. ¹³ But now, in Christ Jesus and by his blood, you who were once far off have come near.

¹⁴ For Christ is our peace, he who has made the two peoples one, ¹⁵ destroying in his own flesh the wall – the hatred – which separated us. He abolished the Law with its commands and precepts. He made peace in uniting the two peoples in him, creating out of the two one New Man. ¹⁶ He destroyed hatred and reconciled us both to God through the cross, making the two one body.

¹⁷ He came to proclaim peace; peace to you who were far off, peace to the Jews who were near. ¹⁸ Through him we – the two peoples – approach the Father in one Spirit.

¹⁹ Now you are no longer strangers or guests, but fellow citizens of the holy people: you are of the household of God. You are the house ²⁰ whose foundations are the apostles and prophets, and whose cornerstone is Christ Jesus. ²¹ In him the whole structure is joined together and rises to be a holy temple in the Lord. ²² In him you too are being built to become the spiritual sanctuary of God.

God's inheritance is for all

3 ¹ For this reason, I, Paul, came to be the prisoner of Christ for you, the non-Jews. ² You may have heard of the graces God bestowed on me for your sake. ³ By a revelation he gave me the knowledge of his mysterious design, as I have explained in a few words. ⁴ On reading them you will for the Jews, and a wall between the two. There came a time when this divisive line became the sign of all the barriers that Christ was going to destroy.

He taught them to practice coexistence, forbidden until then. Christ, put on the Cross by Jews and pagans, overcomes the hatred of all by a love which forgives and, once risen, he gathers all people to himself.

Thus, just as the cross is made of two pieces, one vertical, towards heaven and the other, horizontal, towards the earth, so peace goes in two directions: towards God and towards men. He has made the two peoples one... and reconciled us both to God. These are the two sides of only one thing, because violence among men is the other expression of our incapability to meet God.

Christ united them: that is to say, whether we like it or not, the Gospel will destroy all differences between men. And no matter how much segregation emerges in our societies, its laws and its institutions will collapse perhaps through violence, but better by being discredited through the sacrifices of its victims.

In one Spirit. The Spirit alone enables each person to be fulfilled in communion with others. Unity among men often means a single party, a single syndicate, with only one ideology. But the order imposed suffocates the personality of those who become resigned as well as of those who silence their opponents.

Unity in the church is not uniformity: believers do not come from a single mold. It is not a matter of belonging to the same party or religion or syndicate: membership and opinions may be different as long as we are committed to seek together the truth and fraternal peace. The Spirit grants each person to be true to himself and to continue "in communion" with the brothers. This is how the "new man" is born: not as the work of politics or of any ideology, but as the work of God, since we are dealing with a new creation as Paul says.

You are of the house of God. In biblical language this means: to belong to God's family. From there, Paul moves on to another image: you are the house, namely, the true temple of God. The community of believers forms the temple, or better, it is being transformed into the temple of God.

United to his community by close bonds, the first century Christians were in danger of being marginalized by the human group among whom they lived. Now, on the contrary, many Christians are more concerned about solidarity with their culture which they want to promote and save: they will only achieve this if there is a Christian community supporting them: solidarity with one's culture cannot replace belonging to Christian community.

o The prisoner of Christ. Paul writes this letter from jail in Rome. He is not only prisoner "because of Christ", but also a prisoner of Christ: he cannot do anything other than make him known (1 Cor 9:16). Moreover, in prison Paul have some idea of how I understand the mystery of Christ.

⁵ This mystery was not made known to past generations but only now, through revelations given to holy apostles and prophets. ⁶ The Gospel makes the non-Jewish people share the same inheritance in Christ Jesus, belong to the same body and receive the same divine promises. As for me, ⁷ I have become the minister of this Good News by the grace and gift of God who has worked in me with all his power.

⁸ Although I am the least among all the believers, this grace was given me: to announce to the pagan nations the immeasurable riches of Christ and ⁹ to make clear to all how the mystery, hidden from the beginning in God, the Creator of all things, is to be fulfilled.

¹⁰ Even the heavenly forces and powers will now discover through the Church the wisdom of God in its manifold resources, as the plan is being fulfilled ¹¹ which God designed from the beginning in Christ Jesus, our Lord. ¹² In him we receive boldness and confidence to approach God.

And finally, may you be filled even with the fullness of God.

¹³ So I ask you not to be discouraged at seeing the trials I endure for you, but rather to feel proud because of them.

+ ¹⁴ And now I kneel in the presence of the Father ¹⁵ from whom every family in heaven and on earth has received its name.

¹⁶ May he strengthen in you the inner man through his Spirit, according to the riches of his glory.

¹⁷ May Christ dwell in your hearts through faith.

May you be rooted and founded in love.

¹⁸ May you be able to understand with all the believers the width, the length, the height and the depth in a word, ¹⁹ may you know the love of Christ which surpasses all knowledge.

²⁰ Glory to God who shows his power in us and can do much more than we could ask or imagine: ²¹ glory to him in the Church and in Christ Jesus through all generations for ever and ever. Amen.

suffers as Christ (see Col 1:24). Thus, he can say that his suffering is "glory".

Paul emphasizes what he has meditated in jail, what seems most new in the work of Christ: This is the "mystery", or God's plan calling all people into becoming a single body, without any racial distinctions. Jesus had proclaimed this equality (Mt 20) but the early Christians did need several divine interventions to be convinced (Acts 10).

The heavenly forces (v 10): see com. on Gal 3:23 and Eph 1, 21. We would not be distorting Paul's thinking by saying that multinational directors, presidents and the great of this world are going to discover the true face of God who manifests his glory in his poor and his saints (2 Thes 1:10) through the Church.

+ And now I kneel... without further delay. Paul moves from his presentation to prayer. Such is the way of the inner man (16) who is not satisfied with thinking about God or talking about him as if he were an object. The Spirit preserves in him the awareness of this Presence which gives him life. As St. Teresa said: "I carry the heart of my God and the God of my heart everywhere".

The Father from whom... has received its name... (v 15). Let us not forget that the Father is the source of the divine Being and in him are found the order and the mystery of the divine Persons. The Father is also the origin of all that exists, and fatherhood is a basic element of all order, whether in creation or in the Church.

Therefore, the family, with parental authority, is the basis of society, and fatherhood is also seen in the Church: the succession of bishops, the authority of the hierarchy not dependent on people's votes, are part of the divine order in the Church. A society which does not acknowledge fathers, and which scorns marriage, as well as "spontaneous" churches, are devious structures:

Which surpasses all knowledge (19). People

We shall become the perfect man

4 ¹ Therefore I, the prisoner of Christ, invite you to live the vocation you have received. ² Be humble, kind, patient, and bear with one another in love.

³ Make every effort to keep among you the unity of Spirit through the bonds of peace. ⁴ Let there be one body and one spirit, for God, in calling you, gave the same Spirit to all. ⁵ One Lord, one faith, one baptism. ⁶ One God, the Father of all, who is above all and works through all and is in all.

⁷ But to each of us divine grace is given according to the measure of Christ's gift. ⁸ Therefore it is said: When he ascended to the heights, he brought captives and gave his gifts to men.

⁹ He ascended. What does it mean but that he had first descended to the dead in the lower parts of the world?

¹⁰ He himself who went down, then ascended far above all the heavens to fill all things. ¹¹ To some he gave to be apostles, to others prophets, or even evangelists, or pastors and teachers. ¹² So he prepared those who belong to him for the ministry, in order to build up the Body of Christ, ¹³ until we are all united in the same faith and the same knowledge of the Son of God. Thus we shall become the perfect Man, upon reaching maturity and sharing the fulness of Christ.

¹⁴ Then no longer shall we be like children tossed about by any wave or wind of doctrine, and deceived by the cunning of men who drag them along into error. ¹⁵ Rather, with sincere love, we shall grow in every way towards him who is the head, Christ. ¹⁶ He gives order and cohesion to the whole body through a network of joints, each of the members performing its own function so that the body may grow and build itself in love.

Put on the new man

◆ ¹⁷ I say to you, then, and with insistence I advise you in the Lord: do not imitate the pagans who live an aimless kind of life. ¹⁸ Their understanding is in darkness and they redo not come to union with God only through intellectual efforts or transcendental meditation, but through the kind of love of which Christ was the model and the focus.

■ Paul names enthusiastically all that we have in common through Christ and through the work of the Holy Spirit. Having so much in common is a call to union, love and peace. There is still more: even particular gifts must be placed at the service of the community in the same way as stones or bricks of a building. And what is being built is not just any building, nor is it simply a temple (see chapter 2: 19-22), it is the Body of Christ or the Perfect Man, made up of the millions of members now forming humanity and those of the future. Some day, when all are united we will form this "Perfect Man" with countless members.

Jesus of Nazareth lived humbly until his death only once, but having been made the Head of humanity through his resurrection, he suffers everywhere; works in every field of human activity; gives his life in every possible way; gathers in him every form of love, and lives the whole diversity of human existence in the person of his members.

Then, we will no longer be like children. Paul suggests that the Ephesians are still children, at least from time to time, when they allow themselves to be influenced by some trend of opinions. He invites them to become a mature community, capable of being led by the truth, and of building itself through love. We too will have to see what degree we have passed that age in which we needed the constant drive and direction of another: spiritually speaking, adults are those conscious of their Christian responsibilities because they really know the Son of God.

◆ The old man and the new man. This Pauline image opposes two lifestyles: both exist in society today and in each one of us to a certain point. On one hand, we can be carried away by greed to the point of silencing our conscience and hardening our heart in a mortal way; and on the other hand, Christ wants to transform and renew us through his Spirit. We all tend to be one main in ignorance because of their blind conscience, very far from the life of God. ¹⁹ As a result of their corruption, they have abandoned themselves to sensuality and eagerly given themselves to every kind of immorality.

²⁰ But you did not learn this from Christ, ²¹ assuming that you really heard of him and were taught according to the truth that is in Jesus.

²² You must give up your former way of living, the old man, whose deceitful desires bring self-destruction.

²³ Let your mind be spiritually renewed ²⁴ and put on the new man, created by God in his likeness, in holiness proceeding from truth.

²⁸ Let the one who used to steal steal no more, but busy himself working usefully with his hands so that he may have something to share with the needy.

²⁹ Do not let even one bad word come from your mouth, but only good words that will encourage when necessary and be helpful to those who hear.

³⁰ Do not sadden the Holy Spirit of God. This is the seal with which you were marked while you wait for the day of salvation. ³¹ Do away with all quarreling, rage, anger, insults and every kind of malice: ³² be good and understanding, mutually forgiving one another as God forgave you in Christ.

Imitate God

5 ¹ As most beloved children of God, strive to imitate him.

² Follow the way of love, the example of Christ who loved you. He gave himself up for us and became the offering and the sacrificial victim whose fragrance rises to God. ³ And since you are holy, there must not be among you even a mention of sexual immorality or greed, or any kind of impurity: these should not be named among you. ⁴ So too for scandalous words, nonsense and foolishness, of these two persons, the old, ruined man, without hope and a slave to his egotism; or a person transfigured by love.

Which God created in his Likeness. God created man in his image, though the man who truly bears this image is the risen Christ, the victor over sin and death. He is the first of a new race of men. When we let go of the sin which disfigures us, when we follow Christ and live in his Spirit, we also share in this New Man (see also 2:15).

The white garment which is put on the adult at baptism means the change of life which he has undertaken. This renewal can also occur at the end of a retreat, or a seminar when the believer gives up an irresponsible and routine lifestyle "in order to put on Christ" through a more authentic and dynamic Christian life. This change can also be a slow process, day by day.

Old man, new man corresponds to other of St. Paul's formulation: to live according to the flesh, or to the Spirit (Rom. 8:5); to be children of darkness, or of light (Eph. 5:8); to be slaves of sin, or to be free in Christ (Gal. 5:1). These are the two alternatives in life; the transition from one to other is what makes a Christian. To do so is always to die and to rise with Christ, in a spiritual way (Co. 3:1); to die to evil, to rise to goodness. Therefore, all the moral demands of Paul and the moral guidelines of the Church today are not an arbitrary code of ethics, but the natural and unavoidable consequence of the Christian alternative.

Do not sadden the Holy Spirit. This can be easily understood if we think about the sadness we feel every time we reject a good idea, an impulse to act in a better way under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, or when a friend or a child has a mishap because he did not listen to the advice we gave him.

• Here are a few elements of a new way to live, as was already shown in the previous verses.

which are not fitting; instead offer thanksgiving to God.

⁵ Know this: no depraved, impure or covetous person who serves the 'god Money' shall have part in the kingdom of Christ and of God. ⁶ Let no one deceive you with empty arguments for these are the sins which God is about to condemn in people who do not obey. ⁷ Do not associate with such people. ⁸ You were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Behave as children of light; ⁹ the fruits of light are kindness, justice and truth in every form.

¹⁰ Train yourselves to do what pleases the Lord, ¹¹ and take no part in futile works of darkness; expose them instead. ¹² Indeed it is a shame even to speak of what those people do in secret. ¹³ but as soon as it is exposed to the light, everything becomes clear. ¹⁴ And what has become clear becomes light. Therefore it is said:

"Awake, you who sleep, arise from the dead that the light of Christ may shine on you."

¹⁵ Pay attention to how you behave. Do not live as the unwise do, but as responsible persons. ¹⁶ Make good use of the present time, because these days are evil. ¹⁷ So do not be foolish but understand what the will of the Lord is.

²¹ Be subject to one another out of respect for Christ.

Husbands, love your wives

+ ²² Let wives be subject to their husbands, as to the Lord. ²³ The husband is the head of his wife, as Christ is the head of the Church, his body, of whom he is also the Saviour. ²⁴ And as the Church submits to Christ, so let a wife submit in everything to her husband.

²⁵ As for you, husbands, love your

To imitate God (Rom 5:6-11) who loves everyone, the good and the bad (Mt 5:48). In a more tangible way we have a model in Christ, the Son of God, who gave himself out of love for us: as the way, the light and life.

To reject everything which shames us and is done only in darkness, or better, to be aware of the light which was given to us and to let it shine through our behavior.

To be more sensible and responsible in our lives. Because these days are evil (16): that means that if we cannot judge, choose, make a personal decision, the very current of daily events will keep us in mediocrity or will lead us to evil. Everything changes when a believer, a couple, a group 'awakens' and takes daily or weekly time out to discover what is God's will for them, in the time and circumstances in which they live, and then review what they accomplished and what they left undone.

Do not get drunk (18). Men need enthusiasm, happiness and strength: if they wish they can experience the enthusiasm, the happiness and the strength which the Holy Spirit gives. But it is not possible to feel at the same time the elation coming from the Spirit and that which comes from alcohol, drugs and dangerous diversions.

Sing... giving thanks (19) and thus we shall also experience the consolation of the Spirit and find the same faith and the same experiences in others.

We can easily see that in the passage 5:21-6:9, Paul more or less repeats what he had written, shortly before, in the Letter to the Colossians (3:18-4:1). Nevertheless, when he speaks of everyone's "submission" to others, and especially the woman's submission to her husband's authority, he finds new thoughts, which he develops, about marriage.

+ Wives be subject... Paul does not emphasize that women must be submissive, but rather that they submit to their husbands as to the Lord. Given the fact that the society of the time kept a wife subject to her husband, Paul tells her: "Be submissive as to the Lord". Paul's language reflects the culture of his time with regard to marriage: if he wrote today he would phrase wives as Christ loved the Church and gave himself up for her.²⁶ He washed her and made her holy by baptism in the Word.²⁷ As he wanted a radiant Church without stain or wrinkle or any blemish, but holy and blameless, he himself had to prepare and present her to himself.

²⁸ In the same way, husbands should love their wives as they love their own bodies. He who loves his wife loves himself.²⁹ And no one has ever hated his body; he feeds and takes care of it. That is just what Christ does for the Church,³⁰ because we are a part of his body.

³¹ Scripture says: *Because of this a man shall leave his father and mother to be united with his wife, and the two shall become one flesh.*³² This is a very great mystery, and I refer to Christ and the Church.

³³ As for you, let each one love his wife as himself, and let the wife respect her husband.

Children, parents, servants and masters

6¹ Children, obey your parents for this is right: ²*Honour your father and your mother.* And this is the first commandment that has promise: ³*that you may be happy and enjoy long life in the land.* ⁴ And you, fathers, do not make rebels of your children, but educate them by correction and instruction which the Lord may inspire.

⁵ Servants, obey your masters of this world with fear and respect, with simplicity of heart, as if obeying Christ. ⁶ Do not serve only when you are watched or in order to please men, but become servants of Christ who do God's will with all your heart. ⁷ Work willingly, for the Lord and not for men, mindful that the good each one has done, ⁸ whether servant or free, will be rewarded by the Lord.

⁹ And you, masters, deal with your servants in the same way, and do not

5. Col 3, 22; Tit 2, 9; 1 Pet 2, 18; Rom 6, 15 things differently. So the "feminist issue" in this long text about matrimony is irrelevant.

Paul is pointing out the essentials: the primacy of mutual love and respect in marriage; the mystical sense of marriage as embodiment (or sacrament) of Christ's love for the Church (for us). This New Testament doctrine on marriage should inspire Christians everywhere and of all cultural backgrounds.

In fact, there have been, there are and will be different cultural models of the place of men and women in marriage. Even nowadays the "model" differs in the West and in the East; in the "first" and the "third world"; in the middle classes and popular classes...

So, every couple must find its own balance and manage according to the capacities and natural authority of each party. Among Christians there is not room for the male prejudice of having women submit, nor must one feel inferior in adapting to the wishes of the other, since the ideal for everyone is to serve others (5:21).

As Christ loved the Church. He was the one who loved us freely, in spite of the fact that we were not better than others, the same way as a man and a woman choose each other, over others perhaps more gifted.

He gave himself up for her. Christ finds us in our sins and he takes us in charge, even to the ultimate consequences: he gives his life to purify us. This is the way to show the main quality of Christian love, which is faithfulness. The self gift of the spouse is definitive and from that moment on, each will do his best to save the other, that is, to help the other grow and be better. The perfect couple is not the one that lives without problems and accepts mediocrity, but the two who compel each other to give one's best.

He washed her by the baptism in the Word (see Jas 1:18-21 and Jn 15:3). If the ritual is important, what is even more important is for us to welcome the Word of God which gives us life.

A man shall leave... (v 31). Paul refers this phrase to the union, beyond our understanding, of God and humankind in Christ: the bridegroom (Mk 2:19). But marriage also involves a mystery, that is, a divine wealth which could not be understood before Christ came. When we say that marriage is a sacrament, it does not only mean that we have a ceremony in a church: it means that marriage is going to be an image of Christ's love. The mystery of God's love is shown, in the midst of men, by couples who live love "according to Christ". Thus marriage is a "sacrament" or the image and presence of something holy. See Gen 1:16 and 2:22.

threaten them, since you know that they and you have the same Lord who is in heaven, and he treats all fairly.

Be strong in the Lord

◆ ¹⁰ Finally, be strong in the Lord with his energy and strength. ¹¹ Put on the whole armour of God to be able to resist the cunning of the devil. ¹² Our battle is not against human forces but against the rulers and authorities and their dark powers that govern this world. We are struggling against the spirits and supernatural forces of evil.

¹³ Therefore put on the whole armour of God, that in the evil day, you may resist and stand your ground, making use of all your weapons. ¹⁴ Take truth as your belt, justice as your breastplate, ¹⁵ and zeal as your shoes to propagate the Gospel of peace. ¹⁶ Always hold in your hand the shield of faith to repel the flaming arrows of the devil. ¹⁷ Finally, use the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, that is, the Word of God.

¹⁸ Pray at all times as the Spirit inspires you. Keep watch together with sustained prayer and supplication for all the brothers. ¹⁹ Pray also for me, so that when I speak, I may be given words to proclaim bravely the mystery of the Gospel. ²⁰ Even when in chains I am an ambassador of God; may he give me the strength to speak as I should.

²¹ I also want you to know how I am and what I am doing. Tychicus, our beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord, will tell you everything. ²² I am sending him precisely to give you news of us and comfort you all.

²³ May peace and love with faith from God the Father and from Christ Jesus the Lord, be with the brothers and sisters. ²⁴ And may his blessing be with all who love Christ Jesus, our Lord, with undying love.

12. 2 Cor 6, 7; 10, 4 16. 1 Thes 5, 8; Is 59, 17
19. Rom 15, 30; Phil 1, 14 20. 2 Cor 5, 20

17. Heb 4, 12; Rev 1, 16 18. Col 4, 2; Lk 18, 1

The husband is the head of his wife. We already mentioned that Paul was referring to a predominantly male culture. But even so, a man had to fulfill his responsibilities as head of the household and he had to love his wife. Thus, this was a condemnation of men who let their wives bear the responsibility for the home, and then want to dominate them by force: such demanding and jealous attitudes are unworthy of a mature man and of a Christian.

Paul teaches that the model of married love is the love that Christ has for everyone, as well as for all gathered into one body. Thus, married people are invited not to lock themselves in their married love: they must find a way to help, promote and save their environment and the world, by radiating their authentic love and also through their commitment to the service of others.

■ It is obvious that Paul dislikes disorder and lack of discipline within families and also in communities. He gives parents solid principles of education: be patient, try to know and understand your child, and educate him in a Christian way, according to the spirit of the beatitudes: without tyranny or laxity, the two pitfalls of formation. See com. on Sir 30:1-2.

Paul reminds the slave of his nobility and begs him to live with dignity, without servility: this is the first step toward genuine liberation.

◆ If so many youths and generous people abandon what they think is Christianity, could it not be because it seems to them that Christianity does not provide them with goals of action to match their energies? A faith which would cost nothing, justifying everything, would offer nothing about which to be excited and it would cease to be of interest. We must recover the fighting spirit of Christianity.

In following Christ who came to overthrow the "Prince of darkness", Christians know they will have to fight against this defeated king until the second coming of Christ. Persecutions, corruption in the Church, temptations to lose heart and betray, all come from the devil present everywhere. To fight against the devil, only the weapons Christ left us work: truth, justice, zeal for the kingdom of God, faith, Word of God.

the

PHILIPPIANS

1 From Paul and Timothy, servants of Christ Jesus, to the saints in Philippi, with their bishops and deacons; to you all in Christ Jesus:

² May grace and peace be yours from God, our Father, and Christ Jesus the Lord.

³ I give thanks to my God each time I remember you, ⁴ and when I pray for you, I pray with joy. ⁵ I cannot forget all you shared with me in the service of the Gospel, from the first day until now. ⁶ Since God began such a good work in you, I am certain that he will complete it in the day of Christ Jesus.

⁷ This is my hope for you, for I carry you all in my heart: whether I am in prison or defending and confirming the Gospel, you are with me and share the same grace.

⁸ God knows that I love you dearly with the love of Christ Jesus, ⁹ and in my prayers I ask that your love may lead you each day to a deeper knowledge and clearer discernment, ¹⁰ that you may have good criteria for everything. So you may be pure of heart and come blameless to the day of Christ, ¹¹ filled with the fruit of holiness which comes through Christ Jesus, for the glory and praise of God!

Christ is my life

+ ¹² I want you to know, brothers and sisters that what has happened to me has served to advance the Gospel.

¹³ Actually, the whole praetorian guard, and even those outside the palace, know that I am in chains for Christ. ¹⁴ And what is more, my condition as prisoner has encouraged most of our brothers who are now emboldened to proclaim the Word of God more openly and without fear.

11. Heb 12, 11;

Reading this letter to the Philippians will be restful for us after the previous pages in which Paul taught and argued so forcefully. This is a real letter, more personal, considerate and tender than Paul, while in prison, wrote to the community which always showed him the most love. He gives them news about himself and asks them to live more united.

It is here that he wrote the very famous page: Have the same feelings that Christ Jesus had.

Paul accepted their material help, thus showing his great confidence in them. Usually, to avoid being called selfish, he refused to receive money and preferred to earn his living through his work while he was preaching.

Paul was in prison when he wrote this letter. We do not know for sure if it was in Rome in the year 62 (when he wrote to the Ephesians and to the Colossians), or if he was imprisoned in Ephesus in 56.

¹⁵ Some, it is true, are moved by envy and want to challenge me, but others preach Christ with a good intention. ¹⁶ These latter are moved by love and realize that I am here to defend the Gospel. ¹⁷ The others announce Christ to challenge me. They do not act with a pure intention but think they are making my prison more unbearable. ¹⁸ But in any case, whether sincerely or not, Christ is proclaimed and because of this I rejoice and have no regrets.

¹⁹ I know that all this will be a grace for me because of your prayers and the helps given by the Spirit of Christ. ²⁰ I am hopeful, even certain that I shall not be ashamed. I feel as assured as I have been at any time that Christ will be exalted through my person, whether I live or I die.

²¹ For to me, to live is Christ, and even death is profitable for me. ²² But if I am to go on living, I shall be able to enjoy fruitful labour. ²³ So I feel torn between the two. I desire greatly to leave this life and to be with Christ, which will be better by far, ²⁴ but it is necessary for you that I remain in this life. ²⁵ And because I am convinced of this, I know that I will stay and remain with you for your progress and happiness in the faith. ²⁶ I will surely come to you again, and give you more reason for being proud of belonging to Christ Jesus.

Stand firm in faith

■ ²⁷ Try, then, to adjust your lives according to the Gospel of Christ. May I see it when I come to you, and if I cannot come, may I at least hear that you stand firm in the same spirit, striving to uphold the faith of the Gospel with one heart. ²⁸ Do not be afraid of your opponents; your unity fore-o With their bishops and deacons. In Acts, we saw how the apostles used to establish a community, a church in every city where they had proclaimed the Gospel. They did not leave without having established a Council of leaders, called presbyters or elders, according to Jewish customs. After a few years, bishops, or, super-visors stood out: they may have been the leading members of the Council of Presbyters. They were not then, like today's bishop.

As to the deacons they were in charge of various services in the community. They may have done missionary work in areas which did not yet have a community.

Grace and peace! The Jews greeted one another with 'Peace!' and the Greeks did the same saying: 'Rejoice.' Now Paul addresses a community of Greeks and Jews, and he invents a new greeting to both of them by putting: Grace which sounds almost like 'rejoice' in his language.

God who began such a good work in you, will complete it (v 6). Such is Paul's hope, expressed in several of his letters (see 1 Cor 1:8).

Enabling you to recognize what is best (v 9). Believers know that faith does not solve everything. God calls them to find new roads through the problems coming up every day. In order to make progress, we need to reflect, to be attentive, what we call "revision of life" to discover what is positive and negative in what makes up daily life, in our work relationships, social duties and entertainments. This is why Paul prays for them that they may have love and generosity, but also clarity and understanding.

+ We see the eminent apostle surrounded by envious people. Not only is he persecuted by the Jews, but in the Church itself the "false brothers," delighted to know that he is in jail, see in that very fact the possibility of becoming famous. All this can be compared to the situation of militants working unselfishly, but surrounded by others who have not overcome mediocrity.

I am hopeful and I am certain that I shall not be ashamed (v 20). Paul's concern is that his trial and his appearances serve to reveal Christ's message to the authorities.

For me to live is Christ. It is very fashionable to emphasize that Christians must "understand the world" and be "fully human." But this is only a part of the truth. Christians are not of this world and as soon as the love of God grows in them, they feel alien to this world because longing for Christ and for Eternity has taken root in them.

Paul longs to see them but has no desire to linger and have a good time sharing friendly meals with them. He longs rather for meeting Christ in his glory: see 2 Cor 4:16 and Phil 3:10.

I desire to be with Christ (v 23). Thus, those who say that a person ceases to exist at the time tells their defeat and your victory. All this comes from God, ²⁹for through Christ you have been granted not only to believe in Christ but also to suffer for him. ³⁰And you now share the same struggle that you saw I had and that I continue to have, as you know.

Imitate the humility of Jesus

2 ¹If I may advise you in the name of Christ and if you can hear it as the voice of love; if we share the same spirit and are capable of mercy and compassion, then I beg of you ²make me very happy: have one love, one spirit, one feeling, ³do nothing through rivalry or vain conceit. On the contrary let each of you gently consider the others as more important than yourselves. ⁴Do not seek your own interest, but rather that of others. ⁵Let what was seen in Christ Jesus be seen in you:

⁶ Though being divine in nature, he did not claim in fact equality with God, ⁷ but emptied himself, taking on the nature of a servant, made in human likeness, and in his appearance found as a man.
⁸ He humbled himself by being obedient to death, death on the cross.
⁹ That is why God exalted him and gave him the Name which outshines all names, ¹⁰ so that at the Name of Jesus all knees should bend in heaven, on earth and among the dead, ¹¹ and all tongues proclaim that Christ Jesus is the Lord to the glory of God the Father.

of death and only recovers life in the resurrection, are wrong. See 2 Cor 5:8 also.

■ Be united and speak boldly. This is the advice Paul gives to the churches facing a strong opposition. Persecutors always try to divide us in order to be able to eliminate a few, accused or abandoned by their own brothers.

◆ In spite of their generosity and their faith, the Philippian believers are divided. Paul does not enter into the controversy but instead, he addresses everyone and gives them the secret of Christian life together: humility, not doing anything through rivalry or vain conceit.

In a hymn which is a sort of creed, Paul proposes the example of Christ: his path from God to man, from rich to poor, first to last, from master to servant.

The Lord Jesus desired to identify with the most humble, the most afflicted, the most despised. Such were Jesus' attitudes and they must be those of his followers, the Christians. Our desire to identify with the most humble, to share with them, is the guideline of a truly evangelical life.

In this, we must be different from most people whose primary concerns are personal realization or apparently good ambitions which, in choosing the opposite path, Christ underrated.

He did not claim equality with God: the mystery of God's Son who becomes a mortal man and gives up God's Glory although he could have preserved it even in his human life. Since Christ was going to be the New Man, glorified by God and placed above everything, his being subject to misery and limitations was a way of being reduced to nothingness.

God exalted him. The humiliation and obedience of Christ were the condition of his glory; He gave him the Name (of God), that is, he made him fully enjoy in his human nature the divine Power (or Name).

◆ Continue working out your salvation with fear and trembling. It is not a matter of being afraid of God. Paul has just urged his readers to rejoice, since they no longer have a spirit of slaves to make them fearful, but the spirit of sons (Rom 8:15).

Paul, in fact, has just recalled Christ's sacrifice and he draws this conclusion: take your life very seriously (this is the meaning of fear and o ¹² Therefore, my dearest friends, as you always obeyed me while I was with you, even more now that I am far from you, continue working out your salvation "with fear and trembling."

¹³ It is God who makes you not only wish but also carry out what pleases him. ¹⁴ Do everything without grumbling, ¹⁵ so that without fault or blame, you will be children of God without reproach among a crooked and perverse generation. You are a light among them, like stars in the universe, ¹⁶ holding to the Word of life. I shall feel proud of you on the day of Christ on seeing that my effort and labour have not been in vain. ¹⁷ And if I have to pour out my blood as an offering to celebrate your faith, I rejoice and continue to share your joy; ¹⁸ and you likewise should rejoice and share my joy.

Paul's messengers

+ ¹⁹ The Lord Jesus lets me hope that I may soon send you Timothy, and have news of you. With this I will feel encouraged. ²⁰ For I have no one so concerned for you as he is. ²¹ Most follow their own interest, not those of Christ Jesus. ²² But Timothy has proved himself, as you know. Like a son at the side of his father, he has been with me at the service of the Gospel. ²³ Because of that I hope to send him to you as soon as I see how things work out for me. ²⁴ Nevertheless the Lord lets me think that I myself shall be coming soon.

²⁵ I judged it necessary to send back to you Epaphroditus, who worked and fought at my side and whom you sent to help me in my great need. ²⁶ In fact, he missed you very much and was still more worried because you had heard of his sickness. ²⁷ He was indeed sick and almost died, but God took pity on him and on me, sparing me greater sorrow. ²⁸ And so I am eager to send him to you, so that on seeing him you will be glad and I will be at peace. ²⁹ Receive him then with joy, as it is fitting in the Lord. Consider highly persons like him, ³⁰ who almost died for the work of Christ; he risked his life to serve me on your behalf when you could not help me.

Do not turn back to the Jewish law

3 ¹ Finally, my brothers and sisters, rejoice in the Lord trembling: as does the one carrying with care a precious load). Be aware that God is at work in you through these good desires coming to you. Live in the presence of God.

+ Paul usually deals with personal matters at the end of his letters. Here he seems to interrupt the theme of the letter: the same happens in 3:1. Paul announces two visits to the Christians of Philippi.

Timothy is Paul's assistant; he is entrusted with several missions to the communities. It seems that Timothy did not have much authority and he could be easily humiliated by those disliking Paul's direction.

As to Epaphroditus, he was a Christian from Philippi who had left his family, spent his money and faced risks in order to go and visit Paul. The community of believers must pay attention to its most committed members, with few means, in order to assist them. The Church sometimes presents as examples, militants from the working classes or peasants who were quite forgotten by their brothers in the faith during their lives.

■ The discourse of Paul seems to be interrupted here. Paul begins a violent polemic against ill-converted Jews who keep repeating that one must first be faithful to the laws and customs of the Old Testament, in order to be a good Christian.

Beware of the dogs...! (v 2) Paul applies to the Jews, proud of being the chosen people, the very insults which they reserved for non-Jews. Jews were sealed by the circumcision, but they mocked people of other religions who incised is safer. ² Beware of the dogs, beware of the bad workers; beware of the circumcised. ³ We are the circumcised people since we serve God according to the spirit, and our confidence is in Christ Jesus rather than in our merits.

⁴ I myself do not lack those human qualities in which people have confidence. If some of them seem to be accredited with such qualities, how much more am I! ⁵ I was circumcised when eight days old. I was born of the race of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin; I am a Hebrew, born of Hebrews. With regard to the Law, I am a Pharisee, ⁶ and such was my zeal for the Law that I persecuted the Church. As for being righteous according to the Law, I was blameless.

⁷ But once I found Christ, all those things that I might have considered as profit, I reckoned as loss. ⁸ Still more, everything seems to me as nothing compared with the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord. For his sake I have let everything fall away and I now consider all as garbage if instead I may gain Christ. ⁹ May I be found in him, without merit or holiness of my own for having fulfilled the Law, but with the holiness which comes through faith in Christ, the holiness given by God which depends on faith in Christ Jesus.

¹⁰ I want to know him; I want to experience the power of his resurrection and share in his sufferings and become like him in his death. ¹¹ May I attain the resurrection from the dead!

¹² I do not believe I have already reached the goal, nor do I consider myself perfect, but I press on till I possess Christ Jesus, since I have been pursued by him. ¹³ No, brothers and sisters, I do not claim to have reached my goal yet. I say only this; forgetting what is behind me, I race forward and run towards the goal, ¹⁴ my eyes on the prize to which God has called us from above in Christ Jesus. ¹⁵ Let all of us who claim to be perfect have the same way of thinking, but if there is something on which you differ, God will make it clear to you. ¹⁶ In the meantime, let us hold on to what we have attained.

¹⁷ Unite in imitating me, brothers and sisters, and look at those who walk in our way of life. ¹⁸ For many live as enemies of the cross of Christ. I have said it to you many times, and:

their skin.

Through what Paul says concerning his faithfulness to Judaism, we know something of his past. He was born in Tarsus to a Jewish family who had left their country and had settled there, in "Greek" territory, where they dedicated themselves to business. His parents were wealthy and well thought of since they had the dignity and the rights of Roman citizens (see Acts 22:28). Along with Greek culture, Paul received the religious education of the Bible and the Jewish people. He saw first hand the pagan feasts and sacrifices and he was proud of belonging to God's people, of being circumcised and instructed in God's promises to his race. His parents sent him to Jerusalem to study Scripture and the Law with the great masters of his time (see Acts 22:3).

He was a model strict Pharisee. He did not meet Christ but he did meet the early Christians. Because he was faithful to the religion of his fathers, he believed it was necessary to persecute, imprison and even kill those men preaching a new doctrine, and deceiving – so he thought – the people, since they proclaimed a false, defeated and crucified Messiah.

Men who feel sure of themselves and who believe they are just before God are hard to convert to faith. Paul was such a man and he accepted losing everything, considering it as garbage (v 8).

Forgetting what is behind me (v 13). Differently from the Pharisee who feels secure before God in recalling his merits, because he belongs to the holy people and to the group of the good ones, because he observes the Law and does good deeds, Paul only wants to forget. Forget his worth and gains (according to men's judgment) to be a better recipient of the free grace of God; forget what he already knows about God; thus being open to new experience.

now I repeat it with tears: ¹⁹ they are heading for ruin; their belly is their god and they feel proud of what should be their shame. They only think of earthly things.

²⁰ For us, our citizenship is in heaven, from where we await the coming of our Saviour, Jesus Christ, the Lord. ²¹ He will transfigure our lowly body, making it like his own body, radiant in Glory, through the power which is his to submit everything to himself.

Agree with one another and be happy

◆ ¹ Therefore, my brothers whom I love and long for, you my glory and crown, be steadfast in the Lord. ² I beg Evodia and Syntyche to agree with each other in the Lord. ³ And you, Sycyus, my true companion, I beg you to help them. Do not forget that they have laboured with me in the service of the Gospel, together with Clement and my other fellow-workers whose names are written in the Book of Life.

⁴ Rejoice in the Lord always. I say it again: rejoice ⁵ and may everyone experience your gentle and understanding heart. The Lord is near: ⁶ do not be anxious about anything. In everything resort to prayer and supplication together with thanksgiving and bring your requests before God. ⁷ Then the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus.

⁸ Finally, brothers and sisters, fill your minds with whatever is truthful, holy, just, pure, lovely and noble. Be mindful of whatever deserves praise and admiration. ⁹ Put into practice what you have learned from me, what I passed on to you, what you heard from me or saw me doing, and the God of peace will be with you.

Paul's thankfulness

○ ¹⁰ I rejoice in the Lord because of your concern for me. You were indeed concerned for me before, but you had no opportunity of showing it. ¹¹ I do not say this because of being in want; I have learned to manage with what I have. ¹² I know what it is to want and what it is to have plenty. I am trained for both: to be hungry or satisfied, to have much or little. ¹³ I

I want to know him. The greatest thing for Christians is not to perform miracles, or to speak in tongues, but to know Christ and to grasp the secret of his humiliation for our sakes. I want to experience the power of his resurrection. There are some people who would like to feel the presence of God and to see him in some way, but the way to experience his power which transfigures us, is by sharing in Christ's sufferings (2 Cor 1:3-5).

All of us who claim to be perfect (v 15). See what was said in 1 Cor 2:6. Paul speaks ironically again about those who believe they belong to a superior class of Christians, while he would not dare consider himself to be perfect (v 12).

Finally, he insists on the resurrection. Because we know that our bodies (or persons) will be raised and that the universe will be renewed, we must put passing things in their place: food, wine, sex, stop being idols.

◆ Once again the theme is interrupted; this passage seems to be the continuation of 2:19-3:1

The Book of Life (v 3) is among the Jews, a common image to mean those who will be saved (Rv 20:12).

Fill your minds with whatever is truthful (v 8). Paul said again and again that it is not enough to focus on the commandments to avoid what is forbidden. Instead, the Spirit teaches us constant creativity in daily life. In paying attention to all that is true, noble, ... we discover what we can do better. We focus on all that is good, wherever we find it, even among unbelievers.

○ Paul thanks the Church of Philippi for their help. He, who is so jealous of his independence and anxious not to seem to take advantage of others, under the pretext of religion, accepts what his real friends give him.

INTRODUCTION TO COLOSSIANS

Around the year 62, Paul, imprisoned in Rome, writes to the Colossae Christians who, without realizing it, are minimizing Christ.

They no longer feel secure in their belief in Christ and they want to add religious practices from the Old Testament: depriving themselves of eating certain foods, perhaps, of drinking wine, in order to be more perfect. Moreover, they begin to pay homage to "angels"; this is what they called the hidden forces which, according to them, determined men's destiny. They resembled some modern believers who trust in devotion to souls, or believe in astrology, or consult their horoscopes in order to know their destiny. And so, they no longer look upon Christ as the only Saviour and they prefer to trust in their efforts and sacrifices or in practices which do not belong to the Church.

The crisis of the Church in the first century gave us this letter where Paul explained the absolute supremacy of Christ. Is not something similar happening in our days? From burning issues as violence and peace are today, the message of Christ becomes deeper and clearer.

The letter to the Colossians, like other letters of Paul, mentions Timothy at his side (1:1). We know that from the beginning Paul chose him as his assistant and considered him as his "true son in Christ." Perhaps Timothy had a great part in the writing of this letter. This could explain at the same time that the style is very different from Paul's in his most authentic letters, and that, nevertheless, the content is so rich and so constantly faithful to the genuine pauline inspiration.

letter to the colossians

1 ¹ Paul, apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God and Timothy our brother,

² to the saints in Colossae, our faithful brothers and sisters in Christ:

³ Thanks be to God, the Father of Christ Jesus, our Lord!

We constantly pray for you, ⁴ for we have known of your faith in Christ Jesus and of your love for all the saints. Indeed you await in hope the inheritance reserved for you in Heaven, ⁵ of which you have heard through the word of truth. This Gospel ⁶ already present among you is bearing fruit and growing throughout the world as it did among you from the day you accepted it and understood the gift of God in all its truth.

⁷ He who taught you, Epaphras, our dear companion in the service of Christ, faithful minister of Christ on our behalf, ⁸ has reminded me of the love you have for me in the spirit.

⁹ Because of this, from the day we received news of you, we have not ceased praying to God for you, that you attain the full knowledge of his will through all the gifts of wisdom and spiritual understanding.

¹⁰ May your lifestyle be worthy of the Lord and completely pleasing to him. May you bear fruit in every good work and grow in the knowledge of God.

¹¹ May you be strengthened with all the strength God is able to give you according to his glorious power, so that you may have great endurance and perseverance in joy.

¹² Constantly give thanks to the Father who has prepared us to receive our share in the inheritance of the saints in his kingdom of light. ¹³ He rescued us from the power of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son. ¹⁴ In him we are redeemed and forgiven.

+ Paul, as usual, praises his readers. Actually, the reason for his writing is the information Epaphras gave him about the Colossians' concerns.

Epaphras, about whom Paul speaks, is a man from Colossae. When Paul was organizing the evangelization of the province of Ephesus (see Acts 19:26 and 20:4), he did not go to every city, but he would send his assistants. Epaphras of Colossae had announced the Good News and he had started to form communities in Colossae, and then in the neighbouring cities of Laodicea and Hierapolis (see Col 4:13). He was the man who came to Rome to inform Paul of the difficulties.

Your faith... your love... in hope... Paul always joins these three Christian forces: to believe, to love and to hope.

The three either go together or are lacking. Here, Paul insists more on the fact that hope is the power which encourages us to believe and to love. The believers whom Paul was addressing, especially those who had been bored with paganism, became very enthusiastic when they discovered that life leads to great things and they were created to receive the very life of God.

Christ is the beginning of everything

- ¹⁵ He is the image of the unseen God, the first born of all creation, ¹⁶ for in him all things were created, visible and invisible:
thrones, rulers, authorities, powers...
All was made through him and for him.
- ¹⁷ He is before all and all things hold together in him
- ¹⁸ And he is the head of his body, the Church;
he is the beginning and was the first raised from the dead to be the first in everything,
- ¹⁹ for God was pleased to let fullness dwell in him.
- ²⁰ Through him God willed to reconcile all things with himself, and through him, through his blood shed on the cross, God establishes peace,
on earth as in Heaven.

He transferred us to the kingdom of his Son. While the Colossians, following questionable preachers, are preoccupied with an invisible world of supernatural powers (see Eph 1:21), Paul simplifies the situation from the start: there is nothing other than the power of darkness and the kingdom of Christ.

■ Paul, then, shows that angels or invisible rulers (16) are of no account compared with Christ; he is not just any ordinary human saviour, since, before he came to save us, he was in God the creator. See the same in Hebrews 1.

Problems change through the years. Today, people do not believe that they are subject to invisible rulers, but to the multinationals: Christ is not compared with the angels, but with the great revolutionaries. But Christ is above them all.

He is the image of the unseen God. Let us not think that God is in human form beyond the clouds and that Jesus would be his image... Let us leave these fantasies to the Mormons for whom there is not a God, but each one of their gods has been a man before being glorified by a god before him. We know that God does not have a body and that he is Spirit.

However, Christ was in our midst as the image of the Father and of his mercy. His actions will teach us about God's way of thinking and doing.

Still more, we must add that before becoming man, the Son of God existed in God, as the eternal and invisible image of the eternal and invisible God, the Reflection of the Father (Heb 1:3), the Expression or the Word of God (Jn 1:1).

The firstborn of all creation. Christ is a creature through his human nature, a man born as a descendant of David. But his person is rooted in God and thus he appears among us as the model and the Firstborn, not of men, but of all creation. God was pleased to let fullness dwell in him who is like a bridge between God and the universe. The fullness of God is in him to be communicated to the universe; and the fullness of the universe will be found in him when all human beings are reconciled and reunited in him.

All was made through him: Jn 1:1 and Heb 1:2.

He was the first raised from the dead. Jesus did not die only to obtain the forgiveness of our sins. Being the Only Son, his vocation was to offer himself and to give up everything in order to receive back from the Father the glory which corresponds to him.

God willed to reconcile. Once again the work of Christ is presented as reconciliation: reconciliation between men (2 Cor 5:17-21) and reconciliation of the whole creation.

◆ The body of Christ is the place where the peace of all men with God, and peace between men can be achieved (Eph 2:11).

That you may be holy and blameless before him (22): see commentary on Eph 5:26.

I complete what is lacking in the sufferings of Christ. After Christ's death, something would be lacking in the salvation of the world, if Jesus followers and apostles did not, in their turn, meet with trials and sufferings. Working for the Church means suffering for the Church; to work ◆ ²¹ You yourselves were once estranged and opposed to God because of your evil deeds, ²² but now you have been reconciled. God reconciled you by giving up to death the body of Christ, so that you may be without fault, holy and blameless before him. ²³ Only stand firm, upon the foundation of your faith, and be steadfast in hope. Keep in mind the Gospel you have heard, which has been preached to every creature under heaven, and of which I, Paul, became a minister.

²⁴ At present I rejoice when I suffer for you; I complete in my own flesh what is lacking in the sufferings of Christ for the sake of his body, which is the Church. ²⁵ For I am serving the Church since God entrusted to me the ministry of bringing into effect his design for you. ²⁶ I mean that mysterious plan that for centuries and generations remained secret and which God has now revealed to his holy ones.

²⁷ God willed to make known to them the riches and even the Glory that his mysterious plan reserved for the pagan nations: Christ in you and the hope of God's Glory.

²⁸ This is our preaching. We warn and teach everyone true wisdom, aiming to make everyone perfect in Christ. ²⁹ For this cause I labour and struggle with the energy of Christ working powerfully in me.

Let Christ Jesus be your doctrine ο 2 ¹ I want you to know how I strive for you, for those of Laodicea and for so many who have not met me personally. ² I pray that all may be encouraged. May you be established in love, that you may obtain all the riches of a full understanding and know the mystery of God, Christ himself. ³ For in him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

⁴ So let no one deceive you with persuasive arguments. ⁵ Although I am far from you, my spirit is with you and I rejoice in recalling how well disciplined and how firm you are in the faith of Christ.

⁶ If you have accepted Christ Jesus as Lord, let him be your doctrine. ⁷ Be rooted and built up in him; let faith be your principle, as you were taught, and your thanksgiving overflowing.

⁸ See that no one deceives you with for the rule of justice is to suffer for the sake of justice.

His mysterious plan: see Eph 3:5. We must not forget that in those days, no one even thought of the common destiny of men: they did not even speak of humanity. Moreover, neither the Greeks nor the Romans looked beyond their actual existence. Paul is amazed by the generosity of God whose promises are for all people, without distinction (27). And we are offered nothing less than a share in the Glory of God, that is to say, all the riches found in him.

ο I want you to know I strive for you. Paul is referring to the difficulties of apostolic labour when you evangelize people in such a way that the Gospel frees them. On the contrary, it is quite easy to make Christianity into a religion accepted and blessed by everyone, a religion which does not transform believers nor attack the roots of evil present in the life of society. This struggle means as much labour (1:28-29) as it does praying (4:2 and Rom 15:30).

So let no one deceive you. Paul already said that in Gal 1:7 and he will repeat it in his last letter (2 Tim 4:3). There are many ideologies passing through the world. Even people who know nothing of philosophy are influenced by trends of modern thought. Philosophies and ideologies are not necessarily bad: on the contrary, they always have some truth to them. The danger, however, is that they appear to give a total answer to our problems and, in so doing, they necessarily fail, because from the start, they ignore what there is in man: Christ alone reveals to us who we are.

What Paul is condemning is our accepting the lights of this world as definitive truth. Those ideologies are human doctrines and so, they are fallible, even when they want to replace science as is the case with Marxism: all of them are the philosophy or any hollow discourse; these are merely human doctrines not inspired by Christ but by the wisdom of this world.⁹ For in Him dwells the fulness of God in bodily form.¹⁰ He is the head of all cosmic power and authority, and in him you have every-thing.

Baptized and risen

+¹¹ In Christ Jesus you were given a circumcision but not by human hands, which removed you completely from the carnal body.¹² I refer to baptism. On receiving it you were buried with Christ; and you also rose with him for having believed in the power of God who raised him from the dead.

¹³ You were dead. You were in sin and uncircumcised at the same time. But God gave you life with Christ. He forgave all our sins.¹⁴ He cancelled the record of our debts, those regulations which accused us. He did away with all that and nailed it to the cross.¹⁵ He stripped the rulers and authorities of their power, humbled them before the eyes of the whole world and dragged them as prisoners in the triumphal march of his cross.

Useless doctrines

■¹⁶ Let no one criticize you in matters of food or drink or for not observing festivals, new moons or the sabbath.¹⁷ These things were only shadows of what was to come, whereas the reality is the person of Christ.¹⁸ Do not let yourselves be robbed of him by those people who offer you a religion of fear and the worship of the angels. In fact, they only appreciate their own visions and are puffed up with their idle notions,¹⁹ instead of holding strongly to the head, Christ. It is he who nourishes and gives unity to the whole body by a complex system of nerves and ligaments, making it grow according to the plan of God.

²² These are human rules and teachings, referring to things that are perishable, that wear out and disappear.

²³ These doctrines may seem to be profound because they speak of religious observance and humility and of disregarding the body. In fact, they products of their time and they disappear with time.

+ Paul does not want the Colossians to feel obligated to be circumcised and to live according to the Law of Moses. Since he himself was circumcised and lived under the Law, he knew from experience that these had not saved him.

It is not enough to remove a piece of flesh in circumcision: what must be removed is the whole carnal body. According to Paul, this does not mean to kill oneself, but it does mean to destroy egotism, meanness, greed, excessive self-confidence, where sin is found. For Christians, baptism replaces circumcision and it means the death of the carnal body. We choke the sinner within us and we emerge "risen" with Christ, from the water. Obviously, this death and resurrection are definitively achieved if we live and die according to what takes place in baptism.

In some countries many people are baptized; but, in fact, baptism does not change anything in their lives. Generally speaking, these Christians do not belong to renewing communities. They still need to awaken, to experience a change in depth: they were baptized, but they were not raised.

He cancelled the record of our debt (14). In Jesus' crucified flesh the tyranny of the forces of evil ended: they were frustrated because violence exhausted its power against the one who refused to respond with violence.

Those regulations: the Law became useless (see Rom 6 and 7). The sacrifice of Christ opens a new age in which people are going to be liberated from all that weighs upon their destiny (Gal 4:3).

are useless in overcoming selfishness.

Seek the things that are above

◆ 3 ¹ So then, if you are risen with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is seated at the right hand of God. ² Set your mind on the things that are above, not on earthly things. ³ For you have died and your life is now hidden with Christ in God. ⁴ When Christ, who is our life, reveals himself, you also will be revealed with him in Glory.

⁵ Therefore, put to death what is earthly in your life, that is immorality, impurity, inordinate passions, wicked desires and greed which is a way of worshipping idols. ⁶ These are the things that arouse the wrath of God.

⁷ For a time you followed this way and lived in such disorders. ⁸ Well then, reject all that: anger, evil intentions, malice; and let no abusive words be heard from your lips. ⁹ Do not lie to one another.

Put on the new self o You have been stripped of the old self and its way of thinking ¹⁰ to put on the new, which aims at perfect knowledge and is being renewed according to the likeness of its creator. ¹¹ There – no distinction between Jew and Greek, between circumcised and uncircumcised. There are no strangers, barbarians, slaves or free men, but Christ is all and is in all.

¹² Clothe yourselves, then, as is fitting for God's chosen people. Since you are holy and beloved of him, put on compassion, kindness, humility, meekness and patience.

¹³ Bear with one another and forgive whenever there is any occasion to do so. As the Lord has forgiven you, forgive one another. ¹⁴ Let all this be done with love; through it everything is united and made perfect. ¹⁵ May the peace of Christ overflow in your hearts; for this end you were called to be one body. And be thankful.

¹⁶ Let the word of God dwell in you in all its richness. Teach and admonish one another with words of wisdom. With thankful hearts sing to God psalms, hymns and spontaneous praise. ¹⁷ And whatever you do or say, do it in the Name of Jesus, the Lord, giving thanks to God the Father through him.

■ Let no one criticize you. Who is going to criticize us for celebrating Sunday with the Resurrection of the Lord instead of Jewish Sabbaths?

These doctrines may seem to be profound. People who are not freed from fear before God are always impressed by what is forbidden. But instead of being liberated and brought to the trust of God's children, these bans make their spirit gradually more narrow-minded.

Because they disregard the body. Our self-imposed penances and sacrifices can be a source of self-pride and of feeling superior to others.

◆ Here we have what was said about baptism (2:12) which joins us to Christ and makes us share in all his wealth. Since Christ left this earth, we leave it too: what is best in our lives, what makes us undertake is neither visible, nor is it of the earth. God alone knows the riches of the believer's heart, even when his life seems tarnished by various faults and weaknesses: one day God will manifest the goodness, the "glory" which we do not yet see (see Mt 25:31-46).

o See Ephesians 4:20-24 where Paul develops the same idea of the new man created in Christ and of the old man which must be abandoned.

While the old self is self-centered, enslaved by passions, the new self is characterized by a communal attitude, a constant concern for others. He lives with a thankful heart.

+ Paul would not accept the attitude of many Christians who say: religion has nothing to do with what I do in my home, my work, my rest, or in politics. On the contrary, Paul insists, ²² Servants, obey your masters in everything; not only while they are present, to gain favour with them, but with sincerity, because you fear the Lord. ²³ Whatever you do, do it wholeheartedly, working for the Lord, and not for men. ²⁴ You well know that the Lord will reward you with the inheritance. You are servants, but your Lord is Christ. ²⁵ Every evildoer will receive his due, for God does not make exceptions in favour of anyone.

4 ¹ As for you, masters, give your servants what is fair and reasonable, knowing that you yourselves have a Master in Heaven.

Christians live all of this before the Lord, for the Lord and in the Lord.

This is why Paul preaches the same ethics to everyone: men, women, slaves (we would say to bosses and workers); all must be just, loyal and very respectful of others, even when they have faults. In the long run, these principles have had extraordinary consequences: the elimination of slavery, the decrease of polygamy even in non-Christian countries, the emancipation of young people in the choosing of a marriage partner, etc. We must struggle to obtain changes and to defend rights. Nevertheless, it is important that union or political militants be first competent and honest in their work, and moreover, just and fair in their struggle and faithful in their commitments. If not, they should not call themselves Christians.

■ ² Be steadfast in prayer and even spend the night praying and giving thanks. ³ Pray especially for us and our preaching. May the Lord open a door for us that we may announce the mystery of Christ. Because of this I am in chains; ⁴ pray then that I may be able to reveal this mystery as I should.

⁷ Tychicus will give news about me. He is our dear brother and for me a faithful assistant and fellow worker for the Lord. ⁸ I am purposely sending him to give you news about me and to encourage you. ⁹ With him I am sending Onesimus, our faithful and dear brother, who is one of yours. They will inform you about everything that is happening here.

Paul (see Acts 15:38) is with him. Luke (14) mentioned here is the author of the Gospel and Acts.

We can see there was a lot of communications between churches of different places. Each one was not locked in its own community: had this been the case, within a short time, there would have been as many religions as there were churches. Quite to the contrary, they were conscious of being the Church of Christ, established in various places, but with one testimony concerning Christ, and that explains the interest the believers had to stay in close contact. At a time in which it seemed difficult to preserve unity due to the distances and differences among the peoples, the power maintaining unity – more than a rigid organization – was the profound sense all the people had that the church was a "community or a community enlivened by the Spirit of Christ."

Nowadays when we attempt to form "basic Christian Communities", we must also be careful to remain in contact and in harmony with other communities.

¹² Greetings from your countryman Epaphras, a good servant of Christ Jesus. He constantly battles for you through his prayer that you be perfect and firm in whatever God asks of you. ¹³ I assure you that he is deeply concerned about you, as he is for the Laodiceans and those of Hierapolis.

¹⁶ After reading this letter, see that it is read in the church of the Laodiceans, and have the letter they received read in yours. ¹⁷ And tell Archipus, "Do not forget the ministry given to you in the Lord."

¹⁸ Greetings in my own hand, Paul. Remember that I am in chains. Grace be with you.

Philemon from Colossae has a slave named Onesimus; a typical name for a slave since Onesimus means "useful" (see 11). Onesimus escapes and gets to Rome where he expects to disappear in the crowds. Accidentally or luckily, he meets Paul whom he had known in his master's house. At this point, Paul is imprisoned in Rome, but he enjoys certain privileges enabling him to go out in the company of a policeman. Onesimus is converted and baptized; then Paul makes him go back to his former master with the letter of recommendation that we read here.

Paul asks that the slave be seen as a brother and he even suggests that the slave be freed (v. 21).

We have already seen the advice Paul gives to slaves in Col 3:22. In those first years of the Church, obtaining God's life in Christ seemed such a tremendous privilege, providing such inner freedom, that being a slave or being free did not matter greatly (see 1 Cor 7:17).

At that time no one thought that a change of social structure was feasible: there were slaves and there would always have to be slaves. The Christians were few and without any influence. Thus, they were not concerned about reforming society, nor about laws to eliminate slavery. But even before the time it became necessary to think about changing the laws, faith was already against treating slaves as "objects" or inferiors: because they were Christians, an increasing number of masters – in the church – spontaneously renounced their rights and granted freedom to their slaves.

Many people think that the Christian community has nothing to say concerning their responsibilities in society. Here, on the contrary, we see how Paul involves the whole community in Philemon's problem.

⁴ I never cease to give thanks to my God when I remember you in my prayers, ⁵ for I hear of your love and faith towards the Lord and all the holy ones. ⁶ And I pray that the sharing of your faith may make known all the good that is ours in Christ. ⁷ I had great satisfaction and comfort on hearing of your charity, for you have cheered the hearts of our brothers.

⁸ Because of this, although in Christ I have the freedom to command what you should do, ⁹ yet I prefer to request you in love. The one talking is Paul, the old Paul, now prisoner of Christ Jesus. ¹⁰ And my request is on behalf of Onesimus, whose father I have become while I was in prison.

¹¹ This Onesimus has not been helpful to you, but now he will be helpful both to you and to me. ¹² In returning him to you, I am sending you my own heart. ¹³ I would have liked to keep him at my side, to serve me on your behalf while I am in prison for the Gospel, ¹⁴ but I did not want to do anything without your agreement, nor impose a good deed upon you without your free consent.

¹⁵ Perhaps Onesimus has been parted from you for a while so that you may have him back forever, ¹⁶ no longer as a slave, but better than a slave. He is a very dear brother to me, and he will be even dearer to you. ¹⁷ And so, because of our friendship, receive him as if he were myself.

¹⁸ And if he has caused any damage, or owes you anything, charge it to me. ¹⁹ I, Paul, write this and sign it with my own hand: I will pay it... without further mention of your debt to me, which is you yourself. ²⁰ So, my brother, please do me this favour for the Lord's sake. Give me this comfort in Christ.

²¹ Confident of your obedience I write to you, knowing you will do even more than I ask. ²² And one thing more, get a lodging ready for me because, thanks to the prayers of you all, I hope to return to you.

²³ Epaphras, my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, sends greetings. ²⁴ So do Mark, Aristarchus, Demas and Luke, my assistants.

²⁴ May the grace of the Lord Christ be with you. Amen!

INTRODUCTION TO THESSALONIANS

In the year 50, Paul arrives in Thessalonica, a major city and the capital of the province of Macedonia (see Acts 17:1). There, after being rejected by the Jews, he addresses his preaching to the pagans and he succeeds in forming a community. After barely three months, a riot caused by the Jews forces him to leave.

What is going to happen to these recent converts to whom Paul had taught the mere bases of Christian life?

Paul is quite concerned and he sends Timothy to see them and to strengthen their church. Timothy comes back with optimism and Paul, reassured, sends this letter at the beginning of 51.

This is the oldest writing of the New Testament.

1. letter to the THESSALONIANS

1 ¹From Paul, Sylvanus and Timothy to the church of Thessalonica which is in God the Father and in Christ Jesus.

May the peace and grace of God be with you.

²We give thanks to God at all times for you and remember you in our prayers. ³We constantly recall before God our Father the work of your faith, the labours of your love and your endurance in waiting for Christ Jesus our Lord.

⁴We remember, brothers and sisters, the circumstances of your being called. ⁵The gospel we brought you was such not only in words. Miracles, Holy Spirit and plenty of everything were given to you. You also know how we dealt with you for your sake.

⁶In return, you became followers of us and of the Lord when, on receiving the word, you experienced the joy of the Holy Spirit in the midst of great opposition. ⁷And you became a model for the faithful of Macedonia and Achaia, ⁸since from you the word of the Lord spread to Macedonia and Achaia, and still farther. The faith you have in God has become news in so many places that we need say no more about it. ⁹Others tell of how you responded to us and turned from idols to the Lord. For you serve the living and true God, ¹⁰and you wait for his Son from Heaven whom he raised from the dead, Jesus, who frees us from impending punishment.

The beginning of the church of Thessalonica

+ 2 ¹You well know, brothers and sisters that our visit to you was not in vain. ²We had been ill

o Faith, endurance, love. For us, sometimes hope (or, endurance) goes unnoticed between faith and love. For Paul it has two important meanings

- The person who hopes bears the trials and persecutions challenging his faith patiently and steadfastly. This is why Paul says: faith, endurance, love.
- The person with hope looks forward to the glorious coming of Christ who will judge this world and take us to the other. He frees us from impending punishment. In those years, all believers were convinced that judgment was imminent and that they would witness Christ's coming.

The gospel we brought you was not only in words (5). There were numerous signs, miracles, and other revelations in Thessalonica: perhaps God planned it so because there were not competent people to assure the formation of believers.

In fact, we cannot preach the Gospel if Christian communities are not the place where people experience God's liberating power and concern for freeing all men. If this vitality of the Christian community were lacking, our "evangelization" would be merely preaching.

You became followers of us. The preacher's attitude confirms the truth of the message. Paul will come back to this point several times in this letter: he appeared as the holy, good, honest messenger, ready to give his own life (2, 8).

+ Like a mother who feeds and cuddles her baby (7): Paul's tenderness. But then, Paul retreated and insulted in Philippi, but, trusting in our God, we dared announce to you the message of God, and face fresh opposition. ³ Our warnings did not conceal any error or impure motive, nor did we deceive anyone. ⁴ But, as God had entrusted his Gospel to us as to faithful ministers, we were more anxious to please God who sees the heart, rather than men. ⁵ We never pleased you with flatteries, as you know, nor did we try to earn money, as God knows. ⁶ We did not try to make a name for ourselves among men, either you or anybody else, ⁷ although we were messengers of Christ and we could have made our weight felt.

On the contrary, we were gentle with you, as a nursing mother who feeds and cuddles her baby. ⁸ And so great is our concern that we are ready to give you, as well as the Gospel, even our very lives, for you have become our beloved brothers.

⁹ Remember our labour and toil; when we preached the Gospel, we worked day and night so as not to be a burden to you. ¹⁰ You are witnesses with God that we were holy, just and blameless with all of you who now believe. ¹¹ We warned each of you as a father warns his son; ¹² we encouraged you and urged you to adopt a way of life worthy of God who calls you to share his own glory and kingdom.

¹³ This is why we never cease giving thanks to God for, on receiving our message, you accepted it, not as human teaching, but as the word of God. That is what it really is, and as such it is at work in you who believed.

¹⁴ Brothers and sisters, you followed the example of the churches of God in Judea, churches of Christ Jesus. For you suffered from your countrymen the same trials they suffered from the Jews ¹⁵ who killed the Lord Jesus and the prophets, and who persecute us. They displease God and harm all people ¹⁶ when they prevent us from speaking to the pagans and trying to save them. By doing so they are heaping up their sins but, in the end Judgment is coming upon them.

¹⁷ We are for a time deprived of your presence, but not in heart, and we eagerly long to see you. ¹⁸ For we have wanted to visit you, and I Paul, more than once; but Satan prevented us. ¹⁹ In fact, who but you are our hope and our joy? Who will be our glorious crown before Jesus, our Lord, when he returns? ²⁰ Yes, indeed, you are our glory and our joy.

Paul's concern

3 ¹ As I could no longer bear it, I decided to go alone to Athens, ² and send you Timothy, our brother and servant of God in the Gospel of Christ. I wanted him to en-calls the work and energy he spent to convince, to call each one personally. The conversion of a single person demands perseverance, weariness and struggles from the apostle.

All the Christians of Paul's time know that the mother Church in Jerusalem was the first in suffering heavy persecution. For the Thessalonians, it is also an honour to have remained steadfast in the face of persecutions. Some people will find Paul's words concerning the Jews harsh and exaggerated. Yet, they reflect his experience, verified in chapters 15-28 of the book of Acts.

■ May the Lord increase your love for each other and for all people (v 12). Love manifests itself first within the community and then it must be expanded to all people.

Also note Paul's constant preoccupation: his apostolic mission does not allow him to remain in any community. He is always moving, leaving his work unfinished, but he entrusts his converts to the grace of God which does not suppress their freedom of the recent converts nor the work of the Tempter in the world.

You know that such is our destiny (v 3). There is no church, nor Christian life without courage you in the faith and strengthen you ³ so that none of you might turn back because of the trials you are now enduring. You know that such is our destiny. ⁴ I warned you of this when I was there: "We shall have to face persecution"; and so it was, as you have seen. ⁵ Therefore I could not stand it any longer and sent Timothy to check your faith and see if the Tempter had tempted you and made our work useless.

⁶ But now Timothy has just returned with good news of your faith and love. He told us that you remember us kindly and that you long to see us as much as we long to see you. ⁷ What a consolation for us, brothers in the midst of our troubles and trials, this faith of yours! ⁸ It is a breath of life for us when you stand firm in the Lord. ⁹ How can we thank God enough for all the joy that we feel before God because of you? ¹⁰ Day and night we beg of him to let us see you again, that we may complete the instruction of the believers.

¹¹ May God, our Father, and Jesus, our Lord prepare the way for us to visit you. ¹² May the Lord increase more and more your love for each other and for all people, as he increases our love for you. ¹³ May he strengthen you interiorly to be holy and blameless before God, our Father, on the day that Jesus, our Lord will come with all his saints.

A call to a life of purity and work

♦ 4 ¹ For the rest, brothers and sisters, we ask you in the name of Jesus, the Lord, and we urge you to live in a way that pleases God, just as you have learned from us. This you do, but try to do still more. ² You know the instructions we gave you on behalf of the Lord Jesus: ³ the will of God for you is to become holy and not to have unlawful sex.

⁴ Let each of you behave towards his wife as a holy and respectful husband, ⁵ rather than being led by lust, as are pagans who do not know God. ⁶ In this matter, let no one offend or wrong his brother. The Lord will do justice in all these things, as we have warned and shown you. ⁷ God has called us to live, not in impurity but in holiness, ⁸ and those who do not heed this instruction disobey, not man, but God himself who gives you his Holy Spirit.

⁹ Regarding brotherly love, you do not need anyone to write to you, because God himself taught you how to love one another. ¹⁰ You already practise it with all the brothers and sisters of Macedonia, but I invite you to do more. ¹¹ Consider how important it is to live quietly without bothering others, to mind your own business, and work with your hands, as we have charged you. ¹² In obeying these rules you will win the respect of outsiders and be dependent on no one.

trials and persecutions.

♦ Once we believe in Christ, we must live by imitating him. The Jews who were baptized had the moral teachings of the Old Testament. On the contrary, the only moral guide the pagans had were the prevailing social rules. To them chastity seemed to be the strangest point. For them occasional sexual relations coincided with a biological need and had nothing to do with the demands of conscience. In all his writings Paul repeats: have no sexual activity outside of marriage. It is in 1 Cor 6 that he insists the most by showing that our whole person is consecrated to Christ. In sexual relations the whole person surrenders and thus sins seriously in illicit unions.

Then, Paul touches a point which he will underscore at the end of this letter: let everybody work. The community is disturbed by men more inclined to show their enthusiastic faith than to work. They live off the church and they discredit the church in the eyes of the pagans. Paul does not approve a life of idleness.

Do not grieve as do the others

o ¹³ Brothers we want you not to be mistaken about those who are already asleep, lest you grieve as do those who have no hope. ¹⁴ We believe that Jesus died and rose; it will be the same for those who have died in Jesus. God will bring them together with Jesus and for his sake.

¹⁵ By the same word of the Lord we assert this: those of us who are to be alive at the Lord's coming will not be ahead of those who are already asleep. ¹⁶ When the command by the archangel's voice is given, the Lord himself will come down from Heaven, while the divine trumpet call is sounding. Then those who have died in the Lord will rise first; ¹⁷ as for us who are still alive, we will be brought along with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the celestial world. And we will be with the Lord forever.

You are citizens of the light

+ 5 ¹ You do not need anyone to write to you about the delay and the appointed time for these events. ² You know that the Day of the Lord will come like a thief in the night. ³ When people feel secure and in peace, the disaster will suddenly come upon them as the birth pangs of a woman in labour, and they will not escape.

⁴ But you brothers, are not in darkness; so that day will not surprise you like a thief. ⁵ All of you are citizens of the light and the day; we do not belong to night and darkness. ⁶ Do not, therefore, fall asleep as others do, but remain alert and sober.

⁷ Night is the time to sleep for those who sleep and for those who get to be drunk. ⁸ Since we belong to the day, let us be sober, let us put on the breastplate of faith and love, and let the o Lest you grieve as do those who have no hope. The Thessalonian community is made up of Christians who are all recent converts with little experience. For years they had accepted the fate of men who are born to die. Now, on the contrary, they awaken each day with the assurance of overcoming death: Christ will come soon and take them to the heavenly Kingdom. But they are grieved over their dead relatives whom Christ will not be able to save. This is the way they thought because people steeped in Greek culture had difficulties believing in a resurrection of the dead.

Those who are already asleep. Those who have died are not dead, but they are asleep, waiting for the time of the resurrection, the time of rising as new persons transformed by Christ: we will all be transformed. The word "cemetery" comes from a word meaning sleeping place.

We will be brought along with them in the clouds. Paul presupposes that he and his readers will still be alive when Christ comes and he describes the event in the thought patterns of his days: they believed that God was above.

We will be with the Lord forever. Paul goes to the heart of the matter: we will share Christ's destiny. We will enjoy intimacy with God because the whole person will have been purified and transformed by the power emerging from the risen Christ. See 1 Cor 15 on that point: there Paul gives us a hint of what the resurrection of the body – or better, of the whole person – will be like.

Comfort one another. The way to celebrate funerals in the Church must comfort the dead person's relatives and strengthen their faith in the resurrection. There is no room for expressions of despair and sadness which Jesus himself scorned (see Mk 5:40): these are peculiar to people who consider the separation to be final. A funeral mass without any spectacular display, when the fervent prayer of the community is experienced produces a great impact on people who are indifferent.

+ Christ comes at night and believers are children of the light. These words are rich in teachings. Those who follow their evil desires are people of darkness, hiding to do evil. On the contrary, children of the light are beyond reproach, transparent before God and with nothing to hide from him. The unbeliever sleeps and is off-guard while the believer keeps watch and stays awake: he likes to pray all night along until dawn as if waiting for the day to welcome Christ. As for those who have died, they are not dead: they are only "asleep", ready to rise when the Lord comes.

Encourage one another and build up one hope of salvation be our helmet. ⁹ For God has not willed us to be condemned but to win salvation through Christ Jesus our Lord. ¹⁰ He died for us so that we might enter into life with him, whether we are still awake or already asleep. ¹¹ Therefore encourage one another and build up one another, as you are doing now.

¹² Brothers and sisters, I want you to be thankful to those who labour among you, who counsel you and lead you in the way of the Lord. ¹³ Esteem them highly and love them for what they are doing. Live in peace among yourselves.

¹⁶ Rejoice always, ¹⁷ pray without ceasing ¹⁸ and give thanks to God at every moment. This is the will of God, your vocation as Christians.

■ ¹⁹ Do not quench the Spirit, ²⁰ do not despise the prophets' warnings. ²¹ Put everything to the test and hold fast to what is good. ²² Avoid evil, wherever it may be.

²³ May the God of Peace make you holy and bring you to perfection. May you be completely blameless, in spirit, soul and body, till the coming of Christ Jesus, our Lord; ²⁴ he who called you is faithful and will do it.

²⁵ Brothers and sisters, pray for us. ²⁶ Greet all the brothers and sisters with a holy kiss. ²⁷ I order you in the name of the Lord that this letter be read to all the brothers.

another (v 11). Here the Church appears as the true community needed by believers to grow in faith and to overcome trials. In very difficulty, the help of the brothers will be the proof that we are surrounded by the love of God and of Christ, as was said in the first line of the letter.

According to verse 12, after only three months of evangelization, this community already had people in charge.

■ Do not quench the Spirit (v 19). A community like that, with few traditions and written teachings, relied on the help of the Spirit. Surely some Christians received communications during the assemblies about the Eucharist. This is why Paul tells them to take advantage of these spiritual messages and teachings, but with the advice of examining everything as he will express in more detail in 1 Cor 14.

May you be blameless in the spirit, soul and body (v 23). In Paul's days, in man, many saw besides the 'soul' which gives life to the body and deals with material activities, a more personal aspect, the spirit, able to discover Truth and Justice.

When Paul speaks of the in-depth life of the believers, he does not use the word "soul" but "spirit", which is where the Spirit of God dwells and acts, as this Spirit permeates the spirit. In the most hidden part of conscience, the love and light of the Spirit make our spirit grow and mature. But it is only with the coming of Christ that we will know who we are.

2 letter to the Thessalonians

1 From Paul, Sylvanus and Timothy, to the church of the Thessalonians which is in God, our Father and in Christ Jesus, the Lord.

² May grace and peace be yours from God the Father and Christ Jesus, the Lord.

³ Brothers and sisters, we should give thanks to God at all times for you. It is fitting to do so, for your faith is growing and your love for one another increasing. ⁴ We take pride in you among the churches of God because of your endurance and your faith in the midst of persecution and sufferings. ⁵ In this the just judgment of God may be seen; for you must show yourselves worthy of the kingdom of God for which you are now suffering.

The judgment and the coming of Christ

+ ⁶ Indeed, it is just that God repays with affliction those who persecute you, ⁷ but to you who suffer, he will grant rest with us when the Lord Jesus will be shown in his Glory, coming from heaven and surrounded by his court of angels. ⁸ Then with flaming fire will be punished those who do not recognize God and do not obey the Gospel of Jesus, our Lord.

⁹ They will be sent to eternal damnation far away from the face of the Lord and his mighty glory. ¹⁰ On that day the Lord will be glorified in the midst of his saints, and reveal his wonders through those who believe in him, that is through you who have received our testimony.

¹¹ This is why we constantly pray for you; may our God make you worthy of his calling. May he by his power bring to effect your good purposes and your work prompted by faith. ¹² In that way, the name of Jesus our Lord will be glorified through you, and you through him, according to the loving plan of God and of Christ Jesus the Lord.

2 ¹ Brothers, let us speak about the coming of Christ Jesus, our Lord, and our gathering to meet him. ² Do not be easily unsettled. Do not be alarmed by what a prophet says:

1. 1 Thes 1, 1	3. 1 Thes 3, 6	5. 1 Thes 2, 12	8. Is 66, 15; Rom 1, 5	9. Is 2, 10
12. Is 66, 5; Jn 17, 22	1. 1 Cor 15, 23; 1 Thes 4, 15	2. Mt 24, 31

Reading the first letter to the Thessalonians taught us the importance that looking forward to the coming of Christ had in Paul's preaching.

The hope for the Day of Christ was a powerful incentive to preserve the faith of the first Christians. Yet, it could lead to an unhealthy nervousness. The church of Thessalonica was the first example of those minorities and persecuted groups in whom the expectation of the end of the world distorts the normal development of Christian life.

In this letter, written a few months after the first one, Paul tries to reassure the community or by any report, or by some letter said to be ours, saying the day of the Lord is at hand. Do not let yourselves be deceived in any way.

³ Apostasy must come first. Then the man of Sin will appear, ⁴ that instrument of evil who opposes and defiles whatever is considered divine and holy, even to the point of sitting in the temple of God and claiming to be God.

⁵ Do you not remember I spoke of it when I was still with you? ⁶ But you also know what prevents him from appearing until his due time. ⁷ The mystery of sin is already at work, but he who restrains it at present has to be taken out of the way. ⁸ Then the wicked one will appear, whom the Lord is to sweep away with the breath of his mouth and destroy in the splendour of his coming. ⁹ This lawless one will appear with the power of Satan, performing miracles and wonderful signs at the service of deception. ¹⁰ All the deceits of evil will then be used for the ruin of those who refused to love truth and be saved. ¹¹ This is why God will send them the power of delusion, that they may believe what is false. ¹² So all those who chose wickedness instead of believing the truth will be condemned.

Persevere in faith

◆ ¹³ But we have to give thanks for you at all times, dear brothers and sisters in the Lord. For God chose you from the beginning that you be saved through true faith and be made holy

○ We again encounter the same ideas we have explained in 1 Thes. A persecuted community. The basis of Christian life: faith, hope (or endurance), love. The day of Christ.

• It is just that God repays with affliction. When the apostles were addressing pagans, they insisted upon God's judgment. In fact, these pagans had never thought that they would be judged at the end of their lives. Knowing there is good and evil and that God judges men was a prerequisite for Christian life.

Coming from heaven... to punish. In the early apostolic days, it was believed that the Day of the Lord would come soon and there was a lot of talk about the condemnation of evil people when the final Kingdom would begin (Final Judgment). Now, we often believe that it is not imminent and thus, we think preferentially of the judgment that will occur at the end of each person's life (Particular Judgment).

■ Do not be alarmed. What happens in the church of Thessalonica is normal in a persecuted community: people tend to withdraw from real life. There are rumors that the Coming of the Lord is imminent, and hope can turn to hysteria. Paul reminds them of some truths.

The apostasy must come first. Before Christ's return, there must be a "general apostasy", or a world-wide religious crisis. An antichrist must come. It is true that there are antichrists in all times (see 1 Jn). Yet, at the end, there will be a more typical antichrist than all the previous ones. Christ will return in glory at the time the church seems crushed.

You know what prevents him from appearing (v 6). Paul may have two convictions in mind: everything happens at the time planned by God and every person in history lasts long enough to carry out all the good and all the bad that he carries within. For Paul, the apostasy must be that of the nations previously converted to the Gospel and the power of evil is already at work in them (v 7). But, there can be no apostasy nor antichrist while the role of the two previous actors is not fulfilled: on one hand, the Gospel must be announced to all nations; on the other hand, the Jewish people must unload their aggressiveness on the Church. These two factors restrain the coming of the antichrist.

Paul certainly had no idea that the time of the nations mentioned by Luke (21:24) was going to last so many centuries; for him it was a matter of years.

God will send them the power of delusion. That does not mean that God planned evil; he only leaves those who rejected the light, helpless against errors. The same people who do not take into account the decisive arguments in favor of the faith, later follow doctrines and opinions without foundations.

Paul invites the church, as he did in 1 Thes, to follow his instructions and rules. He is more severe in insisting that they have an obligation to work: if everybody works, their faith will be more peaceful.

◆ Note the word traditions used by Paul. The traditions are the customs, rites and teachings which men pass down from one generation to another. They are also the usages and life-styles by the Spirit. ¹⁴ To this end he called you through the gospel we preach, for he willed you to share the glory of Christ Jesus our Lord.

¹⁵ Because of that, brothers and sisters, stand firm and hold to the traditions that we taught you by word or by letter. ¹⁶ May Christ Jesus our Lord who has loved us, may God our Father who in his mercy gives us everlasting comfort and true hope strengthen you. ¹⁷ May he encourage your hearts and make you steadfast in every good work and word.

3 ¹ Finally, brothers and sisters, pray for us that the word of the Lord spread rapidly and be honoured as it was with you. ² May God guard us from wicked and evil people, since not everyone has faith. ³ The Lord is faithful; he will strengthen you and keep you safe from the Evil One. ⁴ Besides, we have in the Lord this confidence that you do and will continue to do what we order you. ⁵ May the Lord direct your hearts to the love of God and perseverance for the sake of Christ.

Let everyone work

⁶ Brothers, we command you to stay away from any brother who is living in idleness contrary to the traditions we passed on to you. ⁷ You know how you ought to follow our example: we worked while we were with you. ⁸ Day and night we laboured and toiled so as not to be a burden to any of you. ⁹ We had the right to act otherwise, but we wanted to give you an example.

¹⁰ Besides, while we were with you, we said clearly: If anyone is not willing to work, let him not eat. ¹¹ However we heard that some among you live in idleness – busybodies, doing no work. ¹² In the name of Christ Jesus our Lord we command these people to work and earn their own living. ¹³ And you, brothers, do not weary in doing what is right.

¹⁴ If someone does not obey our instruction in this letter, take note and do not have anything to do with him, so that he may be ashamed. ¹⁵ However, do not treat him as an enemy, but warn him as a brother.

¹⁶ May the Lord of peace give you his peace at all times and in every way. May the Lord be with you all.

¹⁷ I, Paul, write this greeting with my own hand. This is my signature in all my letters. This is how I write.

¹⁸ May the grace of Christ Jesus our Lord be with you.

which are adopted upon joining a community. Jesus had condemned the exaggerated importance the Pharisees gave to their own traditions, to the point that they prevailed over God's commandments (see Mk 7:5). Yet, Jesus himself, while he was with his apostles, taught them a certain way of praying, of doing, and of living in fellowship. These, then, are the traditions which the apostles were preserving in the Church.

PASTORAL LETTERS TO TIMOTHY AND TITUS

The cultural change taking place in all aspects of life also concerns the church. In the beliefs and practices which we were taught, not everything comes from Christ, and therefore, a lot can be changed. However, in doing this, we run the risk of adulterating genuine faith. What is the rule of faith to which we must submit our own opinions?

This problem already occurred in the early church when, in the years 64-67, both Peter and Paul died in Rome as martyrs for Christ. Since the church no longer had the witnesses to Christ in its midst, some felt free to teach their own doctrine. There is nothing easier than to replace the following of Christ by religious discussions and discourses!

Thus, the successors of the apostles had to defend the doctrine they had received from them and, at the same time, they were looking after the election and formation of ministers worthy of their mission. These are the concerns which stand out in the present letters to Timothy and Titus.

Several passages of these letters deal with Paul's advice to his assistants, Timothy and Titus. But, it is also quite certain that other passages were added at a later date, as in 90 or 100 after Christ, placing the teaching of the church of that time under the authority of Paul.

These three letters to Timothy and Titus are called "pastoral" because they are addressed to "pastors of souls". Concerning Timothy, see Acts 16:1: how Paul met him. See also 1 Cor 16:10 and Phil 2:19.

1 From Paul, apostle of Christ Jesus by a command of God our Saviour and of Christ Jesus our hope, ²to Timothy, my true son in the faith.

May God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord give you grace, mercy and peace.

False teachers

o ³When I left for Macedonia I urged you to remain in Ephesus to warn certain persons not to teach false doctrine ⁴or to concern themselves with fables and endless genealogies.

These give rise to discussions rather than promote a better service of God through faith. ⁵The aim of our warning is love which comes from a pure mind, a good conscience and sincere faith.

⁶Some have turned away from such a motivation and have strayed into useless discussions. ⁷They claim to be teachers of the Law when, in fact, they understand neither what they say nor the things they speak about.

⁸We know that the Law is good, as

2. Acts 16, 1; Tit 1, 4

4. Tit 1, 14; 3, 9

8. Rom 1, 20

o In this first chapter we have a mixture of various topics: they practically repeat what Paul said in other letters where the commentaries have already been given.

We will note only what refers to false prophets. Since the apostles who had seen Christ were dead, some people forgot that all of faith is based on what Christ taught. Instead of meditating on long as it serves its purpose.⁹ The Law is not for the righteous, but for the lawless and for the wicked and sinful, for those who do not respect God and religion, for those who kill their parents, for murderers,¹⁰ for those who indulge in unlawful sex and homosexuality, for kidnappers and exploiters, for liars and perjurers and for all that is contrary to sound doctrine,¹¹ to the Gospel of the God of glory and happiness, which was entrusted to me.

¹² I give thanks to Christ Jesus, our Lord, who is my strength, who has considered me trustworthy and appointed me to his service,¹³ although I had been a blasphemer, a persecutor and a rabid enemy. However he took mercy on me because I did not know what I was doing when I opposed the faith;¹⁴ and the grace of our Lord was more than abundant together with faith and Christian love.

¹⁵ This saying is true and worthy of belief: Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am the first.¹⁶ Because of that I was forgiven; Christ Jesus wanted to display his greatness in me so that I might be an example for all who are to believe and obtain eternal life.¹⁷ To the King of ages, the only God who lives beyond every perishable and visible creation – to him be honour and glory forever. Amen!

¹⁸ Timothy, my son, I command you to fight the good fight, fulfilling the prophetic words pronounced over you.¹⁹ Hold on to faith and a good conscience, unlike those who, ignoring conscience, have finally wrecked their faith.²⁰ Among them are Hymeneus and Alexander whom I have delivered to Satan to be taught not to blaspheme.

+ 2 ¹ First of all I urge that petitions, prayers, intercessions and thanksgiving be made for everyone,² for rulers of states and all in authority, that we may enjoy a quiet and peaceful life in godliness and respect.³ This is good and pleases God.⁴ For he wants all men to be saved and come to the knowledge of truth.⁵ As there is one God, there is one mediator between God and men, Christ Jesus, true man,⁶ who gave his life for the redemption of all. This is the testimony, given in its proper time, and⁷ of this God has made me apostle and herald. I am not lying, I am telling the truth: He made me teacher of the nations regarding faith and truth.

the teaching of the apostles, on tradition, some began to discuss and work out religious theories.

The aim of our warning is love from a pure mind (5). Timothy must be firm in eliminating the discussions which weaken the church and prevent the development of the love which saves people. Even bloody wars came out of sterile religious arguments. To overcome divisions, we need a pure mind, a good conscience and sincere faith (v 5).

+ Heading the rules concerning every category of believers, we find what refers to the community assemblies with two outstanding points:

- Praying for rulers.
- The attitude of women in church.

I urge that petitions be made ... (1). Paul wants Christians to be in solidarity with their compatriots, loyal towards their nation and pray for them. In spite of its sins and superstitions, the pagan world was religious. Religion went with their every action. This explains why, some years later, Christians were persecuted as rebels and traitors because they did not worship the emperor, nor his gods.

Faithfulness to Christ does not prevent being loyal to the nation until the nation becomes an idol, and this happens when in the name of a nation, people are asked to obey its rulers blindly. We cannot give up criticizing their errors, we stop considering as our brothers those who do not agree with us.

We should pray for rulers. Does that mean that we cannot look for more honest and better ⁸I want men in every place to lift pure hands in prayer to heaven without anger and dissension.

⁹Let women dress with simplicity and modesty, not adorned with fancy hair styles, gold, jewels and expensive clothes, ¹⁰but with good works, as is fitting for women serving God. ¹¹Let a woman quietly receive instruction and be submissive. ¹²I allow no woman to teach or to have authority over men. Let them be quiet. ¹³For Adam was created first and then Eve. ¹⁴Adam was not deceived but it was the woman who was deceived and she fell into sin. ¹⁵But woman will be saved through maternity, provided that her life be orderly and holy, in faith and love.

Regarding overseers and deacons

3 ¹If someone aspires to the overseer's ministry, he is without a doubt looking for a noble task. ²It is necessary that the overseer (or bishop) be beyond reproach, the husband of one wife, responsible, judicious, of good manners, hospitable and skillful in teaching. ³He must not be addicted to wine or quarrelsome, but gentle and peaceful, and not a lover of money, ⁴but a man whose household is well managed, with obedient and well-mannered children. ⁵If he cannot govern his own house, how could he lead the assembly of God?

⁶He must not be a recent convert, lest he become conceited and fall into the same condemnation as the devil. ⁷Moreover he must enjoy a good reputation among the outsiders, lest people speak evil about him and he fall into the snare of the devil.

¹²The deacons must be husbands of one wife. ¹³Those who serve well as deacons will win honourable rank, with authority to speak of Christian faith.

◆ ¹⁴I give you these instructions, although I hope I will see you soon. ¹⁵If I delay, you may know how you ought to conduct yourself in the household of God, that is the Church rules? Of course, we can: see commentary on Rom 13.

Verses 9-14 concern women, and to understand why the letter is so strict, we must recall that there was a lot of talk about freedom in the church, and living together among the brothers was very simple, and so at times, there were abuses.

On the other hand, we always have a hard time accepting the demands of the Gospel when society teaches us differently. Jesus' attitude regarding women was revolutionary and liberating, and at the beginning, the church followed his example (see 1 Cor 7). But, before long, they went back to the usual way of giving a very limited place to women in society, and that applied also to their religious assemblies.

In the whole history of the Church there was a great respect for the dignity of women and there were many initiatives favouring them; yet, there were few periods when women enjoyed equality with men. In many places, women were more emancipated during the Middle Ages than closer to our times. In the 19th century. Likewise, in urban societies dealing with business, in the world and in the Church women occupied a place without comparison with the place granted them in more closed societies.

In fact, the Church alone does not change the world and society as long as these have not learned to know human reality better.

This passage, reminding us of 1 Co 11:1-10 and 14:34, opposes women's emancipation with the same biblical arguments commonly used by the Jewish masters.

■ Here, Paul deals with leaders, bishops and deacons (see commentary on Titus 1:6 and Phil 1:1).

of the living God, which is the pillar and foundation of the truth. ¹⁶How great indeed is the mystery of divine blessing!

*He was shown in the flesh and sanctified by the Spirit; presented to the angels and proclaimed to all nations.
The world believed in him:
He had been taken up in glory!*

o 4 ¹The Spirit tells us clearly that in the last days some will defect from the faith and follow deceitful spirits and devilish doctrines, ²led by lying hypocrites whose conscience has been branded with the stamp of infamy.

7. 2 Tim 2, 16 10. 2, 3

◆ This short paragraph reminds us that, if indeed we are in charge of the Church of God, we are neither its founders nor its masters. The Church was born through a merciful intervention of God, when he decided that his Son should identify with the human race, as is expressed in this short poem.

Here, we use divine blessing (16) for a word which we translated elsewhere by "piety" or "religion" (see 2:2; 4:7; 6:3; 6:5; 6:6; 2 Tim 3:5 and Titus 1:1). In those years, the word was mostly used to mean the loving attitude toward the Father and neighbours, characteristic of true believers who simply imitate God's example.

The Church is the pillar and foundation of the truth. We must understand this phrase as referring to the concepts of that time: from above, from a world in which everything is truth. God lowers his Truth to the earth, as a column or a visible sign on which men can lean. In spite of all the infidelities of the Church, God uses it to preserve the true knowledge of the Father, the Son and the Spirit in the world. Without this knowledge, people cannot be free, nor can humanity reach its maturity.

● After the death of the apostles, new masters who tamper with the faith appear in the Church.

Among a number of errors, these men despise everything concerning the body: they condemn marriage, forbid eating meat and drinking wine at meals. Their scorn for the body and the ers receive with thanksgiving. ⁴Everything created by God is good, an all food is lawful; nothing is to be rejected if we receive it with thanksgiving, ⁵for it is blessed with the word of God and prayer, and made holy.

⁶If you explain these things to the brothers and sisters, you will prove to be a good servant of Christ Jesus, nourished by the teachings of faith and the sound doctrine which you have followed. ⁷Reject irreligious fables and old wives' tales.

Train yourself in godliness ⁸Physical training is of limited value; godliness, instead, is useful in every way, holding promises for the present life and for the life to come. ⁹Here you have a sure doctrine you can trust ¹⁰We toil and endure because we trust in the living God, the Saviour of all men, especially of those who believe

Acts 1, 9 1. Mt 24, 23; Acts 20, 29
4. Gen 1, 31; 1 Cor 10, 31; Rom 14, 14; Mt 15, 11 good things created by God is totally unchristian and the church fights against it: see Co. 2:23

In the last days (v 1): these are the days beginning with Jesus' resurrection and stretching to his second coming (Heb 1:2; Jas 5:3).

The Spirit tells us clearly. The prophets of the church were often predicting that people would come to preach their own theories, and not authentic faith.

The believers receive with thanksgiving. From the beginning, it was the custom of the Christian family to give thanks to God at the family meal.

Train yourself in godliness (v 7). Here we have another danger. Contrary to the teachers who despise life and want us to live as strange characters, there are others who are totally absorbed by external things. In the Greco-Roman world, there was a lot of enthusiasm for sports and races. Without despising the body obviously, we are asked to check if we give each thing the importance it deserves and the time corresponding to it.

+ Before all these false teachers, Timothy must be the example of a true apostle.

Let not one reproach you on account of your youth. Usually, in the Christian communities and in the Jewish ones, the leaders were older men. This is why they were called "elders" or "presbyters" (which means the same thing). Timothy, who is visiting the church on behalf of Paul, has authority over these elders, even

Advice to Timothy

+ ¹¹ Command and teach these things. ¹² Let no one reproach you on account of your youth. Be a model to the believers in the way you speak and act, in your love, your faith and purity of life. ¹³ Devote yourself to reading, preaching and teaching, until I come.

¹⁴ Do not neglect the spiritual gift conferred on you with prophetic words when the elders laid their hands upon you. ¹⁵ Think about it and practise it so that your progress may be seen by all. ¹⁶ Take care of yourself and your teaching. Be steadfast in doing this and you will save both yourself and your hearers.

The widows in the Church

■ 5 ¹ Do not rebuke an older man; on the contrary, advise him as if he were your father. Treat the young as your brothers, ² the elder women as mothers and the young girls as your sisters, with great purity.

³ Take care of widows who are really widows. ⁴ If a widow has children or grandchildren, these should first learn their family duties and give their parents financial help. This is correct and pleases God.

⁵ A true widow is one who, in being left alone, has set her hope in God, praying day and night to God and asking him for help. ⁶ On the contrary, a widow who lives as she pleases, is dead even while she lives. ⁷ Warn them about this that they be blameless. ⁸ Those who do not take care of their own, especially those of their household, have denied the faith and are worse than unbelievers.

¹¹ Do not accept younger widows; they may have other desires than for Christ and want to marry; ¹² then they deserve condemnation for breaking their former commitment. ¹³ Besides they form the habit of being idle, going from house to house. And it is though he is much younger than they are. The example of his sincere faith and his profound knowledge of the Bible will be his strength.

12. Tit 2, 7 14. 2 Tim 1, 6 1. Lev 19, 32 5. Lk 2, 37 6. Rev 3, 1 10. Jn 13, 14; Heb 13, 2 13. 2 Thes 3, 11

Do not neglect the spiritual gift (14). If someone was named to a ministry, or an official position in the church, this was considered to be a spiritual gift: for example, presbyters, deacons, bishops, prophets. But, while other gifts such as healing the sick, came directly from the Holy Spirit, ministries were received through a laying on of hands. An apostle or a prophet would lay his hands on the candidate to transfer upon him the authority which he had received in a similar way. Thus, in the Church, every leader receives his authority from Christ through a succession of people going back to the apostles.

On this occasion, the prophets present would also address the candidate with exhortations and warnings (see 1:18). Timothy was consecrated with prophetic words: it was Paul himself who laid his hands over him (2 Tim 1:6). Other prophets and presbyters also participated in this.

■ From the beginning, women had their own unique role in the Church. Some of them, called widows, occupied an official position.

Paul sees three kinds of widows: some did not need help from the church because they had relatives; others did need the church assistance. Finally, there were some, with or without the help of the church, who were in charge of certain functions.

They deserve condemnation... (v 12). This means that by leaving her position and marrying the "widow" of the third category broke a commitment she had made publicly. The "widows" were dedicated to the service of Christ in the same way as religious women of today.

A true widow is she who has set her hope in God. We should read what Paul says in 1 Cor 7, concerning the greater freedom celibates have to serve the Lord. Every baptized person is called to belong totally to Christ. If, through circumstances of life, we are alone again and free from family responsibilities, this may be an invitation from God to dedicate ourselves com-not just idleness! They become gossips and busybodies, saying what they should not.

¹⁴So I want young widows to marry, to have children and rule their household and give adversaries no grounds for criticism. ¹⁵Some have already strayed to follow Satan. ¹⁶If any Christian woman has widows in her family, let her assist them; in this way the church will not be burdened and may assist those who are truly widows.

Regarding the presbyters

◆ ¹⁷Let the elders who rule well receive double compensation, especially those who labour in preaching and teaching. ¹⁸Scripture says: Do not muzzle the ox while it threshes grain, and: The worker deserves his wages.

¹⁹Do not accept accusations against an elder except on the evidence of two or three witnesses. ²⁰If he continues to sin, rebuke him in the presence of the community, as a warning to the rest.

²¹I urge you, in the presence of God and Christ Jesus and of the holy angels, to obey these rules with impartiality, without making distinctions. ²²Do not be hasty in the laying on of hands, so becoming an accomplice in the sins of others. Keep yourself free from blame. ²⁴The sins of some people are plain to see, even before they are examined; the sins of others are known only later on. ²⁵Likewise good deeds are conspicuous; even when they are not, they cannot remain hidden.

²³Do not drink only water but take a little wine to help your digestion, because of your frequent illness.

6 ¹Let those who are slaves always show respect to their masters, so that no one may speak ill of God and his teaching. ²Those whose masters are Christians should not show less respect under the pretext that they are brothers. On the contrary, they must give a better service since they are doing good works on behalf of believers and dear friends.

pletely to the service of the church and to constant prayer.

◆ Once again, Paul deals with the "elders" or "presbyters" who are in charge of the local community.

Let the elders receive double compensation. Paul wants the community to help its leaders morally and financially.

But, they must fulfil their duties. Rebuke him in the presence of the community so that the rest might stand in fear: the first Christians were no angels. Once in a while their enthusiastic and sincere faith needed strong discipline in order for them to remain faithful to their commitments.

See Col 3:22 and Titus 2:9 regarding the responsibilities of servants.

At the beginning and at the end of the chapter, the author insists on faithfulness to the tradition. Faith is not a doctrine which can be adapted to one's tastes. Leaders are required to have a respectful and humble attitude towards this treasure entrusted to them to be transmitted to others. We can already see two faults:

– Instead of deepening faith, some multiple words.

– Some replace the surrender to God's Word by a critical attitude which attempts to judge faith and decides if it agrees with their ideas.

Money is mentioned twice (6:10 and 6:17; 19). After the first years with the predominance of an enthusiastic faith, the church finds that even for believers, everything is lost when the love for money persists. Attachment to money makes us lose our trust in God (6, 10), and separates us from the rest. Rich people will have to seek God in authentic prayer and in sharing with their brothers.

Paul calls Timothy to avoid all those dangers (6, 11), remaining true to faith and free from greed. By doing so, he will be "a man of God": witness of Christ – as Christ was a witness of the living Father (6:13).

our Lord Christ Jesus and true religious instruction, ⁴is conceited and understands nothing. He is crazy about controversies and discussions which result in envy, insults, ⁵blows and constant arguments, between people of depraved minds and far from the truth. For them, religion is merely financial gain.

⁶In reality, religion is a treasure if we are content with what we have. ⁷We brought nothing into the world and we will leave it with nothing. ⁸Let us then be content with having food and clothing. ⁹Those who strive to be rich fall into temptations and traps. A lot of foolish and harmful ambitions plunge them into ruin and destruction. ¹⁰Indeed, the love of money is the root of every evil. Because of this greed, some have wandered away from the faith, bringing on themselves afflictions of every kind.

¹¹But you, man of God, shun all this. Strive to be holy and godly. Live in faith and love, with endurance and gentleness. ¹²Fight the good fight of faith and win everlasting life to which you have been called when you made the good profession of faith in the presence of so many witnesses.

¹³Now, in the presence of God who gives life to all things, and of Christ Jesus who gave the good testimony before Pontius Pilate, ¹⁴I command you to keep the commandment. Keep yourself pure and blameless until the glorious coming of Christ Jesus, our Lord, ¹⁵which God will bring about at the proper time, he, the magnificent sovereign, King of kings and Lord of lords. ¹⁶To him, alone immortal, who lives in unapproachable light and whom no man has ever seen or can see, to him be honour and power for ever and ever. Amen!

¹⁷Command the rich of this world not to be arrogant or to put their trust in the uncertainty of wealth. Let them rather trust in God who generously gives us all we need for our happiness. ¹⁸Let them do good, be rich in good deeds and be generous; let them share with others. ¹⁹In this way, they shall heap up a sound capital for the future and gain true life.

²⁰Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to you; avoid useless and profane words, as well as discussions arising from false knowledge. ²¹Some have lost the faith in accepting such knowledge.

The grace of God be with you all.

2 letter to

imothy

This second letter to Timothy, which Paul wrote from his Roman jail, is like a goodbye at a time he feels very lonely and even abandoned by believers. Foreseeing that his condemnation to death is approaching, he calls Timothy.

At that point, Paul shows his total trust in the Lord and he attempts to communicate his spirit to Timothy.

1 ¹ From Paul, apostle of Christ Jesus by the will of God, for the sake of his promise of eternal life in Christ Jesus, ² to my dear son Timothy.

May grace, mercy and peace be with you from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

God did not give us a spirit of bashfulness

o ³ I give thanks to God whom I serve with a clear conscience the way my fathers did, as I remember you constantly, day and night, in my prayers. ⁴ I recall your tears and I long to see you that I may be filled with joy. I am reminded of your sincere faith, ⁵ so like the faith of your grandmother Lois and of your mother Eunice, which I am sure you have inherited.

⁶ For this reason I invite you to fan into a flame the gift of God you received through the laying on of my hands. ⁷ For God did not confer on us a spirit of bashfulness, but of strength, love and good judgment. ⁸ Do not be ashamed of testifying to our Lord, nor of seeing me in chains. On the contrary, take your share in labouring for the Gospel with the strength of God. ⁹ He saved us and called us – a calling which proceeds from his holiness. This did not depend on our merits, but on his generosity and his own initiative. This calling given to us from all time in Christ Jesus ¹⁰ has just been manifested with the glorious appearance of Christ Jesus, our Lord, who destroyed death and brought life and immortality to light in his Gospel. ¹¹ Of this message I was made herald, apostle and teacher.

¹² For its sake I now suffer this trial, but I am not ashamed, for I know in whom I have believed and I am convinced that he is capable of taking care of all I have entrusted to him until that day.

¹³ Follow the pattern of the sound doctrine which you have heard from me concerning faith and love in

3. Phil 3, 5; Acts 26, 4	5. Acts 16, 1	6. 1 Tim 4, 14	7. Rom 8, 15	9. Eph 2, 8; Tit 3, 5

o Fan into a flame the gift you received. See 1 Tim 4: 14. Paul tries to give his own energy to Timothy and he reminds him of God's love and promises.

The sound doctrine... the precious deposit... which you have heard it (13-14): see 1 Tim 1:3. The doctrine of the Gospel cannot be revised, but it cannot be preserved either without the help of the Holy Spirit who increases its value day by day.

He saved us and called us: see Eph 2:8-10.

He is capable of taking care of all I have entrusted to him (12). Such is the assurance of the believer. The man of faith is not impressed by the promises of the world, instead he spends his life in an often thankless task, and he perseveres as if he could see what cannot yet be seen (Heb 11:27).

+ Entrust to reliable people everything... (2). From Paul's first missions we saw his concern to leave the communities with their own leaders (Acts 14:23). See also Titus 1:6. Here: Paul insists that they must be able to preserve the faith integrally.

Then, Paul invites Timothy to surrender completely, with the assurance that his efforts will be rewarded.

With the firm hope of faith. Christ's witness must be courageous and strong as the messenger of the victorious Christ. His own conviction will convince others. He must avoid the many ways of wasting his time and getting off track in his mission: idle conversations devoid of interest. Also things that do not promote a better service of God (1 Tim 1, 4): false religious problems unrelated to real life.

Christ Jesus. ¹⁴Keep the precious deposit with the help of the Holy Spirit who lives within us.

¹⁵You know that all from the province of Asia have deserted me, especially Phygelus and Hermogenes. ¹⁶May God bless the household of Onesiphorus, for he often came to visit me and was not ashamed of my chains. ¹⁷On the contrary, on arriving in Rome he searched for me until he found me. ¹⁸May the Lord grant that he find mercy from the Lord on that day. You well know all the services he rendered at Ephesus.

Labour like a good soldier of Christ

+2 ¹You, my son, be strong with the grace you have in Christ Jesus. ²Entrust to reliable people everything you have learned from me in the presence of several witnesses, that they may instruct others.

³Labour like a good soldier of Christ Jesus. ⁴No soldier lets himself be involved in civilian trade; it is enough for him to please his commanding officer. ⁵No athlete is crowned unless he competes according to the rules. ⁶And again, he who tills the land is the first to enjoy the fruits of the harvest. ⁷Think over what I am telling you; the Lord will give you understanding in everything.

⁸Remember Christ Jesus, risen from the dead, Jesus, son of David, as preached in my Gospel. ⁹For this Gospel I labour and even wear chains like an evildoer, but the word of God is not chained. ¹⁰And so, I bear everything for the sake of the chosen people, that they, too, may obtain the salvation given to us in Christ Jesus and share eternal glory. ¹¹This statement is true:

If we have died with him, we shall also live with him;

¹²If we endure with him, we shall reign with him;

If we deny him, he will also deny us;

¹³If we are unfaithful, he remains faithful for he cannot deny himself.

Do not fight over words

ⁿ ¹⁴Remind your people of these things and urge them in the presence of God not to fight over words, which does no good, but only ruins those who listen. ¹⁵Be for God an active and proved minister, a blameless worker

12. Rom 8, 17; Mt 10, 33	13. 1 Cor 1, 9; Num 23, 19	15. Tit 2, 7; 1 Tim 4, 7

No soldier... (2. 4). At certain times Paul wanted to earn a living while he was preaching (2 Cor 11. 9; 2 Thes 3. 7), but now he is preoccupied by those who waste their time in seeking a living, when the community has the obligation to look after them.

Paul comes back to the experiences of apostolic work. With time converts are tested: some grow and others are lost. The apostle must not be surprised: no fall nor scandal can shake the solid foundations laid by God (2. 19) and the Church will not fall apart.

■ In the last days (3. 1): namely, the time beginning with the coming of Christ. The presence of evil in the church itself must not surprise us.

They will give you wisdom (15). The meditation on Scripture is the great means of growing in faith (15-17). Obviously, Paul is referring to the Old Testament, the only existing Scripture at the time. The Old Testament becomes alive and reveals God's message to us today when it is enlightened by the Holy Spirit (2 Pt 1:20). The key to Scripture is the witness that the apostles gave to Jesus and which the Church transmits to us: what has been entrusted to you, knowing from whom you received it.

All Scripture is inspired by God and thus, in Scripture we must seek God's message to his people as opposed to taking it as the basis of personal speculations. The same Spirit who leads the Church inspired the biblical authors.

They say that resurrection has already taken place (2. 18). The Greeks found it very difficult to believe in the resurrection. These people may have said that a spiritual resurrection had been achieved through baptism and that there was no other resurrection to hope for, after death.

correctly handling the word of truth. ¹⁶Do not take part in useless conversations, alien to the faith. This leads to a greater lack of faith. ¹⁷Such teaching spreads like gangrene: I am thinking of Hymeneus and Philetus. ¹⁸They strayed from the truth, holding that resurrection has already taken place; and with this they upset the faith of some. ¹⁹But the solid foundations laid by God are not shaken; on them it is written: The Lord knows those who are his, and: Let him who confesses the name of the Lord turn away from evil.

²⁰In a great house we find not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and clay. Some are reserved for special uses, other for ordinary ones. ²¹If anyone cleanses himself of what I speak of, he will become a noble vessel, useful to the Lord, prepared for any holy purpose.

²²So shun the passions of youth and seek righteousness, faith, love and peace together with those who call upon the Lord with a pure heart.

²³Avoid stupid and senseless discussions, since such are the cause of misunderstanding. ²⁴God's servant must not be quarrelsome, but kind to all, always teaching and patient with those who do not understand. ²⁵Let him gently correct his opponents; perhaps God may grant them to repent and discover the truth, ²⁶withdrawing them from the snare of the devil who held them captive to his own will.

■ 3 ¹Be quite sure that there will be difficult times in the last days. ²People will become selfish, lovers of money, boastful, conceited, gossips, disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, unholy. ³They will be unable to love and to forgive; they will be slanderers, without self-control, cruel, enemies of good, ⁴traitors, shameless, full of pride, more in love with pleasure than with God. ⁵They will keep the appearance of piety, but rejecting its demands. Keep away from such people.

⁶Of the same kind are those who enter the houses and captivate weak women, full of sins, swayed by all kinds of passion, ⁷who are always learning but never grasping knowledge of the truth. ⁸These people of corrupt mind and falsified faith oppose the truth just as Jannes and Jambres opposed Moses. ⁹Yet they may not go very far, for their folly will be clear to all, as in the case of those two.

¹⁰You, instead, have followed closely my teaching, my way of life, my projects, faith, patience, love, endurance, ¹¹persecutions and sufferings. You know what happened to me at Antioch, Iconium and Lystra. How many trials I had to bear! Yet the Lord rescued me from them all. ¹²All who want to serve God in Christ Jesus will be persecuted, ¹³while evil persons and impostors will go from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived.

¹⁴As for you, continue with what you have learned and what has been entrusted to you, knowing from whom you received it. ¹⁵Besides, you have known the Scriptures from childhood; they will give you the wisdom that leads you to salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. ¹⁶All Scripture is inspired by God and is useful for teaching, refuting error, for correcting and training in Christian life. ¹⁷Through Scripture the man of God is made expert and thoroughly equipped for every good work.

Preach the Word

◆ 4 ¹In the presence of God and Christ Jesus, who is to judge the living and the dead, and by the hope I have of his coming and his kingdom, I urge you ²to preach the Word, in season and out of season, reproving, rebuking or advising, always with patience and providing instruction. ³For the time is coming when people will no longer endure sound doctrine but will be so eager to hear what is new, that they will never have enough teachers after their own liking. ⁴And they will abandon the truth to hear fables. ⁵So be prudent, do not mind your labour, give yourself to your work as an evangelist, fulfil your ministry.

⁶As for me the time of sacrifice has arrived, and the moment of my departure has come. ⁷I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. ⁸Now there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness with which the Lord, the just judge, will reward me on that day; and not only me, but all those who have longed for his glorious coming.

Final greetings

⁹Do your best to come to me quickly. ¹⁰You must know that Demas has deserted me for the love of this world: he returned to Thessalonica. Crescens has gone to Galatia and Titus to Dalmatia. ¹¹Only Luke remains with me. Get Mark and bring him with you, for he is a useful helper in my work. ¹²I sent Tychicus to Ephesus.

¹³Bring with you the cloak I left at Troas, in Carpos' house and also the scrolls, especially the parchments. ¹⁴Alexander the metalworker has caused me great harm. The Lord will repay him for what he has done. ¹⁵Distrust him for he has been very much opposed to our preaching.

¹⁶At my first defense no one supported me; all deserted me. May the Lord not hold it against them. ¹⁷But the Lord was at my side, giving me strength to proclaim the Word fully, and let all the pagans hear it. So I was rescued from the lion's mouth. ¹⁸The Lord will save me from all evil, bringing me to his heavenly kingdom. Glory to him for ever and ever. Amen!

¹⁹Greetings to Prisca and Aquila and to the family of Onesiphorus. ²⁰Erastus remained in Corinth. I left Trophimus sick in Miletus.

²¹Try to come here before the winter. Eubulus, Pudens, Linus, Claudia and all the brothers and sisters send you greetings. ²²The Lord be with your spirit.

May grace be with you all.

◆ Preach the Word (2): this is Paul's last advice. It must be the first concern of the church and of any church leader.

Paul knows that he will not be freed and that he will be condemned to death. He assumes his own sacrifice just as Jesus did.

We find the comparison of the soldier and the athlete which Paul liked so much. In those days athletes received a crown of laurels as a symbol of immortality.

letter to titus

Like Timothy, Titus is one of Paul's assistants, officially consecrated to the service of the Gospel and who visited the churches with the very authority of Paul.

The commentary will be brief since this letter is very similar to the two letters to Timothy.

1 ¹ From Paul, servant of God, apostle of Christ Jesus, at the service of God's chosen people, so that they may believe and reach the knowledge of truth and godliness.

² The life we are waiting for was promised long ago by God who never lies, ³ and as the appointed time had come, he made it known through the message entrusted to me by a command of God, our Saviour.

⁴ Greetings to you, Titus, my true son in the faith we share. May grace and peace be with you from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

On the elders of the church

o ⁵ I left you in Crete because I wanted you to put right what was defective and appoint elders in every town, following my instructions. ⁶ They must be blameless, married only once, whose children are believers and not open to the charge of being immoral and rebellious. ⁷ Since the overseer (or bishop) is the steward of God's house, he must be beyond reproach: not proud, hot-headed, over fond of wine, quarrelsome or greedy for gain.

⁸ On the contrary he must be hospitable, a lover of what is good, wise, upright, devout and self-controlled. ⁹ He must hold to the message of faith just as it was taught, so that, in his turn, he may teach sound doctrine and refute those who oppose it.

¹⁰ You know that there are many

2. 2 Tim 2, 13	5. 1 Tim 3, 2	8. Heb 3, 2; 1 Per 5, 2	9. 1 Tim 1, 10	10. 1 Tim 4, 1

o Titus had to organize the churches of Crete with leaders in every city.

We do not know if the title Bishop (meaning supervisor) was given to all these elders or presbyters, or if the title was reserved for those whose work was carried out most efficiently. After a while, there was only one bishop in charge of the entire community. After the apostles' death, bishops served as their representatives and they ruled the church with their same authority.

What Paul says here about the prerequisites to be presbyter or bishop is the same as what we have in 1 Timothy. We may note the following:

– Married only once. Obviously, it is not necessary to be married; only to have been married only once. Men of a certain age – usually married – were consecrated. But there were number of Christians who had divorced and re-married several times while they were still pagans.

– He must be blameless, not only as a person, but in his family and his past reputation. This requirement justifies the following ones.

– He must be hospitable. More than organization, the church is communion. Everyone must be welcomed and feel at home in the house of the presbyter and of a bishop; on the other hand he must be hospitable with the brothers and leaders coming from other areas in terms of assuring unity and mutual understanding between the various communities.

rebellious minds, talkers of nonsense, deceivers, especially the party of the circumcised. ¹¹ They have to be silenced when they go around disturbing whole families, teaching for low gain what should not be taught. ¹² Even Cretan, one of their own prophets has said, "Cretans: always liars, wicked beasts and lazy gluttons." ¹³ This is true. For this reason rebuke them sharply if you want them to have a sound faith ¹⁴ instead of heeding Jewish fables and practices of people who reject the truth.

¹⁵ To the pure everything is pure; to the corrupt and unbelieving nothing is pure: their minds and consciences have been defiled. ¹⁶ They pretend to know God but deny him with their deeds. They are detestable, disobedient and unfit for doing anything good.

Live as responsible persons

+ 2 ¹ Let your words strengthen sound doctrine. ² Tell the older men to be sober, serious, wise, sound in faith, love and perseverance.

³ The older women in like manner must behave as befits holy women, not given to gossiping or drinking wine. ⁴ but as good counsellors, be able to teach younger women to love their husbands and children, ⁵ to be judicious and pure, to take care of their households, to be kind and submissive to their husbands, lest our faith be attacked.

⁶ Encourage the young men to be self-controlled. ⁷ Set them an example by your own way of doing. Let your teaching be earnest and sincere, ⁸ and your preaching be beyond reproach. Then your opponents will feel ashamed and will have nothing to criticize.

⁹ Teach slaves to be subject to their masters, and to give satisfaction in every respect, instead of arguing. ¹⁰ They must not steal from them but be trustworthy. In this way they will draw everyone to admire the doctrine of God our Saviour.

¹¹ For God Saviour has revealed his loving plan to all, ¹² teaching us to reject an irreligious way of life and worldly greed, and to live in this world as responsible persons, upright and serving God, ¹³ while we await our blessed hope – the glorious manifestation of our great God and Saviour Christ Jesus. ¹⁴ He gave himself for us, to redeem us from every evil and to purify a people he wanted to be his own and dedicated to what is good.

¹⁵ Teach these things, encourage and reprove with all authority. Let no one despise you.

o 3 ¹ Remind the believers to be submissive to rulers and au-

+ The first paragraph recalls the responsibilities of the diverse groups forming the community. Faithfulness and constancy in the "sound doctrine" must produce such fruits as goodness, modesty and good sense.

God has revealed his loving plan to all (2, 11). Here Paul returns to the essence of the Christian message: it is a gift of God and so it must produce the fruits of goodness and reconciliation and draw people away from the self-centeredness which paralyzes them.

He gave himself for us (14). As in Eph 5, 25 and 1 Cor 11, 25, Jesus sacrifice is primarily to purify those who become his people. In fact, it is by looking at Jesus that, little by little, we let go of what is evil and violent in us.

Teaching us to reject an irreligious way of life (v. 12). God brings us to purify our motives and our hearts.

– Responsible, because the practice of Christian living brings us to a more serious attitude.

– Just with others by being primarily just with regard to God.

– Serving God because the believer is dedicated to God.

thorities, to be obedient and to take the initiative in doing good. ² Tell them to insult no one; they must not be quarrelsome but gentle and understanding with everyone.

³ We ourselves were once foolish, disobedient and misled. We were slaves of our desires, seeking pleasures of every kind. We lived in malice and envy, hated and hating each other. ⁴ But God revealed his eminent goodness and love for humankind ⁵ and saved us, not because of good deeds we may have done but for the sake of his own mercy. He gave us rebirth in baptism and renewed us by the Holy Spirit ⁶ poured over us through Christ Jesus our Saviour. ⁷ By the grace of God we were made holy and now we hope for everlasting life, our inheritance.

■ ⁸ This is the truth. I want you to insist on these things, for those who believe in God must excel in good deeds; that is what matters and is profitable to us. ⁹ Avoid stupid arguments, discussions about genealogies and quarrels about the Law, for they are useless and unimportant.

¹⁰ If anyone promotes sects in the church, warn him once and then a second time. If he still continues, break with him, ¹¹ knowing that such a person is misled and sinful; he is self-condemned.

¹² When I send Artemas or Tychicus to you, try to come to me at Nicopolis, as soon as possible for I have decided to spend the winter there. ¹³ Do your best to put Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their way, and see to it that they have everything they need. ¹⁴ Our people must learn to outstand in doing good works and to face urgent needs, instead of remaining idle and useless.

¹⁵ All who are with me send greetings. Greet those who love us in the faith.

Grace be with you all.

• Speaking to the first Christian generation, Paul had underscored the transformation of the one who has been converted: becoming Christian involved breaking away with the past. But, in the following generation, while the church was being established in the various provinces of the Roman Empire, the hope of an imminent return of Christ was declining. Thus, if the Church is called to last, it is important for the Christian to appear before all as a model of ordered and just life. Since obedience then was the pillar of family and social life, Paul insists that the believer must obey from the heart in every aspect which is not opposed to his faith.

The same point is stressed in 2:5 and 2:10, and also in 1 Tim 2:2 and 2:11.

■ The word sects which Paul uses (v. 10) is very similar to the word heresy. Instead of accepting the faith as the Church transmits it, a heretic chooses what seems most important to him and what he likes the most. He rejects part of the message and at the same time, he leaves the Church with his own disciples to form his own group. In preferring his own judgment to the doctrine of the Church, he loses the in-depth faith attitude, he breaks the unity and condemns himself even though he keeps a major part of the message.

"Hebrews" was the name given to the Jews who lived in Palestine, unlike the most of them who had emigrated to other countries. This letter is addressed to the first Christian communities of Palestine, formed by Jews – by race – who had been persecuted and punished and whose possessions had even been confiscated, all of this because they became followers of Christ. They no longer had anything in this world and they had to encourage one another with the assurance that, at the conclusion of their exile, they would find the true Home where Jesus went after his suffering. In this way they were like their Hebrew ancestors who had lived in the desert, in the hope and search of the Promised Land.

It is helpful to know that this letter is addressed to men familiar with the Old Testament: they may well have been Jewish priests converted to Christ who were going through a serious crisis. Indeed, up until then, the Temple had been their whole lives since they were priests: they would offer sacrifices and they would receive part of the sacrificed animals in payment. But now, not only had they been excluded and removed from the temple by the Jews, but Christ had replaced them. For he had come as the New Temple and the perfect victim, pleasing to God, as the only Priest capable of putting men in touch with God.

So Christ had taken their work away from them as well as their reason for being. At times, these men who had known Jesus the man were doubting: had everything really changed because of him?

To confirm their faith, this letter shows them that the Jewish religion, with its splendid sacrifices in the Jerusalem Temple, was only the figure of something greater: the authentic Priest for all humanity is Jesus, the Son of God, and now there is only his sacrifice, which begins on the cross and ends in the Glory of Heaven.

Are there not many "Hebrews" in today's world? The sick who no longer have hope, the persecuted Christians, the people who do not accept the injustice and the mediocrity of the society in which we live. Although many of them may not understand all the premises and the biblical quotations of this letter, these people will feel encouraged in their faith.

This letter was written from Rome, perhaps in the year 66, when the war in which Jerusalem was destroyed was approaching. These were the last months of Paul's life; he was imprisoned in Rome for the second time. This letter reflects Paul's thoughts, but he did not write it. It is quite possible that the author is Apollos, mentioned in Acts 18:24-28, "a man well versed in Scriptures" and who "proved from the Scriptures (the Old Testament) that Jesus is the Messiah".

1 God has spoken in the past to our fathers through the prophets, in many different ways, although never completely; ²but in our times he has spoken definitively to us through his Son.

He is the one God appointed heir of all things, since through him he unfolded the stages of the world.

³He is the radiance of God's Glory and bears the stamp of God's hidden being, so that his powerful word upholds the universe. And after taking away sin, he took his place at the right hand of the divine Majesty in Heaven.

⁴So he is now far superior to angels just as the name he received sets him apart from them. ⁵To what angel did God say: You are my son, I have begotten you today? and to what angel did he promise: I shall be a father to him and he will be a son to me? ⁶On sending his First-born to the world, God says: Let all the angels adore him. ⁷Whereas about angels we find words like these: God sends the angels like wind, makes his servants flames of fire.

⁸But of the Son we read this: Your throne, O God, will last forever and ever; a rule of justice is your rule.

You loved righteousness and hated wickedness; therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness, above your fellow kings.

¹⁰And also these words: Lord, in the beginning you placed the earth on its foundation and the heavens are the work of your hands. ¹¹*They will disappear, but you remain. They will be for you like an old garment;* ¹²*you will fold them like a cloak and change them. You, on the contrary, are always the same and your years will never end.*

¹³God never said to any of his angels: Sit here at my right side until I put your enemies as a footstool under your feet. ¹⁴For all these spirits are only servants, and God sends them to help those who shall be saved.

2 ¹So we must pay the closest attention to the preaching we heard, lest we drift away. ²If words spoken through angels became law and all disobedience or neglect received its due reward, ³how could we now escape if we neglect such powerful salvation? For the Lord himself announced it first and it was later confirmed by those who heard it. ⁴God

■ This chapter shows Christ, the Son of God, as superior to angels. See the same controversy in Col 1:15-20 and Eph 1:2-23. Before Jesus was born, the Son was in God, the radiance of the glory of the Father. God from God, Light from light, invisible Image of the invisible God, bearing the stamp of God's hidden being (Jn 1:1-14).

This comparing Jesus with the angels may surprise us (as in Eph 1 and Col 1). But for believers of Jesus' time, it was enough to contemplate nature to presume, beyond the harmony and splendor of creation, the active presence of cosmic power beings, which they called angels – the distributors of divine riches. To them, Moses had not met God himself, but it was the angels who had given him the Law (see 2:1). Thus, could a man match these mysterious powers, no matter how holy he may have been, even Jesus?

■ The new world. Actually the text says: the world to come. This does not mean future times, or the end of the world, but the new and definitive times which began with the resurrection of Christ.

The new world is where the risen Christ is. It is the homeland we were hoping for. But, this new world has also already come to us: he who believes and is alive experiences it all the time and recognizes it in others.

He thought it fitting to make perfect through suffering the initiator of their salvation (v 10). There is no other way to the liberation of men than the way of the cross. Those who are eager to free their brothers must be tested, some through opposition, others through indifference. Suffering is a good teacher: and it tests the strength of our surrender.

It is on the cross of Christ that we must dis-confirmed their testimony by signs, wonders and miracles of every kind – especially by the gifts of the Holy Spirit which he distributed according to his will.

■ ⁵ The angels were not given dominion over the new world of which we are speaking. ⁶ Instead someone declared in Scripture: What is man, that you should be mindful of him? ⁷ For a while you placed him a little lower than the angels, but you crowned him with glory and honour. ⁸ You have given him dominion over all things.

When it is said that God gave him dominion over all things, nothing is excluded. As it is we do not yet see his dominion over all things. ⁹ But Jesus who suffered death and for a little while was placed lower than the angels has been crowned with honour and glory. For the merciful plan of God demanded that he experience death on behalf of everyone.

¹⁰ God, from whom all comes and by whom all things exist, wanted to bring to glory a great number of sons, and he thought it fitting to make perfect through suffering the initiator of their salvation. ¹¹ So he who gives and those who receive holiness are only one. He himself is not ashamed of calling us brothers, ¹² as we read: Lord, I will proclaim your name to my brothers; I will praise you in the congregation. ¹³ He also says: I will trust in God; here I am and the children God has given me.

¹⁴ And because all those children share one same nature of flesh and blood, Jesus likewise had to share this nature. This is why his death destroyed the one holding the power of death, that is the devil, ¹⁵ and freed those who remained in bondage all their lifetime because of the fear of death. ¹⁶ Jesus came to take by the hand, not the angels but the human race. ¹⁷ So he had to be like his brothers in every respect, in order to be the High Priest faithful to God and merciful to them, a priest able to forgive and atone for their sins.

Christ came as the new Moses

◆ 3 ¹ Holy brothers, called to a supernatural vocation, consider Jesus, the apostle and High Priest of our faith.

² He is faithful to God who appointed him, just as Moses was a faithful steward over God's household ³ but Jesus deserves much greater honour cover the love of the Father for his Son, since he did not "condemn him" to suffer among men, but rather, by way of suffering, he called him to be the Saviour and model for everyone.

Christ had to share this nature (v 14). God uses human solidarity to save us. Christ saves us through sharing flesh and blood, and the destiny of men. In the same way, we are saved if we help in the liberation of the world, if we accept our dependence and solidarity with others courageously. To work side by side with others, to suffer and rejoice with them is a way of saving them. We would like, at times, to escape our human condition and be more independent: it seems to us that we would be better able to serve God, yet, this dependence in the details of daily life is the means which God wants so we can take the human race by the hand.

◆ The Jews knew that their ancestors, the Hebrews, had traveled through the desert under Moses' leadership, in the search of the land God had promised them.

We find the story of this march in Exodus. Through Moses, God was always inviting them to follow the path to real freedom. They, however, stopped longing for the Promised Land when they saw their nightmares disappear. Now, believers have to begin anew the search for the Promised Land, that is, the Rest that God offers. The first time, it was Moses, the servant of God, who guided his people and was responsible for his household. Now, it is the Son: they thought they would find rest in a specific place, in Palestine. But the true Rest is the intimate life of God which we reach through faith and entrance into the Christian community.

than Moses, since he who builds the house is greater than the house. ⁴As every house has a builder, God is the builder of all. ⁵It is said that Moses was found faithful as a servant of God over all his household, and as witness of a former revelation from God. ⁶Christ, came as the Son, to whom the house belongs; and we are his household, provided that we stand firm in hope and courage.

⁷Listen to what the Holy Spirit says: If only you would hear God's voice today! ⁸*Do not be stubborn, as they were in the place called Rebellion,* ⁹*when your fathers challenged me in the desert, although they had seen my deeds* ¹⁰*for forty years. That is why I was angry with those people and said: Their hearts are always going astray and they do not understand my ways.* ¹¹*I was angry and made a solemn promise: They will never enter my rest.*

¹²So, brothers, be careful lest some of you come to have an evil and unbelieving heart that falls away from the living God. ¹³Encourage one another, day by day, as long as it is called today. Let no one become hardened in the deceitful way of sin. ¹⁴We are associated with Christ provided we hold steadfastly to our initial hope until the end.

¹⁵Scripture says: If you hear God's voice, do not be stubborn as they were in the place called Rebellion. ¹⁶Who are those who having heard still rebelled? They were all those who came out of Egypt with Moses. ¹⁷With whom was God angry for forty years? With those who sinned and whose bodies fell in the desert. ¹⁸To whom did God swear that they would not enter into his rest? To those who had disobeyed. ¹⁹We see then that unbelief prevented them from reaching their rest.

4 ¹Therefore let us fear while we are invited to enter the rest of God, lest any of you be left behind. ²We have been invited like them. But the message they heard did not benefit them because they did not hold to this belief. ³We are now to enter this rest because we believed, as it was said: I was angry and made a solemn promise: they will never enter my rest – that is the rest of God after he created the world. ⁴In another part it was said about the seventh day: And God rested on the seventh day from all his works. ⁵But now it is said: They will not enter my rest. ⁶We must conclude that some will enter the rest of God and those who first received the good news did not, because of their unbelief. ⁷Yet God again assigns a day when he says: today, and declares through David many years later: If you hear God's voice today, do not be stubborn.

Several times this letter will recall the warning given the Hebrew pilgrims in the desert: If only you would hear God's voice today! The road is long and the believer grows tired when difficult times come following the enthusiasm of the first days. Supported by Christ's words, we must continue to hope for that which God promised, but which is invisible to our eyes.

The creation poem spoke of God's Rest after creating the world: this meant that the progress of the universe must come to a point, which is entering into the fulness of the mystery of God. The sorrow and work of man on this earth bring him to his true end, which is "to rest" in the happiness of God.

• For the Jews, the High Priest – despite his personal defects – was a sacred person protecting the people from the punishment deserved by their sins. The people did not only need leaders to govern them, but also an advocate before God. Aaron, Moses' brother, the first priest of the Jews, had been such a man. His successors, the high Priests, were to be the same.

This idea is developed here: the High Priest is men's representative before God and he must ⁸ So it was not Joshua who let them enter the land of rest; otherwise God would have not assigned another day later on. ⁹ Then some other rest, or sabbath, is reserved for the people of God. ¹⁰ He who enters this rest of God rests from all his works as God rests from his work.

¹¹ Let us strive, then, to enter the rest and not to share the misfortune of those who disobeyed. ¹² For the word of God is living and effective, sharper than any two-edged sword. It pierces to the division of soul and spirit, of joints and marrow, and judges the intentions and thoughts of the heart. ¹³ All creation is transparent to Him; everything is uncovered and laid bare to the eyes of Him to whom we render account.

Christ is our high priest ο ¹⁴ We have a great High Priest, Jesus, the Son of God, who has entered Heaven. Let us, then, hold fast to the faith we profess. ¹⁵ Our high priest is not indifferent to our weaknesses, for he was tempted in every way just as we are, yet without sinning. ¹⁶ Let us, then, approach with confidence God, the giver of grace; we will obtain mercy and through his favor, help in due time.

pointed to be their representative before God. It falls to him to offer gifts and sacrifices for sin. ² He is able to understand the ignorant and erring for he himself is subject to weakness. ³ This is why he is bound to offer sacrifices for his sins as well as for the sins of the people. ⁴ Besides, one does not take upon himself this dignity, but he has to be called by God, as Aaron was.

⁵ Nor did Christ become High Priest in taking upon himself this dignity, but it was given to him by the One who says: You are my son, I have begotten you today. ⁶ And in another place: You are a priest forever in the priestly order of Melchisedek.

⁷ Christ, in the days of his mortal life offered his sacrifice with tears and cries. He prayed to him who could save him from death, and he was heard because of his humble submission. ⁸ Although he was Son, he learned through suffering what obedience was, ⁹ and once made perfect, he became the source of eternal salvation to those who obey him. ¹⁰ This is how God proclaimed him Priest in the order of Melchisedek.

You should be teachers be weak as they are but accepted by God. Christ is just that and perfectly so. Forgetting that Jesus is a man among men is as serious for the faith as forgetting that he is the Son of God.

It is helpful to look at the role of Christ, the High Priest, at the time the Church is reminding us that all the faithful are associated with the priestly role of Christ. We must represent humanity before God; we are consecrated to God for that purpose.

When we celebrate the Eucharist, along with the offering of our own lives, we present to God all the work and life of the world. In the Eucharist we thank God in the name of everyone. In daily life, we must be the instruments of the grace of God, by being people who promote truth, encourage love and establish peaceful relationships.

He offered his sacrifice with tears and cries (v 7). In the Bible, these words are used to express the insistent prayer of the oppressed sons of God: they cry to God in such a loud voice that he listens to them. Thus, the night before his death, Jesus identified with men and women who suffer and do not want to die.

+ You should be teachers. There are different stages in the development of faith. We cannot begin again to take our first steps. To be in ing.¹² You should be teachers by this time, but in fact you need to be taught again the basic elements of God's teaching. You need milk, not solid food.¹³ Those fed with milk are still infants: this refers to those who have not been tested in the way of righteousness.¹⁴ Solid food is for the adults who have trained themselves to distinguish good from evil.

6 ¹Therefore let us leave the elementary teaching about Christ and move forward to a more advanced knowledge without laying again the foundation, that is: turning away from dead works, faith in God,² the teaching about baptisms and laying on of the hands, the resurrection of the dead and the definitive judgment.³ This is what we shall do, God permitting.

⁴In any case, it would be impossible to renew again through penance those who have once been enlightened, and have tasted the heavenly gift and received the Holy Spirit,⁵ tasted the beauty of the word of God and the wonders of the supernatural world.⁶ If in spite of this they have ceased to believe and have fallen away, it is impossible to move them a second time to repentance when they are crucifying, on their own account, the Son of God, and spurning him publicly.⁷ Soil that drinks the rain falling continually on it and produces profitable grass for those who till it, receives the blessings of God,⁸ but the soil producing thorns and bushes is bad soil and in danger of being cursed. In the end it will be burned.

Remain him in our hope

⁹Yet even though we speak like this, we are more optimistic, dear friends, regarding you and your salvation.¹⁰ God is not unjust and will not forget everything you did for love of his name; you have helped and still help the believers.¹¹ We desire each of you to have, until the end, the same zeal to reach what you have hoped for.¹² Do not grow careless but imitate those who, by their faith and determination, inherit the promise.

¹³Remember God's promise to Abraham. God wanted to confirm it with an oath and, as no one is higher than God,¹⁴ he swore by himself: I shall bless you and give you many descendants.¹⁵ By just patiently waiting, Abraham obtained the promise.

the Church for years, without achieving a more enlightened faith and a richer experience, is to grow old and to become incapable of progress.

This letter tells us briefly what were the basic points of Christian teaching (6:1-3).

Teaching about baptism, that is, explanation of the various ways which were presented to men of good will in search of a religion. Some Jewish groups practised a weekly baptism; there was John's baptism, and also, Christian baptism. There, the value of Christian baptism was taught.

The laying on of hands is the ancient name for confirmation: the sacrament communicating the gifts of the Holy Spirit.

In these basic points the seriousness of human life stands out: there are only two opposed roads which lead to judgment. If one does not decide for the road leading to Christ, one loses one's life.

Those who were enlightened (v 4). In the early Church, baptism was often called, enlightenment. Not only because people had been instructed in the true faith, but because, very often, the Lord grants a very tangible experience of his presence to the person entering the Church after an authentic conversion. It is the same experience of God which the people who take part in spiritual exercises with a very sincere dedication, often have.

Such an experience is explained more extensively in 12:18-24.

Those who have tasted the wonders of the supernatural world (v 5). Let us remember that up until a few centuries back, everyone believed that the earth was the center of the universe. For them, heaven was above the earth, like a vault, and beyond this vault were the high heavens also called the heavenly world. They thought that God was dwelling ¹⁶Men are used to swearing by someone higher than themselves and their oath affirms everything that could be denied. ¹⁷So God committed himself with an oath in order to convince those who were to wait for his promise that he would never change his mind. ¹⁸Thus we have two certainties in which it is impossible that God be proved false: promise and oath. That is enough to encourage us strongly when we leave everything to hold to the hope set before us. ¹⁹This hope is like a spiritual anchor, secure and firm, thrust beyond the curtain of the Temple, into the sanctuary itself, ²⁰where Jesus has entered ahead of us – Jesus, High Priest for ever in the order of Melchisedek.

Melchisedek a figure of Christ

7 ¹Scripture says that Melchisedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God, came out to meet Abraham who returned from defeating the kings. He blessed Abraham and Abraham gave him a tenth of everything.

²Let us note that the name of Melchisedek means King of Justice, and that king of Salem means king of Peace. ³There is no mention of father, mother or genealogy; nothing is said about the beginning or the end of his life. In this he is the figure of the Son of God, the priest who remains forever.

⁴See then how great Melchisedek was. Even Abraham gave him a tenth of the spoils!

⁵When the descendants of Levi are consecrated priests, they are commanded to collect tithes from their countrymen, that is from their brothers, although they, too, are descendants of Abraham. ⁶Here, however, Melchisedek, who does not belong to the family of the Levites, is given tithes from Abraham. Still more, he blesses him, the man of God's promise. ⁷There is no doubt that he who blesses is higher than the one who is blessed.

⁸In the first case we see mortal men receiving tithes; here instead, Melchisedek is mentioned as the living.

⁹When Abraham pays the tenth, it is, so to speak, the Levites, receivers of the tithes, who pay the tithe, ¹⁰because, in a way, Levi was still in the body of Abraham, his ancestor, when Melchisedek met him.

¹¹The Law of the chosen people was founded upon the Levitical priesthood, but with it they could not attain what is perfect and definitive. If that were possible, why would there be a need of another priest after the order of Melchisedek instead of Aaron's? ¹²If there is a change in the priesthood, the Law also has to be changed. ¹³Jesus to whom all this has reference, was from a tribe that never served at the altar. ¹⁴All know that he belonged to the tribe there with those who have a share in his glory.

Thus, heavenly things were also supernatural things as we say now, or divine. For this reason, in this letter we are saying supernatural wherever we could also write: heavenly (3:1; 8:5; 9:23; 11:16), because the author is referring to divine things which are already experienced on earth.

An anchor which is thrust beyond the curtain (v 19). In the Temple of Jerusalem, only the High priest entered the Holy of Holies, separated from the adjoining room by a veil. This is the image of heaven, the authentic Holy of Holies, where Jesus alone entered. We remain behind, but our hope is already in heaven: this is not human illusion, but a longing which comes to us from God himself who is incapable of deceiving us. We will surely arrive there where we have placed our hope.

■What was said about Melchizedek, a figure of Christ, continues here (see Gen 14:18 and Psalm 110:4). Let us not forget that this letter is addressed especially to Jewish priests, descendants of Aaron, who were priests from generation to generation. And so, it was a question of demonstrating to them that this Jewish worship had ceased to be useful and that Scripture itself had announced this change.

We can admire the way this Melchizedek event, which occupies such a minor place in the Bible, is probed in depth to prove with irrefutable logic that Christ had to change the whole religion of Israel. We said in the introduction that this letter may have been written by Apollos, a prophet of the early Church. His gifts as a prophet are obvious here.

The Old Testament was the religious book of everyone in the early Church. Yet, this book ap-of Judah, that is not mentioned by Moses when he speaks of the priesthood.

¹⁵ All this, however, becomes clear if this priest after the likeness of Melchisedek ¹⁶ has in fact received his mission, not on the basis of any human law, but by the power of an immortal life. ¹⁷ Because Scripture says: You are priest forever in the priestly order of Melchisedek. ¹⁸ With this the former disposition is removed as insufficient and useless ¹⁹ (for the law did not bring anything to perfection). At the same time a better hope is given to us: that of drawing near to God.

²⁰ This change is confirmed by God's oath. When the others became priests, God did not compromise himself with an oath ²¹ but Jesus is confirmed with an oath, as it is said: The Lord has sworn and will not change his mind: you are priest forever. ²² Therefore, Jesus is our assurance of a better covenant.

²³ The former priests were many since, as mortal men, they could not remain in office. ²⁴ But Jesus remains forever and the priesthood shall not be taken from him. ²⁵ Consequently he is able to save for all time those who approach God through him. He always lives to intercede on their behalf.

²⁶ It was fitting that our High Priest be holy, undefiled, set apart from sinners and exalted above the heavens; ²⁷ a priest who does not first need to offer sacrifice for himself before offering for the sins of the people, as high priests do. He offered himself in sacrifice once and for all. ²⁸ And, whereas the Law elected weak men as high priests, now, after the Law the word of God with an oath, appointed the Son, made perfect forever.

A new sanctuary and a new covenant

◆ 8 ¹ The main point of what we are saying is that we have a high priest. He is seated at the right hand of the divine majesty in Heaven, ² where he serves as minister of the true temple and sanctuary, set up not by men but by the Lord.

³ A high priest is appointed to offer to God gifts and sacrifices, and Jesus also has to offer some sacrifice. ⁴ Had he remained on earth, he would not be a priest, since others offer the gifts according to the Law. ⁵ In fact, the ritual celebrated by those priests is only an imitation and shadow of the supernatural ritual. We know the word of God to Moses with regard to the construction of the holy tent. He said: You are to make everything according to the pattern shown to you on the mountain.

⁶ Now, however, Jesus enjoys a much higher ministry for being the mediator of a better covenant, founded on better promises. ⁷ If all had been perfect in the first covenant, there would have been no need for another one. ⁸ Yet God is seeing defects when he says:

The days are coming – it is the word of the Lord – when I will draw up a new covenant with the people of Israel and with the people of Judah.

⁹ It will not be like the covenant that I made with their fathers on the day I took them by the hand and led them out of Egypt. They did not keep my covenant, and so I myself have forsaken them, says the Lord.

¹⁰ But this is the covenant that I will parently did not mention Jesus and many Jews even thought, in good faith, that Christ was destroying the teaching of the Bible. The task of these Christian prophets was to demonstrate how the Bible was leading to Christ, and to refute the Jews' arguments with it: they provided the Church with a Christian understanding of the Old Testament. When Christians read the Old Testament now, they see there their own Christian history, while Jews view it quite differently as the "book of the Jews". To write these pages revealing the fuller meaning of the Old Testament, it was not enough to be able to understand the Scriptures, one needed to have the particular gift of prophecy.

◆ All those sacrifices to placate God's wrath come from the idea they had then of a violent God who punishes, but cannot heal the heart.

Jesus enjoys a much higher ministry characteristic of people who know they are at peace with God, and today's prophets show us through what roads we must bring peace to the world. Even though some accuse us of being involved in politics when we show the demands of justice and peace, we must insist that such is our mission. Jesus did not die to defend religious observances, but rather to show that they were not what really mattered. His willing sacrifice sheds a light on everything we do to curb violence, injustice and alienation.

But this superior worship also involves an ever clearer loving relationship with God: a love make with the people of Israel in the days to come: I will put my laws into their minds and write them in their hearts. I will be their God and they will be my people.

¹¹None of them will have to teach his fellow countryman or to tell his brother: Know the Lord, for they will know me from the least to the greatest. ¹²I will forgive their sins and no longer remember their wrongs.

¹³Here we are being told of a new covenant; which means that the first one had become obsolete, and what is obsolete and aging is soon to disappear.

The temple in Jerusalem

9 ¹The first covenant had rites and prescriptions. There was also a sanctuary – an earthly one. ²A first room had the lampstand, the table and the bread of the presence. This room is called the Holy Place. ³Behind the second curtain, there is a second sanctuary called the Most Holy Place, ⁴with the gold altar for the burning of incense, and the ark of the Covenant, fully covered with gold. The ark contained a golden jar holding the manna, Aaron's rod that had sprouted leaves and the two slabs of the covenant. ⁵Above the ark the two cherubim of glory overshadowed the Seat of Mercy. But we cannot here describe it in detail.

⁶With everything arranged as described, the priests continually enter the first room to fulfil their ministry; ⁷but the High Priest enters only once a year the second one, and not without bringing the blood which he will offer for himself and for the sins of the people. ⁸By this the Holy Spirit teaches us that the way into the inner sanctuary is not opened as long as the first room still stands. ⁹Here is a teaching by means of figures for the present age: the gifts and sacrifices presented to God cannot bring the people offering them to interior perfection. ¹⁰For these foods, drinks and different kinds of cleansing by water are only human regulations to be performed until the time of renewal.

Jesus entered with his own blood

¹¹But now Christ has appeared as the high priest with regard to the good things of these new times. He passed through a sanctuary more noble and perfect, not made by man, that is, not created. ¹²He did not take with himself the blood of goats and bulls but his own blood, when he entered once and for all into this sanctuary after obtaining definitive redemption. ¹³If the sprinkling of people defiled by sin with the blood of goats and bulls or with the ashes of a heifer provides them with exterior cleanness and holiness, ¹⁴how much more will it be coming from him and returning to him is at the root of all our actions.

o After establishing that Jesus was replacing the Jewish priests, we have a long comparison between their kind of worship and the worship which Christ celebrates.

In the first Covenant, or the Old Testament, the Jews had a temple with rituals and sacrifices which were a way to obtain the forgiveness of sins, every day. A New Covenant (or New Testament), announced by Jeremiah, begins with Jesus.

The author of this letter develops a comparison between the death of Christ and the old sacrifices. This, however, does not mean that Jesus' Passion was a sacrifice like the old ones, to placate God's wrath. There is an enormous difference between those sacrifices required by the Law at specific times and the death of Jesus. His death was his final witness and the way for him to sow in men what they did not want to receive.

Knowing who the author of this letter was and to whom it was addressed, we understand that he relates the blood of Jesus and his death to that of the victims which were offered in the

with the blood of Christ? He, moved by the eternal Spirit, offered himself as an unblemished victim to God and his blood cleanses us from dead works, so that we may serve the living God.

¹⁵ So Christ is the mediator of a new covenant or testament. His death made atonement for the sins committed under the old testament, and the promise is handed over to all who are called to the everlasting inheritance.

¹⁶ With every testament it is necessary to wait until its author has died. ¹⁷ For a testament infers death and has no value while the maker of it is still alive.

¹⁸ That is why the first covenant was not ratified without blood.

²³ It was necessary that mere copies of supernatural realities be purified, but now these realities need better sacrifices. ²⁴ Christ did not enter some man-made sanctuary, a copy of the true one, but heaven itself. He is now in the presence of God on our behalf. ²⁵ Unlike the High Priest who enters the Sanctuary year after year bringing blood which is not his own, ²⁶ he sacrificed himself once – not repeatedly. Otherwise he would have suffered many times from the creation of the world. But no; he manifested himself only now at the end of the ages, to take away sin by sacrifice, ²⁷ and, as men die only once and afterwards are judged, ²⁸ in the same way Christ sacrificed himself once to take away the sins of the multitude. There will be no further question of sin when he comes again to save those waiting for him.

The old covenant prefigures the new

♦ 10 ¹ The religion of the Law is only a shadow of the good things to come; it has the patterns and not the realities. So, year after year the same sacrifices are offered without bringing the worshippers to what is the end. ² If they had been cleansed once and for all, they would no longer have felt guilt and would have

Temple, since, for them these things were very important. But, today, we have the right to relate the blood and the death of Christ to the death of all the murdered innocent, as Jesus himself gave us to understand (Mt 23:35): their blood is sacred too (Rev 6:9).

The author remarks that Jesus entered with his own blood while men always sacrifice others. He passed through a more perfect sanctuary (11), that is, it was not only a human action but one inspired by God (14) and through it, Jesus came to share the Glory of the Father once more (Jn 17:5).

♦ If, once and for all, the worshippers had been cleansed (10:2). The author states that, if there were many sacrifices for forgiveness, this shows that they cannot free from sin. Then, since we often need the forgiveness of our sins in confession, for example, it is fitting to ask: is this not the proof that Christ's sacrifice does not free us completely?

This can be answered in different ways:

On one hand, even though we receive the sacrament of penance quite often, we are always the beneficiaries of the same sacrifice of Christ.

But, above all, we must insist that Christians are free from sin, namely, of being slaves to sin. John says (1 Jn 3:6) that he who abides in Christ does not sin, nor can sin, referring to the sin leading to death (1 Jn 5:17), because there are also sins that we commit and which do not bring stopped offering the same sacrifices.³ But no, year after year their sacrifices witness to their sins⁴ and never will the blood of bulls and goats take away these sins.

⁵This is why, on entering the world Christ says: *You did not desire sacrifice and offering;*⁶ *you were not pleased with burnt offerings and sin offerings.*⁷ Then I said: "Here I am. It was written of me in the scroll. I will do your will, O God".

⁸First he says: Sacrifice, offering, burnt offerings and sin offerings you did not desire nor were you pleased with them – although they were required by the Law. ⁹Then he says: Here I am to do your will.

This is enough to nullify the old testament and establish the new.¹⁰ Now, by this will of God, we are sanctified at once by the sacrifice of the body of Christ Jesus.¹¹ So, whereas every priest stands daily by the altar offering repeatedly the same sacrifices that can never take away sins,¹² Christ has offered for all times a single sacrifice for sins and has taken his seat at the right hand of God,¹³ waiting until God puts his enemies as a footstool under his feet.¹⁴ By a single sacrifice he has brought those who are sanctified to what is perfect and definitive.

¹⁵This also was testified by the Holy Spirit. For after having declared: ¹⁶*This is the covenant that I will make with them in the days to come – says the Lord – I will put my laws in their hearts and write them on their minds.*¹⁷ He says: *Their sins and evil deeds I will remember no more.*¹⁸ So, if sins are forgiven, there is no longer need of any sacrifice for sin.

Be confident in God

+ ¹⁹So, my brothers, we are assured of entering the sanctuary by the blood of Jesus²⁰ who opened for us this new and living way passing through the curtain, that is his body.²¹ Because we have a high priest in charge of the House of God,²² let us approach with a sincere heart, with full faith, interiorly cleansed from a bad conscience and our bodies washed with pure water.

²³Let us hold fast to our hope without wavering, because he who promised is faithful.²⁴ Let us consider how we may spur one another to love and good works.²⁵ Do not abandon the assemblies as some of you do, but encourage one another, and all the more since the Day is drawing near.

²⁶If we sin willfully after receiving knowledge of the truth, there is no longer sacrifice for sin,²⁷ but only the us to death.

5. Ps 40, 6

It is only the sins which produce a complete break with Christ, in denying one of the great commitments of our lives, which can bring us back to the former situation. Those who often come to the sacrament of penance would be wrong to think they lose God's friendship from one confession to the next: we are and we remain in grace.

+ We are assured of entering, let us approach. To encourage those who doubt, it is necessary to awaken their confidence in God, the Father.

Do not abandon the assemblies (v 25). To abandon the Sunday celebration, or the assembly of the community to which we belong, is a serious fault. The Christian community, which is not a group of angels, comes to pieces when its members only appear once in a while. And we, not being angels, have trouble remaining united with Christ if we do not take part in a community. When we lose contact with our brothers in the faith, we run the risk of losing the meaning of our mission. No solidarity with our neighborhood or work companions will remind us that, in their midst, we are the witnesses of something which they do not know.

A little longer (37). This is taken from Habakkuk 2:3 referring to the judgment of God which is approaching. The author of the letter may have wanted to allude to the crisis which, very soon, was going to destroy the Jewish nation.

fearful prospect of fire which devours the rebellious. ²⁸ For whoever violated the law of Moses there is no mercy: he is put to death by the testimony of two or three persons. ²⁹ What, then, do you think it will be for the person who has despised the Son of God? How severely shall he be punished for having defiled the blood of the covenant that sanctified him and for having insulted the Spirit given to him? ³⁰ For we know the One who says: Revenge is mine, I will repay. And also: The Lord will judge his people. ³¹ What a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

³² Remember the first days when you were enlightened. You had to undergo a hard struggle in the face of suffering. ³³ Publicly you were exposed to humiliations and trials, and had to share the sufferings of others who were similarly treated. ³⁴ You showed solidarity with those in prison; you were dispossessed of your goods and accepted it gladly for you knew you were acquiring a much better and more durable possession. ³⁵ Do not now throw away your confidence which will be handsomely rewarded. ³⁶ Be patient in doing the will of God, and the promise will be yours: A little, a little longer – says Scripture – and he who is coming will come; he will not delay. ³⁸ My righteous one will live if he believes; but if he distrusts, I will no longer look kindly on him.

³⁹ We are not of those who withdraw and perish, but of those who believe and win personal salvation.

Remembering the heroes of faith

11 ¹ Faith is the way of holding on to what we hope for, being certain of what we cannot see. ² Because of their faith our ancestors were approved.

³ By faith we understand that the stages of the world were disposed by God's word, and what is visible came from what cannot be seen.

⁴ Because of Abel's faith his offering was more acceptable than that of his brother Cain, which meant he was upright, and God himself approved his offering. Because of this faith he cried to God, as said in Scripture, even after he died.

⁵ By faith Enoch was taken to Heaven, instead of experiencing death: he could not be found because God had taken him. In fact, it is said that before being taken up he had pleased God. ⁶ Yet without faith it is impossible to please him: no one draws near to God without first believing that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him earnestly.

⁸ By faith Abraham, called by God, obeyed when told to set out for a country that would be given to him as an inheritance, and he set out without knowing where he was going. ⁹ By faith he lived as a stranger in that promised land. There he lived in ■ Faith is a way of holding on to what we hope for, being certain of what we cannot see. The examples chosen in this page and the lessons drawn from each of them, are especially addressed to persecuted believers who had to give up their quiet lives in order to be faithful to Christ.

Christian faith is not only in our convictions. It always leads to a way of life according to faith values, in the midst of hardships and distress. More important than to know the definition of faith and hope, is to act and take decisions inspired in faith. That is why St. Paul introduces here so many Biblical exam-tents, as did Isaac and Jacob, beneficiaries of the same promise.¹⁰ Indeed, he looked forward to that city of solid foundation of which God is the architect and builder.

¹¹ By faith Sarah herself received power to be a mother, in spite of her advanced age; since she believed that he who had made the promise would be faithful.¹² Therefore, from an almost impotent man were born descendants as numerous as the stars of heavens, as many as the grains of sand on the seashore.

¹³ Death found all these people strong in their faith. They had not received what was promised, but they had looked ahead and had rejoiced in it from afar, saying that they were foreigners and travellers on earth.¹⁴ Those who speak in this way prove that they are looking for their own country.¹⁵ For if they had longed for the land they had left, it would have been easy for them to return.¹⁶ but no, they aspired to a better city, that is, a supernatural one; so God, who prepared the city for them is not ashamed of being called their God.

¹⁷ By faith Abraham went to offer Isaac when God tested him. And so he who had received the promise of God offered his only son¹⁸ although God had told him: Isaac's descendants will *bear your name.*¹⁹ Abraham reasoned that God is capable even of raising the dead, and he received back his son, which has a figurative meaning.

²⁰ By faith also Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau, determining their future.

²¹ By faith Jacob, before he died, blessed both children of Joseph, and worshipped as he leaned on his staff.

²² By faith Joseph, when about to die, warned the children of Israel of their exodus and gave orders about his remains.

²³ By faith the parents of the newly born Moses hid him for three months, for they saw the baby was very beautiful and they did not fear the order of Pharaoh.²⁴ By faith Moses, already an adult, refused to be called son of Pharaoh's daughter.²⁵ He preferred to share ill treatment with the people of God, rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin.²⁶ Moses considered humiliation for the sake of Christ greater riches than the wealth of Egypt, and he looked ahead for his reward.²⁷ By faith he left Egypt without fearing the king's anger, and he persevered as if he could see another invisible wrath.

²⁸ By faith Moses had the Passover celebrated, sprinkling the doors with blood so that the Destroyer would not kill the firstborn sons.²⁹ By faith they crossed the Red Sea, as if on dry land, ples of men and women who risked everything for the sake of their faith. We do not understand Abraham's extreme obedience and trust in God 'against all hopes', without faith. We do not understand Moses giving up a comfortable future, and taking up an impossible task as his people's leader, unless his faith were so strong as to live in the present "as if seeing the invisible".

He persevered as if he could see another invisible wrath (27). Faith inspires us to act in the present, but with a view to what is not seen yet. In this paragraph we are dealing with leaders, courageous, strong men. By seeking the liberation or promotion of their group, or more human life-situations, enabling people to live with dignity, they are looking for the best homeland, which is never attained in this life.

Today, we can say the same of many people who, perhaps, are not believers nor take part in the Church, but people who are truly on the way to the city of God when they sacrifice themselves to prepare the future of the world, as if they saw what is invisible: they are the Hebrews of the modern world and God is not ashamed of being called their God (16).

These heroes of faith all work with the same goal. Each one of them dies without seeing what God promised, in seeming failure, but their successors, in looking back, verify that people of faith built real history.

while the Egyptians who tried to cross it were swallowed by the waters and drowned.

³⁰ By faith the walls of Jericho crumbled and fell, after Israel had marched round them for seven days; ³¹ by faith, also, the prostitute, Rahab, escaped death, for having welcomed the spies.

³² Do I need to say more? There is not enough time to speak of Gideon, Barak, Samson, Jephthah, David, as well as Samuel and the prophets.

³³ Through faith they fought and conquered nations, established justice, saw the fulfilment of God's promises, shut the mouth of lions, ³⁴ quenched raging fire, escaped the sword, were healed of their sicknesses, were valiant in battle, repulsed foreign invaders.

³⁵ Some women recovered their dead by resurrection but there were others – persecuted and tortured believers, who, for the sake of a better resurrection, refused to do what would have saved them. ³⁶ Others suffered chains and prison. ³⁷ They were stoned, sawn in two, killed by the sword. They fled from place to place with no other clothing than the skins of sheep and goats, lacking everything, afflicted, ill-treated. ³⁸ These men of whom the world was not worthy had to wander through wildernesses and mountains, and take refuge in the dens of the land.

³⁹ However, although all of them were praised because of their faith, they did not enjoy the promise ⁴⁰ because God was preparing something much better, and did not want them to reach this end ahead of us.

Accept the correction of the Lord

12 ¹ What a cloud of innumerable witnesses surround us! So let us be rid of every encumbrance and especially of sin, to persevere in running the race marked out before us.

² Let us look to Jesus the founder of our faith and who will bring it to completion. For the sake of the joy reserved for him, he endured the cross, scorning its shame, and then sat at the right of the throne of God. ³ Think of Jesus who suffered so many contradictions from evil people, and you will not be discouraged or grow weary. ⁴ Have you already shed your blood in the struggle against sin?

⁵ Do not forget the comforting words that Wisdom addresses to you as children: My son, pay attention when the Lord corrects you and do not be discouraged when he punishes you. For the Lord corrects those he loves and chastises everyone he accepts as a son.

⁷ What you endure is in order to correct you. God treats you like sons and what son is not corrected by his father? ⁸ If you were without correction, (as is fitting for sons), you would not be sons but bastards. ⁹ Besides, when our parents according to the flesh corrected us, we respected them. How much more should we be subject

♦ Three arguments to remain steadfast under testing:

- Think about Jesus and his sufferings.
- Think about "the communion of saints", that is to say, the mysterious bonds uniting all believers.
- Think of the trial as a testing coming from the Father.

After such a long presentation of Christ, priest and victim, a conclusion is evident for those of us who are part of Christ: we want to see God, but in order to find him, we must die, letting go of this life without sadness.

The Father of spirits (v 9). In Numbers 16:22, Moses begs the God of the spirits of all mankind: it is a way of saying that since God to the Father of the spirits to have life?

¹⁰ Our parents corrected us as they saw fit, with a view to this very short life; but God corrects us for our own good that we may share his holiness.

¹¹ All correction is painful rather than pleasant; later it brings the fruit of peace, that is, holiness to those who have been trained by it.

¹² Lift up, then, your drooping hands, and strengthen your trembling knees; ¹³ make level the ways for your feet, so that the lame may not be disabled, but healed.

Strive to be holy

o ¹⁴ Strive for peace with all men and strive to be holy, for without holiness no one will see the Lord.

¹⁵ See that no one falls from the grace of God, lest a bitter plant springs up and its poison corrupts many among you. ¹⁶ Let no one be immoral or irreligious like Esau, who sold his birthright for a single meal. ¹⁷ You know that later, when he wished to get the blessing, he was rejected although he pleaded with tears.

¹⁸ You have come to the mountain which is not of this earth. There was no blazing fire, darkness and gloom and storms... ¹⁹ blasts of trumpets or such a voice that the people pleaded that no further word be spoken. ²⁰ Because of this they respected the order not to approach: Every man or beast reaching the mountain shall be stoned. ²¹ The sight was so terrifying that Moses said: I tremble with fear.

²² But you came near to Mount Zion, to the city of the living God, to the heavenly Jerusalem with its innumerable angels. You have come to the solemn feast, ²³ the assembly of the firstborn of God, whose names are written in Heaven. There is God, Judge of all, with the spirits of the upright brought to perfection. ²⁴ There is Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant, with the sprinkled blood that cries out more effectively than Abel's.

²⁵ Be careful not to reject God when he speaks. If those who did not heed the prophet's warnings were not spared on earth, how much more shall we be punished if we do not heed the One warning us from Heaven? ²⁶ His voice then shook the earth, but now he says: In this last time I will shake not only the earth but also the heavens.

²⁷ The words in this last time indicate the removal of everything that can be shaken, that is created things, and only those that cannot be shaken will remain. ²⁸ Such is the kingdom that we receive. Let us then be grateful and offer to God a worship pleasing to him with reverence and awe. ²⁹ Our God is indeed a consuming fire.

Words of encouragement

+13 ¹ Preserve brotherly love. ² Do not neglect to offer hospitality; you know that some people knows the inner core of all people, he knows their misery and he cannot punish them too severely.

o You came near Mount Zion (22). This mountain on which Jerusalem is built, is the figure of the heavenly city for the Jews. This paragraph expresses with powerful images all that an adult discovers when he converts to Christ and enters the Church. With baptism he enters into the family of God, the saints and the angels. He has access to the mysterious center where the destiny of the world is decided, and he finds Jesus himself. In conversion, we can experience this and almost touch these truths, but we must not forget them, later, when tiredness and trials come.

+ Faith is great, but it is lived in the little things of daily life. The persecuted people to whom this have entertained angels without knowing it. ³Remember prisoners as if you were with them in chains, and the same for those who are suffering. Remember that you also have a body.

⁴Marriage must be respected by all and husband and wife faithful to each other. God will punish the immoral and the adulterous.

⁵Do not depend on money. Be content with having enough for today for God has said: I will never forsake you or abandon you, ⁶and we shall confidently answer: The Lord is my helper, I will not fear; what can man do to me? ⁷Remember your leaders who taught you the word of God. Consider their end and imitate their faith. ⁸Christ Jesus is the same today as yesterday and forever.

⁹Do not be led astray by all kinds of strange teachings. Your heart will be strengthened by the grace of God rather than by foods of no use to anyone. ¹⁰We have an altar from which those still serving in the Temple cannot eat.

¹¹After the High Priest has offered the blood in the Sanctuary for the sins of the people, the carcasses of the animals are burnt outside the camp. ¹²For this same reason Jesus, to purify the people with his own blood, suffered his Passion outside the holy city. ¹³Let us, therefore, go to him outside the sacred area, sharing his shame. ¹⁴For we have here no definitive city and we are looking for the one to come.

¹⁵Let us, then, continually offer through Jesus a sacrifice of praise to God, that is the fruit of lips celebrating his name. ¹⁶Do not neglect good works and common life, for these are sacrifices pleasing to God. ¹⁷Obeys your leaders and submit to them, for they are concerned for your souls and are accountable for them. Let this be a joy for them rather than a burden, which would be of no advantage for you.

¹⁸Pray for us, for we believe our intentions are pure and that we only want to act honourably in all things. ¹⁹Now I urge you all the more to pray for me that I may be given back to you the sooner.

²¹He will train you in every good work, that you may do his will, for it is he who works in us what pleases him, through Jesus Christ, to whom all glory be for ever and ever. Amen!

²²Brothers, I beg you to take these words of encouragement. For my part, I have written to you too briefly. ²³Know that our brother Timothy has been released. If he comes soon I will visit you with him. ²⁴Greetings to all your leaders and to the saints. Greetings from those in Italy.

²⁵Grace be with you all.

Jesus suffered the Passion outside the holy city (v 12). The Bible required that the victims sacrificed for the forgiveness of sins be burned outside the sacred area of the Temple: that was a way to show that the sin of the people had been transferred to those victims, then thrown out to take all evil and sin away from the people. This rite was somehow already announcing what happened with Jesus who died outside the holy city of Jerusalem: he was the true victim for sin.

We can draw another lesson too: believers must leave the holy area, that is, comfortable and respected life, in order to seek the Kingdom of Justice to which little care is given. Believers oppose the present world, and "are not of this world", and they refuse to enjoy this world as if it were the final homeland.

letter of JAMES

Endure trials patiently

1 James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, sends greetings to the twelve tribes scattered among the nations.

² Consider yourselves fortunate, my brothers, when you meet with every kind of trial, ³ for you know that the testing of your faith makes you grow. ⁴ Let your steadfastness become perfect with deeds, that you yourselves may be perfect and blameless, without any defect.

⁵ If any one of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God for it, because he gives to everyone easily and unconditionally. ⁶ But he should ask with faith, not doubting, for he who doubts is like a wave driven and tossed by the wind on the sea. ⁷ Such a man should not expect anything from the Lord. ⁸ He is a divided man and his conduct will always be insecure. ⁹ Let the poor man boast, because he has been uplifted, ¹⁰ and let the rich man boast when he is humbled, because he will pass away like the flower of the field. ¹¹ The sun rises and its heat dries the grass; the flower withers and its beauty vanishes. So, too, will the rich man fade away even in the midst of his pursuits.

¹² Happy the one who patiently endures trials, because afterwards he will receive the crown of life which

INTRODUCTION

Who is this James, the "brother of the Lord?" He is barely mentioned in the Gospel (Mk 6, 3), and yet, a few years after Pentecost, he appears as the leader, we might say the bishop of the Jerusalem community. Then, when the Gospel spread, it seems he was viewed as the one responsible for all the Christian communities with a majority of Jews which were established in Palestine, Syria and Cilicia (see Acts 15, 13-29).

Of all the apostles, he was the most attached to the Jewish traditions (the extreme opposite of Paul). In speaking to the faithful in Jerusalem, he was teaching them simple and practical things, inspired from the wisdom of the Old Testament. We hear the echo of his Sunday preaching in the letter addressed to the Christians of Jewish origin living in his huge diocese.

They are called "the twelve tribes scattered among the nations," a name which was given to the Jews established outside their homeland. The letter was probably written between the years 50 and 60 after Christ.

Since the letter does not contain much doctrinal teaching, some people have looked down on it. But, it does in fact contain a very valuable and relevant moral teaching, especially in reference to justice.

the Lord promised to those who love him. ¹³Let no one say when he is tempted, "This temptation comes from God." God is never tempted and he can never tempt anyone. ¹⁴Instead, each of us is lured and enticed by his own evil desire. ¹⁵Once this desire has conceived, it gives birth to death.

+ ¹⁶Do not be deceived, dear brothers. ¹⁷Every good and perfect gift comes from above, from the Father of Light, in whom there is no change or shadow of a change. ¹⁸By his own will he gave us life through the Word of Truth, that we might be a kind of offering to him among his creatures.

¹⁹My dear brothers, be quick to hear but slow to speak and slow to anger. ²⁰for human anger does not fulfil the justice of God. ²¹So get rid of any filth and reject the prevailing evil, and welcome the Word which has been planted in you and has the power to save you.

²²Be doers of the Word and not just hearer, lest you deceive yourselves.

²³The hearer who does not become a doer is like a man who looks at himself in the mirror and then promptly forgets what he looks like. ²⁵But he who fixes his gaze on the perfect law of freedom and holds on to it, not listening and then forgetting, but acting on it, will find blessing on his deeds.

²⁶If anyone considers himself a religious person but does not restrain his tongue, he deceives himself and his religion is in vain. ²⁷In the sight of God, our Father, pure and blameless religion lies in helping the orphans and widows in their need and keeping oneself from the world's corruption.

Treat the rich and the poor equally

2 ¹My brothers, if you truly believe in our glorified Lord, Jesus Christ, you will not discriminate between persons. ²Suppose a man enters the synagogue where you are assembled and he is dressed magnificently and wears a gold ring;

o What is most impressive at the beginning of the letter is the firmness of faith. James is a man who does not hesitate and we feel very reassured by his conviction: ask God because he gives to everyone. Fortunate when you meet with every trial.

The testing of your faith. (v 3). We are not in this world to have a good time. What matters is to take advantage of the time God gives us to grow and mature as persons. The person who has not suffered knows very little. And, often-times, those who suffer do not realize that they owe the best in them to their having had to overcome a thousand difficulties.

To save the poor does not consist so much in giving them bread as to help them face their destiny, to realize themselves through their own efforts and to discover they are helpless if they do not first acknowledge their brothers and act with them.

If someone lacks wisdom (v 5). God has placed in our midst all that we need to solve our problems. And the wisdom which makes us responsible for our destiny instead of resigning ourselves comes from sin.

He should ask with faith (v 6). The one who asks without doubts knows for sure what are the obstacles which God wants to preserve us from.

Let no one say (v 13). Most people are secretly resentful toward God and they do not miss an opportunity to make him responsible for their own errors.

+ The Father of Light in whom there is no change or shadow of a change (v 17). Because we are inconstant. James invites us to look up to the Father who does not change and whose holiness and happiness are touched by nothing. What an amazing thing: in his eternity, the Father enjoys our presence, while we who live in time, do not yet know how to focus on him. We must acquire the same firmness and constancy which are in God.

He gave us life (v 18). This is similar to what is said in 1 Peter 1. It is a reminder of baptism through which we received new life. James draws this conclusion: we must keep the word of God, meditate on it to find out what it demands of us. It is not enough to have improved our lives for a while in preparation for baptism, but we must persevere on the path of goodness.

at the same time, a poor man enters dressed in rags. ³If you focus your attention on the well-dressed man and say to him, "Come and sit in the best seat," while to the poor man you say, "Stay standing or else sit down at my feet," ⁴have you not in fact, made a distinction between the two? Have you not judged, using a double standard?

⁵Look, brothers, did God not choose the poor of this world to receive the riches of faith and to inherit the kingdom which he has promised to those who love him? ⁶Yet you despise them! Is it not the rich who are against you and drag you to court? ⁷Do they not insult the holy name of Christ by which you are called?

⁸If you keep the Law of the Kingdom, according to Scripture: Love your neighbour as yourself, you do well; ⁹but, if you make distinctions between persons, you break the law and are condemned by the same law. ¹⁰If anyone keeps the whole law but fails in one aspect, he is guilty of breaking it all. ¹¹For, he who said, Do not commit adultery, also said, Do not kill. If, then, you do not commit adultery but you do commit murder, you have broken the Law. ¹²Therefore, speak and behave like people who are going to be judged by the Law of freedom. ¹³There will be justice without mercy for those who have not shown mercy, for mercy is greater than judgment.

◆ ¹⁴Brothers, what good is it to profess faith without showing works? Such faith has no power to save you. ¹⁵If a brother or sister is in need of clothes or food ¹⁶and one of you says, "May things go well for you; be warm and satisfied," without attending to their material needs, what good is that? ¹⁷So it is for faith without deeds: it is totally dead.

¹⁸Say to whoever challenges you "You have faith and I have good

9. Lev 19, 15;

■ James speaks clearly: the person who discriminates against people (2. 4) cannot be Christian. Today, it is quite common to make this distinction. The well dressed person is well received. Everywhere the poor are made to wait. If we do not attend to someone who is black, or poor, or a foreigner and on the other hand, we welcome those with a car, or wealth, etc, we are making an abominable distinction. The person who keeps making distinctions among people has not yet accepted the Gospel.

God chooses the poor to receive the riches of faith. The apostles, who believed and passed on the message which transformed the pagan Roman empire, were poor in terms of money and influences, but they were so rich in faith that they sealed their faith with their own blood. James writes for those who are poor money-wise, but rich in faith.

James says that the rich profane the name of Christ. He maybe speaking of the rich who do not believe and make fun of simple believers. He may be speaking of rich "Christians" whose lifestyle brings criticism to the name of Christ. They profane the name of Christ and bring about scorn for the church.

James invites the church to self-examination to see if the way we treat one another in the institutions of the church respects the dignity of the poor, if the pastors of the church share the meal with ordinary families or are seen rather with the authorities, if the dominating influence is that of the people with greater faith, or that of those who defend money, if the church courageously defends the rights of the poor.

A Law of freedom: Paul, John, Peter and James all agree on the point that Christians cannot be satisfied with simply obeying the commandments, or how to respect a master's will in order not to get in trouble. No: Christians must have the free and intelligent generosity of volunteers whose only law is their commitment to Christ.

◆ It is necessary to have faith to be saved, but following Christ cannot be theoretical; it must be shown in actions, in deeds. Christ himself says the same thing in Mt 7, 21: "Not everyone who says, Lord, Lord, will enter the Kingdom of heaven."

Let us look at the two examples that James takes from the Old Testament and let us compare them with Heb 11, 31, and above all with deeds; show me your faith apart from actions and I, for my part, will show you my faith in the way I act." ¹⁹Do you believe there is one God? Well enough, but do not forget that the demons also believe and tremble with fear!

²⁰You foolish man, do you have to be convinced that faith without deeds is useless? ²¹Think of our father Abraham. Was he not justified by his act of offering his son, Isaac, on the altar? ²²So you see, his faith was active along with his deeds and became perfect by what he did. ²³The word of Scripture was thus fulfilled, Abraham believed in God so he was considered a righteous man and he was called the friend of God.

²⁴So you see, a person obtains holiness by his deeds and not by faith alone. ²⁵Likewise, we read of Rahab, the prostitute, that she was acknowledged and saved because she welcomed the spies and showed them another way to leave.

²⁶So, just as the body is dead without its spirit, so faith, without deeds, is also dead.

Sins of the tongue

3 ¹Brothers, don't be all teachers! You know that, as teachers, we will be judged most strictly; ²in fact, we make mistakes, like everybody else. A person who commits no offence in speech is perfect and capable of ruling the whole self. ³We put a bit into the horse's mouth to master it and, with this, we control its whole body. ⁴The same is true of ships: however big they are and driven by strong winds, the helmsman steers them with a tiny rudder. ⁵In the same way, the tongue is a tiny part of the body but it is capable of great things.

A small flame is enough to set a huge forest on fire. ⁶The tongue is a smilar flame; it is in itself as a whole world of evil. It infects the whole being and sets fire to our world with the very fire of hell. ⁷Wild animals, birds, reptiles and sea creatures of every kind are and have been ruled by man. ⁸Nobody, however, can control the tongue; it is an untiring whip, full of deadly poison. ⁹We use it to bless God, our Father, and also to curse those made in God's likeness. ¹⁰From the same mouth come both blessing and curse.

Brothers, this should not be the case. ¹¹Can both fresh and salt water gush from the same source? ¹²Can a fig tree produce olives or a grapevine give figs? Neither the sea is able to give fresh water.

Rom 4 (Gal 3). It seems that James and Paul draw opposite teachings from the same examples. Paul says: Abraham was justified by faith and not by following the Law. James, on the other hand, says that they were saved by putting their faith into practice. Actually, in speaking of practices, Paul is thinking about the religious rites and observances of the Jews which are useless for salvation, and he says that faith is at the root of all Christian life. On the contrary, in speaking of practices, James is thinking about deeds inspired by love. And, Paul said the same when he wrote: "Faith works through love." (Gal 5, 6).

• There are too many people in our midst who believe "they know everything." True wisdom manifests itself in our behavior. What is the use of experience? The true wise person unites people. False wisdom separates and divides. James refers to practical, not theoretical wisdom. The truly wise seek justice and peace.

+ You pray wrongly. James tells us that prayer obtains for us things enabling us to respond to God's plan (see 1,5-8). But our prayers will not be heard if our love for the world takes the place of God in our hearts.

What is the friendship with the world which prevents our being heard? We explain this in more details in the commentary on John 3, 17 and 1 John 2, 15. God asks us to love all the things he created, viewing them as means of o ¹³If you consider yourself wise and learned show it by your good living and let your actions, in all humility, be an example for others. ¹⁴But if your heart, is full of bitter jealousy and ambition, do not try to show off; that would be covering up the truth: ¹⁵this kind of wisdom does not come from above but from the world and it is earthly and devilish. ¹⁶Wherever there is jealousy and ambition, you will also find discord and all that is evil. ¹⁷Instead, the wisdom which comes from above is pure and peace-loving. These persons show understanding and listen to advice; they are full of compassion and good works: they are impartial and sincere. ¹⁸Peacemakers who sow in peace reap a harvest of justice.

True Wisdom

Wicked ambitions

+ 4 What causes these fights and quarrels among you? Is it not your inner longings which make war within your own selves? ²When you long for something you cannot have, you kill for it and when you do not get what you desire, you squabble and fight. The fact is, you do not have what you want because you do not pray for it. ³You pray for something and you do not get it because you pray with the wrong motive of indulging your pleasures. ⁴You adulterers! Do you know that making friends with the world makes you enemies of God? Therefore, anyone who chooses to be the world's friend has made himself God's enemy.

⁵Surely, Scripture is not wrong when it says that our spirit tends towards excess ⁶but God's grace overcomes it. Scripture also says, God opposes the proud but he gives his favour to the humble. ⁷Give in, then, to God; resist the devil and he will flee from you. ⁸Draw close to God and he will come close to you. Clean your hands, you sinners, and purify your hearts, you doubters. ⁹Recognise your distress, be miserable and weep. Turn your laughter into tears and your joy into sadness. ¹⁰Humble yourselves before the Lord and he will raise you up.

¹¹Brothers, do not criticize one another. Anyone who speaks against a brother or condemns him, speaks against the Law and condemns the Law. If, however, you condemn the Law, you are no longer an observer of the Law but a judge over it. ¹²There is only one lawgiver and one judge: he who has the power to save or condemn. So you, who are you to judge your neighbour?

¹³Listen, now, you who speak like this, "Today or tomorrow we will go off to this city and spend a year there; we will do business and make money." ¹⁴You have no idea what tomorrow will bring. What is your reaching him, and to reject what does not serve this purpose. Loving the world is wishing for and clinging to things, without looking beyond them for God himself and the brothers that he gave us. It is adultery in the same sense as the phrase from the Gospel: "No one can serve two masters" (Mt 6, 24). Men cannot divide their love between God and the world, neither can we ask God to help us satisfy egotistical ambitions.

Criticizing others is the same as despising the law of love. We must see, and at times, say, what is wrong in an action, but God has not appointed us to judge and condemn our brothers and sisters. What a horrible sin when, in the very Church, "Christian" groups spend their time spying, scrutinizing, denouncing and condemning what other Christians say, write and do with apostolic purpose! (See Rom 14:4 and Mt 7:1).

You who are making plans. We all make many plans: to earn more, to buy things, to have a good time. What is serious matter is that we forget meanwhile to do good. We know it has to life? No more than a mist which appears for a moment and then disappears. ¹⁵Instead of this, you should say, "God willing, we will live and do this or that."¹⁶ But no! You boast of your plans: this brazen pride is wicked. ¹⁷Anyone who knows what is good and does not do it, sins.

The misfortunes of the rich

5 So, now for what concerns the rich! Cry and weep for the misfortunes which are coming upon you. ²Your riches are rotting and your clothes eaten up by the moths. ³Your silver and gold have rusted and their rust grows into a witness against you. It will consume your flesh like a fire, for having piled up riches in these the last days.

⁴You deceived the workers who harvested your fields but now their wages cry out to the heavens. The reapers' complaints have reached the ears of the Lord of hosts. ⁵You lived in luxury and pleasure in this world and felt happy while others were murdered. ⁶You have easily condemned and killed the innocent since they offered no resistance.

Look forward to the Lord's coming ⁷Be patient, then, my brothers, until the coming of the Lord. See how the sower waits for the precious fruits of the earth, looking forward patiently to the autumn and spring rains. ⁸You, also be patient and do not lose heart because the Lord's coming is near.

⁹Brothers, do not fight among yourselves and you will not be judged. See, the judge is already at the door. ¹⁰Take for yourselves, as an example of patience, the suffering of the prophets who spoke in the Lord's name. ¹¹See how those who were patient are called blessed. You have heard of the patience of Job and know how the Lord dealt with him in the end. For the Lord is merciful and shows compassion.

¹²Above all, brothers, do not swear: either by heaven or by earth, or make a habit of swearing. Let your yes be be done and we know how to do it, but what we do not know is if we will have time to accomplish. We may die without having done what mattered the most.

■ The rich will lose what they have accumulated which is corrupted by injustice. Remorse will devour them like a fire devours the culprit. Their riches will perish on the day of judgment:

- a) because of the injustice done to acquire them or in holding on to wages belonging to the workers.
- b) because of their misuse: for pleasure and luxury.
- c) because they condemn defenseless men to death.

Today, what was taking place in the poor civilization of James' time is happening again. Those who enjoy the good life owe their prosperity to the fact that two billion people live in misery. Every year, the defense of their privileges brings as a consequence the unjust death of millions of people, through hunger, repression and wars.

Who are responsible in such a situation when, in so many countries those who strive for educating and organizing their fellow farmers and workers are threatened to lose their work or even are killed, while the others stay in illiteracy and starvation?

◆ We know, through James' words, that the Church continued – and must continue today – Christ's actions of coming to the sick. Salvation is both physical and spiritual health. The Gospel shows us that the second one is the most important and God always grants it, although he does not always restore physical health.

In the Gospel, Jesus lays his hands on the sick and when he sends his missionaries, he asks them to lay their hands on the sick or to anoint them with oil (Mk 6, 13 and 16, 18). The laying of hands is like communicating to another person the power which will heal him, in the name of Christ and with his authority. As to oil, it was used in those days as a remedy, but Christ gives it the power to heal the soul and the body. The yes and your no be no, lest you become liable for judgment.

The sick

◆¹³Is anyone among you discouraged? Let him pray. Is anyone of you happy? Let him sing songs to God. If anyone is sick, let him call on the elders of the Church. They shall pray for him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. ¹⁵The prayer said in faith will save the sick man; the Lord will raise him up and if he has committed any sins, he will be forgiven.

+ ¹⁶There will be healing if you confess your sins to one another and pray for each other. The prayer of the upright man has great power, provided he perseveres. ¹⁷Elijah was a human being like ourselves and when he prayed earnestly for it not to rain, no rain fell for three and a half years. ¹⁸Then he prayed again: the sky yielded rain and the earth produced its fruit.

¹⁹Brothers, if any one of you strays far away from the truth and another person brings him back to it, ²⁰be sure of this: he who brings back a sinner from the wrong way, will save his soul from death and win forgiveness for many sins.

19. Mt 18, 15; Gal 6, 1

20. Pro 10, 12; 1 Pet 4, 8

two signs can accompany the prayer.

The elders, that is those in charge of the Christian communities, either priests or lay, must visit the sick and pray for them, asking God to heal them with faith. At the same time, they must invite the sick person to acknowledge his sins and to prepare to receive God's grace.

When the church speaks of the sacrament of the sick, it refers only to the anointing with oil done by someone who has officially received the power for this sacrament (up to now, only priests can administer this sacrament). This sacrament strongly involves the church.

But the fact that the anointing with oil is a sacrament only when given by a priest, in no way excludes leaders of the Christian communities from praying, anointing, and laying hands on the sick. When they dare do this with faith, in the name of the church, there is an increase of God's interventions for the sick-healings preparing them for conversion.

It has been a great error – in past days to reserve the anointing of the sick to the dying and to call it extreme unction. It is also a serious error to wait until the sick person is unconscious in order not to frighten him into thinking that death may be near.

See the commentary on Lk 10, 9.

+ Jesus said to Peter: "What you forgive on earth will be forgiven in heaven." (Mt 16, 19). He said the same thing to the apostles: "What you forgive on earth..." (Jn 20, 23). He said the same to the church (Mt 18, 18). It is the task of the pastors of the church to decide on the reconciliation of sinners with the community – and with God. Yet, in many cases, we have more need of the forgiveness of one or several persons whom we have offended and we must ask for it with simplicity: the forgiveness of a brother in the faith will be the forgiveness of God.

Likewise, it is good to confess our faults to those who are able to understand us. The trust of the one and the mercy of the other: nothing more is needed for God to be in the middle.

INTRODUCTION

We know almost nothing about the life of the apostle Peter from the Council of Jerusalem, in the year 49 (see Acts 15), until the time he wrote this letter, around the year 64. It is certain that he went to Rome. Being in charge of the entire church, he, like Paul, had to go to the center of the Roman world, though their motives were different.

A very ancient tradition assures that he was killed in the persecution of Nero, in 66, and that he was buried on the grounds of the Vatican hill. Investigations carried out these past years enabled us to discover a grave and bones with various inscriptions which are, almost certainly, those of the apostle, the first Rock of the church.

Thus, it was a short time before his death that he wrote this letter from Rome. Peter neither had the genius, nor the literary talent of Paul. Instead, with simple words, he addressed the Christians of the Asian province, where the first persecutions were beginning. Differently from Paul, he is not concerned with clarifying or defending the faith. He tries to encourage believers who are suffering by presenting the example of Christ to them and by explaining the consequences of baptism.

1 From Peter, apostle of Jesus Christ, to the Jews who live outside their homeland, scattered in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia, ² to those whom God the Father has called, according to his plan, and made holy by the Spirit, to obey Jesus Christ and be purified by his blood: may grace and peace increase among you.

You have been saved

³ Let us praise God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, for his great mercy. In raising Jesus Christ from the dead, he has given us new life and the hope of sharing enduring life beyond death, ⁴ sin and all fleeting things. This inheritance is kept in the heavens for you, ⁵ since God's power shall keep you faithful until salvation is revealed in the last days.

⁶ There is cause for joy, then, even though you may, for a time, have to suffer many trials. ⁷ Thus will your faith be tested, like gold in a furnace: Gold, however, passes away but faith;

4. Eph 1, 19

5. Jn 17, 11

6. Jn 16, 20

7. Mal 3, 2; 1 Cor 3, 13

In this letter, everything from 1:3 to 3:7 is inspired by the baptismal ceremony in the early church: hymns, homily on the ritual and on Christian life. For Peter, it is an excellent way to remind his readers of their Christian condition.

The end of the letter tells us that Peter wrote through Silvanus who had been a disciple of Paul. This may be at the origin of various passages where we find the same topics we have in Paul's letters.

worth so much more, will bring you in the end praise, glory and honour when Jesus Christ appears.

⁸You have not yet seen him and yet you love him; still without seeing him, you believe in him and experience a heavenly joy beyond all words, ⁹for you are reaching the goal of your faith: the salvation of your souls.

¹⁰This was the salvation which the prophets so eagerly looked when, in days past, they foretold the favour of God with regard to you. ¹¹But they could only research when the Spirit of Christ present within them pointed out the time and the circumstances of this – the sufferings of Christ and the glories which would follow.

¹²It was revealed to them that they were working not for themselves but for you. Thus, in these days, after the Holy Spirit has been sent from heaven, the Gospel's preachers have taught you these mysteries which even the angels long to see.

Be holy

+ ¹³So, then, let your spirit be ready. Be alert, with confident trust in the grace you will receive when Jesus Christ appears. ¹⁴Like obedient children, do not return to your former life given over to ignorance and passions.

¹⁵Imitate the one who called you. As he is holy, so you, too, be holy in all your conduct, ¹⁶since Scripture says: Be holy for I am holy.

¹⁷You call upon a Father who makes no distinction between persons but judges each one according to his deeds; take seriously, then, these years which you spend in a strange land. ¹⁸Remember that you were freed from the useless way of life of your fathers, not with gold and silver ¹⁹but with the precious blood of the Lamb without spot or blemish. ²⁰God, who has known Christ before the world was, revealed him to you in the last days. ²¹Through him, you have faith in God who raised him from the dead and glorified him in order that you might put all your faith and hope in God.

²²In obeying the truth, you have gained interior purification from which comes sincere love for our brothers. Love one another, then, with all your heart, ²³since you are born again, not from mortal beings, but with enduring life, through the Word of God who lives and remains forever. ²⁴It is written: All flesh is grass and its glory like the flowers of the field. The grass withers and the flower falls, but the Word of the Lord endures forever. This Word is the Gospel which has been brought to you.

o Notice the greeting, "in the name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Spirit", which is the same as Paul's greetings.

This passage could be the preaching of the leader of a Christian community, addressed to adults who have just been baptized. In those days, people were more preoccupied than they are now about their salvation after death. To those being baptized, the apostles were speaking of this inheritance of God which was reserved for them, and had been won by Christ in his resurrection: Beyond death, sin and all fleeting things (v 4).

But the newly baptized knew that their Christian faith was threatened and persecuted. To ask for baptism meant to commit oneself to Christ until death.

You have not yet seen him... (v 8). Hope, love for Christ: the three virtues (or powers) urging Christians, go together. Christ came to glory through sufferings. The Christian follows the same path and he already knows true joy in the midst of trials.

+ The logical consequences of baptism are developed. We cannot go backward; giving in to the evils of the world would mean going back to the slavery from which Christ delivered us through his blood.

22-25: Here we recognize this being born

Christ is the cornerstone

2 ¹So, give up all evil and deceit, hypocrisy, envy and all kind of gossip. ²Like newborn children, seek eagerly the unspoiled milk of the Word which will help you grow and reach salvation. ³Did you not taste the goodness of the Lord? ⁴He is the living stone rejected by men but chosen by God and precious to him. ⁵On drawing close to him, you also became living stones built into a spiritual temple, a holy community of priests offering spiritual sacrifices which please God through Jesus Christ. ⁶Scripture says: See, I lay in Zion a chosen and precious cornerstone; whoever believes in him will not be disappointed.

⁷This means honour for you who believed, but for unbelievers also the stone which the builders rejected has become the cornerstone ⁸and it is a stone to stumble over, a rock which lays men low. They stumble over it, on rejecting the Word, but the plan of God is fulfilled in this.

⁹You are a chosen race, a community of priest-kings, a consecrated nation, a people God has made his own to proclaim his wonders. For he called you from your darkness to his own wonderful light. ¹⁰At one stage you were no people, but now you are God's people, you had not received his mercy, but now you have been given mercy.

Live a blameless life

◆ ¹¹My dear brothers, while you are strangers and exiles, I urge you not to indulge in selfish passions which wage war on the soul. ¹²Live a blameless life among the pagans; so when they accuse you falsely of any wrong, they may see your good works and give glory to God on the day he comes to them.

¹³For the Lord's sake, respect all human authority: the king as chief authority; ¹⁴the governors as sent by him to punish evil-doers and encourage those who do good. ¹⁵And God wants you to do good so that you may silence those fools who ignorantly criticize you. ¹⁶Behave as free men but do not speak of freedom as a licence for vice; you are free men and God's servants. ¹⁷Reverence each person, love your brothers and sisters, anew, being born from above, which Jesus tells Nicodemus in Jn 3:9.

What follows is a call to live perfectly: not attached to the things of the present, but eager to live a useful and holy life before God, in proportion to what we have cost him.

■ Two words stand out in this paragraph: stones and priests. They speak about what the new Christians will be.

You are stones. God is the stone which stands out and on which, all those who neither saw nor took notice of him, stumble (Is 8:14). In another sense, Jesus is the stone rejected by the builders, which becomes the foundation of a new building: this is the new people of God, the Church (Is 28:16, Ps 118:22). And Christians are the stones of this Church: living stones because each one shares the life of God, and because each one has an active part to play in the Church, the body of Christ (Eph 4:12-16).

You will also be priests. To understand what this mean, we must read God's words to Moses in Exodus 19:5. God decided then to become present in the world and to transform the course of history through a people of his own which would be Israel. Well then, Peter tells us: the real people of God is not Israel, who did not acknowledge Christ, but you are God's people.

We, who are baptized, do not form one more religion: we are God's only people, an active minority and the leaven of the world.

We are priests, not in the sense that we pray a lot, but in the sense this word had for ancient people: those who can risk coming close to God. We were made responsible for the mission of preparing men and women so that salvation may mature in them: that people and nations may discover that salvation may mature in them; that people and nations may discover their common destiny, and in the end, admit that they fear God and show respect to the emperor.

¹⁸Servants must respect their masters, not only those who are good and understanding but also those who are difficult. ¹⁹For there is merit in putting up with unprovoked suffering, for the sake of God. ²⁰What merit would there be in taking a beating when you have done wrong? But if you endure punishment when you have done well, that is a grace before God.

²¹This is your calling: remember Christ who suffered for you, leaving you an example so that you may follow in his way. ²²*He did no wrong and there was no deceit in his mouth.* ²³He did not return insult for insult and, when suffering, he did not curse but put himself into the hands of God who judges justly. ²⁴He went to the cross burdened with our sins so that we might die to sin and live an upright life. For by his wounds you have been healed. ²⁵You were like stray sheep, but you have come back to the Shepherd and Guardian of your souls.

cannot solve their problems without making the Gospel the Law of their whole lives.

A Christian aware of his dignity as a priestly member of the people of God, by sheer gift and grace, cannot but proclaim his wonders (2:19). This is what evangelization is all about. These Christians are a chosen race, a community of priest-kings called to proclaim the Gospel. When the Church in Vatican II defines Christians, she quotes precisely this paragraph (2:9) in "Lumen Gentium."

◆ Here we are invited to be model citizens, workers and spouses. If we are slandered, that is one or more reason to show the beauty of Christian life and that those who slander us are wrong. And if the authorities begin to persecute us, this is not an excuse to disobey the laws.

If any of them resist the Word, they will be won over, without words, by the conduct of their wives. ²It will be enough for them to see your responsible and blameless conduct.

³Do not be taken up with outward appearances: hair styles, gold necklaces and clothes. ⁴There is something more permanent that shines from within a person: a gentle and peaceful disposition. This is really precious in God's eyes. ⁵This was the way the holy women of the past dressed. They put their trust in God and were obedient to their husbands, ⁶namely Sarah who had such a respect for Abraham that she called him her lord. You are her children if you do what is right and are not afraid.

⁷Husbands, in your turn, be sensible in your life together. Be considerate, realising that the woman is of a more frail disposition and that you both share in the gift of life. If you do this, God will readily answer your prayers.

⁸Finally, you should all be of one mind: share each other's troubles with mutual affection, be compassionate and humble. ⁹Do not repay evil for evil or answer one insult with another. Give a blessing, instead.

Also see the commentary on Titus 3:1.

○ In speaking to married couples, Peter prefers to address himself to women. Is it because he recognizes the importance of their mission? Or rather, because in the rest of the letter, he paid more attention to men who, according to Jewish customs, occupied the front rows of the assembly?

Why does he ask them to obey their husband? Is it because God wants it that way, or because the Church is anti-feminist and wants women to be submissive? This point was explained in 1 Cor 11:9 and Eph 5:22. The apostles heard and taught the revolutionary ruling of Jesus who gave women the same rights as husbands in marriage. However, since they lived in a male-dominated society, they could hardly imagine or discover a new way of sharing be-since this is what you have been called to do, and so you will receive the blessing. ¹⁰For if you seek life and want to see happiness, keep your tongue from evil and your mouth from speaking deceit. ¹¹Turn away from evil and do good; seek peace and pursue it. ¹²Because the Lord's eyes are turned to the just and his ears listen to their appeal. But the Lord frowns on evil-doers.

Do not fear or be disturbed

¹³ Who can harm you if you devote yourselves to doing good? ¹⁴ If you suffer for the sake of righteousness, happy are you. Do not fear what they fear or be disturbed as they are, ¹⁵ but bless the Lord Christ in your hearts. Always have an answer ready when you are called upon to account for your hope, but give simply and with respect. ¹⁶ Keep your conscience clear so that those who slander you may be put to shame by your upright, Christian living. ¹⁷ Better to suffer for doing good, if it is God's will, than for doing wrong.

Endure sufferings as Christ suffered

+ ¹⁸ Remember how Christ died, once and for all, for our sins. He, the just one, died for the unjust in order to lead us to God. He died as humans do but was raised to life by the Spirit ¹⁹ and it was then that he went to preach to the imprisoned spirits ²⁰ They were the generation who did not believe when God, in his great patience, delayed punishing the world while Noah was building the ark in which a small group of eight persons escaped through the water. ²¹ That was a type of the baptism which now saves you; this baptism is not a matter of physical cleansing but of asking God to reconcile us through the resurrection of Christ Jesus. ²² He has ascended to heaven and is at the right hand of God, having subjected the angels, Dominations and Powers.

4 ¹ Given that Christ suffered in his human life, arm yourselves with this certainty: he who suffers in his body has broken with sin ² and will spend the rest of his life following the will of God and not human passions.

³ You have given enough time, in the past, to living as the pagans do: a life of excess, evil passion, drunkenness, orgies and worship of idols. ⁴ They now find it strange that you are no longer swept along with them in this ruinous flood, and they misinterpret it. ⁵ But they will be accountable to the one who is ready to judge the tween spouses.

In any case, they could not reform the male-centered culture of their time overnight. They were speaking for women accustomed to obeying... some of them had understood the call to freedom from Christ (Lk 8:1), but it happened that they showed it with actions which scandalized many (1 Cor 11:6). Note in passing that the most anti-feminist words in the New Testament are in 1 Cor 14:34-35 and in 1 Tim 2:11-12. And precisely in those two places, it is most likely that these words were not from Paul, but rather paragraphs added later by his followers.

Peter advises a woman to conquer her husband more by her good behavior than by her words. While a woman must not neglect her outward appearance, her real beauty will be in her inner heart.

The advice given husbands appears more like a warning: they should be attentive not selfish; sensitive, not violent.

+ In this paragraph we have the reference to "the descent of Christ into hell" mentioned in our Creed: see also Eph 4:9 and the commentary on Mt 27:52.

Peter, according to the expressions of his days, speaks of the sinful people in Noah's time. For the Jews, they were the example of those who sin by irresponsibility and lack of real concern for the will of God. And, yet, Christ saved them: he came for everyone.

Note the comparison between the deluge and living and the dead. ⁶The Gospel has been preached to many who are now dead. As humans they received a deadly sentence, but through the Spirit they shall live for God.

⁷The end of all things is near; live wisely and spend evening time praying. ⁸Above all, let your love for one another be sincere, for love covers a multitude of sins. ⁹Welcome one another into your houses without complaining. ¹⁰Serve one another with the gifts each of you received, thus becoming good managers of the varied graces of God. ¹¹If you speak, deliver the word of God; if you have a special ministry, let it be seen as God's power so that, in everything, God may be glorified in Jesus Christ. To him belong glory and power forever and ever. Amen.

Be glad to share in the sufferings of Christ

◆ ¹²My dear people, do not be surprised that you are being tested by fire. It is not an unusual occurrence. ¹³Instead, you should be glad to share in the sufferings of Christ because, on the day his Glory is revealed, you will also fully rejoice. ¹⁴You are fortunate if you are insulted because of the name of Christ, for the Spirit of glory rests on you. ¹⁵I suppose that none of you should suffer for being a murderer, a thief, a criminal or an informer; ¹⁶but, if anyone suffers on account of being a Christian, let him not be ashamed; rather let this name bring glory to God.

¹⁷The time of judgment has come and it begins with God's household. If its beginning so affects us, what will be the end of those who refuse to believe in the Gospel? ¹⁸*If the just man is barely saved, what will happen to the sinner and unbeliever?* ¹⁹So, then, if you suffer according to God's will, entrust yourself to the faithful Creator and continue to do good.

Further admonitions

5 ¹I now address myself to those elders among you; I, too, am an elder and a witness to the sufferings of Christ, in order that you may share the Glory which is to be revealed. ²Shepherd the flock which God has entrusted to you, guarding it not in a grudging manner but willingly, for God's sake; not as one looking for a reward but with a generous heart; ³do not lord it over those in your care, rather be an example to your flock. ⁴Then, when the Chief

He died as humans do (v 18); the text reads: according to the flesh, that is, because he had accepted our mortal condition (this is the meaning of flesh for the Jews). He was raised by divine energy: by the Spirit. See something similar in Rom 1:4.

■ They find it strange: perhaps we accept too readily to take part in doubtful customs and our behavior does not surprise those who do not believe.

The Gospel was preached to the dead (v 6). This refers to the previous passage 3:18-20. It is a way of speaking about the mysterious encounter that, after his death, Jesus had with the dead of past ages, whom he had come to save as well.

Live wisely and spend evening time praying (v 7): prayer demands a disciplined life. Going to bed when it is time, not wasting one's free time in distractions which are tiring.

◆ These verses present a summary of the central idea in this letter.

Let us note that Peter cannot admit that a Christian should have to be judged or go to jail through his own fault, murder, theft, etc. But, how many "Christians" by name only are in jail today? And, how many more should be there?

○ In the varied counsels which follow, note what concerns pastors, that is, bishops and priests.

Shepherd appears, you will be given a crown of unfading glory.

⁵In the same way, let the younger ones among you respect the authority of the elders. All of you, be humble in your dealings with each other, because God opposes the proud but gives his grace to the humble.

⁶Bow down, then, before the power of God so that he will raise you up at the appointed time. ⁷Place all your worries on him since he takes care of you.

⁸Be sober and alert because your enemy the devil prowls about like a roaring lion seeking someone to devour. ⁹Stand your ground, firm in your faith, knowing that our brothers, scattered throughout the world, are confronting similar persecution.

¹⁰God, the giver of all grace, has called you to share in Christ's eternal Glory and after you have suffered a little he will bring you to perfection: he will confirm, strengthen and establish you forever. Glory be to him forever and ever. Amen.

This is the latest book in the whole Bible, probably written around the year 100, and it is presented as a second letter by Peter. Its three chapters deal with three concerns in the church of the time:

- preserving the faith as it was taught by Jesus' eye witnesses;
- fighting against "teachers" who distort the faith at the same time as they lead to immorality.
- explaining why Christ had not returned yet.

It is a proved fact that when we get ready to make an important decision or to make some commitment in the service of Christ, many unexpected obstacles arise. The person who becomes intimated loses everything. When he tries again to take some step, the devil will increase his attacks. These trials are common and to face them we need to be alert in our faith.

+ To remind you of the kindness of God (v 12). This kindness, or grace means all of God's plan to save us, all that came to us through Christ.

Babylon: in the language of the Christians of the time, indicates "the great city," the center of pagan religions, namely, Rome (see Revelation 17). Rome already has a community, the Church, at the time Peter writes.

1 ¹ Symeon Peter, a servant and apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who have been sanctified by our God and Saviour Jesus Christ and received a faith as precious as ours:

² may grace and peace abound in you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord.

We share in the divine nature

+ ³ His divine power has given us everything we need for life and piety. First the knowledge of the One who called us through his own Glory and Might, by which we were given the most extraordinary and precious promises. ⁴ Through them you share in the divine nature, after repelling the corruption and evil desires of this world.

⁵ So, strive with the greatest determination and increase your faith with strength, strength with knowledge, ⁶ knowledge with moderation, moderation with constancy, constancy with piety, ⁷ piety with fraternal love, fraternal love with charity. ⁸ If all these riches are in you so as to abound in you, you will not be idle and useless; you will rather be rooted in the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Lord. ⁹ Whoever is not aware of this is blind and shortsighted and has forgotten that he was purified from his former sins.

¹⁰ Therefore, brothers and sisters strive more and more to respond to the call of God who chose you. If you do so, you will never stumble. ¹¹ Moreover you will be generously granted entry to the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

¹² So I shall always remind you of these things, though you know them and remain firm in the truth that you have. ¹³ It seems fitting that as long as I live in the tent of this body, I refresh your memory of them. ¹⁴ knowing that my tent may soon be folded up, as our Lord Jesus Christ has shown me. ¹⁵ I will, nonetheless, endeavour to see that after my departure, you be constantly reminded of all this.

The foundation of faith

¹⁶ Indeed, what we taught you about the power and the return of Christ Jesus our Lord was not drawn from myths or formulated theories. We ourselves were eye-witnesses of

- God's call is such a great favour that we cannot really understand it.
- It is not enough to have been called to believe: we must confirm this election by a truly holy life which prepares us to enter heaven.

His divine power. In a few words this paragraph shows what is unbelievable about Christian hope: to share in the divine nature. We have been called to nothing less than to share what God is. To him who has become permeated by the greatness of God, this must seem the most extraordinary and precious thing which can be promised, much more than any feat in space, or any success in this life. When the early Christians proclaimed their faith that they would rise to share God's glory, pagan philosophers were scandalized: 'Who has made you so proud that you believe you can reach God?'

We have not drawn what we teach from myths or theories (v 16). Faith is not based on reasons and theories. We believe in what the apostles saw and in the prophets' words. The last sentence clearly says what we find in the Bible: all that is there was said on behalf of God and all is the work of the Holy Spirit. It does not say that the Holy Spirit dictated the books nor that he granted revelations to all the authors: it says that he inspired them to write. And thus, each author wrote in his own style and according to the custom of his time, what seemed good to write. Each author was aware that he was expressing the faith of his people, but he was not necessarily conscious that he was obeying the Holy Spirit.

Thus, the Bible is the work of the Holy Spirit and of human authors at the same time. Therefore, no prophecy of Scripture can be handed over to private interpretation (v 20). It is true that anyone, according to his intelligence and faith, can understand one text or another. The message, however, is the whole. When we try to see how statements fit together, to see the important lines or discover the spirit of the Bible, his majesty, ¹⁷when he received glory and honour from God the Father, when from the magnificent Glory this most extraordinary word came upon him: "This is my beloved Son, this is my Chosen One." ¹⁸We ourselves heard this voice from heaven when we were with him on the holy mountain.

¹⁹Therefore, we believe most firmly in the message of the prophets which you should consider rightly as a lamp shining in a dark place, until the break of the day, when the Morning Star shines in your hearts.

²⁰Know this well: no prophecy of Scripture can be handed over to private interpretation, ²¹since no prophecy comes from human decision, for it was men of God, moved by the Holy Spirit, who spoke.

False teachers

2 ¹Just as there have been false prophets in the midst of the people of Israel, so will there be false teachers among you. They will introduce harmful sects and, by denying the Master who saved them, they will bring upon themselves sudden perdition. ²Many, nonetheless, will imitate their vices and because of them the Way of Truth will be discredited. ³They will take advantage of you with deceitful words for the sake of money. But their condemnation has already begun and their destruction awaits them.

⁴In fact, God did not pardon the angels who sinned but cast them into hell confining them in the dark pits, keeping them there until the Day of Judgment. ⁵Neither did he pardon the ancient world when he unleashed the waters of the flood upon the world of wicked people, but protected only Noah, the eighth prophet of righteousness. ⁶God also condemned the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, reducing them to ashes, to serve as a warning to wicked men in the future. ⁷But he saved Lot, a good man deeply afflicted by the unbridled conduct of those vicious people. ⁸For Lot, a righteous man, who lived in their midst suffered day after day in the goodness of his heart as he saw and heard of their crimes.

⁹So, then, the Lord knows how to free from trial those who serve him and keep the wicked for punishment on the Day of Judgment.

¹⁰He will do this especially for certain people who follow the baser desires of their nature and despise the Lord's majesty. Those proud and daring men are not afraid of insulting fallen spirits ¹¹while the angels who are superior to them in strength and power do not permit themselves any injurious accusation in the presence of the Lord.

¹²Those men slander what they cannot understand, they are like irrational animals born to be caught and killed.

¹³And they will suffer the repayment of their wickedness.

They enjoy fleeting pleasures; they are obscene and vicious men who delight in deceiving you when they share in your fraternal meals. ¹⁴They cannot look at a woman without desiring her, they do not tire of sinning and seducing weak souls. They are full of greed -- an accursed people.

¹⁵They abandoned the right way and followed Balaam, son of Beor who was attached to what he gained from his wrongdoing. ¹⁶But he was rebuked for his sin: his she-ass began to speak with a human voice, stopping the prophet in his madness. ¹⁷These people are like waterless springs, clouds driven by a

The Morning Star (v 19). This refers to Christ (see Revelation 22:16).

■ This chapter dealing with false masters repeats, in part, the threats found in the Letter of Jude.

◆ Two generations of Christians have waited for Jesus' return: such a hope helped them to be more generous in their faith. Now, false teachers oppose daily experience to the words of the prophets (especially the "prophets" of the Church who were announcing an imminent end). They argue and had doubts, saying that the leaders in the faith, namely, the witnesses of Christ were dead, and everything stayed the same.

The answer is twofold. On one hand, God does not measure time as we do. He can present something as very close and not accomplish it right away. On the other hand, if it seems a long storm which move swiftly into the blackest darkness.

¹⁸With their boastful and empty discourses, they encourage the lust and impure desire of their hearts. They manage to seduce those who have just freed themselves from the common errors.

¹⁹They promise freedom when they themselves are slaves of corruption: for anyone is a slave of what dominates him. ²⁰Indeed, after being freed from worldly vices through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they returned to those vices and surrendered to them; and their present state has become worse than the first. ²¹It would have been better for them not to have known the way of holiness, than knowing it, to turn away from the sacred doctrine that they had been taught. ²²In their case these proverbs are relevant: "The dog turns back to its own vomit", and: "Hardly has the pig been washed that it again wallows in the mud."

Why is the second coming of Christ delayed?

3 ¹Dearly beloved, this is the second letter I write to you. In both of them I have intended to remind you of sound doctrine. ²Do not forget the words of the holy prophets, of the teaching of our Lord and Saviour, as you heard it through his apostles.

³Remember first of all that in the last days scoffers will appear, their mockery serving their evil desires. ⁴And they will say, "What has become of his promised coming? Since our fathers in faith died, everything still goes on as it was from the beginning of the world." ⁵Indeed, they deliberately ignore that in the beginning the heavens existed first and earth appeared from the water, taking its form by the word of God. ⁶By the same word of God, this world perished in the Flood. ⁷Likewise, the Word of God maintains the present heavens and earth until their destruction by fire; they are kept for the Day of Judgment when the godless will be destroyed. ⁸Do not forget, brothers, that with the Lord, one day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years is like one day. ⁹The Lord does not delay in fulfilling his promise, though some speak of delay; rather he gives you time because he does not want anyone to perish, but that all may come to conversion. ¹⁰The Day of the Lord is to come like a thief. Then the heavens will dissolve with a great noise; the elements will melt away by fire, and the earth with all that is on it will be burned up.

¹¹Since all things are to vanish, how holy and religious your way of life must be, ¹²as you wait for the Day of God and long for its coming, when the heavens will dissolve in fire and the elements melt away in the heat. ¹³We wait for a new heaven and a new earth in which justice reigns, according to God's promise.

¹⁴Therefore, beloved brothers, as you wait in expectation of this, strive time to us, that does not mean we can go back to a complacent life, but instead we must take advantage of the mercy of God who grants us time to convert more deeply and time for others to come to conversion, because of our good example and our prayer.

Today, many people are under the impression that Christ will not come back soon to put an end to our present world and to judge it. But, in fact, we do not know how much time we have left to make this world better. It is always urgent to do good.

The paragraph referring to Paul shows that already at that time Paul's letters had the same authority in the Church as the old sacred books or the Gospel, the "rest of Scripture." The Church was also concerned about the wrong interpretations that people could get from passages in which Paul did not express himself clearly.

that God may find you without blemish or fault, living in peace.

¹⁵And consider that God's patience is for our salvation, as our beloved brother Paul wrote to you, with the wisdom given him. ¹⁶He speaks of these things in all his letters. There are, however, some points in them that are difficult to understand, which people ignorant and immature in their faith twist, as they do with the rest of the Scriptures, to their own destruction.

¹⁷So then, dearly beloved, as you have been warned, be careful lest those people who have gone astray deceive you in turn and drag you along, making you stumble and finally fall away. ¹⁸Grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: to him be glory, now and to the day of eternity. Amen.

¹ Jude, servant of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to those called to the faith, beloved by God the Father and kept in Christ Jesus.

² May mercy, peace and love abound in you. ³ Most beloved, I had wanted to write to you about the salvation we all share, but now I feel I must urge you to fight for the faith God has given once for all to the saints.

⁴ Some individuals have slipped into your midst, godless people already condemned. They make use of the grace of our God as a license for immorality and deny our only Master and Lord Jesus Christ.

⁵ Although you may be aware of it, I wish to remind you that the Lord saved his people from the land of Egypt, but later delivered to death those who did not believe. ⁶ He did the same with the angels who did not keep their rank but abandoned their dwelling places. God enclosed them in eternal prisons, in the pit of darkness until the great day of Judgment. ⁷ Sodom and Gomorrah and the surrounding cities who prostituted themselves and were lured into unnatural unions are also a warning of the punishment of eternal fire. ⁸ In spite of all this, these people now do the same: in their ravings, they debase their bodies, scorn the celestial authorities, blaspheme against the angels.

⁹ When the archangel Michael fought against the devil and disputed about the body of Moses, he did not dare insult him, but

The Holy Spirit may have wanted to leave us the Letter of Jude so that we may admire more the Gospels and the other writings by the apostles. We would have to be familiar with the literature of those days to know how complicated and incredible religious books are, both the books of the Jews and of the pagans. In comparison, the Gospels and Paul seem to belong to this century.

This letter which is attributed to the apostle Jude Thaddeus was written in fact about the end of the first century. It denounces the false teachers resembling those mentioned in the letters to Timothy and Titus.

Nevertheless, the comparisons and the examples which are used come from the Jewish books of the time. The Church had not yet defined which books were inspired by God and were part of the Bible. Besides the Old Testament, Christians used the religious literature of the Jews (for example, the Book of Enoch, the Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs, the Assumption of Moses). And so, there are many legends concerning ancient times which we find in this letter. In this form which seems rather antiquated to us, there is a strong call to preserve the integral faith of the apostles, which at the time was a serious concern of the Church. Therefore, a few years later, the author of 2nd Peter copied part of this letter.

simply said, "May the Lord rebuke you!"

¹⁰Not so these men, they insult and scorn what they cannot understand; and like animals, what they know by instinct they use for their corruption. ¹¹Woe to them! They follow the footsteps of Cain and like Balaam go astray because of money: they will finally perish like the rebellious Korah. ¹²When you celebrate your fraternal meals, they spoil everything, coming only for the food and shamelessly seeing to their own needs. They are like clouds carried along by the wind which never bring rain, like trees without fruit at the end of autumn, twice dead when uprooted. ¹³The scum of their vices are splashed like foam on the rough waves of the sea, they are like shooting stars which the thick darkness engulfs for ever. ¹⁴The patriarch Enoch, the seventh after Adam, said these words about them: The Lord comes with thousands of angels ¹⁵to judge everyone and call the wicked to account for all the evil deeds they committed; he will punish all the injurious words the impious sinners uttered against him. ¹⁶All these are discontented who curse their lot and follow their passions. Their mouth is full of arrogant words, and they flatter people for their own interest.

¹⁷But, most beloved, remember what the apostles of Christ Jesus, our Lord, announced to you. ¹⁸They said to you, "At the end of time, there will be men who will make use of sacred things for the sake of their impious desires."

¹⁹Actually, these people are those who cause divisions, worldly men who do not have the Holy Spirit.

²⁰But, dearly beloved, build your life on the foundation of your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Spirit. ²¹Remain firm in the love of God, welcoming the mercy of Jesus Christ, our Lord, which leads to eternal life.

²²Try to convince those who doubt ²³and save them by snatching them from condemnation. Treat the others with compassion but also with prudence, shunning even the clothes which touched their body.

²⁴To the one God who is able to keep you from all sin and bring you happy and without blemish before his own Glory, ²⁵to the one God who saves us through Jesus Christ, our Lord, to him be glory, honor, might and power, from past ages, now and forever. Amen.

INTRODUCTION TO THE LETTERS OF JOHN

THE FIRST LETTER OF JOHN – inseparable from his Gospel – reminds us that the Christian way is the way of divinization. This assertion could help many who doubt. Thus, for example, a young university student instructed in the faith explains how he became a marxist militant: "I wanted to love my companions more efficiently."

Another one declares: "Faith helps those who still do not have the true vision of things which modern science gives us."

Someone else seeks the way to overcome the deceptive pleasures of life and how to enter into communion with the infinite in oriental doctrines.

These three examples would seem to say that, however beautiful and respectable it may be, faith is limited, and that there is something in man which Christ does not fulfil. Quite to the contrary, in this first Letter, John affirms: in having the Son of God, you are in the total Truth, you walk in authentic Love, you are in communion with God himself.

Perhaps, however, we are deceiving ourselves when we pretend to be in Christ. And this

LETTERS of JOHN

• John will not speak about miracles, nor revelations, nor secrets jealousy kept by some initiates. The truth that he relates to us is both simpler and more divine than all this: God, the Eternal Life has come to live with men. The Word: see Jn 1:1.

Life became visible. Do not look for miracles, nor miraculous powers. Do not expect fantastic revelations about the beyond. Life was revealed as the gift of the Father, the rebirth of man without hope, the divine smile, the unexpected visit of the one seeking to share his life with men (Prv 8:31). We will not find life in mere books, but through communion with those who have seen and experienced it before us, and who became his Church.

+ To walk in light: this is the Christian life.

Over and beyond the different truths which people discover, there is a light which is total Truth and which cannot be divided: one is or is not in the 1 ¹ About what has been from the beginning, and what we have heard and have seen with our own eyes, what we have looked and touched with our hands, I mean the Word who is Life...

² The Life made himself known, we have seen him and we are his witnesses, and we are telling you of Eternal Life.
He was with the Father and he appeared to us.

³ We make known to you him whom we have seen and heard, that you may be in fellowship with us, with the Father and with his Son, Jesus Christ.

⁴ And we write this that you may have perfect joy.

Walk in the light

+ ⁵ We heard his message from himself and announce it to you:
God is light and there is no darkness in him.
⁶ If we say we are in fellowship with him,

1. 2, 13; Jn 1, 1; Jn 1, 14

2. Jn 1, 4

3. Jn 17, 20; 1 Cor 1, 9

6. Jn 8, 12; 3, 12

is why John specifies the criteria, the conditions enabling us to verify if we are truly walking in the light and living in Love:

- In Christ we recognize God himself; yet we must always remember to interiorize his actions, his mission, his way of being human.
- We believe we have been reborn from God: that does not mean that we are above his commandments, nor that we should neglect daily efforts to be worthy of him.
- Faith has renewed our knowledge of God. But what matters most is to understand his love, and to that effect, there is no better teaching than that of the cross.

light. It is not a matter of mere knowledge: the whole person is the one who acts, lives, walks in the Light. Faith gives us light and frees us from many obstacles:

– The partial vision of the unbeliever who does not respect the different values: for example, in seeking order, he neglects the yearning for justice; or in struggling for justice he steps on his neighbour's rights.

– The restlessness of the one who does not have a goal and who silences his own doubts by throwing himself into frantic action.

— The sectarianism preventing us from being "universal brothers and sisters."

The Church makes us adopt a global vision of the whole man. This is one of the riches which Christians – especially militants – must share with their companions.

First intention to determine if we walk in light do we leave sin behind? To really understand this we must know that John is telling what some false prophets were saying. Since we are Christians we remain united with God, thus the sins of the body are unimportant." John declares that if we decide for God, we cannot continue to surrender to sin. Obviously, no one is without sin; we all need the salvation of Christ; but forgiveness itself compels us even more to stay away from sin.

John invites us to confess our sins to God, that is to say, to admit humbly before God that we have sinned, but with confidence in his kindness. If this attitude were not present, the sacrament of "confession" would be worthless. But, on the other hand, confessing our sins in the sacrament of penance is quite helpful in keeping our hearts open to God.

■ Second criterion of our love of God: to obey the commandments which are summarized in love. Do we, perhaps, pretend to know God and to believe? If so, it must be measured by the while we walk in darkness, we lie instead of being in the truth.

⁷ But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light,
we are in fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus, the Son of God, purifies us from all sin.

⁸ If we say, "We have no sin," we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us.

9 If we confess our sins, he, who is faithful and just,
will forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all wickedness.

¹⁰ If we say that we do not sin
we make God a liar, his word is not in us.

Fulfil the commandment of love

2 ¹ My little children, I write to you that you may not sin.

But if anyone sins,
we have an intercessor with the Father.
Jesus Christ, the Just One.

He is the sacrificial victim for our sins and the sins of the whole world.

‘How can we know that we understand him?’
If we fulfil his commands.

⁴If anyone says, "I know him," but does not fulfil his commands, he is a liar and the truth is not in him.

⁵ But if anyone keeps his word,
God's love is made complete in him.

This is how we know that we are in him:

⁶he who claims to live in him must live as he lived.

7 My dear friends, I am not writing you a new commandment, but reminding you of an old one,
one you had from the beginning.
This old commandment is the word you have heard.

^a But, in a way, I give it as a new commandment for it was indeed new in Jesus Christ and must be so in you as well, because the darkness is passing away and the true light already shines.

love we have for others. An old commandment, namely, the first one we learned in the Church; a new commandment, because the world must constantly, and in new ways, discover the power of love.

o Third criterion: not to love the world. Note how John begins by rejoicing with his readers because they know the Father. It is not a matter of hating the world which Christ came to save (see commentary on Jn 3:17). But, we must be aware that there is an evil current coming from the evil one in the world. According to John the world is the deceitful life which people live when they cease to seek the Father's will, and when they oppose Christ. Two opposed forces co-exist in this world of ours and also in people: what comes from the Father and is forever; and what was planned and desired by men when they forgot their condition and dignity as sons of God: greed and pride leading them to death.

There is something more to say about this not loving the world. Even though all that comes from God is good: the sunlight, love, what emerges from men's intelligence and hands, yet the whole creation is worth nothing if we compare it with God.

While we look upon the world as the great gift that God gave us and we feel accountable to him for its progress and development, the world is good for us. But as soon as we consider the world as our thing, use it or neglect it according to our fancy, or if we pretend to change it alone and by force, it becomes our worst enemy, an idol which enslaves us and the source of rivalries. Christians commit themselves to the world (first case) but not with the world (second case). They keep their freedom as sons of God or they are no longer sons because of their love for the world.

◆ Fourth criterion: to be sure we are walking in the Light, we must reject the Antichrist, we ⁹ If anyone claims to be in the light but hates his brother, he is still in darkness.

¹⁰ He who loves his brother remains in the light and need not be afraid of stumbling.

¹¹ But he who hates his brother is in the dark and walks in darkness without knowing where he goes, for the darkness has blinded him.

¹² My dear children, I write to you because you have already received the forgiveness of your sins through the Name of Jesus.

¹³ Fathers, I write to you because you already know him who is from the beginning.

Young men, I write to you because you have overcome the Evil One. My dear children, I write this to you: you already know the Father.

¹⁴ Fathers, I write this to you: you know him who is from the beginning. Young men, I write to you: you are strong and the Word of God lives in you who have indeed overcome the Evil One.

o ¹⁵ Do not love the world or what is in it. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

¹⁶ For everything in the world – the craving of the flesh, the greed of eyes and men boasting of their superiority – all this belongs not to the Father but to the world. ¹⁷ The world passes away with all its craving, but those who do the will of God remain for ever.

Reject the antichrist

◆ ¹⁸ My dear children, it is the last hour. You were told that an antichrist would come; but several antichrists have already come, by which we know that it is now the last hour.

¹⁹ They went out from us though they did not really belong to us. Had they belonged to us, must remain steadfast in the faith and in what faith teaches. The believers of John's days knew that before the glorious return of Christ, an Antichrist would appear. John says: the person who denies that Jesus is the Christ already is an antichrist. And, today, we still know many people who distinguish, on one hand, the man Jesus lost in the mists of legend, – surely a prophet who failed – and on the other hand, an idealized "Christ" adored by believers.

You received this Anointing that comes from him. John is saying that we, Christians, have received an anointing. He does not mean only the anointing with oil which is conferred at baptism and confirmation. "Christ" means precisely "anointed," not anointed with oil, but with the Holy Spirit of God, his Father. John says: you, the Christians, must be instructed in the Church, but not in a passive way: you must discern with what sense of responsibility the word of God is given to you.

The Anointing (the Spirit) will teach you all things. In writing this, John also thought about the prophets who were encouraging and teaching in the churches of the time: through their inspired words, the Spirit was teaching the community (see Acts 14:21 and 1 Thes 5:19). Now too, the Spirit preserves us in the truth and teaches the ways of truth to those who share in the life of the Church; but we must not think the Spirit teaches everything to everyone individually.

o Here begins the second part of the Letter: we are God's children and we must live as such. How do we prove that we are God's children? According they would have remained with us.

So it was shown that not all of us were really ours.

²⁰ But you have the anointing from the Holy One, so that all of you have true wisdom.

²¹ I write to you, not because you lack knowledge of the truth, but because you already know it and lies have nothing in common with the truth.

²² Who is the liar?

He who denies that Jesus is the Christ.

He is the antichrist,

he who denies both the Father and the Son.

²³ He who denies the Son is without the Father, and he who acknowledges the Son has also the Father.

²⁴ Let what you heard from the beginning remain in you.

If what you heard from the beginning remains in you, you, too, will remain in the Son and in the Father.

²⁵ And this is the promise he himself gave us: eternal life.

²⁶ I write this to you thinking of those who try to lead you astray.

²⁷ Since that anointing you received from him remains in you, you do not need someone to teach you.

The anointing that comes from him teaches you all things and speaks the truth and does not lie to you;

so remain in him,

and keep what he has taught you.

²⁸ And now, my children, live in him, so that when he appears in his glory,

we may be confident and not be ashamed before him when he comes.

²⁹ You know that he is the Just One:

know then that anyone living justly is born of God.

3 ¹ See what singular love the Father has for us:

not only are we called children of God, but we really are.

20. 2 Cor 1, 21; Jn 14, 26

21. Jn 8, 44

28. 1 Cor 1, 8

1. Jn 16, 3; 1 Cor 1, 21

to the same criteria which we have already seen: breaking away from sin, keeping the love commandment, proclaiming our faith. There are many ways of saying we are God's children. One person might simply think: God loves people means that human beings have great dignity. But here John calls our attention to two points:

– You are sons, but in order to become like God. Do not seek anything else than to be perfect as God is perfect.

– You are sons to return to the Father. Do you really think about the unique and transcendent end for which God has chosen you? Being aware of this, let us understand that God is purifying us in a thousand ways, because only in this way can we attain our goal.

We will be like him: sharing all that God is and somehow becoming God with God (see 1 Cor 13:13). Those who now bear their lives of suffering with Christ will be transfigured like him (Mk 9; Col 3:4). Then, the universe will reach its goal, having the children of God as its center (Rom 8:19) or better, the New Man.

Those who are born of God do not sin (9). This appears exaggerated, but being children of God is not some sort of fantasy: we have really begun a life in truth and in love. To the person who has been reborn, it becomes impossible to commit a real sin: to deliberately refuse to love, or to forgive or to continue to struggle. But we pray to the Father: "Lead us not..."

+ Keeping the love commandment is what distinguishes God's children.

Most people are accustomed to thinking that the world is divided into two opposed factions. Some see an exploiter or exploited in every man. Others only know liberals and conservatives. Others see black and

This is why the world does not know us, because it did not know him.

² Beloved, we are God's children and what we shall be has not yet been shown. Yet when he appears in his glory, we know that we shall be like him, for then we shall see him as he is.

³ All who have such a hope try to be pure as he is pure.

⁴ Anyone who commits a sin acts as an enemy of the law of God; any sin is a refusal of his law.

⁵ You know that he came to take away our sins, and that there is no sin in him.

⁶ So whoever sins has not seen or known him.

+ ⁷ My little children, do not be led astray, those who do what is right are upright, just as Jesus Christ is upright.

⁹ Those born of God do not sin for the seed of God remains in them; they cannot sin because they are born of God.

¹⁰ What is the way to recognize the children of God and those of the devil? He who does not do what is right is not of God; so, too, he who does not love his brother.

¹¹ For this is the message taught to you from the beginning: we must love one another.

¹² Do not imitate Cain who killed his brother for he belonged to the Evil One. Why did he kill him?

Because he himself did evil and his brother did good.

¹³ Likewise the world hates us, so, be not surprised, brothers;

¹⁴ we love our brothers and sisters, and with this we know that we have passed from death to life.

He who does not love remains in death.

¹⁵ He who hates his brother is a murderer, white. John tells us what is the boundary dividing men: those who love and those who do not love. Because believers are in the camp of those who love, they will be persecuted. Their companions and compatriots will not forgive believers for not sharing their own hatred and sectarianism.

He who hates his brother is a murderer. All murders and massacres spring from a lot of hatred. When war suddenly devastates a country, it is due to the fact that many people were resentful toward others, and others, in even greater numbers, refused to make sacrifices to settle their difficulties and tensions.

The practice of love never weakens us as can happen with other forms of sacrifices without love. Rather, it transforms us into likeness to God and we are no longer fearful or distrustful of him.

When our conscience condemns us, God is greater than our conscience. John may mean that only God knows man's depths. He can judge us better than we can judge ourselves, and he does it with a love that is lacking in us. And so, we must not be embittered over our past faults, nor live in a state of anxiety. After sinning, we must imitate Peter, not Judas.

To believe in the Name (3.23), that is to say, in the divinity of Christ.

■ John underlined the role of the Holy Spirit to guide us in the truth, but now he is dealing with the case of the prophets who do not speak according to the faith received from the apostles through the Church. Similar conflicts continue to exist in today's Church between the leaders of the Church and those who criticize their actions in the name of the Spirit who inspires them. It should be clear that no inspired person will ever be able to speak against the traditional and, as you know, eternal life does not remain in the murderer.

¹⁶This is how we have known what love is: he gave his life for us.

We, too, ought to give our life for our brothers.

17 If anyone enjoys the riches of this world, but closes his heart when he sees his brother or sister in need.

how will the love of God remain in him?

18 My dear children, let us love not only with words and with our lips but in truth and in deed.

¹⁹ Then we shall know that we are of the truth and we may calm our conscience in his presence ²⁰ everytime it reproaches us, for God is greater than our conscience, and he knows everything.

²¹ When our conscience does not condemn us,
dear friends,

we may have complete confidence in God.

²² Then whatever we ask, we shall receive since we keep his commands and do what pleases him.

²³ His command is that we believe in the Name of his Son Jesus Christ and that we love one another, as he has commanded us.

²⁴ Whoever keeps his commands remains in God and God in him.

It is by the Spirit God has given us that we know he lives in us.

Do not trust every inspiration

4 ¹My beloved,
do not trust every inspiration.

Test the spirits to see whether they come from God, because many false prophets are now in the world.

²How will you know whom God inspires?

Any spirit acknowledging that Jesus Christ has taken our flesh speaks in the name of God.

³But any spirit which does not recognize Jesus is not from God, it is the spirit of the antichrist.

faith of the Church. But, what if it deals with ways of being or doing in the Church? Must we always support the people in charge in all circumstances? That would be forgetting that the Gospel forms free people who must never accept to follow blindly the opinion of the pope, or the bishop, or the majority. It is our responsibility to think for ourselves and to evaluate according to the criteria of the Gospel.

Can we then favour those who seem to be guided by the Spirit? But, how many are those inspired people who believe only in their own inspiration! If the Holy Spirit really inspires them, however much they may criticize what must be criticized, they will never attempt to divide the Church. The community may expel them, but they will not become responsible for the break. And even when the local community rejects them they will never accept to separate themselves from the universal communion of the Church, which, with time, always recognizes true prophets.

◆ Here we have the beginning of the third part of the letter: God-Love is the source of love and faith.

God is love (8 and 16). The supreme revelation, characteristic of the Christian faith. Other religions know of a God who is good and compassionate: no other religion knew that the dynamism of love moves the entire creation and that its source lies in God-Love.

In this beautiful text John insists on the inseparability between love of God and love of our neighbour. We all know this, but sometimes we might wonder why is it so. John gives us the paramount reason, love comes from God (7). If we can love God it is because God loved us first (10); if we love each other it is

You have heard of his coming and even now he is in the world.

4 You, my dear children are of God and you have already overcome these people, because the one who is in you is more powerful than he who is in the world.

5 They are of the world and the world inspires them and those of the world listen to them.

6 We are of God and those who know God listen to us, but those who are not of God ignore us. This is how we know the spirit of truth and the spirit of error as well.

God - Love is the source of love

◆⁷ My dear friends, let us love one another for love comes from God. Everyone who loves is born of God and knows God.

⁸ He who does not love has not known God, for God is love.

⁹ How did the love of God appear among us? God sent his only Son into this world that we might have life through him.

¹⁰ This is love: not that we loved God but that he first loved us and sent his Son as an atoning sacrifice for our sins.

¹¹ Dear friends, if such has been the love of God, we, too, must love one another.

¹² No one has ever seen God, but if we love one another, God lives in us, and his love spreads freely among us.

¹³ How may we know that we live in God and he in us?

Because God has given us his Spirit.

¹⁴ We ourselves have seen and declare that the Father sent his Son to save the world.

¹⁵ When someone acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God,

God remains in him and he in God.

¹⁶ We have known the love of God and have believed in it.

God is love.

because God's love extends among us (12).

John also puts together love of God and faith in God: a true Christian believer is somebody who begins by "believing in God's love, and that God is love" (4.16).

He loved us first (10): through his eternal predestination (Eph 1:4), the sending of his Son and through his sacrifice (Rom 5:8). And if we are authentically loving, we never feel superior nor do we have merits as those who boast of their good works. We simply realize that the love of God works through us.

The lives of those who dedicate themselves lovingly to serve the abandoned, the sick, the elderly, those no longer useful to society are justified and so are the lives of those who withdraw from ordinary lives to dedicate themselves more totally to a more intimate love of God.

o God-Love is the one who asks us to believe in his Son, and faith is a victory. John wrote the book of Revelation to give hope to persecuted believers, showing them the victory they share with Christ simply because they believe in him. John repeats the same thing here in a different way.

Our greatest victory is to conquer our inheritance as children of God and to reach the eternal life of God himself. Those who believe in Jesus are achieving this feat: they have already come to the Truth, God, in accepting Jesus.

How do we know we love the children of God? John already told us: the person who loves God also loves people, his brothers and sisters. Here, however, John expresses it the other way round: those who love their brothers and sisters are known by the fact that they love God.

Many things are called love: there may be something of love in all of them, but more or less. The love of God for us and the

He who lives in love, lives in God and God in him.

¹⁷ When do we know that we have reached a perfect love?

When in this world, we are like him in everything, and expect with confidence the Day of Judgment.

¹⁸ There is no fear in love.

Perfect love drives away fear, for fear has to do with punishment; he who fears does not know perfect love.

¹⁹ So let us love one another, since he loved us first.

²⁰ If anyone says, "I love God," while he hates his brother, he is a liar.

How can he love God whom he does not see, if he does not love his brother whom he sees?

We received from him this commandment:

let him who loves God also love his brother.

Faith comes from God

5 ¹ All those who believe that Jesus is the Anointed, are born of God; if you love the Father you also love all those born of him.

² How may we know that we love the children of God?

If we love God and fulfil his commands,

³ for God's love requires us to keep his commands.

In fact, his commandments are not a burden

⁴ because all those born of God overcome the world.

And the victory which overcomes the world is our faith.

⁵ Who has overcome the world?

The one who believes that Jesus is the Son of God.

⁶ Jesus Christ was acknowledged through water, but also through blood.

Not only water but water and blood.

And the Spirit, too, witnesses to him for the Spirit is truth.

⁷ There are then three testimonies:

⁸ the Spirit, the water and the blood, and these three witnesses agree.

love which he gives us toward other people cannot be confused with other loves. The love springing from an authentic communion with God does not resemble sentimental love, so blind and fickle. On the contrary, it is effective, both in the sense that it liberates others and it transforms us in Christ.

Verses 6-9 point out three complementary aspects of the Christian experience, which are first seen in Jesus himself. John characterizes them with three words:

– water: Water is the symbol of cleanliness and of new life.

– blood: The blood of the sacrifice, the painful atonement for sin, the blood of martyrs.

– Spirit: The uncontainable power which animates Christ's witnesses; the amazing creativity of the people and institutions which are rooted in faith.

These three witness to Jesus Christ and they also characterize Christian salvation. We can easily see that they correspond to the three sacraments of Baptism, the Eucharist and Confirmation.

+ In this conclusion, John repeats what he said throughout the letter: you who believe, appreciate what you have. Do not underestimate the step you took in accepting Christ. Explore and look for the riches which are meant for you and which are found in "Him who loves us" (Rv 1:5).

The whole world is under the power of the evil one. As has already been mentioned, this world belongs to God who made it good. Nevertheless, this world is not simply a building site for us to work. It is first the place where the evil one competes with God. He is not used to side with any group, atheist or materialist or whatever else, but everywhere he transforms the best things into destroying idols – even among these looking for a more perfect life.

⁹ If we accept the testimony of men, with greater reason must we accept that of God, given in favour of his Son.

¹⁰ If anyone believes in the Son of God, he has God's testimony in him.

But he who does not believe makes God a liar, since he does not believe his words when he witnesses to his Son.

¹¹ What has God said?

That he has granted us eternal life and this life is in his Son.

¹² He who has the Son has life, he who does not have the Son of God does not have life.

Keep yourselves from idols

+ ¹³ I write you, then, all these things that you may know that you have eternal life, all you who believe in the Name of the Son of God.

¹⁴ Through him we are fully confident that whatever we ask, according to his will, he will grant us.

¹⁵ If we know that he hears us whenever we ask, we know that we already have what we asked of him.

¹⁶ If you see your brother committing sin, a sin which does not lead to death, pray for him, and God will give life to your brother. I speak, of course, of the sin which does not lead to death.

There is also a sin that leads to death; I do not ask that you pray about this.

¹⁷ Every kind of wrong-doing is sin, but not all sin leads to death.

¹⁸ We know that those born of God do not sin, for what has been born of God takes care of them, and the Evil One can do nothing against them.

¹⁹ We know that we belong to God, while the whole world lies in evil.

²⁰ We know that the Son of God has come and has given us power to know the truth.

²¹ My dear children, keep yourselves from idols.

¹I, the elder, to the chosen Lady and her children, whom I love sincerely – and with me all who know the truth – ²because of this same truth which is and will be in us forever.

³Grace, mercy and peace be with you in the name of God the Father and of his Son, Christ Jesus, in truth and love.

⁴I rejoiced greatly on meeting some of your children who live in accordance with the truth, according to the command we have received from the Father. ⁵And now, I ask you, Lady – I write to you not a new commandment but that which we had from the beginning – I ask you: let us love one another.

⁶This is love: to walk according to his commandments. And this is the commandment: that you walk in love as you have learned from the beginning.

⁷Many deceivers have gone out into the world, people who do not acknowledge that Jesus is the Christ who came as a man. They are impostors and antichrists. ⁸Take care of yourselves that you do not lose the fruit of your labours, but receive a perfect reward. ⁹Everyone who goes beyond and does not remain within the teaching of Christ does not have God. He who remains in the teaching has both the Father and the Son. ¹⁰If anyone comes to you and does not bring this teaching, do not receive him into your houses or even greet him. ¹¹Even in greeting him you would become an accomplice in his wicked deeds.

¹²I have many things to write to you, but I prefer not to use paper and ink. I hope to meet you and speak to you personally, that our joy may be full.

¹³The children of your chosen sister greet you.

Chosen lady: this is the way John greets the community of an unknown city. The Church is chosen and holy, just as the people in it are the chosen and holy ones of God.

John invites the people to have a steadfast and emphatic attitude toward those who do not accept the faith of the apostles. At the same time he reminds them of the fundamental law for Christians: love.

To remain zealously faithful to the Truth is to love Christ who entrusted this truth to us, and to serve men who need the whole truth and not only what is most pleasing to people today.

3-john

To the Christians who knew him, the apostle John was not "Saint John," but a man. For a certain Diotrefes, to whom John had given the responsibility of a community that we do not know, John was a bothersome old man. And, in order to better dominate his church, Diotrefes was cutting off the relationship.

On the contrary, in his three letters, as in the Gospel, John speaks of this "communion" which must exist among Christians. Any church, or group must remain open to others, maintaining constant contacts with them. Paul also insists on this responsibility: to welcome in their homes all Christians coming from other places in order to strengthen the bonds of the common faith.

¹I, the elder, to my dear friend Gaius, whom I love sincerely.

²Dear friend, may everything go well with you and may you enjoy health of body and soul. ³I greatly rejoiced with the brothers who arrived and praised your truth, and how you live the truth. ⁴Nothing gives me greater joy than to know that my children live in the truth.

⁵Brother, you do well to care for the brothers and sisters as you do. I mean those coming from other places. ⁶They spoke of your charity before the assembled Church. It will be well to provide them with what they need to continue their journey, as if you did it for God. ⁷In reality, they have set out on the road for his name without accepting anything from the pagans. ⁸We should receive such men, making ourselves their co-operators in the work of the truth.

⁹I have written these words to the Church. But Diotrefes, who is anxious to preside over it, does not acknowledge our authority. ¹⁰So when I come, I will not cease reproaching his manner of acting, since he discredited us with words of evil intent. And not content with that, he does not receive the brothers and even restrains those who want to receive them, and expels them from the Church.

¹¹Dear friend, do not imitate evil, but only the good. He who does good is of God. He who does evil does not know God. ¹²Now about Demetrius: everyone praises him, even the truth itself. We, too praise him, and you know that when we recommend anyone, we do it according to the truth. ¹³I have many things to tell you, but I do not want to do it in writing. ¹⁴I hope to see you soon, and we will talk face to face.

Peace be with you. Your friends greet you. Greet the friends for me, each one by name.

revelation

INTRODUCTION

Caught up in an ecstasy, John saw the glory of the risen Christ and thus he understood the destiny of the church already threatened by the first persecutions. Such is the origin of his book: Revelation of Jesus Christ.

Why does Revelation have the reputation of being a mysterious book, hard to understand and why, for many people does it have a terrifying meaning? Can it be because many seek there secret figures and messages which could be adapted to current events as if John had announced them in detail?

This is mostly due to the fact that, in Jesus' days, apocalyptic literature was very fashionable. Thus, we know of an Apocalypse of Isaiah, another of Moses, one of Enoch... Such books pretended to explain the events of the times, but these events were disguised and spoken of through fictitious visions and fantastic images. So for the readers, it was a game to recognize their own reality presented in a sophisticated form.

So then, if John wished to explain his prophetic grasp of history in apocalyptic form, we will understand his message only if we do not take everything literally. Rather, we must interpret these visions, numbers and symbols according to the rules peculiar to apocalyptic literature. Then, we will see that the Revelation of Jesus Christ is neither difficult, nor terrifying, but filled with hope.

The Risen Christ is the center of history; the world is the place of the struggle between the church, headed by Christ, and Satan's forces; Christians are called to give their witness with courage.

In this book we can see seven series, each with seven elements, in four major parts:

- The seven messages to the churches, chapters 1-3.
- Inventory of the Old Testament, chapters 4-9.
- The Church faces the Roman Empire, chapter 11-19:6.
- The last days and the heavenly Jerusalem, chapters 20-22.

o The time is near. This has been written first for John's first readers. Thus, the estimates of contemporary readers who would wish to read a description of current events into Revelation are misconstrued.

+ John greets his readers, wishing them the peace coming from the Father, Christ and the Holy Spirit. As soon as John has named the three divine Persons, all his praise goes to Christ. This was the newness which energized the early Christians so powerfully: Christ, God who came as man.

The Seven Spirits means the fullness of God's Spirit.

The one who is, who was, and who is to come. This way of naming God expands what had been revealed to Moses: "I am who am" (Ex 3). The living God is a God who is coming.

Then, Christ is presented as the Messiah and Judge hoped for by the Jews. He comes with the clouds. In his trial, Jesus had also referred to this text of the prophet Daniel (7:13).

All the nations of the earth will mourn his death. See this prophecy of the murdered Messiah: "the one they pierced" in Zechariah 12:10.

Alpha and Omega (or A and Z). This suggests that God embraces all time.

Revelation is addressed to Christians who are beginning to suffer for their faith, and it shows Christ to them, as the model they are imitating. Christ is the "servant and the witness of God and of the Father." Let us not forget that martyr means witness.

■ John had been condemned on account of his faith and he was living in exile on Patmos. It was around the year 95.

John has this vision on the Lord's day, that is, on Sunday, or the day of the resurrection. And so, this vision will be enlivened by the triumphant breath of the resurrection.

I saw someone like a son of Man. This is a symbolic vision of Christ; dressed as a priest, and with a golden sash as a king. His white hair is a symbol of his eternity. His feet like bronze means that no one will defeat him. Christ appears just like Daniel represents God, the universal judge (see 7:9).

1 The Revelation of Jesus Christ. God gave it to him to let his servants know what is soon to take place. He sent his angel to make it known to his servant, John, ² who reports everything he saw, for this is the word of God and the declaration of Jesus Christ.

³ Happy is the one who reads aloud these prophetic words, and happy those who hear them and treasure everything written here, for the time is near.

To him who loves us and has washed away our sins with his own blood, ⁶ making us a kingdom and priests for God his Father, to him be the glory and power for ever and ever. Amen.

⁷ See he comes with the clouds and everyone will see him, even those who pierced him and all the nations of the earth will mourn his death. Yes. It will be so.

⁸ "I am the Alpha and the Omega," says the Lord God, he who is, who was and who is to come: the Master of the universe.

■ ⁹ I, John, your brother, who share with you, in Jesus, the sufferings, the kingdom and the patient endurance, was on the island of Patmos, because of the Word of God and witnessing to Jesus. ¹⁰ On the Lord's day, the Spirit took possession of me and I heard a voice behind me which sounded like a trumpet, ¹¹ "Write down all that you see, in a book, and send it to the seven Churches of Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea."

¹² I turned to see who was speaking to me; behind me were seven golden lampstands ¹³ and, in the middle of these, I saw someone like a son of man, dressed in a long robe tied with a golden girdle.

¹⁴ His head and his hair are white as wool or as snow and his eyes are like flames of fire.

has been refined in a furnace. His voice is like the roaring of the waves.

¹⁶ I saw seven stars in his right hand and a sharp, double-edged sword coming out of his mouth; his face shone like the sun in all its brilliance.

¹⁷ Seeing him, I fell at his feet like one dead but he touched me with his right hand and said, "Do not be afraid. It is I, the First and the Last. ¹⁸ I am the living one; I was dead and now I am alive for ever and ever; and mine are the keys of death and the nether-world. ¹⁹ Now write what you have seen, both what is and what is yet to come. ²⁰ Know the secret of the seven stars you saw in my right hand and the seven golden lampstands: the seven stars are the angels of the seven Churches and the seven lampstands are the seven Churches.

The seven messages to the Churches

♦ 2 ¹ Write this to the angel of the Church in Ephesus, "Thus says the one who holds the seven stars in his right hand and who walks among the seven golden lampstands:

² I know your works, your difficulties and your patient suffering. I know you cannot tolerate evil-doers but have tested those who call themselves apostles and have proved them to be liars. ³ You have persevered and have suffered for my name without losing heart. ⁴ Nevertheless, I have this complaint against you: you have lost your first love. ⁵ Remember from where you have fallen and repent, and do what you used to do before. If not, I will come to you and remove your lampstand from its place; this I will do, unless you repent. ⁶ Yet, it is in your favour that you hate the doings of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate. ⁷ If anyone has ears let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches: To the victor I will give to eat of the tree of life which is in God's Paradise."

+ ⁸ Write this to the angel of the Church in Smyrna, "Thus says the First and the Last, he

It is I, the First and the Last. By these words, Christ identifies with God himself. In the Bible, this is characteristic of God's way of speaking (see Is 44:6 and 12).

When Christ delivers the seven messages to the churches, he does not appear as a man from the past, but rather as the Lord who holds the destiny of the churches in his hands. The double edged sword coming out of his mouth is the word of God which irresistibly penetrates the heart and is always fulfilled in events. It deals death as effectively as it saves.

There were more than seven churches in Asia. But seven means fullness, and the seven churches, then, represent all the Christian communities. Seven is the perfect number and this is why in the book of Revelation, Christ's name is mentioned seven times, Jesus fourteen times, and the Lamb (who is Christ) twenty-eight times. There are seven prophecies of Christ's victory with his people and seven beatitudes like those of the Gospel: "Happy those..."

The stars, the angels and the lampstands: these three images may imply fullness to designate a church, its bishops and believers together.

♦ The seven following messages all begin with the words I know. Christ sees, knows and loves his Church. He begins by underscoring what is positive, then he reprimands. Christ remains invisible, but he is the Lord of the universe and of history.

The messages reveal the difficulties these churches of Asia are facing:

– On one hand, there are hostilities coming from the Jews as well as from the pagans: they are a test of the believers' perseverance.

– On the other hand, we have the "Nicolaitans," those Christians who, not wanting to be cut off from the pagans, accept even participation with them in the banquets of the pagan temples where meat sacrificed to idols was eaten: this is a threat to faith.

– The last temptation is the one which comes with time: the love which had awakened in the first moments of conversion was growing cold.

♦ Ephesus comes first since it is the mother Church. Paul preached there for two years (Acts 19:8). Later, John came to live there, thus extending his authority over the churches in the Asian province.

I know your patient suffering. While the apostle was absent, the Church had rejected the false prophets and preserved the true faith.

You have lost your first love. How many details – difficult to pinpoint – make us feel the fervor of a community, or, on the contrary, reveal that the essence of authentic, passionate and faithful love of God is missing! I will remove your lampstand: I will punish your leaders.

The tree of life is eternal life (see Gen 2:9).

+ The church of Smyrna gathers poor people in an extremely rich city. In fact, it is rich in the eyes of God who is going to put it to the test so that it can be more productive.

There will be ten days of trial. The number ten is characteristic of the period during which evil ones rule. Thus, it announces a trial lasting a short time.

The second death. (See Revelation 20:14.) It means eternal condemnation, which separates the soul not from the body, but from God.

Those who pretend to be Jews. Since they are believers and the people of God, Christians are authentic sons of Abraham and authentic Jews.

Those who are Jews by race and who did not believe, lost their right to boast of that name. Therefore, their "synagogue," that is to say, their assembly, becomes Satan's, by their opposition to the Church.

■ Pergamum has the privilege of being an important center of pagan worship: it is "Satan's throne."

You cling faithfully to my name. The name of Christ is "Lord." This is the period when the Roman emperors begin to have themselves called "Lord" and be adored like gods, thus forcing Christians to choose between emperor worship, imposed on everyone under the pain of severe punishment, and faithfulness to Christ.

The Church in Pergamum is privileged to have had among its who was dead and returned to life:

⁹ I know your trials and your poverty: you are rich indeed. I know how you are slandered by those who pretend to be Jews but who are, in fact, of the synagogue of Satan. ¹⁰ Do not be afraid of what will happen to you. The devil will throw some of you into prison to test you and there will be ten days of trials. Remain faithful even to death and I will give you the crown of life. ¹¹ If anyone has ears, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches: The victor has nothing to fear from the second death.

■ ¹² Write this to the angel of the Church in Pergamum, "Thus says the one who has the sharp, double-edged sword:

¹³ I know where you live, where Satan's throne is, but you cling firmly to my name; you have not renounced me, not even in your days when Antipas, my faithful witness, was killed in your place, where Satan lives. ¹⁴ Nevertheless, I have a few complaints against you: Some among you hold the teaching of Balaam, who taught Balak how to make the Israelites stumble, by eating food sacrificed to idols and committing adultery. ¹⁵ Also among you, some follow the teaching of the Nicolaitans. ¹⁶ Therefore, repent; if not, I will come to you soon to attack these people with the sword of my mouth.

¹⁷ If anyone has ears, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches: To the victor I will give the hidden manna. I will also give him a white stone with a new name written on it which no one knows except the one who receives it."

◆ ¹⁸ Write this to the angel of the Church in Thyatira, "Thus says the Son of God whose eyes are like flames of fire and whose feet are like burnished bronze. ¹⁹ I know all your works: your love, faith, service, patient endurance and your later works, greater than the first.

²⁰ Nevertheless, I have a complaint against you: you tolerate your Jezebel, this woman who calls herself a prophetess and is deceiving my servants; she teaches them prostitution and the eating of food sacrificed to idols. ²¹ I have given her time to repent but she is unwilling to leave her prostitution. ²² So, I am going to throw her to bed and to inflict severe trials on her partners in adultery unless they repent of their evil. ²³ I will strike her followers dead and all the Churches will know that I am he who probes the heart and mind; I will give each of you what your conduct deserves.

²⁴ Listen to me now, the rest of you in Thyatira, you who do not hold with this teaching and have not learned 'the secrets of Satan', as they are called. I have no cause to reproach you, ²⁵ only hold on to what you have, until I come. ²⁶ To him who is victor and keeps to my ways to the end, I will give power over the nations; ²⁷ he will rule them with an iron rod and shatter them like earthen pots; he will be like me, who received this power from my Father. ²⁸ Moreover, I will give him the Morning Star.

²⁹ If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches.

3 ¹ Write this to the angel of the Church in Sardis, "Thus says he who holds the seven spirits of God and the seven stars:

I know your worth: you think you live but you are dead. ² Wake up and strengthen that which is not already dead. For I have found your works to be imperfect in the sight of my God. ³ Remember what you were taught; keep it and change your ways. If you do not repent I will come upon you like a thief at an hour you least expect. ⁴ Yet, there are some left in Sardis who have not soiled their robes; these will come with me, dressed in white, since they deserve it. ⁵ The victor will be dressed in white and I will never erase his name from the book of life; instead, I will acknowledge it before my Father and his angels.

⁶ If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches.

⁷ Write this to the angel of the Church in Philadelphia, "Thus says he who is holy and true, who holds the key of David; if he opens, nobody shuts and if he shuts nobody opens.

⁸ I know your worth; I have opened a door members the first martyr of the province, Antipas, mentioned here. His courage in proclaiming his faith before pagan persecution, does not prevent a pagan current to penetrate within the Church through the Nicolaitans mentioned earlier: by taking part in some pagan ceremonies and returning to the sexual freedom of the pagans, they are threatening to destroy the Church.

I will come soon to attack these people. In the early Church, the intervention of the Holy Spirit is felt all the time. Prophets speak, point to the guilty party, and misfortunes soon occur.

The white stone is a sign of happiness. The new name (see Is 65:15) means the renewal of the Christian in the depth of his being: in living and growing in the faith, is the beginning of a new personality which will appear clearly in heaven. The hidden manna (17): Christ becomes power and source of life (Jn 6:48) for those who are faithful to him.

♦ In the Bible, Jezebel is the name of an impious woman (see 1 Kg 19) and here it refers to some Nicolaitan prophetess. Her lovers and sons are her followers.

Also, idolatry is often called adultery or prostitution: the believing people belong to God as a wife to her husband, and to be unfaithful is to prostitute oneself. In fact, those who worship idols do not usually respect the sexual discipline imposed by faith. Thus when Revelation speaks of prostitution, we must understand both idolatry and sexual immorality.

He will rule them with an iron rod. By these words, the one who overcomes is promised a share in Christ's victory (see psalm 2); he will receive the Morning Star, that is to say, Christ himself (see Revelation 22:15).

◦ This is a brief message to a dying church. The universal Church has been promised that it would remain. Yet, any individual church can disappear.

To be dressed in white means inner life: being clothed with Christ (see Eph 4:24). Throughout the book of Revelation, white means joy, strength, victory and eternal glory.

+ This is a message of consolation and optimism for those who work faithfully with the Holy Spirit, but who are troubled by the thousand difficulties of their ministry.

The one who holds the key of David (see Is 22:22). Christ has absolute power over the "house of David," namely, his people. He prepares a fruitful ministry for those who were able to persevere in hard times and when the fruits of their labour were not seen.

I have opened a door before you (v. 8) means: I have prepared a successful ministry. There is one condition: keeping the Word of God and being faithful to him.

■ You are neither cold nor hot. Neither unbelievers who remain cold toward a faith they do not share, nor believers who take God's love seriously and with authentic surrender. We can easily imagine this community of nice and comfortable people. They were one more religious group, but not the witnesses of Christ the victor.

Laodicea had hot and cold thermal waters. It was also in that city that an eyewash famous for improving eyesight was made.

Amen means: it is true, or also: I commit myself this way. Christ is the Father's Amen. His commitment to us is the fulfilment of his promises (see 2 Cor 1:20). And because Christ is the Amen, he calls us to a real commitment to God, to realize his plans.

before you, which nobody can close, because you have kept my Word and not renounced me, in spite of your lack of power.⁹ I am giving you some of the synagogue of Satan who call themselves Jews but they are only liars. I will make them fall at your feet and recognize that I have loved you.

¹⁰ Because you have kept my words with patient endurance, I, for my part, will keep you safe in the hour of trial which is coming upon the whole world, to test the people of the earth. ¹¹ I am coming soon; hold fast to what you have lest anyone take your crown. ¹² I will make the victor into a column in the sanctuary of my God where he will stay forever. I will write on him the name of my God and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which comes down from my God in heaven, and my own new name. ¹³ If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches.

■ ¹⁴ Write this to the angel of the Church in Laodicea, "Thus says the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of God's creation:

¹⁶ You are lukewarm, neither hot nor cold so I will spit you out of my mouth. ¹⁷ You think you are rich and have piled up so much that you need nothing but you do not realize that you are wretched and to be pitied, poor, blind and naked.

¹⁸ I advise you to buy from me gold that has been tested by fire, so that you may be rich, and white clothes to wear so that your nakedness may not shame you, and ointment for your eyes that you may see. ¹⁹ I reprimand and correct all those I love. Be earnest and change your ways. ²⁰ Look, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears my call and opens the door, I will come in to him and have supper with him, and he with me. ²¹ I will let the victor sit with me on my throne just as I, was victorious and took my place with my Father, on his throne. ²² If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen to what the Spirit says to the Churches."

A LOOK AT THE PAST: CHRIST AND ISRAEL

The throne in heaven

◆ 4 ¹ After this, I looked up to the wall of the sky and saw an open door. The voice which I had first heard speaking to me like a trumpet, said, "Come up here and I will show you what will come in the future." ² Immediately, I was seized by the Spirit. There, in heaven, was a throne and one sitting on it. ³ He who sat there looked like jasper and carnelian and round the throne was a rainbow resembling an emerald.

⁴ In a circle around the throne are twenty-four thrones and seated on these are twenty-four elders, dressed in white clothes, with golden crowns on their heads. ⁵ Flashes of lightning come forth from the throne, with voices and thunderclaps. Seven flaming torches burn before the throne; these are the seven spirits of God.

⁶ Before the throne there was a platform, transparent like crystal. Around and beside the throne stand four living creatures, full of eyes, both in front and behind. ⁷ The first living creature is like a lion, the second like a bull, the third has the face of a man and the fourth looks like a flying eagle. ⁸ Each of the four living creatures has six wings full of eyes, all around as well as within; day and night they sing without ceasing,

*Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God, master of the universe,
he was, he is and he is to come.*

⁹ Whenever the living creatures give glory, honour and thanks to the One on the throne, he who lives for ever and ever, ¹⁰ the twenty-four elders fall down before him and worship the One who lives for ever and ever. They lay their crowns in front of the throne and say,

"Our Lord and God, worthy are you to receive glory, honour and power!

*For you have created all things;
by your will they came to be and were made.*

◆ After these messages to the Asian churches, we have visions containing the meaning of his history.

– In chapters 4-11, John describes the meaning of the history of Israel up to the preaching of the Gospel.

– In chapters 12-21, he prepares us to understand the history we are living and the struggles of the Church.

To begin with, we need to know where we are going and why we are struggling. Those without goals will soon be swept away by conflicting currents. Therefore, before developing his vision of history, John shows us the unchanging center in which things and events have their origins and to which they return.

A door opens in the vault of the sky (v. 1). According to the ideas of the time, above the vault, we have "the waters from above," which are the level of another heaven, the real one where God dwells.

In heaven, was a throne, and one sitting on it. That invisible someone from whom light and life radiate is the divine Being contemplated in its source, that is the Father. His face cannot be described, but all the elements of nature are gathered to express something of the divine Being: the imposing force of the storm, the fascinating power of fire, the purity and freshness of water.

The elders are the saints of the Old Testament who represent the faithful people (see Is 24:23). The four living creatures refer to angels. These are poetic images to express what is most noble, strong, wise and quick. Their eyes, always alert, are focused on the center of the divine Being and they spread God's energies throughout the universe (see Ez 1).

They sing without ceasing: Holy, Holy, Holy (v. 8). This is the first of the hymns found in Revelation. At the center where God is and from where all things came when the lives of mortal beings are

1. 1, 10; Mk 1, 10; Acts 10, 11 2. Ezk 1, 26; 10, 1; Is 61, 1
5. Ex 19, 16 6. Ezk 1, 22; 1, 5 8. Is 6, 2-3 over, everything will be gathered up in thanksgiving to the Father. What will we do in heaven? All will be admiration, praise and amazing discovery of God's infinity.

Note how John describes God's mystery here, by using images from Isaiah 6 and Ezekiel 1. As to the four animals, Christian art used them to represent the four evangelists: Matthew as the man; Mark, the lion; Luke, the bull; and John as the eagle.

o The vision follows, with the appearance of two new elements: the sealed Book and the Lamb. The history of Israel (which can be read in the Bible) and Christ.

John's readers had a book, the Old Testament. For those among them of Jewish origins, it was the history of their people. But it was also the book of the other Christians, and in some way it contains the history of all men, since in this history the salvation of all mankind was being prepared.

The Jewish nation had been destroyed some twenty years before, according to Jesus' prophecy (Mk 13), and Christians of Jewish descent were asking themselves: If Christ is the promised Saviour, why did the history of Israel end in such disasters? And why did the Jewish people, instructed by the Bible, not recognize their Saviour.

Here we are told that though the events are in the Book, the Book is sealed. No one was found able to understand God's plan for his people, or able to call God to account. Only Christ reveals the mystery of death and resurrection which is being realized in history, and only he can do so, since he himself surrendered to death for all: you are worthy to take the Book (9).

Now, Christ can read the Book of the history and destiny of men (power, riches and wisdom: v. 12). Still more, he is now the owner of this Book, and in being rejected by Israel, a priestly people (Ex 19:5), he formed his own kingdom and priests, the Church (1 Pet 2:9), as is said in v. 10.

The coming of the Lamb

o 5 ¹Then I saw in the right hand of him who was seated on the throne a scroll written on both sides, sealed with seven seals. ²A mighty angel exclaimed in a loud voice, "Who is worthy to open this and break the seals?"

³But no one in heaven or on earth or under the earth (among the dead) was found able to open the book and read it. ⁴I wept much when I saw that no one was found worthy to open the book and read it. ⁵Then one of the elders said to me, "Do not weep. Look, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Shoot of David, has conquered; he will open the book of the seven seals."

⁶And I saw next to the throne with its four living creatures and the twenty-four elders a Lamb standing, although it had been slain. I saw him with seven horns and seven eyes which are the seven spirits of God sent out to all the earth.

⁷The Lamb moved forward and took the book from the right hand of him who was seated on the throne. ⁸When he took it, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders bowed before the Lamb. They all hold in their hands harps and golden cups full of incense which are the prayers of the holy ones.

⁹This is the new song they now sing:

*You are worthy to take the book and open its seals, for you were slain
and by your blood you purchased for God men of every race, people and nation;*

¹⁰and you made them a kingdom and priests for our God and they shall reign over the land.

¹¹I went on looking; I heard the noise of a multitude of angels gathered around the throne, the living creatures and the elders, numbering millions of millions, ¹²crying out with a loud voice:

Worthy is the Lamb who was slain to receive power and riches, wisdom and strength, honour, glory and praise.

10. Ex 19, 10; Is 61, 6
12. Phil 2, 7-9

¹³ Then I heard the voice of the whole universe, heaven, earth, sea and the place of the dead; every creature cried out:

To him who sits upon the throne and to the Lamb be praise, honour, glory and power for ever and ever.

¹⁴ And the four living creatures said, Amen, while the elders bowed down and worshipped.

The seven seals

+ 6 ¹ I saw the Lamb opening the first of the seven seals, and I heard one of the four living creatures cry out with a voice like thunder, "Come and see!" ² A white horse appeared, and its rider had a bow. He was crowned, and he went out as a conqueror to continue his conquest.

³ When he opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature cry out, "Come!"

⁴ Then another horse the colour of fire came out. Its rider was ordered to take away peace from the earth, that people might kill one another; so he was given a great sword.

⁵ When he opened the third seal, I heard the third creature cry out, "Come!" This time it was a black horse, and its rider held a balance in his hand. ⁶ Then from the midst of the four living creatures a voice was heard: "A measure of wheat for a piece of silver, and three measures of barley for a piece as well! Do not spoil the oil or the wine."

⁷ When he opened the fourth seal, I heard a cry from the fourth living creature, "Come!"

⁹ When he opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the spirits of those who proclaimed the word of God and were slain for its sake. ¹⁰ They began to cry aloud, "Holy and righteous Lord, how long will you remain without rendering justice and avenging our blood on the inhabitants of the earth?" ¹¹ Then each one of them was given a white garment,

A Lamb, standing although it had been slain (v. 6). The vision brings us to the moment of the resurrection. While the Gospels relate the resurrection of Jesus as his disciples knew it on earth, here we are in heaven to contemplate the risen Christ entering a glorious world. He is standing after being sacrificed, glorious, but for ever marked by his Passion among men.

The seven horns and the seven eyes express the fullness of the power and the knowledge of the risen Christ. Before all the powers of the world and of heaven, on that day, he comes with authority to take the Book from the hands of the Father.

Let us note how on the day of the resurrection, the same praise previously addressed to God now goes to the Lamb: in being raised up, Christ appears with the glory befitting him: that of God.

+ The Lamb opens the seals. The risen Christ explains the great forces giving an impulse to sacred history. At the time of John's writing, the Old Testament has ended because of the birth of the Church, and shortly thereafter through the destruction of the Jewish homeland. This is the time to think things over.

The four horses symbolize the forces shaping biblical history.

The rider of the white horse is "the word of God." It represents God's words given to the prophets in the Old Testament. Christ, who is the word of God had not come yet: he would come later, riding the same white horse (Rv 19:11).

The other three horses represent war, hunger and the plague. These are the great plagues troubling sinful people: they make them experience the need for God's salvation.

With the fifth seal another invisible power is discovered, one that moves sacred history: the demand of justice for the blood of martyrs. These martyrs, prior to Christ, already share in his victory (that is why they wear a white garment); yet, they must wait to be joined by other martyrs, the Christians, the martyrs of the early Church, for God to bring about his justice (see in Mt 23:35).

With the sixth seal, we have the appearance of the signs and plagues which the prophets had announced for the Day of the Lord, and which would be fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem (Mk 13, 24).

■ Do no harm to the earth until we have sealed the servants of our God (v. 3). In this final moment, before closing the Old Testament and proclaiming the rejection of the Jewish people, John takes stock of these centuries of God's blessing and favours for his chosen people.

Seeing how the Jews did not accept Jesus, we could have the impression of a complete failure. John, however, presents an optimistic vision. The angels point out the elect. There are twelve thousand from each one of the tribes. We know that twelve is the number for fullness and we have to understand that the number of elect was the maximum, and that God was not disappointed.

Who are these elect? On one hand, they are the Jews who followed Jesus. They are also those who did not believe in him through no fault of their own and who were saved through his death and his resurrection.

Thus we have an inventory of the saved for God's first people, Israel. Then, a huge crowd which no one could count appears immediately.

and they were told to wait a little while, until the number of their brothers and fellow servants who would be killed as they had been be completed.

¹² And my vision continued. When the Lamb opened the sixth seal, there was a violent earthquake. The sun became black as a mourning dress, and the whole moon turned blood-red, ¹³ and the stars in the sky fell to the earth like dry figs falling from a fig tree shaken by a hurricane. ¹⁴ The sky was folded up like parchment that is rolled up; there was no mountain or continent that was not removed from its place. ¹⁵ The kings of the earth and their ministers, the generals, the rich and the powerful, and all the people, slaves as well as free men, hid in caves or among rocks on the mountains, ¹⁶ saying, "Fall on us, mountains and rocks, and hide us, for we are afraid of him who sits on the throne, and of the wrath of the Lamb. ¹⁷ The great Day of his wrath has come, and who can endure it?"

144,000 from Israel and the great crowd from every nation

■ 7 ¹ After this, there were four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding back the four winds to prevent them blowing against the earth, the sea and the trees. ² I saw another angel ascending from the sunrise, carrying the seal of the living God, and he cried out with a loud voice to the four angels empowered to harm the earth and the sea, ³ "Do not harm the earth or the sea or the trees until we have sealed the servants of our God upon their foreheads."

⁴ Then I heard the number of those marked with the seal: a hundred and forty-four thousand from all the tribes of the sons of Israel:

⁵ from the tribe of Judah, twelve thousand were sealed;

from the tribe of Reuben, twelve thousand;

from the tribe of Gad, twelve thousand;

⁶ from the tribe of Asher, twelve thousand;

from the tribe of Naphtali, twelve thousand;

⁷ from the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand;

from the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand; from the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand;

⁸ from the tribe of Zebulun, twelve thousand;
from the tribe of Joseph, twelve thousand;

from the tribe of Benjamin, twelve thousand.

⁹ After this I saw a great crowd, impossible to count, from every nation, race, people and tongue, standing before the throne of the Lamb, clothed in white, with palm branches in their hands, ¹⁰ and they cried out with a loud voice, "Who saves but our God who sits on the throne and the Lamb?"

¹¹ All the angels were around the throne, the elders and the four living creatures; they then bowed before the throne with their faces to the ground to worship God. ¹² They said,

Amen. Praise, glory, wisdom, thanks, honour, power and strength to our God forever and ever. Amen!

¹³ At that moment, one of the elders spoke up and said to me, "Who are these people clothed in white, and where did they come from?" ¹⁴ I answered, "Sir, it is you who know this."

The elder replied, "They are those who have come out of the great persecution; they have washed and made their clothes white in the blood of the Lamb. ¹⁵ This is why they stand before the throne of God and serve him day and night in his sanctuary. He who sits on the throne will spread his tent over them.

¹⁶ Never again will they suffer hunger or thirst or be burned by the sun or any scorching wind. ¹⁷ For the Lamb near the throne will be their Shepherd, and he will bring them to springs of life-giving water, and God will wipe away their tears."

◆ 8

¹ When the Lamb opened the seventh seal there was silence in heaven for about half an hour. ² Then I looked at the seven angels standing before God who were given seven trumpets.

³ Another angel came and stood before the altar of incense with a golden censer. He was

After this, I saw a great crowd. This is the new people of God, the followers of Christ coming from all the nations of the world and who are joined with the believers of the Old Testament.

A great crowd, impossible to count (v. 9). The salvation of humanity will be an incredible success, despite appearances which discourage us so often: the people of God is being prepared everywhere.

They are those who come out of the great persecution (v. 14). This multitude of the saved are obviously not all martyrs and yet, John sees them represented as martyrs. It is because every believer has a model in the martyrs who gave even their lives for their faith. Besides, John is speaking for Christians on the eve of the first great persecution.

Praise, glory and wisdom to our God (v. 12). This is another hymn to God our Saviour. Those who sing God's praises may have already seen, during their lives, that all wisdom, power and strength could only come from above.

◆ When the Lamb opened the seventh seal. We have come to the end of the Old Testament and the silence that follows announces the coming of God. In fact, the tremendous end of Jerusalem is only a stage. The end of history is postponed. With the seven trumpets a new series of plagues begins. We are not quite sure of what is hidden behind those symbols. But they were surely referring to events already known to John's readers, events which had happened shortly before.

In the following chapters there are more and more interventions of "angels."

Are these angels only a poetic way to refer to the intervention of God himself? It is true that in ancient books, oftentimes, the term "angel" was a way of saying that God intervenes (see commentary on Gen 16). But we must also think that God's creation is much wider than what we can see and know. There are other spiritual beings who intervene in God's plan over the world.

"They neither believe in angels nor in the resurrection of the dead" (Acts 23:8): this is Luke's way of defining the Sadducees, the materialists of Jesus' days.

• These paragraphs intend to show the punishment of the Jewish people who did not welcome Christ: they use images taken from the plagues of Egypt, from Ez 38-39, and from other popular writings. With the first four trumpets, punishment is shown in the very forces of nature which, later, will turn against the guilty people. The third one shows the evil forces of the devil crashing on the earth from the sky. The fifth one may refer to foreign invasions: this is given much incense that he might offer it, with the prayers of all the holy ones, on the golden altar before the throne; ⁴and the cloud of incense rose with the prayers of the holy ones from the hands of the angel to the presence of God. ⁵Then, the angel took the censer and filled it with burning coals from the altar, and threw them on the earth: and there came thunder, lightning and earthquakes.

The seven trumpets

• ⁶The seven angels with the seven trumpets prepared to sound them. ⁷When the first angel blew his trumpet, there came hail and fire, mixed with blood, which fell on the earth. And a third of the earth was burned up with a third of the trees and the green grass.

⁸When the second angel blew his trumpet, something like a great mountain was thrown into the sea, and a third of the sea was turned into blood. ⁹At once, a third of living creatures in the sea died and a third of the ships perished.

¹⁰When the third angel sounded his trumpet, a great star fell from heaven, like a ball of fire, on a third of the rivers and springs. ¹¹The star is called Wormwood, and a third of the waters was turned into wormwood and many people died because of the water which had turned bitter.

¹²The fourth angel blew his trumpet, and a third of the sun, the moon and the stars was affected. Daylight decreased one third, and the light at night as well.

¹³And my vision continued: I noticed an eagle flying through the highest heaven and crying with a loud voice, "Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the land when the last three angels sound their trumpets."

9 ¹And the fifth angel blew his trumpet. I then saw a star fall from heaven to earth. The star was given the key to the depths of the abyss. ²He opened the abyss, and a cloud of smoke rose as if from a great furnace which darkened the sun and the air.

³Locusts came from this smoke and spread throughout the earth. They were given the same harmful power as the scorpions of the earth. ⁴Then they were told not to harm the meadows, the green grass or the trees, but only the people who do not bear the seal of God upon their foreheads. ⁵They were not to kill them, but only torture them for five months. This pain is like the sting of scorpions. ⁶In those days, people will look for death but will not find it; they will long to die, but death will elude them. ⁷These locusts look like horses equipped for battle; they wear golden crowns on their heads, and their faces are like those of human beings. ⁸Their hair is like women's hair, and their teeth like lion's teeth; ⁹their chests are like iron breastplates; and the noise of their wings like the roar of an army of chariots and horses rushing for battle. ¹⁰Their tails are like those of scorpions and have stings; the power they have to torture men for five months is in their tails. ¹¹These locusts have a king, who is the angel of the abyss whose name in Hebrew is Abaddon or Apollyon in Greek (Destruction in English).

¹² The first Woe! has passed. Two others are to come after this.

¹³ The sixth angel blew his trumpet. Then I heard a voice calling from the corners of the golden altar before God. ¹⁴ It said to the sixth angel who had just sounded the trumpet, "Release the four angels chained at the banks of the great river Euphrates." ¹⁵ And the four angels were released who had been waiting for this year, this month, this day and this hour, ready to utterly destroy a third of humankind. ¹⁶ The number of the soldiers on horses was two hundred million; this is the number I heard.

²⁰ However, the rest of humankind who were not killed by these plagues did not renounce their way of life: they went on worshipping the demons, keeping those idols of gold, silver, bronze, stone and wood that cannot see, hear or walk. ²¹ No, they did not repent of their crimes, or their sorcery, or their sexual immortality or their theft.

What has been proclaimed by the prophets is fulfilled

+10 ¹ Then I saw another mighty angel coming down from heaven wrapped in a cloud. The rainbow was around his head, his face was like the sun and his legs like pillars of fire. ² I could see a small book open in his hand. He stood, his right foot planted on the sea and his left on the land, ³ and called in a loud voice like the roaring of a lion. ⁴ Then, the seven thunders sounded their own message.

I was about to write what the seven thunders had sounded, when a voice from heaven said to me, "Keep the words of the seven thunders secret and do not write them down."

⁵ And the angel I saw standing on the sea and land, raised his right hand to heaven, ⁶ swearing by him who lives for ever and ever, and who created the heavens, the earth, the sea and everything in them. He said, "There is no more delay;" ⁷ as soon as the trumpet call of the time of the Jewish war of the years 66-70 which culminated in the capture of Jerusalem. But, just as in the Gospel the prophecies about the end of the world, the first event was an image of the second one, so too here the sixth trumpet announces a punishment extended to all the pagan people.

+ Once again, the end of everything was expected with the seventh trumpet. Yet, before it is sounded, suddenly the seven thunders proclaim a mysterious word for men and it is said that: The mysterious plan of God will be fulfilled just as it is proclaimed... (v. 7).

The secret word (v. 4) may very well be the news that the Word of God became man. As to the small book, it contains new events which will accompany the spreading of the Gospel. This means that Christ's coming does not put an end to history, nor does it bring heaven on earth.

John must eat the book, an expression which we already found in Ezekiel (2:8-3:4). It is both sweet and sour: the voice is sweet, but the task is difficult. Thus we understand that the history of Israel, imaged by the book of the seven seals (5:1) was not all of sacred history, but only its first part, the Old Testament.

4. Dn 12, 4	6. Dn 32, 40
7. Rom 16, 25; Eph 1, 9; Col 1, 26

■ This is the beginning of Gospel times. During the forty years between Christ's departure and the end of Jerusalem, Christ's witnesses took the Gospel throughout the pagan world. This is the time that Paul calls "time of the nations" and which, in Palestine, was characterized by continual crises. While God protects his true worshippers (those who are measured, or set apart), the pagan Romans hustle and trample more and more the outer courtyard representing most of the people of Israel who did not join the Church.

This page glorifies the Christian apostolate: its struggles, its martyrs and its reward.

The two witnesses personify Christian apostles of all times. Do not forget that Jesus sent his disciples two by two. The fact that there are two is also a reminder that there are a variety of ministries in the Church. The two witnesses are also the two most famous apostles, Peter and Paul, both killed in the Great City, Rome in the years 64-67. Peter, the first responsible of Jesus' Church, and Paul the apostle to the pagan nations.

To understand what is said about them, it is useful to know that the seventh angel is heard, the mysterious plan of God will be fulfilled according to the good news he proclaimed through his servants the prophets."

⁸ And the voice I had heard from heaven spoke again, saying to me, "Go near the angel who stands on the sea and on the land, and take the small book open in his hand." ⁹ So I approached the angel and asked him for the small book; he said to me, "Take it and eat; although it be sweet as honey in your mouth, it will be bitter to your stomach."

¹⁰ I took the small book from the hand of the angel, and ate it. It was sweet as honey in my mouth, but when I had eaten it, it turned bitter in my stomach. Then I was told, "You must again proclaim God's words about many peoples, nations, tongues and kings."

The two witnesses

11 ¹ Then I was given a staff like a measuring stick, and I was told, "Go and measure the temple of God and the altar, and count those who worship there. ² Do not bother to measure the outer courtyard, for this has been given to the pagans who will trample over the Holy City for forty-two months. ³ Meanwhile, I will entrust my Word to my two witnesses who will proclaim it for one thousand two hundred and sixty days, dressed in sackcloth.

⁴ These are the two olive trees and the two lamps which are before the Lord of the earth.

⁵ If anyone intends to harm them, fire will come out of their mouths to devour their enemies: this is how whoever intends to harm them will perish. ⁶ They have the power to close the sky and hold back the rain during the time of their prophetic mission; they also have the power to change water into blood, and punish the earth with a thousand plagues, any-time they wish.

⁷ But when my witnesses have fulfilled their mission, the beast that comes up from the abyss will make war upon them, and will conquer and kill them. ⁸ Their dead bodies will lie in the square of the Great City which the believers figuratively call Sodom or Egypt, where their Lord was crucified. ⁹ And their dead bodies will be exposed for three days and a half to people of all tribes, races, languages and nations who will be ordered not to have them buried. ¹⁰ Then the inhabitants of the earth will rejoice, congratulate one another and exchange gifts among themselves because these two prophets were a torment to them.

¹¹ But after those three and a half days, a spirit of life coming from God entered them. They then stood up, and those who looked at them were seized with great fear. ¹² A loud voice from heaven called them, "Come up here." So they went up to heaven in the midst of the clouds in the sight of their enemies. ¹³ At that moment, there was a violent earthquake which destroyed a tenth of the city and claimed seven thousand victims. The rest were overcome with fear, and acknowledged the God of heaven.

¹⁴ The second Woe has passed. The third is coming soon.

◆ ¹⁵ The seventh angel blew his trumpet, then loud voices resounded in heaven: "The world has now become the Kingdom of our God and of his Christ. He will reign for ever and ever."

¹⁶ The twenty-four elders who sit on their thrones before God bowed down to worship God, ¹⁷ saying,

*We thank you, Lord God,
Master of the universe,
who are and who were,
for you have begun your reign, making use of your invincible power.*

*¹⁸ The nations raged but your wrath has come,
the time to judge the dead and reward your servants the prophets, the saints and those who honour your Name – whether great or small – and destroy those who destroy the earth.*

¹⁹ Then the sanctuary of God in the heavens was opened, and the Ark of the Covenant of God could be seen inside the sanctuary. There were flashes of lightning, peals of thunder, an earthquake and a violent hailstorm.

all the comparisons used are taken from the Bible, especially from the texts glorifying the great prophets Moses and Elijah.

– They will proclaim my word dressed in sackcloth. The apostle preaches repentance and a more austere life.

– One thousand two hundred and sixty days, that is to say, three and a half years, meaning a time of trials.

– These are the two olive trees, or, they are precious in the eyes of God: see Zech 4.

– They have the power to close the sky, like Elijah, that is to say that God grants them to work miracles.

– When they have fulfilled their mission. The forces of evil will not overpower them before God allows it. Only then will martyrdom come.

– After three and a half days (again the symbolic figure for trials), they will be raised. They are already glorified by the Church which has its apostles and martyrs as mediators in heaven. They already share the resurrection of Christ and their enemies verify that, in killing Christ's witnesses, they did not destroy his work, which continues to grow victoriously.

Where do they die? The images point to both Jerusalem and Rome, meaning the Jews and the Romans in those first forty years of the Church. Stephen and James have been killed by the Jews; Peter and Paul, by the Romans, not to mention the rest of them.

◆ With the blowing of the seventh trumpet, the beginning of the Kingdom of God in our world is announced. We see a heavenly temple which replaces the Jerusalem Temple, a new Ark symbolizes the new Covenant of God with men of every nation.

TOWARDS THE FUTURE: THE WORLD AND THE CHURCH

o Here begins the second part of John's vision. The Church has left the Jewish world and the horizon is expanded. The Church is going to win over the nations, by struggling against the power of the devil. We have the start of a series of seven signs or visions in the sky. The first two present the protagonists of sacred history, the Woman and the Dragon, the People of God and the Devil.

A woman appeared. She seems surrounded with glory, but she is suffering labour pains. This represents humanity. At the beginning of the Bible, it was represented by Eve, the woman who sinned. But now we see humanity the way God wanted it to be: suffering birth pains because our entire history is the painful preparation of our salvation. She gives birth to a boy, who is Christ himself. The Saviour is the fruit of God's love for mankind. Salvation comes from God and from people at the same time.

The woman represents humanity cooperating with God's plans; it is also Mary who gives birth to Jesus; it is also the Church fleeing to the desert, that is, living spiritually withdrawn from the world and nourished by the Word of God during the persecutions: one thousand two hundred sixty days, or three and a half years (see 11:11).

The snake is the one of the first sin, except that it is better clothed. The seven heads indicate the multiplicity of its inventions, the ten horns (imperfect number) state that its power is surmountable. It was defeated in heaven, even though it managed, in its fall, to drag down a number of angels (a third of the stars). See 8:10.

As to the male child, Satan was preparing to destroy him on the cross, but when he rose, he escaped from the evil of the serpent.

+ God's plan for the world has just been revealed: the Son of God must become man and rise as the Saviour of all people. This mystery causes a double crisis: in the world of spirits (or angels) and in human-kind.

The Jews imagined the angels were a huge army and they called their head Michael. Similarly, the devil is presented as the head of the

The woman and the dragon

12 ¹ A great sign appeared in heaven: a woman, dressed in the sun, with the moon under her feet and a crown of twelve stars on her head. ² She was pregnant and cried out in pain, looking to her time of delivery.

³ Then another sign appeared: a huge, red dragon with seven heads and ten horns and wearing seven crowns on its heads. ⁴ It had just swept along a third of the stars of heaven with its tail, throwing them down to the earth.

The dragon stood in front of the woman who was about to give birth, so that it might devour the child as soon as it was born. ⁵ She gave birth to a male child, the one who is to rule all the nations with an iron sceptre; then her child was seized and taken up to God and to his throne ⁶ while the woman fled to the desert where God had prepared a place for her; there she would be looked after for one thousand two hundred and sixty days.

+ ⁷ War broke out in heaven with Michael and his angels battling with the dragon. The dragon fought back with his angels ⁸ but they were defeated and lost their place in heaven. ⁹ The great dragon, the ancient serpent known as the devil or Satan, seducer of the whole world was thrown out. It was hurled down to earth, together with his angels.

¹⁰ Then I heard a loud voice from heaven:

Now has salvation come, with the power and the kingdom of our God, and the rule of his anointed.

For our brothers' accuser has been cast out, who accused them night and day, before God.

¹¹ They conquered him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, for they gave up their lives going to death.

¹² *Rejoice, therefore, O you heavens and you who dwell in them;
but woe to you, earth and sea,*

for the devil has come to you in anger knowing that he has but a little time.

■ ¹³ When the dragon saw that he had been thrown down to earth, he pursued the woman who had given birth to the male child. ¹⁴ Then the woman was given the two wings of the great eagle so that she might fly into the desert where she would be looked after for three and a half years. ¹⁵ The serpent poured water out of his mouth after the woman, to carry her away in the flood, ¹⁶ but the earth came to her rescue: it opened its mouth and swallowed the flood which the dragon had poured from its mouth. ¹⁷ Then the dragon was furious with the woman and went off to wage war on the rest of her children, those who keep God's commandments and bear witness to Jesus.

The beast and the false prophet

◆ 13 ¹ As I stood on the seashore, I saw a beast rising out of the sea, with ten horns and seven heads, with ten crowns on its horns. On each head was a blasphemous title challenging God. ² The beast I saw looked like a leopard, with paws like a bear and a mouth like a lion. The dragon passed on his power, his throne and his great authority to the beast.

⁵ The beast was given speech and it spoke boastful and blasphemous words against God; it was allowed to wield its power for forty-two months. ⁶ It spoke blasphemies against God, his name and his sanctuary, that is, those who already dwell in heaven. ⁷ It was allowed to make war on the saints and to conquer them. It was given authority over people of every tribe, language and nation: ⁸ "this is why all the inhabitants of the earth will worship before it, those whose names have not been written in the book of life of the slain Lamb, since the foundation of the world."

army of the rebellious angels, the stars fallen from heaven.

The following chapters will reveal the devil at work in history. He uses disguises and many substitutes. However, those who are ready to suffer for the truth will recognize him: they triumphed over him by the blood of the Lamb and by their courage in proclaiming him (12:11).

■ Sin and rebellion against God began in the world of spirits. Being rejected from that world, the devil attacks those who keep the word of God, beginning with the best and most outstanding people in the Church. The struggle will never end. Those who dream of achieving unity among men in this world are forgetting the presence of the Evil One.

◆ The devil tries to stop Christ's victory and to convince people that, in practice, Christ is not the master of life. If they wish to live, they must surrender their freedom and their conscience to another lord, namely, political power.

First generation Christians lived in the Roman empire which, after two centuries of conquests and organized action, had managed to gather many different people. People were marveling at the "Roman peace" and the prosperity which followed. They did not know the dangers of a totalitarian society: when John was writing, the emperor Domitian had just imposed on all his subjects the obligation to honour him as a god.

Under these circumstances, Christians had to make a tremendous choice. By confessing Christ, the Lord of life, they were facing persecution. John points to their responsibility: remaining faithful to Christ and refusing to worship Caesar. A handful of Christians will victoriously face the totalitarian state: the Church will conquer by the blood of its martyrs.

It is the point of the present vision and the two animals represent the two powers which join forces at the service of the Dragon, namely, the devil against the Church.

The first beast looked like a leopard (v. 2). It represents the persecuting power of the Roman empire, through images taken from Daniel 7:3-7. It comes from the sea, or the West, from Rome.

13. Gen 3, 1	14. Ex 19, 4	1. 11, 7; Dn 7, 3	2. Dn 7, 4
4. Lk 4, 6	5. Dn 7, 8	7. Dn 7, 25	8. 3, 5; Dn 12, 1

The vitality and the power of the Roman empire are like a caricature of the Resurrection.

Then, I saw another beast like the Lamb (v. 11). This beast comes from the continent, from the East, from Asia. It represents the religions which were competing with Christianity. They pretended to offer a heavenly salvation, but they did not condemn the sins of the Roman world, especially the corruption of society.

Speaking like the beast. These apparently Christian religions have eventually been taught by local or foreign political power: pastors and miracle crusaders trained and paid in order to maintain an unjust social order. They preach resignation to evil, forgetting that cowardice is a common vice.

Persuading them to make a statue of the beast (v. 14). The very sects that emphasize the Bible condemnation of idols are often the ones who serve new lords, taking the place of God, and demanding blind submission of the people. And they form citizens who are like sheep incapable of asking themselves whether they serve God or the devil.

The devil's tactic consists in joining strong power with an ideology which Christians cannot accept: this is what happens now in all the countries which have no respect for the most basic requirements of conscience. Harassed both by leaders and a public opinion manipulated by modern techniques of propaganda, believers must face open or disguised persecution. Economic problems give new means of pressure to power which can condemn people to losing their bread-earning work: they can no longer buy or sell, obtain work or study (v. 17).

Six hundred sixty-six: In books of that time, it was a common device to assign a numerical value to every letter of the alphabet, and to get the "number" of an individual. Six hundred sixty-six can be figured out many ways, but it may correspond to "Emperor Nero." We know that six means something imperfect: the one who tried to be seven (representing perfection) and who did not make it.

We know that some anti-Catholic polemicists wanted to make this ⁹ If anyone has ears to hear, let him listen:

¹⁰ If your lot is the prison, to prison you will go; if your lot is to be killed by the sword, by the sword will you be slain. This is, for the saints, the time of endurance and faith.

¹⁴ Through these great wonders which it is able to do on behalf of the beast, it deceives the inhabitants of the earth, persuading them to make a statue of the beast which, although wounded by the sword, is still alive. ¹⁵ It has been allowed to give a spirit to this statue; the statue of the beast speaks and those who refuse to worship it are killed. ¹⁶ So, this second beast makes everyone – great and small, rich and poor, free and enslaved – be branded on the right hand or on the forehead, ¹⁷ and no one can buy or sell unless he has been branded with the name of the beast or with the number of its name.

¹⁸ Let us see who is wise! If you are clever, you can interpret the number of the Beast; it is a human number, the number 666.

144,000 on Mount Zion

14 ¹ I was given another vision: The Lamb was standing on Mount Zion, surrounded by one hundred and forty-four thousand people who had his name and his Father's name written on their foreheads. ² A sound reverberated in heaven like the sound of the roaring of waves or deafening thunder; it was like a chorus of singers, accompanied by their harps.

³ They sing a new song before the throne, in the presence of the four living creatures and the elders, a song which no one can learn except the hundred and forty-four thousand who have been taken from the earth. ⁴ They are those who were not defiled with women but were chaste; these are given to follow the Lamb wherever he goes. They are the first taken from humankind who are already of God and the Lamb. ⁵ No deceit has been found in them; they are faultless.

+ ⁶ Then, I saw another angel, flying high in the sky, sent to proclaim the definitive good news to the inhabitants of the earth, to every nation, race, language and people. ⁷ He cried out with a loud voice, "Give God glory and honour, for the hour of his judgment has come. Worship him who made the heavens, the earth, the sea and all the waters."

⁸ Another angel followed him, crying out, "Fallen is Babylon the great, fallen the prostitute who has made all the nations drunk with her wine!"

⁹ A third angel then followed, shouting aloud, "If anyone worships the beast or its image or has his forehead or hand branded, ¹⁰ he will also drink the wine of God's anger which has been prepared, undiluted, in the cup of his fury: he will be tortured by fire and brimstone, in the presence of the holy angels and the Lamb."

¹¹ The smoke of their torment goes up for ever and ever; there will be no rest day or night, for those who worshipped the beast and its image, and for those who were branded with the mark of its name.

¹² This is the time for patient endurance among the saints, for those who keep the commandments of God and faith in Jesus. ¹³ I heard someone from heaven say, "Write this: Happy from now are the dead who have died in the Lord. The Spirit says: let them rest from their labours: their good deeds go with them."

¹⁴ Then I had this vision. I saw a white cloud and the one sitting on it like a son of man, wearing a golden crown on his head and a sharp sickle in his hand. ¹⁵ An angel came out of the sanctuary, calling loudly to the one number apply to the pope, as if the successor of Peter should be confused with the Roman emperor who condemned the early Christians to death. These fantasies have nothing to do with the Bible. Besides, those who know how to deal with the numerical value of names can easily apply the number 666 to some of the present heads of state, or to any of the people they know, with just a little patience. Thus, this number 666 should be seen as a game.

o Facing the forces that Satan gathers in the Roman empire are the forces of Christ. The Beast must take advantage of the time granted to it, because Christ already rules and the judgment which will put an end to the persecuting power is being prepared.

The Lamb was standing on Mount Zion. Zion represents the Church, both the earthly and the heavenly Church. Christ rules in the Church in the very midst of those who are persecuted. Repression, chains and death do not reach the secret temple of every man, where Christ communicates his life and his presence.

The 144,000 point to the Christians in the Roman empire who remain firm in their faith. They are "the first redeemed" and they represent the believers of future centuries.

Some people who take everything literally state that the saved will number 144,000. But, why do they not read 7:4-9 where 144,000 represent the elect "of the Jewish people," without mentioning a great crowd, impossible to count, from among all the other peoples?

They were chaste. In 7:9 the Christian people were represented by martyrs: here John says virgins, and the word has two meanings, the same as the word adultery elsewhere: on one hand, they did not worship the Beast; and on the other hand, they were freed from the tyranny of sex.

They sing a new song. When the Lord had saved Israel at the Red Sea, the people sang the Canticle of Moses (Ex 15:1). But now, believers and martyrs sing the New Song to celebrate their liberation from hatred, from their own weakness and from the fear of death, through Christ.

prepares the fall of the City and its idols (v. 8), foretold as definitive good news, but, for the time being, repression is unleashed against the witnesses of Jesus (v. 9).

The persecuting empire is called Babylon: in the Bible, this name symbolizes the power hostile to God. Its ruin will show how God judges unjust structures.

When major crises and the most atrocious wars occur, many people say, "this is the end of the world." And so, when the Roman empire collapsed three hundred years after John, many people thought it was the end of civilization. However, with time, people saw that a larger field was opening up to the preaching of the Gospel.

If anyone worships the Beast... (v. 9). Here are stressed the strongest words in the Gospel on the necessity of proclaiming one's faith (Mt 10:28-33).

Happy are from now the dead who have died in the Lord. John sees the victorious martyrs and other witnesses of Christ, and he encourages them by saying that, from the moment of their death, they already enjoy a share in the promised happiness. Their happiness will be complete in the Resurrection: Phil 1:23 and 2 Cor 5:8.

■ Here we come back to the awaited fall of Rome to see its religious meaning in a more developed form. The seven bowls combine images from the plagues of Egypt and various prophetic texts.

Armageddon (or the Hills of Megiddo, 16:16) recalled a famous defeat in Jewish history (2 Kgs 23:29) and it is a symbol to predict the defeat of those who are assembled there. With this, John announces the inevitable judgment of God and the hour of destruction to the anti-Christian civilization ruling the world.

sitting on the cloud, "Put in your sickle and reap, for harvest time has come and the harvest of the earth is ripe." ¹⁶ He who was sitting on the cloud swung his sickle at the earth and reaped the harvest.

¹⁷ Then another angel, who also had a sharp sickle, came out of the heavenly sanctuary. ¹⁸ Still another angel, the one who has charge of the altar fire, emerged and shouted to the first who held the sharp sickle, "Swing your sharp sickle and reap the bunches of the vine of the earth for they are fully ripe." ¹⁹ So the angel swung his sickle and gathered in the vintage, throwing all the grapes into the great winepress of the anger of God. ²⁰ The grapes were trodden outside the city and blood flowed from the winepress, to the height of the horses' bridles and over an area of sixteen hundred furlongs.

15 ¹ Then I saw another great and marvellous sign in the heavens: seven angels brought seven plagues which are the last, for with these the wrath of God will end. ² There was a sea of crystal mingled with fire, and the conquerors of the beast, of its name and the mark of its name stood by it.

They had been given the celestial harps ³ and they sang the song of Moses the servant of God and the song of the Lamb:

*Great and marvellous are your works,
O Lord God, and Master of the universe.
Justice and truth guide your steps,
O King of the nations.*

*⁴ Lord, who will not give honour and glory to your Name?
For you alone are holy.
All the nations will come and bow before you,* for they have now seen your judgments.

The seven cups

■ ⁵ Then the sanctuary of the Tent of Divine Declarations was opened, ⁶ and the seven angels bringing the seven plagues came out of the Sanctuary, clothed in pure and bright linen, with their waists girded with golden belts. ⁷ One of the four living creatures

19. 19, 15; Is 63, 1 2. 4, 6; 13, 15
3. Ex 15, 2 4. Jer 10, 7
7. 14, 10; Jer 25, 15

gave the seven angels seven golden cups full of the wrath of God who lives for ever and ever. ⁸Then the sanctuary was filled with smoke which wraps God's glory and power, so that no one could enter until the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.

16 ¹I heard a loud voice calling from the sanctuary to the seven angels. "Go and empty on the earth the seven cups of the wrath of God."

²The first angel went to empty his cup on the earth, and malignant and painful sores appeared on the people who bore the mark of the beast and had bowed before its image. ³The second angel emptied his cup into the sea which turned into blood like that of the dead, and every living thing in the sea died.

⁴The third angel emptied his cup into the rivers and springs which turned into blood. ⁵And I heard The angel of the waters say, "You who are and who were, O Holy One, you are just in punishing them in this way; ⁶since they have shed the blood of your holy ones and the prophets, you have made them drink blood; they rightly deserved it." ⁷I heard another cry from the altar, "Yes, Lord and God, Master of the universe, your judgments are true and just."

⁸The fourth angel poured out his cup on the sun and its heat began to scorch people. ⁹They were severely burned and began to insult God who has power over those plagues, instead of acknowledging him.

¹⁰The fifth angel emptied his cup on the throne of the beast, and suddenly his kingdom was in darkness and the people bit their tongues in agony. ¹¹They insulted the Most High God for their pain and wounds, but they did not repent.

¹²The sixth angel poured out his cup on the great river Euphrates; then its water was dried up, leaving a free passageway for the kings of the east. ¹³I saw coming from the mouths of the monster, the beast and the false prophet, three unclean spirits which looked like frogs.

¹⁴They are, in fact, spirits of demons that perform marvellous things and go to the kings of the whole world to gather them for battle on the great day of God the Master of the universe.

¹⁵"Beware! I come like a thief; happy is the one who stays awake and does not take off his clothes; so he will not have to go naked and his whole body be exposed for all to see."

¹⁶Then they assembled them at the place called Armageddon in Hebrew (or the Hills of Megiddo).

¹⁷The seventh angel emptied his cup into the air. Then a voice came forth from the throne and was heard outside the sanctuary, saying, "It is done." ¹⁸And there were flashes of lightning, peals of thunder and a violent earthquake. No, never has there been an earthquake so violent since people existed on earth. ¹⁹The Great City was split into the three, while the cities of the nations collapsed. For the time had come for Babylon the Great to be remembered before God to be given the cup of the foaming wine of his anger.

◆ I will show you the judgment... God reveals the true value of the prosperous and powerful persecuting city.

To the people living in the empire, Rome personified everything in the empire and its culture. When they came to the capital, they were dazzled by its buildings, its movement, theaters, lights, the life of its countless population. Thus, it was not difficult for them to venerate Rome as a goddess.

The span of the empire, with its reputation of being invincible and divine, is pure deceit, for the Beast, the evil one who supports it, passes away, differently from God who is and will come. Rome is described as a possessed woman. The purple, color of the emperors, and the gold, sign of their wealth, cover up its impurity and its cruelty. At the same time it brings men to serve false gods and to murder martyrs.

To describe the near future of Rome, John uses symbols: some of them are easy to interpret. The seven hills point to Rome without a doubt. The seven kings are a figure symbolic of the emperors.

The ten horns are the kings of the barbarian people allied with Rome. These satellites will be God's instruments in destroying it. Nevertheless, they will continue as forces hostile to the Church.

The Lamb and his followers will conquer them (v. 14). From now on, every believer is associated with Christ's victory, as long as he remains constant in his faith.

²⁰ Then the continents withdrew and the mountain ranges hid. ²¹ Great hailstones from heaven, as heavy as stones, dropped on the people, and the people insulted God because of this disastrous hailstorm, for it was truly a terrible plague.

The judgment of Babylon

◆ 17 ¹ Then one of the seven angels of the seven cups came to me and said, "Now I will show you the judgment of the sovereign prostitute who dwells on the great waters. ² She it is who let the kings of the earth sin with her; and with the wine of her idolatry the inhabitants of the earth have become drunk."

³ The angel brought me to the desert: it was a new vision. There a woman was seated on a red beast. The beast, which had seven heads and ten horns, covered itself with titles and statements that offend God. ⁴ The woman was clothed in purple and scarlet, with ornaments of gold, precious stones and pearls. She held in her hands a golden cup full of loathsome idolatry and impure prostitution. ⁵ Her name could be read on her forehead, written in a mysterious way: Babylon the Great, mother of prostitutes and of the loathsome idols of the whole world. ⁶ And I saw that the woman was drunk with the blood of the holy ones and the martyrs of Jesus.

What I saw greatly surprised me, ⁷ but the angel said to me, "Why are you surprised? I will reveal to you the secret of this woman and of the beast with seven heads and ten horns that she mounts. ⁸ The beast you saw has been, though it IS not. It will come up from the abyss and then go to perdition. What a surprise for the inhabitants of the earth whose names are not written in the Book of Life from the creation of the world! They will marvel on discovering that the beast who has been IS not and passes away.

⁹ Let us see if you guess: the seven heads are seven hills on which the woman sits. And they are also seven kings, ¹⁰ five of which have already fallen, one is in power, and the seventh has not yet come but will remain only a short while. ¹¹ The beast that has been but IS not can be considered as the eighth though it takes place among the seven; and he goes to perdition.

¹² The ten horns are ten kings who have not yet received power but will have authority for an hour with the beast. ¹³ They all have only one aim and they place their authority and power at the service of the beast. ¹⁴ They will fight against the Lamb, but the Lamb will conquer them, for he is Lord of lords and King of kings; and with him will be his followers who have been called and chosen and are faithful.

¹⁵ The angel went on, "Those waters you saw, on which the prostitute is seated, are peoples, multitudes and nations of every language. ¹⁶ The ten horns, and the beast itself, will plan evil against the prostitute. They will destroy her and leave her naked; they will eat her flesh and set her on fire. ¹⁷ God makes use of them to carry out his plan, so he has inspired them with their common purpose and they will place their power at the service of the beast until the words of God are fulfilled. A last word: ¹⁸ the woman you saw is the Great City which reigns over the kings of the whole world."

18 ¹ After this I saw another angel coming down from heaven. So great was his authority that the whole earth was lit up with his glory. ² In a strong voice he cried out:

"Fallen is Babylon the great! Fallen! She has become a haunt of demons, a lodge for every unclean spirit, a nest for any filthy and disgusting bird.

³ She has made all nations drunk with the wine of her lewdness, fornicated with kings of the earth, and glutted the world's merchants with her wantonness and wealth."

⁴ Then I heard another voice from heaven: "Depart from her, my people, lest you share in her evil and so share in her punishments;

⁵ for her sins are piled up to heaven,

• Fallen is Babylon the great! (18:1) This is what the prophets shouted when they announced the fall of the oppressing city (see Jr 50 and 51). In prophesying the fall of Jerusalem, Jesus said: "Rejoice..." (Lk 21:28).

Depart from her, my people! (v. 4). The victorious God warns his people to feel uncomfortable in this pagan environment. Lest you share in her evil. Live in the world without being of the world, and when the society in which you are in perishes, be ready to follow the triumphant destiny of the people of God (see Phil 3:20).

MUST WE LOOK FOR A GREAT BABYLON IN THE WORLD TODAY?

John saw the rule of the Beast in the Roman empire and he prophesied its fall. He said very little about what would come after.

In speaking about the empire that he knew, John teaches us how to view the empires of this century. This Roman empire had a very flourishing civilization and we still benefit from it today. The fact that John condemned it does not mean that everything in it was bad: let us remark, incidentally, that Christ wanted his apostles to establish the center of his Church precisely in Rome.

However the Great Babylon is present in all ages and this can be seen in every economic and political power pretending to enslave men in its net. We are all inclined to identify it, either with international capitalism or with materialistic socialism, depending on our viewpoints. But, it would be wrong to think that only one of these systems serves the devil's plans: the ruler of this world respects no borders.

We know that throughout the world, atheistic governments persecute the Church, but also, each day more in the Third World, the Church faces violent or subtle per-¹⁷ your great wealth destroyed in an hour!

Every captain and navigator, every sailor and seafarer will stand afar, ¹⁸ crying out on seeing the smoke going up as the city burns to the ground. "What city could have compared with this one?" ¹⁹ They will pour dust on their heads and cry out in mourning:

"Alas, alas, great city, where all who had ships at sea grew rich through her trade!
 In an hour she has been devastated."

²⁰ *Rejoice over her, O heavens!
 Rejoice, prophets, saints and apostles!
 God has rendered justice to you.*

"With such violence will Babylon, the great city, be thrown down, never again to be seen.

²² Never again will tunes of harpists, minstrels, trumpeters and flutists be heard in you. Never again will workmen of any trade be found in you.

²³ Never again will the light of a lamp shine in you. The voice of bridegroom and bride will never again be heard in you.

Because your traders were the world's great men and you led the nations astray by your magic spell. ²⁴ In this city was found blood of prophets and saints – yes, the blood of all who have been slain on the earth."

Songs in heaven

+19 ¹ After this I heard what sounded like the loud singing of a great assembly in heaven:

Alleluia! Salvation, glory and might belong to our God, ² for his judgments are true and just. He has condemned the great harlot who corrupted the world with her adultery. He has avenged his servants' blood shed by her hand in harlotry.

dealing in a special way with persons he has elected to share with Jesus in the work of salvation. With this we understand that Mary and the Church go together in God's plans. To both of them the sign of the Woman and the Dragon in chapter 12 refers.

As time runs on we discover that the greatest obstacle opposing and delaying the work of God is not the enemies of faith but the Church itself, frequently blind to the demands of the Gospel while it works to conquer the world. We see, for example, that the Church wants to be the Church of the poor and yet is handed over to rich and satisfied people.

So no wonder that the Virgin Mary makes use of the grace bestowed on her by the Lord and intervenes by becoming present to the poor, entrusting to them time and time again the words of the Gospel. Her apparitions underscore in some way the failures of the Church. Mary comes to the rescue of her forgotten children.

With these apparitions becoming more frequent and more widespread we are led to recognize that not only is the Church weak in withstanding the attacks of Satan, but that Satan is more active because the end draws near.

+ Triumphant songs in heaven.

The huge multitude rejoices over the prostitute's condemnation and shouts "alleluia" for the wedding of the Lamb which is to take place.

Happy are those invited to the wedding of the Lamb (19:9). Now John speaks of delight and joy when the noise of Babylon and its pleasures have ended. Its lights are no more and the deeds of the "saints" – heroic actions or humble service – are shining bright.

At the end of the paragraph John criticizes the excessive interest in angels which was threatening to replace the worship of pagan gods and to lower Christ in several sectors of the Church.

■ Here we have the continuation of chapters 13, 14, 15 and 16, after the parenthesis of chapters 17 and 18. The seven angels had poured the bowls of punishment of the Beast and the decisive encounter was expected. Then, Christ appears.

His name is the Word of God (v. 3). He is the male child born of the woman, and he is to rule all the nations with an iron scepter (12:5). Christ comes triumphantly. His true name is Word, Word of God; this is his divine reality which only he understands. See Jn 1:1-14 in that respect.

The heavenly armies follow him: as Jesus had announced several times (Matthew 16:27).

The Word of God, powerful to conquer, at work to save, faithful to fulfil God's promises, truthful in what he says, the one who wages just wars. The just wars are the wars waged against the devil and his allies: the persecuting power (the Beast) and the doctrines providing opium instead of salvation (the false prophet).

This page is John's prophecy concerning the destruction of the persecuting Roman empire. It was fulfilled and that empire disappeared. In reading this page we can think about the defeats of the invincible Roman armies, and in the break down of this huge body, whose soul was the faith in the divinity of Rome and of its Caesar-Emperor. Christ did not come to smoke from her goes up for ever and ever!

⁴The twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell down and worshipped God seated on the throne. And they cried: Amen! Alleluia!

⁵A voice came from the throne: "Praise our God, all you his servants, all you who revere him, both small and great!"

⁶Then I heard what sounded like a great crowd, like the roaring of the waves, like peals of thunder, answering:

Alleluia! The Lord now reigns, our Lord, the Master of the universe!

Let us rejoice and be glad and give him glory!

This is the time to celebrate the wedding of the Lamb, and his bride has made herself ready.

Fine linen, bright and clean, was given her to wear.

This linen stands for the good works of the holy ones.

⁹Then the angel told me, "Write: Happy are those invited to the wedding of the Lamb." And he went on, "These are true words of God."

¹⁰As I fell down at his feet to worship him, he said to me, "Beware, I am but a servant like you and your brothers who utter the words of Jesus (these words of Jesus are proclaimed through the spirit of the prophets). Worship God alone.

The triumph of the word of God

■ ¹¹Then I saw heaven opened and a white horse appeared. Its rider is the Faithful and True; he judges and wages just wars.

¹²His eyes are flames of fire; he wears many crowns and written on him is his own name, which no one can understand except himself.

¹³He is clothed in a cloak drenched in blood. His name is the Word of God. ¹⁴The armies of heaven clothed in pure white linen follow him on white horses. ¹⁵A sharp sword comes out of his mouth. With it he will strike the nations for he must rule them with an iron rod. He treads the winepress of the burning wrath of God, the Master of the universe. ¹⁶This is why this title is written on his cloak and on his thigh: King of kings and Lord of lords.

¹⁷I also saw an angel standing in the sun. He cried out with a loud voice to all the birds of the air, "Come here to the great feast of God. ¹⁸Come and eat the flesh of kings of generals and valiant men; come and devour the soldier and his horse, free men and slaves, both small and great.

¹⁹Then I saw the beast with the kings of the earth and their armies gathered together to fight against him who rides on the white horse and his army. ²⁰But the beast was captured with the false prophet who served it and performed signs by which he deceived those who had received the mark of the beast and worshipped its statue. The two were thrown alive into the fiery lake of burning sulphur, and all ²¹the rest were killed by the sword which comes out from the mouth of the rider who mounts the horse. And all the birds were fed with their flesh.

The thousand years

20 ¹Then an angel came down from heaven, holding in his hand the key to the Abyss and a huge chain. ²He seized the monster, the ancient serpent, namely Satan or the devil, and chained him for a thousand years. ³He threw him into the abyss and closed its gate with the key, then secured it with locks, that he may not deceive the nations in the future until the thousand years have passed. Then he will be released for a little while.

⁴There were thrones and seated on them were those with the power to judge. I then saw the spirits of those who had been beheaded for having held the teachings of Jesus and on account of the word of God. I saw all those who had refused to worship the beast or its image, or receive its mark on the forehead or on the hand. They returned to life and reigned with the Messiah for a thousand years. This is the first resurrection. ⁵The rest of the dead will not return to life before the end of the thousand years.

do battle against the Roman armies: a certain number of soldiers had already converted to the Christian faith. (Many young Christians enlisted in the army were the missionaries of Christ wherever they went and even had martyrs among them).

Instead, the victory announced by the Apocalypse was the victory of Christ and the martyrs who, through their sacrifice, destroyed the cruelty, injustice and immorality of the pagan world. A believer's daily struggle was the victory of Christ. However, the day came when the Lord brought justice in the sight of everyone: Come, eat the flesh of kings and generals (18).

◆ This text is still used for many contradictory and erroneous commentaries. Some think of an earthly paradise of a thousand years before heaven. This, however, would be going against all the clear teaching of the New Testament, affirming there is no intermediary between this life and eternal life.

This vision may be another way of presenting our history, by stressing its positive aspects and successful evangelization. These thousand years stand for the lapse of time during which the Church, liberated from Jewish and Roman persecutions, is evangelizing the world.

The growth of the Church marks the weakening of the devil's power: he is chained. A wave of thought and Christian action is going to renew the world. Let us think of the struggle against various forms of slavery, the restoration of manual work, the dignity of women and of marriage, and the respect for the human person and children.

I saw then the spirits of those who had been beheaded (v. 4). They are already sharing in the life and happiness of Christ, and in some way, they share in his ruling over history and along with him, they are present in the life of the earthly Church. Let us think of the growing influence that people who committed themselves to a sacred and noble cause, have after their death.

At the end of these thousand years (v. 7). We do not know how long the world will last, nor how many cultures and empires will confront the Church. But now, John tells us about a last crisis during which the Church will seem submerged by the forces of evil (see 2 Thes 2:3). There is no description of what will happen: enough has already been said about the struggle of the Church against the agents of the devil for us to be able to imagine what it could be.

Fire came down from heaven (v. 9). This final offensive will be overcome just like the first one. Here the battle is described with images borrowed from Ezekiel, chapter 38.

o Heaven and earth disappeared (v. 11). At the end of the world, we have the definitive judgment.

The books were opened (v. 12). Using images from the book of Daniel (7:10), John shows people judged individually in all their actions. Everything is written in the book: what men did, said and thought.

Death and Netherworld were thrown... (v. 14): this is a way of saying that Christ's final victory consists in destroying the death ruling over the world as a consequence of sin (see 1 Cor 15:26).

The previous chapters spoke repeatedly of God's judgment, against Jerusalem, or against the Roman power, or against the nations replacing it. Thus, the Apocalypse does not really stress the final judgment of the world which only recapitulates what has been said before. It prefers to describe the new Jerusalem coming from God: this is what we have in the last two visions which follow.

+ First vision of the heavenly Jerusalem. "Eye has not seen, ear has not heard what God has prepared for those who love him" (1 Cor 2:9).

The Bible began with a vision of the first creation in which God was conversing with man, his friend, in the garden of Eden. The Apoca-

⁶ Happy and holy is the one who shares in the first resurrection, for the second death has no power over them; they will be priests of God and of his Messiah and reign with him a thousand years.

⁷ At the end of these thousand years, Satan will be released from his prison; ⁸ then he will set out to deceive the nations of the four corners of the world, namely Gog and Magog, and gather them for war. What an army, so numerous like the sand of the seashore! ⁹ They invaded the land and surrounded the camp of the holy ones, the most beloved city, but fire came down from heaven and devoured them.

¹⁰ Then the devil, the seducer, was thrown into the lake of fire and sulphur, where the beast and the false prophet already were. Their torment will last day and night for ever and ever.

The last judgment

o ¹¹ After that I saw a great and splendid throne and the one seated upon it. At once heaven and earth disappeared leaving no trace. ¹² I saw the dead, both great and small standing before the throne, while books were opened. Another book, the Book of Life, was also opened. Then the dead were judged according to the records of these books, that is, each one according to his works.

¹³ The sea gave up the dead it had kept, as did death and the netherworld, so that everyone might be judged according to his works.

¹⁴ Then death and the netherworld were thrown into the lake of fire. This lake of fire is the second death. ¹⁵ All who were not recorded in the Book of Life were thrown into the lake of fire.

The new heaven and the new earth

+ 21 ¹ Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth. The first heaven and the first earth had passed away and no longer was there sea. ² I saw the new Jerusalem, the holy city coming down from God, out of heaven, adorned as a bride prepared for her husband.

³ A loud voice came from the throne, "Here is the dwelling of God among men: He will pitch his tent among them and they will be his people. God will be with them ⁴and wipe every tear from their eyes. There shall be no more death or mourning, crying out or pain, for the world that was has passed away."

⁵ The One seated on the throne said, "See, I make all things new." And then he said to me, "Write these words because they are sure and true: ⁶It is already done! I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End. I myself will give the thirsty to drink without cost from the fountain of living water. ⁷Thus the winner will be rewarded: For him I shall be God and he will be my son. ⁸As for cowards, traitors, depraved, murderers, adulterers and sorcerers, idolators and liars, their place is the lake of burning sulphur. This is the second death."

The new Jerusalem

■ ⁹ Then one of the seven angels came to me, one of those with the seven bowls full of the seven last plagues. And he said, "Come, I am going to show you the bride, the wife of the Lamb." ¹⁰ He took me up in a spiritual vision to a very high mountain and he showed me the holy city of Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God. ¹¹ It shines with the radiant Glory of God, like a precious jewel with the colour of crystal-clear jasper. ¹² Its wall, large and high, has twelve gates; stationed at them are twelve angels. Over the gates are written the names of the twelve tribes of the sons of Israel. ¹³ Three gates face the east; three gates face the north; three gates face the south and three face the west. ¹⁴ The city wall stands on twelve foundation stones on which are written the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

¹⁵ The angel who was speaking to me had a golden measuring rod to measure the city, its gates and its wall. ¹⁶ The city is laid out like a square: its length is the same as its breadth. He measured it with his rod and it was twelve thousand furlongs; its length, breadth and height are equal. ¹⁷ Then he measured the wall: it was a hundred and forty four cubits high.

lypse ends with a more beautiful vision in which there is overflowing delight in God. Now I make all things new. The holy and definitive City of men has been built.

A new heaven and a new earth. The risen body of Christ was the principle of the new spiritual and material universe we were hoping for. But now, the power of his resurrection has transformed the whole world. It will not be a paradise for isolated "souls," nor for pure angels, but a city of men: men have fully become God's children: he will be my son.

He will wipe away every tear. God dwells among men and he pours his own happiness into them. The sufferings which filled so many lives, the martyrs' tortures, the inner pain of repentant sinners, all this is over. Joy and peace, which cannot be found any place on earth, are finally found in the heart of God.

The second death (v. 8). Before this happens, eternal condemnation. Being forever deprived of God and a reason to be, locked in one's sin and aloneness: a mystery for us. Men's freedom is something so great and so real that God himself cannot force them to love him: those who have consciously and definitely left the path to life, will inherit the lake of burning sulphur.

The New Jerusalem comes down from God. Somehow, people tried to build the community of men. But, at the end of history, they discover that along with them, God was building something much greater: a humanity gathered in the very life of God.

It is already done (v. 6). This reality is definitive and there will be no history after it. In the new world, there is no sea which means human restlessness (see Is 55:1). From then on, God, the Beginning and the End, will continue to give life-giving water, freely; this makes us think of the elect, always eager to know God's mystery more in depth, yet, at the same time they are fully happy.

only Jerusalem: the Temple coming from God.

To describe the New Jerusalem, John combined two images which are basic in the Bible: the wedding banquet and the temple. Here, after speaking about the "Jerusalem which comes down adorned as a bride for her husband" (see 19:7 and 21:2), John develops the image of the temple. The temple expresses the people's longing to see God present among them. But temples are no longer necessary: the shadows are replaced by the reality: God is in the midst of his people in a visible and permanent way.

Its length, breadth and height are equal (v. 16). A city built as a perfect pyramid: perfect and definitive. Its wall, a symbol of security: there is no more fear, not even every hidden fear, the fear of feeling life slipping away. The brightness of the city is that of jasper and its primary foundation is of jasper: jasper is the color attributed to God in the fourth chapter.

There are angels at the gates: that means that the entrances are spiritual. The wall of holiness and truth rests upon the apostles: the truth of the New World was already contained in their words, namely, the testimony of Jesus' apostles. The final city is the goal of men's long pilgrimage: without knowing it, the just, the poor, the merciful, and those who are sorrowful were longing for it: The nations will walk in its light.

There was a fountain of life in paradise. Lost through sin, people were always looking for it. Ezekiel already wrote that the living water is the Spirit of God and Jesus promised it to the Samaritan woman. Now it flows from the heart of God-Trinity, from the throne of God and of the Lamb.

And they will reign forever (22:5). This is the final word and it is the seventh time it is said in Revelation.

The angel used an ordinary measure which was, in fact, that of an angel.

¹⁸ The wall is made of jasper and the city of pure gold, crystal-clear. ¹⁹ The foundations of the wall are decorated with every kind of precious jewel: the first is jasper, the second sapphire, the third turquoise, the fourth emerald, ²⁰ the fifth agate, the sixth ruby, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh hyacinth and the twelfth amethyst. ²¹ The twelve gates are twelve pearls, each gate made of a single pearl and the square of the city is paved with gold as pure as transparent crystal.

²² I saw no temple in the city for the Lord God, Master of the universe, and the Lamb are themselves its temple. ²³ The city has no need of the light of the sun or the moon, since God's Glory is its light and the Lamb is its lamp.

²⁴ The nations will walk in its light and the kings of the earth will bring their treasures to it. ²⁵ Its gates will not be closed at the sunset, for there will be no night there. ²⁶ It is there that the wealth and the most precious things of the nations will be brought. ²⁷ Nothing unclean will enter it, or anyone who does what is evil and false but only those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

¹ Then he showed me the river of life, clear as crystal, gushing from the throne of God and of the Lamb. ² In the middle of the city, on both sides of the river are the trees of life producing fruit twelve times, once each month, the leaves of which are for healing the nations. ³ No longer will there be a curse; the throne of God and of the Lamb will be in the City and God's servants will live in his presence. ⁴ They will see his face and his name will be on their foreheads. ⁵ There will be no more night. They will need neither the light of lamp or sun for God himself will be their light and they will reign forever.

I am coming soon inspires the prophets has sent his angel to show his servants what must happen soon."

⁷"I am coming soon! Happy are those who keep the prophetic words of this book."

⁸I, John, saw and heard all this. When I had seen and heard them I fell at the feet of the angel who had shown me everything, to worship him. ⁹But he said, "No, I am a fellow servant like you and your brothers, the prophets, and those who heed the words of this book. It is God you must worship."

¹⁰He then said to me, "Do not keep secret the prophetic words of this book because the time is near. ¹¹Let the sinner continue to sin and the defiled remain in his defilement; let the righteous man continue to do what is right and he who is holy grow holier."

– ¹²I am coming soon, bringing with me the salary I will pay to each one according to his deeds. ¹³I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last, the Beginning and the End.

¹⁴Happy are those who wash their robes for they will have free access to the tree of Life and enter the city through the gates.

¹⁵Outside the dogs, sorcerers, the immoral, murderers, idolaters and all who take pleasure in falsehood!

¹⁶I, Jesus, sent my angel to make known to you these revelations concerning the Churches. I am the Shoot and Offspring of David, the radiant Morning Star. –

¹⁷The Spirit and the Bride say, "Come!" Whoever thirsts let him approach, and whoever desires, let him freely take the water of life. ¹⁸As for me, I warn everyone who hears the prophetic words of this book: If anyone adds anything to them, God will pile on him the plagues described in this book. ¹⁹And if anyone takes away words from this book of prophecy, God will take from him his share in the tree of Life and the holy city described in this book.

²⁰He who has declared all this says, "See, I am coming soon."

Amen! Come, Lord Jesus.

♦ I, John, saw and heard all this. Thus the Bible concludes, and we can recall the parable of the workers hired for the Lord's vineyard (Mt 20). The work in which prophets and writers had participated in the course of a day is over. In the first hour the visions with which Genesis begins and which briefly present the divine vocation of people and the purpose of the world were written. In the final hour, John, after knowing Christ, the morning sun, has just seen humanity preparing to share the glory of God.

It is the final hour, the expected coming of Christ. However, we know that the final hour maybe extended and that the Groom may come late in the night: Christians are watchful, firm in their hope, even as they face the power of darkness.

Christ says: I am coming soon (v. 7) and he asks us to persist in repeating this prayer: Come, Lord Jesus. The delay does not matter: our hearts are full of hope: Yes, come, Lord Jesus!
